Leadership Summit planned Monday

Public invited to planning session at Dorothy Garrett Coliseum

By ROGER CLINE

Herald Staff Writer

What should the path forward for Howard County look like? Local government and other community leaders are meeting Monday to discuss the issue and try to get on the same page regarding the future of our local area, and you're invited to listen and submit questions for the various entities that guide Howard County, Big Spring, and its various entities to consider.

The Special Joint Leadership Summit is scheduled at 6:30 p.m. Monday at Howard College's Dorothy Garrett Coliseum, 1001 Birdwell Lane. Those interested can attend in person, or view a live stream of the meeting at www.stellarvirtualevents.com/howard-county-leadership-summit.

A recording will be available at the same link immediately following the meeting, or on Suddenlink Channel 17 one week after the event.

"One of the things that drove this Dec. 6 meeting is, communications just haven't been there, so maybe if we just throw everybody together," said Big Spring Economic Development Corporation Executive Director Mark Willis, the event's organizer. "I'm hoping for some personal communications in the foyer after it's over. I think that's the best you can hope for - some of the City Council members talking to some of the County Commissioners about 'We have problems with this...let's stop doing this and work together.' I have several examples I think could be worked out that right now we fight about. That could be worked out to be mutually beneficial if we'd just talk a little more and work through those problems."

At 6:30 p.m., District Judge Timothy Yeats, acting as master of ceremonies, will call the meeting to order and welcome those present. Associate Pastor of Life Church Manny Negrón will offer an invocation and lead the Pledge of Allegiance.

Judge Yeats will explain the focus of the meeting and the procedures to be followed, and then representatives from each of the 10 entities attending the meeting will have a chance to speak about their vision, challenges and ideas about the area's focus for 2022 and the future.

Entities attending the meeting and their respective representatives include:

- Howard County - Commissioner Jimmie Long (Precinct 3)
- City of Big Spring - Mayor Shannon

This week's review are fiction titles. Young widow Joanna Watson is struggling to make a new home for her five-year-old son, Samuel, in the little mountain town of Settler's Fort in Love's Mountain Quest - Hearts of Montana Series Bk# 2 (F BEL M) by Misty M. Beller. When she returns home from work to find Samuel and the woman watching him missing. With no lawman in town, she enlists a man she prays has enough experience in this rugged country to help. Isaac Bowen wants nothing more than a quiet, invisible life in these mountains, far away from the bad decisions of his past. But he has a strong suspicion of who's behind the kidnapping, and if he's right, he knows all too well the evil they're chasing. As they press on against the elements, Joanna fights to hold on to hope, while Isaac knows a reckoning is coming. They find encouragement in the tentative trust that grows between them, but whether it can withstand the danger and coming confrontation is far from certain in this wild, unpredictable land.

Caroline Delacroix is at the pinnacle of Washington high society in her role as secretary to the First Lady of the United States in A Gilded Lady - Hope and Glory Series Bk# 2 (F CAM E) by Elizabeth Camden. But beneath the facade of her beauty, glamorous wardrobe, and dazzling personality, she's hiding a terrible secret. If she cannot untangle a web of foreign espionage, her brother will face execution for treason. Nathaniel Trask is the newly appointed head of the president's Secret Service team. He is immediately attracted to Caroline's quick wit and undeniable charm, but his job leaves no room for distractions. Anarchist plots have led to mounting threats against the president, forcing him to put duty before his

TUMBLEWEED SMITH

Special to the Herald

"In 1937 my dad hitched a team to a wagon and we went down the road a couple of miles to a neighbor's house for Sunday dinner," says Dewain Collins, who was living in Weatherford at the time. "I was 11 months old and just learning to walk. Sometime that afternoon I began to get sick. We went on back home and I laid around sick for a couple of days. My parents decided I needed to go see a doctor because I was paralyzed from the waist down."

He was taken to the Scottish Rite Hospital in Dallas where he was diagnosed with infantile paralysis, later called polio.

"Doctors at the hospital said they were going to keep me and told my parents they could see me from 2 to 4 on Sunday afternoons, but because of my young age they said it would be best if they didn't come to see me at all. I was at the hospital off and on for 10 or 12 years,"

Because not much was known about the disease then, his sister, 2 years older than Dewain, was not allowed to attend school. Later both kids were admitted, but Dewain had trouble maneuvering.

"An old janitor met me at the school bus, took me to classes, the rest room and to recess where I could sit on a rock fence and watch the other children play. Then after school he put me back on the school bus. He did that for 6 or 8 weeks."

Initially, Dewain was strapped to a board to keep his spine straight. Then he went to braces, casts and crutches.

"I got pretty good on the crutches and could keep up with the other kids. Without them I was limited in what I could do. The doctors had wanted me to get rid of the crutches but I was reluctant to give them up. Finally after 10 or 12 years I gave up the crutches and started walking without them. I did that for 60 plus years. Every once in a while if I was going to be walking for sometime I used the crutches. Most of the time I didn't need them."

After college Dewain wanted 3 things: a job, a car and a girl. So he hitchhiked to the oil patch.

"I ended up in Eunice, New Mexico working for Halliburton dispatching trucks and all kinds of drilling rigs. Later I got a job with the Department of Public Safety and was a dispatcher 40 years. I worked at other jobs for another 20 years. In addition to a job I got a car and a girl who has been my wife for 63 years. We have a wonderful family and overall I would say I've had a good life so far."

Dewain, who now lives in Lubbock, credits his happy life to the Masons, who founded the Scottish Rite Hospital 100 years ago. He is a Mason.

THE IDLE AMERICAN: Back to Basketball Basics?...

by Dr. Don Newbury

Special to the Herald

The late James Naismith, an accomplished educator/physician/minister/philosopher, also was an inventor.

An 1891 collegian, he took seriously the assignment to "invent" an indoor game to replace "thumb-twiddling" on dreary, cold, snowy days when youngsters ventured outdoors only to fetch firewood.

He came up with "basketball," a game he proposed to be "gentlemanly competition important to physical and spiritual development." Peach baskets were nailed to walls on each end of the floor and a custodian with a ladder removed the ball when baskets were made. There were but 10 basic rules. When it became an Olympic sport in 1936, it had hundreds of rules, becoming far more than a parlor game gone awry. Naismith, who died in 1939, wouldn't approve of the mayhem his "invention" has become....

Instant replay has been added to help officials get it more nearly right.

Video reviews from various angles and at different speeds may sometimes help, but the game's flow is lost in the process. Many closely involved with the sport hate it.

I have never seen instant replay to assure fairness for jump balls, where it could be immensely helpful. Naismith explained that when the ball is held simultaneously by opposing players, it should be tossed in the air at the nearest circle, with the two jumpers challenged to tap the ball to teammates....

Here's my beef: Almost never is the ball tossed STRAIGHT UP. Usually, it favors the "jumper" who perhaps feels the "whoosh" of the ball upward as it passes his/her nose.

Perhaps not quite so often-but too often-one jumper taps the ball BEFORE it reaches its ultimate height, thus favoring the one who ignores the rule.

Where's the re-play camera when we need it? Too often, officials ignore such infractions, electing to "play on."...

Officials could also strive to toss the ball STRAIGHT UP, trying also for tosses of similar elevation.

Players would soon learn that hitting the ball on the way up is not permitted.

Strange things often occur during jump balls, or in proximity thereto....

During a recent NBA game when the Dallas Mavericks took down the Los Angeles Clippers in overtime, Dallas' star Kristaps Porzingis was fouled following a held ball. The 7'2" cager called "the unicorn" clapped one time-just once-to indicate his pleasure.

Official Kane Fitzgerald failed to view the clap as an endorsement, quickly assessing a technical foul to the stunned Porzingis.

It is worth noting that LeBron James has been ejected only twice during his 19-year NBA career, both times by Fitzgerald. Coincidence? Who knows, but there are six dozen NBA officials. When they seem bent on getting their names in bold print of the game story instead of small type in the box score, they deserve the time-honored nickname of "rabbit ears." There are many competent and reserved officials, so much in the background that most fans don't even remember they were present. A few, though, should be penalized, demoted or even eliminated.

