Armed Forces Day will mark the first visit of the secretary to Lubbock. The Lubbock Chamber of Commerce was responsible for securing him as a speaker.

All active and reserve military services on the South Plains are working to make Armed Forces Day at Reese AFB a colorful and impressive day in showing again America's "Power for Peace." Displays will be open to the public showing missiles, aircraft, artillery, Army equipment and other weapons. The afternoon show will terminate activities.

Freedom Arsenals

WASHINGTON (AFNS)—Calling the libraries of the country the "arsenals for freedom," Secretary of Defense Robert S. Mc-Namara urged greater use of military libraries by service personnel.

In a letter marking the observance of National Library Week, April 8 to 14, Mr. McNamara said, "we cannot afford a nation of non-readers."

At the present time, according to Air Force officials, there are

Reese came through last week's Air Training Command annual general inspection with the best record ever attained,

"In 1961 we had a fine record, inspectors found; this year the record is even better," Col. L. C. Hess, wing commander, stated.

Inspectors looked into all phases of the base mission before holding a critique attended by the commander and his staff. Lt. Gen. James E. Briggs, ATC commander, also attended the critique, the first time an ATC commander has sat-in on such a meeting here.

"What the inspectors report is highly gratifying," Colonel Hess said. "Everyone played a part in obtaining such a fine report for the base. I compliment everyone responsible for the record we have established and for efforts expended to maintain Reese Air Force Base as one of the most outstanding in ATC. With continued diligence, I know we will maintain and even improve upon the fine record we have established thus far."

B-25 Graduate Back On Base

A May, 1951, graduate of pilot training at Reese returned this week as commander of Mobile Training Detachment 748A (T33-4). He is Capt. John L. Lee of Boise City, Okla.

The captain served two years in the U.S. Marines before entering pilot training at Perrin AFB. He completed advanced B-25 pilot training at Reese in Class 51-C and then served as pilot of the aircraft at Kesler and James Connally AFB's. He flew B-52's at Langley AFB, Va., briefly in 1952 and then piloted B-45's at Sculthorp, England.

From The COMMANDER'S DESK

By Col. L. C. Hess, Wing Commander

"Read, and Watch Your World Grow" is, I feel, a most appropriate slogan for National Library Week which starts Monday. Books are the key to greater education and understanding — and vital in the life of the military man.

Never has it been so necessary for military personnel to stay well informed. Not only must we remain continually aware of developments within our community and in the Air Force, but also of world conditions and the forces at work throughout the globe. It has long been an established fact that a good reading program is essential for the military man. I cannot overly stress the importance of productive reading by every responsible individual.

Our library at Reese is well stocked with good books awaiting our use. No matter what your area of interest may awaiting our use. No matter what your area of interest may be, you can find something regarding it in our library.

I urge everyone to visit the base library next week and view the attractive displays erected in observance of National Library Week. Also, why not check out a book and make your visit completely successful?

What Can I Do?

In his inaugural address, President Kennedy said: "My fellow Americans: ask not what your country can do for you—ask what you can do for your country.

This is a fine admonition and one that loyal Americans everywhere will accept graciously. But how? Things are so complicated that many of us don't know where to begin or what to do.

What can you do for your country? What we at Reese have been doing in setting a fine record is demonstrated by the report last week of the ATC inspectors. Each member is serving his nation well in the task assigned. well in the task assigned.

But the service cannot end anywhere along the line, if we are to carry out the suggestion of our Commander in Chief.
Six suggestions offered from Washington will help us all to answer the President's aims:

1. Instead of shouting, "Why doesn't somebody do somthing about it?", keep asking yourself the question, "What can I do?"

2. Take one small step. The longest journey begins with a simple step. Don't wait for the right time, the right place or the right dramatic situation; do what you can, where you are — now!

3. Become informed on the issues of the day. Study the problem find out what it is all about. Be prepared to vote intelligently and to influence other people in the right direction.

4. Examine your own concepts of democracy; evaluate what freedom means to you personally and develop a fuller understanding of the cost and meaning of freedom.

