Command senior enlisted advisor visits

Chief Guidas speaks at graduation

"The current enlisted force when I was here two years is ok, but we need to sit back and take another look at everyone, E-1 through E-9, stressing the quality force," said CMSgt. Frank T. Guidas Jr., Air Training Command Senior Enlisted Advisor.

That was the comment the ATC advisor made shortly before speaking at the base's NCO Leadership School's Class 82-C graduation banquet held Feb. 5. Chief Guidas addressed the group on subjects of interest about the command, new programs and how they-the trained NCO would fit into the ATC picture.

During his four day trip to the Lubbock area, the chief made time to get out and visit with Reese members. A point the new advisor feels strongly about continuing-speaking with the "grass roots" of today's Air Force.

Serving as senior enlisted advisor for ATC for just barely a month, he indicated that since Jan. 11 Vance and Keesler AFBs are the only two training bases he has not yet visited. When asked about future Reese visits, the enlisted advisor smiled and said that "I plan to try to make it up here at least once a quarter."

During a brief interview Feb. 5, Chief Guidas pointed out that "Reese personnel look sharp as ever, in fact, things look better now than

With the Reese complement came other words of praise directed towards the uniform appearance of Reese members. Chief Guidas glowed with pride as he pointed out the places he had toured that morning and how he had never seen base spirits so

"People used to wish there were mountains or beaches near, but now they (base members) seem happier to be here," he said. The chief added that Lubbock residents have always been receptive of base personnel and it has

On a more serious note the chief mentioned the military lifestyle and the quality of recruits joining the service today. "Because of hard economic times the Air Force is getting better recruits," said the senior enlisted advisor, "they're the cream of the crop (new enlistees)."

New Air Force members today are looking for a job stability and the fine military professionalism the service once had and is gaining again indicated Chief Guidas. The chief referrenced his own entrance into the Air Force nearly 24 years ago adding "I came in looking to see the world."

"Today's recruits are more patriotic than ever," explained the chief.

firm stand regarding airmen coming into today's Air Force. "The military tradition will again become important," said the chief.

In furthering his point, the chief stated that "94 percent of Air Force recruits thus far in fiscal year 1982 were straight out of high school. That's something that has never been done before," said Chief Guidas.

He backed up saying that so far in the new fiscal year the Air Force had met 85 percent of the year's total recruiting goals, but "we're looking for a quality force," the chief stressed. "And because of the hard times, the Air Force is looking better than ever to potential new recruits. This is allowing the Air Force to be more selective of those getting into the service. It will also allow us to weed out those not meeting service requirements," the chief added.

The chief touched lightly on the topic of drugs indicating studies for local proposed conversions are conducted by the base Steering Group. The group is responsible for directing the study effort here and completing the "in-house bid" on proposed contracts.

Committee members include Jeanne Yarbrough, manpower chairperson; Terry Ford, contracts division; Sammie Johnson, cost and management analysis; Dan McIntyre, budget officer: June Rose, civilian personnel; 2nd Lt. Weldon Shofner, military personnel; and the Staff Judge Advocate for legal guidance and review.

The functional area chief will designate a technical expert, who becomes a member of the Steering Group until FY 82 studies are complete.

To insure equity, in-house costs are based on the Performance Work Statement (PWS). This PWS will define the scope of work and is the basis for in-house cost estimates and contractor's bid. Accomplishment of the work outlined in the PWS will be the same whether the function is contracted out or becomes an all civilian in-house work force.

BHM importance noted

by Gen. Thomas M. Ryan Commander, Air training Command

February is Black History Month, a uniquely American observance more than half a century old.

While the history of Black Americans has been one of struggle for justice and equality, it is also an account of solid achievement. Blacks have served as leaders in the arts, science, education and government; their vital contributions have sometimes gone unsung. Throughout our history they have proudly served in the Armed Forces, compiling a distinguished record in the quest to preserve our priceless freedom and heritage.

I urge all Air Training Command members to join me in saluting the many proud accomplishments of Black Americans, for they represent a very significant part of our nation's success story.

Commander asks base support by Col. Monte D. Montgomery Commander, 64th Flying Training Wing I encourage support for the Air Force Assistance Fund (AFAF) campaign. This program, set to begin March 2, has adopted the motto "Commitment to Caring". I'd like to list just a few of the ways the AFAF cares for our people.

The Air Force Aid Society gives emergency financial aid to Air Force personnel and their dependents during unforseen crisis through the use of AFAF loans and grants. In addition, it gives educational assistance for the children of Air Force personnel in the form of loans which are interest free until repayment begins after graduation.