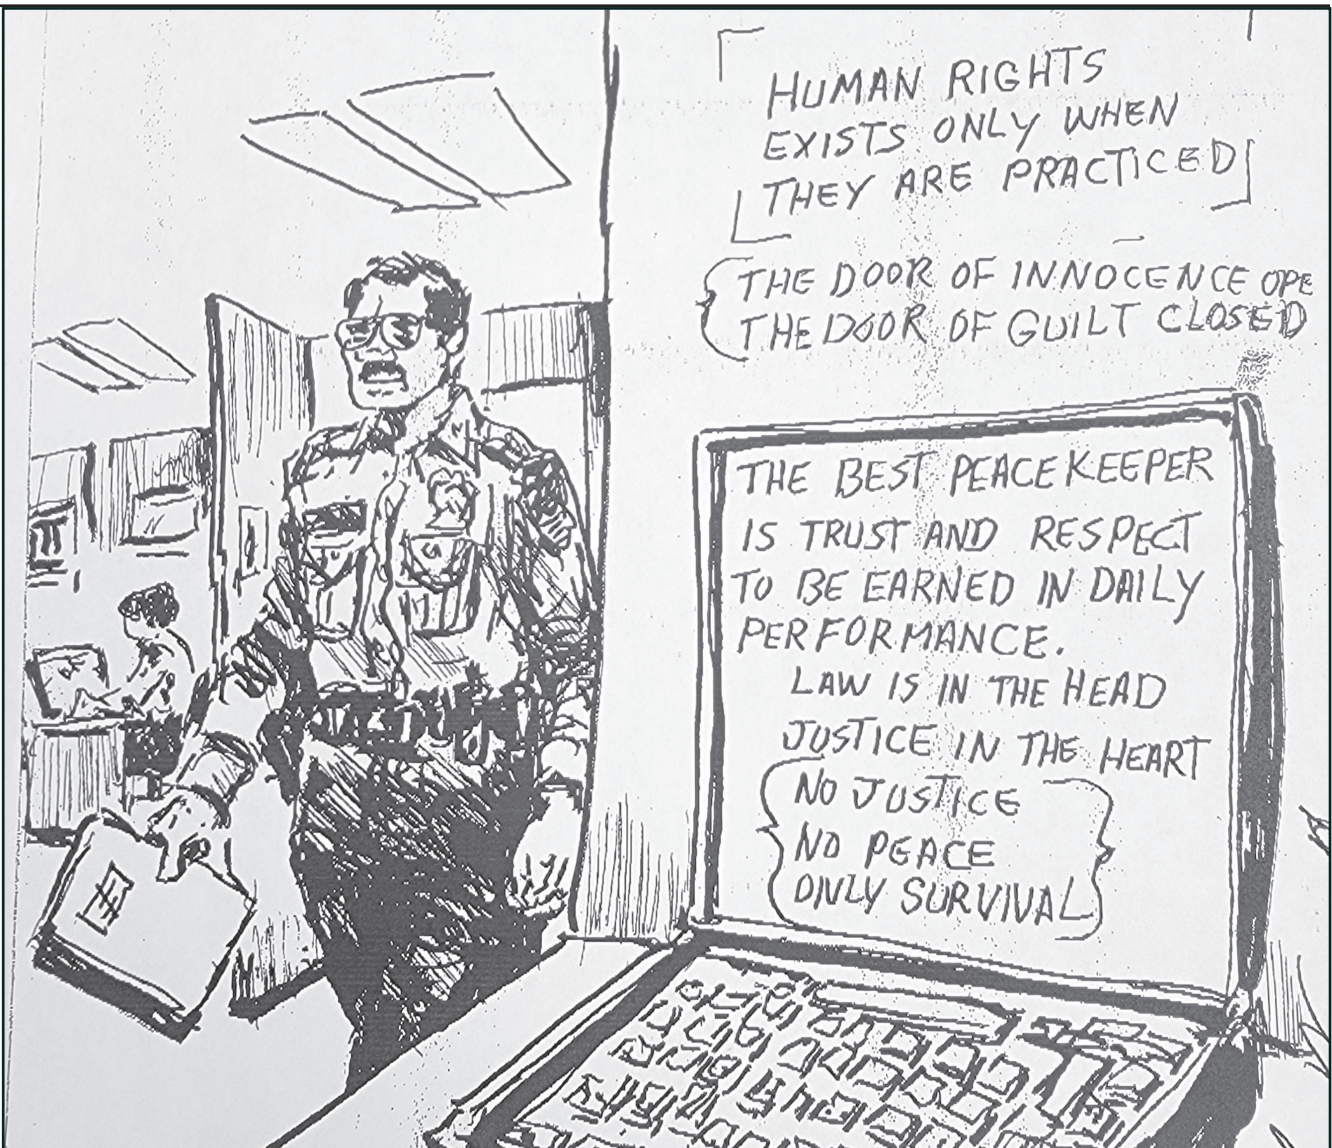

What are coaches and players to do when a big part of the game is determining officials' temperamental leanings?

Basketball is becoming a sport improbable to coach and impossible to officiate, far from the game Naismith had in mind.

Remembered are comments by colorful Coach Abe Lemons. The late coach said he needed two additional staff members-a hairdresser and a psychologist....

My old dad officiated three-day high school basketball tournaments in the 1930s for a total of $15. Sometimes tournaments had as many as 16 games!

I officiated games for small schools while in college a quarter-century later. Then, two officials were assigned, each receiving $15 for working both girls' and boys' games.

Broncos hope to keep AFC West jumbled against Chiefs

By BARRY WILNER

AP Pro Football Writer

The Broncos don't beat the Chiefs. Andy Reid almost never loses coming off a bye.

The NFL flixed Denver at Kansas City with those facts staring directly at the league?

Well, yes.

Sunday night's game, which replaces San Francisco at Seattle, is for the AFC West lead, which makes it significant enough. Plus, anytime the NFL and NBC can get Patrick Mahomes, Travis Kelce and the rest of the Chiefs in prime time is an opportunity they tend to seize.

"It's like somebody mentioned the other day: Sunday night is THE game," Broncos coach Vic Fangio said this week, "so players get amped for it. I don't think we'll have an issue being emotionally ready.

"Besides," Fangio added, "we're playing the Chiefs, who have been the best team in football the last three years."

So the Chiefs (7-4), who have won four straight games and have a one-game lead over Denver, Las Vegas and the Los Angeles Chargers in the division, get to showcase not only their offensive prowess, but their recent significant improvement on defense. That often-maligned unit has allowed 18 points or fewer in each of those four victories.

"I think guys have done a great job of stepping up in their roles," Mahomes says. "You have the mindset of, 'We're going to go out there and be who we are.'"

Who the Chiefs are against the Broncos is unbeatable in the past 11 meetings. Reid is 19-3 in games immediately after a bye, 6-2 for the Chiefs, and 11-1 in such home games. Indeed, Kansas City is 37-13 against the AFC West since Reid became head coach.

The action began with the Dallas Cowboys' 27-17 win over the New Orleans Saints on Thursday night. CeeDee Lamb had 122 yards from scrimmage, Tony Pollard had a 58-yard touchdown run and the Dallas defense produced timely sacks and turnovers as the Cowboys (8-4) solidified their position atop the NFC East, where they lead Washington by 2 1/2 games. The injury-riddled Saints (5-7) lost their fifth straight as Taysom Hill got his first start at quarterback this season, throwing four interceptions.

Off this week are Green Bay (9-3), Carolina (5-7), Tennessee (8-4) and Cleveland (6-6).

New England (8-4) at Buffalo (7-4), Monday night

AFC East supremacy is up for grabs, something the Patriots owned for more than a decade until Tom Brady left last year.

"People who love football want a chance to play in games like this," says Patriots rookie quarterback Mac Jones.

Jones gets a huge break with Buffalo star cornerback Tre'Davious White gone for the season. Second-year DB Dane Jackson will make his third career start.

Buffalo QB Josh Allen must be aware of Patriots cornerback J.C. Jackson, who ranks second in the NFL with seven interceptions, four in his past four games. Allen has thrown seven interceptions in his past four outings and his 10 interceptions this season already match his total from last year.

Baltimore (8-3) at Pittsburgh (5-5-1)

For years, this has been among if not the best of NFL rivalries: fierce, hard-hitting football usually featuring powerful defenses and opportunistic offenses.

Yet the Ravens, who somehow rank dead last in passing D but are in first place in the AFC North, and the staggering Steelers don't seem to have the same cachet this time.

We'll be watching anyway, particularly with Baltimore atop the conference standings despite its struggles — including Lamar Jackson throwing a career-worst four interceptions in a less-than-stellar victory against Cleveland.

Meanwhile, the Steelers have allowed 180.5 yards per game on the ground over the past four weeks. Baltimore ranks second in rushing.

"For sure, it's a rival game," Jackson says. "We know it's going to be an intense game, like it always is, and a very physical game, like it always is. I'm ready."

Los Angeles Chargers (6-5) at Cincinnati (7-4)

Whichever team wins this one will vastly upgrade its playoff chances. Indeed, they both are one game behind in their divisions.

