Mental Health First Aid virtual, face-to-face classes hosted by WTC

Registration open now; weekly classes begin today

By AMANDA DUFORAT
 Managing Editor

As the nation continues to navigate through the coronavirus pandemic, mental health is gaining attention. West Texas Centers in Big Spring and surrounding communities have launched an effort to help combat mental health issues and lend a helping hand of support to those who are in need of assistance.

A series of five classes will launch on Thursday, Oct. 29 and run through Nov. 19. The first four classes will be held virtually and the class on Nov. 19 will be in person.

“As we continue to battle the pandemic the mental crisis continues to be on the rise. These classes are tools to help individuals be more observant in getting help for our family, neighbors,

While these classes are geared toward adults, according to Hambrick, in the near future a youth program – Teen Mental Health First Aid – will be launched. More information will be released on that as details are ironed out.

“The best way the community can support us right now is to get involved; know the resources that are offered in Big Spring and surrounding counties,” she said.

To register for the classes, which are free to attend, call the West Texas Centers office at 432-264-3240 or e-mail ida.hambrick@wtcmhmr.org.

“The students have been working on this show since the beginning of September. We are looking at bussing in each of the elementary schools and Big Spring Intermediate to watch the performance, in addition to the community performance,” Reba Strebeck, Big Spring Junior High School Theatre Director, said. “We are hoping to make this children’s performance a bi-yearly tradition for years to come.”

Barrett confirmed by Senate for Supreme Court, takes oath

WASHINGTON (AP) — Amy Coney Barrett was confirmed to the Supreme Court late Monday by a deeply divided Senate, with Republicans overpowering Democrats to install President Donald Trump's nominee days before the election and secure a likely conservative court majority for years to come.

Trump's choice to fill the vacancy of the late liberal icon Ruth Bader Ginsburg potentially opens a new era of rulings on abortion, the Affordable Care Act and even his own election. Democrats were unable to stop the outcome, Trump's third justice on the court, as Republicans race to reshape the judiciary.

Barrett, 48, will be able to start work Tuesday, her lifetime appointment as the 115th justice solidifying the court's rightward tilt.

"This is a momentous day for America," Trump said at a primetime swearing-in event on the South Lawn at the White House. Justice Clarence Thomas administered the Constitutional Oath to Barrett before a crowd of about 200.

Barrett told those gathered that she believes "it is the job of a judge to resist her policy preferences." She vowed, "I will do my job without any fear or favor."

Monday's vote was the closest high court confirmation ever to a presidential election, and the first in modern times with no support from the minority party. The spiking COVID-19 crisis has hung over the proceedings. Vice President Mike Pence declined to preside at the Senate unless his tie-breaking vote was needed after Democrats asked him to stay away when his aides tested positive for COVID-19. The vote was 52-48, and Pence's vote was not necessary.

"Voting to confirm this nominee should make every single senator proud," said Senate Majority Leader Mitch McConnell, fending off "outlandish" criticism in a lengthy speech. During a rare weekend session he declared that Barrett's opponents "won't be able to do much about this for a long time to come."

Barrett, a federal appeals court judge from Indiana, is expected to take the judicial oath administered by Chief Justice John Roberts in a private ceremony Tuesday at the court to begin participating in proceedings.

Underscoring the political divide during the pandemic, the Republican senators, most wearing masks, sat in their seats as is tradition for landmark votes, and applauded the outcome, with fist-bumps. Democratic senators emptied their side, heeding party leadership's advice to not linger in the chamber. A Rose Garden event with Trump to announce Barrett's nomination last month ended up spreading the virus, including to some GOP senators who have since returned from quarantine.

Pence's presence would have been expected for a high-profile moment. But Senate Democratic leader Chuck Schumer and his leadership team said it would not only violate virus guidelines of the Centers for Disease Control and Prevention, "it would also be a violation of common decency and courtesy."

Democrats argued for weeks that the vote was being improperly rushed and insisted during an all-night Sunday session it should be up to the winner of the Nov. 3 election to name the nominee.

