Employees of On Point and Transglobal, as well as firemen from the Howard County Volunteer Fire Department (HCVFD), pose for a photo at a benefit event held Thursday night downtown at the Train Car. On Point and Transglobal put on this "Happy Hour" event to raise funds and show their appreciation for these first responders. Attendees enjoyed live music from Rick Wooldridge, food, drinks and prizes. The highlight of the night, though, was that they were able to raise over $3,000 for the HCVFD.

All veterans are invited to enjoy a complimentary breakfast or lunch at the Yellow Rose Café, located inside Scenic Mountain Medical Center, on Nov. 12.  The Forsan High School marching band competed at the state marching band contest earlier this week at the Alamodome in San Antonio, Texas. Seventeen class AA bands qualified to compete for the title of State Champion. Each band marched in the prelims as five judges ranked each band. The top seven bands from Prelims advanced to the Finals. The finals began at 8:00 p.m., and Forsan marched 2nd of the seven bands. All seven bands were brought onto the field in uniform for a full band retreat. The awards were announced at this time. Forsan tied for 4th place, but was ranked 5th on judges preference. Obituaries

Joseph Rankin Thompson

Joseph Rankin Thompson passed away on Oct. 25, 2018, in Ackerman, Mississippi. A small memorial service was held in Starkville, Mississippi, on Oct. 29, to celebrate his life.

Joseph Rankin Thompson was born in Big Spring, Texas, on March 2, 1946, to Nancy Jo and Robert Weldon Thompson. After graduating from Big Spring High School, he attended McMurry College, where he met and married Jane Anne Hoy. After completing his undergraduate degree at SMU, he enrolled at Northwestern University, first in a Doctoral Program, then switching to a MBA program from which he earned his master's degree. While living in Evanston, Illinois, he had two children, Leslie Joanne and James Robert. He explored lots of opportunities in the Savings & Loan industry, working in Dallas, then in Santa Fe, where he had his third child, Mary Catherine (Katie). From there, he moved to Dayton, Ohio, and then, in the early 1980s, he moved to Corpus Christi, Texas, where he would remain until the mid 1990s.

While in Corpus Christi, he was able to begin what would become a favorite pastime, sailing. Whether racing in regattas locally or across the state, or cruising for leisure, he always appreciated opportunities to enjoy what he referred to as "hydrotherapy." Throughout his life, he enjoyed countless hobbies—golf, model airplanes, hot air ballooning, photography, and playing the banjo. He was a lifelong Methodist—the grandson of a Methodist minister—who often sang in the choir. After a divorce in the mid 80s, he eventually shifted from banking, stocks, and insurance to the burgeoning field of cellular communication.

In the mid 90s, he would marry Diedra "Dee" Cates, then move to Columbia, MO until the mid 2000s when he moved back to Texas (Houston vicinity) to open a hobby store. Eventually, he moved back to the Coastal Bend, retiring in Ingleside and began to pursue another hobby—woodworking. While in Texas, he became a grandfather, welcoming the birth of Katie's daughter, Madeline Anne. Madeline and other loved ones came to adopt his own grandfather's nickname, "Papa Joe."

After a divorce in 2014, Joe moved to be closer to his son, Robert, in Starkville, MS. While there, he began attending Starkville's FUMC, traveling with family, returning to Big Spring for his 50th High School Reunion, and exploring his ancestry. Sadly, not long after moving to Mississippi, it became clear that Joe had been developing more and more severe dementia. He moved into a memory care facility, where he espoused sage business and interviewing advice to the young staff members, took robust walks, and encouraged all who visited to make sure they brought him ice cream. In 2018, he moved to a nursing home, eventually succumbing peacefully to pneumonia. His soft and caring nature will be missed by all who knew him.

He is survived by his sister, Nancy Carolyn Johnson (and her husband Don and son Darren), Columbia, MO; his daughter Leslie Moulton (and her husband, Andy), Maplewood, New Jersey; his son Robert (and his wife Devon Brenner), Starkville, MS; and his granddaughter Madeline Anne Thompson-Ruiz, Maplewood, NJ. In lieu of flowers, the family would gladly accept funds for the education of his granddaughter, Madeline, which can be made via

DPS issues statement on Veterans Day

Special to the Herald

AUSTIN – Texas Department of Public Safety (DPS) Director Steven McCraw issued the following statement regarding Veterans Day:

“As we head into this Veterans Day weekend, we all have the distinct privilege of honoring the courageous men and women who have valiantly answered the call to serve in our country’s military both at home and abroad. This Sunday, let us join together in showing our appreciation for those who have fought bravely to protect us against threats to our liberty and our way of life. We must never forget that these patriots selflessly and willingly embraced the many sacrifices that come with serving in the U.S. Military.

“Our military members will always be celebrated as heroes, because their service has afforded precious freedoms and safety to Americans and countless others across the globe.

“We are also honored that so many veterans have chosen to join the DPS family; their unique expertise and experience greatly contribute to the mission of our department – to protect and serve Texas. They have answered the call to serve not once, but twice, and the department and the entire state of Texas are grateful for them.

“We also recognize the family members and loved ones who stand behind every Soldier, Sailor, Guardsman, Airman and Marine, sharing in the sacrifices. We are extremely thankful for the vital and special role these families play in supporting our military men and women.

“So to all U.S. Military Veterans: you will always hold a place of reverence in our hearts for all you have done for us and our great nation. Thank you for your selfless service, your bravery and your sacrifice.”

Learn about Health Insurance Marketplace options

Special to the Herald

Open Enrollment kicked off November 1, and while not much has changed, new enrollees might have questions. On November 14 from Noon to 1 p.m., Scenic Mountain Medical Center invites members of the community to learn all about these new health insurance options. The presentation will take place at the Northside Community Action League office, located at 108 NE Eighth Street.

Scenic Mountain Medical Center will have representatives on hand who can help answer questions surrounding the Health Insurance Marketplace. This initiative is part of the Affordable Care Act, which required most U.S. citizens to have health insurance beginning in January 2014.

A primary goal of the Affordable Care Act is to help uninsured, eligible Americans gain access to affordable healthcare. Financial help to lower costs is also available for people who qualify.

Health Insurance Marketplaces

Americans are able to find health plans on the Marketplace covering a comprehensive set of benefits, and they cannot be denied coverage based on a pre-existing condition. Some of the health benefits include preventive care and wellness services, doctor visits, prescription drugs, hospital and emergency department care, lab services, pediatric services – and more.

Medicaid Expansion

While Texas has chosen not to expand Medicaid, government subsidies to help citizens obtain coverage from the Health Insurance Marketplace are available, depending on income and other qualifications. There are still many individuals in our community who qualify for Medicaid coverage even though Texas is not expanding Medicaid. These individuals can enroll at any time and coverage can begin immediately.

At Scenic Mountain Medical Center we’re committed not only to supporting your health needs, but also to educating and informing the people we serve. Join us Nov. 14 to learn more and get any questions answered. We’ll also tell you how we can assist you in the enrollment process. To RSVP, call Amanda Duforat at 432-268-4699.

The Panhandle's first newspaper

The city of Clarendon is loaded with history, dating back to the days of Col. Charles Goodnight and the JA ranch. Several of the oldest churches in the panhandle were organized in Clarendon. The city has the oldest functioning courthouse in the state. It also has the oldest newspaper in the panhandle.

"The Clarendon Enterprise turned 140 years old on June first of this year," says Roger Estlack, publisher. "It started out June first 1878 by Reverend Lewis Carhart, who founded the town of Clarendon as a temperance colony and named it in honor of his wife Clara. He started the first newspaper in the Texas Panhandle. The first issue was printed in Oshkosh, Wisconsin. Carhart's relatives had a print shop up there so he would put the articles together in Clarendon and ship them off to Wisconsin where his uncle would print the paper, put it on the train back to Sherman and overland to Clarendon. It was a monthly newspaper to start out. Then about two years later Carhart's cousin moved to Clarendon and brought with him the first press in the panhandle and turned the paper into a weekly. It was called the Clarendon Chronicle for a while, then the Industrial West. My family started a paper in the 20's called the Donley County Leader and published it forty years. It was later merged with the Clarendon newspaper at one point. From 1929 to 1974 my family owned the paper then I purchased it in 1995."

TUMBLEWEED SMITH

Roger says the paper has changed a lot, especially in the last 20 years.

"I have digital subscribers now. Probably twenty-five to thirty percent of our circulation is strictly electronic."

The paper has won some prestigious awards for reports on child abuse and various historical articles. But some awards mean the most to Roger.

"My son is eleven, my daughter is nine. She takes pictures and he writes a weekly column. They've both won some awards with their work. That's pretty cool to be bringing up the next generation of newspaper people."

Roger wasn't so sure he wanted to be a newspaperman. He worked in his uncle's print shop for a while. In high school his English teacher was a woman named Kay Hayes.

"She taught us all the UIL journalism stuff like news, editorial and feature writing. I told her I didn't know what I would end up doing with my life but it certainly wouldn't be working at a newspaper."

Roger has enjoyed reporting on all aspects of life in Clarendon, including the remodeled downtown Movie Theater set to open later this year. He thinks a good newspaper is vital to a town.

"I think it's best for a town when a paper has local ownership. If you look around at some of the strongest communities in the state you'll find they have a strong newspaper."

Riding High

Just as "puppy love" is real to the puppy, so also are "thrill rides." And, whether on land or sea, let's leave it to participants to decide if such rides deserve to have the "thrill" adjective in their names.

Recently, I climbed the stairs on a cruise ship--Carnival's Vista--determined to pedal my way around what may be the most talked about new cruise ship attraction.

Upon arrival at the "launch point," I peered downward, wondering if I needed a pacemaker for my heart—one that had voted against my decision to make good my t-shirt boast: "I Rode the SkyRide." Last year, I could have ridden it on the same ship when it sailed from Miami. I chickened out then, opting NOT to try the ride invented by the same man who gave us rollerblades. This time, though, there were too many Texans on board who would have "yucked it up" if they'd seen me sneaking down stairs instead of mounting the "aerial tricycle."...

