Big Spring man sentenced to 60 years for home invasion

By ROGER CLINE
 Staff Writer
 A Big Spring man has been convicted of a home invasion offense and sentenced to 60 years in prison. District Attorney Hardy Wilkerson, in a statement released this week, said Big Spring resident Holston Banks III, 27, was convicted of "Burglary of a Habitation with Commission of Aggravated Robbery" in 118th District Court on Friday of last week. "On November 13, 2014 at around 3:30 a.m., Banks invaded a local home occupied by three people – the owner and two minor children," said Wilkerson in the statement. "While in the home, Banks pointed a firearm at the owner of the residence and a fight ensued with the two minor children which ultimately lead outside of the residence where Banks was allowed to leave upon stating that he had 'the wrong house' and promising not to harm anyone. No one was seriously injured."

Banks

The incident took place in the 1400 block of West Sixth Street, Wilkerson said.

Banks has a long history with local law enforcement. In 2012, he was arrested in connection with a Big Spring drive-by shooting in which three people were injured. In 2013, he was accused of having a relationship with a minor and beating her.

Wilkerson goes on to say in the statement that the owner of the home made an identification of Banks in court, and an article of clothing left at the scene by Banks was found to contain his DNA.

The State of Texas was represented by District Attorney Hardy L. Wilkerson and Banks was represented by Houston attorney Michael J. Edwards.

Silver bells and Red Kettles

 While the Christmas holiday is accompanied by a number of familiar sights and sounds – Christmas trees, festive lighting, candy canes and nativity scenes – it simply wouldn't be the same without the jingling bells and red kettles of the Salvation Army. And while the presence of the charity's bell ringers in front of Wal-Mart is certainly a familiar one, officials with the Salvation Army say they are trying to work through a shortage of volunteers to man the kettles, which are one of the organization's principal sources of donations during the Christmas holiday. According to Salvation Army Capt. Josh McKain, the familiar kettles represent much more than just a place for shoppers to toss their spare change.

"The kettles are a source of hope during the holidays," McKain said. "They are a reminder to people that while we may not be in the best economic times in this country and state, there is hope for those who are struggling to get by."

The bells will be ringing in the season for volunteers with the Salvation Army.

"All the money we raise stays in the community. The money is used during Christmas to support local families right here in Hooper requested $20,881.20 to purchase 10 sets of the protective gear that firefighters wear when battling blazes. Hooper said the bunker gear consists of coats, boots, gloves, pants, hoods, and helmets for the firefighters.

The commissioners unanimously approved the purchase.

Commissioners also finalized an agreement with Delek US to allow use of a portion of the old Howard County Airport land for a pipeline right of way. The issue has been under negotiation for several weeks. Delek originally asked for a 50-foot wide right of way. Commissioners asked them to consider a narrower strip of land for the pipeline. Delek agreed to a 30-foot wide right of way, and offered $350 per rod of land. The commissioners countered with $500 per rod, and Delek accepted. A rod of land is equal to 16 1/2 feet, or 1/320 of a mile.

Terry King, senior right-of-way manager for Delek, presented the commissioners with a check for $217,250 after they signed the contract at the meeting.

- In other business, commissioners:
- Voted to file no objection to a city of Big Spring zoning change for property along Martin Luther King Boulevard from single-family to multi-family residential.
 - Approved invoices, purchase requests, and budget amendments.
 - Approved payroll, personnel considerations, and policies regarding drugs and alcohol, and accident reporting for the Road and Bridge Department and the Equipment Department.

Mattis hails troops' border mission as 'very good training'

Migrants traveling with a caravan hoping to reach the U.S. border, wait to board a bus in La Concha, Mexico, Wednesday, Nov. 14, 2018. Buses and trucks are carrying some migrants into the state of Sinaloa along the Gulf of California and further northward into the border state of Sonora. The bulk of the main caravan appeared to be about 1,100 miles from the border, but was moving hundreds of miles per day.

By ROBERT BURNS

AP National Security Writer

WASHINGTON (AP) — Defense Secretary Jim Mattis defended the use of active duty troops on the U.S.-Mexican border, saying that in some ways it provides good training for war. He argued that it's analogous to a 1916 deployment to counter the Mexican revolutionary Gen. Francisco "Pancho" Villa.

Speaking to reporters Wednesday on his way to visit U.S. troops along the border in south Texas, Mattis declined to provide an estimate of how much the mission will cost. He said cost figures he has received thus far are "not anywhere near right." He added that he believes that "very quickly we'll know the real cost. So we'll keep you posted as the real costs come in."

In his most extensive remarks about the hastily arranged border mission, Mattis argued that it fits an historical pattern dating to early in the 20th century. He noted that President Woodrow Wilson deployed tens of thousands of National Guard and active duty troops to the border in 1916 in response to a Mexican military raid into the U.S.

"That's over a century ago, and the threat then was Pancho Villa's troops — revolutionary raiding across the border into the United States," he said. He noted that more recently, National Guard troops were used in border missions ordered by President George W. Bush and President Barack Obama, although not on the cusp of a midterm election.

The Pentagon chief said that within a week to 10 days the 5,800 troops currently deployed for the border mission will have accomplished all the tasks initially requested by Customs and Border Protection, although additional tasks are now being worked out between the Pentagon and the Department of Homeland Security. Mattis did not say how soon the mission might end; current deployments are scheduled to last until Dec. 15, but that could change.

In addition to the 5,800 active duty troops in the border area, about 2,100 National Guard troops have been providing border support since April.

Critics have questioned the wisdom of using the military on the border where there is no discernible security threat, although President Donald Trump has said that a caravan of Central American migrants traveling northward through Mexico amounts to an "invasion." Since the election, Trump has said little about the matter, and no border threat has yet materialized.

Asked whether he believes there is a security threat at the border that justifies the use of the active duty military, Mattis said he defers to the judgment of Homeland Security Secretary Kirstjen Nielsen, who joined him at the border Wednesday.

Nielsen and Mattis spoke with senior U.S. commanders and addressed rank-and-file troops. Mattis told the troops their mission is to "back up" Customs and Border Protection. "Right now that's our role and that's all our role is," he said.

"The eyes of the world right now — certainly all of the Americans — are on you," Mattis told the soldiers, adding that they are part of a "non-traditional" mission. "We're here because of the number of illegals who say they are going to illegally try to cross into our country," he said, apparently referring to the several thousand migrants moving north through Mexico.

One soldier asked Mattis what are the short- and long-term plans for the military mission.

Mattis said the short-term objective is to get sufficient numbers of wire and other barriers in place along the border as requested by Customs and Border Protection.

'New Mexico True' brand may expand under new governor

By RUSSELL CONTRERAS

Associated Press

ALBUQUERQUE, N.M. (AP) — The "New Mexico True" tourism brand developed by outgoing Republican Gov. Susana Martinez may be expanded under Democratic Gov.-elect Michelle Lujan Grisham.

The expansion may come amid pressure for New Mexico to join other western state in creating an Office of Outdoor Recreation.

As a candidate, Lujan Grisham promised to seek efforts to attract more visitors to the Southwestern state and strengthen the "New Mexico True" brand.

