Let's talk cotton - 2021 Crop Tour and Cotton Boll Scramble

By ROGER CLINE
 Herald Staff Writer

Howard County has a big history with cotton. The "king" crop has long been one of the region's economic pillars, and understanding the cotton plant and the way it grows has a huge impact on farmers' bottom lines.

Sept. 30, the Texas A&M AgriLife Extension is offering local farmers a chance to participate in the collection of data it uses to help agricultural science understand factors related to how cotton grows...and then play a little golf.

The event is the Crop Tour and Cotton Boll Golf Scramble, and it kicks off at 7:30 a.m. Sept. 30 with registration at the G.C. Broughton Jr. Ag Complex, 2411 Echols Dr. in Big Spring.

"Two of the stops on that tour are going to be variety trials," said Ag Extension Agent Tommy Yeater. "We're looking at 12 or 13 different varieties of cotton. It's different companies. Some of them may be a little earlier maturing than other varieties, some of them may grade a little better but yield drops off. So with my work with them, we, number one, see how they grow, see how they perform, then I work and harvest them. I take a sample and I take it to Lubbock in December. I take it to an independent lab and they crunch the numbers. So it's not just a seed company telling you how good their seed is. We have compared all these different companies' seed, and at the end of the day, what's it going to do?"

The variety trials usually test the newer varieties each year, Yeater said.

In addition to the comparison of cotton seed varieties, Yeater said the study will also include a seeding rate trial.

"That is planting different amounts of seed to the acre," he said. "That doesn't sound like much, but when a bag of seed costs $500 and that's good for three acres versus five acres, and you're planting 4,000 acres, it can have a really important impact. What we're doing is looking at the benefit of seeding rates in accordance to managing your cotton. When it's a wet year going into it and you know you're going to have a lot of plants germinate, maybe you need to back off. Instead of putting a plant every six inches, just put them every 10 inches. Because we're pretty confident they're going to come up and be effective."

Yeater said the study will look at the effectiveness of planting cotton plants

 Toasty Tuesday volunteers have been showing up and cleaning up Big Spring. Last week, 12 volunteers picked up 32 bags of trash around the Howard College men's dorm and the 11th Place area. This week, Toasty Tuesday will be focusing their efforts around the fairgrounds. Next week, Keep Big Spring Beautiful is encouraging the community to come out and take part in the annual Love Our Lake cleanup, at Comanche Trail Park. Toasty Tuesdays will continue until the end of October, weather permitting. Updates on locations can be found by following Keep Big Spring Beautiful on Facebook.

Special to the Herald

The Big Spring Rotary Club honored two Outstanding Students at a recent meeting.

This month a student from Coahoma and a student from Forsan were recognized for their accomplishments.

She is an active member of the volleyball, basketball, track and softball teams and participates in Ag events. She earned a spot in the 100% club by attending summer workouts.

What separates Brynn from her classmates is that she is an extremely good teammate. She is always cheering them on while she is on the bench and while she is active on the floor. She is always willing to do whatever needs to be done. An example that was mentioned during the meeting took place at a recent game; the team had a player leave the court and Brynn

6, 8, 10 and 12 inches apart, given this year's conditions.

"This year is going to be a really good test because this has been a really good year," he said. "It's been really good rains, and we could use another one right now. Actually, 10 days ago. But regardless, it's going to be good."

Yeater said this season, it looks like a 10-inch planting scheme looks like the best bet.

"We're showing that 10 inches is what we want," he said. "It just depends on the year and the conditions."

Yeater said program also includes studies of harvest aids, herbicides used to protect yield by controlling weeds that interfere with harvest operations and by diverting water and nutrients intended for the cotton plants.

"Any farmer out there...any cotton farmer...would benefit by coming to this educational program and listening to these demonstrations," Yeater said. "Especially the seeding rate and the harvest aid."