Last year, the Air Force Aid Society provided $32,947 in loans and grants to Reese people, almost double our base contributions last year.

The Air Force Enlisted Men's Widows and Dependents Home at Fort Walton Beach, Fla. provides housing facilities and services to widows or dependents of Air Force enlisted

The Air Force Village in San Antonio is a home for widows of Air Force officers and to retired officers and their spouses. A key feature in the village benefits is that no qualified applicant shall ever be turned away because of an inability to pay.

You might ask, "Why should I contribute to one of the retirement villages, I will never live there." You may be correct, but how do you know what your personal situation will be 20-30 years from now. A realistic approach is to consider the retirement homes as insurance. They will be there should you ever need them.

Our wing goal this year is $14,237. The goal is up 27.9 percent from that of last year, but I am confident we can meet the challenge. You can contribute by, and I encourage the use of, payroll deductions. This is a painless and very effective way to give.

Remember, the AFAF is the Air Force's only fund raising campaign conducted solely for the benefit of its members and dependents. Please show your generosity when campaign keyworkers call on you.

Chaplain speaks of missing great opportunities

by Chaplain (Lt. Col.) Philip E. Grimmet Jr. Base Staff Chaplain

The late Dag Hammarskjold in his book "Markings" writes of a man who was a crewman on one of Christopher Columbus' ships who was constantly thinking about the fact that he had to get back home to Spain for fear that someone would take over the job of being the only shoemaker in the little village where he lived.

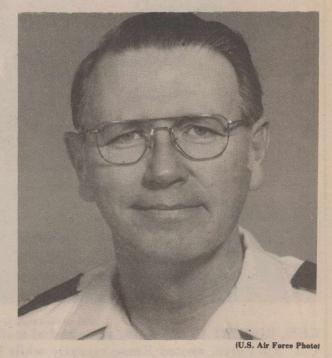

In Mr. Hammarskjold's estimation that sailor missed the importance of one of the greatest events in history because he was too concerned about the petty happenings at home.

How true that is of all of us. We miss so many opportunities because we get so caught up in trivial things. Or we lose sight of the important parts of life because we are discontent with what we have or where we are or what we are doing.

This is true both in the material and spiritual realms of life. There is no doubt that so many of us misuse the material things that God has blessed us with. We waste our wealth and throw it away and never realize some of the opportunities that we could have if we were better stewards of God's physical world. But more important is the fact that we never make the most of the spiritual opportunities that God gives us.

If people explored the opportunities that are theirs we could solve the strife and turmoil that besets modern humans and their world and peace that we all desire and want would be ours without a doubt. But we are like the sailor on the Santa Maria, we are worrying about the little things and missing the opportunities of a

What have you been doing? Missing the opportunities of life? Or are you making the most of what God has given you? Think about it!

ATC advisor enjoys new position

CMSgt. Frank T. Guidas Jr. visited Reese Feb. 4-7. During his recent trip to the Lubbock area, expressed gratitude at being back where two years ago he'd served as the 64ths senior enlisted advisor.

Chief Guidas, a 23½ year Air Force veteran, began his military career in July 1958 when he enlisted. According to the chief, "prior to joining the Air Force the fartherest away from home I'd ever been was about 30 miles."

Based on that, he indicated that he had enlisted to see the world and because of a fondness for airplanes.

At Lackland AFB, Texas the 41 year old Greensburg, Penn. native, graduated both basic training and basic medical training. He continued training at Gunter AFB, Ala. attending a two month aeromedical course.

Training completed, he was ordered to Tyndall AFB, Fl. USAF Hospital as an aeromedical technician. During his five year tenure at Tyndall, he participated in several air and sea rescue operations.

In 1964 Chief Guidas left Tyndall for USAF Hospital Kunson, Kunson AB, Korea. He stayed in Korea for a year before being reassigned to Tyndall.

Military pay insures proper financial credits for members

By Sgt. Doyle Tillman Public Affairs Specialist

The Reese AFB Military Pay section is responsible for the administration of roughly 2,987 military pay accounts through the Joint Uniform Military Pay system. Their goal - satisfy the greatest number of customers and maintain accurate financial records.

In the process of administering daily encounters with the base populas, every effort is made to insure the customer gets the very best service the section can proit be in regards to an incorrect payment or setting up an allotment.

However, unless a member has a special pay problem, chances are they will never meet the military pay section except upon arrival, departure, separation or retirement.