I know. There are few rules for the ride. One has to be 54 inches tall, and wear shoes with enclosed ends to protect toes. That's about it.

Children yawned as they took off. For all I know, they fiddled with phones or listened to their iPods as they pedaled the cycles hanging from rails 150 feet above the sea.

Buckled with three straps, I talked myself out of asking the "ride guy" if he had some way to "fetch" me back to the station if my legs gave way. No, I was resolved to "forge on," remembering the Apostle Peter's mistake of glancing downward while water-walking. I vowed to stare straight ahead.

My vow lasted only a few seconds. I looked down at a scene that helped me to unravel a mystery begun when I noticed a man with an elongated carrying case during embarkation. I had wondered if he thought he had to bring his own clubs to play the miniature golf "course."

As I pedaled, he was setting up a telescope and cameras, ready to use, I surmised, when darkness set in. It made sense to me, because star-lit Caribbean skies are 'pert near as memorable as the beautiful "Aqua Velva" waters. God must have spent extra time adding extra measures of beauty to this part of the world.

Before resuming "straight ahead" viewing, I noticed a youngster, maybe 5-6 years of age, approach the man with the camera and telescope. A few seconds later, the child raced away, perhaps seeking parental comfort.

A few minutes later, I successfully completed the ride. (Okay, I'll admit it. The guy on the other track finished a minute or so sooner, but we weren't racing.)

I hastened to the astronomer/photographer to ask about the upset kid. Smiling, he related what had happened.

"He asked what I was doing. I told him I was getting ready to shoot some stars tonight. He raced away, screaming, 'Mother, there's a guy who's going to shoot some stars tonight. How can we stop him? They're our stars, too!'"

Meeting new people, hearing their stories and observing vignettes such as this are chief reasons my wife and I enjoy cruising. We are fortunate to live within a few hours of Galveston, which, in less than two decades, has become America's fourth-busiest cruise port.

A cruise on the Vista is as good as it gets. The marvelous vessel—largest ever to cruise from Galveston--accommodates almost 4,000 guests.

Among them was a wedding planner who arranges hundreds of ceremonies annually, many of them on cruise ships while they're in port. She is on a first-name basis with many crew members. I learned that ship weddings, on average, usually cost about $5,000 each, substantially less than on shore. Alas, there were no such "bargains" available when our daughters were married. All three ceremonies occurred before the cruise ships arrived in Texas. Oh, well...

Also, parents and caregivers can bring their little ones to Baby Time Tuesdays at 11 a.m. and Storytime Wednesdays at 10:15 a.m.

For this week's reviews we have mystery, fiction, and western books.

Seventeen-year-old, Ben Vicksburg is committed to finding the monster who abducted and strangled his older sister Ellen, in "Killing Season" (M KEL K) by Faye Kellerman. Three years ago Ellen went missing from the quiet town of River Remez, New Mexico. When Ben, finds her body in a deep grave by the river's edge, he sets out to investigate her murder. Police believe she was the victim of a psychopath known as the Demon. As Ben continues to pore over the evidence at the local police precinct he gains an unlikely ally in his high school's popular new girl, Ro Majors. In his sister's files, Ben's analytical mind sees patterns that don't fit, tiny threads that he adds to the clues from other similar unsolved murders.

As the body count rises, a picture emerges of an adversary who is as cunning and methodical as he is twisted. At first the police view Ben's investigation with suspicion. Soon his obsession will mark him as a threat. But uncovering the truth may not be enough to keep Ben and those he loves safe from a relentless killer who has nothing left to lose.

Charlie Marder, a World War II veteran and popular academic, is an unlikely congressman in "The Hellfire Club" (F TAP J) by Jake Tapper. Thrust into office by his family ties after his predecessor died mysteriously, Charlie is struggling to navigate the dangerous waters of 1950's Washington, DC. Charlie is confronted by a world in the throes of McCarthyism, where no one trusts anyone. Alongside his pregnant wife, Margaret, a zoologist with ambitions of her own, Charlie struggles to do what is right while learning more about the mysterious circumstances of his predecessor's death. His education in the compromising and occasionally illegal ways of Washington makes him question his own ethical compass and the morality of men he admires, including his father. A mysterious fatal car accident thrusts Charlie and Margaret into an underworld of backroom deals, secret societies, and a plot that could change the course of history. When Charlie learns too much, he has to fight not only for his principles and his newfound political career but also for his life.

The Woodward's do not back down in "Cowhand Justice" (LP W LEH P) by Paul Evan Lehman. It was a matter of kill or be killed when the two largest landowners in the territory decided to join forces, take over all the small ranchmen and drive them from the country. Only the Woodward Family- Kirk, his younger brother Tom, and his father decided to hold out against the Eastern syndicate.

As owners of the Flying W, they knew they would have to protect their holdings with their lives if need be, but they weren't prepared for a life and death chase through the countryside to find a murdering sidewinder whose quick .38 spat hot lead first and asked no questions later.

Trying to escape certain death, Pete Knight rides into the town ahead in the distance in "Terror in Gunsight" (LP W PAI L) by Lauran Paine. Pete is heading into the town of Gunsight, Wyoming, where a long-standing feud between the townsmen and the range men has reached the boiling point. Arthur Hobart, owner of the Diamond H, has issued a warning that if the people of Gunsight do not stop victimizing his cowpunchers, he's going to bring in his own law enforcer and burn the town down.

When Pete gets into town, it means only one thing to the townsfolks-Hobart is about to make good on his threat. When Pete is jailed, he tries to convince Sheriff Mike Mulaney that he is not who the Gunsighters think he is. But before the matter can be resolved, Pete Knight is lynched in the middle of the night by five men wearing hoods. When Pete's brother Ben Knight, a U.S. deputy marshal, arrives seeking vengeance for his brother's hanging, he has even more reason to hate the town and what it represents than those on the Diamond H. Ranch. But when Hobart tries to use Knight's arrival for his own advantage, Knight must choose between protecting the town or standing by while Hobart's threats become reality.

Texas Ranger Will Kirkpatrick finds the tables turned on him in "Blood Ties, A Texas Ranger Will Kirkpatrick Novel" (LP W GRI J) by James J. Griffin, when the judge entrust a young outlaw, Jonas Peterson, in Will's care instead of sending the youngster to Huntsville State Penitentiary for his crime. It is up to Will to teach Jonas how to be a Texas Ranger. But when Will returns to his post with Jonas, Captain Hunter gives him some unwelcome news- Will is going home for his sister's wedding, whether he likes it or not.

Though Will has been estranged from his family since he left to join the Rangers years earlier, Will's father, Silas, has the governor's ear. Reluctantly, Will obeys his orders, intending to make the unwanted trip as short as possible. But when his father's bank is robbed, and Silas himself is jailed for the robbery, Will and Jonas go after the gang who pulled off the job, determined to see justice done. No matter how bitter the feud between father and son in the past, there's no way a Texas Ranger can ignore blood ties.

Texas man gets 55 years in prison for fatal church bus crash

UVALDE, Texas (AP) — A driver has been sentenced to 55 years in prison for causing a Texas church bus crash that killed 13 people.

Twenty-one-year-old Jack Dillon Young of Leakey, Texas, was sentenced Friday after pleading no contest on May 31 to 13 counts of intoxication manslaughter and one count of intoxication assault.

He had faced up to 270 years in prison after a three-day sentencing hearing.

Prosecutors said Young was driving his pickup while under the influence of a prescription sedative and had smoked marijuana before the colliding with a church bus in March 2017 on U.S. 83 near Uvalde, about 75 miles (120 kilometers) west of San Antonio.

Defense attorney Rogelio Munoz asked for mercy and said doctors didn't properly monitor Young's prescription drug use.

This story has been corrected to fix the date of Young's no contest plea to May 31.

ASTROLOGICAL QUESTIONS: "What would you say the perfect first date would be for a Taurus guy and Libra girl? I don't want to spend so much money that I set a precedent I can't keep up with. That said, she is special, and I want to make an impression. She makes me so nervous that I sometimes wonder if I'm ready to ask her out. Maybe I should wait. I'm not afraid she'll say no, and I'm afraid she'll say yes. Please advise."

The irony of impressions: The more you want to make a good impression, the less empowered you are to do so. The best impressions are made when you don't care what they think. If you have to act like someone you're not and she likes it, you're in a worse position because the one she likes isn't really you. Instead focus on having this type of attitude: Here I am, for reals. If that works for her, great. If it doesn't, good to know, and it's nothing personal.

I think you're ready to ask her and you should. A happy hour somewhere nice will be more comfortable and casual (and less expensive) than dinner. As two Venus-ruled signs, you should find it easy to communicate. Listen more than you talk. Libra women can't resist a good listener and a spiffy dresser.

Lockdown ordered after vehicle speeds onto Texas Army post

SAN ANTONIO (AP) — Military officials say a vehicle forced its way through an Army post entrance gate in South Texas, prompting a lockdown as security forces pursued the vehicle.

Joint Base San Antonio military officials said in a statement posted to Twitter that the vehicle, containing two people, ran the gate at Fort Sam Houston in San Antonio around 4 a.m. Friday.

The two people fled the vehicle. One of them was apprehended, but authorities say they're still searching for the second person.

Authorities have not indicated who was in the vehicle or what their intentions were.

The incident prompted a lockdown that was later lifted.

A second lockdown was later ordered that ended about 10:30 a.m.

It's not clear if the second lockdown also was related to the security gate breach.

Texas judge orders agency to pay $127K over removal of kids

HOUSTON (AP) — A Texas judge has ordered Child Protective Services to pay a family more than $127,000 for wrongfully removing their children and allegedly lying to the court about the removal.