Like so many clubs recently, the Bengals have rediscovered the run game. Joe Mixon, healthy for once, has been on a tear, while the Chargers' leaky run defense is allowing an NFL-worst 145 yards per game.

If this comes down to the fourth quarter, either side could take control. The Bengals are third (102 points) in scoring during that period, and the Chargers are tied for fourth (100). L.A. has allowed 24 or more points in seven straight games, the longest current streak in the league.

Tampa Bay (8-3) at Atlanta (5-6)

It wasn't just the Super Bowl comeback he orchestrated against the Falcons that marks Brady's success when facing Atlanta. Brady is 9-0 and has thrown for 2,973 yards and 24 touchdowns with just three interceptions in nine career starts against the Falcons. In Week 2, he threw for 276 yards, five touchdowns and no interceptions in a romp. Brady leads the league with 30 TD passes.

The Falcons are 0-4 at home and have lost six straight at Mercedes-Benz Stadium going back to 2020.

"We want to win at home," coach Arthur Smith says. "We appreciate our fans. Our fans did a great job. It was really cool to see down in Jacksonville a lot of our fans there. That was awesome. So, we got to do our part at home."

Arizona (9-2) at Chicago (4-7)

The Cardinals figure to get back key offensive playmakers in quarterback Kyler Murray and wideout DeAndre Hopkins as they try to go 7-0 on the road. They've won the previous six road games by 10 points or more, something only the 1968 Cowboys and 1936 Bears accomplished. Arizona comes off a bye bringing an opportunistic defense, forcing a league-best 15 fumbles. The Cardinals have recovered 11, second in the league.

Justin Fields is healing from cracked ribs and if he can't go at quarterback for Chicago, Andy Dalton will. Dalton threw for a Bears season-high 317 yards and a touchdown on Thanksgiving, but that was against the winless Lions.

Jacksonville (2-9) at Los Angeles Rams (7-4)

If the Rams can't stop their three-game slide against the Jaguars, any thoughts of their being a Super Bowl contender should be questioned.

Matthew Stafford has thrown a pick-6 in three straight games, even as the NFL's most productive receiver, Cooper Kupp has managed to stay in peak form with 29 catches for 313 yards. But he doesn't have a touchdown reception in the three losses after getting 10 scores in the first eight games — more an indictment of Stafford and the offensive line than of Kupp.

This will be Jacksonville's first game against the Rams in Los Angeles. The Jags were 0-3 in St. Louis.

San Francisco (6-5) at Seattle (3-8)

Seattle is in the lead for most disappointing team, and barring a massive turnaround it won't be more than a spoiler down the stretch. The offense has disappeared, with four consecutive losses with Russell Wilson at quarterback.

But the Seahawks have won three straight against San Francisco, which likely will be missing its best offensive (WR/RB Deebo Samuel) and defensive (LB Fred Warner) performers. San Francisco's streak of three straight games scoring at least 30 points is the longest one-season string for the franchise since a five-gamer in 2013.

Indianapolis (6-6) at Houston (2-9)

The Colts like playing in Houston, where they are 13-6. Their chances are pretty strong for improving that mark as long as they put the ball in Jonathan Taylor's hands. He leads the NFL with 1,205 yards rushing and 14 touchdowns; the Texans rank 31st while allowing 135.6 yards rushing a game. Taylor had 145 yards rushing and two scores in the first meeting with Houston this season.

"J.T. (Jonathan Taylor) is been balling, and props to that guy," says Houston defensive lineman Jacob Martin. "He's been running his tail off all year. I think for us to be successful on defense, it comes to us playing gap-sound defense and limiting those big yards in the run game and those big shots on the play-action."

Good luck with that.

New York Giants (4-7) at Miami (5-7)

Giants quarterback Daniel Jones is out with a neck problem. No such health worries with Tua Tagovailoa, whose sharp recent performances have helped Miami win its past four games. Veteran Mike Glennon goes for New York.

The Giants are 3-0 at Miami, plus won in London in 2007 for a designated Dolphins home game. They're the only team that has never lost when facing the Dolphins on the road. The Dolphins' 2-7 record against the Giants is their second worst against any opponent. They're 2-8 against Houston, which Miami beat this season.

Philadelphia (5-7) at New York Jets (3-8)

After an absolute stinker by the Eagles versus the Giants at the Meadowlands last Sunday, they try again, this time against the Jets, who are 0-11 against Philly — the only team the Jets have not beaten.

Eagles quarterback Jalen Hurts had an awful game a week ago with three interceptions; he had only five in the previous 11 games. His team continued to dominate on the ground, though. The Eagles have 1,078 yards rushing in the past five games, running for 200-plus yards in three straight games for the first time since 1978. Philadelphia has 18 rushing TDs, the most it has gotten through 12 games since 22 in 1953. New York has struggled stopping the run.

Washington (5-6) at Las Vegas (6-5)

Washington defensive coordinator Jack Del Rio coached the Raiders from 2015-17 when they were in Oakland, and is the only coach to lead them to the playoffs since 2003. He's helped Washington win three in a row since its bye week.

Helping just as much: Taylor Heinicke has thrown a TD pass in seven consecutive games.

Third downs could be decisive at Allegiant Stadium, where the Raiders are 5-9 since moving in. The Raiders have been the fourth-worst team on offense at converting third downs at 34.4%. Washington has been the worst team at stopping them, allowing 51.4% to be converted for the sixth-worst rate through 11 games since 1991.

Minnesota (5-6) at Detroit (0-10-1)

Minnesota has won eight straight games against the Lions after Vikings coach Mike Zimmer started 2-5 against them.

Both running games could be hobbled. Minnesota is without Dalvin Cook (shoulder), so Alexander Mattison should be the main man. He had his first rushing TD of the season last week after Cook was hurt, but when the Vikings played at Detroit in the 2020 season finale, Mattison had 95 rushing yards, 50 receiving yards and a receiving TD.

Detroit goes with Jamaal Williams because of D'Andre Swift's shoulder injury. He had a season-high 15 carries for 65 yards and five receptions on Thanksgiving against Chicago.

US jobless rate sinks to 4.2% as many more people find jobs

By CHRISTOPHER RUGABER

AP Economics Writer

WASHINGTON — America's unemployment rate tumbled last month to its lowest point since the pandemic struck, even as employers appeared to slow their hiring — a mixed picture that pointed to a resilient economy that's putting more people to work.

The government reported Friday that businesses and other employers added just 210,000 jobs in November, the weakest monthly gain in nearly a year and less than half of October's increase of 546,000.

But other data from the Labor Department's report painted a brighter picture. The unemployment rate plummeted from 4.6% to 4.2% as a substantial 1.1 million Americans said they found jobs last month.

The U.S. economy still remains under threat from a spike in inflation, shortages of labor and supplies and the potential impact of the omicron variant of the coronavirus. But for now, Americans are spending freely, and the economy is forecast to expand at a 7% annual rate in the final three months of the year, a sharp rebound from the 2.1% pace in the previous quarter, when the delta variant hobbled growth.

Employers in some industries, such as restaurants, bars, and hotels, pulled back on hiring in November. By contrast, job growth remained solid in areas like transportation and warehousing, which are benefiting from the growth of online commerce.

The fall in the unemployment rate was particularly encouraging because it coincided with an influx of a half-million job-seekers into the labor force, most of whom quickly found work. Normally, many such people would take time to find jobs and would be counted as unemployed until they did. The influx of new job-seekers, if it continues, would help reduce the labor shortages that have bedeviled many employers since the economy began to recover from the pandemic.

"That's good news for job seekers and workers, and for businesses too," said Julia Pollak, chief economist at online jobs site ZipRecruiter. "It looks like the supply constraints are easing a bit with the unemployment rate low and wage growth high" — two factors that often encourage people to search for work.

November's report reflects a divergence in two surveys that the government conducts each month. The unemployment rate is calculated from a survey of households. For last month, this survey found that 1.1 million more people reported that they were employed. A separate survey of employers, called the payroll survey, reported just 210,000 added jobs.

Though the results of the two surveys typically match up over the long run, they can differ sharply in any one month. For November, economists noted that the big employment gain in the household survey brought that figure in line with the larger increases in the payroll survey during previous months.

The hiring gains in the payroll survey have also been revised up substantially in recent months, and some economists suggested that this will likely happen again in coming months.

"My sense is the household estimate is closer to the truth around what is happening in the jobs market and ... should anticipate a significant upward revision to the November data next month," said Joseph Brusuelas, an economist at RSM, a tax and advisory firm.

The household survey also captures self-employed and gig workers, whose ranks have grown steadily since the pandemic struck, unlike the payroll survey. Some economists attribute part of the nation's labor shortage to an increase in people who have recently gone to work for themselves.

