Beat the "heat" this summer with a good book from the CC Library

Because of the 50 school students who are participating in Camp Read-A-Lot and the high school drawings, the Library continues to be a busy, fun and hopping place. The new books don't stay on the shelves very long and even the old books are enjoying a revival. One day 123 books were checked out. The kids are bringing lots of parents in, too.

The weather has been listed as reasons to get a book - it's too hot to do anything else. To check to see how long the reading boom would last, some facts were selected from the Texas Almanac: A 28-year record shows that in Coke County the average high temperature for July is 96 degrees. Thinking about the average temperature of 28 degrees for January makes things seem a bit cooler. The hottest on record is 111 degrees and the lowest temperature has been -2.

"Drought" is defined by the Almanac as being determined by an area having less than 75% of the 1931-1960 average precipitation. From 1931-1960 our area had 25.91 inches of rain. A record was set in Wink in 1956 when the yearly total of rainfall was 1.76 inches. In 1921, Thrall got 38.20 inches in a 24-hour period.

The students may set a record of books read this year, and so may the weather.

The winner of the drawing this week is Kanah Coalson. She will receive a free drink from Super H Grocery.

Library books may be returned to the Main Street Market in Bronte.

Bilbo family reunion held in Oklahoma

Mrs. Alley J. (Alta Mur) Bilbo of Robert Lee was honored when her family convened in Oklahoma for a Bilbo family reunion. Jo Ann and Jarvis Littlefield, assisted by their three sons and daughter and their families, hosted the gathering of the clan. The Littlefields live on the Grand Lake of the Cherokees, about 8 miles north of Grove, Oklahoma.

About 70 family members attended the three day celebration, which was held July 2nd through the 4th.

Thursday evening was a Hillbilly Get-Together. The clan members, dressed as hillbillies, gathered at the beautiful log home of Jim and Debbie Littlefield. One family portrayed the Clampetts of the Beverly Hillbillies. Other celebrities portrayed were Lil Abner and Daisy May and Minnie Pearl. They all chowed down on roasted pork, red beans, cornbread, biscuits, fried potatoes, salad and strawberry dessert.

Friday's activities included swimming, fishing, boating, card games, and the beginning of the horseshoe pitching tournament. That evening was Mardi Gras time at the lakeside home of Jo Ann and Jarvis. The king and queen of the Mardi Gras (Steve and Mary Evans) arrived by pontoon boat accompanied by their attendants. They were greeted by their costumed and masked subjects. Cajun fare was served on the decorated patio overlooking the lake. The menu included: shrimp gumbo, jambalaya, Mardi Gras chicken, fried rice, rice salad, fruit salad, melon balls, tossed salad, puddings, cakes, and cookies.

All day Saturday, July 4th, the patriotic theme in decor and dress was demonstrated at Jo and Jarvis' place. The horseshoe pitching tournament concluded, with Bebo Boren and John Boren proclaimed winners. Winners of the Bunco games were Shannon Dean and Lynda Caudill.

Saturday night was Pirate Night at Jerry and Debbie Littlefield's unique hilltop home. The outside picnic setting featured a full size pirate ship with the name "Bilbo Pirates" on the sail and side of the ship. Host for the night was Captain Hook (Jerry). Also attending were Captain Kidd, Jean Lafite, Blackbeard, and numerous other mateys in pirate attire. A supper of barbecued venison, chicken, sausage, beef and baked salmon was served with grilled potatoes, corn-on-the-cob, salads, garlic bread and cakes.

The final activity of the final night was a talent show and music at Jerry's gazebo. Steve Evans served as master of ceremonies as singing and musical talent was presented by the very young, the young, and some older family members. The program concluded with the singing of "May the Circle Be Unbroken".

Included in the 70 family members attending were Alta's four daughters, three sons-in-law, 11 grandchildren,

Capitol Comment
by U.S. Senator , Kay Bailey Hutchison
Homestead is where the heart is

Thomas Jefferson told a friend shortly before his death in 1826 that: "I believe the States can best govern our home concerns..." I'm not sure he had bankruptcy laws in mind when he said that, but with Congress proposing to reform federal bankruptcy laws in a way that could endanger the Texas "homestead exemption," I'm beginning to wonder.

