About 200 people packed the East Room of Howard College's Dorothy Garrett Coliseum Thursday after collecting cups of fragrant, savory soup and a handmade ceramic bowl. The occasion was the annual United Way Empty Bowls event, and United Way Director Christian Fair said the event went well.

"It's been a great event," Fair said. "We have plenty of soup, we had lots of people, everybody seems happy and full, and we just want to reflect at this time - next week is Thanksgiving - we want to make sure we remember people that don't have a full plate of food and their bowls are empty. We want to shine some awareness on that.

Thirty-four different organizations made 37 varieties of soup, including Great Western Dining's Loaded Baked Potato Soup and Tomato Basil Soup; Blue Ribbon Cafe's Chicken and Dumplings; and the Northside Movement/LULAC's Chicken Caldo.

Other hits included Walter Brumley's Texas Aggie Chili, Barney Dodd's Gumbo, and Vicki Stewart's Chicken Corn Chowder.

Lumbre Restaurant and Chef Isaiah Ludington contributed Pozole; the rest of the soups were: Donna Wright, Broccoli Cheese Soup; Hotel Settles, Tomato Basil Soup; Jimmy Stewart, Chicken and Dumplings; Mike and Stephanie Piercfield, Spicy Pork Green Chili; H-E-B, New Jersey-style Chicken and Dumplings; Cowboys Steakhouse, Cowboys' Taco Soup; Scenic Mountain Medical Center and Emma Krabill, Lean and Green Chili; New Star Energy (name of soup not given); Border State Electric and Furillo Subia, Chili Verde; Lamun-Lusk-Sanchez State Veterans Home, Cowboy Stew; Big Spring Police Department and Clarissa Rivera,

WikiLeaks chief could see charges, US court filing suggests

By ERIC TUCKER

Associated Press

WASHINGTON (AP) — The Justice Department inadvertently named Julian Assange in a court filing in an unrelated case, suggesting prosecutors have prepared charges against the WikiLeaks founder under seal.

Assange's name appears twice in a recently-unsealed August court filing from a federal prosecutor in Virginia who was attempting to keep sealed a separate case involving a man accused of coercing a minor for sex.

In one sentence, the prosecutor wrote that the charges and arrest warrant "would need to remain sealed until Assange is arrested in connection with the charges in the criminal complaint and can therefore no longer evade or avoid arrest and extradition in this matter."

In another sentence, the prosecutor said that "due to the sophistication of the defendant and the publicity surrounding the case, no other procedure is likely to keep confidential the fact that Assange has been charged."

Any charges against Assange could help illuminate whether Russia coordinated with the Trump campaign to sway the 2016 presidential election. It would also suggest that, after years of internal wrangling within the Jus-stice Department, prosecutors have decided to take a more aggressive tact against the secret-sharing website.

It was not immediately clear why Assange's name was included in the document, though Joshua Stueve, a spokesman for the Eastern District of Virginia — which had been investigating Assange — said, "The court filing was made in error. That was not the intended name for this filing."

The Washington Post reported late Thursday, citing people familiar with the matter, that Assange had indeed been charged. The Associated Press could not immediately confirm that.

It was not immediately clear what charges Assange, who has been holed up for years in the Ecuadorian Embassy in London, might face.

But recently ousted Attorney General Jeff Sessions last year declared the arrest of Assange a priority. Special counsel Robert Mueller has been investigating whether Trump campaign associates had advance knowledge of Democratic emails that were published by WikiLeaks in the weeks before the 2016 election and that U.S. authorities have said were hacked by Russia.

Barry Pollack, a lawyer for Assange, told the AP earlier this week that he had no information about possible charges against Assange.

In a new statement, he said, "The news that criminal charges have apparently been filed against Mr. Assange is even more troubling than the haphazard manner in which that information has been revealed. The government bringing criminal charges against someone for publishing truthful information is a dangerous path for a democracy to take."

The filing was discovered by Seamus Hughes, a terrorism expert at the Program on Extremism at George Washington University, who posted it on Twitter hours after The Wall Street Journal reported that the Justice Department was preparing to prosecute Assange and said, "To be clear, seems Freudian, it's for a different completely unrelated case, every other page is not related to him, EDVA just appears to have Assange on the mind when filing motions to seal and used his name."

The case at issue concerns a defendant named Seitu Sulayman Kokayi, a 29-year-old teacher who has since been indicted in Virginia on charges of enticing a 15-year-old girl to commit sex acts and to produce child pornography.

The document, a motion filed in late August asking to keep Kokayi's case secret, mentions Assange in two boilerplate sections, suggesting a copy-and-paste error or that his name was inadvertently left in a template used for the common filings. That document has since been unsealed.

There doesn't appear to be any connection between Assange and Kokayi.

