Checks Show Reese Grads Compile Space Life Data

Scientists this week continued checking contributions of five Reese graduates in Class 62-H to the space age, but early checks showed considerable had been gained in a 30-day experiment.

Base BEMO Plan Making Step Ahead

Considerable progress is being made in installation of the BEMO system at Reese in the move to save money, personnel and equipment through a new supply system concept, Capt. Bernard Nelson, BEMO officer, reported Thursday.

BEMO, the Base Equipment Management Office, has been organized to better control supply and to provide standardized supply activity throughout the Air Force, at the same time reducing personnel and equipment in supply operation.

BEMO has moved in to Building T-35 as the control center and units previously in the building are going elsewhere.

The Manpower Validation team is moving to Building T-414, formerly used by Air Base Group supply, and the Reese education office is moving upstairs in Building T-825, over the Red Cross and Credit Union offices.

Already integrated into BEMO are supply activities of the Civil Engineering and Pilot Training Groups, while the Air Base Group supply functions are expected to be completely integrated by next weekend. Two tenant units also have integrated their supply activities.

Captain Nelson said more time is needed to integrate all supply work into BEMO, but that progress has been as good as expected and indications are that when the project is completely set up that many benefits will accrue to the base and Air Force.

Scientists Track Objects In Orbit

WASHINGTON (AFNS)—Satellites and rocket bodies hurled into space more than four years ago are still being tracked by scientists from the National Aeronautics and Space Administration's Space Operations Control Center at Greenbelt, Md. Nearly 100 vehicles are orbiting the earth and several are continuing to transmit signals. Included in the latter group is Vanguard I, launched on March 19, 1958.

While two Russians were in orbit in separate vehicles, the five men from Reese and five from Vance AFB helped America make another important step in research toward the time when the U. S. will launch teams, instead of individual astronauts, toward the moon.

From Reese were First Lieutenants James Hataway, Robert Blood and Jack Harrington and Second Lieutenants James Hook and Jimmie Kelley of Class 62-H.

They left a simulates aerospace vehicle at Marietta, Ga., on Aug. 13, ending a month's confinement in a psychological study to determine how long a team of astronauts can work efficiently on prolonged missions into outer space.

They were in good spirits and said they could have remained in the small cabin of 1,100 cubic feet, with a work area about the size of a station wagon, much longer.

The men also said they could have performed more difficult work. They were on duty four hours and off duty four hours, around the clock. The study showed astronauts could perform better on those hours.

The test was an Air Force-Lockheed study.

"This is an important study; it is a fine example of the Air Force and friends in industry joining forces to keep ahead in competition with the Communists," said Col. Howard Parris, chief of the Behavior Sciences Laboratory.

The human factors tests will show the Air Force which jobs must be performed by men and which jobs can be done by machines, Colonel Parris asserted. He congratulated the pilots on a job well done.

The pilots had expected to be in the cabin for 40 days, and they said they could have remained at their jobs longer without difficulty. The psychologists had deliberately misled them on the time of ending the study, however, so they wouldn't key up their performance in the "home stretch." One purpose of the experiment was to try to get the men to level off performances between daytime peaks and nighttime valleys.

While in the small compartment, the ten men spent their leisure time reading books, playing chess, and taking exercise.

"We all read tremendously while in there," said one pilot. "I guess maybe ten books. Good books, thick books, like 'Inside Europe' and 'The Rise and Fall of the Third Reich.'"

Chances Better For Promotions To Staff Level

WASHINGTON (AFNS) — A better opportunity for promotion to staff sergeant in a number of skill areas will be the feature of the airman promotion list scheduled for Oct. 1.

Notable in the list will be skill areas which have moved from the limitations of Exceptionally Well Qualified to unlimited promotion opportunities within the various command quotas.

Personnel officials point out that although there has been little or no improvement in the number of fields which have been limited to EWQ promotion in comparison with the June 1962 promotion cycle of Oct. 1, 1961.