For accuracy, the base vide. Each military pay member is qualified to answer almost any question a customer could pose, whether military pay section is tough to beat. This is due primarily (Continued on page 5) to the quality personnel assigned to the unit. During the November 1981 Management Effectiveness Inspection, several of military pay's members were noted for their expertise and performance during the inspection. The results of which were noted during the Inspector General's outbrief when names familiar to the section showed up on the list of professional performers.

Keeping everyone happy, that's a big task, but it's one reason the military pay section works daily to ensure base members are paid at the mid month and end of the month. In this section, computer cards are keypunched daily, checked for accuracy and then delivered to Data Automation.

At Data Automation, the information on the cards is fed into computers. The following morning a military pay representative picks up the cards and delivers them to the 1958th Communications Squadron's communications center.

At the communications unit, the information contained on the cards is transmitted to the Air Force Accounting and Finance Center, Lowry AFB, Denver, Colo.

Once in Denver, the information is applied directly to the concerned members account. The accounts are updated daily. About five days before an actual pay date, all the available information is compiled and electronic payments (SURE-Pay recipients) and end of the month allotments are programmed.

At Reese, military pay begins cutting payroll checks for those not participating in the electronic pay program.

Should something go wrong concerning a member's pay, the military pay section can use the section's CRT computer to track all of the member's pay records activities - up to six months back. For information older than six months, the Accounting and Finance Center at Denver must be contacted.

Bowling facility expands

By Sgt. Doyle Tillman Public Affairs Specialist

Morale, Welfare and Recreation personnel are busy cleaning and painting building 22 adjacent to the Windmill Bowling Center. The additional space will be used as an amusement room filled with pool tables, pinball. and video game machines.

The amusement center is not the only addition made to the bowling center, the center itself has been added to, allowing the addition of two new bowling lanes. The two lanes, being built by Lubbock Bowling Supply, will give the Reese community 10 lanes to bowl on as opposed to the eight now used.

The new lanes are roped off at the bowling center awaiting only the arrival of the lane beds and other bowling machines.

As for the amusement room, once plans are approved by Air Training Command, an arch connecting buildings center is open Monday 22 and 23 will be built. Reese civil engineers are designing new plans for the amusement room, snackbar.

Original plans for construction would have cost more than the already ATC approved $117,000 construction funds.

Windmill Bowling Center Manager George Radar said, that "the new lanes and amusement room will enhance the appearance of the bowling center and should give base bowling participation a boost."

Currently the base recreation facility offers bowling enthusiasts a variety of services. The center has shoes available to rent and bowling balls available at no charge. Should community members be interested in owning their own equipment, they may order anything a bowler could need through the facility.

LoD requires specifics for determination

Line of duty . . . how is it determined?

Air Force Regulation 35-67 states that a line of duty determination is required when an Air Force member is immobilized from their duties for more than 24 hours. It is also of concern in the likelihood that a member might sustain a permanent disability or file a claim and against the government.

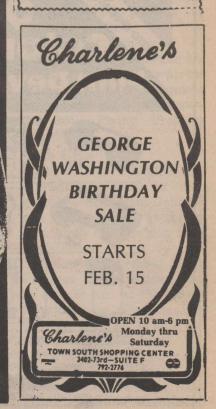

In cases of disability, certain statutory rights belong to the service member, the dependents or survivors, if the disability is linked to the service. Other statutes provide benefits, regardless of the LoD status - so long as the disability was not the result of personal misconduct.

The key point to remember is that the LoD regulation presumes all diseases or injuries suffered are in the line of duty, not misconduct. LoD determinations are not affected by whether or not the injury occurs on or off-duty or base. Leave status of the injured individual makes no difference, except for those injured while absent without

If the injury was the result of gross negligence - a suicide attempt and the individual is later determined to be of sound mind; the excessive use of drugs or alcohol; aggression; or unwarranted participation in a fight, the line of duty determination will be decided and the findings will be not line of duty, but due to own misconduct.'

For more information about line of duty determinations contact the Staff Judge Advocate's office at Ext. 3505.

The major cause of home fires involves electrical circuitry and appliances. The following fire prevention measures are suggested:

•In older homes, have electrical wiring inspected by a qualified electrician, followed by repair where needed.

Discard or repair appliances and lamps with frayed cords or arcing switches or sockets.

·Have only qualified electricians repair or renovate house wiring.