Farms assisting with the Crop Tour studies locally include Blagraves Farms, Moates Farms, and Iden Farms, all located in the north part of Howard County.

Following the tour, which will start with registration at 7:30 a.m. and run through noon, participants will be treated to a hamburger lunch at Big Spring Gin, followed by the Cotton Boll Golf Scramble at Comanche Trail Golf Course, sponsored by Expedition Royalty Company.

Other sponsors for the event include Pirkle Weir Insurance Agency, State National Bank, Lone Star Bank, and Helena Agri-Enterprises.

"Take the time to come out," Yeater urged local farmers. "There's three CEUs being offered with this program for those who need CEUs. Take the time to come out and gather with your friends and fellow producers and get an idea of what harvest aids are working."

For more information contact Yeater at 432-466-3131.

Big Spring Steers induct 2006 cross country team into the schools Hall of Fame

Herald Photos/Dustin Pope

This past Friday night, Sept 17, the Big Spring Steers paid a massive tribute to the 2006 cross country running team. The 2006 cross country team won the State title in that season and was one of the most successful teams of all time. They were inducted into the Big Spring Athletics Hall of Fame during the lightning delay in the middle of the field at Memorial Stadium. The fantastic team included: Coach Randy Britton, Zack Dawson, Chris Salazar, Michael Rodriguez, Jessie Sanchez, Chris Martinez, Jordan Valle, and Shane Allen. It was a special moment for a particular group of guys who will now forever have a place in Steers history.

Sánchez homers, Yanks beat Rangers 4-3 to gain in wild card

By RONALD BLUM

AP Baseball Writer

NEW YORK — Maligned for poor defense and a bat that failed to fulfill promise for long stretches, Gary Sánchez impresses the Yankees with resilience.

With New York reeling after consecutive blowouts, Sánchez sparked a revival with an early go-ahead home run. Chad Green and Aroldis Chapman headlined four relievers who combined for 4 2/3 scoreless innings in a 4-3 victory over the Texas Rangers on Monday night that boosted the Yankees within a half-game of Toronto for the second AL wild card.

Sánchez put the Yankees ahead in the second against rookie A.J. Alexy (2-1) with the 22nd home run, and run-scoring singles by Aaron Judge and Gleyber Torres around Giancarlo Stanton's sacrifice fly built a 4-0 lead in the third.

Sloppy play behind the plate by Sánchez contributed to three defeats during New York's fall from a playoff position: He failed to tag a runner against the Mets despite catching the throw in plenty of time, allowed a pair of ninth-inning wild pitches at Baltimore and missed a foul popup in a seven-run inning by Cleveland.

"The first thing you learn," Sánchez said through translator Marlon Abreu, "nobody is going to be perfect playing this game. Even if you look at Gold Glovers, they're going to make some mistakes throughout the year. It's a tough sport, a long year. ... The main focus is the next pitch. The next pitch is the most important one. You have to have that mindset."

Sánchez had 20 homers and 42 RBIs as a rookie in 2016, hit 33 homers with 90 RBIs the following year but has endured long slumps. He is hitting .211 with 52 RBIs this season, displaced by Kyle Higashioka as the catcher for ace Gerrit Cole.

"A guy that I feel has gotten beaten down and kind of abused over the years. It doesn't matter what it is," Judge said. "You see a lot of guys around the league and a lot of guys around the game that kind of get stuck in their ways and it's my way or the highway or this is just how I do it. But Gary is a guy that's always willing to listen, always willing to learn and continue to improve on his craft."

Yankees manager Aaron Boone expressed support for Sánchez before the game.

"Sometimes because Gary is the lightning rod that he seems to be sometimes, a play or two really torpedoes some of that or changes that narrative, and that's not necessarily fair," Boone said.

"I've just gained a lot of respect for the man," Boone added after the final out. "Even though he's had a tough week leading up to this, he does a good job of blocking things out and moving on even when he does make a mistake."

