LOCKNEY - Jessica Naranjo, Lockney Jr. High ACE Coordinator, was recently honored as the program's Site Coordinator of the Year for the entire South Plains service area. The narrative regarding the award states, "Jessica ... has gone above and beyond while running programming for 2 campuses. She has continued to stay on top of her data while maintaining relationships within her school. Her attitude has stay positive throughout the transition, and her strong work ethic does not go unnoticed." This statement of confidence was made by Shannon McCarty, ACE Cycle 9 Project Director.

By far, the most critical aspect of the program is providing opportunities to the kids. "Things that students never have the opportunity to experience, we try to offer those experiences to them. I had a teacher suggest that a cooking class would be useful for the kids, so I pulled together some resources and we did it. I have kids coming back to school talking about how much they ate, that they went home and ...tried to do the pizza at home...', and the fact that they are showing that they are responsible enough to take on this challenge, it's just such a confidence builder," states Naranjo.

Another goal of the after-school program, both with the elementary kids and the Jr. High age kids, is to assist with homework, mentor the kids with special projects, and provide daily opportunities that allow the youngster to see that they have the tools to excel.

"The transition from elementary to Jr. High is huge for them, and if we can consistently show them that they can overcome hurdles and they can achieve beyond what they think, then these kids begin to See ACE, Page 10

Ken Pool's "My Cowboy Life" Book Signing event

Floyd County Historical Museum-Oct 12th

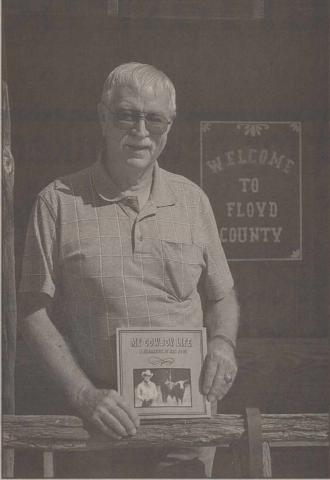

By Deon Fincher The Floyd County Hesperian-Beacon

FLOYDADA - Ken Pool, rodeo-er, pickup man, bullfighter, rodeo stock transportation specialist, wrangler, traveling salesman, historian, board-game creator...and now, author, will be signing copies of his recently published memoir, "My Cowboy Life," Saturday, October 12th at the Floyd County Historical Museum. As a member of the Museum Board, Pool will be in and around the Museum throughout the Punkin Days celebration.

A narrative of his varied life from the time he was "probably thirteen or fourteen years old, trying to dig with a set of hole diggers. Probably not one of us had ever used one..." and ending with "...I'm retired now,... the only cowboying I do now is herding them heifers in the Senior Citizens Centers around the dance floor!"

Pool, still as lively as ever, relates stories of, not only his own escapades, but other cowboys that were a part of his life throughout the yearsone of his best childhood friends Charlie Thompson, Ken Welch, Claude Groves, ico Nebraska, all over Texas, and Will Perry and the contractors for whom he worked, to name a few states, as well Red Whatley and Harry many variable to think man can stabilize the climate.

Now if you ask me if man should be great stewards of the earth, you get a definite "yes." But, of you tell me the only way to aid our climate is by taking American taxpayer money and giving it to third world countries (which is exactly what the socialist left wants), I'll tell you to stick that notion where the sun don't shine.

If those on the left were truly worried about the climate, they would be protesting China and India nonstop. Those two countries and a couple in Africa are huge polluters and getting worse, while the U.S. is reducing emissions. That is where the battle should be waged.

I find it ridiculous for people to claim that man can control the climate. It's a joke really. The truth is, we don't even know that much about our own planet. We sit on high and make these amazing claims as if they are fact, but then we learn something new which changes what we thought in the first

Consider the following: Humans have have thoroughly explored only five percent of our oceans and 80 percent of our oceans remain unmapped and unobserved.

You read that right. In fact, new species are being discovered all of the time.

Furthermore, we've been given these doomsday scenarios over and over again for decades. In the 1970s, the next ice age was approaching and we'd all freeze to death by 1990.