Replace wall light switches that have excessive switch

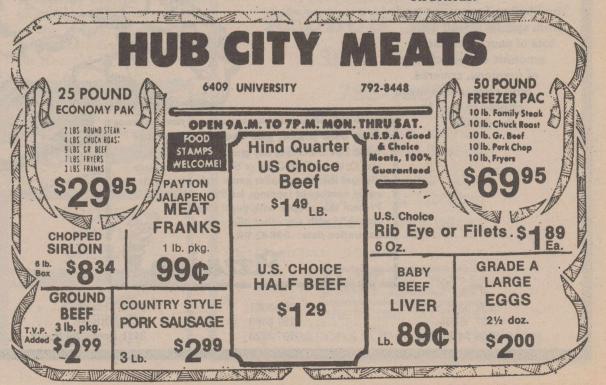

Remove accumulated combustibles, particularly in attics or basements.

• Have older TV sets cleaned of accumulated dust.

•Purchase a fire extinguisher; position it in the kitchen and instruct the family in its use.

•Conduct fire drills with all family members at least semiannually.

•Obtain fire prevention literature from the fire department and follow instructions.

National Children's Dental Health Week begins

Editor's note: February marks National Children's Dental Health Month. The following article is first of a three part series.

by Capt. Randy Barkley Preventive Dental Officer

Dental diseases are the nation's most prevalent health problem. Few people, about one in 100, reach adulthood without suffering decayed teeth or developing diseases of the gum and other teethsupporting tissues.

Dental problems

The massive nature of the problem is tragic in view of the fact that dental scientists over the years have perfected the field of preventive dentistry to such a high degree that most people never have to lose a single tooth to decay or gum diseases.

But, despite this impressive progress there are alarming indications that improvements in the nation's dental health are not keeping pace with the scientific adnor do they seek the profes- tooth loss in adults. sional care needed to prevent dental diseases.

What happens

The price people pay for this neglect is staggering:

-Better than one out of every two Americans over the age of 65 has lost all of his natural teeth.

-More than 20 million of the nation's 110 million adults have lost all their natural teeth. Of the remaining 90 million, 25 percent have destructive periodontal (gum) disease.

-Half the children have decayed teeth by age two. When they reach school age, the average child has three decayed teeth, and by the age of 15 the average younster has 11 teeth decayed, missing or filled.

-Approximately 50 percent of school-age children are victims of gingivitis (inflamavances of recent years. The tion of the gums) which can majority of Americans do not lead to progressive periodonpractice proper home care, tal disease, the major cause of

> One reason for these appalling statistics is that more than half of all children under the age of 15 have never been to a dentist. For children in poor families, the problem is far worse. Seven out of ten of them have never been to see a dentist.

> Many young men never receive adequate dental care until they join the armed forces. Selective Service records show that an average group of 100 recruits need 500 fillings, 80 extractions, 25 bridges and 20 dentures.

Program offered

ABG vs. 54th FTS

Statistics don't always represent the way things are going and Air Base Group proved it Feb. 4 when they barely edged by the 54th Flying Training Squadron team 45-43.

Willie Jefferson led the "group's" attack with 12 points aided by Julius Guerra who slapped in an additional 9. Although they led their team's winning effort they were out shot by 54th's Mike Blemker with 18 points and Paul Williams sinking six buckets for 11.

The last game of the evening, it was marked by fouls and various other penalties costing both teams valued extra points.

CE vs. Sturon 2

Just before ABG's bout with the 54th, Civil Engineering hammered out their victory over Sturon 2, 51-48.

Tim Clark lead the CE attack streamlining 26 points to his team's credit outscoring Sturon's top scorer Tim Jones by 15 points.

Clark proved to be the leading scorer in the gym that night. Teammate Scotty Renfroe matched Sturon's second highest scorer Keith Heise's 10 and topped him with a foul shot for one more.

The CE-Sturon game slated for the evenings second event became the first as Organizational Maintenance team earned an easy game credit from a forfeiting Hospital team.

OMS vs. Supply

Two days earlier OMS had taken the once top ranked Supply team to the cleaners beating them 59-46. Robert Warren fell one point short of tieing CE's Tim Clark's top score of the week of 31 points in a game. He contributed 30 to the OMS offensive assisted by Keith Sainten with eight buckets of his own. The two top OMS scorers alone matched the total Supply effort of Chris Stevenson led Supply's struggle with 19 points, but just couldn't keep the pace set by Warren. Paul Caviel added four buckets to the team effort, but when the sneakers stopped, the point spread remained 13 points.