The Martinez Administration has credited the "New Mexico True" for "record-breaking" tourism during her first seven years in office. The brand uses images of New Mexico's popular tourist attractions in billboards and commercials in Texas, Arizona, New York and Illinois.

The campaign encourages visitors to tagged New Mexico photos on social media with the #NewMexicoTrue hashtag.

The travel show New Mexico True Television has earned three Regional Emmy Awards.

DEL RIO, Texas (AP) — One pilot is dead and another was injured after a training jet crashed at Laughlin Air Force Base in Texas.

The base said in a statement on its Facebook page that the T-38C Talon crashed at approximately 7:40 p.m. on Tuesday. The dead pilot was identified as 28-year-old Capt. John F. According to a statement issued Wednesday, Graziano and Palyok were both instructor pilots with the 87th Flying Training Squadron at Laughlin.

The crash is under investigation by a board of officers.

US believes missing American journalist is alive in Syria

WASHINGTON (AP) — A senior State Department official says American journalist Austin Tice is believed to be still alive more than six years after he was abducted while covering the war in Syria.

U.S. envoy to Syria James Jeffrey told reporters Wednesday that Tice is being held hostage there. He didn't say why officials believe this or who might be holding him.

Tice is a Houston native who disappeared shortly after his 31st birthday in August 2012. A video released a month later showed him blindfolded as he was led away by armed men. He has not been heard from since.

Authorities have offered $1 million for information leading to his return.

U.S. Special Presidential Envoy for Hostage Affairs Robert O'Brien said Tuesday that the Trump administration is working to bring him home.

Mattis, Nielsen arrive at US-Mexico border to inspect troops

DONNA, Texas (AP) — Defense Secretary Jim Mattis and Homeland Security Secretary Kirstjen Nielsen are inspecting troops camped at the U.S.-Mexico border in Texas, even though the caravan of Central American migrants that prompted the deployment is headed to California.

Mattis and Nielsen on Wednesday visited the camp in Donna, Texas, near one of the bridges over the Rio Grande. Troops are staying in large tents on a field bounded by razor wire.

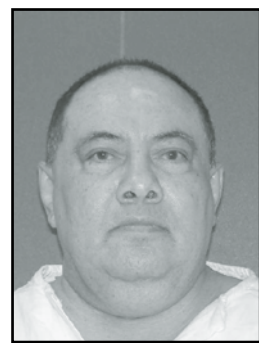

Soldiers have also laid wire at another bridge connecting McAllen, Texas, to Reynosa, Mexico.

About 5,800 active duty troops are deployed at the border, including about 1,000 in Texas. President Donald Trump said they must stop the migrant caravan walking through Mexico.

While Trump has largely fallen silent about the caravan since the November election, the troops remain stationed at the border.

Mexican man who killed wife, 2 children set to die in Texas

Associated Press

HUNTSVILLE, Texas (AP) — Attorneys for a Mexican citizen scheduled to be executed in Texas for the sledgehammer killings of his wife and two children say his life should be spared because he is a "bipolar, brain-injured" person who was severely abused as a child.

Roberto Moreno Ramos was set to die by lethal injection Wednesday evening for the 1992 killings of his 42-year-old wife Leticia, 7-year-old daughter Abigail, and 3-year-old son Jonathan at their home in Progreso, located along the Mexico border about 20 miles (32.19 kilometers) southeast of McAllen.

Ramos' attorney on Wednesday asked the U.S. Supreme Court to stop his execution, arguing that Ramos' constitutional rights were violated as lower courts refused to fully review his claims that his trial lawyers failed to present any evidence about his mental illness and abusive childhood that could have persuaded jurors to spare his life.

Also Wednesday, a federal judge in Austin dismissed Ramos' request to temporarily block the execution. The request had been part of a lawsuit Ramos filed against the Texas Court of Criminal Appeals a day earlier. The suit alleged the appeals court has not allowed Ramos to present claims he had ineffective trial and appellate lawyers.

The Texas Court of Criminal Appeals and the 5th U.S. Circuit Court of Appeals have previously turned down requests to halt Ramos' execution.

The Texas Board of Pardons and Paroles on Monday declined to recommend either a commutation of Ramos' sentence or a six-month reprieve.

Mexican officials have called for Ramos' execution to be stopped, arguing that he's part of a group of Mexican citizens condemned in the U.S. who were never told when first arrested that they could get legal help from the Mexican government.

Three retired justices who had served on the Texas Court of Criminal Appeals filed court documents with the Supreme Court on Wednesday in support of stopping the execution. The ex-judges allege the appeals court appointed an incompetent appellate attorney who early in the post-conviction process failed to investigate Ramos' case.

Ramos, 64, would be the 21st inmate put to death this year in the U.S. and the 11th given a lethal injection in Texas, the nation's busiest capital punishment state.

Ramos was born in Aguascalientes, Mexico, and grew up in Guadalajara and Tijuana before his family moved to the United States in 1970.

Ramos' appellate attorney, Danalynn Recer, said Ramos has suffered from bipolar disorder most of his life, including during the time of his family's killings, as well as brain damage that has affected his ability to control his impulses and regulate his emotions.

"The decision to take his life was made and has since been repeatedly accepted without any decision-maker ever considering, the powerfully mitigating evidence of his cognitive impairment, brain dysfunction, debilitating symptoms of severe life-long mental illness and childhood characterized by shocking brutality and desperate poverty," Recer said in a statement.

But the Texas Attorney General's Office said Ramos' death sentence was appropriate due to his "violent and dangerous nature."

Authorities said Ramos bludgeoned his loved ones and then buried them underneath his home's bathroom floor so he could marry the woman he was having an extramarital affair with at the time.

In court filings, the attorney general's office highlighted testimony from Ramos' then-19-year-old son, who told jurors at his 1993 trial that his father "would continue to commit criminal acts of violence."

In 2004, the International Court of Justice in The Hague, Netherlands, found Ramos was part of a group of 52 Mexican citizens awaiting execution in the U.S. who weren't advised of their consular rights under the Vienna Convention when first arrested. It recommended they be tried again to determine if consular access would have affected their cases. President George W. Bush directed states to reopen the cases.

But the Supreme Court in 2008 overruled Bush's directive, saying only Congress can require states to follow the international court's ruling.

Five Mexican citizens have been executed since being named in the international court ruling and all the executions were carried out by Texas, Jacob Prado Gonzalez, director-general for the protection of Mexicans abroad, said Monday at a Mexico City news conference in which he called on the U.S. to halt Ramos' execution.

Guardman at Texas border accused of sexual assault

HOUSTON (AP) — A Texas National Guard member serving at the U.S.-Mexico border is accused of sexually assaulting a woman in a motel, authorities said Wednesday.

Police in Alpine, Texas, arrested Luis Carlos Ontiveros, 30, on Monday. The Texas National Guard confirmed that Ontiveros was serving in a mission launched in April following President Donald Trump's call for the National Guard to go to the border.

According to an affidavit obtained by KOSA-TV, the woman told police she had been drinking and Ontiveros offered to take her back to her motel room. The woman alleged that Ontiveros started kissing her, then removed her clothes and touched her.

The woman said she fled after Ontiveros told her he would perform oral sex. A witness told police the woman knocked on his door, saying Ontiveros had tried to rape her.