Speaking near midnight Sunday, Sen. Elizabeth Warren, D-Mass., called the vote "illegitimate" and "the last gasp of a desperate party."

Several matters are awaiting decision just a week before Election Day, and Barrett could be a decisive vote in Republican appeals of orders extending the deadlines for absentee ballots in North Carolina and Pennsylvania.

The justices also are weighing Trump's emergency plea for the court to prevent the Manhattan District Attorney from acquiring his tax returns. And on Nov. 10, the court is expected to hear the Trump-backed challenge to the Obama-era Affordable Care Act. Just before the Senate voted, the court sided with Republicans in refusing to extend the deadline for absentee ballots in Wisconsin.

Trump has said he wanted to swiftly install a ninth justice to resolve election disputes and is hopeful the justices will end the health law known as "Obamacare."

In a statement, Democratic presidential candidate Joe Biden tied Barrett's nomination to the court to the Republican effort to pull down the Affordable Care Act. He called her confirmation "rushed and unprecedented" and a stark reminder to Americans that "your vote matters."

During several days of public testimony before the Senate Judiciary Committee, Barrett was careful not to disclose how she would rule on any such cases.

She presented herself as a neutral arbiter and suggested, "It's not the law of Amy." But her writings against abortion and a ruling on "Obamacare" show a deeply conservative thinker.

Sen. Lindsey Graham, R-S.C., the chairman of the Judiciary Committee, praised the mother of seven as a role model for conservative women. "This is historic," Graham said.

Republicans focused on her Catholic faith, criticizing earlier Democratic questions about her beliefs. Graham called Barrett "unabashedly pro-life."

At the start of Trump's presidency, McConnell engineered a Senate rules change to allow confirmation by a majority of the 100 senators, rather than the 60-vote threshold traditionally needed to advance high court nominees over objections. That was an escalation of a rules change Democrats put in place to advance other court and administrative nominees under President Barack Obama.

Republicans are taking a political plunge days from the Nov. 3 election with the presidency and their Senate majority at stake.

Only one Republican — Sen. Susan Collins, who is in a tight reelection fight in Maine — voted against the nominee, not over any direct assessment of Barrett. Rather, Collins said, "I do not think it is fair nor consistent to have a Senate confirmation vote prior to the election."

Trump and his Republican allies had hoped for a campaign boost, in much the way Trump generated excitement among conservatives and evangelical Christians in 2016 over a court vacancy. That year, McConnell refused to allow the Senate to consider then-President Barack Obama's choice to replace the late Justice Antonin Scalia, arguing the new president should decide.

Most other Republicans facing tough races embraced the nominee who clerked for the late Scalia to bolster their standing with conservatives. Sen. Thom Tillis, R-N.C., said in a speech Monday that Barrett will "go down in history as one of the great justices."

But it's not clear the extraordinary effort to install the new justice over such opposition in a heated election year will pay political rewards to the GOP.

Demonstrations for and against the nominee have been more muted at the Capitol under coronavirus restrictions.

Democrats were unified against Barrett. While two Democratic senators voted to confirm Barrett in 2017 after Trump nominated the Notre Dame Law School professor to the appellate court, none voted to confirm her to the high court.

In a display of party priorities, California Sen. Kamala Harris, the Democratic vice presidential nominee, returned to Washington from the campaign trail to join colleagues with a no vote.

No other Supreme Court justice has been confirmed on a recorded vote with no support from the minority party in at least 150 years, according to information provided by the Senate Historical Office.

Social media CEOs get earful on bias, warning of new limits

WASHINGTON (AP) — With next week's election looming, the CEOs of Twitter, Facebook and Google were scolded by Republicans at a Senate hearing Wednesday for alleged anti-conservative bias in the companies' social media platforms and received a warning of coming restrictions from Congress.

Lawmakers of both parties are assessing the companies' tremendous power to disseminate speech and ideas, and are looking to challenge their long-enjoyed bedrock legal protections for online speech.

The Trump administration, seizing on unfounded accusations of bias against conservative views, has asked Congress to strip some of the protections that have generally shielded the tech companies from legal responsibility for what people post on their platforms.