CE vs. Sturon 2

Tim Clark led CE's Feb. 2 rampage against Sturon 2 cutting the student squadron to pieces 72-53. Clark amassed over a third of the CE offensive and rallied teammates to coughup an additional 43 points.

Sturon's best scorers Tim Jones and Keith Heise each mounted 15 points apiece to the team's credit. The teams Hospital team 52-37. position only worsened as the game proceeded and when it was over the gap between the nearly 20 points.

ABG vs. FMS

Air Base Group got things off to a good start narrowly defeating Maintenance's team 39-33.

Tim Jones led Sturon scoring with 16, but was matched by opponent Randy Dockendorf even up. The two teams struggled for the winning position and when Sturon came up with four extra buckets it was over for the 35th.

FMS vs. 54th FTS

The 54th Flying Training Squadron rose to the basketball occasion numerous times dumping in 41 points to beat Field Maintenance 41-34.

Mile Blemker led the 54ths charge with 18 points. Timothy Hoy and Paul Williams added to that with seven each. The three roundballers rallied their team to a seven point win allowing opponents Willie Hayes and Michael Ford to score only 11 and 10 respectively.

AIR BASE GROUP's Willie Jefferson shoots up in an attempt to block this shot made by a 54th Flying Training Squadron team member. The blocked shots, fouls and stiff competition made the 45-43 ABG win the week's closest game.

Base team takes city championsh

By Sgt. Doyle Tillman Public Affairs Specialist

In Sunday youth league basketball action the base team of men, 10 years and younger, took on the Lubbock Boys Club defeating them 23-16.

The game played in the Reese gym did not look favorable for the home team at the half, the boys club lead 10-4. The half-time lead proved only temporary as Mike McKelvey, Reese team high scorer, led teammates Anthony Addision, Pete Villa, Chris Youngers, Steve Heckler and Ashley Addision to final victory.

McKelvey set the base team's pace scoring 10 points. sion.

He was outscored only by opponent Ralph Alovrey who slammed in 12 of the boys club team's total 16 points.

Teammate Anthony Addision assisted McKelvey dumping in three buckets of his own. Combined their scores along tied the boys club total for the day.

Villa contributed to the winning effort with two successful trips to the hoop and Youngers added to that with his own bucket and an extra point for a foul shot.

Because of the team effort of each Reese team member put into the game and the season they took their Sunday event and became the city champions for their divi-

Foils clash in fencing action

Reese scores well during tourney

Classic Fencing tournament,

BILL HOWLAND takes a moment to replace his foils broken blade before the tournament got underway at the base gym Feb. 6. Howland took third place in the advanced division of the fencing competition.

Management Effectiveness Inspection and the 1981 Christmas Classic, three members of the Reese AFB team took honors in both the novice and advanced divi-

During the twelve hour contest Bill Howland fenced his way to third in the advanced division behind Robert Walter, in first, and Paul Anderson, in second.

In the novice division base team representatives Rick Douval took fourth and Kelly Thompson advanced to fifth. Top novice positions went to Brent Starks, in first, Dale Roberts, in second, and Slim Smith in third.

In all there were 25 participants at the Feb. 7 tournament each striving towards the three trophys awarded in each division at the tourneys conclusion. The base team saw competition from a local fencing club and two fencing clubs based in Amarillo.

While not a winner, two year fencing veteran Eddie Remillard, member of the Later Day Saints Fencing Club, explained that fencing today was a well disciplined art, not the hap-havic blood, guts and gore many people today think it is.

Remillard pointed out that "today's practice foils have T-shaped tips unlike those once used for duelling." The Remillard indicated that fencers today lunge forward and strike their opponent with the foil flexed in case it (the blade) breaks the remaining portion of the foil does not injure the opponent.

Throughout the half day competition, foils clashed resembling the fighting that might have gone on during the 15th and 16th centuries.

The en garde stance represents one of the arts traditions, "duelling was illegal and so most took place during the night requiring right handed fencers to hold a lamp in their left hand," said Bill Holland, member of the base team. "Today the position of the left hand serves as a counter-weight to balance the fencer as he lunges for

When the director orders the competitors to begin, he watches closely baring each detail of the match in his mind. When one opponent strikes the other in the target area the fencing ceases. The director recounts all that took place and asks each of the four assisting judges if that is how they saw it. They inturn agree, disagree or abstain.

During the tournament opponents try not to get points (scored against an opponent struck in the target area) because the first to five looses that match. In each pool of players, each member was required to fence every member of their pool. The better half would face the best of that divisions next pool.