Assange, 47, has resided in the Ecuadorian Embassy for more than six years in a bid to avoid being extradited to Sweden, where he was wanted to sex crimes, or to the United States, whose government he has repeatedly humbled with mass disclosures of classified information.

Migrants streaming into Tijuana, but now face long stay

Marvin Ochoa, center, of Honduras, waits in line for a meal behind his wife Diana Marylin Ochoa after they arrived with a Central America migrant caravan to Tijuana, Mexico, Thursday, Nov. 15, 2018. Members of the migrant caravan started to meet some local resistance as they continued to arrive by the hundreds in the Mexican border city of Tijuana, where a group of residents clashed with migrants camped out by the U.S. border fence.

By ELLIOT SPAGAT

Associated Press

TIJUANA, Mexico (AP) — Exhausted migrants in a caravan of Central American asylum-seekers napped on mattresses in a converted municipal gymnasium, while men played soccer and exchanged banter on a crowded, adjoining courtyard. A woman dabbed her crying, naked toddler with a moist cloth.

Nearly 2,000 caravan migrants had reached the U.S. border in Mexico's northwestern corner by Thursday, with more coming in a steady trickle of buses. The city of Tijuana, with its privately run shelters operating well above their capacity of 700, opened the gymnasium and gated sport complex for up to 1,000 migrants, with a potential to expand to 3,000.

With U.S. border inspectors processing only about 100 asylum claims a day at the main border crossing with San Diego, prospects grew that migrants would be stuck waiting in Tijuana for months.

Francisco Rueda, the top deputy to Baja California state Gov. Francisco Vega de la Madrid, said about 1,750 migrants from the caravan had reached Tijuana so far.

"This is not a crisis," he told reporters, though he agreed that "this is an extraordinary situation."

Rueda said the state has 7,000 jobs available for its "Central American migrant brothers" who obtain legal residence status in Mexico.

"Today in Baja California there is an employment opportunity for those who request it, but it order for this to happen, it has to regulate migrant status," he said.

The city's thriving factories are always looking for workers, and several thousand Haitian migrants who were turned away at the U.S. border have found jobs and settled in Tijuana the last two years.

Police made their presence known in a city that is suffering an all-time-high homicide rate. A group of about 50 migrants, mostly women and children, walked through downtown streets Thursday from the city shelter to a breakfast hall under police escort.

As buses from western and central Mexico trickled in, some families camped inside the bus terminal and waited for word on where they could find a safe place to sleep.

Oscar Zapata, 31, reached the Tijuana bus station at 2 a.m. Thursday from Guadalajara with his wife and their three children, ages 4, 5 and 12, and headed to the breakfast hall, where migrants were served free beef and potatoes.

Back home in La Ceiba, Honduras, he sold pirated CDs and DVDs in the street and two gangs demanding "protection" money threatened to kidnap his daughter and force her into prostitution if he didn't pay. When he heard about the caravan on the TV news last month, he didn't think twice.

"It was the opportunity to get out," Zapata said.

Zapata said he hopes to join a brother in Los Angeles but has not yet decided on his next move. Like many others, he plans to wait in Tijuana for others in the caravan to arrive and gather more information before seeking asylum in the United States.

Byron Jose Blandino, a 27-year-old bricklayer from Nicaragua who slept in the converted gymnasium, said he wanted to request asylum but not until he could speak with someone well-versed in U.S. law and asylum procedures.

"The first thing is to wait," Blandino said. "I do not want to break the laws of any country. If I could enter in a peaceful manner, that would be good."

To claim asylum in San Diego, migrants enter their names in a tattered notebook held together by duct tape and managed by the migrants in a plaza outside the entry to the main border crossing. On Thursday, migrants who registered six weeks ago were getting their names called. The waiting list has grown to more than 3,000 names and stands to become much longer with the new arrivals.

Dozens of gay and transgender migrants in the caravan were already lining up Thursday to submit asylum claims, though it was unclear how soon they would be able to do so.

Rueda, the governor's deputy, said that if all migrants from the caravan currently in Tijuana were to register to seek asylum in the U.S., they would likely have to wait four months at current processing rates. For that reason, the state has asked Mexican federal authorities to encourage people in other caravans to go to other border cities.

There are real questions about how the city of more than 1.6 million will manage to handle the migrant caravans working their way through Mexico, which may total 10,000 people in all.

"No city in the world is prepared to receive this number of migrants," said Mario Osuna, Tijuana's social development director. He said the city hopes Mexico's federal government "will start legalizing these people immediately" so they can get jobs and earn a living.

The caravan has fragmented somewhat in recent days in a final push to the border, with some migrants moving rapidly in buses and others falling behind.

On Thursday, hundreds were stranded for most of the day at a gas station in Navojoa, some 750 miles (1,200 kilometers) from Tijuana.

"We were dropped here at midnight ... in the middle of nowhere, where supposedly some buses were going to come pick us up, but nothing," Alejandra Grisel Rodriguez of Honduras told The Associated Press by phone. "We are without water, without food."

