Council Agendas to be authorized by Mayor moving forward

5-1 vote approves agenda item during Tuesday meeting

By ROGER CLINE
 Herald Staff Writer

By a 5-1 vote at Tuesday evening's Big Spring City Council meeting, the council delegated the direction and authorization of the council's meeting agendas to the Mayor.

The item, which had been placed on Tuesday's agenda by Mayor Shannon Thomason, specifies that Big Spring's Mayor "...shall direct the establishment and preparation of agendas for regular, special, emergency, and workshop city council meetings, including the Mayor until early last year, and this was changed regarding an agenda item that was pulled at the request of staff," Thomason said during the meeting. "The problem is - placing the handling of the agendas in the hands of the City Manager - is it puts the authorship of policy and the oversight of rules regarding it in the hands of an employee of this council, and as such, when there are disagreements, it puts that employee or employees in a difficult situation. So I undertook to review this and came up with some changes."

In addition to explicitly giving the Mayor responsibility for preparation of meeting agendas, the ordinance directs the process for items to be included in the agenda.

"All agenda item submissions shall be in writing; shall include a copy of any proposed item for consideration by the council; and shall be delivered or transmitted directly to the mayor by the submitting council member or the city manager in accordance with this section," the item directs.

The item also specifies that copies of agenda item submissions be delivered or transmitted to the City Manager and the City Secretary

Big Spring Cowboy Reunion & Rodeo returns for 87th year

By AMANDA DUFORAT
 Managing Editor

The Big Spring Cowboy Reunion and Rodeo returns for the 87th year of tradition. This year the rodeo bowl will be stirring from June 17-19, for three nights of bronc riding, bull riding, barrel racing and family entertainment.

"The largest weekend of entertainment to be brought to our local rodeo is coming together to form the 87th Annual Big Spring Cowboy Reunion & Rodeo," Derek Wash, Big Spring Cowboy Reunion and Rodeo Board Member, said.

For three nights, an array of entertainment will be gracing the rodeo grounds, from the Dynamite Dames Trick Riding and Keith Isley the Rodeo Clown keeping the crowd entertained and interacting in the rodeo arena, and then moving into the newly constructed Pavilion, Josh Ward, The Band Big Spring and Randy Rogers Band will be bringing the entertainment to wrap up the night. Dance tickets and rodeo tickets can be purchased in advance, but can also be purchased at the gate as well.

Rodeo tickets can be purchased at most of your local banks, H-E-B, Wards Western Wear, Pirkle Weir Insurance, and Cowboys Steakhouse. Dance tickets can be purchased at Pirkle Weir Insurance, Wards Western Wear and Cowboys Steakhouse.

"We are proud to hold our nightly dances under the newly constructed Pavilion east of the Fairbarn. It will be an open air pavilion facility that we are proud to show off to Howard County for their enjoyment Friday and Saturday both after the running of our great rodeo performances," Wash said.

He continued, "This event is able to bring so many folks into town for a multiple day event. We are able to show off the investment that so many have made in our community, our city, the Hotel Settles, and our one of a kind Rodeo Bowl and facilities!"

The final day of rodeo will kick off Saturday morning at 10 a.m. the annual rodeo parade - Quail Dobbs Memorial Parade - will be taking place Downtown. According to Wash, this is set to be one of the largest that the community has seen. There is no charge to attend and the families are encouraged to get out and enjoy the fun.

at the same time as they are delivered to the Mayor.

The ordinance sets deadlines for agenda submissions as 12 p.m. the Thursday preceding the regular council meeting for proposed ordinances or resolutions; and at 12 p.m. the Tuesday preceding the regular council meeting for other agenda items.

The item defines "emergency" agenda items, which can be submitted up until two hours prior to a meeting. The item also requires that each item placed on the agenda specify the person who requested it.

During discussion on the item, Councilwoman Gloria McDonald questioned who would be responsible for approving agenda items in the case the Mayor and Mayor Pro-Tempore were both absent. Thomason suggested that, after the Mayor and Mayor Pro-Tem, the duty be delegated to Council members in order of seniority. The council informally accepted the amendment, and the Mayor directed that it be written up and added to the ordinance before the final vote at the next Council meeting.

