George H.W. Bush dies at 94

41st U.S. president made greatest mark in Gulf War

HOUSTON (AP) — He was the man who sought a "kinder, and gentler nation," and the one who sternly invited Americans to read his lips — he would not raise taxes. He was the popular leader of a mighty coalition that dislodged Iraq from Kuwait, and was turned out of the presidency after a single term. Blue-blooded and genteel, he was elected in one of the nastiest campaigns in recent history.

George Herbert Walker Bush was many things, including only the second American to see his son follow him into the nation's highest office. But more than anything else, he was a believer in government service. Few men or women have served America in more capacities than the man known as "Poppy."

"There is no higher honor than to serve free men and women, no greater privilege than to labor in government beneath the Great Seal of the United States and the American flag," he told senior staffers in 1989, days after he took office.

Bush, who died at age 94 — nearly eight months after his wife of 73 years died at their Houston home — was a congressman, an ambassador to the United Nations and envoy to China, chairman of the Republican National Committee, director of the CIA, two-term vice president and, finally, president.

He was no ideologue — he spoke disparagingly of "the vision thing," and derided the supply-side creed of his future boss, Ronald Reagan, as "voodoo economics." He is generally given better marks by historians for his foreign policy achievements than for his domestic record, but assessments of his presidency tend to be tepid.

"Was George Bush only a nice man with good connections, who seldom had to wrest from life the honors it frequently bestowed on him?" journalist Tom Wicker asked in his Bush biography.

Wicker's answer: Perhaps. But he said Bush's actions in Kuwait "reflect moments of courage and vision worthy of his office."

The Persian Gulf War — dubbed "Operation Desert Storm" — was

GBSRC recognized for raising nearly $19,000 for polio eradication

By ROGER CLINE

The Greater Big Spring Rotary Club was honored this month at the organization's District Conference in Lubbock.

"The Greater Big Spring Rotary Club, at the district convention that we had in Lubbock, was recognized as the club that raised the most money in the effort to end polio," said GBSRC President George Bancroft. "I think our total funds were somewhere in the neighborhood of $18,000 to $19,000, which were ultimately matched by the Bill and Melinda Gates Foundation that would have been close to $60,000."

Bancroft said the Greater Big Spring club raised many times more than the next closest club in the district.

"The closest club in the district was under $3,000 in what was raised toward that effort, so we're very proud of that," he said. "It's important to us to set a standard for community service. In addition to that worldwide project, we do a lot of things around town, from providing bicycles for the elementary schools for attendance incentives — that's something that we're very proud of. We'd like to do more of those kinds of projects. We just gave some money to the Interact Club, and made funds available to the Salvation Army for some of their Christmas-time efforts. It's good to be able to go out and raise

BSHS's Hickam receives Excellence Dean's Scholarship from UNT

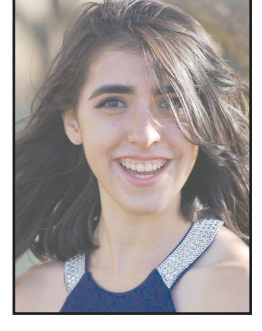

By MARISSA LOFTIN
 Managing Editor

Daughter of Richard and Delma Hickam, Big Spring High School's Dora Hickam has achieved a high accomplishment in her educational career, an accomplishment many do not achieve. Not only is Dora the top student academically in her class of 237 seniors, but she has received a scholarship to the school she desired to attend to show for all of her hard work and dedication through the years.

The University of North Texas (UNT), located in Denton, has made it clear that they are eager for Dora's attendance by awarding her with the UNT Excellence Dean's Scholarship, a general use scholarship based solely off of her excellent academic performance (5.04 GPA on a 6 point scale) totalling at $32,000 over the course of her planned four year stay.

"I have always taken my grades very seriously, and I've worked to never make below an A in any class I took," said Dora.

Dora is particularly interested in forensics and is excited to be a part of UNT's excellent program. She plans on majoring in Science with an emphasis on forensic investigations, as well as accomplishing some additional goals of hers along the way. Though she has participated in many extracurricular activities in her high school career such as band, Green reminisced about the various aspects of his job.

"I just enjoy working with the people here at the courthouse and working with the people that voted me into office. It's been a good ride, so to say," he said, adding that other aspects — such as certifying his greatest mark on history. In a January 2011 interview marking the war's 20th anniversary, he said the mission sent a message that "the United States was willing to use force way across the world, even in that part of the world where those countries over there thought we never would intervene."

"I think it was a signature historical event," he added. "And I think it will always be."

After Iraq invaded Kuwait in August 1990, Bush quickly began building an international military coalition that included other Arab states. After freeing Kuwait, he rejected suggestions that the U.S. carry the offensive to Baghdad, choosing to end the hostilities a mere 100 hours after the start of the ground offensive.

"That wasn't our objective," he said. "The good thing about it is there was so much less loss of human life than had been predicted, and indeed than we might have feared."

But the decisive military defeat did not lead to the regime's downfall, as many in the administration had hoped.

"I miscalculated," Bush acknowledged. The Iraqi leader was eventually ousted in 2003, in the war led by Bush's son that was followed by a long, bloody insurgency.

Unlike his son, who never served in the military, the elder Bush was a bona fide war hero. He joined the Navy on his 18th birthday in 1942 over the objections of his father, Prescott, who wanted him to stay in school. At one point the youngest pilot in the Navy, he flew 58 missions off the carrier USS San Jacinto.

His wartime exploits won him the Distinguished Flying Cross for bravery. He was shot down on Sept. 2, 1944, while completing a bombing run against a Japanese radio tower. Eight others who were shot down in that mission were captured and executed, and several were eaten by their captors. But an American submarine rescued Bush. Even then, he was an inveterate collector of friends: Aboard the sub Finback, "I made friendships that have lasted a lifetime," he would write.

This was a man who hand wrote thousands of thank you notes — each one personalized, each one quickly dispatched. Even his political adversaries would acknowledge his exquisite manners. Admonished by his mother to put others first, he rarely used the personal pronoun "I," a quirk exploited by comedian Dana Carvey in his "Saturday Night Live" impressions of the president.

Bush was born June 12, 1924, in Milton, Massachusetts. His father, the son of an Ohio steel magnate, had moved east to make his fortune as an investment banker with Brown Brothers, Harriman, and later served 10 years as a senator from Connecticut. His mother, Dorothy Walker Bush, was the daughter of a sportsman who gave golf its Walker's Cup.

Competitive athletics were a passion for the Bushes, whether at home in Greenwich, Connecticut, or during long summers spent at Walker's Point, the family's oceanfront retreat in Kennebunkport, Maine. Bush, along with his three brothers and one sister, had lives of privilege seemingly untouched by the Great Depression.

Young Bush attended Greenwich Country Day School and later Phillips Academy at Andover, Massachusetts, where he was senior class president and captain of the baseball and soccer teams. It was there, at a dance, that he met Barbara Pierce, daughter of the publisher of McCall's magazine. George and Bar would marry when he left the Navy in January 1945. They were together for more than seven decades, becoming the longest-married presidential couple in U.S. history. She died on April 17, 2018.

Out of the service, Bush resumed his education at Yale. Lean and 6-foot-2, he distinguished himself as first baseman and captain of the baseball team, which went to the College World Series twice. He took just 2½ years to graduate Phi Beta Kappa.

But rather than joining his father on Wall Street, in 1948 he loaded his wife and young son George W. into the family Studebaker and drove to the hot, dusty Texas oil patch to take a job as an equipment clerk for the International Derrick and Equipment Co.

He did everything from painting oil pumps and selling oilfield equipment to discovering a taste for Lone Star beer and chicken fried steaks. At first, the family lived in Odessa in a two-apartment shotgun house with a shared bathroom; by 1955, they would own a house in Midland, and Bush would be co-owner of the Zapata Petroleum Corp.

By the turn of the decade, the family — and Bush's business — had moved to Houston. There, he got his start in politics, the traditional Bush family business. A handsome and well-spoken war hero, he was sought as a candidate by both parties. He chose the Republicans.

