Runoff election slated for April 9th

A runoff election will be held Tuesday, April 9, with voting continuing from 7:00 am until 7:00 pm. Both Republican and Democratic voters will go to the polls. Precincts will be consolidated for both parties. Persons voting in the Republican runoff in all precincts will cast ballots in the Conference Room of the County Courthouse. Democratic voters in Precincts 1, 3, 9, & 10 will be voting in the Commissioners' Courtroom. Democratic voters in Precincts 2, 4, & 5 will be casting ballots at Bronte City Hall.

Democrats Gary Taylor and

Charles Holcomb will vie for the Judge's position in the Court of Criminal Appeals Place 2, with the winner's name appearing on the November ballot. Also appearing on the Democratic ballot will be Victor M. Morales and John Bryant. Morales or Bryant will face Senator Phil Gramm (R) in the general election in November.

Judge's positions on the Court of Criminal Appeals in Place 1, 2 and 3 will make up the Republican ballot. Sue Holland and James (Daniel) Boone will vie for Place 1, Paul Womack and Pat Barber, Place 2, and Cheryl A. Johnson and Tom Price are seeking the Judge's seat in Place 3. Winners will appear on the ballot as Republican nominees in the General Election in November.

Early voting was held April 1-4 in Coke County. Voter interest in runoff elections is traditionally light and according to County Clerk Ettie Hubbard, early balloting has been sparse; a good indication that voter turnout will be low on election day.

Hall named to All-State team

County Government Week celebrated

The county courthouse was the place to be on Thursday, the 2nd of April. Starting at 10:00 am the Library Readers had an Easter Egg Hunt on the front lawn of the courthouse. Twenty-six little ones sacked up the eggs furnished by the Silver/Robert Lee Lions Club. All 1080 eggs were picked up and each kid had a basketful. Courthouse employees filled bags with jelly beans and sent each child away happy. This was a fun event, and we hope to build on it for next year.

At 1:00 pm the fifth and sixth grades from Bronte Independent School came for a tour of the courthouse. The children visited with each office and received a brief description of what that office does. They asked a lot of questions. As they finished they were served lemonade and chips. At 2:00 pm the sixth grade from Robert Lee Independent School came to visit. They also enjoyed the tour and refreshments. The Sheriff's department seemed to be the highlight of the visit, as Deputy Wayne McCutchen fingerprinted the kids.

Employees of the courthouse hope the young people learned a little about what it takes to make the county run. It was a good day for the courthouse employees, and they hope the kids enjoyed it as well. Everyone is encouraged to become acquainted with the courthouse, and don't fail to inform your elected officials of your desires.

Nix receives 99 years

A Tom Green County jury sentenced Tony Warren Nix to 99 years in prison Friday, March 29. Nix, 39, was convicted of the stabbing death of Janet Flanagan Yates in Coke County last April. The jury took about 2 hours to return a verdict of guilty, and approximately an hour to determine the sentence of 99 years.

Nix testified Thursday, March 28, that the incident was self-defense. He claimed that Yates had pointed a gun at him during an argument on Cedar Cove Road. Nix also stated that he believed Yates was under the influence of drugs during the confrontation. Autopsy results on Yates revealed methamphetamines in her system and fresh needle tracks on her arm. Nix denied being under the influence of drugs, which contradicted testimony given by several witnesses, who testified that Nix had told them that he had taken some "bad" drugs prior to the ordeal. He also stated that he had stabbed Yates twice, but the autopsy revealed 10 stab wounds, eight in the neck.

Nix drove to Sheriff Marshall Millican's home shortly after the stabbing and gave the sheriff information which led officers to the scene. Ms. Yates was found on Cedar Cove Road near Robert Lee lying face down in a pool of blood. Nix was arrested and charged with murder, and the trial was moved to San Angelo on a change of venue.

Br. bank donates equipment to local school

The First National Bank in Bronte donated equipment for silk screening to the Bronte Independent School District in January. The bank also included stocks of caps, t-shirts and other items to help the school set up their "silk screen factory."

Frank Sanders, president, said that the bank is aware that the school is required to purchase many items from outside firms for use in the school programs. Sanders expressed a hope that the school can save some money by producing some of the items in-house. He said that some of the booster clubs may be able to profit from the equipment and that some students may even learn a skill by having the equipment available.

The bank president said, "This is just a part of our continuing commitment to Bronte and the local school district."

Establishing authority at home

"Respect for authority comes from understanding that legitimate authority figures are entrusted with the care of others. Without somebody in charge, you can't run a family, a school or a country. When people don't respect authority, things don't work very well and everybody suffers." (Thomas Lickona, Educating for Character.) Building respect for authority starts at home and until children can accept parents' authority at home, they are unlikely to accept any other authority anywhere.