Councilman Nick Ornelas was the sole vote against the measure.

In other business, the council approved a change to an economic development agreement between the city and Texas NH Management LLC, the company purchasing the Spring Town Mall in Big Spring.

"We approved this economic development agreement with them back in March, but they have asked for one change," Thomason said. "They originally asked for the economic development incentive to continue being paid to them if they sold the property. Quite frankly, I don't feel comfortable with that. I think these incentives should be restricted to actual stakeholders. So my alternative offer to them was that I would be fine with allowing them to assign that agreement to a new property owner; to somebody that came along and bought the mall from them. And they could assign that without Council approval. Anything else would have to come to the council for approval. So that was the tentative agreement that we had."

The agreement would guarantee property tax rebates on the property of 100 percent for the first five years (2021-2026), 80 percent for the sixth year (2027), 60 percent for the seventh year (2028); 40 percent in the eighth year (2029); and 20 percent in the ninth year (2030). Starting in 2031, all rebates by the city would expire and the company would be expected to pay the full property tax rate. The city would also rebate 1/3 of the sales tax it collects from tenants at the mall.

In return, the agreement would restrict the types of businesses Texas NH Management could allow to do business in the mall.

The proposal was unanimously approved by the Council.

Other items approved unanimously by the council during the meeting include new rules governing the sale, service or consumption of alcohol at Comanche Trail Amphitheater by setting up boundaries at the facility where alcohol sale is allowed; a budget amendment in the amount of $10,000 to pay for postcard-style mailouts informing residents about new rollout garbage containers which will replace dumpsters in some portions of Big Spring; and an agreement with ADT Commercial for the purchase of a new surveillance camera system.

Big Spring Police Chief Chad Williams said he was legally prohibited from publicly announcing where the new camera would be placed.

Following the meeting, the council met in executive session to discuss litigation matters with the city attorney.

DNA, forensic genealogy closes 65-year-old double homicide

GREAT FALLS, Mont. (AP) — DNA evidence preserved on a microscope slide after a 1956 double homicide and the use of forensic genealogy helped a Montana sheriff's office close the books on the 65-year-old cold case, the Cascade County Sheriff's Office announced.

Investigators concluded Kenneth Gould — who died in Oregon County, Missouri, in 2007 — more than likely killed Patricia Kalitzke, 16, and Duane Bogle, 18, the Great Falls Tribune reports. Both were shot in the head.

Detective Sgt. Jon Kadner, who took over the case in 2012, said Tuesday it was the oldest case he could find nationwide to be solved using forensic genealogy, which searches commercial DNA databases to find familial matches to the DNA of a crime suspect.

On Jan. 3, 1956, three boys hiking along the Sun River near Wadsworth Park northwest of Great Falls found Bogle dead near his car. A day later, a county road worker found Kalitzke's body north of Great Falls.

Kalitzke was a junior at Great Falls High School, and Bogle was an airman at Malmstrom Air Force Base from Waco, Texas.

Officers investigated for years, but they were unable to make an arrest.

In 2001, then-Detective Phil Matteson sent the slide of a vaginal swab gathered from Kalitzke's body to the Montana State Crime Lab for analysis. The lab found a sperm cell that did not belong to Bogle, officers said.

In the following years, law enforcement compared the DNA sample to about 35 other men, including gangster James Joseph "Whitey" Bulger Jr. They were all ruled out as suspects.

When Matteson retired, he said he didn't believe the case would be solved. "A lot of different people had a turn at this, and we just weren't able to take it to conclusion," he said.

In 2018, however, forensic genealogy, which was used to help adoptees find biological family members, was used to identify Joseph James DeAngelo Jr. as the Golden State Killer. The new method has led to the identification of dozens of suspects in cold cases.

In 2019, Cascade County detectives had Bode Technology perform additional DNA testing on the evidence found on Kalitzke's body. It was uploaded to voluntary genealogical databases, where they discovered a possible family connection — leading investigators to Gould.

Kadner had to reach out to Gould's children and ask for DNA samples to verify the match.

"I wasn't sure how they were going to react when I come to them saying, 'Hey your dad's a suspect in this case,' but they were great to work with," Kadner said.