Harris County Judge Mike Schneider on Thursday announced sanctions against Child Protective Services after calling the agency "dishonest" and possibly "malicious" for removing Melissa and Dillon Bright's two young children from their care in September, the Houston Chronicle reported.

Schneider ordered the agency to pay the Bright family's legal fees and to create new training for CPS workers.

"We do need to deal with the issue of how we make sure this doesn't happen again," Schneider said.

Following the ruling this week, the family's attorneys are calling for the firing of the CPS workers involved in wrongfully removing 2-year-old Charlotte and 5-month-old Mason.

The trouble started in July, when Mason fell from a lawn chair onto their cement driveway in Tomball.

Melissa Bright immediately took Mason to the hospital for his head injury, but an MRI revealed that Mason had a second, smaller fracture and bleeding in his brain.

Melissa Bright couldn't explain her child's second fracture, which resulted in a child abuse prevention team determining that Mason's injuries were "consistent with child abuse."

CPS workers decided that the children would need to be placed in the care of other family members.

But the Texas Children's Hospital later found that Mason likely had a blood clotting disorder, which explained his additional health issues.

Mason's head injury also didn't heal as planned and required the baby to have a hole drilled in his brain to relieve pressure.

Melissa Bright needed to nurse Mason in order to prevent a second injury, but CPS wouldn't let the mother live with her child.

The family tried to work with the agency to move the child closer to home but case workers delayed getting approval, leading the family to bring their children home on their own.

The move resulted in a caseworker, Lavar Jones, seeking emergency custody of the children in September without telling the court about Mason's diagnosed blood disorder and a medical opinion that explained his second injury.

Jones was questioned weeks later in court about the agency's reasons for removing the kids, and the caseworker pleaded the Fifth Amendment, which allowed her to decline to answer questions that might incriminate her.

"They lied in their affidavit, they lied in their sworn removal testimony and they have — when questioned about those lies — taken the Fifth," said Dennis Slate, the family's attorney.

The case is a sign of a "broken system" and the need for more accountability, the family's attorneys said.

CPS spokeswoman Tejal Patel said the agency is reviewing options, including an appeal.

Schneider gave CPS two weeks to develop new training for its workers.

N. California wildfire claims 5 lives and quadruples in size

By DON THOMPSON and PAUL ELIAS

Associated Press

PARADISE, Calif. (AP) — Five people were found dead in their burned-out vehicles after a Northern California wildfire incinerated most of a town of about 30,000 people with flames that moved so fast there was nothing firefighters could do, authorities said Friday.

Only a day after it began, the blaze near the town of Paradise had grown to nearly 110 square miles (285 square kilometers) and was burning completely out of control.

"There was really no firefight involved," Capt. Scott McLean of the California Department of Forestry and Fire Protection said, explaining that crews gave up attacking the flames and instead helped people get out alive. "These firefighters were in the rescue mode all day yesterday."

With fires also burning in Southern California, state officials put the total number of people forced from their homes at 157,000. Evacuation orders included the entire city of Malibu, which is home to 13,000, among them some of Hollywood's biggest stars.

When Paradise was evacuated, the order set off a desperate exodus in which many motorists got stuck in gridlocked traffic and abandoned their vehicles to flee on foot. People reported seeing much of the community go up in flames, including homes, supermarkets, businesses, restaurants, schools and a retirement center.

Rural areas fared little better. Many homes have propane tanks that were exploding amid the flames. "They were going off like bombs," said Karen Auda, who escaped to a nearby town.

McLean estimated that the lost buildings numbered in the thousands in Paradise, about 180 miles (290 kilometers) northeast of San Francisco.

"Pretty much the community of Paradise is destroyed. It's that kind of devastation," he said.

The massive blaze spread north Friday, prompting officials to order the evacuation of Stirling City and Inskip, two communities north of Paradise along the Sierra Nevada foothills.

The wind-driven flames also spread to the west and reached Chico, a city of 90,000 people. Firefighters were able to stop the fire at the edge of the city, Cal Fire Cpt. Bill Murphy said.

There were no signs of life Friday on the road to Paradise except for the occasional bird chirp. A thick, yellow haze from the fire hung in the air and gave the appearance of twilight in the middle of the day.

Strong winds had blown the blackened needles on some evergreens straight to one side. A scorched car with its doors open sat on the shoulder.

At one burned-out house, flames still smoldered inside what appeared to be a weight room. The rubble included a pair of dumbbells with the rubber melted off and the skeletons of a metal pullup bar and other exercise equipment. The grass and elaborate landscaping all around the brick and stucco home remained an emerald green. Red pool umbrellas were furled near lounge chairs and showed not a single on them.

Evacuees from Paradise sat in stunned silence Friday outside a Chico church where they took refuge the night before. They all had harrowing tales of a slow-motion escape from a fire so close they could feel the heat inside their vehicles as they sat stuck in a terrifying traffic jam.

When the order came to evacuate, it was like the entire town of 27,000 residents decided to leave at once, they said. Fire surrounded the evacuation route, and drivers panicked. Some crashed and others left their vehicles by the roadside.

"It was just a wall of fire on each side of us, and we could hardly see the road in front of us," police officer Mark Bass said.

A nurse called Rita Miller on Thursday morning, telling her she had to get her disabled mother, who lives a few blocks away, and flee Paradise immediately. Miller jumped in her boyfriend's rickety pickup truck, which was low on gas and equipped with a bad transmission. She instantly found herself stuck in gridlock.

"I was frantic," she said. After an hour of no movement, she abandoned the truck and decided to try her luck on foot. While walking, a stranger in the traffic jam rolled down her window asked Miller if she needed help. Miller at first she scoffed at the notion of getting back in a stopped car. The she reconsidered, thinking: "I'm really scared, this is terrifying, I can't breathe, I can't see and maybe I should humble myself and get in this woman's car."

The stranger helped Miller pack up her mother and took them to safety in Chico. It took three hours to travel the 14 miles.

Concerned friends and family posted anxious messages on Twitter and other sites, saying they were looking for loved ones, particularly seniors who lived at retirement homes or alone.

About 20 of the same deputies who were helping to find and rescue people lost their own homes, Sheriff Kory Honea said.

"There are times when you have such rapid-moving fires ... no amount of planning is going to result in a perfect scenario, and that's what we had to deal with here," Honea told the Action News Network.

Kelly Lee called shelters looking for her husband's 93-year-old grandmother, Dorothy Herrera, who was last heard from Thursday morning. Herrera, who lives in Paradise with her 88-year-old husband, Lou, left a frantic voicemail around 9:30 a.m. saying they needed to get out.

"We never heard from them again," Lee said. "We're worried sick. ... They do have a car, but they both are older and can be confused at times."

The missing included Richard Wayne Johnson and his wife, Suzanne, who lived in an RV park in Paradise that burned, according to his daughter Dawn Johnson of Independent, Oregon.

"He has Stage 4 prostate cancer. She's in her 70s and mostly confined to her bed due to fibromyalgia," Johnson said. "I would be very surprised if they had gas in their car to leave."

She said the couple moved from Texas to the California foothill town about a year ago and were probably not prepared for wildfires.

Johnson said she hasn't been able to reach them by cellphone, and members of the couple's Jehovah's Witnesses Kingdom Hall in Paradise told her they have not seen them at local shelters.

"I checked all over," she said. "Red Cross, anything you can think of I've tried to do."

California gunman was volatile but passed mental assessment

This 2017 photo from the California Department of Motor Vehicles shows Ian David Long. Authorities said the Marine combat veteran opened fire Wednesday evening, Nov. 7, 2018, at a country music bar in Southern California, killing multiple people before apparently taking his own life.

THOUSAND OAKS, Calif. (AP) — Neighbors of Ian David Long described the man who shot and killed 12 people at a country music bar as distant in public but combative with his mother inside the suburban Los Angeles home the two shared.

One ruckus in April was so extreme that they called law enforcement. Authorities brought in a mental health specialist who concluded that Long could not be involuntarily committed for psychiatric observation but worried the 28-year-old Marine veteran might have post-traumatic stress disorder.

"The mental health experts out there cleared him that day," Ventura County Sheriff Geoff Dean said Thursday, the morning after Long opened fire inside a bar that was hosting a night for local college students.

Julie Hanson, who lives next door to Long's ranch-style home, described him as "odd" and "disrespectful" well before he left home a decade ago, got married and enlisted in the Marines, becoming a machine gunner.

She could often hear him yelling and cursing, but several months ago unusually loud banging and shouting prompted her husband to call authorities.

"I was concerned because I knew he had been in the military," Tom Hanson said Thursday, as federal and local law enforcement officers searched Long's house, where an American flag flew over the garage.

Hanson described Long as an introvert and said he was "dumbfounded" by the massacre.

Other than the call in April, Long's only other contact with authorities came after a traffic collision and after he alleged he was the victim of a violent encounter in 2015 at another bar in Thousand Oaks, the sheriff said.

Long joined the Marines at 18 and was married as a 19-year-old in Honolulu in June 2009, according to military and court records.

His military service lasted nearly five years, and he was honorably discharged with the rank of corporal in 2013, the Pentagon said.

He was part of the infantry, responsible for hauling and shooting machine guns.

During his service, Long's marriage fell apart.

He and his wife separated in June 2011, while he was deployed on a seven-month tour in Afghanistan.

The couple cited irreconcilable differences in divorce papers filed in May 2013, two months after Long left the Marines.

Later, he enrolled at nearby California State University, Northridge, last attending in 2016, the school said in a statement.

More recently he was living in a home where neighbors said they could hear frequent, aggressive shouting between Long and his mother, especially over the last year.

About 18 months ago, Don and Effie MacLeod heard "an awful argument" and what he believes was a gunshot from the Longs' property.

Don MacLeod said he did not call police but avoided speaking with Ian Long.

