Base Airman Control Work Given Praise

Praise for the "near outstanding" Airman Quality Control Program at Reese came Monday from Air Training Command. An ATC staff team recently visited the base to look over the program.

"Reese has an excellent Airman Quality Control Program," the visitors reported after visiting with the Quality Control Section, Quality Control Classification and Testing Section, reviewing Airman Proficiency Reports, and talking with key personnel.

"The Quality Control Section is outstanding."

"All derogatory data is collected, reviewed on each occasion a new item is received, and the appropriate commander is requested to evaluate the airman whenever it appears necessary. Commanders are aware of the value of AFR 39-30 and seven cases have been processed during the preceding three months.

"Airman Performance Reports are of good quality. The system and control used are excellent."

Team members reached the conclusion that: "The Commander and Personnel Officer at Reese are to be commended for their fine efforts which have produced a near outstanding program which should reach its peak shortly with the completion of testing."

Base Reenlistment Mark Remains High

Despite tightening reenlistment restrictions, the Reese reenlistment office maintained a 57.5 per cent record during the past three months.

In November, 6 of 9 eligible airmen re-upped, to give a 66.7 per cent. In December, 3 of 4 eligibles extended tours for a 75 per cent mark, and in January, 6 of 13 eligibles continued service for 46.2 per cent.

Indications are the February and March percentages also will be high.

WIN CASH — Winners in the Base Trailer Park competition for systematically maintaining and beautifying their lots receive checks from Capt. Joseph Enright, housing officer. Left to right are TSgt. J. E. Ross, $7.50, best maintained lot; A/1C Floyd O. Hargia, $5, second best maintained for December; Captain Enright; A/1C George D. Dash, $5, second best maintained for January; SSgt. Bernard Sweeney, $7.50, best for January.

New Cadet Officers Named

Fund Reporting At Reese Lauded

Reese is among Air Force complimented for promptness in submitting merged accountability and fund reports for November.

A letter received this week by Maj. Frank Fleming, base finance and accounting officer, complimented Reese for overcoming difficulties in implementing the new accounting reporting procedure, which drastically altered previous action. Brigadier Gen. E. J. Hopkins, commander of the Air Force Accounting and Finance Center, wrote the words of appreciation.

Colonel George Krieger, Air Training Command comptroller, also gave praise in an endorsement.

"It is always pleasing to receive letters such as this which show my staff it is winning recognition," Major Fleming commented.

Aviation Cadet John J. Pierce, winner of the military training award in primary pilot training at Spence Air Base, has been appointed group commander of cadets training at Reese. He has the rank of cadet colonel. Pierce, from Butte, Mont., is a former high school athlete and former political science major at San Francisco State College.

Named cadet lieutenant colonel and group executive officer is Cadet David J. Earll of Arcadia, Calif., son of Lt. Col. Joe E. Earll and former student of Arlington State College, Texas.

Four cadet majors have been named. Cadet Delbert C. Butler of Kuna, Ind., is group operations and training officer. He is a former engineering major of Boise Junior College.

Cadet Jerome A. Baak of Palisades, Calif., is group adjutant. He is a former meteorology major at the University of California.

Cadet Robert K. Hall of Glens Ferry, Ida., is named a squadron

Ethiopia, German Students Also In Just Arrived 61-A

Five members of the first class graduating from the Air Force Academy are in Class 61-A, just arrived for pilot training at Reese. The class also includes 28 United States aviation cadets, a German officer, seven German cadets, and two cadets from Ethiopia.

The Ethiopians will train under the Mutual Assistance Program. The Ethiopians represent the 26th foreign country which has sent students to Reese for pilot training.

Air Force Academy graduates in the class are 2nd Lts. Thomas G. Derrickson, Los Altos, Calif., former parachutist and navigator; James O. Bartholomew of Burlington, Ia., honor student in primary pilot training; Robin M. Kozelka of Springfield, Ill., former parachutist and navigator, and former student of the Massachusetts Institute of Technology; Howard T. Akers of Los Angeles, also an honor student in primary pilot training; and Anthony W. Seizys of Philadelphia, Pa.