"The time has come for that free pass to end," said Sen. Roger Wicker, chairman of the Senate Commerce, Science and Transportation Committee. Wicker, R-Miss., said the laws governing online speech must be updated because "the openness and freedom of the internet are under attack."

He spoke at the opening of the hearing as Twitter CEO Jack Dorsey, Facebook's Mark Zuckerberg and Google's Sundar Pichai waited to testify via video.

Wicker cited the move this month by Facebook and Twitter to limit dissemination of an unverified political story from the conservative-leaning New York Post about Democratic presidential nominee Joe Biden. The story, which was not confirmed by other publications, cited unverified emails from Biden's son Hunter that were reportedly disclosed by Trump allies.

Republicans led by President Donald Trump have accused the social media platforms, without evidence, of deliberately suppressing conservative, religious and anti-abortion views.

In their prepared testimony, Dorsey, Zuckerberg and Pichai addressed the proposals for changes to a provision of a 1996 law that has served as the foundation for unfettered speech on the internet. Critics in both parties say that immunity under Section 230 enables the social media companies to abdicate their responsibility to impartially moderate content.

Zuckerberg acknowledged that Congress "should update the law to make sure it's working as intended."

Dorsey and Pichai urged caution in making any changes. "Undermining Section 230 will result in far more removal of online speech and impose severe limitations on our collective ability to address harmful content and protect people online," Dorsey said.

Pichai appealed to lawmakers "to be very thoughtful about any changes to Section 230 and to be very aware of the consequences those changes might have on businesses and consumers."

The session lacked the in-person drama of star-witness proceedings before the coronavirus. The hearing room was nearly empty except for Wicker and a few colleagues, but their questioning was sharp as tempers flared among members.

"Twitter's conduct has by far been the most egregious," Sen. Ted Cruz, R-Texas, told Dorsey. Cruz cited Twitter's limitations on the newspaper story as part of "a pattern of censorship and silencing Americans with whom Twitter disagrees."

Sen. Brian Schatz, D-Hawaii, went after Republicans, saying the hearing was a "sham."

"This is bullying," Schatz told the CEOs. "Do not let U.S. senators bully you into carrying the water" for politicians seeking to discredit their opponents.

community, the theatre department is looking to getting back on stage for the first time in almost a year. While there is not a competition on the schedule at this time, Strebeck and the students are looking forward to being able to perform for the community in which they live and go to school in.

"We have overcome many obstacles including Covid-19 to still put on a special show for the elementary children and the public," she said. "This is an opportunity for the community to come out and support our young and upcoming actors and techs as they work on new and exciting skills and their craft."

When looking at shows for this year, Strebeck decided on Haphazardly Ever After because of the ability to pull junior high and high school students into the character rolls. It offered an opportunity to get the older students involved while appealing to the younger students and adults. Strebeck described the show as a zany fairy tale where anything and everything can go wrong.

"This is a great opportunity for the students to show off their talents and build their confidence while showing our community that we have a thriving theatre performance company here in Big Spring ISD," she said.

Following the shows in November, a few separate performances are planned. The high school will Opening lead — ten of spades.

The defenders are usually in the dark when play commences. Whatever knowledge they have of declarer's hand at that stage comes largely from the bidding. But as the play progresses, the defenders learn more and more about declarer's high cards and distribution and can then use this knowledge against him.

Take this deal where East has a crucial decision to make early in the play. West leads a spade, taken by South's king. Declarer plays the jack of hearts. West and dummy follow low, and East wins with the queen.

If East lacks the courage to return a diamond at this point, South makes the contract. Declarer wins any other return, cashes the ace of hearts and then plays four rounds of clubs, discarding two of his diamond losers. West ruffs the fourth club with the heart king, but the contract is home.

In general, it is poor policy for a defender to lead away from a king when dummy has Q-10-x, as this can all too easily cost a trick if declarer has the ace. But each deal is an entity in its own right and should be approached in a practical manner.

East's aim here is to find some way for his side to score four tricks. In attempting to reach this goal, he can't credit declarer with a holding that renders the contract impregnable. He should instead assume declarer has a hand that allows the contract to be defeated.