"I told my wife, 'Just be polite to him. If he talks, just acknowledge him, don't go into conversation with him,'" Don MacLeod said Thursday.

Sparse pictures on social media showed a happy family.

Long's mother, Colleen, posted Facebook photos of her son in his military uniform in 2010 and 2011.

"My Son is home, well sort of, back in Hawaii, soon to be in Cali come January, hooray!" she wrote on Dec. 14, 2012.

Another photo from 2014 shows Ian Long with his arm draped around his mother in front of Dodger Stadium. The two were wearing Dodgers T-shirts and smiles.

Authorities haven't identified what motivated Long to open fire during college night at Borderline Bar and Grill in Thousand Oaks, around 40 miles (64 kilometers) from downtown Los Angeles.

The dead included 11 people inside the bar and a veteran sheriff's sergeant who was the first officer through the door.

The Marine Corps said Long earned several awards, including a Combat Action Ribbon and a Marine Corps Good Conduct Medal.

He was assigned to the 2nd Battalion, 3rd Marine Regiment, Third Marine Division in Kaneohe Bay, Hawaii.

Trump shifts postelection focus to armistice commemoration

President Donald Trump is shifting his postelection focus with a weekend trip to Paris, joining an international commemoration of the 100th anniversary of the armistice that ended World War I.

Trump was to arrive later Friday in France, days after Americans delivered a split referendum on his presidency in the midterm congressional election, keeping the Senate in his party's control but ceding the House to opposition Democrats.

Trump planned to meet with French President Emmanuel Macron for talks on topics expected to include European security, Syria and Iran. For Sunday's anniversary, he was to join world leaders at a ceremony in the shadow of the Arc de Triomphe.

"It should be a very beautiful period of time, the 100th anniversary of the ending of World War I. We have many countries — the leadership from many countries will be there, especially since they heard the United States will be there. And we look forward to that," Trump told reporters Friday before leaving the White House. "I've seen what they have planned, and I think it's going to be something very, very special."

Trump originally wanted to celebrate Veterans Day on Sunday with a grand military parade in Washington, as he was inspired by the tanks and flyovers he saw during France's Bastille Day celebration when he visited Paris in July of last year. Trump ordered the Pentagon to come up with plans for his own version, but they were eventually scrapped over concerns about costs and the damage tanks weighing many tons would do to the streets in Washington.

The president and first lady Melania Trump were expected to visit several memorial sites in France that are dedicated to American service members. Not on Trump's schedule, despite earlier discussions about the possibility, was an extended meeting with Russian President Vladimir Putin.

"I don't know that we're seeing each other in Paris, but we may," Trump said. "There may be a lunch for the leaders."

The White House and the Kremlin had previously considered a formal meeting in Paris. That now seems more likely for later this month, when they attend the Group of 20 summit of international leaders in Argentina.

Trump and Putin have met previously on the sidelines of two summits and had their own bilateral meeting in July in Helsinki. At that meeting, Trump would not say whether he believed Putin or U.S. intelligence agencies about their conclusions about Russia's interference with the 2016 presidential election.

Trump's brief visit to Europe comes amid uncertainty about the U.S. relationship with the continent. Trump has railed against trade deals with the European Union and has criticized some EU nations, including France, for not spending enough to defense to sustain NATO, the decades-old Western alliance formed as a bulwark to Moscow's aggression.

Trump's national security adviser, John Bolton, said Friday in Paris that the U.S. was concerned about stability in Europe and that Trump was not shirking from global engagement. "I think the enduring lesson (of World War I) for the United States is that when you become a global power ... you have global interests to protect," Bolton said.

Bulldogs beat the Eagles with big second half

By JORDAN PARR
Sports Editor

The Bulldogs played tough and rode a strong defensive effort in the second half along with four TDs from Zach Schneider to clinch a third straight playoff berth. The 39-22 win over Lubbock Roosevelt wasn't easy early in the game, with each team scoring back and forth and headed into the half tied 14-14. The win means Coahoma will play Crane, 1-3A DII champs, in bi-district.

Coahoma out paced the Eagles on offense putting up 426 yards of total offense to just 194 for Roosevelt. On the ground Bulldogs chewed up yardage the whole game finishing with 391 yards rushing and six touchdowns. Coahoma also won the important turnover battle, losing just one fumble to the Eagles four lost fumbles. The Bulldogs picked up 19 first downs in the game while limiting Roosevelt to just 12.

Coahoma jumped out to an early 7-0 lead on a 4 yard touchdown run by Gaige Hill with 9:32 left in the first quarter. The Bulldogs held the Eagles out of the end zone in the first quarter and looked really solid on defense all night.

Early in the second quarter Roosevelt responded on a 3 yard touchdown run by Jacob Torres to tie the game at 7-7 with 7:21 left in the half. Then after getting a stop on defense, the Eagles drove the ball down the field again and capped off the impressive drive with an 8 yard touchdown pass from Alex Trevino to Torres to go up 14-7 with just 4:02 remaining in the second quarter. But the Bulldogs weren't going to let the game slip away and put together an awesome drive to answer the Eagles. Schneider guided his team down the field and puched the ball across the goal line himself from the 1 yard line to tie the game at 14-14 with 2:05 left in the half. Neither team could get anything else going before the intermission.

In the second half the Bulldogs really took over and dominated the game. On the first possession of the second half Coahoma marched right down the field and Schneider punched it in again, this time from the 7 yard line to take a 20-14 lead with 10:47 left in the third. Neither team could get anything going offensively in the remainder of the third quarter and headed into the final period with the Bulldogs leading 20-14.

In the fourth quarter Coahoma shut the door for good scoring on back-to-back possessions with two huge touchdown runs of 28 and 56 yards by Schneider to put the game completely out of reach. Roosevelt did score again with 4:36 left in the game on a 4 yard pass from Trevino to Veo Nelson to bring the score to 33-22 after a successful two point conversion. But it was too little too late and Schneider put the icing on the cake with another TD run of 9 yards with just 1:42 remaining in the game to push the score to the final tally of 39-22.

The Bulldogs running game was once again on full display as Schneider, Murillo and Hill chewed up the Eagles defense all night. Schneider's unbelievable 5 rushing touchdowns will not soon be forgotten as Coahoma moves forward into post season play. The Bulldogs will have their cut out for them. The Bulldogs district champs Crane in the bi-district round, but if they can play defense and run the ball like they did this week it could easily go either way.

Bufs' season ends with hard fought loss to Stamford

Forsan had a tough test and needed a win against previously ranked Stamford. The Bufs defense was gritty all night long and put the Stamford star QB out at the half. Turnovers really hurt the Forsan upset bid and Stamford's rushing attack to seal a 36-12 win. The Bufs end the 2018 year 1-9, but the future is extremely bright for a team that will return a majority of a young roster next season. Congratulations to these players for the effort, heart, and teamwork they showed all year. They are the embodiment of what this great game is supposed to be and the seniors have left a legacy far greater than trophies or wins. They have left a legacy of what it means to play the game the right way and for the right reasons. No scoreboard could ever make these young men losers, no matter what it says.

Injuries mounting for TCU, tough test at No. 7 WVU next

By JOHN RABY

AP Sports Writer

MORGANTOWN, W.Va. — TCU coach Gary Patterson figures all those injuries that have piled up for the Horned Frogs could present a problem for No. 7 West Virginia.

Patterson joked it might be difficult for West Virginia to put together a scouting plan against TCU's revolving-door defense.

"It's been a hard year for us," Patterson said. "This team hasn't quit battling."

TCU has seen 20 season-ending injuries and 36 players have missed playing time.

"I don't know if I've ever been down seven safeties in a three-safety system," Patterson said. "Freshmen say they want to play, so here we go."

Patterson and West Virginia coach Dana Holgorsen have a mutual respect for each other. Their teams joined the Big 12 together in 2012. Holgorsen always pays compliments to TCU's defense when the teams meet and, injuries aside, Saturday will be no different when TCU (4-5, 2-4 Big 12) plays the Mountaineers (7-1, 5-1, No. 9 CFP).

In the high-scoring Big 12, TCU has held opponents under 20 points three times in its last five games. Despite the injuries, the Horned Frogs allow the Big 12's best pass defense, allowing 194 yards per game.

"It doesn't matter who plays these spots in a Gary Patterson defense," Holgorsen said. "This will probably be the stiffest test that we've had to date for our offense."

And conversely, one of the toughest defensive challenges for Patterson. West Virginia's Will Grier has thrown for 28 touchdowns, including three in a 42-41 win last week at No. 15 Texas. He's averaging 327 yards per game.

"I don't know if we've played anybody at this point that throws like they do," Patterson said.

Some other things to know about the Horned Frogs and Mountaineers: TICK TOCK

Time is starting to run out on TCU's chances to become bowl eligible. The Horned Frogs must win two of their last three games to do that. They have games remaining at Baylor next week and at home Nov.

No. 15 Texas visits Texas Tech, each looking to end skid

AP photo

Texas Tech coach Kliff Kingsbury talks to quarterback Jett Duffey (7) during a timeout in the second half of an NCAA college football game against Oklahoma in Lubbock, Texas. Duffey is expected to get his second start on Saturday against Texas.

By STEPHEN HAWKINS
 AP Sports Writer

LUBBOCK, Texas — No. 15 Texas has gone from Big 12 leader and College Football Playoff contender to conference chaser after consecutive losses by a combined four points.

Texas Tech has also lost its last two games, and their freshman quarterback took another hard shot last weekend. But the Red Raiders (5-4, 3-3 Big 12) can get bowl eligible with a win Saturday night over the Longhorns, just like they did last year in a regular-season finale last November that most likely saved coach Kliff Kingsbury's job. This game is also the final home game for Tech's seniors.

"You want them to have that moment, that memory," said Kingsbury, the former Tech quarterback in his sixth season as coach. "Three of those guys have been here every day I've been here. We have a lot of fifth-year seniors that have been through some ups and downs, and going through a lot to get to where they are at."