Among them is Daniel Nolan of Raleigh, North Carolina. Like millions of other Americans, Nolan, 36, had his life and work upended by COVID-19. His 9-year old son was in virtual school at the outset of the pandemic. And his father-in-law, ill with cancer, moved in with his family, prompting Nolan to leave his job as a software engineer at a private equity firm.

Nolan expected this period to last only a few months. But when he began looking for work again, the job offers he got weren't what he was looking for. So in August, he decided to strike out on his own.

So far, Nolan said, he's earning roughly the same income that he did before. He plans to keep consulting for at least two more years — and may never return to a corporate job.

"I'm able to make at least as much as I was making at my previous job and still have the flexibility of being a consultant," he said.

HOWARD COLLEGE BRINGS RADIO TO THE STAGE IN HUGE WAY

Howard College put on one of the best plays in recent memory this week. April Langehennig led the young talented group of actors. She has done a marvelous job at taking over the drama department. The Play was Merry Christmas, George Bailey. This was a staged radio play done perfectly by all of the voice actors and the foley sound effects crew. It was the pleasure to watch and plain and simple, and I look forward to what's next.

Texas A&M Agrilife Research hibiscus breeder honored

Special to the Herald

The City of Vernon ensured Malinowski will forever be celebrated for his research at the Texas A&M AgriLife Research and Extension Center at Vernon by declaring Nov. 30 as Dr. Dariusz Malinowski Day. The honor coincides with the National Garden Bureau's declaration of 2021 as The Year of the Hardy Hibiscus.

Malinowski, a Texas A&M AgriLife Research plant physiologist and breeder, leads the forage and ornamental plant breeding program, focusing on perennial cool-season forage grasses and hardy hibiscus at Vernon.

"Dr. Malinowski is well-deserving of the adulation his hibiscus breeding is receiving," said Rick Vierling, Ph.D., director of the Texas A&M AgriLife center at Vernon. "In 10 years, he built the world's top hardy hibiscus program. Three years ago, he started a tropical hibiscus breeding program and has just licensed his first tropical. In the very near future, his tropical program will be No. 1 too."

At the Nov. 30 celebration, Mayor Pam Gosline announced the day dedicated to Malinowski and read a Texas Senate resolution proclamation recognizing his work as well as the efforts of the City of Vernon to be declared the Hibiscus Capital of Texas.

The proclamation reads, in part:

"Whereas, the Senate of the State of Texas is pleased to recognize Dr. Dariusz Malinowski and the City of Vernon for the development of an outstanding hibiscus breeding program ... it is truly fitting that he receive special recognition for his exceptional accomplishments in the City of Vernon and the City of Vernon be applauded for support of his program; now, therefore, be it Resolved, that the Senate of the State of Texas, 87th Legislature, 2nd Called Session, hereby commend Dr. Dariusz Malinowski and the City of Vernon on remarkable success with the hibiscus breeding program; and, be it further Resolved, that a copy of this Resolution be prepared as an expression of esteem from the Texas Senate."

Building the award-winning hardy hibiscus program

Malinowski started breeding hardy hibiscus plants in his yard as a hobby. In 2010, his hibiscus breeding program became an official part of the Texas A&M AgriLife center in Vernon and has gone on to produce award-winning winter-hardy hibiscus hybrids. His program goal has been to produce a wide range of new shapes and novel colors. These have included a blue flowering winter-hardy hibiscus hybrid as well as a maroon, salmon, magenta and a number of dual or multicolored flowers on a single plant.

Since 2010, he has:

- Created and evaluated over 20,000 winter-hardy hibiscus hybrids.

- Disclosed 487 unique lines to the Texas A&M Technology Commercialization office, which makes these lines available for licensing by plant wholesalers worldwide to sell to the public.

- Had wholesale nurseries evaluate over a hundred of the unique lines.

- Developed nine cultivars brought to market by J. Berry Nursery under the trade name Summer Spice Hibiscus. These cultivars are sold to the public at garden centers and nurseries around the country.

Malinowski was featured on the cover of Seed World magazine in 2019, the publication's first-ever cover story of a flowering-plant breeding program.

Expanding to the tropical hibiscus market

Malinowski expanded his program to include tropical hibiscus in 2017. He has already created and evaluated over 2,500 hybrids and disclosed 228 exceptional lines to Texas A&M Technology Commercialization, making them available for licensing as well. One of his unique achievements is a "hanging basket" tropical hibiscus hybrid, which has not been seen before.

And he is already winning awards for his tropical hibiscus creations. The TAMU 14-0704-02 hibiscus developed by Malinowski was entered by J. Berry Genetics, the exclusive license holder, under the name Hot Shot in the Classic City Awards competition led by the Trial Gardens of the University of Georgia, UGA.

Classic City Winners are chosen based on their outstanding performance in UGA's southeastern regional trials. The ratings are based on flower and foliage color, uniformity, vigor and overall resistance to the elements.

The following description accompanied the naming J. Berry Genetics' Hot Shot as a winner: "These plants are as lovely as they are tough. The plants provided nonstop deep red flowers from start to finish. Whether on a sunny roadside or potted in containers, this hibiscus will put on a show. The plants maintain upright form without staking or manipulation."

John Rutter, Ph.D., director of the Trial Gardens at UGA, states the Classic City Award winners are based on year-round performance and/or eye-clutching beauty in the over 2,000 plants in the garden. He adds, "Being a Classic City Award winner is equivalent to the Oscar and Tony rolled up as one."

For more information on when the line might be commercially available, contact the J. Berry Nursery at info@berrynursery.com.

City partners with AgriLife Research to build hibiscus reputation

In 2019, the City of Vernon, Chamber of Commerce and AgriLife Research partnered to donate hibiscus plants to community members. Around 600 plants that were no longer needed in the breeding process were donated to companies and organizations with the agreement that they be planted near their buildings.

The city has continued to promote the hibiscus plant giveaway annually, thanks to Malinowski's donations. The official proclamation gives the City of Vernon the right to officially call itself the Hibiscus Capital of Texas and begin planning for an annual festival and other events.

US employers added a sluggish 210,000 jobs in November

By CHRISTOPHER RUGABER

AP Economics Writer

WASHINGTON — America's employers slowed the pace of their hiring in November, adding 210,000 jobs, the lowest monthly gain in nearly a year.

But Friday's report from the Labor Department also showed that the nation's unemployment rate tumbled from 4.6% to 4.2% evidence that many more people reported that they had a job. That is a historically low jobless rate though still above the pre-pandemic level of 3.5%.

Overall, the November jobs figures point to a job market and an economic recovery that look resilient though under threat from a spike in inflation, shortages of workers and supplies and the potential impact of the omicron variant of the coronavirus.

For months, employers have been struggling with worker shortages because many people who lost jobs in the pandemic have not, for various reasons, returned to the workforce. But last month, more Americans came off the sidelines to look for jobs and were generally hired quickly.

That positive trend suggests that November was a healthier month for job growth than the modest 210,000 gain the government reported Friday in its survey of businesses. The unemployment rate is calculated from a separate survey of households. This survey found that a much larger 1.1 million more people reported that they were employed last month. The results of the two surveys typically match up over the long run but sometimes diverge sharply in a given month, as they did in November.

The survey of households found that the number of unemployed Americans sank in November to 6.9 million, not far above the pre-pandemic number of 5.7 million. And average wages, which have been rising as employers try to attract or keep workers, increased a strong 4.8% from a year ago.

The government's survey of businesses showed a slowdown last month in hiring at restaurants, bars and hotels, which added just 23,000 jobs, down from 170,000 in October. That could reflect the effects of an uptick in COVID-19 cases last month and a reduction in outdoor dining.

Retailers cut 20,000 jobs, a sign that holiday hiring hasn't been as strong as in previous years. But transportation and warehousing firms added 50,000 positions, which indicates that online retailers and shippers anticipate healthy online shopping.

The jobs outlook for the coming months has become hazier with the emergence of the omicron variant. Little is definitively known about omicron, and widespread business shutdowns are considered unlikely. Still, omicron could discourage some Americans from traveling, shopping and eating out in the coming months and potentially slow the economy.

For now, though, Americans are spending freely, and the economy is forecast to expand at a 7% annual rate in the final three months of the year, a big rebound from the 2.1% pace in the previous quarter, when the delta variant hobbled growth.

Nearly 600,000 people joined the workforce last month, increasing the proportion of Americans who are either working or looking for work. If that much-anticipated development continues, it could point to stronger job growth ahead.

The proportion of Americans who are in the workforce rose from 61.6% to 61.8%, the first significant increase since April.

