Wound Care Awareness Week

By AMANDA DUFORAT
 Managing Editor

Raising awareness is the first step in solving an issue. The Wound Healing Center at Scenic Mountain Medical Center is taking part in the Sixth Annual Healogics Wound Care Awareness Week. In recognition of WCAW, there will be a Wound Care Fair on Friday from 9:30 a.m. to 1 p.m. in front of the Wound Healing Center.

Scenic Mountain Medical Center, recently purchased by Steward Family Hospital, is a member of the Healogics network, and has been offering advanced wound care treatments in Big Spring for the last three years.

"Even with the large number – millions of Americans – living with chronic wounds, the incidence is rising. An aging population and increasing rate of diseases and conditions, such as diabetes, obesity and late effects of radiation therapy, are contributing factors," Crawford said.

Wound Care Awareness was established by Healogics in 2014 to bring attention to the chronic wound epidemia, which includes approximately 6.7 million Americans living with non-healing wounds, according to Crawford.

Throughout the week SMMC Wound Healing Center staff have been raising awareness with SMMC staff, physicians, and community members.

"Chronic non-healing wounds brings on so many emotions and unfortunately the sense of lost hope for not only the person dealing with the wound, but also the family and friends closest to them. These problems do pose the potential for loss of life or limb. I am here to advocate for healing, and hope is here right in the heart of Big Spring, TX! At the Wound Healing Center we know our speciality service is more than just healing hard to heal wounds. We understand what living with a wound can do, what it poses on the quality of life and we are dedicated to getting our patients back to the life they love, faster," Crawford said.

By AMANDA DUFORAT
 Managing Editor

Three Texas Country artists will be taking the stage this afternoon at the second annual FMH Foundatin's Song Swap. William Clark Green, Casey Donahew and Mike Ryan will be performing at the F. Marie Hall Plaza and Performance Stage.

Tickets will be sold at the door, if you missed out on advance ticket purchases. The NFL bag police will be enforced for the concert. According to event staff, only clear or small bags will be allowed in and no outside alcohol is allowed.

"This year we are going to enforce a no re-entry policy for safety and crowd control measures," Hayley Herrera, Community Services Director, said.

The main entrance will be located at the SM Energy Pavilion with parking near Dora Roberts Community Center. Gates are set to open at 5 p.m. with the first performer taking the stage at 6:30 p.m. According to City Ordinance, no alcohol is allowed in the Historic Spring Plaza, but there will be speakers, along with a video wall with a live feed at the pavilion.

"We are very excited about the new improvements for this year's Song Swap, and we encourage the community to come out and join us," Herrera said. "This is a great event to help kick off summer. There will be more concerts coming up so keep an eye out."

WOUND CARE

According to statistics provided by Crawford, if left untreated chronic wounds can lead to diminished quality of life and increase of the possibility of amputation. Research shows more than 50 percent who have an amputation die within five years.

"The Wound Healing Center offers an evidence-based systematic approach, in partnership with Healogics, to advanced wound care. Each patient who receives services at the Wound Healing Center is treated with an individualized plan. That plan could include wound dressings, debridements, compression therapy, hyperbaric oxygen therapy, and more," she said.

For those who are dealing with chronic wounds, an appointment can be made by calling 432-268-5370. More information can also be obtained by asking your primary care physician or stopping by 1501 W. Eleventh Place, Suite 106.

A review: Girls of Paper and Fire

Everyone knows about the Paper Girls. Every year, eight girls are brought to the capital to serve the king. It is the highest honor to be chosen as one of the eight. This year, things are different. This year, a ninth girl has been chosen.

In Girls of Paper and Fire by Natasha Ngan, the kingdom is separated into three distinct castes. The highest caste is the Moon caste, followed by the Steel caste, and the lowest caste of all is Paper. Lei is Paper, lowest of low as far as her society is concerned. But she couldn't have been happier helping her father run their medicinal herb shop. Until the day that the horn signals the arrival of the king's men. The day that she is ripped from her home without any promise of being able to return.

