

Iraq Opens New Front

BEIRUT, Lebanon (AP) — Iraqi forces opened a new front in Iran's embattled oil province of Khuzistan Saturday, attacking the southwestern town of Susangerd in an apparent attempt to open a key highway to the provincial capital of Ahwaz.

Iraq said it killed 217 Iranian troops in the tank-led attack on Susangerd and "mounted mop-up operations against pockets of enemy resistance" in the district, Baghdad radio reported.

Iran conceded 30 Islamic revolutionary guards were killed and 40 wounded in "fierce fighting" to stop the surprise Iraqi assault. A communique from the Iranian defense command in Tehran said fighter bombers flew several strafing sorties to ease the pressure on Susangerd, killing and wounding 10 enemy troops, Tehran radio reported.

Meanwhile, the independent Kuwaiti newspaper Al Watan reported Iran has threatened to bomb oilfields in all Arab countries on the Persian Gulf from the air if Iraqi forces overrun Abadan. The report was not independently confirmed and no official comment was immediately available from any government concerned. In the past Iran has warned it would blow up the oilfields of any country directly aiding Iraq.

In Tehran, President Abolhassan Bani-Sadr discussed the Susangerd situation with Ayatollah Ruhollah Khomeini, Iran's revolutionary leader, and later told reporters the city was "bravely holding out against deadly enemy assaults," Tehran radio reported.

Susangerd is a strategic town at the end of a key highway leading to Ahwaz, 35 miles to the southeast. Ahwaz is under heavy artillery bombardment from Iraqi positions south of the city.

Iran's Supreme Council met to discuss the situation and Bani-Sadr "issued orders concerning the defense of Susangerd," according to Tehran Radio.

The air war intensified, with Iraq claiming it shot down 11 Iranian aircraft and Iran saying it raided six Iraqi cities.

Meanwhile, Olof Palme of Sweden arrived at the United Nations Friday before embarking on a U.N.-sponsored peace mission to Iran and Iraq.

Casualties High In Afghan War

NEW DELHI, India (AP) — Afghanistan's second and third-largest cities, Herat and Kandahar, have come under fierce Soviet bombardment that killed thousands of people and destroyed hundreds of homes in recent days, a report from Afghanistan said today.

The attacks on Herat, in west central Afghanistan about 60 miles from the border with Iran, began about Nov. 3, according to a Kabul source who in the past has been accurate. No independent confirmation of the reports was available. Reporters have been barred from the country.

Many homes in the old part of the city of 150,000 people and in the suburbs were demolished in the punishing bombardments, and dozens of small villages near the city were destroyed, said the source, quoting refugees arriving the capital city of Kabul.

In Kandahar, Afghanistan's second-largest city with a population of more than 200,000, Soviet forces began bombing and shelling the old part of the city and the suburbs on Nov. 8, said the source.

Casualties also were high in the Kandahar bombardments, but no estimate was immediately available, said the source, again quoting refugees arriving in Kabul.

Hospitals at Midland and Odessa are in an argument over a situation that points up some of the problems that evolve when "Big Brother" takes over the decision-making process for communities and individuals.

Odessa's Medical Center Hospital wants to buy some cancer-treating equipment to update its services. Presumably, the Odessa hospital has the $335,700 the equipment would cost.

However, Midland Memorial Hospital has filed a protest, which, under the circumstances, apparently is logical. You see, a hospital cannot go out and buy equipment simply because it, or the people it serves, want it, believe they need it and have the money to pay for it. Such purchases must be approved, first by a "Health Systems Agency" and finally by the Texas Health Facilities Commission.

This procedure has a noble objective—on paper. The general rule is that health facilities in the same region cannot duplicate services, unless there is enough demand to make them cost-effective. And, of course, the overseeing agencies decide what is cost-effective.

Similar rules apply to construction of buildings for medical services. A community cannot build a 100-bed hospital if the certifying agencies determine that it doesn't need but 50 hospital beds. This is supposed to make the delivery of medical services more efficient and more practical from the standpoint of economy.

But it has not and will not stop there. The wheels are in motion for the state to tell you which hospital you will be assigned to in the event you need hospitalization. It will be based on the type of medical care you need at the moment. Hospitals will be classified, with some becoming nothing more than glorified first aid stations. Others will be allowed to treat maladies up to a certain level of severity and those with more serious illness, or injury, will be assigned to the higher level facilities.

Some critics have speculated as to what would happen under this system if a person had a heart attack on the road in this area. Would he or she be taken to Snyder, Abilene, or Dallas? Apparently the ambulance driver would have to make an important medical decision if the system should be followed to the letter.

This might not be so risky in regions where distances between towns and even major cities are short. But it is a different story in West Texas. It is another example of the folly of trying to make rules that fit all regions of the country.

Proclamation Signed... Lions Club, City Join To Remove Junk Autos

The Snyder Lions Club and the City of Snyder are combining their efforts again to remove junk motor vehicles from Snyder.

Jack Cypert, president of the Lions Club, and Mayor Milton Ham have signed a joint proclamation to initiate the project.

The elimination of junk automobiles is a part of a program launched more than a decade ago to enhance health and safety as well as to make the city a more attractive place. The Lions Club volunteered its services once before in a campaign in which members of the club sought out the junk vehicles and reported their locations to city hall. The old cars were then tagged and removed from the scene.

A similar effort will be conducted during the remainder of this month, city and Lions Club officials said.

The text of the proclamation signed by Ham and Cypert:

WHEREAS, junked vehicles which have outlived their usefulness tend to accumulate in the community and serve no useful purpose, and

WHEREAS, such vehicles contribute to community deterioration, and are hazardous to children and

WHEREAS, The Snyder Lions Club wishes to assist the Snyder City Council in helping to make Snyder a more attractive community and to create a more healthy atmosphere.