It is another primetime game in Lubbock, just like last week when Tech lost 51-46 to No. 6 Oklahoma. Freshman quarterback Alan Bowman, one of the nation's top passers, sustained a partially collapsed lung for the second time this season. He was hospitalized for four nights, and dual-treat Jett Duffey is expected to get his second start as Tech looks to get consecutive wins over Texas for the first time in 20 years.

Texas (6-3, 4-2, No. 19 CFP) likely has to win its last three games and get some help to get into the Big 12 championship game. The Longhorns are coming off a 42-41 loss to West Virginia, when Will Grier ran for a 2-point conversion in the final minute. The Mountaineers had more than 500 total yards, like Oklahoma State a week earlier in a 38-35 win.

"Playing a bit tentative. I think for whatever reason we haven't cut it loose at times," coach Tom Herman said of the Texas defense. "That's on us to figure out why. Maybe it's an uncertainty. Yeah, just playing tentative at times."

It doesn't help that Texas is banged up on defense. Senior defensive end Breckyn Hager (dislocated elbow) was hurt last week but was able to return to practice this week and could play Saturday. Senior cornerback Da-vante Davis (neck) also could return. Junior safety Brandon Jones (ankle) is questionable to play while Hager's backup, Marquez Bimage is out with a shoulder injury.

HOOK'EM DOWN
 Penalizing West Virginia players for taunting for flashing downward "Hook'em Horns" hand signals raised new questions over whether the Longhorns get special treatment. Kingsbury this week told his players not to risk it and has issued similar instructions in the past. Texas players call it disrespectful and things could get chippy if a Red Raiders player does it in the heat of the moment. The Red Raiders were penalized for it in Tech's win in Austin last year.

"It bothers us a lot because we take pride in what we do and that logo," Texas wide receiver Lil'Jordan Humphrey said.

RUNNING RED RAIDERS
 While Texas Tech has one of the nation's top passing games and leads the Big 12 with 376 yards a game, the Red Raiders' 25 rushing touchdowns are second in the league behind Oklahoma's 26.

"The quarterback and receivers get a lot of the publicity, if you will," Herman said. "You better be able to stop the run or you're going to bleed a slow death. They do it well enough to make you have to defend it."

EMERGING EHLINGER
 Despite the two-game losing streak, Texas quarterback Sam Ehlinger keeps getting better. He had one of his best career games last week with 354 yards passing and three touchdowns and ran for another score. He leads Texas with nine rushing touchdowns. His long TD pass to Devin Duvernay gave Texas the lead with less than 3 minutes left. Ehlinger hasn't thrown an interception in since the first game, but he had a bad one late against Texas Tech last season that set up the Red Raiders' winning touchdown.

HELLO OLD FRIEND
 Red Raiders defensive back John Bonney played 37 for Texas the past three seasons before going to Texas Tech as a graduate transfer in August.

"John's a graduate of the University of Texas and gave us four years of his blood, sweat and tears and we're very thankful for that," Herman said.

Rypien leads Boise State past No. 16 Fresno State 24-17

By JASON
CHATRAW

Associated Press

BOISE, Idaho — Boise State quarterback Brett Rypien etched his name in the Mountain West record books as the conference's all-time leading passer in both yards and completions. But the pro-style passer needed his feet almost as much as his arm to beat the nation's second-best scoring defense.

Rypien engineered a fourth-quarter comeback, finishing with 269 yards passing with a touchdown and one interception, along with 30 yards rushing on eight carries that included scrambles for three first downs, in leading Boise State to a 24-17 upset over No. 16 Fresno State on Friday night.

"(Rypien) ran the ball well tonight," Boise State coach Bryan Harsin said. "He moved and scrambled and all those little plays, they don't seem like much at the time but they add up throughout the game. And that's why we won the game tonight."

Trailing 17-10 late in the third quarter, Rypien scrambled on third down for a 10-yard gain to set up a game-tying 1-yard run by Alexander Mattison.

After the game, Rypien shrugged off his fleet-footed prowess.

"It's just me trying to make a play," Rypien said. "There were some third-down situations in there where I felt like their eyes were off me and I had to take off and make a play."

Even Fresno State coach Jeff Tedford could only shake his head afterward when recalling Rypien's running plays.

"They have a good offense and Rypien killed us with his legs a little," Ted-

Boise State running back Alexander Mattison (22) dives for a few extra yards on a carry against Fresno State during the first half of an NCAA college football game Friday, Nov. 9, 2018, in Boise, Idaho.

Rypien's legs complemented his clutch throws, none bigger than a 49-yard scoring strike on another third down play when he hit Khalil Shakir in stride with 9:22 remaining in the fourth quarter to give the Broncos a 24-17 lead.

"On the touchdown pass, (Rypien) stepped up and slid and delivered a perfect ball in that situation," Harsin said. "With all that was going on, when you can deliver a perfect throw in that moment in a tight ball game — it takes a lot of hard work for that guy to do that."

Boise State (8-2, 5-1 Mountain West), which hasn't lost to Fresno State at home since 1984, beat a ranked team for the first time in November in program history to keep its conference title aspirations alive.

It was also the first time since 1999 that the Broncos were an underdog at home for a regular season game.

"We knew it was going to be tough," Rypien said. "Being an underdog on the blue, that's never a good feeling, especially since we haven't been in a long time. And some guys in the locker room took that kind of personally."

Mattison rushed for 144 yards on 30 carries and two touchdowns, the most any single running back has tallied against the Bulldogs' this season.

Fresno State (8-2, 5-1) had only given up three touchdowns in conference play before facing the Broncos and had only been in one game decided by one score or less all season.

Following another bitter loss to the Broncos, Tedford remained upbeat.

"We'll bounce back," Tedford said. "Our guys played hard right down to the end. I've still got a lot of confidence in this team."

Fresno State Marcus McMaryion, who struggled against Boise State in the Mountain West title game last December, was 24-of-35 passing with a touchdown. However, McMaryion couldn't pull off any late-game heroics after the Bulldogs fell behind, as the Broncos held Fresno State on its final two drives before running out the clock to secure the victory.

THE TAKEAWAY

Fresno State: The Bulldogs' faint hopes to emerge from the Group of 5 and earn a berth in a New Year's Six bowl dimmed with the loss. However, they still have a chance to win the West division and get back to the conference title game.

Boise State: With the season hanging in the balance, the Broncos showed they have the fortitude to do what it takes to win close games for the second straight week. The Broncos still have plenty of work to do in order to get an opportunity to defend their conference title, including a home date in two weeks against Mountain division leader No. 14 Utah State.

POLL IMPLICATIONS

Fresno State will fall after the close loss on the road, but not far enough to drop out of the poll altogether. Boise State, which hasn't been ranked since the third week of the season, might have a chance to crack the top 25 again with some help on Saturday.

UP NEXT

Fresno State: The Bulldogs return home Saturday to face San Diego State with a berth in the conference title game on the line.

Boise State: The Broncos will travel to New Mexico on Friday.

Saints' Dez Bryant hurt, calls injury the 'ultimate test'

Dallas Cowboys' Dez Bryant warms up before an NFL football game against the Los Angeles Chargers in Arlington, Texas. A person familiar with the situation says free-agent Dez Bryant and the New Orleans Saints have agreed on contract terms that will add the former Cowboys star to one of the NFL's top offenses. The person spoke to The Associated Press on condition of anonymity on Wednesday, Nov. 7, 2018, because the roster move has not been announced.

By BRETT MARTE

AP Sports Writer

METAIRIE, La. — Dez Bryant's tenure with the Saints may have been short-lived.

In just his second practice with New Orleans, the newly acquired wide receiver indicated in social media posts Friday that he has had a significant setback.

The team's injury report listed Bryant as questionable for Sunday's game in Cincinnati with an ankle injury, but a person familiar with the situation said the team is still awaiting the results of a doctor's examination of Bryant.

The person spoke to The Associated Press on condition of anonymity because the team has not announced any details of Bryant's medical exam.

Bryant has indicated on social media that the injury will be challenging to overcome, writing on his verified Twitter account, "Things was just starting to heat up for me ... I won't question the man upstairs ... this is the ultimate test.. thank you everyone for the prayers."

The 30-year-old signed with the Saints on Wednesday following a workout in New Orleans a day earlier. After his first practice on Thursday, he expressed an eagerness to play with NFL all-time passer Drew Brees, and help a club that looks like a Super Bowl contender. The surging Saints have won seven straight and last Sunday knocked off the previously unbeaten Los Angeles Rams.

Bryant spent his first eight NFL seasons with Dallas and in 2017 caught 69 passes for 838 yards and six touchdowns, including a 50-yard scoring play, for the Cowboys.

Last season was Bryant's best since he caught 88 passes for 1,320 yards and 16 TDs in 2014, which at the time was his third consecutive season with at least 1,200 yards receiving. He signed his last Cowboys contract right after that, but has not approached that level of production since — a central reason Dallas released him in April with two years left on his five-year, $70 million contract.

If Bryant is unable to play this season, the Saints could look to sign another receiver soon.

A Guide for the Perfect Thanksgiving

Special to the Herald

Planning a holiday dinner can be daunting, especially for first-timers. If the torch has been passed to you this year, follow this easy Thanksgiving guide for holiday success!

Keep it simple

Before we get started, it's important to remember to keep things simple. Don't take on more than you can handle, especially if this is your first time preparing Thanksgiving dinner. Try to stick to tried-and-true recipes or family favorites to keep things running smoothly.

Try simplifying the beverages—making individual cocktails can be time-consuming, but a slow cooker filled with spiced cider can be both kid-friendly and easily made into an alcoholic option for adults.

