You'd better step fast if you're bent on buying your favorite lady glamour of the most expensive kind. Imported French perfumes and silk ported lace are not plentiful. But nobody expects to worry about domestic perfumes or lower-priced rayon lingerie. The more costly costume jewel baubles ($10 up) may run a bit short, too, because skilled technicians are now in defense work and stones are harder to get. But there promises to be plenty of less expensive costume jewels.

Hurry For Handkerchiefs If you have fine handkerchiefs your mind, don't waste much especially, the embroidered ones came from China and the supply is not increasing. Fairly large stocks are still on hand.

Cotton goods are scarce because time of danger Uncle Sam's purchases, so if you have set your heart on repering the bride with bathwels or sheets, hurry along.

You should also shop early for gifts containing metal because of the government restrictions on basic supplies. Refrigerators and ranges are already restricted and such hings as waffle irons, sandwich grills, pressing irons and chafing dishes may be hard to get later. There is a definite shortage of silverware. Cheap umbrellas are virtually out of the picture, though those from $3 up are still in.

COLLEGE GIRLS MUST CALCULATE

On first thought you might call the coldly calculating college girls selfish for worrying about whether or not they are wasting their precious youth when they spend their evenings with soldiers.

But look at it from their standpoint. College girls as a group marry later in life than other women - even in years when they aren't tempted to waste their time on poor matrimonial risks. Not only that, a smaller percentage of girls who go to college marry than of girls who don't have so much schooling.

So the college girls really can't afford to handicap themselves much further And as for their patriotism, isn'

Behind the obvious military objectives of the British Libya move. some well-informed observers here see a political objective: The Churchill government hopes to draw German troops to Africa from Russia not only to save Russia but, by saving Russia, to save the Churchill government.

The Churchill regime has been under a hot fire which will become a veritable barrage if Russia falls. In that event the government would be blamed for not having opened a western front," notwithstanding information that British military strength is not yet sufficient to attempt a continental invasion. Another at-tack on Churchill's position might be a charge that, to silence clamor, British and American spokesmen had collusively given out overoptimistic reports of Russia's CHICAGO, Dec. 1. — A noted student of international law foresees a post-war world confederation in which Anglo-American sea power will insure peace and freedom of commerce.

Dr. Quincy Wright of the University of Chicago predicts that if Hitler is defeated, the Nazi chief's projected "new order" will be geplaced by a world organization patterned in many respects after the League of Nations - but immeasurably strengthened by American participation and the States navies to enforce its edicts.

"The main tasks of the world system will be to maintain freedom of the seas, moderate freedom of commerce and to prevent aggression," he said.

Wright is the author of numer ous works on international law, including an essay, "The Future of Neutrality," in which he pre-dicted in 1928 that the traditional policy of neutrality for non-belligerent nations in event of war would be abandoned in favor of ommon action against aggression

To Uphold Four Freedoms Wright believes the new world eague will formulate a "basic declaration of the rights of man, including President Roosevelt's will have the power to deal with and punish individuals in some cases. At present international law technically is concerned only with states leaving regulation of individuals to national authorities.

Like the old League of Nations, Wright thinks, the new confederation will have three branches: A tory over the Axis has brought a council or legislative body, an adcouncil or legislative body, an administrative authority and a world court which will arbitrate disputes between nations and questions of international law. It will highly probable.

"The American people have seen that their aloofness contributed to the death of the League of Nations," he said, "The strength of the isolationists has declined such. sharply since the first World war."

Continental Systems
Wright also expects the rise of several continental systems, sub- predicted. ject to the world league, but with numbers and more closely-knit or- | pental systems ganizations. Among these, he believes, will be a "United States of Europe," an Asiatic system and a Pan-American union. Russia probably will remain outside of all the continental systems, he said.

Each of the continental systems probably will have a common air force, with national air forces outlawed or greatly reduced, according to Wright. Members of these air forces will owe sole allegiance to their respective system and to no nation. By means of its exclusive command of air power, each continental organization will be able to preserve the independence of small nations adjoining large and powerful neighbors. Sovereignty and independence of individual nations will be retained, subject to limitations necessary to operation of the continental and world systems, Wright

MATTER OF FLATS AND FAT—It all looks pretty easy—and pretty, too—when the bicycle-kicking exercise that transforms "fat" to "flat" is being performed by Jane Russell, a movie starlet. She points out that shoulders must be kept flat on the floor; the idea of the exercise is to flatten the stomach, reduce the thighs, firm up the calves.

Nazi Reverses Are Reflected

Japan's decision to continue ne gotiations with the United States came as the breath of war was blowing hot upon the Pacific, but it isn't surprising since it bears out the indications that Tokyo is anxious to evade conflict cessity. It may even be that it is calculated to give the Japanese more time to try to make up their minds who is going to win the Euopean war.

Japs Watch European Picture One of Japan's greatest prob of the conflict correctly. If she ses swords with America and Britain, and Germany loses, ft will be just too bad for the land of the rising sun. It might be just too bad anyway, but that is a hazard of another sort.

This being so, it is quite possible that the reverses suffered by the Germans in these last critical hours of the Japanese cabinet's debate may have had much to do with the decision to continue negotiations with Washington. Had Hitler's forces swept on into Mos cow, or knocked the Allies out of Libya, we might have had a dif-ferent story from Japan.