Lei is brought to the Hidden Palace to be presented as a ninth Paper Girl. General Wu, who is responsible for taking Lei from her home, convinces Madam Himura - who is in charge of overseeing the Paper Girls, to accept her as one of the King's Paper Girls and, thus, seal her fate. The other girls are not accepting of Lei at first, seeing her as competition. Over time, the girls are trained on how to dress and behave at court. All the while, Lei is drawn to a rather severe, reserved girl named Wren. As Lei navigates the demands of being a Paper Girl, she finds excuses to get close to Wren in the hopes of befriending her - and finds so much more than she could have expected.

Lei begins to daydream of ways to escape the palace and avoid the king's attention. Despite the many promises of wealth and recognition, and how her being in court will bring her family honor, Lei is unsatisfied. She begins her own investigation into the location of her mother, who was taken years ago. She also counts down the days until the pendant from her Birth-blessing opens.

The Birth-blessing is a tradition in the kingdom where the fate of a baby is placed in a pendant and sealed with magic. The pendant will only open on the child's eighteenth birthday. Her word of fate will determine affect the rest of her life. Lei hopes that her word will give her the strength to rise above the lot she's been given.

Girls of Paper and Fire is brimming with captivating details and rich elements of Chinese culture. This book features strong women who are realistic. Lei shows that she is still willing to fight for what she believes in, even when she's scared. Even when death is the most likely result of standing up for herself. She is not a perfect heroine, but she is a realistic one. Girls of Paper and Fire was published in association with James Patterson and Little Brown.

Natasha Ngan is focused on writing stories with diversity. She grew up between Malaysia and the UK; and currently lives in Paris. Ngan attended the University of Cambridge, where she studied geography. She has worked as a social media consultant and fashion blogger.

In addition to Girls of Paper and Fire, Ngan has published The Memory Keepers - about a thief named Seven who steals memories and sells them on London's black market. She has also published The Elites - a story about a girl named Silver, whose world is thrown off kilter when she fails to protect the president of New Babel.

Equipped for our placement

Finding our place may seem difficult at times, especially when life gets rocky, but it is at those moments we need to realign our focus and remember even the tough times can be important. (Disclaimer - I've come to find out, most often those are the times that lead to the most beauty and biggest growth.)

Life isn't easy and it can throw curve balls at any given moment, but the right perspective will allow us to see the lesson in the craziness.

We always have two options - see the downside and allow yourself to wallow in the negatives or see the opportunity you have been given and see how you can play a part in the shift.

One of the harder lessons I have learned over the past year is, just because God has placed us doesn't mean we are free from hardships.

We too often think if we could just achieve our goals, have our dreams come true and reach a level of success, then all will be right in the world; not so.

Sometimes God places us in an area because he has equipped us for a battle that will help turn the corner.

While we may want things to happen suddenly, a slow journey is often the best preparation and if rushed can destroy us and any possibility of our dreams being attained.

We need to remember - and it may not always be easy - He won't place us in the fire without standing with us and laying protection from the flames over us.

When God places us in position, no matter what level of the ladder it is, he is expecting us to serve a purpose.

He has belief in our ability because that ability is built and carefully crafted by him and through his lessons.

He may place us in a position that will cause us, encourage us, push us to use our voice, especially if that's the one thing He knows we are afraid of.

The uncomfortable moments scare us because we often don't feel equipped, we feel lacking, and in reality, we are.

God is faithful to follow through on His promises, but we need to remember while he is bringing our promise to reality, he could be using us to fulfill someone else's.

The trials build our capability and it's when we are standing in the heat he brings in situations to bring out the ability.

He is God and he knows we are stubborn and may not agree with his plan, he accounts for us not fully trusting him and that's when he sends in the troops to build our faith and realign our focus.

God will never force us into a situation and he will not force us to grow, but he will push us, nudge us and allow us to sit (sometimes for an extended period of time) so we can see what He is calling us to do.

Our time is not His time and if we allow, our dreams may be so much more

He gives us a passion that will grow us, build our confidence and prepare us to be used for his purpose.