Beat the holiday hustle with these shopping strategies

It's beginning to look a lot like the holiday shopping season. The four- to five-week period between Thanksgiving and Christmas is one of the most frenzied times of year, especially for shoppers. According to recent research from Needle, an advocate-powered e-commerce company, shoppers report feeling more stress from holiday shopping than they do from family obligations and holiday travel. Eighty-four percent of consumer respondents in Needle's survey stated that gift-giving caused them stress.

Finding the right gifts for everyone can be particularly challenging. While it may not be possible to remove all of the stressors surrounding holiday shopping, these tips may help make the job more manageable.

- Outline everyone on your list. Santa has it right by making a list and checking it twice. Only by writing a list will you be able to ensure you do not forget anyone. Savings expert Lauren Greutman from Flipp, a Canadian savings app, suggests including teachers, coworkers and service people in addition to family and friends on the list.

- Track deals and coupons. Sticking to a budget is easier when you utilize tools that help you save even more. Resources like Honey and Retail Me Not will automatically apply coupon codes at checkout to make sure you are getting the lowest prices possible online. Social media, retailer websites and third-party apps also can be great places to find bargains.

- Protect personal information. The Federal Trade Commission says to protect yourself financially by shopping only on secure websites with an "https" address. Stick with retailers that tell you what they do with your data and how they keep it secure. Consider creating a separate email address and/or account password for shopping retailers to reduce identity theft and other fraud.

- Shop early. Bank of America says one of the easiest ways to overspend is waiting until the last minute to shop and then having to settle for what's available, regardless of prices. Spread out purchases and begin holiday shopping before prices increase.
- Be wary of fake coupons. The internet has made shopping and researching easier but also more complicated at the same time. A deal that seems too good to be true may be just that. Counterfeit coupons are phishing scams that can end up compromising personal information when you click on them.

- Take advantage of warehouse stores. Make the most of that membership fee by buying the bulk of your gifts at a warehouse store to save time and money. These retailers carry everything from jewelry to electronics to clothing. Also, they sell gift baskets or boxes around the holidays that can be divided into multiple gifts, saving you even more.

There are many ways to make holiday shopping easier and more affordable.

Crustless pie a treat for those with gluten intolerance

The holiday season is a popular time to entertain. Food is often a focal point of holiday season entertaining. Individuals who navigate food allergies or intolerances may shy away from certain celebrations out of fear that a nibble of this or a bite of that may trigger an allergic response. In such instances, concern about ingredients can cast a pall over normally festive occasions.

Those with Celiac disease or gluten intolerances must be mindful of the foods they consume. Meals or desserts containing gluten, a protein found in grains like wheat, semolina, rye, barley, graham, spelt, farina, and more, can trigger intestinal distress and other symptoms. With delicious pies, cakes and cookies on the holiday serving table, gluten is likely to make an appearance.

However, with careful planning, people who cannot stomach foods that contain gluten can still indulge in their favorite holiday flavors.

"Crustless Libby's® Famous Pumpkin Pie" is a variation on traditional pumpkin pie served at Thanksgiving and Christmas gatherings. Without the crust, individuals who avoid gluten can still dive into that pumpkin-and-spice combination that's so popular around the holiday season. Enjoy this recipe, courtesy of Libby's® Pumpkin.

Crustless Libby's® Famous Pumpkin Pie
Makes 8 servings

3/4 cup granulated sugar

1 teaspoon ground cinnamon

1/2 teaspoon salt

1/2 teaspoon ground ginger

1/4 teaspoon ground cloves

2 large eggs

1 can (15 ounces) Libby's® 100% Pure Pumpkin

1 can (12 fluid ounces) Nestlé® Carnation Evaporated Milk

Nonstick cooking spray

Whipped cream (optional)

1. Preheat oven as directed below. Glass baking dishes without crust require a cooler oven, and in most cases, a longer baking time.

2. Spray baking dish with nonstick cooking spray or lightly grease bottom of baking pan or baking dish.

3. Mix sugar, cinnamon, salt, ginger and cloves in a small bowl. Beat eggs in a large bowl. Stir in pumpkin and sugar-spice mixture. Gradually stir in evaporated milk.

4. Bake as directed below or until a knife inserted near center comes out clean.

5. Cool on wire rack for 2 hours. Serve immediately or refrigerate

The bidding:

Opening lead — ten of clubs.
How much luck is there in duplicate bridge? Certainly not much over the long haul, since luck tends to even out over a period of time. But on a given occasion, it is possible to be extremely lucky — or unlucky — even though exactly the same hands are played at the various tables.

Consider this deal from a team-of-four match. At the first table, South, supposedly playing weak opening one-notrump bids with a range of 12 to 14 points, decided to open his 11-count with one notrump.

North, using a special form of Stayman, responded with two diamonds, asking South to bid a four-card major suit if he had one. When South bid two spades, North took the bull by the horns and raised to slam.

This tenuous contract proved to be unbeatable. West led the ten of clubs, and declarer went up with the ace, played the K-A of trump, then cashed five diamond tricks, discarding a heart and a club from dummy. South eventually lost a club trick, and so scored 980 points.

Note that it would not have helped West to lead the heart ace instead of a club. In that case, declarer would have scored 12 tricks consisting of five spades, five diamonds, a heart and a club.

At the other table, the bidding went:
South West North East
3♦ Pass 1♠ Pass
3♥ Pass 4♦ Pass
4♠ Pass 6♣

Here North became declarer at six spades, and East led the ten of hearts. As a result, the slam went down one because North had to lose a heart and a club regardless of how he played. The rub of the green, you might say, but that's what you sometimes run into in duplicate bridge.

Tomorrow: Famous Hand.

Here's How It Works:

Sudoku puzzles are formatted as a 9x9 grid, broken down into nine 3x3 boxes. To solve a sudoku, the numbers 1 through 9 must fill each row, column and box. Each number can appear only once in each row, column and box. You can figure out the order in which the numbers will appear by using the numeric clues already provided in the boxes. The more numbers you name, the easier it gets to solve the puzzle!

Living Without My Wife

Dear Annie: My wife of 44 years passed away after a nine-day bout with cancer.

We started dating at 16, went to college together, married at 20 and graduated at 21, when we started our life together for real.

"Sally" passed away two months after her 65th birthday. I will turn 65 in a month. I was to retire in three months, while Sally was already retired. Our house is paid for and sits by a beautiful creek in small-town Georgia, and moving has been suggested. I like it here.

All our plans for traveling and having a life together in retirement disappeared in a matter of days.

We had saved a pile of money to do all we couldn't do until we retired. Now I don't know what to do. I was her George Bailey, and she was my Mary Hatch. I never had a wandering eye. I don't have a long-lost girlfriend from high school. Our circle of close friends is small and mostly live out of town.

My daughter and son are grown and pretty much have their own lives. I refuse to spend the last 20 years alone without female companionship. I liked being married. Single life is not my cup of tea. I know I can't replace my wife. Some accuse me of that.

She was educated, a retired teacher. She knew who Emily Post was and watched Julia Child. Together, we watched "Jeopardy" nightly. She loved to travel, saying, "Travel feeds the soul." She played bridge, volunteered at the hospital and church, and sent food to shut-ins. She would watch football with me and enjoy it if I would watch Hallmark movies with her.

During the pandemic, I began teaching myself guitar, and she would let me practice in the bedroom while she sat in bed reading. She remarked, "I would rather have you with me making a racket than somewhere else causing a racket."

Should I try to forget her now that she is gone and look for another type of person to spend my life with? Should I look for another woman like her? Should I pursue her first cousin with similar qualities who lost her husband last year? Are there women out there like her who are good-hearted and looking for a stable, educated man with whom to have a good time?

How do I connect with them? I can't go back to the neighborhood front-yard football game again, be tackled by her, injure my shoulder and have her be the first girl to come to my house worried about me, which is how our love affair began. Help! -- Lost at Potato Creek

Dear Lost: Your love affair sounds like something out of the movies. I am so sorry for your loss. Of course you are lost and confused, and that is understandable. You are not supposed to have all the answers to what the future will look like right now. Find other widowers who can understand what you are going through and help you work through your grief. The healthier you get with your own emotions, the healthier your next relationship will be.

You will never replace your wife. You will now have a new normal, which will look different from your old normal, and that is perfectly natural. Instead of trying to find a replacement for your wife, try to remember all of your beautiful memories, which will live inside you for a lifetime.

EPA head tours embattled communities, says help on the way

By MATTHEW DALY

Associated Press

RESERVE, La. — Michael Coleman's house is the last one standing on his tiny street, squeezed between a sprawling oil refinery whose sounds and smells keep him up at night and a massive grain elevator that covers his pickup in dust and, he says, exacerbates his breathing problems.