Bush lost his first race, a 1964 challenge to Sen. Ralph Yarborough, but won a seat in the House in 1966. He won re-election in 1968 without opposition. In Congress, he generally supported President Richard Nixon and the war in Vietnam.

In 1970, he tried for the Senate again. Yarborough was upset in the Democratic primary by Lloyd Bentsen, and Bentsen defeated Bush in the general election. Eighteen years later, Bentsen would be the Democratic vice-presidential nominee on the ticket that lost to Bush and his running mate, Dan Quayle.

deaths — are less pleasant. "I guess if there was a negative about it, that would be the negative. You just don't get used to it. I guess the worst part is like small children and people who commit suicide. That's not too pleasant, but that's part of it."

During his 37 years, Green worked for 18 as a sheriff's deputy and patrol sergeant with the Howard County Sheriff's Office, before moving into the JP's seat where he's served for 19 years.

"Back in 1999, China Long was the Justice of the Peace here, in this precinct. She retired, and I just thought it was time to do something different, so I applied for the job," he said. "The commissioners appointed me, and I took office here at this JP's office on May 1, 1999, and I've been here ever since."

Green thanked those who have voted for him over the years.

"Of course, it's an elected position. The people voted me in, and I feel grateful for that," he said. "I've enjoyed it."

Howard County Commissioners have appointed Griffin to step into the JP post being vacated by Green. Griffin has served in the Howard County Attorney Josh Hamby's office for 10 years, before which she worked for Hamby in his private practice.

"I had a few people approach me, telling me this was something they thought I'd be good at," Griffin said. "Then I started giving it a little more thought, and I realized that it would be a step up for me. I'd be learning new stuff and representing the county in a different way, as a judge instead of on the prosecutor's side. It just interests me to do something more for the county and to learn other skills."

Griffin said her job in the County Attorney's office has familiarized her quite well with the scope of the JP position.

"I don't work hand in hand with the JP, I actually work hand in hand with the County Judge," she said. "But I'm very familiar with what the JPs do."

Griffin earned her both her associate's and bachelor's degrees in Criminal Justice through University of Phoenix in Tempe, Ariz. She will start training with Green this week, before attending Judge's School Dec. 10 through 13.

A retirement party for Judge Green has been scheduled for Dec. 14 from 1 to 3 p.m. in the third-floor courtroom at the Howard County Courthouse.

choir, National Honor Society, debate and tennis, Dora looks to participate in some form of music while attending UNT.

"I plan to take courses within the forensics program and graduate with honors from UNT. I am interested in participating in their music program as well," she said. "I was recently informed that I was also accepted into their academic honors program, which will allow me to participate in smaller classes with more one-on-one contact with professors."

Dora's parents, Richard and Delma, are extremely proud of their daughter's accomplishments and are so happy to see all of her hard work in her educational journey bring her to this moment.

"We have been blessed with a daughter who never gave us any trouble over her attendance or grades in school. For some reason, probably due to her early experiences in elementary school, and also due in large part to the influence and guidance of Mrs. Adams and Mrs. Eggleston at Forsan Elementary, she took it upon herself to excel in every subject," said Delma. "We never had to prompt her in her efforts, and rarely were we asked for help. She has achieved wonderful success under her own motivation and integrity. She has done this on her own. She knew we were willing to accept lower grades and did not want her to pressure herself, however, she never wavered in her academic goals. We are so proud to see all of her hard efforts pay off in a way that she did not anticipate."

Dora now prepares herself for a new chapter in her life, and she is very grateful for the ones who have helped her achieve her goals, who have been there for her along the way and have helped shape her into the young woman she is now.

"I have had wonderful teachers during my school career, and I know that I owe many people a big 'thank you' for all they have done in my life. I wouldn't be where I am without their love and support," said Dora. "This year, and especially my two debate teachers Mr. and Mrs. Adams, has truly impacted my life by going above and beyond what teachers are simply required to do. Not only did they teach me lessons in History and English, but they taught me how to break out of my shell and become the more outgoing and joyful person I am today."

Congratulations to you, Dora, on your honorable accomplishments!

The club's fundraising efforts are spearheaded by their annual "Pints for Polio" beer and wine tasting event in downtown Big Spring.

"Pints for Polio is our biggest event," Bancroft said. "It's our most visible event, and it's the one that raises the most funds for the benefit, not only for ending polio, but we use some of those funds locally as well."

The next Pints for Polio is scheduled for March 23.

DAILY PRAYER

When we are troubled, Lord, may we bring our problems to You. Amen.

From preacher to storyteller

I have several friends who help me find interesting people to interview. My go-to person in Seminole is Leo Copeland, who writes stories for the Seminole Sentinel newspaper.

Leo was born on the county line between Pushmataha and McCurtain counties in Oklahoma. He has some Indian blood. "My mother was part Choctaw, my father Cherokee." The family moved to Arizona when Leo was 3 because his mother suffered from TB. "I went barefooted all summer when I was growing up. The bottoms of my feet were like leather. When I got goat heads, I'd just scrape my feet on the ground to get rid of them. Never felt a thing."

Leo had a big brother who excelled in sports. "I didn't play anything. I can't walk and chew gum without stumbling." When he was 15, Leo started picking cotton. "It was hot. One morning it was 101 degrees at 5 o'clock." Leo didn't start deer hunting until he was a teenager. "My daddy said guns were not made to point at people. He wouldn't even allow us to point a cap gun at people."

After graduating from high school, Leo went to Amarillo and enrolled in a bible college. "I wanted to be an elder in the church," he says. Apparently that training took. Leo became a preacher in Seminole and was at the pulpit 42 years. When he retired in 2002, someone at the church told him there was an opening at the paper. He called and made an appointment, asked if they needed a resume. They said no. The editor and publisher interviewed him. "After a while they acted like they were going to hire me and I asked them if I was hired when would I start. The publisher said about 15 minutes."

When asked what he would write about, Leo said he would like to do a series called Echoes From The Past and interview elderly people who moved there. "I started off pretty good. My wife had a beauty shop and I cleaned it up every Friday afternoon. I got acquainted with a lady who was the last customer on Friday to get her hair fixed. I asked her if I could interview her. She said fine, but she didn't think she had anything interesting to say. It turned out she was the first woman sheriff of Gaines County."

Leo has some historic photographs from early residents of Seminole. "Some of them got here in a covered wagon with their flop-eared mules pulling it. I have pictures of ladies in bonnets and long dresses standing beside the wagon."

Leo says he has written more than 500 stories. He wrote a book about the seven cities of gold and is working on another book about bear hunting. When the paper hired him, he told the publisher that he had been a preacher 42 years and would not be able to keep spiritual things out of his writings. The publisher said that was OK. Leo said he could have gone somewhere else after he retired, but decided to stay in Seminole. "It's my home now. I wouldn't live anywhere else." Leo is still active in the church. He is an elder, the position he wanted as a teenager.

TUMBLEWEED SMITH

Geriatric Term Limits?

For more than 15 years, I've attempted to write pieces to elicit smiles—however faint—and/or to inspire. I believe a great majority of them have been "upbeat."

Not so with this one, which may rank "down there" with the Grinch that stole Christmas. "Grinch," of course, is fictional; mine is backed up by cold, hard facts.

Many conversations among retirees in the year 2000 included pro's and con's of long-term care insurance coverage. "After all, we don't want to be burdens on our children," was a comment heard time and again.

My wife and I decided the pro's stacked up taller than the con's, and signed up in 2000 at a premium cost of $422, to be paid each QUARTER. Ever-increasing premiums ruled, and billing was changed to monthly, probably because quarterly payments of $3,000 seemed daunting. I'm not sure it makes much difference, however, since $1,000 (or more) paid monthly seems challenging as well. And that's for the "here and now." Who knows what premiums will be exacted between now and the "sweet by and by"?

Anyway, that's the assessment of Continental Casualty Company, which perhaps provides pertinent "fine print" in the insurance policy. (Over the years, however, my tendency has been to read such "whereases" once over lightly.)