When we realize we are walking out our dreams, we need to open our eyes and see how He is asking us to walk for His purpose.

We need to be obedient and listen. Part of the obedience is listening to embrace the uncomfortable, and allow the growth to take place.

I am slowly learning to trust in His timing and His preparation.

I am beginning to think my passion, my dreams, were placed in me for a reason and if I allow, could lead to so much more than I can imagine.

DAILY PRAYER

You, Lord, have made each one of us a special work in progress. Please lead us. Amen

Honoring the Victims of the Tragedy in Virginia Beach, Virginia

Herald staff report

A proclamation was issued by the President of the United States of America for flags to be flown at half-staff on June 4, in honor of the victims from the Virginia Beach, Virginia tragedy.

The press release issued by The White House read:

Our Nation grieves with those affected by the tragic shooting at the Virginia Beach Municipal Center in Virginia Beach, Virginia. Americans unite in praying for God to comfort the injured and heal the wounded. May God be with the victims and bring aid and comfort to their families and friends. As a mark of solemn respect for the victims of the terrible act of violence perpetrated on May 31, 2019, by the authority vested in me as President of the United States by the Constitution and the laws of the United States of America, I hereby order that the flag of the United States shall be flown at half-staff at the White House and upon all public buildings and grounds, at all military posts and naval stations, and on all naval vessels of the Federal Government in the District of Columbia and throughout the United States and its Territories and possessions until sunset, June 4, 2019. I also direct that the flag shall be flown at half-staff for the same length of time at all United States embassies, legations, consular offices, and other facilities abroad, including all military facilities and naval vessels and stations.

IN WITNESS WHEREOF, I have hereunto set my hand this first day of June, in the year of our Lord two thousand nineteen, and of the Independence of the United States of America the two hundred forty-third.

TxDOT embraces goal to end deaths on Texas roads by 2050

#EndTheStreakTX campaign helps TxDOT with lifesaving effort

AUSTIN – How many deaths are acceptable each year on Texas roads? That's a question TxDOT is addressing through a new ambitious goal, which ultimately states that the answer to the question is zero.

Every day for nearly 19 years at least one person has died on Texas roadways. Now TxDOT aims to reach a goal to end all fatalities on Texas roads by 2050. The Texas Transportation Commission approved the goal in its monthly meeting Thursday. The commission also set a goal of cutting fatal crashes in half by 2035, which would reduce annual fatalities to about 1,800.

"While we are committed to invest in the best engineering practices to make our roads safe, we also need drivers and passengers to act more responsibly and help us end the streak of daily deaths on our roads to reach our goal of zero deaths," said Texas Transportation Commissioner Laura Ryan.

Ten people are killed every day on average on roads in Texas. Texans can play a major role in ending fatal crashes with a few simple driving habits: wearing seatbelts, driving the speed limit, not texting or being distracted, and never driving under the influence of alcohol or drugs.

Matthew Scordelis' 17-year-old daughter Alexia was killed in a crash in Williamson County on February 21, 2019. His words illustrate that every loss forever changes families.

"Every day I drive by the spot where my daughter died in a crash just a few blocks from home. Our family, her friends, the neighborhood and her school have all deeply felt her loss. We owe it to her and the countless other families in grief to stop these needless deaths," Matthew Scordelis said.

TxDOT already focuses on safety with engineering, education and enforcement efforts. However, this goal builds on an increased emphasis on safety in project prioritization, selection and design as well as continuing driver safety awareness programs and working to implement the Strategic Highway Safety Plan.

"When it comes to safety, it is important for us to establish a clear vision of where we want to be," Commissioner Ryan said. "For TxDOT, that vision should be a transportation system that is free from fatal crashes."

November 7, 2000, was the last deathless day on Texas roadways. Since then, at least one person has died on Texas roadways every single day. #EndTheStreakTX encourages Texans to drive safely to help end the streak of daily deaths on our roadways.