Ontiveros was released Tuesday on $20,000 bond. A message left at a number listed for Ontiveros was not immediately returned. The Associated Press generally does not identify victims in sexual assault cases.

The Texas National Guard said it would cooperate with authorities in Alpine, a remote West Texas town in the region of Big Bend National Park. The Guard would not confirm whether Ontiveros had been suspended or how long he had served in the Guard.

Guard troops search for more wildfire victims; 56 dead of missing since Sunday, when 228 people were unaccounted for.

Sol Bechtold's 75-year-old mother was not on the list. Her house burned down along with the rest of her neighborhood in Magalia, a community just north of Paradise.

"The list they published is missing a lot of names," said Bechtold, who's still searching shelters for his mother, a widow who lived alone and did not drive.

A sheriff's deputy asked Bechtold on Wednesday for information that PARADISE, Calif. (AP) — With at least 130 people still missing, National Guard troops searched Wednesday through charred debris for more victims of California's deadliest wildfire as top federal and state officials toured the ruins of a community completely destroyed by the flames.

Interior Secretary Ryan Zinke joined Gov. Jerry Brown on a visit to the leveled town of Paradise, telling reporters it was the worst fire devastation he had ever seen.

"Now is not the time to point fingers," Zinke said. "There are lots of reasons these catastrophic fires are happening." He cited warmer temperatures, dead trees and the poor forest management.

Brown, a frequent critic of President Donald Trump's policies, said he spoke with Trump, who pledged federal assistance.

"This is so devastating that I don't really have the words to describe it," Brown said, saying officials would need to learn how to better prevent fires from becoming so deadly

Nearly 8,800 homes were destroyed when flames hit Paradise, a former gold-mining camp popular with retirees, on Nov. 8, killing at least 56 people in California's deadliest wildfire, Sheriff Kory Honea announced Wednesday evening. There were also three fatalities from separate blazes in Southern California.

Honea said the task of searching for bodies was so vast that his office brought in another 287 searchers Wednesday, including the National Guard troops, bringing the total number of searchers to 461 plus 22 cadaver dogs. He said a rapid-DNA assessment system was expected to be in place soon to speed up identifications of the dead, though officials have tentatively identified 47 of the 56.

It will take years to rebuild the town of 27,000, if people decide that's what should be done, said Brock Long, administrator of the Federal Emergency Management Agency. The town in the foothills of the Sierra Nevada Mountains looks like a wasteland.

"The infrastructure is basically a total rebuild at this point," Long said. "You're not going to be able to rebuild Paradise the way it was."

Temporary schools and hospitals will be brought in, Long said. Officials are also looking to bring in mobile homes for thousands of people left homeless.

Debris removal in Paradise and outlying communities will have to wait until the search for victims finishes, he said.

That grim search continued Wednesday.

On one street, ash and dust flew up as roughly 20 National Guard members wearing white jumpsuits, helmets and breathing masks lifted giant heaps of bent and burned metal, in what was left of a home. Pink and blue chalk drawings of a cat and a flower remained on the driveway, near a scorched toy truck.

The soldiers targeted homes of the missing. If anything resembling human remains is found, a coroner takes over.

After the soldiers finished at the site, a chaplain huddled with them in prayer.

The number of missing is "fluctuating every day" as people are located or remains are found, said Steve Collins, a deputy with the Butte County Sheriff's Department.

Authorities on Wednesday released the names of about 100 people who are still missing, including many in their 80s and 90s, and dozens more could still be unaccounted for. Sheriff's department spokeswoman Megan McMann said the list was incomplete because detectives were concerned they would be overwhelmed with calls from relatives if the entire list were released.

"We can't release them all at once," McMann said. "So they are releasing the names in batches."

Authorities have not updated the total number could identify her remains, like any history of broken bones. He told the officer she had a knee replacement. Bechtold predicted that the death toll would rise sharply.

"I feel horrible for the sheriff. I feel horrible for the people of Paradise and Magalia," he said. "It's just a no-win situation unless a few hundred folks just show up out of nowhere."

To speed up identification of remains, officials are using portable devices that can identify genetic material in a couple of hours, rather than days or weeks.

Accounts of narrow escapes from the flames continued to emerge. More than a dozen people who were trapped by a wall of fire survived by plunging into a cold lake.

The San Francisco Chronicle reported Wednesday that a family of four, their 90-year-old neighbor and their pets sought safety in the chilly Concow Reservoir after the roaring fire surrounded their homes.

Verdicts on Khmer Rouge leaders may be tribunal's last gasp

By SOPHENG CHEANG and GRANT PECK

Associated Press

PHNOM PENH, Cambodia (AP) — The tribunal judging the criminal responsibility of former Khmer Rouge leaders for the deaths of an estimated 1.7 million Cambodians will issue verdicts Friday in the latest — and perhaps last — of such trials.

Nuon Chea, 92, and Khieu Samphan, 87, are the last two surviving senior leaders of the radical communist group that brutally ruled Cambodia in the late 1970s.

They are already serving life sentences after being convicted in a previous 2011-2014 trial of crimes against humanity connected with forced transfers and disappearances of masses of people.

The proceedings against them were split into two successive trials for fear that the aging defendants might die before any verdict was reached in a single, more comprehensive trial and foreclose the opportunity for any sort of justice. The fear was justified — two co-defendants died before the trial was completed.

On Friday, Nuon Chea and Khieu Samphan will be judged on additional charges of crimes against humanity, such as murder, extermination, enslavement, torture and persecution on political, racial, and religious grounds; genocide, for the killings of members of the Vietnamese and Cham ethnic groups; and more breaches of the Geneva Conventions, including willful killing, torture or inhumane treatment.

As members of the Khmer Rouge leadership under the late Pol Pot, they have been prosecuted under the legal doctrine of joint criminal enterprise, which holds individuals responsible for actions attributed to a group to which they belong.

Cases launched against four additional, middle-ranking Khmer Rouge officials have been scuttled or frozen and are unlikely to be revived.

If the current trial is the last staged by the U.N.-assisted international tribunal — officially called the Extraordinary Chambers in the Courts of Cambodia — it will have convicted three individuals at a cost of more than $300 million.

The Khmer Rouge seized power in 1975 after a bloody five-year civil war. They immediately attempted a radical transformation of Cambodia into a peasant society, emptying cities and forcing the population to work the land.

They backed up their rule with ruthless elimination of perceived enemies, and were driven from power in early 1979 by an invasion from neighboring Vietnam, which had suffered border attacks from Khmer Rouge forces.

Although atrocities were carried out on a massive scale, political realities — specifically the repeated demands by Cambodian Prime Minister Hun Sen that no more suspects be prosecuted — appear to preclude further cases being pursued by the tribunal. Hun Sen insists that further prosecutions could cause unrest.

In addition to Nuon Chea and Khieu Samphan, the tribunal can lay claim to only one other prosecution, resulting in the 2010 conviction of Kaing Guek Eav, alias Duch, who as head of the Khmer Rouge prison system ran the infamous Tuol Sleng torture center in Phnom Penh.

Hun Sen himself was a midlevel Khmer Rouge commander before defecting while the group was still in power, and several senior members of his ruling Cambodian People's Party share similar backgrounds. He helped cement his political control by making alliances with other former Khmer Rouge commanders.