I admit this now, to my sorrow. Numerous letters informing us of "premium adjustments" (never "premium increases") are replete with full assurances that hikes are necessary to cover escalating health care costs. There are many other "blah, blah, blahs," one of which should be in bold face type: "WE RESERVE THE RIGHT TO INCREASE PREMIUMS." One might think the "powers that be" are peering skyward, wondering if the sky really is the limit.

It is with fear and trembling that Continental Casualty Company mailings are opened at our house. Granted, notices of premium increases arrive "60 days prior" to enforcement. So what?

The biggest bombshell came early in 2016. The letter announced a 95% "premium increase" for the upcoming two years.

Particularly stinging was the second-year hike of 70%.

Each letter offers options, one of which I have recently exercised. I terminated my policy, but all is not lost. I still qualify for long-term care coverage as far as the $60,000 I've paid in premiums will take me.

At current rates, this coverage might last for a year or so.

My wife, a decade my junior, will retain her policy, for now, anyway. It is substantially less expensive, but another 95% "bump" in premiums will cause her to join the insurance cancellation list.

With luck, of course, one might do well NOT to worry about long-term care.

Of people who reach age 65, only 40% are expected to enter a care facility. And once there, 44% stay less than one year; 30%, one-to-three years, and 24% more than three years.

As is too often the case, all I know is that I DON'T KNOW.

There are, of course, many folks who are far wiser in the "what-should-we-do" department. A strong suggestion is to contact a financial planning professional. He or she can decipher all the fine print, and convey pertinent information the average person can understand.

Consideration of insurance topics invariably causes me to think of my late parents, who were not introduced to insurance until obtaining basic home and vehicle coverage during the final 40 years of their lives. In the early going, of course, premiums were miniscule.

I also think of late storyteller Bob Murphey, who told about a fellow who signed on for employment with a company providing group health insurance.

Sure enough, the man fell ill, spending several days in the hospital. He smiled, confident that his "group insurance" would cover most of the charges.

He was stunned upon dismissal to learn that the policy covered nothing.

"They claimed the policy pays only if the whole group gets sick," the guy lamented.

This week we have non-fiction, fiction and science fiction:

Through dazzling archival research and interviews with surviving code breakers, Liza Mundy brings to life the vital story of American courage, service, and science in "Code Girls, The Untold Story of the American Women Code Breakers of World War II" (940.54 MUN L).

Recruited from small Southern towns and New England colleges, 10,000 American women served the U.S. Army and Navy as code breakers during World War II. While their brothers and husbands took up arms, these women, under strict vows of secrecy learned the meticulous work of breaking German and Japanese military codes.

Poring over reams of encrypted messages, the women worked tirelessly in makeshift facilities in Washington D.C.; Arlington, Virginia; and Dayton, Ohio. Their code-breaking triumphs shortened the war, saved countless of lives, and gave them access to careers previously denied to them. At the heart of Code Girls is Dot Braden, a feisty Virginia schoolteacher who, in 1943, leapt at the chance to take a mysterious job with the Army at a place called Arlington Hall. With "Code Girls", the children and grandchildren of Dot and those of thousands of other women will finally learn the complete story of their accomplishments.

The collection of twelve short stories in "What It Means When a Man Falls from the Sky" by Lesley Nneka Arimah (F ARI L) explores the ties that bind us- parents and children, wives and husbands, lovers and friends- to one another and to places we call home.

A woman desperate for a child weaves one out of hair, with unsettling results in "Who Will Greet You at Home." A disastrous night out shifts an American teenager and her Nigerian cousin onto uneasy common ground in "Wild." With his wife overseas and growing more remote by the day, a father struggles to protect and empower the daughter he loves in "Light." And in a world ravaged by flood and riven by class, experts have discovered how to "fix the equation of a person"- with rippling, unforeseen repercussions in "What it Means When a Man Falls from the Sky."

"Varina" by Charles Frazier (F FRA C) is a portrait of a woman who comes to realize that complicity carries consequences. Her marriage prospects limited, teenage Varina Howell agrees to wed the much older widower Jefferson Davis, expecting the secure life of a Mississippi landowner.

Davis instead pursues a career in politics and is eventually appointed president of the Confederacy, placing Varina at the center of one of the darkest moments in history. The Confederacy falling, her marriage in tatters, and the country divided, Varina and her children escape Richmond, Virginia, and travel south on their own. Intimate it its detailed observations of one's woman's tragic life, and epic in its scope and power, "Varina" is a novel of an American war and its aftermath.

"Summerland" by Hannu Rajaniemi (SF RAJ H) is an account of the afterlife and what happens when it spills over into the world of the living. In 1938, death is no longer feared but exploited. Loss is a thing of the past. Murder is obsolete. Death is just the beginning. Since the discovery of the afterlife, the British Empire has extended its reach into Summerland, a metropolis for the recently deceased.

Yet, Britain isn't the only contender for power in this life and the next. The Soviets have spies in Summerland, and the technology to build their own god. When SIS agent Rachel White gets a lead on one of the Soviet moles, blowing the whistle puts her hard-earned career at risk. The spy has friends in high places, and she will have to go rogue to bring him in. But how do you catch a spy who's already dead?

Ambitious and charming-part quest novel, part love story, and stuffed with nostalgia, "Ready Player One" by Ernest Cline (SF CLI E) is a virtual space opera. It's the year 2044, and the real world is an ugly space. Like many, Wade Watts escapes his grim surroundings by spending hours jacked into the OASIS- a virtual utopia that lets you be anything you want to be, a place where you can live, play and fall in love on any of ten thousand planets.

Somewhere inside OASIS creator James Halliday hid a series of puzzles that will yield massive fortune and power to whoever can unlock them. Like most of humanity, Wade dreams of being the one to discover the ultimate lottery ticket. Halliday's riddles are based in the pop culture he loved- that of the late twentieth century. Wade likes playing Pac-Man, or reciting Devo lyrics as he scrounges power to run his OASIS rig. For years, millions have struggled fruitlessly to solve the puzzles and have used this quest as another means of escape, retreating into happy, obsessive study of Halliday's icons. Then Wade stumbles upon the first puzzle.

Suddenly the whole world is watching and thousands of competitors join the hunt- among them certain powerful players who are willing to commit very real murder to beat Wade to this prize. Now the only way for Wade to survive and preserve everything he knows is to win. But to do so, he may have to leave behind his perfect virtual existence and face up to life and the real world he's always been so desperate to escape.

Come by the library to check out any of these books and to take advantage of the Fine Amnesty. According to an online Reader's Digest article, "Crazy Stories of Overdue Library Books That were Finally Returned" by Meghan Jones, George Washington borrowed "The Law of Nations" from the New York Society Library and did not return it for the rest of his life, his estate returned the overdue book 221 years later in 2010!

ATF: Texas apartment fire that killed 5 intentionally set

SAN MARCOS, Texas (AP) — Authorities in Texas say an apartment fire that killed five people last summer was intentionally set.

Fred Milanowski, special agent in charge for the federal Bureau of Alcohol, Tobacco, Firearms and Explosives, said during a news conference Friday that a criminal investigation into the July 20 blaze is underway.

He says investigators know how the fire at Iconic Village apartments and the Vintage Pads apartments in San Marcos was started and where, but won't reveal those details.

A $10,000 reward is being offered for information leading to an arrest.

The fire occurred near Texas State University and four of the five killed were current or former students there, ranging in age from 19 to 23.

About 200 people were displaced.

San Marcos is 31 miles (50 kilometers) south of Austin.

Texas sues San Antonio police under sanctuary cities law

By NOMAAN MERCHANT

Associated Press
HOUSTON — Texas' attorney general sued the San Antonio police chief Friday for what he said are violations of the state's immigration law targeting "sanctuary cities" and sought millions of dollars in sanctions.

The lawsuit Ken Paxton filed in state court was a rare enforcement action of Senate Bill 4, approved last year and mostly upheld by a federal appeals court.

SB4 prohibited law enforcement agencies from refusing "detainer" requests from U.S. Immigration and Customs Enforcement, doing anything to stop an officer from asking about a suspect's immigration status or cooperating with immigration authorities.

Several big-city police chiefs staunchly opposed SB4, including William McManus, San Antonio's police chief.