Historic Andy Ruiz win jolts elation among Mexican Americans

By RUSSELL CONTRERAS and DEEPTI HAJELA

Associated Press

ALBUQUERQUE, N.M. — The Madison Square Garden crowd booed when giant screens showed the chubby challenger, Andy Ruiz Jr., walking to the ring as a big underdog to the charismatic, handsome heavyweight champion, Anthony Joshua.

But in homes and bars across the American Southwest, Mexican Americans like Aaron and Patrick Pico in Albuquerque, New Mexico, cheered the other way — even though almost no one thought Ruiz had a legitimate shot at a title.

Then, a seventh round knockout upended boxing's most glamorous weight class and made Ruiz, the son of immigrants raised in a U.S.-Mexico border town, an overnight folk hero among many people of Mexican ancestry in the United States.

"Something told me to watch the fight," Pico said. "I'm glad I did. It made me so proud. He grew up similar to me."

On social media, in gyms and at family barbecues, Mexican Americans with deep roots in boxing culture say they see themselves in Ruiz, saying his win bucks stereotypes about Latinos as well as notions about what athletes should look like. While boxing experts and sports talk show hosts ridiculed the roughly 25-1 underdog for his potbelly, Mexican Americans rallied around an athlete who was essentially unknown before he handed Joshua his first loss as a pro.

Ruiz's upset also came amid heated political rhetoric around immigration and growing influence of Latinos in politics.

"I was shocked. I was elated," Matt Sedillo, 37, a Mexican American poet who watched the fight in Los Angeles. "No one gave him a chance like very few people give us a chance...at anything."

Yes, Mexican Americans like Oscar De La Hoya have captured boxing titles previously. But those wins came in lower weight divisions — no Mexican boxer weighing more than 168 pounds (76 kilograms) had ever won a championship before Ruiz, said Rudy Mondragón, a UCLA Chicana and Chicano Studies doctoral candidate who is studying boxing.

Mexican-born Gilberto "Zurdo" Ramirez, a former super middle-weight champion, had been the heaviest champion of Mexican descent, Mondragón said.

It remains to be seen if Ruiz can defend his title — and he could potentially be an underdog again when that time comes. Joshua's promoter said a rematch clause in the contract was triggered Tuesday, setting up a potential rematch later this year. Ruiz's camp hasn't commented on whether Ruiz has agreed to the fight.

For generations, boxing has played an important role in Mexican American cultural and Mexican American civil rights. The 1952 movie "The Ring," starring Rita Moreno, for example, follows a Mexican American boxer from East Los Angeles fighting racism. Future Chicano Movement leader Rodolfo "Corky" Gonzales began his career as a popular boxer in Denver before turning to activism.

During his 1968 presidential campaign, Robert Kennedy repeatedly mentioned Mexican American boxers while speaking to audiences in Los Angeles. "This week, an American of Mexican descent, Raul Rojas, fights for the featherweight championship of the world," Kennedy said after meeting with labor leader Cesar Chavez. "I wish him my best but this county must ensure that Mexican Americans do not have to bleed for a living."

Ruiz carried all that history into the ring against Joshua, Mondragón said.

Born and raised in California's Imperial Valley across the border from Mexicali, Mexico, Ruiz made his pride in his Mexican roots clear throughout the fight and its promotion. Before the fight started, flags representing Mexico and the United States waved from his corner.

Mullin, Hardaway reflect on 'Run TMC,' laud today's Warriors

By TIM REYNOLDS

AP Basketball Writer

SAN RAMON, Calif. — Chris Mullin and Tim Hardaway spent two seasons as teammates at Oracle Arena, back when it was called the Oakland-Alameda County Coliseum Arena.

The nostalgia is flooding back this week.

The Golden State Warriors' era in Oakland is ending. Only two or three games remain, starting with Game 3 of the NBA Finals against the Toronto Raptors on Wednesday night. And when Mullin and Hardaway — two-thirds of the team's famed "Run TMC" trio from 1989 through 1991 — reunited to appear at a Warriors' youth summer camp, they couldn't help but reflect on what the building has meant.