There's no doubt we need bankruptcy reform. Congress should close loopholes in the law that allow irresponsible individuals to slide out from under what they lawfully owe. Too many people are taking advantage of current laws. Many debtors have failed to make good on their promises to creditors to repay debt by filing for bankruptcy. This raises costs for everyone, as businesses raise their prices to account for bad debts.

As Congress considers what to do about this, though, I will be working with my Texas colleagues from both parties to ensure that the Texas homestead exemption is not ignored.

The homestead exemption protects a family's home even if everything else is lost to bankruptcy. Specifically, the law protects a Texan's primary residence located on 200 acres of rural land or one acre in the city. While several states have copied it, the idea was born in Texas. This basic protection grew out of the United States Panic of 1837 and subsequent depression in which many families lost their homes and farms through foreclosures. Business stagnated. Money was scarce. No one could obtain credit.

The idea had three purposes: to protect families, the basic unit of society; to give debtors a second chance after bankruptcy rather than force their families into becoming a public burden; and to preserve the individual freedoms that are critical to democracy.

So important to those early Texans was the homestead exemption that, upon joining the Union in 1845, the new state preserved it in its Constitution.

Congress has the authority under the U.S. Constitution to

Mr. and Mrs. Richard H. Wylie of Bryan celebrated their 50th wedding anniversary on July 2, 1998, at a special dinner hosted by their children and grandchildren at the Oxford Street Pub in Bryan. They were married at First Baptist Church in Stephenville, Texas.

The Wylies have a son, Milton and wife, Mary Anne of Gilmore, and a daughter, Barbara and husband, Gary of Lewisville.

The couple has four beautiful grandchildren, Matt and Meredith Wylie of Longview and Shea and Audra Smith of Lewisville. Mr. Wylie retired from GTE after 39 years. Mrs. Wylie graduated from Shannon Memorial School of Nursing in San Angelo, Texas.

establish "uniform Laws on the subject of Bankruptcies throughout the United States." Federal lawmakers have used this authority more than once to streamline bankruptcy proceedings among the states. In the past, reforms were carefully crafted to avoid undoing state law.

But the bankruptcy reform bill now before Congress goes too far by trying to set one homestead exemption on all 50 states. Texas' elected representatives, who are closer to the situation than federal officials, are well aware of the problem of bankruptcy abuse. But at the same time they appreciate something legislators from the other states cannot: the history and values of our state.

The proposal in the Senate puts a $100,000 cap on the amount that can be claimed under the homestead exemption. The Texas Constitution bases its exemption on acreage and not value, to protect against inflated property values. Our state law ensures that families will still have a home even if their property has grown in value over time and would otherwise be lost. I will work to see that protection is included in the federal law.

The homestead exemption is critical to Texas' small farmers and ranchers. If Congress changes the law, I want to make sure the protections written into the Texas Constitution are preserved to the maximum extent possible.

All of the applications we received were excellent this year, and we wish that we could give each and every applicant a scholarship. As you know, Farm Bureau is an independent organization made up of its members. It is from the membership dues that we are able to give this scholarship to one of our members. As our membership continues to grow, we hope to increase the number of scholarships we can give.

Livestock protective issues will be addressed right after lunch, and goat meat marketing and membership issues will be discussed later in the afternoon.

U.S. Congressman Henry Bonilla will be honored at a poolside reception at 7:00 p.m. When lamb imports from Australia and New Zealand jumped to nearly 30% of the total domestic lamb supply, Bonilla pushed hard for immediate investigation and implementation of trade meaasures, tariffs and quotas to ensure fair and equitable trade for U.S. sheep producers. This resulted in an announcement by Agriculture Secretary Dan Glickman in May that USDA will purchase up to $8 million of lamb products to help improve prices for U.S. lamb producers and the lamb industry. USDA did the same thing earlier in the year for U.S. beef and pork producers. Congressman Bonilla also spoke eloquently on behalf of funding for wildlife services in the western states and opposed inclusion of Texas rivers in the American Heritage Rivers Initiative. TSGRA president Dr. Tim Turner stated, "Agriculture has too few champions these days, and we must let those we do have know that we appreciate their efforts in our behalf. Henry has gone to the wall for us many times, and it's time to show our appreciation."