After about 12 hours, seven buses began arriving to collect the migrants, Rodriguez said, but they quickly filled up.

"We would need at least 40 or 50," she said.

Nobody hurt as fire damages Abilene Reporter-News building

Abilene firefighters respond to a two-alarm blaze at the Abilene Reporter-News, Thursday, Nov. 15, 2018, in Abilene, Texas. Nobody has been hurt in the fire.

ABILENE, Texas (AP) — Nobody has been hurt in a fire that damaged the Abilene Reporter-News building and forced newspaper personnel to evacuate.

Abilene Fire Department officials are seeking the cause of Thursday's blaze in the multi-story structure in downtown Abilene. Editor Greg Jaklewicz says a few people were inside the building when the fire broke out around 9:15 a.m. and everyone got out safely.

A story on the Abilene Reporter News website says lights had flickered inside the building minutes before the fire. Some staffers saw fire and electrical sparks outside a third-floor utility room.

The fire was extinguished around midday Thursday, with crews checking for hot spots.

Abilene Fire Department Deputy Chief John Brunett says experts will determine the building's stability.

Texas sheriff: spare gun malfunctioned, deputy shot in foot

WEATHERFORD, Texas (AP) — A Texas sheriff says a deputy who was shot in the foot while investigating a report of an illegal deer hunting site was wounded when his spare weapon malfunctioned and discharged without warning.

Parker County Sheriff Larry Fowler said Thursday that the concealed backup gun was in a holster and strapped to the deputy when it fired. Fowler says Monday's shooting remains under investigation and deputies were still seeking a trespasser seen on the private property.

The gun will undergo ballistics and other function tests.

The deputy was shot while dispatched to a rural area about 14 miles (22.5 kilometers) west of Fort Worth. The department had received a complaint from a landowner about an illegal deer blind. Officials initially blamed a trespasser for the shooting.

Reflections: Lincoln's Thanksgiving

Perhaps more than any other historical figure, Abraham Lincoln continues to shape the American psyche. The success of Stephen Spielberg's movie, Lincoln, gives some indication of our continued fascination with the 16th President.

BILL TINSLEY

When we think of Thanksgiving, we usually think of Pilgrims and Indians gathered for a harvest feast at Plymouth, but it was Abraham Lincoln who gave us Thanksgiving as a national holiday. Prior to Lincoln, each state celebrated Thanksgiving on different dates according to the discretion of each state's governor.

In 1863, in the middle of the Civil War, Lincoln issued a presidential proclamation for a national day of thanksgiving.

After noting the many blessings of God in spite of the Civil War with all its suffering and severity, Lincoln wrote in his proclamation, "No human counsel hath devised nor hat any mortal hand worked out these great things. They are the gracious gifts of the Most High God, who, while dealing with us in anger for our sins, hath nevertheless remembered mercy.

"It has seemed to me fit and proper that they should be solemnly, reverently, and gratefully acknowledged, as with one heart and one voice, by the whole American people. I do therefore invite my fellow-citizens in every part of the United States, and also those who are at sea and those who are sojourning in foreign lands, to set apart and observe the last Thursday of November next as a day of thanksgiving and praise to our beneficent Father who dwelleth in the heavens. And I recommend to them that while offering up the ascriptions justly due to Him for such singular deliverances and blessings they do also, with humble penitence for our national perverseness and disobedience, commend to His tender care all those who have become widows, orphans, mourners, or sufferers in the lamentable civil strife in which we are unavoidably engaged, and fervently implore the interposition of the Almighty Hand to heal the wounds of the nation and to restore it, as soon as may be consistent with the Divine purposes, to the full enjoyment of peace, harmony, tranquility and union."

Ever since that proclamation, Americans have paused on a Thursday in November to reflect on God's blessing with humility and thanksgiving.

Most are aware that Lincoln never joined a church. But it is abundantly clear that the one book that most shaped his thought was the Bible. References to Scripture can be found throughout his speeches and conversations. And his Presidential proclamation creating a national day of Thanksgiving challenges us all to a faith that includes confession of our sins, compassion for our fellow man and gratitude to our Heavenly Father. As we gather for our Thanksgiving observance next week may we hear again Lincoln's exhortation. May we seek God's face and trust in His Son that our sins might be forgiven and that we might be a nation of righteousness that blesses the earth.

"Enter into His gates with Thanksgiving, and into His courts with praise. Be thankful to Him, and bless His name." Psalm 100:4

You are invited to join the family of FBC Sunday at 10:50 a.m. as they come together in grateful adoration of The Living Hope, Jesus Christ. Music Minister Alan Schantz will lead worshippers in a blend of classic hymns of the faith, and contemporary praise and worship songs. Drawn from Luke 17:11-19, listeners will thoughtfully consider that it is faith, rooted in the hope of Christ, that brings about a heart overflowing with gratitude. Following the worship service, everyone's welcome at the annual church-wide Thanksgiving meal served in the Family Life Center. The church will provide turkey, dressing, mashed potatoes, green beans, and drinks; congregants are asked to bring a salad and dessert to share (enough for your family plus two). Bring some friends, and come enjoy this time of fellowship and thanksgiving.