As a first step, East should assume his partner has the king of hearts, since it is unlikely that declarer would take a first-round finesse for the queen with a trump suit headed by the K-J-10. East therefore credits his partner with a trump trick.

He then starts looking for two more tricks. Since declarer obviously has no spade or club losers, East's only remaining hope is that West has the ace of diamonds. So East shifts to a diamond at trick three, and West takes the ace and returns a diamond to sink the contract.

Like puzzles? Then you'll love sudoku. This mind-bending puzzle will have you hooked from the moment you square off, so sharpen your pencil and put your sudoku savvy to the test!

Level: Intermediate

Here's How It Works:

Sudoku puzzles are formatted as a 9x9 grid, broken down into nine 3x3 boxes. To solve a sudoku, the numbers 1 through 9 must fill each row, column and box. Each number can appear only once in each row, column and box. You can figure out the order in which the numbers will appear by using the numeric clues already provided in the boxes. The more numbers you name, the easier it gets to solve the puzzle!

ARIES (March 21-April 19). Because you listen and try to understand the other person's point of view, arguments can bring you closer together. The relationship gets better because you know each other better.

TAURUS (April 20-May 20). You love security as much as anyone, and yet, today, you're feeling restless and bold enough to give some of that up for a thrill, some solid entertainment or a chance at the big prize.

GEMINI (May 21-June 21). You've been slowly getting to know someone for a while now. Yet, when you think about this person, there are still more questions than answers. It's a good place to be. Curiosity is just what the relationship needs.

CANCER (June 22-July 22). While you may be having a deeply moving experience of joy, there is part of you that cannot fully accept and revel in this unless you know that another person is in it with you. Is it too early to reveal your feelings?

LEO (July 23-Aug. 22). You've been known to be overcome by fits of fatalism, though you're stronger now. You may still have that thought, every once in a while, that things won't go your way again. But you'll battle the idea and win.

VIRGO (Aug. 23-Sept. 22). The proverb suggests, "Pride goeth before a fall." You can avoid the fall by checking the pride. Carefully estimate the elements and humbly assess your ability to navigate them.

LIBRA (Sept. 23-Oct. 23). Caring too much, doing too much and giving too much knocks you off your game. Balance is always a stronger position. Whatever you can do to move toward balance will be a move toward strength.

SCORPIO (Oct. 24-Nov. 21). A loving person is attuned to your feelings and responsive to your needs. That's the baseline for what to expect from your inner circle. If that line is not being toed, then it's something to either address or move on from.

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 22-Dec. 21). There is no such thing as a "casual invitation" today. Oh, the opportunity may be delivered with nonchalance, but you can be certain that it's as significant as anything altering the course of destiny.

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22-Jan. 19). This pile of work in front of you isn't pretty right now and won't be later either. Its best look is "gone." Start with what inter-

COSMIC QUESTION: "I'm a Virgo with Virgo rising and a Virgo moon. This combined with some strong Pisces business in my chart has me overly sensitive and often anxious. To the outside eye, I may look like a high-functioning human and artist (I'm a poet and I write stories), but I often wish I were one of those shiny happy people who could just be laid-back and go-with-the-flow. How can I change?"

It is possible that a person who is blessed with the talent of being present, content, spontaneous and joyful in the moment sometimes wouldn't think to create a different reality or method of escape and therefore wouldn't be compelled to write stories and poems the way you do. Driven, high-achievers are often the people who are the hardest on themselves. Many impressively intelligent and creative folks are inwardly unsettled and challenged daily by the prospect of finding serenity. With every personality trait comes an upside and a downside. There is no benefit to wishing you were different. There are things you are better and worse at, but we are all equals in the universe. Stop comparing yourself and get on with the business of figuring out how to help yourself succeed with the very special talents you have.