Paxton's lawsuit accused McManus of improperly handling a human smuggling case in

White officer indicted for murder in killing of black man

This file photo provided by the Kaufman County Sheriff's Office shows Amber Guyger. The former Dallas police officer has been indicted on a murder charge in the killing of her black unarmed neighbor in his own apartment, a residence she says she mistook for her own.

DALLAS (AP) — A grand jury on Friday indicted a white former Dallas police officer for murder in the shooting of her unarmed black neighbor after she says she mistakenly went to his apartment rather than her own and opened fire when he appeared in the darkness.

Dallas County District Attorney Faith Johnson announced the indictment of Amber Guyger flanked by members of the family of victim Botham Jean, a native of the Caribbean island nation of St. Lucia who attended college in Arkansas and had been working in Dallas for accounting and consulting firm PwC.

"I truly believe that she inflicted tremendous evil on my son," Jean's mother Allison said after the announcement. "He didn't deserve it. He was seated in his own apartment."

Guyger was arrested on a manslaughter charge three days after the Sept. 6 shooting of the 26-year-old Jean, prompting criticism that the original charge was too lenient.

US to keep about 4,000 troops at border through January

By LOLITA C. BALDOR

Associated Press

WASHINGTON — The number of U.S. active duty troops at the southern border will drop from 5,600 to about 4,000, and their deployment will be extended through the end of January, under a new request from Homeland Security, U.S. officials said Friday.

Defense Secretary Jim Mattis is traveling and has not yet approved the DHS troop proposal. But military officials have been working with the agency on the request and it is expected to get approval.

President Donald Trump ordered the unusual deployment of active-duty troops to the border in response to a caravan of Central American migrants slowly north toward the U.S. Critics dismissed the deployment as a political stunt ahead of the midterm elections.

Most of the troops have been deployed in Texas, far from where the migrants eventually arrived in Tijuana, along the southern border with California. Soldiers have strung vast amounts of concertina wire and transported Border Patrol agents but have not been engaged in any law enforcement activities, which would be prohibited under U.S. law.

The initial deployment was scheduled to end Dec. 15, but Mattis and other officials had said it could be extended. The new order extends it for 45 days while allowing about 1,600 troops to return home.

U.S. officials described the new request on condition of anonymity to discuss internal deliberations that had not yet been approved.

Official said Friday that the troops staying at the border will provide support and protection for border patrol agents and continue to put up and repair wire barriers. In addition, more troops are expected to shift from Texas and Arizona to California.

As of Friday, 2,400 troops were deployed in Texas, 1,800 in California and 1,400 in Arizona.

According to officials, the troops staying at the border would include combat engineers who can install and repair the concertina wire barriers, helicopter crews to provide transportation, military police to protect U.S. forces and border patrol, and other service members to provide ongoing food, shelter and other support for the troops.

As of last week, the cost of using troops to help secure the border was estimated at $210 million, but this extension is likely to increase that figure.

That total included $72 million for approximately 5,900 active-duty troops providing support to Customs and Border Protection, plus $138 million so far for 2,100 National Guard troops who have been performing a separate border mission since April, according to a report sent to Congress early last week.

Back-to-back earthquakes shatter roads and windows in Alaska

A car is trapped on a collapsed section of the offramp of Minnesota Drive in Anchorage, Friday, Nov. 30, 2018.

By RACHEL D'ORO
and DAN JOLING

Associated Press

ANCHORAGE, Alaska — Back-to-back earthquakes measuring 7.0 and 5.7 rocked buildings and shattered roads Friday morning in Anchorage, sending people running into the streets and briefly triggering a warning to residents in Kodiak to flee to higher ground for fear of a tsunami.

The warning was lifted without incident a short time later. There were no immediate reports of any deaths or serious injuries.

The U.S. Geological Survey said the first and more powerful quake was centered about 7 miles (12 kilometers) north of Anchorage, Alaska's largest city, with a population of about 300,000. People ran from their offices or took cover under desks.

A large section of road near the Anchorage airport collapsed, marooning a car on a narrow island of pavement surrounded by deep chasms in the concrete.

Several cars crashed at a major intersection in Wasilla, north of Anchorage, during the shaking.

Anchorage Police Chief Justin Doll said he had been told that parts of the Glenn Highway, a scenic route that runs northeast out of the city past farms, mountains and glaciers, had "completely disappeared."

The quake broke store windows, opened cracks in a two-story building downtown, disrupted electrical service and disabled traffic lights, snarling traffic. It also threw a full-grown man out of his bathtub.

All flights were halted at the airport after the quake knocked out telephones and forced the evacuation of the control tower, and the 800-mile Alaska oil pipeline was shut down while crews were sent to inspect it for damage.

Anchorage's school system canceled classes and asked parents to pick up their children while it examined buildings for gas leaks or other damage.

Jonathan Lettow was waiting with his 5-year-old daughter and other children for the school bus near their home in Wasilla when the quake struck. The children got on the ground while Lettow tried to keep them calm.

"It's one of those things where in your head, you think, 'OK, it's going to stop,' and you say that to yourself so many times in your head that finally you think, 'OK, maybe this isn't going to stop,'" he said.

Soon after the shaking stopped, the school bus pulled up and the children boarded, but the driver stopped at a bridge and refused to go across because of deep cracks in the road, Lettow said.

Former Alaska Gov. Sarah Palin tweeted that her home was damaged: "Our family is intact — house is not. I imagine that's the case for many, many others."

Officials opened an Anchorage convention center as an emergency shelter. Gov. Bill Walker issued a disaster declaration.

Cereal boxes and packages of batteries littered the floor of a grocery store, and picture frames and mirrors were knocked from living room walls.

People went back inside after the first earthquake struck, but the 5.7 aftershock about five minutes later sent them running back into the streets. A series of smaller aftershocks followed.

A tsunami warning was issued along Alaska's southern coast. Police in Kodiak, a city of 6,100 people on Kodiak Island, 250 miles (400 kilometers) south of Anchorage, warned residents to evacuate to higher ground immediately because a wave could hit within about 10 minutes.

OFFICER

But Johnson said at the time that the grand jury could upgrade the charges, which it did Friday.

"When you look at the facts of this case, we thought that it was murder all along," Johnson said.

Guyger told investigators that after finishing her shift, she returned home in uniform and parked on the fourth floor of her apartment complex's garage, rather than the third floor, where her unit was located, according to an affidavit prepared by the Texas Rangers. She said she got to what she thought was her apartment — Jean's was directly above hers — and found the door ajar. She opened it to find a figure standing in the darkness. She said she pulled her gun and fired twice after the person ignored her commands.

Guyger has since been fired from the department and Jean's family has filed a lawsuit against Guyger and the city of Dallas. The federal suit argues Guyger used excessive force in the shooting and contends the department did not give her adequate training.

The circumstances of the shooting sparked outrage and led many to question Guyger's account of what happened. Critics, including Jean's family, also wondered why it took three days for Guyger to be charged, why she wasn't taken into custody immediately after the shooting and whether race played a factor in her decision to use deadly force.

Jean's killing thrust Dallas into the national conversation on the intersection of race and law enforcement, a dialogue revived by the high-profile trials of officers charged with murder in police shootings.

In October, white Chicago officer Jason Van Dyke was found guilty of second-degree murder in the 2014 on-duty shooting of black teenager Laquan McDonald. Van Dyke shot McDonald 16 times.

And in August, white former Dallas-area officer Roy Oliver was convicted of murder after firing into a car filled with black teenagers leaving a house party in 2017 and fatally shooting 15-year-old Jordan Edwards.

December 2017 in which 12 immigrants were found inside a tractor-trailer.

ICE typically prosecutes major cases of human smuggling, which occur frequently in South Texas due to the proximity of the U.S.-Mexico border. But in this case, McManus repeatedly declined the help of an ICE officer, instead having the driver charged with a state crime and releasing the migrants to Catholic Charities.

He also contacted the legal group RAICES, which worked with the migrants to obtain visas for witnesses of crimes who cooperate with law enforcement.

That infuriated top Texas Republicans who supported SB4. Paxton, who is himself under indictment for securities fraud, accused San Antonio of having "put the safety of police officers and the public at risk by defying state law."