If you need assistance accessing the sanctuary due to mobility issues, use the west circle drive, and someone will be glad to assist you inside and park your vehicle. If unable to attend, you may join the service through the live stream on the church website at: fbcbigspring.org. (Click on 'MORE' tab, then 'SERMONS')

Coahoma First United Methodist Church

Wow! How did it get to this time of year once more?

All of the excitement, memories, and things that tug at our heart. My heart is always warmed by remembering Charles Schultz "Charlie Brown Thanksgiving." It never has to be the perfect Thanksgiving meal with all of the trimmings, as long as you are with people (and Snoopy) who take the time to care.

Here at Coahoma Methodist, we all belong. Of course, we are always looking to enlarge our family. We come together through many different walks of life to be with one another.

Caring for each other, growing together, and loving each other through thick and thin. We know that God always has a plan, and that his plan always works. Please come and join us. We would love to have you.

Sewing a New Life

By Dr. Lillian Bohannon

As a young lady growing up in a moderate income family, my mother would sew a lot of our clothing. She would take our winter clothes and cut off the legs to make shorts for our beach vacation in San Diego. She would take all the scraps of clothing and make us "crazy" shirts.

Those didn't last very long because she used old clothes to do new garments. They soon were torn because of new pieces in with the old. When I got married, she made my wedding dress. What a legacy I had!!! And what a bundle of money she saved in her clothing budget.

Not too long before she passed on to Heaven, she gave me a double wedding ring quilt top.

My great grandmother from Moweaqua, Illinois, made the quilt top from scraps of the dresses and shirts they wore in their day.

It has material from Mother's Grandmother's and my aunt's clothing. I have had several nieces and granddaughters help with quilting it. What a legacy!!!

But, and you knew that was coming—I have a new life in Jesus Christ. The lesson from the clothing that wore out and tore apart stayed with me. The parable Jesus told in Luke 5, says we can't repair old clothing with new pieces. We can't mix old grape juice with new grape juice. It spoils.

Just like that, we can't bring our old life into the new life Christ gives us at salvation. It won't work.

It will tear us apart and we will be good for nothing in His Kingdom. The new life He gives us needs to be free from the fleshly lusts of the world. Mixing it together only brings dishonor to the One Who wants to free us from that bondage.

So keep your hearts and minds pure in the cleansing blood of the Saviour Who keeps on cleansing us from all unrighteousness. Let His mind be in you.

Brenham man talks about how Operation Christmas Child brightened life in Kazakhstan orphanage

Associated Press

BRENNHAM, Texas – Christmas cheer for children all around the world can come in all sizes.

For many, it can come in something as small as a shoebox.

First Baptist Church's Sycamore House is the collection site for the annual Operation Christmas Child project. So far, more than 1,000 boxes have been accepted at the dropoff site. The boxes will be eventually distributed to children in need around the world.

One of these recipients was a young boy from Petropavlovsk, Kazakhstan, who now lives in Brenham.

Ethan Lawhon was in an orphanage for nine years there before being adopted by Marcus and Wendy Lawhon on Dec. 17, 2004. He hasn't forgotten the first time he received a shoebox.

"I was very surprised to receive a Christmas box," said Lawhon. "I actually did not know at the time what it was, until our orphanage caregivers gave clues that it was a gift from different places from all over including churches, different churches from the states."

He received one for four years, but said there was one in particular he will never forget.

"I saw a lot of kids receive boxes there in my orphanage, but my favorite one of all that I got was a prayer card that said, 'You are going to get a family that will be picking you up the next Christmas,'" Lawhon said. The letter came from Here I Am Orphan Ministries and was inserted in the box he received.

"So that Christmas of 2003 is when I got a letter in my shoebox that it was coming from an adoptive family that was going to adopt me. Sure enough a year later I was adopted."

While Lawhon admitted his testimony on what he called "a miracle" could "take the whole day," he said receiving Christmas boxes at the orphanage was very special to him and his fellow orphans.

"Getting these when I was in orphanage knowing that I did not have family there ... so being able to have a Christmas gift was a big deal to a lot of the kids and to me too," said Lawhon. "I would get clothes, I would get school stuff like artwork, art supplies and just little snacks.

I was four years recipient of this shoebox. At Christmas I would get one. The last one was a true miracle actually and that was a sign that I was getting an adopted family."

He recommended that churches and people contribute to the program any way they can, including filling shoeboxes or giving monetary donations for shipping. They have a special impact on the recipients, said Lawhon.