COVID-19 Halloween Tips

Dear Annie: I don't know what to do about my husband anymore. I am just about to lose it with him. He's always calling me bad names, and I've noticed him leering at my sister many times. Whenever I call him out on it, he gets aggressive and it becomes a big argument. He tells me I should just leave. I am really getting tired of this mistreatment. It's always something, every week. Yet, whenever I've prepared to leave, he's tried to smooth things over with me, for the sake of appearances. I feel so unwanted and unhappy, but I know that I'm not in the wrong. What should I do? -- Desperate in Denver

Dear Desperate: First and foremost, I must say that if your husband's insults constitute verbal abuse, reach out to the National Domestic Violence Hotline at 1-800-799-7233.

If his behavior is inconsiderate but not abusive, then I encourage you to attend marriage counseling. I only have a vague picture of the situation based on your letter, but it's clear that you two aren't communicating well. Marriage counseling can offer a neutral space in which you can both learn not just how to express yourselves but how to better listen to each other.

Dear Annie: Here are some tips to help keep yourself, your family and your neighborhood safe during this time, while still celebrating this whimsical time of year.

1. Get the facts. Brush up on the CDC Halloween guidelines (yes, the CDC has guidelines, and no, your Halloween mask does not replace your normal mask). Educate yourself on the safest ways to proceed for your household. The CDC lists activities from lowest risk to highest risk. You'll find some of their ideas in this list.

2. Know the safest alternatives: If you want to be as safe as possible, consider alternative in-home-only activities for your entire household. Coordinate a virtual costume party with your friends. Host a Zoom pumpkin carving event with the people you would normally invite over. Decorate sugar cookies and watch your favorite Halloween movies at home. Host a virtual event where each friend brings a scary story to share.

3. Avoid the front door. COVID-19 spreads when people "share the air" and having kids walk up to your front door is an easy way to "share the air" and put yourself at risk. Instead, do the candy transactions or other activities out in the open, where there's air circulation. Get creative blocking off areas where you don't want people. Use ropes and spiderwebs, chains and even lawn furniture with skeleton in it. Make it clear visually where you want people to go.

4. Distance candy distribution: Placing candy into a kid's trick-or-treat bag by hand means you're close enough to get or spread COVID-19. So, how do you avoid this? There are some creative solutions to get candy to kids from a distance. Some families are making a candy chute that spits candy out from a distance. Test it first to make sure you get it just right. As a last resort, you might place a large candy bowl at the front of your driveway and stay inside. It's not going to help the kids socially distanced from each other, but it should keep them from coming to your door. -- Vanessa Alvarez of Nexme

Dear Vanessa: It's a tricky year for handing out treats. I appreciate these tips for doing so safely and the creative ideas of alternate activities.

FRIDAY NIGHT UNDER THE LIGHTS

High School Football In Howard County

Big Spring finishes up regular season this week when they host Lake View

By SHAWN MORAN

Herald Sports Writer

The Big Spring Steers (3-3) are putting the past behind them and looking forward to the next chance to prove themselves this Friday night when they host the Lake View Chiefs (4-5). Big Spring won an absolute thriller in overtime over Lake View in the final game of the regular season last year and will be looking to put a 'W' in their overall record column come Friday night.

"This is the first week where we didn't set up any specific gameplan for the team we're facing. We have to clean up what we can control. We need to run the correct routes, catch the ball, make the blocks that we need to make, make the right read on defense, beat the ball-carrier to the hole, and we need to make the tackle. We just need to sure up what we can control and go out and play Steer football," Head Coach Cannon McWilliams said.

The Chiefs are also 0-2 in district play this season - with this matchup set up once again to be for third-place in the district. Lake View also likes to spread the ball around to their playmakers through the air to open up their running game. They are led by senior quarterback Albert Rodriguez - who has passed for 2,146 yards and 23 touchdowns this season. He is also a threat in the run game, as he currently leads them in rushing touchdowns (9) and sits second on the team in both carries (70) and yards (417). The main running back to lookout for out of the backfield for Lake View is Joshua Torres, who has run the ball 77 times for 484 yards and four touchdowns.

Big Spring has had trouble getting their own rushing game going this year, and McWilliams believes that it is a collective of mistakes that is limiting the Steers' rushing game.

"There's been a few different factors. If we can't give them different looks up-front and confuse them, we can't run the football," McWilliams said.