In order for parents to establish authority at home, several important things must take place. Parents need to make sure children know that they love and respect them. Before we can accept anyone's authority, we must first believe that they care about us and are acting in our best interest. We need to tell our children we love them. Children need to hear this often. Remember, it doesn't matter how old they are, they still need to hear us say it. Another important way is to show them that you love them. Actions always speak louder than words and goes along with telling them. Showing our children that we respect them involves being fair and listening, along with many other important things.

Parents need to explain to their children that rules are necessary and that they enforce them because they do love them. Insist that they follow all rules. Explain to them that you only want the best for them. Help children see that the authority you show comes from the love you have for them.

Religious poems sought

A $1,000.00 grand prize is being offered in a religious poetry contest sponsored by the Reno Fine Arts Institute, open to everyone. There are 28 prizes in all, totaling over $2,000.00.

"We think great religious poems can inspire achievement," says Mark Mearns, the organization's famous Contest Director. "We're especially happy to inspire beginning poets, and we think this competition will accomplish that. Texas has produced sensitive poets over the years, and we'd like to discover new ones from among the Bronte/Robert Lee area grassroots poets."

The deadline for entering is May 21. Poems may be written on any subject, using any style, as long as there is a spiritual inference. A typical poem might be a love poem or nature poem, one that inspires. Winners will be notified by the end of June and will be invited for free publication. All entrants will receive a winner's list.

To enter, send one poem only of 21 lines or less to: Poetry Contest, 316 California Ave., Suite 626, Reno, Nevada 89509-1669.

Eggs fit into dietary guidelines

The latest revision of the U.S. Dietary Guidelines has some good news for egg lovers - and just in time for EASTER.

Many consumers mistakenly think that they must avoid or strictly limit cholesterol-containing foods such as eggs in order to prevent heart disease.

The revised Dietary Guidelines for Americans makes it clear that saturated fat, total fat and excess calories also play a role. The Guidelines do recommend that people moderate the use of egg yolks and organ meats, which are high in cholesterol, but low in fat.

But, before eliminating eggs from the diet, it is important to have a physician determine your level of blood cholesterol and fat while those with normal or low levels may not need to be as concerned. In general, eggs fit into the diets of people who want to adhere to the dietary guidelines of eating a variety of foods and maintaining a desirable weight by getting adequate starch and fiber while avoiding too much fat, sugar, sodium, and alcohol.

Nutritionists point out that most egg dishes incorporate a variety of other foods from the dairy, fruit and vegetable and bread groups. Eggs are low in calories -- with 80 calories for one large egg -- and also contain a good level of vitamins and minerals for those calories.

To prepare eggs in ways that will best fit the dietary guideline recommendations, use non-stick pans and cooking sprays to cut down on fat when cooking. Poached, soft-cooked or hard cooked eggs require no fat at all for cooking.

In quiche, omelets, frittatas and other egg dishes, use lowfat dairy products such as lowfat milk and reduced fat cheese to cut calories. Substitute a cracker crumb crust for a pie crust, which is high in fat and calories, when you make a quiche. Or use rice, potatoes or bread on the bottom of the pie plate. Use vegetables for filling quiches and omelets.

Outlook grim for spring turkey hunters

Many who've tried it, and been successful at it, say spring turkey hunting is addictive. And, in Texas, there are approximately 100,000 addicts waiting impatiently for a gobbling fix.

Spring turkey hunting season opens in South Texas April 6 (April 23 in the remaining counties having Rio Grande season and April 22 for Eastern turkeys in Red River County) and dry conditions throughout the winter months may leave many enthusiasts going "cold turkey" this year.

According to state wildlife officials, range conditions leading up to the spring hunting season play a key role in turkey hunting success. Because hens depend on green vegetation to build up fat reserves and gain vital nutrients leading into the breeding season, hunters in areas with little rainfall in recent months may see a drop in harvest opportunity.

"In dry areas with poor winter range conditions, the hens may not be in good enough shape to breed and won't even make an attempt," said Jerry Cooke, Upland Ecology program director with the Texas Parks and Wildlife Department (TPWD). "The toms will gobble early on trying to find hens and once they realize the birds aren't responding, they'll quit calling and start looking instead for food to survive."

Cooke bases his assessment on a recently completed three-year Rio Grande turkey breeding chronology study by the department. By sampling hundreds of harvested hens, researchers were able to track approximate dates during the months of March through May when birds had been successfully bred.

"With this information, we can establish a spring turkey season framework which will ensure completion of a majority of the breeding activity prior to the season," said Cooke. "We want to provide maximum hunting opportunity, but our primary goal is to protect the resource and if we err, we want to be on the conservative side. I've been working with the resource since before we had any spring turkey hunting and now, we're harvesting as many birds in the spring as in the fall."