The city responded Friday with a statement accusing Paxton of "furthering a political agenda."

San Antonio changed how it deals with human smuggling cases after a July 2017 incident in which 10 people died after riding inside a packed trailer that made it through a U.S. Customs and Border Protection checkpoint. More than 20 migrants were detained as material witnesses. Some were ultimately deported.

Police policy now says that officers "will not refer" migrants to ICE unless the person has a federal deportation warrant, and that the department along with other groups will assist victims and witnesses with getting visas.

Paxton's lawsuit asks a judge to prohibit San Antonio from enforcing that policy of committing "future violations of SB4." It also demands civil penalties of at least $25,500 a day for every day after Sept. 1, 2017, when the city policy took effect. That alone would surpass $11.5 million, and the lawsuit also demands other civil penalties.

City spokesman Jeff Coyle said federal officials had been consulted on its process for handling human smuggling cases.

"The City has a long history of cooperating with federal authorities and we will continue to do so," Coyle said.

An ICE spokeswoman declined comment Friday.

Richardson leads Buffs to last second win over Pecos

By JORDAN PARR
Sports Editor

BIG SPRING - In the first quarter of the Buffs matchup with Pecos Friday night at Dorothy Garrett Coliseum, Forsan jumped out to an early lead behind Kobe Richardson's huge offensive out put and with great team defense. Richardson kept the pressure on the Eagle's defense and got the Buffs in a great position with a 22-13 lead heading into the second quarter.

In the second, Richardson got into foul trouble early and had to come out of the game. With Richardson on the bench the Buffs struggled from the field offensively and the Eagles took advantage and made a big run to take a two point lead heading into halftime 37-35.

Coming out after the half both teams offenses started clicking and the game became a fast paced and forth scoring affair. Richardson was on fire all night shooting 7-11 from the field and 6-9 from down town. The scoring for Pecos was more spread out as they got most of their points in the paint against the undersized Forsan front-court. With both teams finding their range and their rhythm neither team was able to really take control of the game in the third and headed into the final quarter with Pecos leading the Buffs 54-50.

Buffs guard Kobe Richardson elevates and sinks a jumper for 2 of his 38 points to lead the Buffs to a last second 68-66 victory over the Pecos Eagles Friday Night at Dorothy Garrett Coliseum.

In the final quarter coach Richardson did a great job of coaching and keeping the his kids fresh and the Buffs defense responded holding the Eagles to just 12 points in the final period. That great team defense allowed for Kobe to take advantage and get the team into better transition scoring opportunities. Still trailing by three with just 35 seconds left in the game Richardson came off a screen in the corner and hit his sixth three of the game to tie the game at 66-66 with just 33 ticks left on the clock.

On the ensuing possession by Pecos Richardson got possession by Pecos and picked up his fifth and final foul. But that didn't deter the Buffs who got a great stop and a rebound by Jordan Enriques. Enriques was fouled and sent to the line where he missed both free throws leaving the game tied at 66 all with just 29 seconds left. But just like they had all quarter the Buffs' defense stepped up big and got another stop. Coming out of a timeout the Buffs knew they had just one more chance to get a basket with just seconds remaining in the game. As the clock was winding down Dylan Smith drove the lane and dished the ball to Cayden Morgan who was cutting toward the low block. Morgan handled the pass and put up a heavily contested shot that went off the glass and in to give the Buffs a 68-66 lead with just 4 seconds left in the game. The Eagles inbounded the ball after they took a time out but the Forsan defense didn't allow them to get past half court and the Eagles were forced to chuck a desperation shot that was never even close as time expired. The outstanding team defense of an undersized team really got the job done late for the Buffs in this nail biter and they will need it as they continue forward this season.

Richardson played lights out and led all scorers in the game, he finished with 38 points, 6 rebound, 4 assists and 4 steals in the game while shooting 63% from the field and an unbelievable 66% behind the arc. No one else on the Buffs scored in double digits but that doesn't really tell the story of how well they all played on the defensive side of the ball as well as how unselfishly they are willing to play on offense to help create opportunities for their scorer. The win was a total team win with ever player playing their role and getting the job done.

BIG SPRING - In the first quarter neither team could get anything going offensively and both teams really struggled shooting the ball in the big Coliseum. As the opening period went on it was evident that both teams were trying to force the ball inside after having so little success shooting the ball to start the game. The first quarter ended with the Lady Buffs holding onto a narrow 7-6 lead in the low scoring affair.

In the second quarter Forsan found their range but continued to play really tough defense in their zone press forcing multiple turnovers and getting easy transition baskets. With the Evans sisters, Rylee and Macey, running the offense and playing great on and off the ball defense the Buffs really started to separate from the Eagles and dominate the game as they approached the half. Both teams were still struggling to have any success shooting the ball outside but the transition offense of the Lady Buffs put them ahead 26-10 going into half time.

Coming out at the half the Lady Buffs finally found their range and started to light up the scoreboard from behind the arc. With R. Evans using her ball handling and quickness to penetrate the Lady Eagles defense and either take it to the rim or kick it out to her shooters they Lady Buffs started to make a run. Then M. Evans, who had been really struggling from range, found her shot and started to rain on Pecos from deep making 4 or her last seven attempts from deep.

M. Evans was also a force to be reckoned with on defense collecting 7 steals and 1 block. With the Evans sisters getting the offense on track and Mikahaela Willard and Emily Garcia playing great defense and setting great picks on to get their guards good looks the Lady Buffs extended their lead to 44-14 heading into the fourth quarter.

In the fourth, Katelin Colvin took over where the Evans sisters left off and started draining shots from behind the arc going 4 for 6 and extending the Lady Buffs lead to 30 points. With the game completely out of reach for the Eagles the Lady Buffs showed class and slowed down the pace and got everyone in the game and put the game away at 64-30.

M. Evans led all scorers with 18 points on 3-7 from the field and 4-11 from the three point line. She also added six steals and three offensive rebounds in the game. R. Evans played an outstanding game at the point, scoring 10 points on 4-8 from the field while collecting an impressive 6 offensive rebounds and four assists. She also contributed three steals on the defensive side of the ball. Colvin shot the ball great from deep scoring 14 points on 1-2 from the field and 4-6 from deep. Colvin also had two rebounds in the game. Emily Garcia played really well down low despite only scoring 4 points. Garcia set great screens and played great position basketball all game for the Lady Buffs on offense while collecting an impressive 5 offensive rebounds to add to her team leading 8 boards. Garcia also had three big steals in the game. Madison Smith added five points but more importantly she added four more offensive rebounds. The Lady Buffs second chance opportunities because of their hustle on the offensive boards is a testament to their effort and to their coach. If these ladies continue to rebound the ball the way they did Friday night they will have a lot of success moving forward.

Cowboys have reason to think big after ending Saints' streak

AP photo

Dallas Cowboys players celebrate their win over the New Orleans Saints in an NFL football game in Arlington, Texas, Thursday, Nov. 29, 2018. Dallas won 13-10.

By SCHUYLER DIXON

AP Pro Football Writer

ARLINGTON, Texas — Leighton Vander Esch howled through the open retractable roof after a booming tackle on a huge third-down stop negated by a potentially crushing roughing-the-punter penalty.

Jourdan Lewis answered an ominous fumble by quarterback Dak Prescott that gave Drew Brees another chance by intercepting the MVP contender, putting the Dallas Cowboys in position to finish off a victory that stopped New Orleans' 10-game winning streak.

When owner and general manager Jerry Jones talked of the season changing in a 13-10 win over the NFC's hottest team Thursday, he had the rookie linebacker whose nickname is "Wolf Hunter" and a confident backup second-year cornerback in mind.

That's just to name a couple of players on a team that might now dare to think an NFC East title is just the beginning. The Cowboys (7-5) will have another important game in pursuit of that division crown Dec. 9 against Philadelphia, the last of three straight home games.

"When you win a game like this, it changes you," Jones said after Dallas' fourth straight victory guaranteed at least a share of the division lead and the inside track to a home wild-card playoff game going into the final quarter of the season.