Gould's family home at the time of the homicides was a little over a mile from where Kalitzke lived and he was known to ride horses through the area, officials said.

After the murders, Gould sold his property near the town of Tracy. His family lived in Geraldine and Hamilton before moving to Missouri in 1967. They did not return to Montana.

Gould did not have a known criminal history and was not interviewed during the murder investigation. Investigators could not uncover any connection between Gould and the victims.

Officers kept working the case because of the circumstances, Kadner said.

"You had two young, vibrant individuals that were well-liked among their peer group," he said. "Investigators poured their heart and soul into this case. They leave a little bit of themselves, from what I've seen."

San Antonio base locked down for hour after gunfire reported

SAN ANTONIO (AP) — An Air Force base in San Antonio was placed on lockdown for about an hour Wednesday after military officials said gunfire was reported near a base gate.

Two gunshots were reported heard coming from outside Joint Base San Antonio-Lackland onto the base about 11:50 a.m., said Lt. Col. Brian Loveless, 802nd Security Forces Squadron commander. Investigators were trying to determine whether the gunfire report was true or a false alarm, Loveless said.

It was unclear whether anyone saw a shooter or whether more than one shooter may have been involved, he said.

"We're trying to investigate a couple of leads right now to confirm that gunshots actually did take place on the installation.

No injuries were reported, Loveless said.

Lackland is on San Antonio's southeast side and is where the Air Force conducts all of its basic training.

"There's a lot of facilities on this installation that are very important to the Air Force. I would rather overreact (to a gunfire report) than underreact," Loveless said.

The base issued an alert midday, telling all Lackland Air Force Base personnel to go into lockdown. An alert on Twitter said: "Real World, LOCKDOWN, LOCKDOWN, LOCKDOWN, LOCKDOWN."

Officials said the shots were reportedly fired near the Valley Hi gate on the western side of the main base, just east of Interstate 410 and near a shopping center.

After an hour, the lockdown was lifted except for the Valley Hi gate.

San Antonio police said they were assisting in the investigation. In a statement, police spokeswoman Jennifer Rodriguez said officers were looking for the spot from which gun-

Grape growers in Texas region sue over herbicide damage

LUBBOCK, Texas (AP) — Wine grape growers in Texas and surrounding states filed a lawsuit last week against drug-maker Bayer-Monsanto and chemical giant BASF for the damage their cotton herbicide has caused to vineyards.

Attorneys for the grape growers say cotton seed systems created by Bayer-Monsanto and BASF that use the highly volatile herbicide called dicamba to kill weeds is drifting to nearby vineyards and crippling the nonresistant grapes.

The lawsuit, filed in Jefferson County on Friday, claims that some family-owned vineyards have reported losses of more than 90% since Bayer-Monsanto and BASF began selling their dicamba-based genetically modified seed system to cotton growers.

More than 85% of all the wine grapes grown in Texas are grown within one hour of Lubbock, and the grapes are produced, sold or used by the state's $13.1 billion wine industry, according to the Lubbock Avalanche-Journal.

"The vineyards have seen their production fall dramatically, and what grapes do grow are often rejected for poor quality," the lawsuit says.

According to the suit, the existence of many High Plains vineyards is under threat because of the dicamba herbicide being sprayed on more than two-thirds of the 3 million acres of cotton in the Texas High Plains.

The Dugout: Breaking down the A.L. Central

By DUSTIN POPE

Herald Sports Writer

We are back in the dugout for some more baseball talk. Today is part three of the six-part series of breaking down the individual divisions in the MLB. So far, I have talked about the AL East and the AL West. Today we carry on to the last AL division, the AL Central.

The AL Central has five clubs, just like all the other divisions in the MLB. The Chicago White Sox, Cleveland Indians, Kansas City Royals, Minnesota Twins, and the Detroit Tigers. Two teams have ruled this division over the last few years, the Indians and the Twins. Minnesota has won the division the preceding two years. This year is a very different narrative. So let's plunge right into the AL Central and learn what's been going on to this point of the season.