Californians Visit Reese

On ATC Tour

Eight civic leaders of Sacramento, Calif., accompanied by Mather AFB officials, visited Reese Wednesday and Thursday while on tour of ATC installations for a view of training operations.

Arriving Wednesday afternoon were Brig. Gen. Norman L. Callish, Mather commander; Norman M. Quillinan, Sacramento Chamber of Commerce president; James B. McKinney, mayor; Earl Sage, chairman of the Chamber military affairs committee; Robert L. Peters, director of the Retail Credit Association; Frank McBride, Jr., Chamber past president; Fred A. Barberia, chairman, board of supervisors; Lester Carr, chamber past president; and John Geer, member of the aviation committee.

Other military members were Col. Giles J. Strub, Mather Hospital commander; Capt. Robert Morris, pilot; Capt. Adrian J. Nelson, co-pilot; and Capt. Robert J. Moen, Mather information officer.

General Callish and his party was briefed on the Reese mission and toured base areas. Lubbock Chamber of Commerce officials accompanied and also took the Sacramento visitors on a tour of Lubbock. The visitors were luncheon guests in Lubbock.

The American cadets include 4 college graduates and 23 cadets who attended college but did not graduate. They have attended 27 colleges and universities and come from 18 states. Ohio leads with four, Texas has a student from Houston, El Paso, and San Antonio, California has three cadets, and New York, Montana, and Florida two each.

The new students received primary training in civilian contract schools at Graham and Bartow Air Bases in Florida and Spence and Bainbridge ABs in Georgia. They will receive 115 hours of flying training at Reese to prepare them for a place in the Air Force aerospace program.

Doctor Awarded Study Fellowship

Dr. Glenn C. Rosenquist, Reese pediatrician, Tuesday received the Wyeth Pediatric Residency Fellowship for two years of work and study. Twenty scholarships were awarded in the United States and Canada.

The doctor plans to leave service in July to start immediate pediatric residency in the University of California medical center in San Francisco. The fellowship extends from July, 1960, until June, 1962.

Selection of Dr. Rosenquist and others was made by a medical board which considered good character, academic achievement, and performance of applicants.

Reese AFB Squadrons Honored For High Participation In Off-Duty Education

BEST RECORD—First Lt. Ronald Kibler, left, Air Police education director, receives congratulations from Lt. Col. Quinn Oldaker, ABG commander, on establishing the best record for off-duty education activity in his unit.

The Air Police Squadron and Headquarters Squadron Section of the Wing were honored Monday for achievement in the base education program.

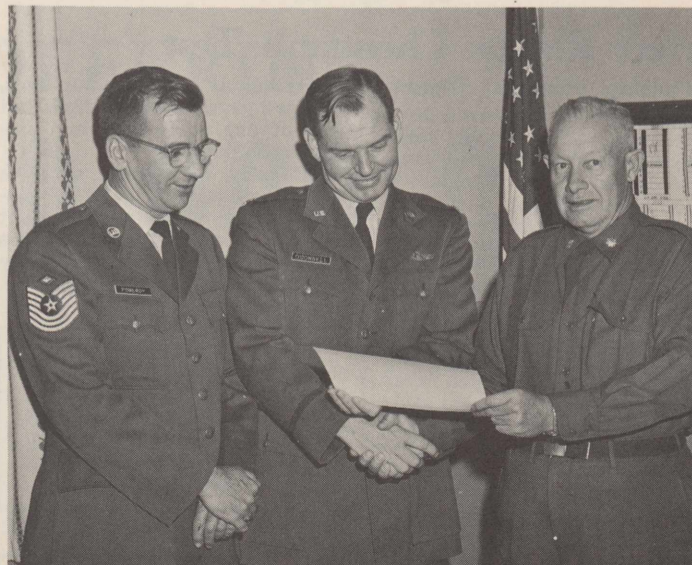

Certificates of Achievement were presented them by Lt. Col. Quinn L. Oldaker, commander of Air Base Group. Accepting were 1st Lt. Ronald Kibler, education officer of the Air Police, and Maj. Joseph O'Connell, commander of the wing headquarters squadron.

Certificates are awarded each quarter to the squadron having the highest percentage of men participating in off-duty education, including enrollment at Texas Tech, in on-base group study classes, and in extension work.