"This is a young, impressive bunch. And so they know now that they can go out there and play our game and play it in a way to beat an offensive machine. I just am so proud for them because they are not going to be the same kids that looked in the mirror this morning."

The defense kept the Cowboys in games, and ultimately in the play-off hunt, while the offense mostly struggled through the first half of the season.

While the score against the Saints indicated a similar formula, Prescott had 194 yards passing at halftime and finished 24 of 28 without an interception. The third-year pro led a nearly seven-minute drive in the fourth quarter before his fumble with the Cowboys in position for a field goal.

The Cowboys held the ball for more than 21 minutes in the first half and had 100 yards rushing against the NFL's No. 1 run defense. Making Brees a spectator fit the signature of the Dallas offense, and the same objective will be in play when Carson Wentz visits.

"We didn't make enough plays on offense," Prescott said. "We left plays out there. But when we have the defense that we have versus an offense like that, how can you not be confident?"

Vander Esch shared credit for the tackle with Daniel Ross when Mark Ingram was dropped for a 1-yard loss on third-and-2 late in the third quarter. But Randy Gregory ran into punter Thomas Morstead, and Brees threw his only touchdown pass two plays later.

The Cowboys forced a punt on the next New Orleans possession, and Brees didn't get another chance after Lewis' interception with 2:08 remaining.

"The battle is won, but the war has just begun," said defensive end DeMarcus Lawrence, who forced two fumbles by Brees on sacks but only got credit for one because of an off-side penalty. "The rest of the league sees how we are playing football and they will want a piece of us. We have to stay focused and get to work every week."

Dallas doesn't have off-the-charts numbers on defense, but the most impressive one just got better. The NFL's third-best scoring defense held the league's highest-scoring offense 27 points under that average. The Saints had their fewest yards by nearly 100.

The Cowboys' season was on the brink less than a month ago at 3-5. Now it would be hard to find a more confident team.

"We have a lot of talent, a lot of young talent, a lot of great players with very bright futures," said 23-year-old NFL rushing leader Ezekiel Elliott. "But we're 100 percent not in a place where we can get comfortable. Division up for grabs. We've just to make sure we finish this season off the right way."

NOTES: Coach Jason Garrett said WR Cole Beasley sprained a foot against the Saints, but said the team is hopeful the injury won't be long term.

... Garrett said he was optimistic LT Tyron Smith would play against the Eagles after missing two games with a neck issue.

Rockets trounce Spurs 136-105 to snap four-game skid

Houston Rockets' Chris Paul (3) looks to pass the ball as San Antonio Spurs' Davis Bertans (42) and Jakob Poeltl defend during the first half of an NBA basketball game Friday, Nov. 30, 2018, in San Antonio.

By RAUL DOMINGUEZ

Associated Press

SAN ANTONIO — The Houston Rockets are starting to feel whole, and they demonstrated that by taking apart the San Antonio Spurs.

Clint Capela had 27 points and 12 rebounds, James Harden had 23 points and 10 assists and Houston handed San Antonio its second straight lopsided defeat, 136-105 on Friday night.

Chris Paul added 14 points and 10 assists as Houston was able to sit its starters for most of the fourth quarter while holding a 110-74 lead after the third. Paul returned after a three-game absence and Gerald Green played after missing two straight.

"We're a confident group that when we have all of our players and we've got a healthy roster we can compete with anybody in the league," Harden said.

The Rockets entered the game on a four-game skid, but the Spurs were the troubled team. Two nights after a 39-point loss in Minnesota, San Antonio actually fared worse against Houston.

"It sucks to go out there and get embarrassed like that (back to back)," said Spurs guard DeMar DeRozan, who had 18 points.

San Antonio suffered its second-largest home loss in franchise history and fell two games below .500 (10-12) for the first time since Nov. 20, 2009, when it was 4-6.

The Spurs have allowed 135-plus points four times this season, the most in the league. San Antonio entered the season having allowed 135 points in just two games in 22 previous seasons under coach Gregg Popovich.

"We're obviously discombobulated on offense," Popovich said. "A lot of that has to do with me, so I've got to do a better job there. I think defensively we've obviously got to shore up our effort and our wisdom at that end of the court. We've got a lot of work to do."

The Spurs allowed their biggest point total in a half this season and matched the most they have allowed in the third quarter.

Houston scored 70 points in the first half. Harden set the mark by driving the lane untouched with 3.7 seconds left for a layup.

The Rockets added 40 points in the third quarter. Houston finished 22 for 54 on 3-pointers.

The Rockets went on an 18-4 run beginning midway through the first quarter and raced to a 31-15 lead.

"We talked on defense a lot better and we pushed the tempo," Paul said. "Like I've always said, when I'm out, we're a different team. When James is out, when Eric (Gordon) is out, when any of us is out, we're a different team. Tonight, I think we got a chance to alleviate a little bit of pressure from one another."

TIP-INS

Houston Rockets' James Harden (13) scores on San Antonio Spurs' DeMar DeRozan during the first half of an NBA basketball game Friday, Nov. 30, 2018, in San Antonio.

Rockets: Houston is 9-6 after opening the season 1-5. ... Houston's 70 points in the first half tied its second most in any half. The Rockets scored 76 against Indiana on Nov. 11 and 70 against Detroit on Nov. 21. ... Paul has missed five games this season, all of which Houston lost. ... James Ennis was assessed a technical foul after screaming at an official after he was whistled for a pushing foul with 7:38 remaining in the third quarter.

Spurs: DeRozan is the first San Antonio player to score in double figures in each of his first 22 games since David Robinson did so as a rookie in 1989. ... The most points the Spurs previously allowed in the first half was 68 to New Orleans on Nov. 3. ... Only Roger Mason Jr., Richard Jefferson and Manu Ginobili have made more 3-pointers after 22 games than Bryn Forbes, who has 50. ... Marco Belinelli has 245 3-pointers for the Spurs, the most he has made for any of the nine teams he has played for.

STAYING TOGETHER

DeRozan was asked if the team could stick together following consecutive blowout losses.

"No question, no question," DeRozan said. "I think our frustration defensively just comes from losing the way we did, but not in no way, shape or form is it going to break us."

NO COMMENT

Houston coach Mike D'Antoni joked that Capela would likely not want to talk after he exited the game in the third quarter with 12 rebounds when his career high of 25 was attainable.

"Oh really, he said that," Capela said. "No, he didn't say that. He didn't say that. He didn't say that. He did (laughing)? That's OK. Good win. We got the chance to let everybody play and get ready for tomorrow night."

Herald's Holiday Basket Giveaway

By AMBER MANSFIELD

Staff Writer
"We make a living by what we get, and we make a life by what we give." - Winston Churchill

It's the most wonderful time of the year, except for some people, it may not be as merry as some. You see, we all take so many things for granted in life, especially around the holidays. We can forget that not everyone has the same benefits as others. That is why it is important for this holiday season to give back, and that's what the Big Spring Herald did with the help of several local businesses in town. The Herald hosted, for the second year, a Holiday Basket Give-a-way to local families who are in need of a good holiday meal.

The way it works is, the Herald offers sections in the paper, like an ad, for local stores and places of business to purchase. The money made goes into making these holiday gift baskets for Thanksgiving and Christmas.

"This is our second year to do the Herald Holiday Baskets. We just delivered our Thanksgiving baskets and were able to help out and give 12 different families their own Thanksgiving meal, dessert and all," said Brienne Miller, Advertisement Executive of the Big Spring Herald. "We wanted to do something extra for the community and those who are in need. It's important during this season to put smiles on peoples faces, because no one deserves to be unhappy during the holidays." The holidays are a time of family, good food, thanksgiving, celebration and giving. As the saying goes, it is better to give than to receive.

Miller stated that she recruited Dolline Budke, an insert for the Herald, to help in choosing those 12 families.

"We don't actually choose who the families are that receive that holiday baskets, but we ask a different local churches to reach out and see who needs them the most. Budke goes to Alive in Christ Church and asked her church to help out. They provided us with the family names, in which Budke also delivered the baskets to those families on Nov. 18th through the 20th.