Coleman, 65, points to the billowing smokestacks just outside his backyard. "Oh, when the plants came in, they built right on top of us," he said. "We was surrounded by sugarcane, and now we're surrounded by (industrial) plants."

The oil company offered Coleman a buy-out, but he rejected it. "I'm waiting for a fair shake," he said in an interview on the front steps of the home he has lived in for more than 50 years. In the meantime, he copes with high blood pressure, thyroid problems and other health issues that he attributes to decades of pollution from his industrial neighbors, a Marathon Petroleum refinery and a Cargill grain depot.

St. John the Baptist Parish, where Coleman lives, is part of an 85-mile (137-kilometer) stretch from New Orleans to Baton Rouge officially known as the Mississippi River Chemical Corridor, but more commonly called Cancer Alley. The region contains several hotspots where cancer risks are far above levels deemed acceptable by the Environmental Protection Agency.

EPA Administrator Michael Regan visited Coleman and other area residents on a five-day "Journey to Justice" tour that highlighted low-income, mostly minority communities adversely affected by decades of industrial pollution.

A Toxics Release Inventory prepared by EPA shows that minority groups make up 56% of those living near toxic sites such as refineries, landfills and chemical plants. Negative effects include chronic health problems such as asthma, diabetes and hypertension.

"I'm able to put faces and names with this term that we call environmental justice," Regan said at a news conference outside Coleman's ramshackle home, where a blue tarp covers roof damage from Hurricane Ida.

"This what we are talking about when we talk about 'fence-line communities' — those communities who have been disproportionately impacted by pollution and are having to live in these conditions," Regan said, gesturing to the grain elevator in front of him and refinery behind.

In nearby St. James, Regan met with Brenda Bryant, whose neighborhood is surrounded by oil storage tanks and a hulking refinery.

"We are actually sandwiched in. And I'm the meat," Bryant told Regan, who assured her that she and others he met with "will have a seat at the table" as officials develop solutions for long-ignored communities.

A former environmental regulator in his native North Carolina, Regan has made environmental justice a top priority since taking over as EPA head in March. As the first Black man to lead the agency, the issue "is really personal for me, as well as professional," Regan said in an interview.

"As I look at many of the folks in these communities, they look just like me. They look just like my son, and it's really tough to see them question the quality of their drinking water," he said.

Historically marginalized communities like St. John and St. James, along with cities such as New Orleans, Jackson, Mississippi, and Houston will benefit from the $1 trillion bipartisan infrastructure law signed by President Joe Biden, Regan said. The law includes $55 billion for water and wastewater infrastructure, while a sweeping climate and social policy bill pending in the Senate would pump more than twice that amount into EPA programs to clean up the environment and address water and environmental justice issues.

While legislation can help, Regan acknowledged that decades of neglect and widespread health problems among mostly Black and Brown communities won't be solved overnight. Loose permitting requirements for industrial sites, along with exclusionary zoning laws and housing practices, have long funneled racial and ethnic minorities into areas near toxic pollutants at rates far higher than the overall population.

At a congressional hearing in October, oil company executives sidestepped questions about whether refineries and other facilities are more likely to be located in low-income and minority communities.

"We've got oil refineries along the U.S. Gulf Coast, and we're very proud to be community members there," Shell Oil President Gretchen Watkins told Rep. Cori Bush, D-Mo.

"Your profit-driven choices threaten my life, the lives of my family, my neighbors, and our communities every single day," Bush responded.

In Louisiana, a recent inspector general's report faulted EPA for failing to protect St. John, St. James and other parishes from chloroprene and ethylene oxide, toxic chemicals used in industrial processes.

"If EPA, the federal government, the state government, the local governments had been doing things correctly, we wouldn't be here," Regan said in St. John. "There's obviously a problem with the way we have implemented our laws. And quite frankly, there may be a problem with existing law."

Environmental injustice is not limited to the South, and Regan has also visited hard-hit areas in cities such as Chicago, Detroit and Los Angeles, as well as brownfields and tribal areas in North Dakota.

"For the first time we're not questioning whether or not these environmental injustices exist," he said. "We are actually acknowledging that they do. We need to give these individuals a voice and talk about what we're going to do to solve these problems moving forward."

More immediately, Regan promised that EPA will use its enforcement power to ensure a former DuPont petrochemical plant near Coleman's home complies with federal regulations on emissions of chloroprene and other harmful chemicals. The facility is now owned by Japanese conglomerate Denka.

"We have enforcement authority that we're taking a very close look at to bring the facility in compliance — not just this facility, but all the facilities across the country who have been non-compliant, who have not honored the agreements that we have to be good neighbors and protect these communities," he told residents in St. John.

"The message here to these communities is, we have to do better and we will do better," Regan said.

SCHOOL WITHOUT WATER

Regan's first stop on the tour was at Wilkins Elementary School in Jackson, Mississippi, where students are forced to use portable restrooms outside the building because low water pressure from the city's crumbling infrastructure makes school toilets virtually unusable.

The pressure was so low on the day Regan visited that the school was closed. The next day, more than a dozen Jackson schools were closed because of a lack of water.

As the father of an 8-year-old, "my heart was broken today," Regan told The Associated Press. "It's very frustrating to see the disruptions they face."

Fourth-graders brought to the school to meet with Regan spoke of their own frustrations. Kingston Lewis, 9, said he doesn't like going outside to use the restroom in a mobile trailer.

"It takes a lot of learning time throughout our day, and it has an unpleasant scent sometimes when you go outside," he told Regan.

Principal Cheryl Brown called the school's dependence on portable toilets "degrading" and "inhuman at all levels." Mayor Chokwe Antar Lumumba called the water outages "a cycle of humiliation within our community" and an example of "what it looks like for our children when we fail to provide."

Lumumba said in an interview that his impoverished city needs about $2 billion to fix its water infrastructure, but expects to receive far less from the infrastructure law and other federal spending. The majority Black city often "fails to get its equitable share of resources that funnel through the state" and its Republican governor and GOP-controlled legislature, he said.

AMERICAN DREAM OR 'NIGHTMARE'?

Regan also visited Gordon Plaza, a New Orleans neighborhood built on the site of a former toxic landfill, and the creosote-contaminated Kashmere Gardens neighborhood in Houston. Gordon Plaza was designated as a Superfund site in the 1990s, but dozens of mostly Black families still live there, waiting for a buyout, and many feel forgotten.

A 2019 report by Louisiana State University found that the city's Desire section, which includes Gordon Plaza, had the second-highest cancer rate in the state.

During a walking tour, neighborhood residents gave Regan a T-shirt as they urged him to remember their community's name. They cheered when he said the words "Gordon Plaza" had reached the White House. "You have my commitment that the EPA will partner with you all to solve this problem," he said.

New Orleans Mayor LaToya Cantrell has pledged $35 million for Gordon Plaza, but residents have heard promises before.

"You're trying to live out the American Dream — which turns out to be a nightmare — and you can't get justice, you know," said resident Earl Smothers.

"It's environmental racism," resident Lydwina Hurst told Regan. Still, Hurst said she appreciated Regan's visit and is hopeful residents will finally get the help they need.

Beverly Wright, executive director of the Deep South Center for Environmental Justice, a New Orleans-based group that hosted Regan at several Louisiana sites, said the problems Regan witnessed are "generational battles" with no easy solution.

Still, she's optimistic that "the wheels are aligning" to finally address problems that have festered locally for decades.

"I think putting a face and a name on these problems makes it personal," Wright said. "When you can taste the chemicals in your mouth and smell the toxins downwind, it's a lot more difficult to ignore."

The sights, the sounds and the tastes of 'Christmas Around the World'

Dean Cain is a big fan of Christmas and travel, which makes his gig as host of The CW's "Christmas Around the World" something of an ideal fit.

Premiering Wednesday, Dec. 8, the hourlong special goes to more than 30 countries and cities around the world – among them Moscow, London, Rome, Malaysia, South Africa, Mexico and Monaco – to showcase how the holiday is celebrated by highlighting traditions from ancient to modern day.

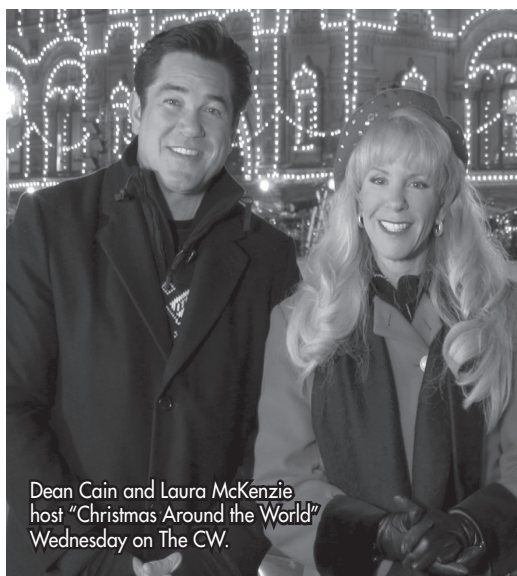

Cain ("Masters of Illusion," "Lois & Clark: The New Adventures of Superman"), who hosts with Laura McKenzie ("Laura McKenzie's Traveler"), was blown away by some of the things that he learned while on the road.