5. Strive to create the climate in which representative democracy can grow by using your own sense of responsibility, by committing yourself to democratic principles and by speaking out for freedom. Stand up and oppose that which is indecent, immoral and harmful to the general welfare and to individual liberty.

6. Don't give up! What you can do may be very small — do it anyway! Consider the words of the patriot, Edward Everett Hale, "I am only one but still I am one; I can not do everything but still I can do something.

Frequent Prayer Keeps Man Close In Care Of God

By Chaplain James D. Taylor

When a beggar, soaked in alcohol, approaches you on the street asking for money, he gets little of your sympathy because you know he is not trying to help himself to be better, but only to make himself worse.

But the honest beggar in search of a job or a meal, tugs at your heart strings and you try to do whatever you can for him. I don't think it would be improper to visualize God in the same position, and I think we can understand His attitude on giving out help — for it is the same as our own.

It is so easy to ask God to help when we get into trouble. I just wonder if we would not be able to get God's attention much easier if we stayed fairly close to Him in our living and praying. I can remember that it was much easier to ask my father for the car when I had been working as car when I had been working as I should around home and had done my duty. I would say, do your best for God then you can feel free to ask of Him in your

Let me remind you of the old, yet true, statement that goes something like this; "The family that prays together, stays to-gether."

'Captain's Paradise' Planned

WASHINGTON (AFNS) — The fiscal year 1963 temporary pro-motion program for officers is virtually a "captain's paradise" in two important respects.

First, would-be captains under the new fiscal year 1963 criteria announced here will be promoted generally in their fifth year of service instead of the former six.

Second, young captains trying for that significant breakthrough to major will come into secondary zone consideration in one instance after only three years in grade versus the former four.

The field grade program is about the same as it was last year, including selection and a "wait" to change insignia for most majors and some lieutenant colonels.

The 70 per cent promotion chance to lieutenant colonel versus the 80 per cent opportunity last year seems to be, at first glance, a lessening of opportunity. Actually, it's the same chance, as the 70 per cent is applied to a greater number (total eligibles which include the passovers) than the 80 per cent applied to a lesser number (new eligibles minus passovers and the secondary zone quota bite)

While these proportions are not representative, it's the same as saying 70 per cent of 200 officers considered equals 140 selected as opposed to 80 per cent of 100 officers considered equals 140 selected as opposed to 80 per cent of 100 officers and selected as opposed to 80 per cent of 100 officers and selected as opposed to 80 per cent of 100 officers and selected as opposed to 80 per cent of 100 officers and selected as opposed to 80 per cent of 100 officers and 100 office considered equalling 80 selected.

The reason behind the "one time only" 70 per cent opportunity to lieutenant colonel stems from last year's consideration of two year groups at once, resulting in a corresponding doubling of first passover.

New Obstacle Course Tested

Throughout their stay here, student pilots in the Reese pilot training program will find themselves going through obstacles thought up and devised by one of their training officers, Capt. Herbert Leong.

The obstacles, although not exact original plans, are still expected to fill the student's physical training requirements. This is in addition to the usual everyday sports they play. As of now, the field is in a trying out stage.

Capt. Robert Rasmussen, of-ficer-in-charge of the training field, states that students will be expected to finish the entire course in four minutes. Prior to going through the course, students will do their normal warm-

Both permanent party officers and enlisted men will be allowed to try out the course during periods not used by the students

The course now has eight obstacles. Included are a revised parachute jump stand, an undignified thing called the "belly buster," a handwalk, a 30 foot rope climb, six, four feet high hurdles, parallel bars, a log walk, several tires spread about the ground for improvement of footwork, and a rope ladder scaling a 30 foot wall.

SSgt. Glen Whitsett, training NCOIC, A1C. Joseph Baker and A2C. Alfred Lackey will assist the captain in supervision of training on the course.

Students Set Up Airpower Room

An airpower room, organized to assist undergraduate pilot training students here to better understand the world picture, is expected to open in about a week in Building T-382.

Students have been doing most of the work in establishing the room under supervision of Maj. Ben S. Gibson, 3501st Student Squadron commander.

Ready for constant use will be a world map, showing critical areas. Missions of various commands and bases also will be available for study by students and a professional library has been set up.