Make a plan

Planning is the most important part! We can't say it enough—having a plan will help keep stress at bay on Thanksgiving. If you're not a list maker by nature, now's the time to pick up the habit. Make lists for the recipes you want to tackle, ingredients needed, beverages and the timeline of the day. You can even plan out the week before Thanksgiving so you know when you'll grocery shop, when you need to

Accept help

Don't forget: you don't have to do this on your own! Accept your friends' and family members' offers of bringing dishes or helping set up. In general, guests enjoy helping out – it makes them feel more comfortable! If guests ask what they can bring, be specific. That way you can fill in any gaps in the menu and prevent having three green bean casseroles. Pro tip: be sure to mix up the types of dishes you serve so you have enough space on your stove and in the oven on Thanksgiving day.

Go shopping

Before you head to the store, read through your recipes, make a list of everything you need, and take a peek inside your pantry to see which ingredients you already have on hand. Then it's time to hit the store. Try to go well in advance of Thanksgiving just in case you forget something the first time. Shopping early can also mean less-crowded stores!

Don't be afraid to supplement your meal with store-bought items. Buying fresh rolls or a pie from the bakery is an easy way to add to the meal and reduce your to-do list.

Buy the turkey

If this is your first time buying a turkey, here's what you need to know:

--Should you buy fresh or frozen? If you have time to properly thaw a turkey, buy a frozen one. Otherwise, buy a fresh turkey one or two days before Thanksgiving.

--How do you thaw a turkey? The refrigerator is the best place to thaw it. It'll need about 24 hours per 4 or 5 pounds of turkey. Or you can thaw in cold water, which requires 30 minutes per pound. You'll need to change the water every 30 minutes to keep it cold.

--How big should it be? You'll need about 1 pound of bone-in turkey for every person, or 1½ pounds if you want leftovers. Don't skimp out by buying the cheapest turkey—it's the centerpiece of the meal!

-Tip: Stay away from cooking your stuffing in the turkey.

Do a test run

If you're feeling particularly nervous about preparing the meal, try a test run. It can be helpful to try out new-to-you dishes or to practice your skills on a smaller turkey.

Prepare make-ahead dishes

The more dishes you make in advance, the less you'll have to do on Thanksgiving. Side dishes, breads and desserts can all be made ahead of time. Not only will this mean less stress, but it'll also help ensure you have enough valuable oven space on the big day.

Set the Table

Think about your decor in advance, and try to set the table at least a day before Thanksgiving. It'll be one less thing you have to do, and it'll also help you know if you're short on silverware or plates.

It's the big day!

It's showtime! To know when you should start preparing each dish, start with the time of your meal and work backward. Keep a list of the dishes you're serving handy so you don't forget anything. And give yourself at least an extra hour when it comes to preparing the turkey – it'll need a half hour to rest once it comes out of the oven.

Most importantly, enjoy yourself! Don't forget to sit back, relax and enjoy the food you prepared and the time spent with family and friends.

Clean up

You did it! Congrats on preparing your first Thanksgiving meal. Now it's time to clean up and put away leftovers, and most importantly, it's time for a well-deserved post-meal nap.

At the end of the day, your family and friends will remember the time spent together most of all, so don't sweat it if something goes awry. But if there is a mishap, you may want to check out

Amber's Appetite

If you can't tell, Mexican food is my absolute favorite go-to meal. Mexican Food is a unique blend of Spanish and Mexican cuisines. It's loaded with unique ingredients, making it unlike any other food you'll find around the world.

Tex-Mex cuisine is one of the main attractions captivating the hearts (and stomachs) of the people around here. The food presents some of the most delicious and unique flavors. Some of the most commonly used ingredients in Mexican cooking are garlic, onions, cilantro, oregano, cumin and chilies.

Shown above is a delicious Chimichanga, rice, beans, and an order of tamales that I got to enjoy. Is your mouth watering yet? This can be found at Spanish Inn.

By ALICIA RANCILIO

Associated Press

NEW YORK (AP) — An emotional Adriana Lima bowed her head in thanks and crossed her hands over her heart as she made her 18th and final runway walk in the annual holiday Victoria's Secret Fashion Show, her long white feather "angel wings" gently blowing as the crowd cheered.

A tribute video played Thursday during taping of the extravaganza, declaring Lima "the greatest angel of all time" while Fatboy Slim's "Praise You" played.

The show will be broadcast Dec. 2 on ABC and in 190 countries around the world.

The Struts, Shawn Mendes, The Chainsmokers, Rita Ora, Bebe Rexha, Kelsea Ballerini and Halsey performed on the runway at a downtown Manhattan venue as 60 models strutted, including sisters Bella and Gigi Hadid, Kendall Jenner and Winnie Harlow.

Ora briefly walked hand-in-hand with one of the angels during her performance and a stage hand later fetched a piece of her gold jewelry that fell to the runway.

Mendes was dressed in black and slung his acoustic guitar on his back as he sang while Gigi Hadid managed a huge parachute-like set of floral wings that caught the air like a massive windsock. He sang "Lost in Japan."

Jenner took to the runway in a black and silver bikini look and a set of stiff black feathers adorned with glitzy stars. For another round on the catwalk, she donned a tiny plaid kilt skirt with a mismatched plaid train and bra as she smiled. Harlow, a newcomer to the show, walked in sparkly silver with pink feather adornment.

Backstage before the show, the 37-year-old Lima, a mother of two, and other models lounged in short black robes bedazzled with gold stars. They spoke to journalists while sitting at makeup stations and lounging on couches.

"I thought over the years I would get more relaxed," the blue-eyed Brazilian beauty told The Associated Press as stylists worked on her long dark hair. "No, I still get nervous, just like at my first Victoria's Secret show."

Another angel mom, 30-year-old Namibian blonde Behati Prinsloo, smiled wide as she primped backstage. Prinsloo, who is married to Adam Levine, has been an angel since 2009 but this was her return to the show after two years off, just eight months after the birth of their second daughter.

"It made me appreciate my body so much, what it can do, create life and then, honestly, get back and do this."

Roger's Reviews: The Nutcracker and the Four Realms

This ain't your Tchaikovsky's "Nutcracker."

Fans of the Pyotr Ilyich Tchaikovsky Christmas ballet "The Nutcracker" will notice some slight differences between that traditional holiday stage show and the new Lasse Hallström-directed movie "The Nutcracker and the Four Realms." There's less dancing (though there is some), less of Tchaikovsky's music (though that makes some appearances as well), and more steampunk gears and machines than in the original.

The movie starts with Clara (Mackenzie Foy) and her brother Fritz (Tom Sweet) are in the attic building a Rube Goldberg-esque mouse trap when the cook (Meera Syal) fetches them; their father, Mr. Stahlbaum (Matthew Macfayden) has summoned them - along with older sister Louise (Ellie Bamber) to receive Christmas presents from their recently deceased mother Marie Stahlbaum (Anna Madeley). Louise gets their mother's favorite dress, Fritz receives a set of tin soldiers, and Clara is gifted with a beautiful silver egg. The egg is designed to open, but is locked, and no key is provided. Along with the egg is a note saying that all Clara will ever need is inside.

Examining the egg with her father, they discover a maker's mark in the shape of a "D," indicating it was made by Clara's godfather, the famed artisan Drosselmeyer (Morgan Freeman). Coincidentally, they are to attend a Christmas party and dance at Drosselmeyer's estate that evening. Clara refuses to dance with her father, and instead runs to find their host, hoping he will be able to open the egg for her.

Drosselmeyer then presents the guests with their gifts from him. He's got a setup with strings winding through his home and grounds, each labeled with a guest's name. They have to follow their string to find their gift. Clara begins following hers, and encounters her brother, who has found a nutcracker brightly painted as a soldier, as his gift. She continues to follow her string, and soon finds herself walking through a big hollow log into a daylight (not night, as it is at the party) winter forest scene. The string leads to a bright golden key hanging from a tree branch, but as Clara reaches for the gift, a tiny mouse jumps in front of her hand and snatches the key, running off. Clara gives chase, and...

Ok, that's enough of a setup.

In the movie, Clara bumps into a few other characters, including the Nutcracker, whose name turns out to be Captain Philip (Jayden Fowora-Knight); Mother Ginger (Helen Mirren), regent of the Fourth Realm; Hawthorne, the regent of the Realm of Flowers (Eugenio Derbez); Shiver, the regent of the Realm of Snowflakes (Richard E. Grant); and Sugar Plum (Keira Knightley), the regent of the Realm of Sweets.

So they've made "The Nutcracker" into a modern fantasy/action movie with fights, stunts, and other amusements sure to appeal to a modern audience. The action is counterpointed with heavily arranged music from the original Tchaikovsky ballet.

The miracle is that this crazy hodgepodge of new and old, classical and modern and steampunk, actually kind of works.

There are some disturbing parts, like the villain. Those who love the traditional Nutcracker may find these differences off-putting, but as a stand-alone story, it is reasonable and interesting, holding together well enough.

Clara's life in London with her family is portrayed as dark and mysterious, while the Four Realms are brightly colored and Oz-like.

The subtext of self-reliance and perseverance is clearly evoked through the movie.

I'm going to give "The Nutcracker and the Four Realms" seven and a half stars out of 10. It's adequate and fun, but not super memorable.

Rockefeller Christmas tree cut down at upstate NY home

WALLKILL, N.Y. (AP) — The Rockefeller Center Christmas tree has been cut down in upstate New York and is being readied for transport to Manhattan where it will be erected this weekend.

Rockefeller Center's publicist says the 72-foot-tall (22-meter) Norway spruce was cut down Thursday morning at the home of Shirley Figueroa and Lisette Gutierrez in Wallkill.

That's about 65 miles (104 kilometers) north of New York City.

The tree will be hoisted onto a 115-foot-long (35-meter) flatbed trailer for the trip to Rockefeller Center in midtown Manhattan.

It is set to be erected Saturday, and then be decorated with 50,000 LED lights and a Swarovski crystal star.

The tree will be lit in a televised ceremony Nov. 28 and remain on display until Jan 7.