"There's a lot of historical significance to why they do the things that they do," he explains, "and I found that just fascinating finding out what traditions they do and why they do it and how they light things up or don't light things up or when they actually celebrate. Christmas is not all on December 25th, so some of them are in January and so it's just really interesting getting into that and sort of discussing it and showing people. So I think it's a fascinating show."

One place Cain got to visit that held particular fascination for him was Moscow. As someone who grew up during the Cold War, he had his own mental images of what the city was like, which were then exploded when he arrived. He spent time in Red Square, got into the Kremlin and even got to see Lenin's Mausoleum and Saint Basil's Cathedral. But it was the Christmas lights there that really took him aback.

"The place was lit up like Disneyland times a hundred," he says. "I couldn't believe how many lights and how ornate things were around Moscow. It was shocking to me. So that was one of the places that blew me away more than any of the others. There was this huge ice skating rink right in the middle of Red Square. I was like, 'Wow, this is trippy but really, really, really cool.' And cold, by the way."

Dean Cain and Laura McKenzie host "Christmas Around the World" Wednesday on The CW.

The Peanuts gang rings in the New Year in 'For Auld Lang Syne'

At their best, Peanuts television specials offer animated entertainment for kids while slipping in a theme that will keep adults in the room. And that's what viewers will find in a holiday program upcoming on Apple TV+.

In "For Auld Lang Syne," which begins streaming Friday, Dec. 10, it's New Year's and Lucy is having a crisis of confidence. Christmas has turned into a crashing disappointment because Grandma can't visit so the gang tries to distract themselves in their own ways.

For Snoopy, that means a visit from his beagle siblings. For Lucy, it means throwing the best New Year's Eve party ever but, of course, her bossiness gets in the way. Meanwhile, Charlie Brown has come to the realization that he hasn't made good on any of his New Year's resolutions of the past year, so he sets about trying to fulfill just one.

The 36-minute special comes from WildBrain Studios, and Craig Schulz, an executive producer for Charles M. Schulz Creative Associates and son of the late Peanuts creator, says that one of the goals of the new shows is to do a deeper dive into the characters' emotions.

"This one obviously is based on New Year's and Lucy's emotion of dealing with her grandmother not showing up," he explains. "And she has this introspective look which we don't get out of Lucy, to question herself, you know, 'Am I loved?' ... But we touch upon that and we'll touch upon that in the future with other characters where we find out a lot more about them and what's good about them and what they think their failings are."

Of course, animation has also changed a lot in the decades since many of the classic Peanuts holiday specials first aired and Schulz thinks that will be a visible improvement here for viewers.

"The moves that (the animators) can do and the emotions they can create from these subtle movements they put in the characters is really on par or above whatever (original Peanuts producer) Bill Melendez did in the old days," he explains. "And (with) the new technology and the young animators and the new vision, they add a ... whole level of emotion that both parents and children can relate to."

This is almost the end for 'This Is Us'

Q: When is "This Is Us" coming back? – Heather Post, Wheeling, W. Va.

A: Very early in the new year. The beginning of the end for the NBC drama starts Jan. 4, as it returns to its customary Tuesday slot to open its final season. Mandy Moore, Sterling K. Brown and company will be on for a month, then off for a few weeks while the network televises the Winter Olympics ... and then, the series will be back for its last stretch of episodes. Creator and executive producer Dan Fogelman has said that he has known for a long time how the show will end, and now that we've reached this point, everyone else also will know relatively soon.

Mandy Moore

Q: Will Ryan Seacrest host New Year's Eve on ABC again this year? – Pam Dolan, via email

A: Absolutely. The plan for "Dick Clark's New Year's Rockin' Eve With Ryan Seacrest" is the same as usual, with a two-part special in primetime followed by another two parts after late local news, and the traditional Times Square ball drop covered at midnight Eastern time. Seacrest will have a little more competition beyond such traditional rivals as NBC, Fox and CNN, since CBS is getting back into the New Year's Eve game for the first time in a long time with an all-star music special originating from Nashville.

OF 'LOST IN SPACE' ON NETFLIX

and we weren't shooting during the midst of the pandemic. ... So it was really laborious at the beginning, just that we were one of the first productions to get back and it took some time to figure out how to do it and to get to a place where you could feel like everyone was safe and you could still concentrate on doing the work. So it was a bit of a grind but even within that, there was so much just joy in the show.

Did you get to have a real wrap party?

No, we didn't have any of that. It was a hard way to end. We did really well throughout the entire production. Right at the very end, we had a few people who tested positive for COVID So that was tricky. Nobody got really ill. Everybody was fine. But it was a grind. ...

We had actually shot until the 23rd of December. I mean, it was really tricky to even get home. I remember Toby (Stephens, who plays her TV husband, John Robinson), they were shutting down the U.K. and ... he didn't know if he'd be able to get home in time for Christmas. It was like that. Not an easy way to work. But on the other hand, I think we all felt – I certainly – just so blessed to be able to work, to be able to not just do work that you love but do it with people who you love at a time when most of the world was having an experience of really deep isolation.

Was it sad saying goodbye to Maureen after wrapping the third and final season of "Lost in Space"?

I've loved this job and playing Maureen and being with these people, so it was. It was a bittersweet ending. It's funny. I've been sitting here ... really thinking about the story and the themes this season and all that we went through making it because it was a really difficult season to produce because we were in the midst of – you know, it was pre-vaccine

Creative ideas for your ho-ho-holiday dinner courtesy of Food Network

BY GEORGE DICKIE

Giada De Laurentiis

It's three weeks before Christmas, a time when the discriminating foodie goes on the lookout for holiday baking or meal ideas.

of a brown sugar glazed ham with cloves, red rice perloo and a green bean casserole. And for dessert, it's an apple cider cobbler. Southern fare from the heart of Low Country.

Food Network is there to help, offering up an array of new and repeat episodes on everything from appetizers, entrees and beverages adult and otherwise to cakes, pies, cookies and all manner of pastries – from here and abroad. So check out what's in store for the coming week.

Later in the week on the morning of Saturday, Dec. 11, Ina Garten is busy at work on "Barefoot Contessa: Back to Basics," preparing a seasonal brunch of morning glory muffins, a fresh fruit platter, shakshuka with feta and a spicy bloody Mary. Sweet and savory – hard not to like this.

On the subject of international foods, Giada De Laurentiis puts an Italian spin on things in her "Giada's Holiday Handbook" on Sunday, Dec. 5, throwing a holiday party complete with a family-style meal that includes roasted fennel, creamy lobster pasta and chocolate almond cheesecake. Try to resist.

Then on "The Pioneer Woman," Ree Drummond gets in a festive spirit with a menu of apple, brie and mushrooms en croute, a traditional eggnog in a ginger crumb-rimmed glass and an ugly sweater cake. She also prepares a berry basil vodka and festive marinated olives for a happy hour gift basket. A decidedly adult meal.

Also that morning on "Girl Meets Farm," host Molly Yeh prepares a day's worth of Scandinavian meals in honor of her farming family. For breakfast, she bakes a spiced cardamom wreath and for dinner, it's a menu consisting of meatballs and lutefisk (a lye-cured fish), and a fluffy Norwegian cream cake. Expand your horizons with this exotic fare.

Also that morning, the chefs of "The Kitchen" are in the holiday spirit, highlighted by Sunny Anderson's pesto and ricotta crostini and Geoffrey Zakarian's tostones with tuna tartare and adobo chili. Certainly, outside-the-box ideas for your holiday table.

Kardea Brown is also in the holiday mood that morning on "Delicious Miss Brown," which finds her in her coastal South Carolina kitchen preparing a dinner for family that consists of her holiday party right with a menu consisting of a holiday biscuit wreath, red and green holiday deviled eggs, a grits and greens casserole and milk and cookies fudge. Yum!

Checking in with CARA GEE

celebrity scoop
BY GEORGE DICKIE

Take one look at Cara Gee's IMDb photos and you'll see she looks nothing like her character from "The Expanse." Nor does she sound like her.