The ground rules under which the tribunal was established in 2005 are complicated, providing for hybrid courts pairing Cambodian judges and prosecutors with international counterparts.

Cambodian court officials, known for their loyalty to Hun Sen's government, are in a position to base their judgments on the tribunal's inexact guidelines limiting prosecutions to senior leaders or persons considered "most responsible" for atrocities, or simply cease cooperation.

Although Nuon Chea had an especially low profile in the already secretive group, his importance can be gauged by his nom de guerre of "Brother Number Two," reflecting his position as Pol Pot's right-hand man.

According to a 2001 study by Cambodia scholar Stephen Heder and legal expert Brian D. Tittlemore, there was "substantial and compelling evidence" that Nuon Chea devised and implemented the Khmer Rouge's execution policies.

Khieu Samphan had at one point been the smiling, polite figurehead who nominally was the head of state in the Khmer Rouge regime. He was able to trade on his reputation as an honest left-wing academic and lawmaker in 1960s Cambodia before repression drove him underground and into the jungle with the then-nascent Khmer Rouge movement.

The Heder and Tittlemore study acknowledged that evidence against Khieu Samphan was not as extensive as against Nuon Chea and others, but nevertheless suggested he "encouraged lower level (Khmer Rouge) officials to perpetrate executions and, at least in some instances, monitored and contributed to the implementation of Party policies by regional authorities."

Heder, who for a time was an investigator for the tribunal, charged in a 1990 paper that Khieu Samphan was promoted up the ranks of the Khmer Rouge "because he remained steadfastly loyal to his leadership and policies while others who had earlier cooperated with Pol Pot and his Communist Party were detained or killed because they disagreed with or were suspected of disagreeing with what Pol Pot was doing."

"Khieu Samphan's political star rose literally on heaps of corpses," Heder wrote.

Confronted in court with such charges, Nuon Chea and Khieu Samphan showed little remorse. Khieu Samphan denied knowing about matters including forced marriages and violent oppression of minorities, and both men mounted political defenses.

Khieu Samphan described the claim of genocide as "Vietnamese propaganda," a defense he and other former Khmer Rouge leaders have made previously.

Cambodians have long been suspicious of Vietnam, their much bigger eastern neighbor, and prejudice against Vietnamese is widespread.

Khieu Samphan also cast blame on the United States for Cambodia's problems. The U.S. heavily bombed the Cambodian countryside during the 1970-75 civil war that led to the Khmer Rouge's seizure of power.

"I want to bow to the memory of all the innocent victims but also to all those who perished by believing in a better ideal of the brighter future and who died during the five-year war under the American bombardments and (in) the conflict with the Vietnamese invaders," Khieu Samphan said. "Their memory will never be honored by any international tribunal."

German prosecutors seek to lift immunity of far-right leader

By FRANK JORDANS

Associated Press

BERLIN (AP) — German prosecutors said Wednesday they are seeking to lift the parliamentary immunity of a prominent far-right politician as part of a probe into potentially illegal campaign donations.

Prosecutors in the southern city of Konstanz want to investigate Alice Weidel, who is co-leader of the anti-immigration Alternative for Germany party, over donations from Switzerland totaling about 130,000 euros ($146,500).

German law allows party donations from outside the European Union only if they are made by German or EU citizens. Switzerland isn't a member of the 28-nation bloc.

In order to open a formal investigation into a lawmaker, prosecutors have to first ask for that person's immunity to be lifted.

Alternative for Germany, which placed third in national elections last year, acknowledged this week that Weidel's local party chapter received the money from Switzerland, which was marked "campaign donation Alice Weidel." The Swiss newspaper Tages-Anzeiger reported that the payments were listed as coming from a company named PWS Pharmawholesale International AG.

German media reported Wednesday that Weidel used part of the money to pay for social media advertising during her election campaign and for a lawyer suing journalists on her behalf.

Alternative for Germany confirmed she used the funds to pay bills, but said she later ordered the donations returned after doubts were raised about their legality.

Late Wednesday, Alternative for Germany released a statement saying it had informed parliament of a separate donation of 150,000 euros to Weidel's local chapter from a Belgian foundation called Stichting Identiteit Europa. The party said the donation was received Feb. 13 but was returned three months later because "neither the identity nor the motivation of the donor could be determined without doubt."

Cowboys' Elliott faces Falcons, 1st foe for last year's ban

By SCHUYLER DIXON

AP Pro Football Writer

FRISCO, Texas — Ezekiel Elliott brushed and lowered his voice when asked what he was doing when the Dallas Cowboys played without their star running back for the first time during his six-game suspension last year.

Not only was Elliott having a self-described "tough time" with the NFL's ban over domestic violence allegations finally in place after weeks of court battles, but he had to watch a dreadful offensive showing by the Cowboys in a blowout loss to Atlanta. The 27-7 defeat started a three-game losing streak that wiped out any realistic playoff hopes.

"I was home watching it," Elliott said Wednesday. "Tough to watch. Tough time for me. I'm glad I'm out there this year and able to help my guys go out there and try to get this win."

It's relevant because the Cowboys (4-5) are visiting the Falcons (4-5) again Sunday, nearly in the same spot on the schedule, in more dire need of a win because of an uneven first-half performance, particularly by the offense.

Just like last year, though — when Elliott refused upon his return to the team to discuss already-public details about his suspension — Elliott didn't last long talking about the drama surrounding his suspension, and the impact it had on the Cowboys.

"That's all behind me," he said. "It's hard to even need extra motivation when you're 4-5. For the rest of this season, our backs are up against the wall. We have to do the best we can to go out there and try to win every one Dallas Cowboys' Ezekiel Elliott carries the ball during an NFL football game against the Philadelphia Eagles in Philadelphia. of these last games. And those guys on their side, they're feeling the same way."

The next two questions were brushed aside. "I really don't want to dwell on last year," Elliott said.

Four-time Pro Bowl right guard Zack Martin didn't even remember last year's Atlanta game was the first without Elliott.

"I know you guys want to talk about it," Martin said. "That really hasn't come up at all this year."

Elliott and the Dallas offense have had a rough season, even with a running game that has ranked in the top five most of the season.

But the 2016 NFL rushing champion as a rookie is coming off one of his best games of the year in a season-saving 27-20 win at defending champion Philadelphia. Elliott had 151 yards rushing with a touchdown and 36 yards receiving with another score — and a TD he lost by stumbling in the open field after almost cleanly hurdling a defender and landing in stride.

"You do have a little bit more momentum," Elliott said. "When you have a game like that last week, this Falcons team is going to be that much more clued into the run. It's not going to be easy."

The Cowboys recovered from the downer of losing Elliott to win the last three without him last season. Then they compounded the disappointment by losing his first game back to Seattle when Dallas still had faint playoff hopes.

That defeat eliminated the Cowboys a year after an NFC-best 13 wins during the remarkable debut seasons for Elliott and quarterback Dak Prescott, the NFL Offensive Rookie of the Year.

Fast-forward a year, and Elliott is still second in the league with 831 yards rushing despite an offense ranked 27th overall, and a group of blockers that has struggled since losing four-time Pro Bowl center Travis Frederick to a nerve disorder before the season started. Frederick's return this season looks less likely each week.