Saturday's activities will include speakers on lamb marketing, wool and mohair marketing and tax and labor issues. State Representative Warren Chisum will be on hand to discuss what he sees ahead for agriculture in the next session of the legislature.

Keynote speaker for the noon luncheon will be acclaimed western writer Elmer Kelton. The evening's entertainment will include the annual membership banquet, a wool and mohair style show presented by Kay King of Houston Community College, presentation of awards and a dance with music by the Johnny Adair band.

In addition, the Woman's Auxiliary will hold a breakfast meeting on Saturday, July 18, and the one-day Kids Crazy Olympics, which will include both land and water events, will be held that day. Sheep and goat producers across the state are urged to attend the convention and learn more about what is going on in the industry.

Managing wheat residues for greater production benefit

by Bruce Deere, Natural Resources Conservation Service

Although extended drought has reduced the county's wheat crop, spring showers have made harvest feasible in some areas. Many farmers overlook managing wheat residue following harvest as a benefit. Although harvest is low and rainfall sparse, many fields will still have residues available in amounts that can provide advantages for future crops.

Residues maintained on the soil surface provide cover and shade that can substantially reduce evaporation and retain soil moisture. Just one additional inch of moisture stored in the soil profile can result in a two or three bushel yield increase the following year. Surface residues can also greatly reduce erosion resulting from high winds or intense thunderstorms.

Management of residue after harvest largely depends on the amount of residue produced. As a rule of thumb, approximately 100 pounds of straw will be produced for each bushel of grain. For example, a field yielding 15 bushels will have about 1,500 pounds of straw per acre.

Chiseling, sweeping with small sweeps, or using field cultivators are tillage operations that lend themselves to light residue amounts. These implements do not invert the soil, so reasonably good residue cover can be maintained until seedbed preparation time. Deep chiseling may be needed if a plowman is present. This will shatter the restrictive layer so that it will accept rainfall and still leave adequate surface residues to prevent excessive evaporation or erosion. It will also allow deeper root penetration and moisture utilization by the next crop.

Using approved herbicides to minimize tillage operations and keep fields weed-free during fallow is another option worth investigating. Applied properly, they can be as effective for weed control as tillage and will minimize fuel and labor costs.

Most of our livestock producers are in a jam for forage and wheat straw is likely being considered for grazing or baling. Before doing so, however, several factors should be considered. Wheat straw is practically devoid of digestible protein. Used as roughage, it will have to be fed along with protein supplement at additional expense. The straw may have more value as an addition to the soil.

In addition to reducing erosion and evaporation, the straw can provide long-term benefits if returned to the soil. One ton of wheat straw contains up to 13 pounds of Nitrogen and 20 pounds of Potassium. It can contribute to increased organic matter levels which will, in turn, improve the moisture holding capacity and tilth of the soil. Over the long term, the benefits of maintaining wheat residues on or near the soil surface and eventually returning them to the soil far outweigh any of the short-term benefits of removing them.

For more information on protecting your valuable natural resources, contact your local USDA-NRCS office in the Ag Service Center on East 7th Street in Robert Lee or call 453-2623.

Local student attends FB seminar

Attending the Texas Farm Bureau's 35th annual Citizenship Seminar in San Angelo June 15-19 was Amanda Sexton of Water Valley High School. Sponsored by the Coke-Sterling County Farm Bureau, she was among approximately 350 high school junior and senior students from over 150 counties across the state.

The purpose of the seminar is to provide the students with a better understanding of their American heritage and the capitalistic free enterprise system, according to John Stephens of Robert Lee, county FB president.

The students were welcomed to the seminar by Dr. James Hindman, president of Angelo State University. "Farm Bureau - Your Host," was presented by Bob Stallman, president of Texas Farm Bureau. Chuck Senter (TFB Field Representative), Brenda Schumann (1997 Miss TFB), and Lucas Price, the 1997 TFB Speech contest winner, presented a program on "Farm Bureau Youth Activities".

For the first time, the students participated in a new program, Congressional Insights, which allowed them to simulate a Congressional office and election.

Other speakers at this year's seminar and their subjects were as follows: David Vernon, Lubbock Christian University, "Free Enterprise"; Ronald Trowbridge, Hillsdale College, "The Constitution"; Kurt Swanda, Fort Worth, "American", and Clebe McClary, a motivational speaker, "Press on Regardless".