"Since we're talking about hunting during a time of the year when reproduction is going on, we want to make sure we're not hurting the resource," he said. There is a misconception that Rio Grande turkeys reproduce annually and that's not the case, said Cooke. "If conditions aren't right, they won't breed."

By happenstance, TPWD's breeding chronology data was collected during years of dramatically varying range conditions. In 1991, for example, range conditions were good and a majority of breeding took place prior to the last week in April. During dry conditions the following year, fewer hens were bred and most of the breeding activity was completed by the first week in April. In 1993, under drought conditions, even less breeding activity occurred and a majority of the first attempts were made in March.

"We've set the season dates based on our data when range conditions were favorable and a surplus of birds could be expected," said Cooke. "It's a self-regulating system because when conditions aren't good and a surplus isn't expected, the season isn't open during breeding activity."

That's not to say hunters should abandon all hopes of calling in a bird this year, however. Officials say a good dose of rain in the near future could spark breeding activity later in the season, if hens can get into shape for a second or third attempt. Also, hunters who are good callers can generally find success.

In addition, areas which did receive sufficient rainfall last spring, such as the eastern portion of the Rolling Plains ecological region, will have a surplus of toms and jakes which may be more susceptible to a call. And, according to biologist Gene Miller of Canyon, a lack of moisture this spring may not have a severe impact on hunting success.

"We had a better turkey hatch and survival last year than people gave us credit for having," said Miller. "Although the dry conditions won't hurt hunting that much, it is setting us up for a poor production year this year. And, because these birds up here are a little behind the rest of the state, in terms of the peak of gobbling activity, responsiveness is much better at the end of April and beginning of May."

In the Edwards Plateau ecological region, where a majority of Texas' spring turkey hunting takes place, production was the highest in the state last year, according to the department's annual summer hen/poult survey. However, production doesn't equate necessarily to hunting success and Brownwood-based biologist Larry Holland isn't optimistic about the upcoming season.

Holland feels dry range conditions affect gobblers as well as hens. "If the gobblers aren't in good condition, activity may be down, too. And, the older toms, if they've been fooled a time or two, will be harder to call up, especially early in the season."

In South Texas, where range conditions have been extremely dry, production last spring was the lowest in the state, according to wildlife officials. However, hunting conditions should not be adversely affected in that region due to high population densities.

Conversely, in Red River County and throughout East Texas where Eastern wild turkey have been stocked, dry conditions could be a bonus for range conditions, according to Eastern turkey program leader John Burk in Nacogdoches.

"It's shaping up to be a boom year because the dry conditions have helped create more early rearing habitat," explained Burk. "We had a good mast crop last fall and the grass fires did some good by clearing out areas which after they green-up, will provide excellent bugging areas for poults."

Although finding a place to hunt in Red River County may be nearly impossible this spring, Burk said a proposal to open eight additional East Texas counties to spring turkey hunting in 1997 should create plenty of national forest land in the proposed counties

so after this year, hopefully people will have a chance to experience the sport in East Texas."

Hunting season in South Texas runs April 6 - May 12. In the remaining counties with a Rio Grande season, of which Coke county is a part, the season runs April 13 - May 19, and in Red River County, Eastern turkey season runs April 22 - May 5 (not April 21 - May 4 as listed in the annual Texas Hunting Guide).

A valid Texas hunting license and special turkey hunting stamp are required to hunt during the spring season. The bag limit for Rio Grande turkeys is four, gobblers only. Red River County has a bag limit of one Eastern gobbler and hunting is limited to shotgun only in that county.

Watering lawns and gardens during drought conditions

For our area, water is probably the most limiting nutrient that is required for green lawns and gardens. With the drought conditions we have been experiencing lately, this is becoming more true than usual. To get your garden and lawn off to a good start this spring, there are several tips on efficient watering that need to be considered.

When watering your lawn, especially if you are using Robert Lee water, it is important to give it a deep, soaking watering rather than short frequent watering with sprinklers. The reason for this is to leach the salt content into the soil formation and not have it collecting over time in the top of the soil profile whereby the salt accumulation could damage the grass or garden. The soil should be wet from 4-6 inches deep for effective moisture retention. Water only when the top 1-2 inches of soil becomes dry, as over-watering can be just as detrimental to lawns as not having enough water. This is due to waterlogging which can cause suffocation of the grass due to lack of oxygen in the soil.

To water your garden for a good start up, again give the soil a deep soaking by running water down the furrows instead of light frequent sprinklings which can leave the salt residue on the plants.