"I think he's handled it all really, really well," coach Jason Garrett said of Elliott. "He wants to be a great player, wants to have a big impact on our team. I thought he handled a lot of the distractions last year very well. He came back from them and now he's focused on those same things that we always thought he was all about."

And happy to be playing the Falcons instead of watching from home.

NOTES: LT Tyron Smith was added to the injury report with a back issue Wednesday. He didn't practice. ... Five defensive linemen didn't practice: David Irving (ankle), DE Taco Charlton (shoulder), DT Maliek Collins (knee), DE Daniel Ross (calf) and DT Antwaun Woods (concussion).

Mavericks hold Jazz to 22 in 2nd half for a 116-68 win

Associated Press

DALLAS — Dallas and Utah made history. The Jazz weren't pleased with their share.

Harrison Barnes scored 19 points in 26 minutes and the Mavericks handed the Jazz their worst loss since moving to Utah, 118-68 on Wednesday night.

While in New Orleans, the Jazz lost to Milwaukee by 56, 158-102 on March 14, 1979.

"There was a point where we stopped competing," Utah coach Quin Snyder said. "We all have to own that and obviously the scoreboard reflected that."

Dallas set a franchise mark for the fewest points allowed in a half at 22, giving up 13 in the third quarter and nine in the fourth. The previous record was 23 against Sacramento on Jan. 14, 2012. The 50-point margin of victory was the second-highest in team history behind a 53-point win over Philadelphia.

Utah was a point off its lowest-scoring half, set against the Los Angeles Lakers on Feb. 4, 2000.

The Mavericks shot 58 percent, making 43 percent of their 3-point shots.

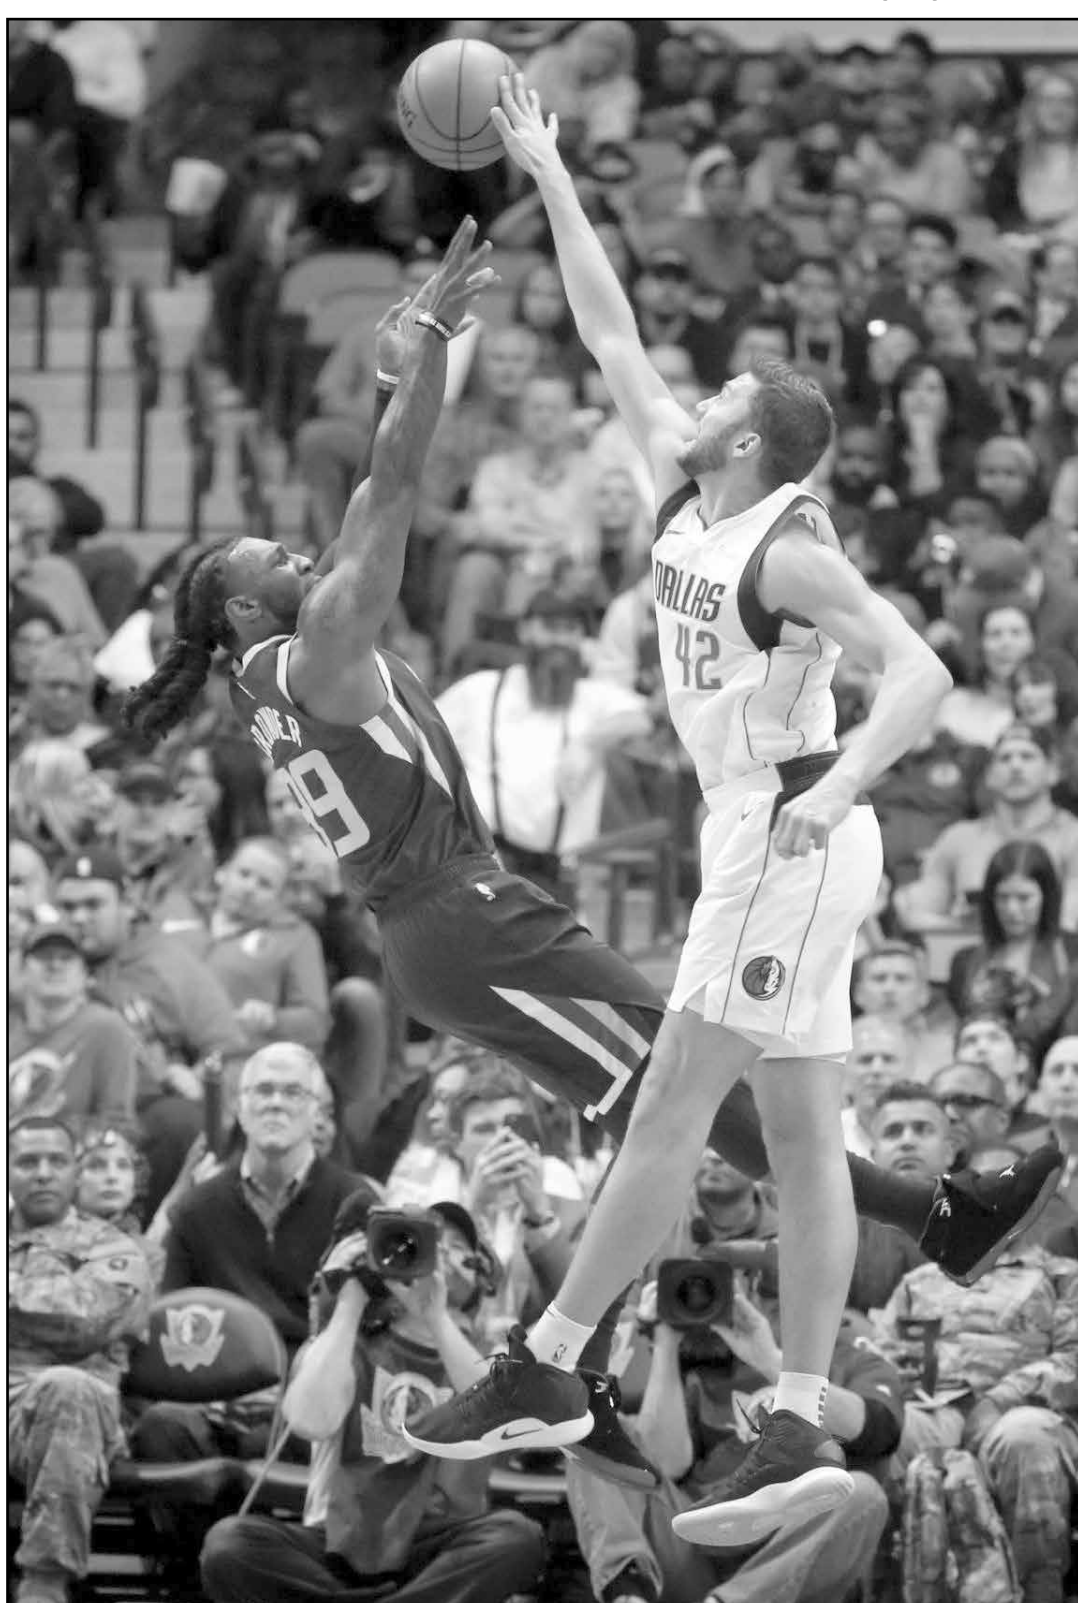

"It was great, and I will just say that I can't remember a better defensive performance by a Mavericks team in 11 years," Dallas coach Rick Carlisle said. "I am just really impressed with the way the guys brought it against a ridiculously difficult team to play."