With a harvest moon rising above Yankee Stadium, New York built a 4-0 lead before the Rangers closed in a three-run fifth against Nestor Cortes.

Green (8-7) retired five straight batters and Chapman three in a row for his 28th save in 32 chances — both pitching on four days' rest. Between them, Clay Holmes and Joely Rodríguez combined for the seventh and eighth.

After losing two of three to Cleveland (73-76), the Yankees (84-67) gained on Toronto and wild-card leader Boston (86-65) with 11 games left.

"If we play well, the results will take care of themselves," Boone said.

Charlie Culberson led off the fifth with a home run for Texas. Leody Taveras and Isiah Kiner-Falefa hit consecutive doubles, Green threw a wild pitch that Sánchez hardly moved for, and rookie standout Adolis García hit a sacrifice fly.

Cortes escaped second-and-third, no-outs trouble in the first with three straight strikeouts and allowed three runs and five hits in 4 1/3 innings with seven strikeouts.

Texas dropped to 55-95, on track for its first 100-loss season since 1973. Taveras airmailed a throw home from center field in the third, advancing the runners and leading to a run.

"Those are little things that we shot ourself in the foot," manager Chris Woodward said. "We should have won that game. I hope everybody in that clubhouse realizes that."

Alexy, making his third big league start, allowed four runs, four hits and six walks in 3 1/3 innings. He's walked 15 in 18 innings.

"You can't stay in this league if you're going to walk guys like that," Woodward said.

OLD FRIENDS

Joey Gallo went 0 for 3 with a walk after missing 1 1/2 games with a sore neck, returning to play for the first time against the team that traded him to the Yankees in July.

"It's crazy. It's weird being on the other side," he said. "It brings a lot of emotion, a lot of memories."

TRAINER'S ROOM

Yankees: RHP Domingo Germán (right shoulder inflammation) could be activated as soon as Tuesday. Jameson Taillon (right ankle tendon) could throw in a minor league game Wednesday.

LHP Jordan Montgomery (5-6, 3.63 ERA) starts Tuesday night against Texas RHP Dane Dunning (5-8, 4.28).

Healthy soup offers many different benefits

Food is a critical component of healthy living, helping people
to reduce their risk for illnesses and even helping them to overcome colds and other ailments.

The properties of soup, for example, can chase away chills and offer other benefits.

Soup is hydrating,
and the ingredients
included in the recipe may be able to do everything from tame coughs to reduce mucus to boost the immune system.

This recipe for "Navy
Bean and Collard

Greens Soup" courtesy
of John La Puma, M.D., ChefMD, includes collard greens. When one chops or chews collard greens, he or she gets
the powerful, helpful
chemicals isothiocyanates and indole-3-carbinol.

They can help the liver produce enzymes that detoxify cancer-causing toxins in the body. In addition,

the soup includes tofu,
which will adopt the flavor of other ingredients
and add a form of lean protein along with the beans.

Navy Bean and Collard Greens Soup
Serves 4

3 cups vegetable
broth, such as Pacific
Organic brand

4 cups coarsely

chopped stemmed collard greens, preferably organic (1 bunch 10 to 12 ounces)

1 1/2 cup packaged julienned (matchstick)
carrots

1 1/2 teaspoons chili
garlic puree or chili
paste with garlic

1 (12 ounce)
package extra firm tofu,
cubed in bite size pices

1 (16 ounce) can
unsalted navy beans,
drained

1/4 cup grated Romano cheese

Combine broth,
collard greens, carrots,
and chili garlic puree
in a large saucepan.
Bring to a boil over high heat. Reduce heat;

cover and simmer 10
to 12 minutes or until greens are nearly tender.

Stir in tofu and beans
cover and simmer 5
minutes or until vegetables are tender. Ladle into shallow bowls; top
with cheese.

Tips: Great northern or cannellini beans
may replace the navy
beans and Swiss chard
may replace the collard
greens if desired.