Throongs of tourists visit the tree each year.

Stocks skid as oil plunge continues; tech sector also falls

are falling Friday as technology and internet companies take steep losses. Energy companies are also lower as crude oil heads for its 10th drop in a row. The price of oil has been falling steadily since early October and is now trading at its lowest price since March, causing steep losses for energy companies in recent weeks.

Bond prices rose, sending yields lower.

KEEPING SCORE: The S&P 500 index dropped 31 points, or 1.1 percent, to 2,777 as of 2:54 p.m. Eastern time. The Dow Jones Industrial Average fell 220 points, or 0.8 percent, to 25,970. The Nasdaq composite fell 134 points, or 1.8 percent, to 7,396. The Russell 2000 index of smaller companies gave up 27 points, or 1.8 percent, to 1,550.

Even after falling on Thursday and Friday, the S&P 500 is still up 2 percent this week. It rose 2.4 percent last week but would need to gain another 5.6 percent to reach the all-time high it set on Sept. 20.

reacting to concerns about the health of China's economy, and the U.S.-China trade dispute is partly to blame.

"We got a warning from the People's Bank of China that there were downward pressures on the Chinese economy," she said. "(Investors) are having concerns that these tariff wars are essentially going to kick China when it's down."

At the same time, the Labor Department said wholesale prices in the U.S. jumped, and Hooper said that could be linked to the tariffs as well. Wholesale prices rose by the most in six years in October. The Labor Department's producer price index jumped 0.6 percent as gas, food, and chemical prices increased. Its index has climbed 2.9 percent over the last year.

GAME OVER? Video game maker Activision Blizzard tumbled after its forecast for the critical holiday season fell short of analysts' projections. The stock fell 9.7 percent to $56.74, and Take-Two Interactive lost 5.7 percent to $112.35. Other technology and internet companies also turned lower. Apple fell 2.4 percent to $203.48 and Google's parent company Alphabet shed 2.3 percent to $1,069. Amazon lost 2.3 percent to $1,714.

OIL SKID: Benchmark U.S. crude lost 0.8 percent to settle at $60.19 a barrel in New York. After peaking at $76.41 a barrel in early October, near a four-year high, U.S. crude has tumbled 21 percent to its lowest price since March. Brent crude, used to price international oils, has fared almost as badly. On Friday it declined 0.7 percent to $70.20 a barrel in London.

Energy companies have done far worse than the rest of the market over the last few months. Over the last 30 days, the S&P 500 index of energy companies has fallen 12.5 percent, while the broader S&P 500 is down 3.6 percent.

Natural gas prices jumped 5 percent to $3.72 per 1,000 cubic feet. That helped gas companies stem their losses. In other energy trading, heating oil was little changed at $2.17 a gallon and wholesale gasoline fell 1.4 percent to $1.62 a gallon.

YELP OF PAIN: Online reviews company Yelp nosedived after it posted weak third-quarter revenue and its forecast for the fourth quarter also fell short of Wall Street's estimates.

The company said part of the problem is an advertising model that is intended to encourage advertisers to try the site without signing a long-term contract. Yelp said that has made its results more sensitive to short-term problems. Its stock fell 27.8 percent to $31.42.

AVENGERS ASSEMBLE ... A PILE OF CASH: Walt Disney's net earnings were better than expected, as the entertainment giant raked in revenue from movies including "Avengers: Infinity War," "Incredibles 2" and the "Ant-Man" sequel. The stock gained 2.1 percent to $118.42.

PIPELINE WOES: A federal judge blocked a permit from the Trump administration for the construction of TransCanada's Keystone XL pipeline, pending an environmental review. The long-delayed pipeline would begin in Alberta and shuttle as much as 830,000 barrels a day of crude through a half dozen states to terminals on the Gulf Coast. U.S. District Judge Brian Morris put on hold the $8 billion project, ruling that the potential impact had not been considered as required by federal law. Environmentalists and Native American groups sued to stop the project, citing property rights and potential oil spills.

The State Department issued a presidential permit for the pipeline in 2008, and after years of legal wrangling, President Barack Obama rejected the permit in 2015.

In Toronto, shares of TransCanada lost 1.7 percent.

GE GETS SHOCKED: General Electric sank another 6.4 percent to $8.52 after a JPMorgan Chase analyst cut his price target on the stock to $6 a share from $10. Stephen Tusa said six of GE's eight divisions might be unprofitable in 2020. The stock is on track to close at its lowest price since March 9, 2009, the day the stock market hit its low during the financial crisis.

BONDS: Bond prices rose. The yield on the 10-year Treasury note fell to 3.19 percent from 3.23 percent.

CURRENCY: The dollar slipped to 113.76 yen from 113.99 yen. The euro fell to $1.1333 from $1.1356.

OVERSEAS: The French CAC 40 and the FTSE 100 in Britain both fell 0.5 percent. Germany's DAX was little changed.

Tokyo's Nikkei 225 retreated 1 percent and Hong Kong's Hang Seng fell 2.4 percent. Seoul's Kospi gave up 0.3 percent.

Democrats eye Trump's tax returns but expect a long fight

By MARCY GORDON

AP Business Writer

WASHINGTON (AP) — Getting President Donald Trump's tax returns is high on the list of Democratic priorities now that they have won the House.

By law, the leaders of tax-writing committees in the House and Senate can obtain tax returns and related information from the Internal Revenue Service. Democrats will control the House panel next year.

Yet there's no guarantee that the Trump administration will provide the president's returns. That sets up the possibility of a legal battle over the request that could take years to resolve.

Trump broke with political tradition in 2016 by refusing to release his income tax filings. He says he won't release them because he's under audit, and he claimed at a press conference this week that the filings are too complex for people to understand.

The Democrats tried and failed several times to obtain Trump's returns as the minority party in Congress. Now, having gained some control, they see them within their grasp.

Eyes are on Rep. Richard Neal of Massachusetts, who is now the senior Democrat on the powerful Ways and Means Committee and will become its chairman in January.

When asked Wednesday whether the committee under his control would ask for the documents, Neal said, "Yes, I think we will."

If the Trump administration refuses and mounts a legal challenge, Neal said, "Then I assume that there would be a court case that would go on for a period of time."

A legal fight could potentially even stretch beyond the 2020 presidential election, suggested Andy Grewal, a professor at the University of Iowa College of Law.

Grewal has maintained that a request for Trump's returns, if made for "purely political purposes," may exceed the limits of Congress' authority.

Starting with the 2016 campaign, Trump broke with political tradition by repeatedly refusing to release his income tax filings. Those filings are deemed sacredly secret for citizens, but traditionally not for presidents. Trump has said he hasn't released them because his taxes are under audit by the IRS — even though experts and IRS officials say such audits don't bar taxpayers from releasing their returns.

Asked about releasing his filings, Trump reaffirmed that justification during a post-election news conference Wednesday. "They're under audit. They have been for a long time," the president said. "They're extremely complex. People wouldn't understand them."

Giving a slight opening, Trump said that if the audit was completed, "I would have an open mind to it. I would say that." But, he added, "Nobody turns over a return when it's under audit."

In 2017, more than a million people signed a petition to the White House urging Trump to make the returns public.

Questions loom: Was the swaggering longtime businessman and real estate mogul really worth $10 billion when he entered the White House, as he has claimed? Are there conflicts of interest lurking? How has his global panoply of properties and other assets been valued for taxation purposes? What are the sources of his income and to whom might he be beholden as a result? Does Trump stand to gain personally from the sweeping Republican tax law enacted late last year, which he championed, and, if so, how specifically?

Among the sought-after details: Trump's charitable giving, the type of deductions he claimed, how much he earned from his assets and what strategies he deployed to reduce his tax bill.

House Democratic leader Nancy Pelosi declined during a press conference Wednesday to specifically address the question of Trump's returns, saying only that Congress has "a constitutional responsibility to have oversight" and citing examples such as the government's environmental policy that would be ripe for Congress to investigate.

The high interest — Democrats would say the urgency — in lifting the veil on Trump's taxes ramped up last month when The New York Times

Opening lead — queen of diamonds.

Declarer normally makes a survey of the winners and/or losers when he starts to play a hand. If he is in a suit contract, he counts his losers; in notrump, he counts his winners.

However, this approach has its exceptions, especially in suit play, when there are ruffs available in one or both hands. In such cases, declarer might find it more convenient to count winners in estimating his prospects.

Thus, in the present case, if South counted only his losers, he would point to three in spades and (assuming he saw West's cards) as many as five trump tricks. This would amount to a 1,400-point setback.

But the fact is that South need not lose eight tricks. Indeed, if he exercises no more than a reasonable degree of care, he can hold his losses to only three tricks and make the contract, despite West's formidable array of trumps!

He wins the diamond lead with the ace and embarks on a campaign to score as many of his low trumps as he can. He returns a diamond to the king and ruffs a diamond, then cashes the A-K of clubs and ruffs another diamond.

South has now won six tricks — two diamonds, two clubs and two diamond ruffs — and still has the J-7-6 of spades and A-Q-10-8 of hearts. West has the seven trumps he started with.

Declarer leads a spade, forcing West to ruff and return a trump to hand South his seventh trick. Declarer plays another spade, forcing West to ruff and lead another trump, handing South his eighth trick.

Finally, when declarer leads his last spade, West must ruff once more and return a trump to South's A-Q to hand declarer his ninth and 10th tricks. Altogether, West is endplayed in trump three times!

Tomorrow: Famous Hand.

Here's How It Works:
Sudoku puzzles are formatted as a 9x9 grid, broken down into nine 3x3 boxes. To solve a sudoku, the numbers 1 through 9 must fill each row, column and box. Each number can appear only once in each row, column and box. You can figure out the order in which the numbers will appear by using the numeric clues already provided in the boxes. The more numbers you name, the easier it gets to solve the puzzle!

published an extensive report suggesting that the Trump family cheated the IRS for decades, undervaluing reported assets and using dubious tax maneuvers and outright fraud in some cases.