Coahoma riding high after third shutout of season, face Lubbock Roosevelt next

By SHAWN MORAN

Herald Sports Writer

Coahoma was able to crush the Reagan County Owls last Friday night 60-0 behind an offense that could not be stopped through the air, or on the ground, and a defense that surely made the Owls' quarterback wake up sore on Saturday morning.

The Bulldogs posted their third shutout of the season as defensive coordinator Mitchell Woodward's defense racked up an astounding eight sacks.

"I think we got our swagger back on defense against Stanton and that carried into this game. Everybody played really well, swarmed to the ball and tackled really well," Head Coach Chris Joslin said.

On offense, the Bulldogs were able to spread the ball out to many different playmakers, with star running back Brysen Kerby leading the way with his 14 carries for 182 yards and four touchdowns. There was also five Coahoma receivers who made at least one reception.

"A ton of people touched the ball tonight and a bunch of people scored," Joslin said.

Forsan dominates on the ground against Haskell, host Stamford this Friday night

By SHAWN MORAN

Herald Sports Writer

The Forsan Buffaloes (4-3) controlled the game for all 48 minutes against their new district-rival Haskell last Friday night. The Buffs will now switch their sights to a pivotal game against Stamford at home this week.

Forsan's running game has picked up over the past few weeks and appear to be playing their best ball as a group since the season began. Both Nate Hernandez and Chris Mendez are bringing a hard-nosed running style into every Friday night. Both running backs had 11 carries last week and combined for 235 yards.

On defense, they continue to build and make plenty of stops behind the line each week. Head Coach Jason Phillips believes that his offense is able to benefit on the great play of his defense and that was the case last Friday.

"Our offensive execution was a direct result of our really good defensive play. Our defense set us up with short fields multiple times, but our offense was really good as well by being able to punch it into the end zone," Phillips said.

Stamford is coming off of a forfeited win over Colorado City and might be a little rusty at the beginning of this game on Friday. Before that game, they had lost to both Hawley and Anson - but that does not take away from the strong season they were putting together before district play started.

The Bulldogs have been able to put up points consistently each week and Forsan's defense will need another lights-out performance this week.

Players of the Week

PABLITO DEHOYOS

ISAIAH HOLLOWAY

Once again, wide receiver Pablito De Hoyos finds himself as the Offensive Player of the Week. The versatile wideout caught 9 passes for 138 yards and one touchdown. That was good enough to lead the Steers in all receiving categories and he was also the only one to find the end zone last Friday night. The rest of the Steers' wide receivers also had productive nights out on the field with Gabriel Baeza delivering them the ball.

Holloway has put together a strong season from his line-backer spot. That continued last Friday night when the rangy hard-hitter collected three tackles. Only three tackles? It is what he did with his tackles that made the difference. Holloway grabbed one tackle for a loss and one sack to go along with an interception. Honorable Mentions: Devin Manning collected a team-high 15 total tackles and Ricky Escovedo added 12 for a double-digit tackle combo.

KOLT REDDEN

BRYDEN FONTANA

Quarterback Kolt Redden did a tremendous job distributing the ball to his playmakers last Friday night. Redden completed eight passes, with three of those going for scores. He has shown great accuracy on the deep ball this season and seems to be improving weekly. Honorable Mention: Running back Brysen Kerby. Kerby once again gashed the opposing defense. This time he ran the ball 14 times for 182 yards and four touchdowns.

Fontana was all over the field for the Bulldogs last Friday, collecting a team-high seven total tackles. The consistent pass-rusher also grabbed one sack. The entire front seven and defense as a whole - did a knockout job of holding Reagan County to 0 points last week. Kobe Cervantes (1), Patrick Gutierrez (2), Colin Daniels (1), Isaac Ortiz (1), and Kolt Redden (2) all were able to get the quarterback in the backfield.