Then came Al Gore and global warming. We all know how that turned out.

Now, some want us to believe we have but 10-12 years left before we're doomed. Does any rational adult really believe that?

It's basic common sense to understand that we need to care for the planet. We ast week I had a should all want clean air and clean water and we should strive for these things globally. But it always seems it comes back to Americans having to foot the bill for it.

Remember the Paris Climate Accord? That agreement stipulated that the U.S. would pay $100 billion annually over 10 years.

The world celebrated our commitment when President Obama signed the agreement. Of course they did. Who doesn't want free money courtesy of the American taxpayer? And that's the problem. The U.S. was going to foot the bill for a large portion of the agreement which is managed by the U.N. The whole thing stunk to high heaven.

President Trump withdrew from the agreement in 2017 and the moaning and groaning from the left has been ongoing since.

Here's the reality: Global wealth redistribution is not a climate agreement and that fact should have been called out from the beginning. If the left was serious about the climate, they would have a totally different approach to the subject. Instead, they simply want our money to do with it as they see fit with little say from the United

It shouldn't take American taxpayer money to have an agreement where nations vow to reduce carbon emissions. Instead, there should be a solid plan in place where technology is shared and heavy polluters are shown a more efficient way to produce energy, goods and ser-

Strangely, when people point these things out, they are called names such as "science denier," and "evil."

Look, a bad deal is a bad deal. All of the fear-mongering and hostile threats won't change this fact.

Hopefully, more sane heads can come together and figure out ways to help the planet by reducing emissions, thus making sure countries have clean air and

Having elite globalists take from the American people and redistribute it across the third world should always be a red flag and a nonstarter to anyone with common sense.

The 501: MAKE YOUR OWN SHOES?

Need new shoes? Make your own. Really?

I'm watching children's cartoons on the educational channel. I'm analyzing the content closely. After all, our 3-yearold grandchild might be watching too. They could be indoctrinating her with unacceptable ideas

That said, today's HANABA implied message is MUNN one I like: Try making WELCH your own shoes.

Back when I worked at the mental hospital, I often thought that way. We made many items in arts and crafts (officially called "occupational therapy"). We routinely cut pieces from a big cowhide to make belts and stuff. Why not

Then I would go to Dillard's in-

Sometimes my shopping experience would again make me think about making my own shoes. Back to cartoons.

Pinkalicious is the star. She likes pink. In today's episode, she discovered she'd outgrown her favorite pink sneakers. (As a child, I never said "sneaker." No doubt it's a Yankee word that's sneaked into our language. I said "tenny" shoes, only to learn later the word was really "tennis," which would have been quite confusing to my child's mind since neither I nor my friends played tennis in our tenny Pinkalicious's mother took her to the shoe store, but the salesman had no pink sneakers. Pinkalicious wanted pink.

Long story short:

Pinkalicious and her mother went home to their nice long workbench. Pinkalicious wanted the toes cut out of her sneakers. Her mother did it for her. The implication? Children should turn to their parents for any major cutting jobs. I agree. If our grandson had learned a similar lesson from cartoons, maybe he wouldn't have cut those illadvised holes in the sofa all by himself. We digress.

The open-toe modification gave Pinkalicious's feet enough room, but she stumped her toes playing hopscotch. (Apparently kids still play hopscotch. Pinkalicious and her entourage play hopscotch "palooza," but it looked like regular hopscotch to me.)

Back at the workbench, Pinkalicious's mother helped her make new shoes. Pinkalicious painted them pink. Amazingly enough, the shoes worked well until it rained. Not being waterproof, the handcrafted shoes fell apart onto the hopscotch squares. Pieces everywhere.

It reminded me of a story an old boyfriend once told me. (His family was so poor they sold their spare tire.) His shoe soles were coming off. He glued them back with Elmer's glue. Then it rained.

Speaking of being poor, I couldn't help but wonder what all the poor children watching were thinking when Pinkalicious's mother took her to a shoe store instead of Walmart or Goodwill. And how many families have nice big workbenches and tools?

Maybe such cartoons give poor children something to dream about. I'm dreaming of that workbench myself.