A lawyer for Trump disputed the Times' findings of possible tax fraud or evasion and said that parts of the report were "extremely inaccurate." The newspaper said its report was based on more than 100,000 pages of financial documents, including confidential tax returns from Trump's father and his companies.

That could spur the Democrats on the Ways and Means Committee to ask for Trump's returns going back many years.

By law, the chairmen of the House panel, the Senate Finance Committee and the Joint Committee on Taxation can make a written request for any tax returns to the Treasury Secretary, who oversees the IRS. The law says the Treasury chief "shall furnish" the requested information to the members of the committee for them to examine behind closed doors.

The IRS, with custody of Trump's returns, has been headed since Oct. 1 by a commissioner who worked as a private tax attorney for nearly four decades representing individuals and companies in cases before the agency. During the 2016 campaign, the commissioner, Charles Rettig, defended Trump's refusal to release his filings. He promised at his Senate confirmation hearing to uphold the IRS' political independence from the White House.

Treasury Secretary Steven Mnuchin "will review any request with the Treasury general counsel for legality," the department said in a statement Thursday.

Trump's attorney Rudy Giuliani has said the Democrats could have a hard time proving their demand was intended for pursuing legitimate congressional oversight, not a political scavenger hunt.

If the administration refuses to

In this Nov. 7, 2018, photo, President Donald Trump listens to a question during a news conference in the East Room of the White House in Washington. Getting Trump's tax returns is high on the list of Democratic priorities now that they have won the House. By law, the leaders of tax-writing committees in the House and Senate can obtain tax returns and related information from the Internal Revenue Service. The House panel will be controlled by the Democrats next year. Yet there's no guarantee that the Trump administration will provide the president's returns.

hand over the returns, the Democrat-led committee might punch back with subpoenas, move to hold officials in contempt of Congress or sue the administration. There's no roadmap or historical precedent for the situation.

Bruce Springsteen, Seth Meyers headline veterans fundraiser

By MARK KENNEDY
AP Entertainment Writer

NEW YORK — Bruce Springsteen teamed up with country star Eric Church on a version of "Working on the Highway" and Jon Stewart laced into Donald Trump at a bawdy event Monday in New York that gathered comedians and musicians to help raise money for military veterans.

Springsteen, a vocal critic of several White House policies, avoided politics completely at the Stand Up for Heroes show, instead offering a few off-color jokes and four songs, including "Dancing in the Dark," "The Hard Land" and "If I Should Fall Behind" with his wife, Patti Scialfa.

The Boss, in jeans, a white shirt and a jean jacket, was returning to the event now in its 12 year, having been the musical guest since the beginning. Last year, the Red Hot Chili Peppers took his spot as he worked on his one-man "Springsteen on Broadway."

Stand Up for Heroes is co-presented by the Bob Woodruff Foundation and the New York Comedy Festival. It kicks off the festival and raises money for the Woodruff foundation, which funds programs for injured veterans and their families. The foundation is named for the ABC news anchor injured in Iraq in 2006. It raised over $5.4 million at the event, held at the 6,000-seat Hulu Theater at Madison Square Garden.

Stewart, also a veteran of the event, opened his set ridiculing the notion that America faced a threat from thousands of Central American migrants traveling northward in a caravan. "I'm so scared," he said. "There's thousands of sharecroppers coming at America at 1 to 2 miles per hour. They'll be here by April."

Jimmy Carr, a British comedian, hit the stage with mostly blue, edgy material, but had some jokes at the expense of the commander in chief. "Walls work," he deadpanned. "I was in China last year. I didn't see one Mexican."

But the other comedians on the bill stayed away from politics, despite the event being held on the eve of divisive midterm elections. Last year's event was more political, with comics such as John Oliver and Trevor Noah attending.

This time, Jim Gaffigan poked fun at his able girth and told a story about having his appendix removed in Alaska and then going for a hike when he and his family encountered a bear. "I looked at the tour guide. He said, 'Don't worry, I have bear spray.' I was like, 'Do you have anything stronger?'"

Seth Meyers returned to a very personal source of material, namely the birth of his children. For his first, his wife was in so much discomfort that she was on her hands and knees in the back of an Uber on their way to the hospital with her head out the window, screaming, "I do not like this." Myers noted: "In New York City, nobody blinked an eye."

Church played three songs, including "Desperate Man," "Hippie Radio" and the unreleased "Still Standing Their Ground." He strapped on a guitar to join Springsteen on "Working on the Highway."

The audience also cheered dozens of servicemen and servicewomen from Iraq and Afghanistan who were seated in the first few rows.

Checking in with NATALIA TENA

In playing a woman with a troubled past struggling to survive on a spaceship bound for a distant planet on YouTube Premium's sci-fi thriller "Origin," Natalia Tena found a role that challenged her not only mentally but physically.

Each day before filming the series that begins streaming Wednesday, Nov. 14, the 34-year-old British actress would rise at 4 a.m. to work out and undergo Krav Maga training for the fight scenes she had to perform before heading to set, a regimen that left her feeling incredibly fit and exhilarated.

But her character of Lana is American, which required the appropriate accent and some mental calisthenics on her part.

"I'd never played an American character," Tena explains, "and I was quite scared I was going to screw up so I basically only spoke in an American accent from like February to July. Even when I was ringing my boyfriend and when my friends came out, I just stayed an American.

"And it was very interesting," she continues, "when I stopped filming, for like three days the muscles in my mouth were completely weird, so I was speaking in a British accent that was very bizarre. I thought I'd broken my accent but actually I'm OK now."

And once filming ended, the accent wasn't the only thing that changed. Krav Maga stopped and old routines returned.

"As soon as (filming wrapped) I was like, 'Right, I'm now gonna drink some wine and I'm gonna eat some cheese,'" Tena says with a laugh. "... It's kind of a settling back into yourself."

BY GEORGE DICKIE

just came down to one very simple idea: Does this glass of wine give you pleasure? And if it gives you pleasure, that's a good glass of wine."

Like last season, Purefoy and Goode visit regions around the world – including Germany, Japan, Argentina, Bosnia and the United States – to sample wines and bring them back for the evaluation and enjoyment of returning experts Joe Fattorini and Amelia Singer and newcomers Jancis Robinson and Jaega Wise.

Purefoy replaces last year's co-host Matthew Rhys, who had to downsize his role because of filming commitments, so this season he appears in segments demonstrating wine gadgets. This left Purefoy – whose interest in wine dates back more than a decade to his time in Italy filming "Rome" – the opportunity to spend three weeks in France drinking great wine and taking in a lot of useful wine knowledge. Because somebody had to do it.

"One of the things 'The Wine Show' taught me," Purefoy says, "... was just to pay attention, to respect a glass of wine, to pay attention to the hours that have gone into making it and the weeks and the months and the years and into the system that's gone into making it.

"And when you drink it, don't just neck it," he continues, "don't just throw it down the back of your throat so that it doesn't touch the sides. But just give it a bit of a smell, give it a whiff, roll it round in your hand a little bit in the glass and then taste it, and then just pay attention to what that taste is.

Purefoy samples great wine so you don't have to in Season 2 of 'The Wine Show'

British actor James Purefoy calls himself a wine enthusiast and a "useful idiot" who has no use for wine snobbery. And it's that average-guy sensibility he brings to his role as co-host of Season 2 of Ovation's "The Wine Show."

Premiering Thursday, Nov. 15, the new batch of seven episodes finds the star of such productions as "Rome," "Hap and Leonard" and "Altered Carbon" joining Season 1 co-host Matthew Goode ("The Imitation Game") as they set off from their villa in the Provence region of France to uncover some of the best wines in the world and the stories behind them.

And then explain it all to the viewer as a relative layman, which Purefoy considers himself.

"There is an awful lot of language spoken about it and words used and ideas used around wine I think we're all familiar with," the personable actor explains, "which can turn people off from trying wine or saying what they think about a glass of wine because they don't want to sound stupid. They don't want to sound ignorant about things. And really what we decided was we

Sunday
12:00 p.m. NFL Football Washington Redskins at Tampa Bay Buccaneers. The Redskins and Buccaneers have split their 22 meetings since the first game in 1977. Washington has been successful in the hyper-competitive NFC East thanks to its running game and defensive unit, which aims to stop Tampa's pass-heavy offense.
 NFL Football Arizona Cardinals at Kansas City Chiefs. The Cardinals and Chiefs square off for just the 13th time overall and first since 2014. Arizona defeated Kansas City 17-14 in their last meeting, grabbing their third victory in the series. The Chiefs have eight wins and a tie against the Cardinals.
 NFL Football Detroit Lions at Chicago Bears. Division foes square off as Khalil Mack and the Bears host the Lions. The clubs will meet again on Nov. 22 in Detroit as part of the NFL's traditional Thanksgiving Day games. The Bears seek their first win versus an NFC North opponent in 2018.
3:25 p.m. NFL Football Seattle Seahawks at Los Angeles Rams. A battle of the NFC West's top teams pits the division-leading Rams versus the Seahawks. The Week 5 meeting between these clubs was a back-and-forth affair. Todd Gurley's three TDs spearheaded the Los Angeles attack, and led to an eventual 33-31 win.
7:20 p.m. NFL Football Dallas Cowboys at Philadelphia Eagles. The Eagles, fresh off a bye following their London game, host the Cowboys. These clubs' rivalry was on display during the 2018 NFL Draft, when former Philadelphia kicker David Akers taunted the Dallas crowd over Philly's recent Super Bowl win.

12:00 p.m. College Football Teams TBA. (Taped) year to visit the 49ers. New York aims for a better result as it fell 31-21 to San Francisco one year ago, on Nov. 12, 2017. C.J. Beathard (SF) threw for 288 yards and two TDs in that game.