"They (orphans) don't get to spend Christmas with their families but with a lot of other kids their age," he said. "It would be an encouraging thing for those children, and it's also a way of knowing Christ. Because I got to know Jesus Christ through these shoeboxes, I would get letters, and still have those letters actually saved from those shoeboxes that I received that said 'Jesus loves you.' It's amazing.

"It means a lot to a lot of those kids that don't have families that churches out there love and support the children from all over the world," he added, thanking all the churches who partner up with Operation Christmas Child.

The drop off location is open through Saturday from 8 a.m.-6 p.m., Sunday from 1-6 p.m. and Monday from 8 a.m.-6 p.m.

Lebanese civil war rivals end decades of hostility

By BASSEM MROUE

Associated Press

BEIRUT (AP) — Two rival Lebanese Christian leaders reconciled Wednesday ending four decades of enmity triggered by a massacre of dozens during Lebanon's 1975-1990 civil war.

Samir Geagea, leader of the Lebanese Forces group, and Sleiman Frangieh of the Marada Party shook hands and kissed each other on the cheeks at the headquarters of the Maronite Christian church north of Beirut. The reconciliation was sponsored by Cardinal Bechara al-Rai, head of the Maronite church, Lebanon's largest.

Geagea and Frangieh met in the past, but Wednesday marked the end of a bitter rivalry tainted with blood.

"It is so nice for brothers to sit together. I welcome you through prayers as happiness fills my heart and the heart of all Lebanese," al-Rai said in a speech after the two leaders met in front of journalists.

The two leaders are Maronite Christians and are both presidential hopefuls. Their reconciliation comes at a time when both their relations have become tense with foreign minister, Gibran Bassil, another presidential hopeful who heads the Free Patriotic Movement founded by President Michel Aoun. According to Lebanon's power-sharing system, Lebanon's president must be a Christian Maronite.

Frangieh is a close friend of Syrian President Bashar Assad and is allied with the militant Hezbollah group while Geagea is with the Western and Saudi-backed coalition and is a harsh critic of both Assad and Hezbollah leader Sayyed Hassan Nasrallah.

In 1978, members of the main Christian militia killed Frangieh's father, Tony, as well as his mother and sister and 30 Marada fighters and supporters.

Geagea led the raid in the mountain resort of Ehden but was seriously wounded and withdrew from the operation.

Last week, Frangieh met with the families of those killed four decades ago and asked if he can go ahead with the reconciliation and received their support.

At the end of the meeting, Geagea told reporters: "Today is a beautiful day. What better thing do we need. It is a white day, a historic day."

Frangieh had a brief comment saying: "This is a new page that we open today."

Church still going strong 75 years later

LAKE JACKSON — Twirling to 1940s swing music, greeting old friends and wowing over little-known history facts characterized the 75th anniversary celebration Sunday at First United Methodist Church.

Pastor Lynne Settlemyre felt excited to be celebrating the church's anniversary but wasn't at all surprised by the voluminous turnout, she said.

"When you come here, you know you're loved," Settlemyre said. "You don't have to be here long before you figure out that's a love that sends you back out into the community to make a difference for other people. Our mission is to experience God's love and share it with others."

On a typical Sunday, about 250 people attend services and Sunday school classes, Settlemyre said.

This past Sunday, many more people than that made ice cream with a hand crank, brought their kids to make soap or butter or listened to a sermon from Pastor Will Reed.

Reed, now a pastor for First United Methodist Church in Pasadena, grew up attending the Lake Jackson church and credits the community for his dedication to serving his faith.

He wasn't the only one who grew up in the church, though. Linda Linder, now in her 80s, first came to the church at age 6 when it opened in 1943.

"The church has meant so much to me my whole life because of the people in the church," Linder said. "Lots of us got married in this church. I can't imagine going to another church.

People we haven't seen in years have come back just for this."

One might say Delia Wall was raised in the church. When her mother had her third miscarriage, someone from the church helped her find a baby to adopt.

That baby was Wall, who joined First United of Lake Jackson as an infant in 1958 and said the care church members took to help her mother is what has kept it standing strong these past 75 years.

"They took seeds and planted them," Wall said. "My Sunday school teacher, she followed us along from pre-K until high school. That must have been hard for her to do that, but she cared so much.

I left later to go to Jacksonville and I've only been back 16 years but I remember going, through those doors with tears on my cheeks going, 'I'm home.'"