Indeed, the personable Canadian actress is a complete departure from the fierce, hard Camina Drummer in the Amazon space drama that begins its sixth and final season on Friday, Dec. 10, which she says made it easier to separate from her when filming wrapped.

"I certainly would never want to live her life, that's for sure," Gee explains. "I think because of the dialect and the makeup is so severe and her posture is so severe, the costumes are so different from what I wear. You know, there are so many things that are different that she's actually really kind of easy to slip out of as soon as I'm not speaking that way, as soon as I'm not in my makeup, as soon as I've taken the tattoos off. I'm kind of like, 'Ooooo, OK.' Like I can get back to laughing and joking around and not having the weight of the universe on my shoulders."

The new season finds the solar system at war and Marco Inaros (Keon Alexander) and his Free Navy continuing to launch devastating attacks on Earth and Mars. For Drummer, things are pretty bleak. She's mourning the man she loved, Serge, who was murdered by Inaros at the end of Season 5, and her family and world are broken.

Despite Drummer's intensity, Gee considers it a rare treat to transform into someone who is "vibrating on that level" and hopes the series gets a reprieve, as it did after it was canceled following Season 3. There are still three more books in the series, so she's hopeful Drummer will live again – maybe in a happier time.

Or maybe not. "You know, it's 'The Expanse.' They don't let Drummer smile," Gee says with a laugh. "I think she has smiled once in this whole series."

best of ... BEST MILITARY MOVIES

BY JAY BOBBIN

"All Quiet on the Western Front" (1930) One of the first Oscar winners, this moving drama casts Lew Ayres as a soldier who gets a rude awakening to war.

"Sergeant York" (1941) Gary Cooper won his first Oscar in the title role of the much-decorated World War I hero.

"They Were Expendable" (1945) John Ford and star Robert Montgomery, who played a Navy superior along with John Wayne, shared directing duties here. Turner Classic Movies shows the film as part of a Pearl Harbor Day event on Tuesday, Dec. 7.

"Sands of Iwo Jima" (1949) One of John Wayne's best-known roles sees him playing a relentlessly tough leader of U.S. Marines.

"From Here to Eternity" (1953) The beach love scene between Burt Lancaster and Deborah Kerr is a defining image of the James Jones story about relationships at the time of the attack on Pearl Harbor.

"The Caine Mutiny" (1954) Humphrey Bogart is chilling as Captain Queeg, whose questionable actions lead to the court martial faced by two of his officers (Van Johnson, Robert Francis).

"The Bridge on the River Kwai" (1957) The "epic" phase of director David Lean's career began with this Oscar-winning adventure of World War II prisoners forced to build the title bridge.

"The Longest Day" (1962) It's almost easier to pick out which male stars aren't in the huge cast of producer Darryl F. Zanuck's D-Day drama than those who are.

"The Great Escape" (1963) In this all-time-great adventure movie, based on a true story, Allied prisoners plot a getaway from a World War II camp.

"The Dirty Dozen" (1967) Director Robert Aldrich's World War II classic features Lee Marvin as a major given the task of training 12 convicts for a mission that could earn them amnesty if they succeed ... and survive.

"Patton" (1970) Earning him an Oscar for best actor (which he very famously refused), George C. Scott found his signature role in the controversially independent-minded World War II general.

movie review

BY JAY BOBBIN

'A Christmas Story' makes an early seasonal appearance

"You'll shoot your eye out."

Whether you're a holiday-movie connoisseur or just a casual viewer, you likely know where that line comes from and who (time and again) it's directed toward. Fans of "A Christmas Story" needn't worry – it still will get its traditional 24-hour marathon starting on Christmas Eve on TBS and TNT – but the richly nostalgic 1983 comedy classic also makes an earlier TNT appearance this year on Monday, Dec. 6.

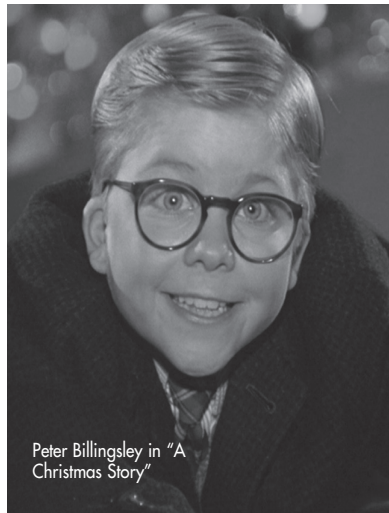

Based on the writings of humorist Jean Shepherd, who narrates the picture, the Bob Clark-directed tale follows eager young Ralphie (a perfectly cast Peter Billingsley) through a long-ago Christmas season when he has his heart set on one very particular gift: a Red Ryder BB gun, which everyone from his mother (Melinda Dillon) to his teacher (Tedde Moore) to a department-store Santa Claus (Jeff Gillen) warns him about. For the specific warning, check the first sentence of this article again.

However, there's plenty else competing for Ralphie's attention during the holidays. Take his younger brother Randy's (Ian Petrella) unique way of eating a meal. Or the never-ending battle that their gruff father (Darren McGavin) wages against the household furnace. Or school pal Flick (Scott Schwartz), who accepts a "triple dog dare" and ends up getting his tongue stuck to a frozen pole. Or the decoder ring that has a disappointing result for Ralphie when he deciphers the secret message conveyed by the "Little Orphan Annie" radio program.

Such are the wonderful touches laced throughout "A Christmas Story," and we haven't even gotten to the turkey-dinner disaster or Ralphie literally getting his mouth washed out with soap. What really makes "A Christmas Story" endure so warmly for so many devotees, though, is the strong dose of heart it has along with the many laughs it goes for.

Much of the credit for that goes to Dillon and McGavin as two of the very few adults the movie pays attention to – which makes sense, since "A Christmas Story" really is Ralphie's story told from a youthful perspective. Dillon has a particularly wonderful scene when she retrieves Ralphie from a schoolyard fight he atypically gets the upper hand in, while McGavin is more sly in playing his sentimental hand, which he does toward the end in the film's big payoff scene. (We won't spoil it here.)

It's no surprise that many of the "A Christmas Story" faithful watch the film multiple times during its yearly marathons, since the movie captures the feel of the holiday ideally. Plus, by now, so many of its elements are iconic that it would feel like something was amiss without at least one viewing of it every December. Happily enough, that time has come again.

The public speaks again by voting on People's Choice Awards

BY JAY BOBBIN

The people have chosen again, and their choices are about to be known.

For many years, the People's Choice Awards traditionally were the first entertainment honors given out during any calendar year. Times have changed, though, and so has the timing: Now, those awards help to close out the year since moving to E! Entertainment Television, which will simulcast the special with NBC when it's presented Tuesday, Dec. 7.

Kenan Thompson – who's been doing double duty for NBC, starring in "Kenan" while continuing as a "Saturday Night Live" cast member – will host the show from the Barker Hangar in Santa Monica, Calif. He has his first-ever People's Choice Award nominations this year, for comedy TV star and male TV star (both for "SNL").

Fan voting for award winners on social media ended in mid-November for the 40 categories covering movies, television, music and pop culture. For an idea of those in the running, here are the finalists in several of the contests.

The (TV) show of 2021: "The Bachelor"; "Cobra Kai"; "Grey's Anatomy"; "Law & Order: Special Victims Unit"; "Loki"; "Saturday Night Live"; "The Mandalorian"; "WandaVision";

Young hopes to bring
Heisman home to Alabama

For a football program that has produced legendary quarterbacks such as Joe Namath, Bart Starr and Ken Stabler, the Alabama Crimson Tide surprisingly enough has not had one win a Heisman Trophy.

But that could change with Bryce Young. At this writing, the 20-year-old sophomore from Southern California was the odds-on favorite to take home college football's most prestigious honor.

As of late October, the first-year starter was among the nation's leading passers, completing 187 of 267 passes (a 70 percent rate) for 2,453 yards (sixth in the nation) and 26 touchdowns (third) against only three interceptions in eight games for a QB rating of 88.5.

The performances for such an inexperienced field general have been impressive. Probably his best came in Week 4 against Southern Mississippi, when he threw for 313 yards and five touchdowns on 20-of-22 passing in the Tide's 63-14 romp. Then there was his Week 8 effort against Tennessee, when he completed 31-of-43 passes for 371 yards and two touchdowns and ran for another two scores in 'Bama's 52-24 blowout of their SEC rival.

Young had big shoes to fill when he replaced last year's starter Mac Jones (who himself is now thriving as a first-year starter for the New England Patriots). If he can take home a Heisman in his first year under center, the name Bryce Young will go down as one of the greats among Alabama quarterbacks.

The 87th Heisman Trophy presentation takes place in prime time on Saturday, Dec. 11, and airs on ESPN.