The 50-point margin of victory for Dallas tied for the second-highest in team history behind a 53-point win over Philadelphia Nov. 13, 2014.

Barnes was 6 for 11 from the field, 3 for 5 on 3-pointers and 4 for 4 on free throws.

"I just feel good in general," Barnes said. "I'm starting to find my rhythm."

He seemed more impressed with Dallas' season-best third straight win than the margin of victory.

Utah Jazz forward Jae Crowder (99) has a shot blocked by Dallas Mavericks forward Maximilian Kleber (42) during the first half of an NBA basketball game in Dallas, Wednesday, Nov. 14, 2018.

"We haven't too many victories here in Dallas," Barnes said.

J.J. Barea added 14 points, Luka Doncic and Dwight Powell had 13 each and Dorian Finney-Smith finished with 11. The Mavericks' backups accounted for 66 points, only two fewer than the Utah team.

Ricky Rubio led Utah with 11 points, Rudy Gobert had 10 points and 10 rebounds, and Donovan Mitchell also scored 10 points.

"I think it's just that they outplayed us in every lineup," Gobert said. "Every guy that was on the court got outplayed."

Tempers flared at times. Utah's Derrick Favors was charged with a Flagrant 1 foul, and three Mavericks receiving technical fouls.

Dallas extended its winning streak to a season-best three games. The Jazz had won three in a row and won the first two games between the teams this season.

TIP-INS

Jazz: Their 13 points in the third quarter were a short-lived season low, not even reaching the 15 they scored in the fourth quarter at Denver on Nov. 3. ... Utah has played Dallas three times in the last nine games. The teams will meet only once more this season, at Utah on Feb. 23.

Mavericks: Wesley Matthews (strained left hamstring) came back after missing Monday's game at Chicago but left Wednesday's game early in the third quarter with a similar injury. ... Before Wednesday, Dallas' low yield for a quarter had been 18 points by the Jazz in the fourth quarter on Nov. 7.

UP NEXT

Thunder: Stay on the road for their longest trip (five games) of the season with three more in four days, beginning at Philadelphia on Friday night.

Mavericks: Complete a two-game homestand against Golden State on Saturday night.

Tomorrow's Horoscope

Mars Change Identity Check

It is too easy to lose sight of who you are and what you've given. The human brain pays attention to what's changed while taking for granted all that has already been established. It's why others notice you, but you don't notice yourself unless you consciously step back. Do so under as Mars enters Pisces. Affirm that you count.

ARIES (March 21-April 19). Your social savvy will serve you nicely. You'll know when someone is lying or telling the truth. You'll build on the truth and leave the lies alone, as those aren't worth chasing. They'll spin in circles and collapse on their own.

TAURUS (April 20-May 20). The thing that used to keep you from doing what you felt like doing no longer applies to your situation. You're free, if you want to be. Go be a part of whatever is pushing or pulling your forward. Get the experience.

GEMINI (May 21-June 21). If ideas were stars, there's one that's your North Star right now, constant and bright. Follow faithfully and you won't have to be worried that you're going in circles. Keep your eye on it, and you'll know where you are.

CANCER (June 22-July 22). In some areas you may feel too inexperienced to help another, but even a 5-year-old has something to teach a four-year-old, if not those much, much older. Don't underestimate the value of your observations.

LEO (July 23-Aug. 22). In movies, the devil shows up bearing gifts, but he always winds up taking much more than he gave. "A fool judges people by the presents they give him." -- Chinese proverb.

VIRGO (Aug. 23-Sept. 22). Who would savor disappointment? For starters, it's not savory. In fact, it often tastes bitter. But if you can stomach it, a closer examination of a past disappointment will absolutely prevent a future one.

LIBRA (Sept. 23-Oct. 23). It's very easy to sing the praises of people so far away (physically distant, famous or dead) that they can't possibly be proven unworthy of the accolades. But the good reputation of our nearest and dearest is hard earned.

BY HOLIDAY MATHIS

SCORPIO (Oct. 24-Nov. 21). As you think more about it, you may not be so sure that what you want will really satisfy you. Take a short pause before transactions. An honest moment of self-reflection will save you money and trouble.

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 22-Dec. 21). As fun as it would be to be the primary controller of the universe, the challenge of the day will have to do with adapting to the fact that there's an ample portion of life that can't be bent to human will.

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22-Jan. 19). The conflict is in each side wishing the other would behave differently, a wish that is basically useless today. Accepting the other person's behavior and building on it... that's the start of productivity.

AQUARIUS (Jan. 20-Feb. 18). When the struggle is about being "good" or "bad," it's an opportunity to consider the unmet needs at play. There's something you need that makes the "bad" thing so appealing, and it could be filled in less risky or harmful ways.

PISCES (Feb. 19-March 20). You'll feel it's unnecessary, but speak up and be assertive anyway just to make your presence known. There's a balance to be struck. You want people to feel comfortable around you but not so comfortable they're inconsiderate.

TODAY'S BIRTHDAY (Nov. 15). Count this among your more ambitious and curious years. You'll be driven to move beyond the many things you already do well. Highlights include: the resources necessary to explore new avenues, a perfect application for obscure talents and knowledge, and the assemblage of a tight team to do lucrative work. Libra and Gemini adore you. Your lucky numbers are: 2, 33, 24, 16 and 9.

ASTROLOGICAL QUESTION: "I've spent the last six years in school getting my master's and working on my doctorate, and I still have no idea how I'm going to make money. My sister is a Pisces who never finished college, and yet she seems to always make the smart choice. When I ask her about her decisions, for instance how she knew to pick one job over another, she says she "just felt like doing it." That infuriates me."

Let it inspire you instead. Spiritual Pisces sometimes forgoes process or reason and leaps into the realm of faith with excellent results. One has to have faith in oneself to take action. To be clear, this is different from having faith that success is at hand. Success is an outcome. Outcomes are not completely in the realm of control. What is controllable is your reaction to circumstances. A confident person doesn't necessarily believe that he or she will succeed in every endeavor. But a confident person does believe that there is a chance of success and, more importantly, that whatever happens will be manageable. They believe that the tools to handle life are either inherent or attainable. Failure, if it comes, will be bearable. This can be you, too. Your mantra: It's safe for me to follow my feelings, passions and curiosities.

CELEBRITY PROFILES: Happy birthday to Shailene Woodley, star of the "Divergent" series, "The Fault in Our Stars" and "Big Little Lies." Woodley was born when the sun, Mars and Pluto were all in charismatic Scorpio. Her moon is in Pisces, a boon for actors, as it lends a kind of emotional shapeshifting ability, helpful for getting into character. Next up for Woodley: the starring role of the animated film, "Arkie."

hand at the club one day, she opened two spades. It was a far cry from a forcing two-bid, but Sylvia wanted to make sure of getting to game.
North couldn't stop short of six, considering that he had an opening bid facing a strong two-bid, so he leapt to slam. Had West led a diamond, the slam would have failed immediately, but West led a trump.
It did not take Sylvia long to play the hand. She reasoned that it wouldn't do much good to take a club finesse through West, because even if it worked, she would still have to lose two diamond tricks.
So she won the trump lead in her hand, played a club to the ace and returned the queen. When East followed low, Sylvia discarded, but, being Sylvia, she discarded a heart instead of a diamond.
West took the king and had no doubt about which suit to return. He assumed from Sylvia's heart discard that this was the weak spot in her hand, and therefore shifted to the jack of hearts.
Sylvia won the heart with the ace, crossed to dummy with a trump, discarded her J-8-3 of diamonds on the J-10 of clubs and king of hearts, and so added another chapter to the saga of her distinguished career.