Castle on the square: Sand to star in Vatican Nativity scene

In this Thursday, Dec. 7, 2017 filer, a 21 meters (69 feet) high Christmas tree coming from Poland and a Nativity Scene are backdropped by St. Peter's Basilica after being lit in St. Peter's Square at the Vatican. Sand castles are coming to the Vatican. The Vatican said Wednesday, Nov. 14, 2018 its Christmas Nativity scene this year will be built from sand and sculpted by an international set of artists. About 700 tons of sand will be shipped to St. Peter's Square for the sculpture, which along with a giant tree, will become the centerpiece of the Vatican's Christmastime decorations. The first phase of construction begins Saturday with the forming of a giant pyramid of sand in the square, from which blocks of pressed sand will be made. Four sculptors from the U.S., Russia, the Netherlands and Czech Republic, will then carve out the various figures, which will be formally unveiled Dec. 7.

Bulldog quarterback Zack Schneider breaks a huge run in a big 49-14 win over Stanton on October 26, 2018.

By JORDAN PARR

Sports Editor

The 2-8 Steers are coming off their most disappointing loss of the last week versus Lake View in a game that Big Spring dominated in every category with the exception of the score. The Steers will head to Pecos tonight to take on the 4-6 Clint Lions. Clint, who went 1-6 to start the season before winning three straight district games to claim the 1-4A district crown, enter tonight's game coming off a 41-28 win over El Paso Mountain View last week. If the Steers want to pull off the upset and get a long awaited playoff win they will have to find a way to get into the end zone when they get inside their opponents twenty. Five times last week versus Lake View the Steers drove the ball inside the red zone and came away with no points. If Big Spring wants to knock off a district champion tonight they will have to play their best game to date. The Steers and the Lions are set to kickoff at 7:00 p.m. tonight in Pecos.

The 4-6 Coahoma Bulldogs, who really turned their season around over the past few weeks, will travel to Crane tonight to take on the 7-3 Cranes for the bi-district matchup. The Bulldogs enter tonight's game coming off an impressive 39-22 drumming of Lubbock Roosevelt last week. Coahoma's run game has been one of the best in the area if not the state all season and the Bulldogs will look to ride that run game right through Crane on their way to a bi-district title. Look for star quarterback Zack Schneider to get the run game going early and to try to pound Crane's defense into submission. Crane, who comes into tonight's game coming off three consecutive wins where they held their opponents to seven points while scoring more than 30, will look to continue recent dominance and try to put a stop to the Bulldogs power run attack. This game could go either way, look for turnovers to be a key in this matchup tonight. The Bulldogs and the Cranes are set to kickoff at 7:30 p.m. this evening in Crane.

Fun By The Numbers

Like puzzles? Then you'll love sudoku. This mind-bending puzzle will have you hooked from the moment you square off, so sharpen your pencil and put your sudoku savvy to the test!

Here's How It Works:
Sudoku puzzles are formatted as a 9x9 grid, broken down into nine 3x3 boxes. To solve a sudoku, the numbers 1 through 9 must fill each row, column and box. Each number can appear only once in each row, column and box. You can figure out the order in which the numbers will appear by using the numeric clues already provided in the boxes. The more numbers you name, the easier it gets to solve the puzzle!

Vander Esch showing 1st-round talent as rookie for Cowboys

By SCHUYLER DIXON

AP Pro Football Writer

FRISCO, Texas — Leighton Vander Esch said it almost felt weird to have the ball in his hands again on the first NFL interception for the Dallas Cowboys linebacker.

The rookie from Boise State who used to play every down — offense and defense — for his eight-man high school team never said anything about it feeling strange to diagnose a screen pass before it was in the air, slip past a pair of blockers and make a critical open-field tackle for loss.

That defensive play of the game in a season-saving win at Philadelphia was a signature moment weeks in the making, through preparation and focus that Vander Esch said should be expected of any team's first-round draft pick. At least that's how he sees it.

"I've never really thought that I've been caught off-guard with anything," said Vander Esch, taken 19th overall last spring. "I'm confident in my abilities and my athleticism, in my preparation. It's going to put me in position to make plays on the field on game day."

Vander Esch established a Cowboys rookie record with 19 tackles against the Eagles, according to the coaches' count. He's the first rookie Dallas linebacker with an interception since injured teammate and mentor Sean Lee had two in the same game eight years ago.

Barring a surge from Jaylon Smith, who figures to be his linebacking partner for years to come in Dallas, Vander Esch could become the first rookie to lead the Cowboys (4-5) in tackles since coaches starting tracking the stat in 1977.

Vander Esch has the Dallas rookie record for tackles in a game and the first interception by a first-year linebacker for the Cowboys since Sean Lee in eight years ago.

Vander Esch has 96 through nine games going into Sunday's trip to Atlanta (4-5), and Smith is second with 82.

"He's going to be around here a long time," Smith said. "He's developing into a great player. He's the best tackler on the team. I joke to him all the time. He's finding ways to learn from his 96-inch arms."

Smith, a first-round talent relegated to the second round in 2016 because of a knee injury in his final game at Notre Dame, watched as a rookie while recovering from the injury, so his second season was really his first.