Promotion chances are better for October than they were a year ago in several fields, including exceptionally well qualified photographer, aircraft mechanic, stenographic specialist, legal specialist, pressman, and investigator and unlimited elevation for air operations specialist, communications specialist, aircraft repairman and inventory management specialist.

CHAPLAIN NAMED

Brig. Gen. Robert P. Taylor has been named Chief of Air Force Chaplains to succeed Maj. Gen. Terrence P. Finnegan, who retires from active duty Aug. 31. At the same time, the President announced that he was sending to the Senate the nomination of General Taylor to the temporary grade of major general.

Zuckert Lists Key Areas

WASHINGTON (AFNS) — Three key areas must be developed by the Air Force to support the current Apollo lunar landing program in the opinion of Air Force Secretary Eugene M. Zuckert.

These areas are: placing an inspection vehicle next to an uncooperative satellite which may take evasive action, landing spacecraft at points and times of our choosing, and maneuvering in space over long periods of time.

Zuckert's outline is part of an article which he wrote for the current issue of General Electric Company's publication, "Forum."

Stressing the military significance of man in space, the Air Force Secretary warned that a hostile power might be able to develop a space-based system capable of destroying ICBM's as they are launched.

"Such a system," he said, "in-hostile hands not only would greatly weaken United States retaliatory striking power but would restrict U. S. access to space in general."

NURSE WINS

WASHINGTON (AFNS) — An Air Force nurse awaiting reassignment to Germany is the 1962 Women's National Pistol Champion. 1st Lt. Gail Liberty of Sheppard AFB, Tex. won the crown by outshooting Lucille Chambliss of Winterhaven, Fla., the 1961 titleholder.

taken — extra care — every time we drive."

Families are being urged to participate in golf, swimming and other recreation on the base and not to go long distances for visits.

They are being urged to take advantages of services offered by base clubs and to participate in family or neighborhood picnics and backyard cookouts.

"Air Training Command this year is headed for another fine safety record, one which we so far have aided," said Joe Lopez, ground safety director. "We are proud of the base and command record. We all hope we can add something more to it with a safe Labor Day weekend."

Legal Officer Leaves Service

First Lieutenant James H. Holmes is leaving the Air Force on Aug. 31, after three years of service as assistant staff judge advocate of Reese.

On departing the Air Force he received a letter commendation from Col. James A. Gunn III, Reese wing commander, which praised him particularly for his handling of claims.

"Your diligence in the highly complex fields of claims and government contracts is worthy of special note," the colonel stated. The letter also paid tribute to the lieutenant's professional manner in handling prosecution and defense in courts-martial.

MEDALS AWARDED

WASHINGTON (AFNS)—Chief of Staff Gen. Curtis E. LeMay pinned Distinguished Service Medals on three general officers at Pentagon ceremonies. Honored were Gen. John K. Gerhart, Commander-in-Chief, North American Air Defense Command; Lt. Gen. William S. Stone, Deputy Chief of Staff for Personnel; and Maj. Gen. Richard M. Montgomery, Vice Commander-in-Chief, United States Air Forces in Europe.

Base Player Representing ATC In Play

Reese's best chess player, A2C Jack S. Hollis of the Weather Detachment will go to Tyndall AFB this weekend to enter the Air Force-wide chess tournament as a representative of Air Training Command.

The airman won the base tournament held at Mathis Service Club a few weeks ago and moved on to Randolph AFB to win second spot in the ATC tourney.

The Tyndall tournament starts Monday, with winners going on later to compete against competitors from other services.

Union Recognized As Reese Unit

Formal recognition of Lodge No. 1810, American Federation of Federal Employees, has been given by Col. James A. Gunn III, Reese wing commander. Upward of 20 per cent of base civilian personnel are members of the union.