In December, there will be 12 different families chosen for the Christmas baskets," Miller stated. Also according to Miller, next year the Herald will do the Holiday Baskets again, and that the more people and businesses who buy an ad, the more families they will be able to help.

"Our goal for next year is to make the Herald Holiday giveaway basket section even bigger and to continue this tradition in helping out our local neighbors during times that are meant for festiveness."

For more information on how you can contribute to the holiday gift baskets, please call Brie Miller at the Big Spring Herald at 432-263-7331.

Amber's Appetite

Holidays and get-togethers are a wonderful time to explore new and exciting drink recipes. Beer can get boring, so why not spruce up your beer by turning it into a beerita?

What's a beerita you may find yourself asking? A beerita is exactly what it sounds like: a cross between a traditional margarita and a beer. How awesome is that?

However, since margaritas are a traditional Mexican beverage, it's generally recommended that you use an authentic Mexican beer, such as a Dos Equis, when making your own beerita. Try this one down at Lumbre's Bar and Grill.

Sprucing up NYC: Rockefeller Center lights Christmas tree

NEW YORK (AP) — A massive Norway spruce has been lit up in a tradition that ushers in Christmastime in New York City.

Mayor Bill de Blasio flipped the switch Wednesday night to light the Rockefeller Center Christmas Tree following a televised extravaganza that featured performances by Diana Ross and Tony Bennett.

The 72-foot-tall tree is decorated with 5 miles (8 kilometers) of multicolored LED lights and a 900-pound Swarovski crystal star. Rockefeller Center has hosted the ceremony since 1931.

Police officers were plentiful, and spectators were funneled through security.

The 75-year-old tree was donated by a couple in Wallkill, 60 miles (100 kilometers) north of the city.

It will remain on display until Jan. 7. Then it will be given to Habitat for Humanity to help build homes.

Roger's Reviews: Creed II

Thursday night, I went and saw "Rocky VIII" at the good old Cinemark Cinema 4. Well, at least – for better or worse – that's what it felt like.

The eighth film in the Rocky/Creed franchise is actually entitled "Creed II," but it certainly feels like a Rocky movie. I mean, it feels EXACTLY like a Rocky movie.

As you'll no doubt recall, Rocky Balboa (Sylvester Stallone) trains Adonis Creed (Michael B. Jordan), the former Adonis Johnson who took the name of his father, Rocky's first big-name opponent and eventual trainer and friend Apollo Creed (played by Carl Weathers in "Rocky," "Rocky II," "Rocky III," and "Rocky IV"), in "Creed" (aka "Rocky VII"). Adonis wins the WBC Heavyweight Boxing Championship. Shortly thereafter he proposes to hearing-impaired girlfriend Bianca (Tessa Thompson) and she accepts. She urges him to move to Los Angeles to help her further her music career.

Meanwhile, we see scenes of "Rocky IV"'s Russian bad guy Ivan Drago (Dolph Lundgren) training his son Viktor (Florian "Big Nasty" Munteanu) in the harsh Russian winter. After the fight, Ivan and Viktor meet with boxing promoter Buddy Marcelle (Russell Hornsby).

Adonis and Bianca are having dinner at a restaurant after her show when they see news of Viktor's challenge – the son of the man who killed his Adonis' father in the ring has challenged him for his newly won championship belt.

So there's the usual back-and-forth debate over whether Adonis should accept the challenge. Bianca discovers she's pregnant. She's worried about the baby inheriting her hearing disability, and about Adonis being seriously injured (or worse) in the ring. Rocky is plagued with doubt about his role in Apollo's death ("Rocky IV") in that he didn't throw in the towel to stop the fight.

Adonis decides to fight and he goes to talk to Rocky, who refuses to train him hoping he'll back out. Needless to say, that doesn't happen.

Adonis and Bianca move to Los Angeles. Worried about what his stepmother Mary Anne Creed (Phylicia Rashad) will think about the challenge, Adonis and Bianca pay her a visit. She's evidently made her peace with the boxing lifestyle and knows that her objections won't stop the fight from going on.

I'll stop the narration there.

Other actors to watch for include Wood Harris as Tony "Little Duke" Evers, son of Apollo's trainer from the early Rocky movies, who agrees to train Adonis for his fight against Viktor; Brigitte Nielsen as Ludmilla Drago, Ivan's now-ex-wife who left him following his humiliation at the defeat by Rocky; and Milo Ventimiglia as Robert Balboa, Rocky's son, introduced in "Rocky Balboa" (aka "Rocky VI"), who now lives in Vancouver.

What can I say? I'm a sucker for a Rocky movie. These movies have always had good, if (other than the original) highly formulaic conflict and action. "Creed II" adds highly competent acting and a heaping helping of nostalgia. It's a great, exciting film with a lot of touching moments and Easter eggs for fans of the franchise. I had a great time.

One thing that was a little annoying – and really the only thing I can downgrade the movie on – is that there is absolutely nothing new here. Everything's been done before in a previous Rocky movie. Trainer refuses to train the boxer over fears of what might happen in the ring? Check. Boxer gets married and has a baby? Check. Boxer trains to fight a huge Russian dude he can't possibly beat in a primitive, harsh environment? Check. Boxer (spoilers/not spoilers) somehow manages to beat that huge Russian dude? Check. We see a panoply of hopes and fears play out over boxer's wife's face as she sits in the audience and wears a cute little hat? Check.

Of course, along with the original "Creed," this is presumably the "passing the torch to a new generation" movie and so the parallels it draws are intentional to provide continuity during this time of transition, but dang, they're obvious.

As I said, I had a good time with the movie and the nostalgia. I just wish there had been the slightest hint of originality. Eight stars out of 10.

Creed II

AP photo

This handout made available by the Van Gogh Museum, Amsterdam, on Thursday Nov. 29, 2018, shows an image of 15 year old Theo van Gogh, originally thought to be of his brother Vincent van Gogh. One of only two known photos of Vincent van Gogh turns out to most likely be an image of his brother, Theo, the Van Gogh Museum announced Thursday.

THE HAGUE, Netherlands (AP) — One of only two known photos of painter Vincent van Gogh turns out to most likely be an image of his brother, Theo, the Van Gogh Museum announced Thursday.

Forensic testing by experts at Amsterdam University "confirmed the high likelihood of the boy in the photograph being the 15-year-old Theo van Gogh, and not Vincent," the Amsterdam museum said.

The museum says there is now only one known photographic portrait of the camera-shy Dutch artist, taken when he was 19. Both photos are in the museum's collection.

The photo now thought to be of Theo was first publicly presented in 1957 by researcher Mark Edo Tralbaut. A Dutch television program called into question whether it was indeed of Vincent in 2014, prompting further research.

"This discovery means that we have rid ourselves of an illusion while gaining a portrait of Theo," said Van Gogh Museum Director Axel Rueger. "We have essentially returned to the situation as it always was up to the mistaken identification in 1957, with a single photographic portrait of the young, 19-year-old Vincent van Gogh."

Nelson, Henley to honor Parton at Grammy MusiCares concert

LOS ANGELES (AP) — Willie Nelson, Vince Gill, Don Henley and Mavis Staples will perform in tribute to Dolly Parton when she's honored as the 2019 MusiCares Person of the Year by the Recording Academy.

The academy announced the latest additions to the lineup Thursday for the tribute concert and gala to be held in Los Angeles on Feb. 8, two days before the Grammy Awards.

Kacey Musgraves and Linda Perry are also among the newly announced performers, joining the previously announced Pink, Norah Jones and Chris Stapleton.

The event raises money for people in the musical community facing financial, medical and personal need.

The academy announced in September that Parton, the first country artist to receive the MusiCares honor, will be recognized for her music and support of causes through her Dollywood Foundation.

US stocks rise before Trump-Xi trade meeting; oil slips

By MARLEY JAY

AP Markets Writer

NEW YORK (AP) — Stocks are rising Friday afternoon as investors wait for President Donald Trump and President Xi Jinping of China to meet and discuss trade. Investors have long hoped the two will use their meeting at the Group of 20 summit to start resolving the trade dispute between the two countries.

Tech and health care companies are making small gains while internet companies are down. Energy stocks slipped as crude oil fell again. U.S. oil briefly dropped under $50 a barrel for the first time since October 2017.