Because of injuries to Anthony Hitchens and Lee, Smith had to play more than expected and struggled at times. More hamstring issues for Lee have forced the 6-foot-4 Vander Esch into essentially a full-time role — he and Smith played all 62 defensive snaps against the Eagles.

Vander Esch hasn't struggled nearly as much, perhaps in part because he's had Smith out there with him. And he's had Lee in his ear on the sidelines — and in the meeting rooms all week. The Cowboys have raved about Lee's preparation for years.

"He's lucky to have a guy like Sean Lee in that room with him," coach Jason Garrett said. "To see that example really each and every day in your room, up close, seeing how a guy like that does it, how he approaches it, I think that's been really good for him."

Apparently so. "I wouldn't have been able to do it without him," Vander Esch said. "He's right there to give us tips and to be on us right as we come on the sideline after being on the field. I love the guy. I feel like I've known him for my whole life."

Lee has already missed four games with separate hamstring injuries and likely won't be back until the final month because of the second one. Injuries have defined his career, and several times brought the Dallas defense down with them.

Smith's improvement in his first year without a foot brace that he needed because of nerve damage from the knee injury is part of the reason the Cowboys, ranked seventh in the NFL in total defense, are in their best shape in several years to survive without Lee.

The rapid rise of the Vander Esch is the other reason, and perhaps isn't that surprising considering he went from tiny Riggins, Idaho, to a Boise State walk-on who developed fast enough through a redshirt year and three seasons to enter the draft early.

"For a guy as big as he is, the things that we saw from him on tape in college that led him to be really intriguing prospect, it is showing up," passing game coordinator Kris Richard said. "And it's translating into this league."

Vander Esch has a signature play to show for it.

Baylor focused on bowl for its seniors, not keeping TCU out

By STEPHEN HAWKINS

AP Sports Writer

WACO, Texas — Baylor coach Matt Rhule is more interested in what his team and the seniors who stuck around can accomplish, and not what the Bears could do to Big 12 rival TCU in the process.

The Bears (5-5, 3-4 Big 12) can get bowl eligible with a win Saturday in the home finale for 10 fifth-year seniors who remained through a sexual assault scandal that rocked the school more than two years ago, and led to only one win in Rhule's debut last season. They host the Horned Frogs (4-6, 2-5), who have to win their last two games to get to a bowl.

"Probably no group of seniors has ever been through more than they've been through," Rhule said. "My whole focus with our team this week is going to be about sending the seniors out on senior day the right way, and really send them out with the best home record. ... This is a special group to me, and I'd love to have a chance to play one more game with them."

Baylor will honor 20 seniors overall before the game. That includes the fifth-year guys and three players who came into the program from other schools as graduate transfers.

Receiver Chris Platt, nose tackle Ira Lewis and the other fifth-year seniors arrived in Waco at the peak of the program's on-field success — after the Bears' first Big 12 championship in 2013, and then a share of the title in 2014 in their first season on campus. Eight of the fifth-year seniors already have degrees and could have gone elsewhere this season as graduate transfers. They have been part of two bowl wins, during a 10-win 2015 season and the Cactus Bowl in 2016 that capped a 7-6 record under interim coach Jim Grobe in the immediate wake of the scandal.

TCU played in the Big 12 title game last year after ending that regular season by beating the Bears for the third year in a row. Now the Frogs have to win out — at Baylor and their home finale against Oklahoma State — or miss a bowl for only the third time in coach Gary Patterson's 18 seasons as head coach.

"It is a must-win game because we do want to win a bowl game," tight end Cole Novak said. "That is the end game, and we're going to do everything we can in order to make that happen."

But the injury-plagued Frogs, with 36 players missing much or all of the season, are coming off their most lopsided loss under Patterson — 47-10 at No. 7 West Virginia last week. The only times they missed bowls under GP were 2004 and 2013, but rebounded with at least 10 wins the following season.

"You want to have some urgency about doing it, but I don't think you're panicking. If you're not careful, you cause a lot more problems that way," Patterson said. "When you're struggling, what you need to do is worry about you. You don't worry about your opponent."

Some other things to know about the 113-game series that dates back to 1899, and is the most-played for both schools:

FROGS ON THE RIVER BANK

TCU has played twice in Baylor's campus stadium on the banks of the Brazos River. There was that epic 2014 game when Baylor scored 24 points in the final 11 minutes for a 61-58 win that eventually left the Bears and Frogs as Big 12 co-champions — and both out of the initial four-team College Football Playoff.

Harden scores 27 as Rockets rout Warriors 107-86

By KRISTIE RIEKEN

AP Sports Writer

HOUSTON — For a team with championship hopes, it seems a bit silly for the Houston Rockets to be happy about being .500.

But after the way they started the season, the Rockets took a moment to appreciate their recent progress after a rout of Golden State on Thursday night improved them to 7-7.