The Chicago White Sox occupy the leading spot of this division right now. They come in with a 36-23 record. This puts them tied for the second-best record in all the American League and tied for Major League Baseball's third-best record. The White Sox have been a team on the rise for the last couple of years. They have immense young talent who all saw a lot of playing time last season, and now it's paying off in spades. They had a tremendous year last year as well, but we're still a little raw. During the offseason, they hired Tony La Russa, the long-time Manager who came out of retirement to take on his second assignment as the White Sox manager. La Russa managed the White Sox from (1979-1986). Altogether, La Russa has 34 seasons of managing experience. With a veteran manager, the Sox has the perfect man to lead this team of young talent. This team has been good both with the bats and pitching. The bats are just as good as any in the entire league. They can hit for contact, which is clear from their contact batting average of .254; they also have some pop in their bats, as showed from their slugging percentage of .408; as a unit, they also have 60 HR on the year. Yoan Moncada is one of the unquestioned leaders of this team. Moncada is batting .294, has a SLG of .431 and a Weighted Runs Created Plus (WRC+) of 149. Tim Anderson is another dynamic player for the Sox. The do-it-all shortstop has a batting average of .297, is SLG .432, and has a WRC+ of 116. The White Sox have been one of the best in the American League on the pitching side of things. They have a team Earned Run Average (ERA) of 3.25, which is the best in the American League. They have an AL-leading 27.6 K% and a remarkably low 7.9 BB%. That means they are striking a lot of batters out and not walking very many batters. Carlos Rodon has had a fantastic year so far, the White Sox pitcher. He has an ERA of 1.98 and a K% of 37.2. Rondon has been pretty dominant on the mound. Lance Lynn is another pitcher having himself a year. He has an ERA of 1.23 and has been just as remarkable as Rondon. Along with some great starting pitchers, the White Sox also have a dominant bullpen who can come in and shut down a game with ease. With as good as this pitching has been so far, and with the bats hot, the sky is the limit for this team. I believe they not only have an opportunity at winning the division, but likewise have a good chance to make it deep into the playoffs, maybe even the World Series.

Now, that moves us to the Cleveland Indians, who perch in second place with a 32-26 record. This makes them four games back from the White Sox. This year, the Indians had quite the off season. The team traded away superstar shortstop Francisco Lindor to the Mets. Lindor is one of the best players in all of baseball, but he was a free agent at the end of this approaching season. Aware they perhaps could not afford him; the Indians dealt him while they could still get something back for him. Along with the loss of Lindor, the Indians did not resign Carlos Santana, who had been a staple in their lineup for a lot of time. Santana moved on to the Kansas City Royals in Free Agency. With the loss of these two bats, it's no wonder the Cleveland has been struggling at the plate so far this year. They are batting only .221 as a team collectively, which puts them at the second worst in the AL. The power seems to be lacking this season and they only have an SLG of .387, with 68 HR. One bat they still have is Jose Ramirez; his powerful bat is batting .262, SLG .525, and has 13 HR. It has been better on the pitching side of things for the Indians, as they have a team ERA of 4.15, which puts them about mid-pack in the American League. Of course, they are led by last year's Cy Young winner Shane Bieber. While Bieber has not been as dominant this year as he was last, the guy is still one of the best in baseball. He presently has a 3.08 ERA, has a K% of 25.6, and a BB% of only 8.8. Bieber can do it in several ways on the mound. He has an exquisite four-seam fastball that sits at 93 MPH. Bieber has a dynamic curveball that has exceptional bite and will cause a lot of swings and misses. He will also use his slider a lot. He mixes his four seam, slider, and curve all about the same. This helps keep batters off tilt because they don't know what's coming. Another good pitcher for Cleveland has been Aaron Civale. He is entering his third year for the Indians, and he has a 3.49 ERA. Civale is a different style of a pitcher than Shane Bieber. Instead of striking people out, Civale is more of a contact pitcher; he uses his cutter most of all with good glove slide movement with some sink. He uses this to get ground balls and easy outs. The Indians are an interesting team because they do have solid pitching. The bats have capability, but I'm not positive they can put it all together. Trying to catch the White Sox is like Rocky trying to catch that chicken in Rocky 2, challenging but not inconceivable.