At the end, Pinkalicious settled for new blue sneakers. She painted them

Me, I've got pink sneakers that fit me well but match nothing in my wardrobe. Maybe I'll dye them purple. Conclusion:

If you monitor children's cartoons for subversive content, keep an open mind. You might end up with a workable strategy for your own life.

Faithful Service

The Lord says, "When you pass through the waters, I will be with you; and when you pass through the rivers, they will not sweep over you." - Isaiah 43:2 (NIV)

In August 2016, south Louisiana experienced major flooding, causing widespread devastation. Many homes and businesses suffered major damage and people lost virtually all their possessions. The situation was stressful and depressing.

Yet all around us we also saw reminders of God's Spirit. It was common for people to pray together in driveways as they prepared for the difficult work ahead. Friends — and even people we didn't know — brought meals. We received relief packages from all over the country. Churches and relief organizations provided clothing and other essentials. People came from near and far to help. A group from Los Angeles worked all day on my friend's house and gave her a new Bible. They then invited us to dinner at the church where they were lodging. These acts of kindness lifted our spirits and strengthened us.

Recovery is a long, slow process. But God worked through the actions of friends and strangers to sustain us materially and spiritually. It is hard to imagine that any of us could fully recover without the active work of God's Spirit. God brought many from far and wide to rescue us from the flood.

TODAY'S PRAYER
Thank you, loving God, for lifting us up when life is difficult.
Amen

Oct 8th Playa Field Day

Special to the Hesperian-Beacon

MUNCY - Landowners, Master Naturalists, educators, and the interested public are invited to attend a Playa Field Day on Tuesday, October 8th from 9:30am-1:00pm near Floydada, Texas. The main feature of the Field Day will be a panel presentation on 'Playas & Wind Development: Practices, Protocols, & Outcomes'. Additional presentations and will offer general information about playa ecosystems, as well as playa restoration programs.

Activities will begin at 9:30am in the Floyd County Friends Unity Center (990 FM 786... adjacent to the south side of U.S. Hwy 70-halfway between Lockney and Floydada) with coffee and refreshments, and an overview of the day. An opening presentation will be given by Don Kahl, TPWD Region 1 Migratory Game Bird Specialist, covering general information on playas and restoration possibilities through the Texas Playa Conservation Initiative (TCPI).

A panel presentation will follow at 10:10am with the following presenters: Rick Hansen, Habitat Assessment Biologist, Texas Parks & Wildlife Department; Tiffany Lyon, Wildlife Biologist with Western Ecosystems Technologies, Inc., and Tylan Shelton, a former wind project developer and current asset manager of the South Plains II and Route 66 wind projects owned by Novatus Energy.

At 11:15am, there will be a

Our West Texas Playa lakes provide crucial habitats for many wildlife as they migrate across the United States. This photo, taken in March 2019 just north of Floydada, shows the multitudes of Sandhill Cranes, Egrets and Pintail ducks that are supported by the playa lakes in Floyd County.

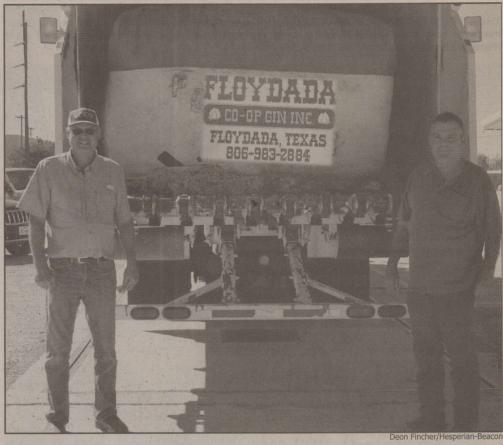

Field Tour to visit a nearby playa restored through the TPCI program, and also to view turbines in relation to playas. At 12:30pm, the tour will return to the Unity Center for lunch. Jim Steiert, outdoor writer and playa enthusiast from Hereford, TX, will close the event with brief remarks at 12:50pm. His book, Playas: Jewels of the Plains (Texas Tech University Press, 1995) can be purchased at the event for $40.