The Air Police had a 41.5 per cent of units of less than 75 men. The 3501st Pilot Training Squadron was second with 20 per cent.

The Wing Headquarters Squadron Section has 18.9 per cent for units of 75 men and more, trailed by the Air Base Group Headquarters Squadron Section's 15.9 per cent.

Awards were for the last quarter of 1959.

From the COMMANDER'S DESK

By Col. L. C. Hess, Base Commander

Recent developments in the reenlistment program and the emphasis that has been placed on the Airman Quality Control program clearly indicate that the career airman of tomorrow will be of the highest type. Competition for careers in the Air Force is certain to become keener. Although job knowledge and skill will be key factors in the selection retention program, these factors alone may not warrant retention unless they are accompanied by qualities of leadership ability, character, and integrity.

The way an individual handles his personal affairs and financial responsibilities is a strong indication as to how he will handle the affairs of the Air Force. The chronic writer of bad checks and accumulator of bad debts certainly creates a doubt to his further usefulness to the Air Force. Repeated offenders in these areas are of vital concern to me since these traits of financial irresponsibility reflect unfavorably on the individual as well as the Air Force. They will not be condoned.

I urge each individual assigned to Reese to take positive action to insure that personal finances and obligations are in order at all times. Failure to do so will only jeopardize your career.

Minds Meet On Safety

Throughout the years scientists and inventors have been required to labor long and hard to perfect their products.

Nothing, perhaps, has been more difficult than perfection of the missile program. In fact, best information available indicates that missiles will not be perfect for years to come, maybe never, in the United States, Russia, or elsewhere.

In virtually every development, safety has been a major problem. Air Force minds have given deep thought to this. It is only proper, then, that the Air Force and industry, working closely together, should confer; as they did to seek solutions to current missile safety problems and to forecast future problems requiring early preventive action.

More than 350 representatives of the Air Force, Army, Navy, Marines, and men from the Royal Air Force and Canadian Royal Air Force assembled for the first annual Air Force-aircraft industry safety conference in Los Angeles. About 75 Canadian and U. S. corporations sent their best minds.

Accomplishments were many, it was announced, which presents a major step forward in contributing to world peace and safety in dealing with the highly mysterious missile.

Reese Service Club Deserves Praise

The Reese Service Club is to be congratulated for its well-rounded program, although attendance is not as large at most functions as could be.

The beautiful club is a community center. Its aim primarily is to provide activities for the airman, however, most functions are open to all persons and the base, including dependents.

The club was formed to live up to its name—Service Club. It offers much service. There's a kitchen where anyone can practice cooking. There's the Chef Club which tried a variety of dishes.

Free mending and sewing is offered Thursday night. Square dance and bridge instruction is offered. Sewing machines are available to new comers to get their new homes properly equipped with drapes, etc. There's the snack bar where anyone may eat reasonably.

Regular dances are held, sometimes with hostesses. A large variety of games is available for anyone. TV is always operating, pool tables are in use most of the time, and comfortable chairs are in every room.

Reese is, and should be, proud of its Service Club and all it offers. The variety of entertainment offered and service available are among highlights in the base life.

Perfect Results Christian's Test

By Chaplain Henry C. Bielski

A placard once appeared in a businessman's office which read: "Fifty-one rules for success: Rule No. 1—Deliver the Goods. It doesn't matter about the other fifty." In other words, results are the test of success in this world.

We must not seek results merely for the personal satisfaction which we derive from our efforts, but because we are giving greater honor and glory to God in striving after perfection of which Our Blessed Lord spoke when He said: "Be you therefore perfect, as also your heavenly Father is perfect."

If this is our motive in striving for results, our efforts will be of the very best; and none of us should think of offering anything less than his best to God.

A lack of motivating power has caused unsuccessful and unproductive spiritual results in the lives of many people. In our early days of our lives, we put our best foot forward in the service of God. We make a determined effort to keep the commandments. Daily prayers are a "must" in our lives, but as we grow older we find that much of our early zeal and sincerity is lacking.

Spiritually, we realize, we have slowed considerably. Why? Probably because we have not kept our first fine religious impulses burning. We expect our early fervor to carry us through life.