Fun By The Numbers
Like puzzles? Then you'll love sudoku. This mind-bending puzzle will have you hooked from the moment you square off, so sharpen your pencil and put your sudoku savvy to the test!

Here's How It Works:
Sudoku puzzles are formatted as a 9x9 grid, broken down into nine 3x3 boxes. To solve a sudoku, the numbers 1 through 9 must fill each row, column and box. Each number can appear only once in each row, column and box. You can figure out the order in which the numbers will appear by using the numeric clues already provided in the boxes. The more numbers you name, the easier it gets to solve the puzzle!

This Date In History

Today is Thursday, Nov. 15, the 319th day of 2018. There are 46 days left in the year.

Today's Highlight in History: On Nov. 15, 1864, during the Civil War, Union forces led by Maj. Gen. William T. Sherman began their "March to the Sea" from Atlanta; the campaign ended with the capture of Savannah on Dec. 21.

On this date: In 1777, the Second Continental Congress approved the Articles of Confederation. In 1806, explorer Zebulon Pike sighted the mountaintop now known as Pikes (cq) Peak in present-day Colorado. In 1937, at the U.S. Capitol, members of the House and Senate met in air-conditioned chambers for the first time. In 1942, the naval Battle of Guadalcanal ended during World War II with a decisive U.S. victory over Japanese forces. In 1959, four members of the Clutter family of Holcomb, Kansas, were found murdered in their home. (Ex-convicts Richard Hickock and Perry Smith were later convicted of the killings and hanged in a case made famous by the Truman Capote book "In Cold Blood.") In 1966, the flight of Gemini 12, the final mission of the Gemini program, ended successfully as astronauts James A. Lovell and Edwin "Buzz" Aldrin Jr. splashed down safely in the Atlantic after spending four days in orbit. In 1982, funeral services were held in Moscow's Red Square for the late Soviet President Leonid I. Brezhnev. In 1984, Stephanie Fae Beauclair, the infant publicly known as "Baby Fae" who had received a baboon's heart to replace her own congenitally deformed one, died at Loma Linda University Medical Center in California three weeks after the transplant. In 1986, a government tribunal in Nicaragua convicted American Eugene Hasenfus of charges related to his role in delivering arms to Contra rebels, and sentenced him to 30 years in prison. (Hasenfus was pardoned a month later.) In 1987, 28 of 82 people aboard a Continental Airlines DC-9, including the pilots, were killed when the jetliner crashed seconds after taking off from Denver's Stapleton International Airport. In 1998, Kwame Ture (KWAH-may TUR-ay), the civil rights activist formerly known as Stokely Carmichael, died in Guinea at age 57. In 2003, two Black Hawk helicopters collided and crashed in Iraq; 17 U.S. troops were killed. Ten years ago: World leaders battling an economic crisis agreed in Washington to flag risky investing and regulatory weak spots in hopes of avoiding future financial meltdowns. A wildfire destroyed nearly 500 mobile homes in Los Angeles. Gay rights supporters marched in cities coast to coast to protest the vote that banned gay marriage in California. Somali pirates hijacked the Sirius Star, a Saudi-owned oil super-tanker, in the Indian Ocean. (The ship was released eight weeks later after the pirates were reportedly paid a ransom.) Five years ago: Toronto Mayor Rob Ford vowed to take the City Council to court after it voted overwhelmingly to strip him of some of his powers over his admitted drug use, public drinking and increasingly erratic behavior. China's leaders announced the first significant easing of their one-child policy in nearly 30 years and moved to abolish its labor camp system. Dressed in a black Batman costume, 5-year-old leukemia patient Miles Scott fulfilled his wish to be his favorite superhero, fighting villains and rescuing a damsel in distress in an elaborate fantasy staged by the city of San Francisco and arranged by the Make-a-Wish Foundation. (The event cost the city $105,000, but the tab was picked up by the John and Marcia Goldman Foundation.) One year ago: Zimbabwe's military was in control of the country's capital and the state broadcaster and held 93-year-old President Robert Mugabe and his wife under house arrest; the military emphasized that it had not staged a takeover but was instead starting a process to restore the country's democracy. (The military intervention, hugely popular in Zimbabwe, led to impeachment proceedings against Mugabe, who was replaced.) Eight members of a family who were among more than two dozen people killed in a shooting at a small Texas church were mourned at a funeral attended by 3,000 people. Max

Scherzer of the Washington Nationals won his third Cy Young award; Cleveland Indians ace Corey Kluber was the winner in the American League. Today's Birthdays: Actor Ed Asner is 89. Singer Petula Clark is 86. Comedian Jack Burns is 85. Actress Joanna Barnes is 84. Actor Yaphet Kotto is 79. Actor Sam Waterston is 78. Classical conductor Daniel Barenboim is 76. Pop singer Frida (ABBA) is 73. Actor Bob Gunton is 73. Former New Mexico Gov. Bill Richardson is 71. Actress Beverly D'Angelo is 67. Director-actor James Widdoes is 65. LeBron gets 44, passes Wilt in LA's 126-117 win over Blazers

By GREG BEACHAM

AP Sports Writer
LOS ANGELES — A floating jumper, a foul and a free throw in the fourth quarter of a tight game.

With a gorgeous three-point play, the King jumped over the Big Dipper.

LeBron James' inimitable presence has already been felt in his first few weeks in Hollywood. His most impressive game yet for the Lakers included a bit of history when he passed Wilt Chamberlain on the NBA's career scoring list.

The superstar with no shortage of historic achievements was more excited about leading his surging new team to yet another win.

James had a season-high 44 points, 10 rebounds and nine assists, roaring past Chamberlain for fifth place on the scoring chart and leading the Lakers to a 126-117 victory over the Portland Trail Blazers on Wednesday night.

James scored 28 points in the second half and vaulted past Chamberlain's 31,419 points on that three-point play with 3:55 to go. LeBron finished a memorable night with 31,425 points, and fell just short of his 75th triple-double during his most impressive performance since joining the Lakers.

Afterward, James praised Chamberlain as "One of the most dominant forces we ever had in our game, along with Shaq. One of the greatest Lakers to ever play the game. A 100-point scorer. One of the greatest scorer-rebounders to ever play this game."

James already has moved from seventh to fifth on the career scoring list during his first 14 games with Los Angeles, passing Dirk Nowitzki and Chamberlain. Five of the top six scorers in NBA history have suited up for the Lakers — including Chamberlain, whose No. 13 hangs high above the Staples Center court.

James hit his first five 3-pointers and finished 13 of 19 from the field, reaching his latest milestone during a dominant performance that had chants of "M-V-P!" raining down from the Staples Center crowd.