"It's always for change," Hardaway said. "You knew it was going to come at some particular time. It's here and now."

The Warriors move across the bay from Oakland to San Francisco next season and start playing their games at the glistening new Chase Center, a building that will open in about three months. When the team started installing the first seats at the new building, Hardaway was there for the ceremony.

Mullin is still the only Warriors player to have 15 field goals in a game while posting a triple-double in the building now called Oracle. He said it is fitting to send the building out with a finals run.

"I think it brings back a lot of great memories," Mullin said. "The incredible loyal fan base in Oakland and Oracle Arena. I think we have to be really proud and happy for how this thing's closing out, right? ... Change is inevitable, it brings a lot of different emotions, but the only thing we can (do) here is celebrate."

Mullin and Hardaway still don't disagree on all that much, including the current state of the Warriors. Win or lose these NBA Finals, they say the Warriors have already become a dynasty.

"This is one of the best teams ever put together," Hardaway said.

Said Mullin: "They're already a dynasty, up there with the greatest teams of all time. Going to five NBA Finals in a row hasn't been done since Bill Russell's Celtics. That's right there — that was a dynasty, this is a dynasty."

They would have preferred to have the entirety of Run TMC at the camp with them — Mitch Richmond was tending to a business matter in China, Mullin told the campers. But they had plenty of stories to regale the kids with: Mullin said there was no player he learned more from than Hardaway, and Hardaway recalled how he watched Mullin shoot for two hours without missing once.

They were together for the 1989-90 and 1990-91 seasons, Hardaway's first two in the NBA. Their run ended when the Warriors traded Richmond to Sacramento.

But "Run TMC" remains part of Warriors' lore.

"We're blessed, Tim and I and Mitch to have been able to stay together, stay close friends, pretty much our whole lives," Mullin said. "We often look back and we smile. We've got great memories to share. Of course, we wanted it to last longer but we cherish the times we were together and we're able to share it with each other and the greatest fans in the world."

Annie's Mailbox®

Looking for a Way to Break the Cycle of Addiction

Dear Annie: I'm a mother to five beautiful children. I do not have custody of any of them. I'm an addict, and I refuse to raise my kids the way my parents raised me. I want them to have and see a better life than I did. Growing up wasn't great for me. We were homeless. Sleeping in backyards in tents wasn't cool. My siblings and I had to transfer schools all the time.

I didn't graduate from high school, although I did sure get a degree from the School of Hard Knocks. I had my first kid at 18 and gave him and my parental rights up to my brother. As an adult, I started smoking meth and marijuana and drinking. I was in jail by age 22. In my early 20s, I had my second kid and gave him up for adoption because I knew I wasn't done with the cycle of drug use and jail. As for my third kid, I have joint legal custody of him because I don't have stability. And my last two kids live with their father, my ex-husband. I've relapsed, and I hate who I am today. I want better for me so I can be better for my kids. Do you have any advice for me that I don't already know? Changing for the better, and getting clean and sober, has been so hard for me. Though I have done it in the past and loved it. I had a great church family and lost them because of my addiction. Help me be better. I want to be better.

-- Bad Mom

Dear Mom: Few people have easy roads in life, but yours has been especially difficult. Growing up without housing likely left you with anxiety issues, and substance abuse became a coping mechanism. Try to show yourself some compassion. No one ever hated herself into self-improvement. Becoming the person you want to be starts with forgiving yourself for the person you've been. You asked me to give you some advice that you haven't heard before. I'm going to give you advice you probably have. But even if you've heard this a hundred times, it's worth hearing a hundred more: I strongly urge you to attend Narcotics Anonymous, Alcoholics Anonymous or another program such as LifeRing. I believe such a support group will offer the sense of community and family that your spirit craves.

Dear Annie: I'm responding to the writer who sent advice regarding adopting an older cat. Their advice was spot on except for their final advice to provide the name of an animal shelter to which the cat should be sent to upon an owner's untimely death.