PERSPECTIVE

By TSgt. Gene E. Forbes
The Air Force means business in its Quality Control Program. And, to those who cannot assimilate this fact, a rough and rocky road looms ahead.

In calendar year 1959, for example, an estimated 19,000 persons were eliminated for unfitness, unproductiveness and other causes. An unknown number were reduced in rank for various reasons. Retraining controls were stiffened. Enlistment and reenlistment standards tightened, and other personnel actions taken to insure increasing quality of the service's personnel.

The Air Force, in this respect, has stated its position very clearly. In addition to pertinent regulations and directives, it has published a pamphlet entitled "The NCO—A Career Airman." This brochure should be read by all who intend to make the service a career.

Briefly, the pamphlet outlines the Air Force's philosophy on quality.

Against a background of ever-changing technological complexities, it shows why the program is needed, why quality must be continually upgraded. In short, it tells the airman either to measure up or move out.

This may seem rather harsh to some. However, no one can dispute the fact that, as a nation, we are in a constant battle for our very existence. That it is a battle being fought in the ideological, scientific - technological and economic spheres of activity. That it is a battle that cannot be lost.

In the second phase, of course, the Air Force must maintain its aerospace strength abreast of latest developments. To fail could result in national suicide. The importance of this problem is underlined by the thought that, today, we are in the midst of developments that, only six or seven years ago, would have seemed almost fantastic. Aircraft have surpassed Mach 2 speed, satellites have been put into orbit, ICBMs are being phased into operational units, and experiments are being conducted to place man into space.

These developments continually demand the cream of the nation's youth.

Only the best are good enough to man and to maintain the aircraft, missiles and spacecraft that comprise our aerospace power. And even the best is hardly enough, for aerospace strength, the strength of deterrence, depends upon up-to-date weapon systems coordinated with the totality of individual efforts.

Instructor Tests Start Here Soon

Testing of airmen in an effort to designate prospect instructors will be started next week at Reese.

A continuing requirement exists in ATC for instructors and eligibles will be given the Instructor Aptitude Test.

All newly assigned permanent party personnel sent to an ATC base in the grade of staff sergeant or below will be tested. All personnel in the same grades in surplus status at Reese and elsewhere will be tested by March 31, and all other non-instructors in the grades will take tests before Sept. 20.

No individual with less than seven months retrainability will be tested, however.

ABG Captures Court Title

By A/3C Roger J. Gillard
A hard-fought 10-day Intramural Basketball playoff ended Sunday with the Air Base Group as champion, and Installation in No. 2 spot.

Team and individual trophies went to ABG and runner-up trophies to Installation. Eight teams participated.

ABG was the big favorite on the basis of its past performance. But in the first game it was stunned by a 54-41 loss to the 3500th PTS. That put ABG in the losers' bracket and in the position of having to win the rest of the way or be eliminated.

PTW was taken in stride, 47-40, as A/1C Cruz Hinojosa clicked for 14 points.

ABG next took PTG, 42-35, as Hinojosa hit for 14 points again.

Next came the 3500th PTS, again, the team which had won the first game over ABG. It was the hardest fought game of the tournament, and ABG took PTG from the playoffs with a scant 47-46 win.

The winner then upset the 3502nd M&S outfit, 34-28, and the undefeated Installations was the next opponent. But it was no match for ABG and the final score was 45-35.

The final game also matched ABG and Installations. Both seemed determined to win. But the final count was worse than the first meeting of the fives as ABG swamped its foe, 41-22.

The squadron gave heavy credit for the win to A/1C Curtis Blue, the coach. He gave credit to hard play of his men.

During the basketball season ABG averaged 44 points per game.

More Promotions For Airman First

About 2,500 airmen will become staff sergeants in March, adding a rocker to their stripes, it has been announced.

Promotions to airman first class will total 11,000 and to airman second 15,000.

The March cycle will see the same number moving to staff sergeant and airman second class as during the two previous promotions, but the airman first quota is up 3,000.

In ATC 214 will move to staff, 1,313 to airman first, and 1,080 to airman second, for a 2,607 total.

Capt. Bobby N. Foster, M&S headquarters section supply officer, is going to the Pacific Air Force in June.