But the kid from Akron will never let it get to his head.

In fact, he will donate his jersey and the game ball to his I Promise School back in Ohio.

"Anytime my name is mentioned with some of the greats to play this game, I always think back to my hometown, where I come from, how far I've come," James said.

Los Angeles Lakers forward LeBron James (23) is congratulated by guard Lonzo Ball, left, and center Tyson Chandler after James passed Wilt Chamberlain for fifth place in career points, during the second half of the team's NBA basketball game against the Portland Trail Blazers on Wednesday, Nov. 14, 2018, in Los Angeles. The Lakers won 126-117.

Before the Lakers embark on a three-game trip that includes his return to Cleveland on Nov. 21, James showed his new home fans what they can expect in big moments — as if any basketball fan with a pulse didn't already know. He scored 16 points in the third quarter and 12 in the fourth, never allowing Portland to make a final run during the Lakers' fourth consecutive win.

"We did a lot of nice things, but we did a lot of sloppy things tonight," coach Luke Walton said. "A lot of soft defense."

There was bad news on a triumphant night, too: After the game, Walton revealed that Rajon Rondo broke his right hand, apparently while making a steal in the fourth quarter. The veteran point guard will be sidelined for at least a few weeks, and starter Lonzo Ball's so-far moderate workload is likely to increase.

"It's tough," James said. "He's one of our captains, one of our leaders. I know he'll get right to it with his rehab, but it's next man up."

Damian Lillard had 31 points, 11 assists and eight rebounds, and CJ McCollum scored 23 in the Trail Blazers' first road loss to the Lakers since Feb. 22, 2013, ending a nine-game streak at Staples. Portland has lost two straight to the Lakers after winning 16 in a row.

"LeBron, it was a dominant performance," Portland coach Terry Stotts said. "(Scoring) 44 points on 19 shots, that doesn't happen too often. When he's hitting his 3s and putting his head down, he's tough to stop."

JaVale McGee scored 20 points and Brandon Ingram added 17 in the Lakers' sixth win in seven games. After a slow start, Los Angeles

(8-6) is already finding its groove in its first season with James and his fellow veterans joining a young core. Los Angeles is off to its best start since the 2011-12 season.

TIP-INS
Trail Blazers: Lillard played without restrictions after missing practice to rest his right knee. ... Portland's four-game winning streak ended, but the Blazers are still on top of the Northwest Division ... Jusuf Nurkic had 21 points and 14 rebounds, and Al-Farouq Aminu scored 18 points.

Lakers: The 6-foot-5 Josh Hart blocked a dunk attempt by the 7-foot Nurkic in the first quarter. ... Michael Beasley didn't play, but the veteran was back in uniform after missing several recent games for undisclosed personal reasons. He hasn't played since Oct. 25.

BSHS's weekly update

BSHS comm students attend SA conference

By BRENT BILLS

BSHS Journalist

Recently several Communications students from BSHS had a amazing learning experience in San Antonio as they learned many different ways to improve their communications skills. Being in such an historic area, allowed them many different opportunities to learn about the history of the city and the area. They learned about the battle of the Alamo, and President Teddy Roosevelt's efforts to recruit his Rough Riders. They also explored the Riverwalk, Rudy's Barbecue in Leon Springs and the little town of Luckenbach.

The students had a valuable time at the convention too. According to one of their teachers, Colonel Allen Morris, "Attending the conference in San Antonio was a enriching experience, but the greatest things have yet to come. Not only did I make connections with people from around the state, but so did the students. I will soon be taking several more students on a photography field trip around the Dallas area and I know that even more unique growth experiences will happen."

This reporter's thoughts on the trip are, "That it was a wonderful time meeting new people and getting new ideas from other advisers. I am very lucky to have been able to attend. The best part for me was meeting fellow journalist students from around the state. I learned better how to improve my skills and to help make this year's yearbook the best one yet. I also learned that there is so much more to learn, but I'm ready for the challenge. I am excited for the next opportunities to learn even more."

Brent Bills
BSHS Journalist

Daelyn another fellow journalist from Big Spring high school said "The trip was a interesting new experience. I had a lot of fun and made more friends than I intended. I got closer with people than I ever thought I would. The trip was a good learning experience." Daelyn continued, "I really do believe that making these connections with other students and advisers helps us grow."

Noah White another student said, "The trip for was very enlightening to say the least as I learned how to be a better journalists." I'm really glad that we were able to have such a amazing experience to learn and grow."

Elissa Bancroft, who is the English Department chair said "I was extremely pleased with the variety of sessions offered at the conference in San Antonio. Although our group was small, they were a lively bunch, and they were excited about each of the seminars that they attended. I believe that they left the event with new ideas and a desire to implement some of them throughout the year."

This year's main speaker was a regular writer for "Texas Monthly" and Texas Historian, Skip Hollandsworth. He spoke about how he got started in writing, what it took to keep writing, and he went over his research that went into his latest book, "The Midnight Assassin." The book covers Hollandsworth's efforts to research the evidence that Jack-the-Ripper was really a Texan who stopped his killing spree in Texas and moved to London. This was common knowledge at the time and the Brits were accepting that the killer was not one of them but a killer from Texas. To find out more, you will just need to get the book....

Week of Nov. 19 - Thanksgiving Break

Special to the Herald

On Monday, the Coahoma High School Theater department held a Veterans Day assembly to recognize U.S. Military veterans for their service to our country.

The event was held the day after the official Veterans Day which fell on Sunday. This year's Veterans Day was even more poignant since it also marked the 100th anniversary of Armistice Day - the official end of World War I.

The assembly was put together completely by the theater students and was open to the public. The students performed skits about what defines a hero and what freedom means. The three guest speakers included Staff Sgt. Gabriel Martinez, a medic in the U.S. Air Force who has served 8 years; Ken Stallings, who served 2 years in U.S. Army during the Vietnam era; and David Leonard, a retired U.S. Marine Corp Gunnery Sgt. and Vietnam Veteran who served 21 years in the service.

During his talk, Leonard remember Chad Metcalf, a U.S. Marine from Coahoma who was killed in action in 2003. He was the first Howard County son killed in Operation Iraqi Freedom. Memorials for the 2001 CHS graduate are located in front of the high school and in the hallway.

Also during the assembly, the following elementary students were recognized as winners of the patriotic art and poster contests: They are: Coloring Contest: Gabby Cox, 1st; Blakely Rodgers, 2nd; Bridget Lawder, 3rd; Riley Olson and Tatum Damgaard, honorable mention. Poster Contest: Makalah Gonzales, 1st; Peyton Beck, 2nd; Abigail Bose, 3rd; Payton Locke, honorable mention.

Coahoma ISD will not hold classes next week for the Thanksgiving holidays beginning Monday, Nov. 19. Classes will resume Monday, Nov. 26.

The Forsan fifth-grade reading class has been working hard on their second quest of the year. They completed a Mystery Mansion Quest near Halloween; Now, they're working on a Plymouth Colony Quest to learn the history of Thanksgiving. Students work together to complete reading comprehension graphic organizers to earn clues. The clues point toward The Hero of Thanksgiving. The students have enjoyed working together to solve the quest and discover who the hero is.