As a longtime shelter volunteer, the cruelest thing that can happen to an animal whose guardian has passed is to be sent to an animal shelter. Older animals have little chance of adoption, and they will most likely end up euthanized. Is that what any loving pet owner wants for their beloved pet? In most states, there are privately run long-term care facilities for aging animals where they can live out their lives peacefully. Every pet owner should visit those facilities to confirm that they are properly licensed and operated responsibly. Make it clear in your family trust what is to happen to your pets upon your death, and provide funds for their lifelong care. Far too many animals end up in shelters. Don't add to that population. -- Animal Lover in New Mexico

Dear Animal Lover: I was unaware of these until I got your letter and looked into it more, but there are indeed "pet retirement homes" or "sanctuaries." I echo your statement that owners should be sure to visit the facilities personally and ensure they're properly licensed and offer animals adequate, humane care. Thanks for writing.

Opening lead — six of clubs.

Let's say you're in three notrump and West leads the six of clubs, on which East plays the queen. It is frequently right to duck when you hold the A-K — in order to interfere with enemy communications — but the question is whether it is right to duck in this case (without seeing the East-West cards).

Note that if you duck, you go down one. East plays another club, and you wind up losing three clubs and two aces. But if you win the first club, you make the contract against any defense.

It is easy to prove that taking East's queen is the correct play. You start by assuming that the clubs are divided 5-2, since if they're divided 4-3, you can't be defeated no matter what you do (all you'd lose in that case is two clubs and two aces).

Having credited West with five clubs, you next conclude that he did not lead the six from the J-10-9-6-x, because with that holding he would have led the jack, not the six. East must therefore have specifically the doubleton Q-10 or Q-9 of clubs.

After winning the opening club lead with the king, you force out the ace of diamonds. If East has the ace and returns the nine (or ten) of clubs, you duck and thus assure the contract, since West cannot afford to overtake and return a club into your A-8.

If West has the ace of diamonds (the actual case), you are equally certain of a favorable outcome. You duck the club return — whether it is the jack or deuce — and in that way also discombobulate the defense.

There is a proper time to refuse a trick and a proper time to win a trick, but exactly when you do one or the other is largely a matter of exercising good judgment.

Tomorrow: Bidding quiz.

Here's How It Works:

Sudoku puzzles are formatted as a 9x9 grid, broken down into nine 3x3 boxes. To solve a sudoku, the numbers 1 through 9 must fill each row, column and box. Each number can appear only once in each row, column and box. You can figure out the order in which the numbers will appear by using the numeric clues already provided in the boxes. The more numbers you name, the easier it gets to solve the puzzle!

Raptors hit big shots, beat Warriors for 2-1 NBA Finals lead

By JANIE McCAULEY

AP Sports Writer

OAKLAND, Calif. (AP) — For every amazing shot in a career night by Stephen Curry on his home court, Kawhi Leonard, Kyle Lowry and Danny Green kept finding dazzling answers of their own.

The Toronto Raptors decided to "let it rip," and now they have the momentum again in these back-and-forth NBA Finals.

Leonard scored 30 points on a night Curry went off for a playoff-best 47, and the Raptors beat the banged-up Golden State Warriors 123-109 on Wednesday for a 2-1 series lead.

Curry also had eight rebounds and seven assists but couldn't do it all for the two-time defending champions, down starters Kevin Durant and Klay Thompson and key backup big man Kevin Looney because of injuries.

"They outplayed us. They deserved it," Warriors coach Steve Kerr said.

"I'm very proud of our effort, and now we've just got to bounce back and hopefully get back in here Friday night and hopefully get a little healthier and get some guys back."

Splash Brother Thompson missed his first career playoff game after straining his left hamstring late in Game 2, while Looney is out the rest of the series after a cartilage fracture on his right side near the collarbone that also happened Sunday. Durant, a two-time reigning NBA Finals MVP, has been sidelined nearly a month because of a strained right calf.

Game 4 is Friday at Oracle Arena, where Warriors fans will be rooting for the returns of Durant and Thompson.

Before the game, one of the Raptors wrote "let it rip" on the locker room board.