CHRIS MENDEZ

ERNESTO RIVERA

Chris Mendez bounced back from an injury the previous week to have a huge game last Friday night against Haskell. He rushed 11 times for 173 yards and 3 touchdowns on a night where the Buffaloes were able to run all over their opponents. Backfield-mate Nate Hernandez ran the ball and additional 11 times for 62 yards and three touchdowns of his own behind the great Forsan offensive line. On defense, the Buffs played great complementary football and Ernesto Rivera was able to grab seven total tackles, one tackle for a loss, one sack, and one forced fumble. Honorable Mentions: Cayden Morgan compiled a team-high 13 total tackles from his cornerback spot while also grabbing one interception and one fumble recovery. Both Rivera and Morgan have put together very strong seasons whenever they have taken the field.

STEERS

“We also need to hit the hole harder and we just need to block better overall. We would love to see Orlando Sanchez, Isaiah Holloway, or Isaiah Johnson have a big game on the ground. We just have to do our job to make sure that happens.”

Both teams are currently in the midst of three-game losing streaks and will be looking to end their district schedule on a high-note. The Steers have struggled away from home this season, and McWilliams is hoping that the home atmosphere will help bring his team a winning attitude on Friday night.

“For whatever reason, our worst games this year have been on the road,” McWilliams said. “We were winning most of the game last week but just couldn’t close it out and did not play well overall.”

While the Steers running game may be limited this season, the passing game has been clicking in mostly every game this season. Wide receivers Pablito Dehoyos, Kaegen Mitchell, and Jose Cantu have proven to have reliable hands and be able to make a defender or two miss following the catch.

Big Spring’s defense will also need to apply pressure to Rodriguez this Friday while also containing him and not letting him get too far outside the pocket. He is a threat to make a play with his feet and the Steers will be honing in on limiting his ability to run at Memorial Stadium this week.

The game is set to kickoff at 7:00 p.m. and is sure to be a great contest.

BULLDOGS

“Brysen got off to a very good start and all of our receivers got in the mix. We threw the ball very well.”

The Bulldogs will have their hands full this Friday night when they face the Lubbock Roosevelt Eagles. The Eagles are coming off of their first loss of the season, a 28-12 defeat by the hands of Abernathy. Outside of that game, the Eagles have put together an extremely dominating season and their defense has four shutouts of their own.

It should be an evenly-matched game with both offenses able to breakthrough a few times. Both offenses have the ability to score a lot of points, so it will be up to whichever defense makes more stops.

“We’ve been having great weeks of practices and we’re once again going to come out of the gate ready to go,” Joslin said.

Lubbock Roosevelt is a led by a high-powered rushing attack that is averaging over 375 yards per game (376.1). Senior running back Jacob Torrez has rushed for 999 yards so far this year while Alexander Trevino (681) and Kenyon Taylor (448) have each put together great seasons on the ground as well.

The Eagles have also lived in their opponents’ backfield for the majority of the season - compiling 81 tackles for loss and 23 sacks as a defense.

If Coahoma is able to use their balanced offensive attack to catch Lubbock Roosevelt slipping at some points, it could be the difference-maker they need to pull out a tough victory. The Eagles are an aggressive defense, and the ability of Kerby on the ground matched with their receiving game led by Tony Hagins and Sean Striegler should be enough to cause them consistent fits.

Kickoff is at 7:30 in Coahoma.

BUFFS

Stamford runs a balanced offensive attack and spread the ball around to different wide receivers. Their senior quarterback Zhawn Holden has passed for over 1,000 yards and 17 touchdowns this year. He has also thrown eight interceptions and can be forced into a bad decision.

“We’re going to let them play fast and our front seven has done a great job all-year getting after the quarterback. We want to force him into some quick decisions,” Phillips said.

Holden is also their leading rusher and it is not close. He currently has 592 yards and six touchdowns on the ground, while no other rusher has amassed over 100 yards or scored even one touchdown.

Wide receivers Dylan Faulks and Ryheem Smith are the leading receivers for the Bulldogs and will be the ones to watch on Friday night. They have combined for 14 touchdowns through the air and are deep-ball threats each and every time they drop back to pass.

If Forsan can limit Holden and pressure him, they should be able to take away the core of the Bulldogs’ offense and come out with a win.

Kickoff is at 7:30 in Forsan.