The Kansas City Royals sit in third place in the AL Central with a record of 29-30, which will make them seven and a half games back of first place. The Royals were an organization I thought to be a little stronger than what they have shown. They added the power bat of Carlos Santana and also got Andrew Benintendi in the off-season. The bats for the Royals have not been awfully bad so far this season. They have a team batting average of .242. Whit Merrifield has been a strong bat for the Royals for a few seasons now. He is a decent all-around player that brings veteran leadership to the club. Merrifield is batting .268, SLG of .406, and has chipped in 5 HR. Carlos Santana has likewise been worth the price of admission when watching the Royals. The ex-Cleveland Indian is batting .244, SLG .416, and he has 10 HR on the year. Another big bat they have is Salvador Perez. I know Perez as one of the best-hitting catchers in all of baseball. He presently owns an average of .279, SLG of .213, that goes along with 14 HR. As far as the pitching goes for the Royals, it has been up and down. They sit about mid-pack in team ERA with a 4.41. What has damaged them was the injury to Danny Duffy. He was off to a glorious start but suddenly had an injury last month and has yet to come back. Brady Singer is a young talented arm, but he has struggled this year. The youngster has an ERA of 4.88. Singer has talent, but I'm not confident he is an ace in the future; maybe he can be a third or fourth starter. So where does that leave the Royals? Well, honestly, I don't see them doing much this year. I expect they are still a few years away from being a squad to look out for.

In fourth place, it is the Detroit Tigers. The Tigers have a 25-35; they are 12 games back of the first-place Chicago White Sox. While the Tigers have not been good, there is some reason for enthusiasm in Detroit. They do have some new talent that is on the rise. Spencer Turnbull also threw a no-hitter for the Tigers earlier this season. So let's look at the bats first. The team is batting .225, which places them down near the bottom of the AL. They are only slugging .368, which is second-worst in the American League.

While they are struggling as a squad, there have been a few gems in the rough that have been discovered this year. Let's start with 22-year-old Akil Baddoo; the young Tiger has busted on to the scene this year. He had a scorching start when he was first called up to the Majors but has since cooled off. Baddoo is batting .233, but his SLG is .483 and he has 5 HR so far this season. He is a young talented player who this team will expect to develop around.

Another player who has burst onto the scene has been Eric Haase. Haase has played in just 20 games so far this season, but in those 20 games, the guy has 8 HR, is batting .278, and has a crazy .681 SLG. While there is no way this hot start will continue, it's been interesting to observe.

As a group, on the pitching side of things, they sit mid-pack in the AL with a team ERA of 4.37. Spencer Turnbull has been the surprise of the season so far. He has a .288 ERA and as I mentioned earlier, he had a no-hitter earlier this season. Turnbull has been great so far this season. Turnbull throws a nasty four seam that sits around 94 MPH. His fastball has a great sink to it. He also delivers a great slider that provokes a lot of ground balls. Another arm with skill is Casey Mize. This young pitcher is one of the better prospects in the league in his 11 starts; so far this year, he has a 3.34 ERA. If Mize can get some innings under his belt, he should be a good pitcher in the future. This year is lost for the Tigers, but with all of their young talent, the Tigers might be good in just a couple of years.

So now that brings us to the Minnesota Twins. The Twins have been the biggest disappointment of the year for me. The Twins come in with a record of 24-36; they are 13 games back of the first place. Where to start with the Twins? This was a team that won the division last year and was a fun team to watch. Injuries have played a big part in the breakdown of the Twins. Byron Buxton started the season hot, but he has been injured since May 6, and since his absence, the Twins have gone 12-16. While his return may be too late to save this season, Buxton could bring some trade value at the trade deadline. The Twins bats always seem to generate power at the plate, and this year is different as the Twins are SLG .423 with 83 HR, which is second best in the American League. The Twins have been struggling to put together a complete game for the entire nine innings. They do have talent but can't seem to put it all together so far this year. The pitching has been below average for the Twins, as they have a team ERA of 4.76. As with the bats, the pitching has seen its number of injuries, namely Kenta Maeda. This season is lost for the Twins, but with everyone back healthy next season, maybe they can get back to their old level of play.

So let's go over what we have learned about the AL Central. This is the White Sox division to lose; I believe the White Sox could contend for a World Series berth with their pitching and hitting. The Indians have a shot at catching the White Sox; I don't think they can do it. As for the rest of this division, well, there is always next year for those teams.