President Kennedy's Executive Order 10988, Employee-Management Cooperation in the Federal Service, became effective July 1, its purpose to foster better relationship between employees and management. Formal recognition enables Lodge 1810 to be considered in any base policy affecting working conditions.

Colonel Gunn told George C. Brock, lodge president, that the management team anticipates continued improved relationship with the employee association.

Brock pledged full cooperation between his unit, management and all personnel of the base.

RECOGNITION—Colonel James A. Gunn III, Reese wing commander, formally recognizes the American Federation of Federal Employees at Reese in ceremonies in his office.

Parson-to-Person True Christian Won't Sidetrack In Life Journey

By Chaplain James D. Taylor
In the early days of railroads, the habit of spotting cars at different sidings was accomplished in this way where the grade would permit. A long line of box cars would be uncoupled from each other and pushed up a grade by a powerful locomotive. There one by one, they were given a final push over the top of the grade. They ran along well from the force of the power that satrred them. They seem to keep up the speed for a time; they are for a while going down hill, but by and by run slower and slower until at last they are sidetracked at various places along the way. Some people are like this. Something comes along and gives them a big push, and they go to the top of the grade and over there they spend the rest of their lives just getting along on their past achievements. They are so easy to sidetrack and will follow almost anything as long as they are not required to furnish any power.

I had a dog once that was spoiled as to hunting where we did not dare take him with us. He would follow the tracks of a coon for a while until he came across the track of a rabbit or anything else that was a little fresher and follow that. Some people need to get on the right track and follow God rather than being led off into all kinds of sidings. In this season, it is good to renew our vows to God.

A lieutenant and a master sergeant from Amarillo AFB, Tex., teamed up to win the first place award in the fiscal year 1962 Air Training Command Military Suggestion Contest.

The pair, 1st Lt. Perry M. Giles and MSgt. Joseph L. Horsey, turned in a suggestion dealing with the transfer of frames for addressograph plates used in connection with Class "B" Allotments. The suggestion, which is now in use Air Force-wide, resulted in an estimated first year savings of $19,109. They will split the $500 first place award.

Too Old To Learn?

The flight around the earth of Lt. Col. John Glenn in his Friendship-7 brought out a wonderfully satisfying fact: man is important after all! It was generally agreed after Glenn's triple orbit that "the little black boxes" cannot replace the man in the space vehicle.

Another satisfying fact revealed by the flight was that "old" people like Colonel Glenn — he was 40 — can learn new skills! The whole thing was a great boost for adult education.

How many times have we heard someone (perhaps ourselves) say, "Oh, I'm too old to learn that." What he really meant was this, "I don't have patience enough to learn. I am afraid of failure or of criticism. I won't give sufficient time for practice. To come right out and say it, I don't want to work at this sort of thing."

Fortunately for our nation, a great many adults don't have this attitude. They are giving their time and energy to education. They may be in academic work or may be acquiring new skills in handicrafts or sports. In any case, they are learning.

Americans, more than any other civilized group in the world today, have leisure hours to fill. What better way to make this time productive than to take advantage of educational opportunities?

Had Colonel Glenn said on his 21st birthday, "I've passed the age of learning anything further," we would not have seen the world acclaim a 40-year-old astronaut. It may be true that we can't teach an old dog new tricks, but a man? He has capabilities beyond our imagination.

AFCS Controllers Save 47 Planes

The Air Force Communications Service air controllers saved the American taxpayers nearly $49 million as the result of saving 47 military aircraft from accident during the first half of 1962, 1st Lt. William P. Suiter, commander of Detachment 2 of the 2010th Communication Squadron at Reese, has been advised.

The controllers were credited with saving 149 persons aboard the 47 aircraft and also with saving 11 civilian aircraft with 11 persons aboard by guiding them to safe landings under adverse conditions.

An aircraft "save" is marked up when a qualified board decides from the record that the craft would have been destroyed without aid from the controllers who talk it to a safe landing.