James Harden scored 27 points in Houston's 107-86 victory in a rematch of last season's Western Conference finals.

The Rockets, who announced before the game that they were "parting ways" with 10-time All-Star Carmelo Anthony, have won three straight and six of their last eight games after starting 1-5 to reach .500 for the first time since they were 1-1.

"I just told them: 'Congratulations, guys. We're .500. That's really good,'" coach Mike D'Antoni said with a laugh.

Then he got serious.

"This is a good step ... it's early but we do have the potential to be really good in different areas of the game and we've just got to keep building on it."

The Warriors, who got Draymond Green back from his suspension but were without Stephen Curry for the fourth straight game, have lost two of their last three. Curry has already been ruled out for Golden State's next two games because of a groin injury.

"We're banged up a little bit physically and right now we're banged up spiritually," Golden State coach Steve Kerr said. "There's no getting around that. So we've got to fill up our cup and get our spirit back, get our energy back and we're going to. It's a long season and this is a tough stretch we're dealing with."

Houston had a 13-point lead after three and opened the fourth quarter with a 12-2 run to make it 88-65 and spur Kerr to call a timeout. The Rockets then scored the first nine points after the timeout, with six from James Ennis, to make it 97-65 midway through the quarter and put the game out of reach. Both teams cleared their benches a couple of minutes after that.

Harden likes the attitude the Rockets have shown in clawing back after their terrible start.

"Our spirit and just the way we're getting after it," Harden said. "We're taking an individual challenge and the team challenge of guarding and offensively we're just sharing the basketball and obviously we're knocking down shots."

Kevin Durant had 20 points for the Warriors on a night they were just 4 of 18 on 3-pointers.

Green had five rebounds and five assists in his return from the one-game ban imposed by the team for a dust-up with Durant in Monday night's overtime loss to the Clippers. Green addressed the situation for the first time after shootaround but did not apologize for his actions in the heated exchange.

He said he and Durant had spoken and that they were "moving forward."

"I think there's no secret that I am an emotional player," he said. "I wear my emotions on my sleeve. I play with that same emotion. Sometimes they get the best of me. And (if) it doesn't work to my favor I'm going to live with that."

Durant was in no mood to discuss their relationship after the game, saying: "Don't ask me about that again," before turning away from the reporter who posed the question.

While the Warriors dealt with the drama between Green and Durant, the Rockets were left to answer questions about the decision to move on from Anthony.

Anthony played just 10 games after signing a one-year, $2.4 million deal during the offseason.

"In the summer we tried to hit a home run and it didn't work out," D'Antoni said. "He tried everything he could. He was great while he was here. It just didn't work out for whatever reason. I just thank him for his professionalism. It was good. He tried everything he could to make it work and it just didn't work out."

The Rockets opened the third quarter with a 7-2 run to stretch the lead to 54-43. Harden scored five straight points to make it 63-47 on his 3-pointer with about 5 1/2 minutes left in the quarter.

Golden State got going after that, using an 8-2 spurt to get within 65-55 a couple of minutes later.

Gary Clark ended the run with a 3-pointer, and two more 3s by him within a minute of each other late in the third extended the lead to 76-59. It was 76-63 headed to the fourth.

TIP-INS

Warriors: Curry was with the Warriors on the trip but it's unclear when he'll return. "We're going to be very, very careful, and obviously he's going to need plenty of court time before he returns," Kerr said. "When I say court time, I mean live action. He hasn't had that."... Kevon Looney scored a season-high 12 points.

Rockets: Gerald Green returned after missing the last two games with a sprained ankle. ... Ennis finished with 19 points and Eric Gordon had 17 off the bench. ... Houston made 16 of 47 3-pointers.

THEY SAID IT

Houston's Chris Paul on the end of Anthony's time with the Rockets: "For Melo it's all about just him being happy. So wherever that is or whatever's next he's going to figure it out."

BAYLOR

TCU won 62-22 there in 2016 and has a 54-52-7 series lead.

FIRST-HALF SUSPENSION

Baylor DE Greg Roberts will miss the first half after he was ejected from the second half of last week's loss at Iowa State for reaching over an official to throw a punch at running back David Montgomery. Bears starting quarterback Charlie Brewer won't have to serve any further penalty after his automatic ejection. He got his second unsportsmanlike conduct penalty in the fourth quarter for saying something to an official — every player had been assessed an unsportsmanlike conduct penalty after the earlier melee.

DIFFERENT FEEL

"Well, I think both of us, probably the rivalry's a little bit downplayed," Patterson said. "It's a lot easier to do that when both teams are winning a lot, and this season both of us we're sitting around .500, so it's a little bit more numb."

RECLAIMING THE BEARS HOME

Baylor went into this season with an eight-game home losing streak. The Bears are 4-1 this year at McLane Stadium, and a win over TCU would give them their best home record since 6-0 in the stadium's inaugural season in 2014.