Annie's Mailbox

Go With True Love

Dear Annie: I've been seeing this guy for almost a year now. We practically live together, in fact. At first, to be honest, we just "hooked up" for, as he put it, "pleasure." But over the course of about three months of these hookups, our relationship got a little more serious, and now, almost a year later, we have deep feelings for each other. We both know that we love each other, too. We talk about our future, making plans for trips together.

The problem is that two of my sons aren't happy about or accepting of our relationship. You see, there is a big age difference between my guy and me. I'm 52, and he is exactly half my age. We don't look at that as a big deal, since we connect on so many levels. Sure, there are some things that are not what each of us are accustomed to, but we look past those things. He has made me feel more sexy and desired than any other man as well. But my two oldest sons, who are older than him, just can't get past the age gap. My oldest son is dead set against it. Any advice you can give me would be appreciated. -- In Love but Losing

Dear ILBL: The part of your letter that struck me the most was that you say you and your beau "both know" that you love each other: It implies that you two haven't actually said those words to each other. If that's the case, it's time for a "define the relationship" conversation so you can make sure that you're on the same page. If this is indeed true love, then set aside your sons' disapproval. Over time, as they see how much this man means to you, they may come around. A family counseling session including you and your sons might help with the process.

Dear Annie: This is in response to "Heart in Shambles," who found out her boyfriend was cheating on her after his other girlfriend sent her a message. From my personal experience, I'd bet her heart is not the only one in shambles. I've been married to the same man for almost 54 years. Let me just say "Heart in Shambles" could have been the women he had affairs with at different times throughout our marriage. I could have told each of them he would never leave me or his children for either one of them. I knew this as a fact, because no matter how much I knew about his philandering, he was always here for holidays or any other celebrations or times he needed to be here. I knew he would never leave.

I won't go into the whys of my decision to stay with him; they are varied and complicated. And every time I read a letter such as hers, I almost feel sorry for women like that.

As an aside, we have both been retired for over a decade, and we are growing older happily, in spite of the heartaches. But whether I speak it out loud or not, the pain and humiliation are still there no matter how much time has passed.

Please continue to advise those like "Heart in Shambles" that they can do better and they should always choose to do better. -- Cracked but Not in Shambles

Dear Cracked: Time heals most wounds, but scars are a different story. I am glad you and your husband were able to find happiness on the other side of infidelity, though I'm sorry to hear you're still carrying that pain. Thanks for the perspective.

A club return at this point seems normal, but East returned a low spade instead. It was this unusual play that quickly settled declarer's hash. South won with dummy's king, discarded a club on the ace of spades, and then lost a club finesse to West for down one.

Had East made the more natural-looking return of a club in the diagrammed position, South would have made the contract with proper play. He would simply have risen with the ace of clubs and cashed the 6-5 of hearts, squeezing West in spades and clubs to score the rest of the tricks.

Many declarers claim they find it difficult to recognize and execute a squeeze. But it is even more of a challenge for a defender to recognize that a squeeze is imminent — as East perceptively did in this case — and then break it up by severing declarer's communication with dummy.

Tomorrow: Bidding quiz.

Fun By The Numbers
Like puzzles? Then you'll love sudoku. This mind-bending puzzle will have you hooked from the moment you square off, so sharpen your pencil and put your sudoku savvy to the test!

Here's How It Works:

Sudoku puzzles are formatted as a 9x9 grid, broken down into nine 3x3 boxes. To solve a sudoku, the numbers 1 through 9 must fill each row, column and box. Each number can appear only once in each row, column and box. You can figure out the order in which the numbers will appear by using the numeric clues already provided in the boxes. The more numbers you name, the easier it gets to solve the puzzle!

BY HOLIDAY MATHIS

Solar Eclipse Festival

ARIES (March 21-April 19). Keeping up a frantic pace of life can feel reassuring on some levels, as all the interaction and responsibility can pass for a sense of importance. You'll slow it down and learn something interesting about yourself.

TAURUS (April 20-May 20). The dance of friendship is complex and seemingly nonsensical. Friends tell each other lies out of kindness, and they tell each other the truth out of kindness, too. These decisions will be instinctive and immediate.