Also, look for chili
garlic puree or chili
paste with garlic in the ethnic section of the supermarket.

Because the beans
are unsalted, there is no need to rinse them before adding to the soup.

Opening lead — queen of hearts.

In many suit contracts, declarer is faced with the threat of being over-ruffed by one of the defenders. When the overruff seems imminent, declarer should study his options carefully before committing himself in one direction or the other.

Consider South's problem in this deal where he reaches four spades on the bidding shown. East overtakes West's queen-of-hearts lead with the king, cashes the ace and continues with the jack at trick three.

The bidding and East's first three plays combine to make it a virtual certainty that West is out of hearts at this point, and the question is whether or not to ruff with the ten. To defuse the immediate threat, South could trump with the king, but the trouble with this is that it might promote the missing jack into a trick.

In the actual deal, if declarer trumps with either the ten or king, he will go down one. Both plays establish a trump winner for West, and when South later tries a club finesse, East's queen scores the setting trick.

If ruffing high or low were declarer's only options, he could not succeed as the cards lie. But there is a third option that makes declarer a very strong favorite to finish with ten tricks.

His best play is to discard a club at trick three instead of attempting to win the trick. By doing so, declarer telescopes both of his potential losers into one trick, leaving him in the driver's seat.

Regardless of what East plays next, declarer is home free. Another heart lead by East can be overruffed by dummy if West ruffs, after which South has the rest of the tricks.

Tomorrow: A drop in the bucket.

Annie's Mailbox

Husband on the Go

Dear Annie: My husband and I have been married for nearly three decades. Up until seven years ago, my husband, who is very sensitive, had a difficult time making friends. Oh, he's super funny, charismatic and adventurous, but he struggled outside the home.

Then he started finding groups of guys who were as adventurous and fun as he was. However, my husband has always been self-centered and took off on loads of trips.

For the past seven years, it has been trip after trip of four to seven days. He asks me to celebrate his kids' birthdays, and sometimes he doesn't even consider that his kids are on winter or spring vacation -- because he always seems to make other plans.

My kids are resentful, and I'm tired of making excuses. I'm not unhappy or looking for a divorce. Should I just continue to let this go? He's not open to change, even if it could affect his family relationships. I'm going with immature and selfish because his behavior makes no sense. -- Single Parent in a Two-Parent Family

Dear Single Parent in a Two-Parent Family: I believe that you're correct that he is immature and selfish, though communication is the key to understanding why he is acting this way. Some people try to push the limits about what is acceptable until they are corrected, and if this is what he is doing, he will not recognize it until you speak with him.

You need to sit down with him and talk with him about how his constant travel and neglect makes you and your family feel. Ask him for more attention to your needs. You will want to form a compromise that allows him to still spend time on trips with friends but carves out time for you and the children. If that doesn't work, then add insensitive to immature and selfish, and get into couples counseling.

Dear Annie: My husband and I have been together for 28 years. He's a very sweet and loving man, but his watching other women really bothers me. It happens whenever we're out together, even in church!

I know there will always be women who are better-looking or better built; but it's really demeaning and leaves me with such an empty feeling. I've talked to him about this, and he doesn't seem to take my concerns seriously. A simple glance, not a problem, but to continue watching is just too much.

What do I do? Do I keep smiling and pretend not to notice? What can I do? At this point, I don't like going out. -- Feeling Insignificant in Florida

Dear Feeling Insignificant in Florida: On a positive note, wandering eyes are better than wandering hands. I am glad that you aren't concerned that something more serious is happening, which implies that the foundation of your marriage is strong.

Given that, you should be able to have a direct conversation with your husband. Let him know that this makes you feel insignificant to him and that it hurts. Understand that he will likely continue to notice attractive people but that he shouldn't look more than a simple glance. Offer to come up with a cue that will recall his attention if he lapses, such as a tug at his hand. It will likely take a bit of training because he probably isn't aware that he's even staring.