In the 47 aircraft were 17 fighters valued at $18,770,117; 4 bombers worth $19,637,624; 20 trainers valued at $4,337,530; 3 cargo aircraft costing $3,388,278; 3 other aircraft worth $2,646,456; and 5 civilian aircraft of unknown worth.

"That all adds up to $48,820,005 and shows beyond doubt the value of professional workers in the Air Force, in this instance men who were able to perform to save planes and life," commented Lieutenant Suiter.

$2 Million Spent In Procurement

A total of $2,308,519 was spent by Reese during Fiscal Year 1962 in procuring needed items in the base procurement program. Spent "downtown" in local purchases from Lubbock was $1,039,914.

Colonel James A. Gunn III, Reese commander, pointed out that $314,246 was spent in construction contracts, with $246,645 paid to Lubbock contractors. He also cited that $138,734 was spent for services, with all but $9,384 going to Lubbock firms.

Virtually all of the $13,590 for contract maintenance delivery orders went to Lubbock people, all of the $1,620 for teaching, and $242,430 to Lubbock firms of the $586,669 spent for direct support purchases.

"Most of our procurement was handled through letting of contracts which followed opening of bids," commented Maj. Joseph V. Sullivan, base procurement officer. "Supplies, construction and all activity for which payment was made have been of high quality."

He pointed out that $88,416 of the total procurement expenditures went to aid the Central Base Fund, a non-appropriated fund activity, in securing a better auto hobby shop, bowling alley and recreation building at Buffalo Lakes.

Colonels Guests At Noon Luncheon

Colonel James A. Gunn III, wing commander, and Col. Harold T. Babb, deputy commander, were special guests at the Thursday Career Girl luncheon in the NCO Club. Also a guest was Col. Richard A. Steele, newly arrived commander of the Air Base Group.

Thunderstorms, Rescues Discussed

WASHINGTON (AFNS)—What it is like to penetrate a high level thunderstorm at better than the speed of sound is revealed in a feature article in the September issue of Aerospace Safety Magazine being distributed to Air Force bases.

Closely controlled tests by a pilot of a Convair F-106 are outlined in the article entitled "High Speed Thunderstorm Penetrations." Also included in the issue is the story of search and rescue units manned by volunteers at Keesler AFB, Miss. The article, "They Save Lives," includes a summary of the methods successfully employed in carrying out rescues on land, in swamps and in the Gulf of Mexico.

Maj. Robert L. Hall, formerly of Reese has a discussion on attitude.

An escape system which utilizes ballistic devices is the basis for a leading story, "The F-106 Egress System," in the September issue of the Aerospace Accident and Maintenance Review. The value of the system lies in its capacity to eject a pilot no matter how fast or how high the aircraft is flying the article says.

Red Cross Gives Aid In 870 Cases Last Year At Reese, Director Says

The American Red Cross office at Reese gave assistance in 870 cases from Aug. 1, 1961, to July 31, 1962, Jim Lindsey, field director, reported this week to Col. James A. Gunn III, wing commander.

Of the total, 135 cases involved leave problems, 487 involved reporting, 360 involved family problems and 51 personal problems.

Leave matters concerned need for leave and extensions, in the main. Reporting cases dealt with securing of information of various sorts, and family problems involved services to the serviceman for himself or family. Personal problems dealt with aid to individuals under conditions which involved matters which might effect personal morale.

Lindsey told Colonel Gunn that financial assistance was extended 103 times to include $10,157. Loans totaled 90 and 13 were in grants. Of the loans, 15 were later turned to grants.

The Reese office assisted the Lubbock chapter in giving financial aid to 39 servicemen living off-base, while the Lubbock chapter aided in 96 other cases of servicemen.

Reese Gray Ladies volunteered 2,436 hours to perform duties in the base hospital and all swimming pool supervision and lessons on the base were under jurisdiction of the Red Cross and its trained personnel.