GEMINI (May 21-June 21). Other people's lives may look a certain way from the outside, but they may as well exist on a moon of Jupiter for all you really know about them. There's so much benefit to concerning yourself strictly with your own world today.

CANCER (June 22-July 22). If the only way you can help others is silly and impractical, you just may be providing a more profound sort of help than you know. Everyone needs levity.

LEO (July 23-Aug. 22). The superior satisfaction of self-righteousness can be delicious indeed, which is why so many cannot resist. But judging others is also mightily unattractive, so you may opt to protect your looks with a "live and let live" stance.

VIRGO (Aug. 23-Sept. 22). As much as you enjoy a good story, you also prize the days like this one, where everything goes so smoothly that there is no conflict or obstacle large enough to mention.

LIBRA (Sept. 23-Oct. 23). The so-called secret isn't one. It's not even hidden! And it's not costly either. The "secret" is just another accessible option that people miss because it rather unglamorously blends in. Step back. What's everyone overlooking?

SCORPIO (Oct. 24-Nov. 21). It's like only one door can be opened at a time. You open a new one, and that closes all other options. But move forward in confidence anyway because none of your current options is drastically different from the others.

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 22-Dec. 21). You have this ability to make other people feel that while they are with you, whatever the two of you are doing is preferable to what anyone else in the world could possibly be up to.

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22-Jan. 19). Things don't have to be high-drama to be exciting. In fact, these days, you prefer your drama to be in the world of entertainment, not in your real life.

AQUARIUS (Jan. 20-Feb. 18). Your moods, behaviors, attitudes and actions will go down in history in the sense that others will remember what it's like to interact with you. That reputation will be part of your legacy.

PISCES (Feb. 19-March 20). Life is not a test with option D, "all of the above," and today you will need to make a definite choice. The good news is making a decision now saves you from making an excuse later.

TODAY'S BIRTHDAY (June 10). You know and expect exactly what you want. Your clarity brings about magic. Seldom does something you've wished for just sail in from out of the blue and plop right into your open hand, but that's exactly what will happen. A key relationship opens the door to new professional and financial avenues. Taurus and Cancer adore you. Your lucky numbers are: 4, 33, 35, 2 and 15.

NEW MOON PRE-SHOW: One way to get ready for the social opportunities coming our way with tomorrow's new moon is to have a number of icebreakers and fun topics in our conversational bag. Try these on for size:

LIBRA: As the sign of harmony, this one is perfect for you: (SET ITAL)What song describes your life right now?(END ITAL)

SCORPIO: Unafraid to go to hot topics, you're fine with asking: (SET ITAL)Can you recall a time when you escaped danger or thought that's what you were doing?(END ITAL)

SAGITTARIUS: Speaking to your quest for freshness: (SET ITAL)When was the last time you did something for the first time?(END ITAL)

CAPRICORN: Ever-ambitious, you like to hear about the goals of others. (SET ITAL)What's on your bucket list that you might start working on soon?(END ITAL)

AQUARIUS: With a focus on fun and novelty, you can't go wrong: (SET ITAL)Got any memorable theme park memories?(END ITAL)

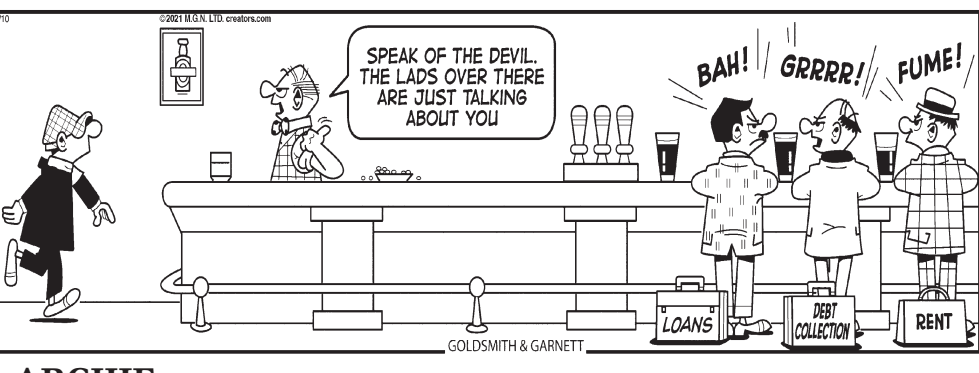

PISCES: The sign of spirit wants to know: (SET ITAL)What have you witnessed that might fall under the category of otherworldly? It could be artistic, spiritual or just trippy. (END ITAL)

This Date In History

Today is Thursday, June 10, the 161st day of 2021. There are 204 days left in the year.