Playas are shallow, rain-fed wetlands throughout the Great Plains. When containing surface water, playas provide crucial habitat for many wildlife that depend on water to survive. When dry, playas also support several other Great Plains wildlife species because they are often the only natural lands in a region dominated by agricultural production. Playas also recharge water to the underlying aquifer, filter nutrients and chemicals from the surrounding watershed, and add recreational value to the region.

The Field Day is sponsored by Ogallala Commons and its partners, the High Plains Water District, the Dixon Water Foundation, and Texas Parks & Wildlife Department. Those attending are asked to wear clothing, footwear, and a hat suitable for the field tours. There is no charge for the event, though a $10 donation for lunch is appreciated.

Anyone interested in attending is asked to contact Darryl Birkenfeld, Ogallala Commons Director, at 806-945-2255 or darryl@ogallalacommons.org to insure an accurate lunch count.

THE 4^{TH} GRADERS IN MRS. NUTT'S classes investigated magnetism this past week. Given magnets they had to record what items were affected by the magnetic pull and what items were not.

MR. PAYEN'S SCIENCE CLASSES are discussing the Law of Conservation of Matter which states that matter can neither be created or destroyed, but it can be changed. A simple experiment using vinegar, an alka-seltzer tablet, a beaker and a balloon is used. By placing the beaker with the vinegar poured inside, a seltzer tablet and a balloon on a weighing scale, students record the weight of all the elements of the experiment. The seltzer tablet is dropped into the beaker of vinegar. The balloon is stretched across the top of the beaker to collect the gas that is created. Students watch and verify that the elements change, but their mass (recorded by weight) stays the same, thus proving the Law of Conservation.

FLOYDADA'S DILLON BRUINGTON, #3, may not be the biggest player on the JV team, but his vertical jumping ability gets him noticed—especially by the defenders with whom he gets paired. Bruington out-jumped Roosevelt's defender last week to come down with this impressive touch-down pass reception, and the reaction of Roosevelt's player is priceless.

see their own abilities and they just start to shine before your eyes!" states Naranjo.

Part of that success is due to the program directors, mentors and staff that work with the kids before and during the school days. Homework is addressed first in the program, and the staff assists with each student to ensure that the kids don't have to take assignments home to complete. "We are teaching them that they can't just put it off—It is their responsibility to take care of their assignments first."

In addition to the academic side, this year the program is incorporating the training and participation in Chess. Naranjo explains, "So many of our kids say that they can't compete at UIL because they don't have the knowledge or skills. Chess is a UIL activity, so if we give them the opportunities to learn and excel, they can overcome one more hurdle. UIL is big—and if you don't compete, sometimes, the kids feel left out. This gets them back into 'the circle' so to speak."

Congratulations to Mrs. Naranjo, her staff, and the Lockney School District.

The Texas Afterschool Centers on Education program (ACE) aims to improve student attendance, behavior, and academics, while providing safe supplemental learning space for students and families who otherwise would not have such opportunities. These grant-funded programs provide high quality supplemental enrichment activities that align with the regular academic program; and programs are encouraged to deliver those activities in creative, hands-on, and exploratory ways.

The South Plains area services school programs in the Dimmitt ISD, Frenship ISD, Floydada ISD, Lubbock-Cooper ISD, Levelland ISD, Lubbock ISD, Lorenzo ISD, Lockney ISD, New Deal ISD, Plainview ISD, Roosevelt ISD, Shallowater ISD, Slaton ISD, and Tulia ISD.

Deon Fincher/Hesperian-Beaco

Jessica Naranjo, named ACE Site Coordinator of the Year, is 'cool' and 'hip' too, it seems. Ms. Naranjo's goals within the ACE after/before school program are to support and build up the kids; and experiencing their day with them is part of the job. Jumping in totally, she participates "with the kids" in the spirit dress-up days and was certainly killing 'the 1970s' look with her headband and leather fringe. It's just another day of supporting the students at Lockney Jr. High for this exceptional individual. Congratulations, Ms. Naranio!