Fertilizer for your lawn can also be very important, especially during dry conditions. The proper rate of fertilizer to apply can only be determined precisely after a soil test has been run on your lawn. Applying more fertilizer than needed will cause a need for additional water and will cause excessive mowing. There is a new lawn fertility test that is inexpensive and can be obtained in the County Extension office at the courthouse. Fertilizing lawns should be done for our area in late April or early May. Hopefully we will have had some rainfall by this time, but if we are still dry, it is recommended to split the fertilizer applications in two separate times.

About half of the fertilizer should be applied and watered sufficiently, then wait two weeks to a month to apply the rest. A general rule of thumb for fertilizer is to apply 3-4 pounds of actual nitrogen for 1,000 square feet of lawn area.

For additional information on lawn care or gardens, contact the Coke County Agricultural Extension Service at 453-2461.

Houston sees huge crowds

The 1996 Houston Livestock Show and Rodeo commemorated 30 years in the Astrodome complex at this year's event, with three television broadcasts, a satellite uplink to the Columbia Space Shuttle for a live conversation with the nation's astronauts and more than 1 million fans enjoying world's championship rodeo -- all in the phenomenal facility the organization has called "home" for 30 years.

The 1996 Houston Livestock Show and Rodeo:

* Recorded a total draw of 1,830,265 for general attendance, an increase of 1.12 percent over last year's total.

* Drew more than 1 million spectators in rodeo attendance for the second straight year. Attendance in the Astrodome totaled 1,061,344.

* Established two performance attendance records. Sixteen of the 20 rodeo performances were considered sellouts, with the remaining four performances having only scattered singles and obstructed view tickets remaining.

* Broke two world's record auction sales marks -- $185,000 for the Reserve Grand Champion Steer, and $62,000 for the Reserve Grand Champion Lamb.

* Presented three Rodeo Houston pay-per-view telecasts nationwide on DIRECTV and TVN Entertainment Theater, and on cable television in Texas, Arkansas, Louisiana, New Mexico, and Oklahoma. The first telecast, Friday, Feb. 23, featured highlights of the first go-round of rodeo action followed by a live concert featuring George Strait. On Thursday, Feb. 29, the broadcast highlighted the best rides from the second go-round of rodeo competition, followed by a live concert with Alabama and Patty Loveless.

The March 3 RodeoHous-

ton telecast featured a live broadcast of the world's championship rodeo finals in its entirety. In its second year on national satellite distribution and third year on cable television, RodeoHouston reaped phenomenal success from its pay-per-view telecasts.

"Early estimates show that 150,000 rodeo fans saw RodeoHouston," said John Heidtke, general manager of Prime Sports. "Sales of the broadcast were second only to the play-off games of the world champion Houston Rockets. In addition, it was the best concert sales promotion. In Houston, it outsold the Judds' farewell tour, Woodstock and the Elvis tribute," he added.

The Friday, Feb. 23 live rodeo performance set the highest individual performance record with 62,936 spectators.

Total auction sales (including the Premier Horse Sale and a new School Art auction) tallied in at $7,122,435, a 5 percent decrease from the 1995 total of $7,516,206. Two fewer cattle sales were held in 1996.

The first School Art Auction recorded $254,900 in total sales for its first sale. The Grand Champion watercolor painting sold for a phenomenal $40,000 and the Reserve Champion pencil drawing was purchased for $26,000. The 50 young artists received $35,500 of this total as a result of the auction cap program, with the remaining $219,400 being placed into the Show's Educational Fund.

Junior market livestock sales made up $4,425,050 of the total auction sales. Of this amount, $1,286,700 was placed in the Show's Educational Fund. And, due to the organization's guaranteed premium program, the young Texas 4-H and FFA exhibitors took home a total of $3,168,300 for their auction animals.

ISE seeks host homes

International Student Exchange, Inc. (ISE) is seeking host families for foreign exchange students to be arriving for the 1996-97 school year programs.

ISE is a designated United States Information Agency (USIA) program and is listed by the Council on Standards for International Educational Travel (CSIET), certifying that ISE complies with the standards set forth for International Educational Travel Programs.

International Student Exchange, Inc. (ISE), is presently seeking host families for students from a number of different countries. Students between the ages of 15 and 18 are carefully screened by ISE for suitability.

They bring their own spending money and are covered by health insurance. These students speak English and are anxious to share their native culture with an American family.

ISE's Area Representatives assist prospective host families in the selection of a student who best matches each host family's interests and lifestyle. Students are selected from student applications which include family photos and biographical essays. As there are no "typical" host families, ISE places students with large and small families, single parents, single persons and retired couples. While living with you, a student attends the local high school and is expected to bear his or her share of household responsibilities. The length of stay can range from six months to a full year, depending on your wishes.

If you are interested in learning more about ISE's student programs, or becoming an Area Representative please call ISE, toll-free, at 1-800-233-4678.