Today's Highlight in History:

On June 10, 1963, President John F. Kennedy signed into law the Equal Pay Act of 1963, aimed at eliminating wage disparities based on gender.

On this date:

In 1692, the first execution resulting from the Salem witch trials in Massachusetts took place as Bridget Bishop was hanged.

In 1922, singer-actor Judy Garland was born Frances Ethel Gumm in Grand Rapids, Minnesota.

In 1935, Alcoholics Anonymous was founded in Akron, Ohio, by Dr. Robert Holbrook Smith and William Griffith Wilson.

In 1942, during World War II, German forces massacred 173 male residents of Lidice (LIH'-dyiht-zeh), Czechoslovakia, in retaliation for the killing of Nazi official Reinhard Heydrich.

In 1944, German forces massacred 642 residents of the French village of Oradour-sur-Glane.

In 1967, six days of war in the Mideast involving Israel, Syria, Egypt, Jordan and Iraq ended as Israel and Syria accepted a United Nations-mediated cease-fire.

In 1971, President Richard M. Nixon lifted a two-decades-old trade embargo on China.

In 1977, James Earl Ray, the convicted assassin of civil rights leader Martin Luther King Jr., escaped from Brushy Mountain State Prison in Tennessee with six others; he was recaptured June 13.

In 1978, Affirmed, ridden by Steve Cauthen, won the 110th Belmont Stakes to claim horse racing's 11th Triple Crown.

In 1991, 11-year-old Jaycee Dugard of South Lake Tahoe, California, was abducted by Phillip and Nancy Garrido; Jaycee was held by the couple for 18 years before she was found by authorities.

In 2004, singer-musician Ray Charles died in Beverly Hills, California, at age 73.

In 2013, jury selection began in Sanford, Florida, in the trial of neighborhood watch volunteer George Zimmerman, charged with second-degree murder in the fatal shooting of 17-year-old Trayvon Martin. (Zimmerman was acquitted.)

Ten years ago: In a stern rebuke, Defense Secretary Robert Gates warned in Brussels that the future of the historic NATO military alliance was at risk because of European penny pinching and a distaste for front-line combat. Tony La Russa managed his 5,000th game as his St. Louis Cardinals lost to the Milwaukee Brewers 8-0.

Five years ago: Muhammad Ali was laid to rest in his hometown of Louisville, Kentucky, after an all-day send-off. "Mr. Hockey" Gordie Howe, who set scoring records that stood for decades, died in Sylvania, Ohio, at 88. Singer Christina Grimmie, 22, a finalist on NBC's "The Voice," was shot to death during a meet-and-greet after giving a concert in Orlando, Florida, by an apparently obsessed fan who then killed himself. Actor Michael Jace was sentenced in Los Angeles to 40 years to life in prison for fatally shooting his wife, April.

One year ago: Protesters pulled down a century-old statue of Confederate President Jefferson Davis in Richmond, Virginia, the former capital of the Confederacy. President Donald Trump said his administration would "not even consider" changing the name of any of the 10 Army bases that were named for Confederate Army officers. NASCAR announced that it was banning the Confederate flag at dreds of millions of people losing jobs.

Today's Birthdays:

Attorney F. Lee Bailey is 88. Actor Alexandra Stewart is 82. Singer Shirley Alston Reeves (The Shirelles) is 80. Actor Jurgen Prochnow is 80. Media commentator Jeff Greenfield is 78. Actor Frankie Faison is 72. Football Hall of Famer Dan Fouts is 70. Country singer-songwriter Thom Schuyler is 69. Former Sen. John Edwards, D-N.C., is 68. Actor Andrew Stevens is 66.