Lowry contributed 23 with five 3-pointers and Green had 18 points with six 3s after Pascal Siakam got the Raptors rolling early. Toronto shot 52.4% and made 17 from deep.

"I give our guys a lot of credit. I thought we answered a lot of runs," Raptors coach Nick Nurse said. "Each time they chipped, we kind of answered back. And that's kind of what you got to do if you're going to keep your lead."

The Warriors trailed 96-83 going into the final quarter. Curry's three free throws at 10:37 made it a seven-point game before back-to-back baskets by Serge Ibaka.

Siakam scored 18 points and established the momentum for Toronto from the tip, hitting his first three shots and setting a tone for a defensive effort that stayed solid without the foul problems that plagued the Raptors in Game 2.

"Every time we made a run or got the crowd into it they either made a tough 3 or there was a tough foul call and they slowed the tempo down or something went their way," Curry said. "You have to tip your cap to all the guys who made pivotal plays in the right times."

Golden State greatly missed not only Thompson's touch from outside but also his stifling defense.

Nurse challenged his team to produce more defensive stops in order to get out in transition — "make them miss more," he said.

The Raptors re-watched the costly 18-0 run by Golden State in Game 2, then got six blocked shots from Ibaka.

"We know that they're going to make good runs and make shots but we watched that third quarter in Game 2 and we've just got to continue to play with pace," Lowry said. "That was the one thing about it, we played with pace, half-court, full-court, and that was a big thing for us."

Curry shot 14 for 31 including 6 of 14 on 3s while making 13 of 14 free throws in his sixth career 40-point playoff performance.

When ring announcer Michael Buffer said the names of the judges "should this fight go the distance," the crowd chuckled at the idea Joshua would let it get there. Ruiz got the last laugh.

Ruiz's team displayed another Mexican flag behind him as he spoke to reporters after the fight, making repeated references to his heritage, particularly when he got up after Joshua knocked him down in the third round, the first time Ruiz has ever been knocked down.

"I had to get him back, I think that's the Mexican blood in me, the Mexican warrior that I have," he said.

Asked in Spanish how it felt to be the first heavyweight champ of Mexican heritage, Ruiz grew even more animated.

"I don't believe it, don't believe I won, but I did," he replied in Spanish. "Feel very proud, very happy. Made history. Everything is possible. Trained hard and won. I'm the first Mexican world champion."

After his comments, #MexicanWarrior began trending worldwide on Twitter. Cartoonist Lalo Alcaraz created an image of Ruiz painted in the colors of the Mexican flag with the words: "Andy Ruiz, Jr. World Heavyweight Champion Mexican Warrior."

Still, fans on boxing websites and sports talk shows mocked Ruiz because of his physique. Sedillo thought some of the criticisms hinted at stereotypes about Mexican Americans. "But you know what? He's the champion. Period," Sedillo said.

Ruiz has nevertheless changed perceptions, with boxers of Mexican descent no longer solely locked into smaller weight classes like De La Hoya or Canelo Álvarez, Mondragón said. He also doesn't look like previous Mexican American MMA champions at heavier weight classes, like Tito Ortiz, the UFC light heavyweight titleholder from 2000-2003.

"He's challenging Eurocentric images of beauty and fatphobia," Mondragón said. "And if he's ever given the chance to defend his title in Mexico, it would be epic."

Immediately after the fight, Aaron Pico, 22, a mixed martial artist paused his celebration to think about Joshua's loss. "I've been there before. I've been knocked down so I can identify," said Pico, a Whittier, California, native who trains at Albuquerque's famed Jackson Wink MMA Academy.

Then, Pico started visualizing himself as Ruiz. He was back in the gym and training two days later. At times, his eyes were closed as he shadow boxed, imagining a win similar to Ruiz at MSG.

He'll have his chance. On June 14, the 4-2 featherweight will go up against 12-0 Hungarian-born Adam "The Kid" Borics at a Bellator card in the same arena where Ruiz made history.

"He comes from where I come from," Pico said. "I'm motivated like never before."