KEEPING SCORE: The S&P 500 index added 14 points, or 0.5 percent, to 2,751 at 2:45 p.m. Eastern time. The Dow Jones Industrial Average rose 95 points, or 0.4 percent, to 25,433. The Nasdaq composite rose 27 points, or 0.4 percent, to 7,300. The Russell 2000 index of smaller-company stocks picked up 2 points, or 0.1 percent, to 1,527.

Marriott security breach exposed data of up to 500M guests

By MICHELLE CHAPMAN and MAE ANDERSON

Associated Press
NEW YORK (AP) — Hackers stole information on as many as 500 million guests of the Marriott hotel empire over four years, obtaining credit card and passport numbers and other personal data, the company said Friday as it acknowledged one of the largest security breaches in history. The full scope of the failure was not immediately clear. Marriott was trying to determine if the records included duplicates, such as a single person staying multiple times. It was also unclear what hackers could do with the credit card information. Though it was stored in encrypted form, it was possible that hackers also obtained the two components needed to descramble the numbers, the company said. The crisis quickly emerged as one of the largest data breaches on record. By comparison, last year's Equifax hack affected more than 145 million people. A Target breach in 2013 affected more than 41 million payment card accounts and exposed contact information for more than 60 million customers. Security analysts were alarmed to learn that the breach began in 2014. While such failures often span months, four years is extreme, said

Yonatan Striem-Amit, chief technology officer of Cybereason. The affected hotel brands were operated by Starwood before it was acquired by Marriott in 2016. They include W Hotels, St. Regis, Sheraton, Westin, Element, Aloft, The Luxury Collection, Le Méridien and Four Points. Starwood-branded timeshare properties were also included. None of the Marriott-branded chains were threatened. For as many as two-thirds of those affected, the exposed data could include mailing addresses, phone numbers, email addresses and passport numbers. Also included might be dates of birth, gender, reservation dates, arrival and departure times and Starwood Preferred Guest account information. "We fell short of what our guests deserve and what we expect of ourselves," CEO Arne Sorenson said in a statement. "We are doing everything we can to support our guests, and using lessons learned to be better moving forward." Marriott set up a website and call center for customers who believe they are at risk. The stolen information could be used by criminals to create fraudulent bank accounts.

THE STAKES: "The outlook for the global economy in 2019 does depend on some peace in the trade dispute between the U.S. and China," said David Kelly, chief global strategist for JPMorgan Funds. He said the global stock market will probably jump if the two leaders announce the framework of a deal and fall if they don't. But as dramatic as the yes-or-no reaction might be, he thinks the two sides will reach an agreement by early 2019.

"Nobody's got much to gain from fighting a trade war, but we both are threatened with recession," he said.

Kate Warne, an investment strategist with Edward Jones, said that even if the two sides announce the general terms of a deal or a cease-fire on new tariffs, many businesses will remain reluctant to spend until they know more details about a final agreement.

"There's still a long way to resolve all of the issues and I suspect we'll continue to see more of the back and forth that we've seen this week, prompting further market volatility as well as greater uncertainty," she said.

THE LEADERS: Health care companies climbed. Biotech drugmaker AbbVie rose 3.8 percent to $93.35 after it said Pfizer agreed to wait until November 2023 before it starts selling a generic version of AbbVie's inflammatory disease drug Humira in the U.S. The agreement is part of a licensing deal between the companies. Humira is the biggest-selling drug in the world by revenue, and it's responsible for about two-thirds of AbbVie's total sales.

Other biotech drugmakers also traded higher. Gilead Sciences rallied 3.1 percent to $71.83 and Amgen rose 2.5 percent to $207.43.

UNWANTED GUESTS: Marriott said the information of as many as 500 million guests at Starwood hotels has been compromised by a data breach that started in 2014 and September 2018. The company said the credit card information of some guests may have been taken, along with other personal details. The affected brands include W Hotels, St. Regis, Sheraton, Westin, Element, Aloft, The Luxury Collection, Le Méridien and Four Points.

The Attorney General of New York said she is opening an investigation into the breach. Marriott stock lost 5.5 percent to $115.22.

ENERGY: Benchmark U.S. crude fell more than 3 percent in morning trading and briefly slipped below $50 a barrel. It closed down 1 percent at $50.93 a barrel in New York. Brent crude lost 1.3 percent to $58.71 a barrel in London.

U.S. crude nosedived 22 percent this month, its biggest loss in a decade. Oil prices have been falling since early October as supplies have built up, partly because the U.S. agreed to hold off on sanctions for countries that import oil from Iran. Investors are also worried that a slowdown in global economic growth will reduce demand for fuels.

BONDS: Bond prices rose further. The yield on the 10-year Treasury note fell to 3.01 percent from 3.03 percent.

CURRENCIES: The dollar rose to 113.62 yen from 113.43 yen. The euro fell to $1.1313 from $1.1389.

OTHER COMMODITIES: Gold lost 0.4 percent to $1,226 an ounce. Silver fell 1.3 percent to $14.22 an ounce. Copper held steady at $2.79 a pound.

Wholesale gasoline lost 0.9 percent to $1.44 a gallon. Heating oil was little changed at $1.85 a gallon. Natural gas fell 0.7 percent to $4.61 per 1,000 cubic feet.

OVERSEAS: The FTSE 100 index in Britain shed 0.8 percent and Germany's DAX lost 0.4 percent. France's CAC 40 fell less than 0.1 percent.

Japan's Nikkei 225 index climbed 0.4 percent and the Hang Seng in Hong Kong added 0.2 percent. South Korea's Kospi fell 0.8 percent.

MARRIOTT

It isn't common for passport numbers to be part of a hack, but it is not unheard of. Hong Kong-based airline Cathay Pacific Airways said in October that 9.4 million passengers' information had been breached, including passport numbers.

Passport numbers are often requested by hotels outside the U.S. because U.S. driver's licenses are not accepted there as identification. The numbers could be added to full sets of data about a person that bad actors sell on the black market, leading to identity theft.

And while the credit card industry can cancel accounts and issue new cards within days, it is a much more difficult process, often steeped in government bureaucracy, to get a new passport.

But one redeeming factor about passports is that they are often required to be seen in person, said Ryan Wilk of NuData Security. "It's a highly secure document with a lot of security features," he said.

Email notifications for those who may have been affected begin rolling out Friday.

When the merger was first announced in 2015, Starwood had 21 million people in its loyalty program. The company manages more than 6,700 properties across the globe, most in North America.

While the first impulse for those potentially affected by the breach could be to check credit cards, security experts say other information in the database could be more damaging.

The names, addresses, passport numbers and other personal information "is of greater concern than the payment info, which was encrypted," analyst Ted Rossman of CreditCards.com said, citing the risk of fraudulent accounts.

An internal security tool signaled a potential breach in early September, but the company was unable to decrypt the information that would define what data had possibly been exposed until last week.

Marriott, based in Bethesda, Maryland, said in a regulatory filing that it was premature to estimate what financial impact the breach will have on the company. It noted that it does have cyber insurance, and is working with its insurance carriers to assess coverage.

Elected officials were quick to call for action.

The New York attorney general opened an investigation. Virginia Sen. Mark Warner, co-founder of the Senate cybersecurity caucus and the top Democrat on the Senate Intelligence Committee, said that the U.S. needs laws that will limit the data companies can collect on its customers.

"It is past time we enact data security laws that ensure companies account for security costs rather than making their consumers shoulder the burden and harms resulting from these lapses," Warner said in a statement.

Marriott has had a rocky process

In this Tuesday, April 30, 2013, file photo, a man works on a new Marriott sign in front of the former Peabody Hotel in Little Rock, Ark. Marriott says the information of up to 500 million guests at its Starwood hotels has been compromised. It said Friday, Nov. 30, 2018, that there was a breach of its database in September, but also found out through an investigation that there has been unauthorized access to the Starwood network since 2014.

of merging its computer system with Starwood computers. Members of both loyalty programs have complained about missing points, glitches with stays crediting to their accounts and problems with free nights earned from credit cards not appearing.