NOW, THEREFORE BE IT RESOLVED that I, Milton Ham, Mayor of the City of Snyder, and I, Jack Cypert, president of the Snyder Lions Club, do hereby declare the remainder of the month of November as Junked Vehicle Removal Month in Snyder, as attested by our signatures attached hereto.

The city also is in the process of reviving its program to eliminate hazardous and delapidated buildings in the city.

Stacy Dam Case Arguments Set

The appeal of a district court decision upholding the Colorado River Municipal Water District's permit to build the Stacy reservoir will be argued Wednesday morning before the Court of Civil Appeals in Austin.

Frank Booth, Austin, representing the CRMWD, and Tim Brown, assistant attorney general representing the Texas Water Commission on behalf of the state, argue that TWC acted properly and correctly in issuing the permit for the 554,000-acre-foot lake 25 miles southeast of Ballinger on the Colorado River.

"The fundamental question in the case is whether West Texas shall be deprived of water for its future while the lower Colorado River Basin enjoys a surplus of water," Booth argued in his brief submitted to the appeals court.

The chief opponent of the permit, the Lower Colorado River Authority which operates a chain of lakes above Austin, argued that the sum of the water permits on the Colorado River already equals its yield, hence there is virtually no unappropriated water. Both Booth and Brown argued that unused water is wasted water, under the state's conservation statute, and that it is unreasonable to say there is no water available when 2,115,000 acre feet a year flow past the Columbus gauge into the Gulf. The CRMWD is asking only for 113,000 acre feet per year. CRMWD filed for the permit in October, 1977, and the permit was granted in 1979. LCRA then appealed to the district court where the Texas Water Commission ruling was upheld.

MP Killed In Turkey

ANKARA, Turkey (AP) — Gunmen shot and killed a U.S. military policeman early today as he left his home in the southern Turkish town of Adana for security duty at the nearby Incirlik NATO base, U.S. officials said.

He was the eighth U.S. serviceman killed in Turkey since April 1979, but the first American to die since the rampage of left and right-wing terrorism triggered a military coup on Sept. 12.

U.S. officials did not release the victim's name, military affiliation or rank. The semi-official Anatolia news agency identified him as Air Force Sgt. William C. Herrington, but gave no other details.

The victim was accompanied by another U.S. serviceman when two gunmen opened fire on their car. The second man was not injured. He was not identified, but American officials said both men were in uniform.

The attackers escaped.

Junior College Week Set... 1,400 Graduate Here Since WTC Founded

Approximately 1,400 students have graduated from Western Texas College in the nine graduating classes that the college has had since it opened its doors in 1971, and Dr. Ben Brock, WTC's vice president, believes that fact is significant as Texas Junior College Week is launched.

Texas Junior College Week is Nov. 16-22, and although no formal observances are planned for the occasion, Brock spoke freely of the role of the community junior college in Texas education.

"The community junior college," said Brock, "has been a viable agency for 75 years, especially in Texas."

Forty-two percent of all college students in the state are enrolled in two-year public colleges, and two-thirds of all college freshmen in the state are students at junior colleges, stated Brock.

In Texas there are 47 public community college districts with more than 60 campuses. Some 15,000 Texans are full-time junior college employees.

Western Texas College, said Brock, is a five-acre campus on a 160-acre tract of land. It is valued at $13 million.

"One of the things that makes the community junior college unique," said Brock, "is its open admission policy." Once enrolled, Brock noted, the student has access to a wide range of academic and vocational courses.

One of the most misunderstood of the junior college's education programs is continuing education.

"A lot of people think of this as being a hobby or leisure time activity, but it's not," said Brock.

Brock added the community college of today "does so much more than the junior college used to do."

One of the advantages the community college has on its four-year brother is size.

"I think individual attention and small classes are advantages," said Brock. "I think our teachers are geared for more individualized instruction."

"I didn't tell my children I wished they would go here," said Brock, "but they did."

"If we can make the public a little more conscious of what we try to do at Western Texas College, this is one thing we have in mind," said Brock.

"There are some who may not know the true role of the community junior college."

Weekend update

Panhandle Freeze Forecast

By The Associated Press

Snow and freezing rain was forecast for the Texas Panhandle today with the remainder of the state expected to have cloudy, cold and rainy weather.

Highs were to range from the 30s in the Panhandle to near 70 in Southeast Texas.

Some snow showers were reported during the night in the Panhandle from Borger southwestward to the New Mexico-Texas border near Clovis, N.M. Rain was reported along the coast and in far North Texas. Wichita Falls got the heaviest rainfall, a meager 17 of an inch.

Tropical Storm Jeanne turned northeastward away from the Texas coast Friday and was expected to be absorbed today by the cold front that moved through Texas earlier in the week.

LA Garbage Piling Up

LOS ANGELES (AP) — A city worker's strike entered its second day Friday with 5,000 tons of garbage piling up daily throughout the city and travelers finding unsanitary conditions at Los Angeles International Airport.

City officials said 4,900 of the three striking unions' 10,000 members were out Friday, although the count was complicated since many work a four-day week and had the day off. The city contended the walkout was fizzling, while union spokesmen vowed to continue the job action into next week.

On Thursday, 5,600 workers stayed out. They included garbage collectors, engineers, traffic controllers, airport custodians, computer operators and mechanics.

Both sides said they were willing to resume negotiations. The two largest unions are defying a court order against the strike.

Meese, Baker Share Command

LOS ANGELES (AP) — Ronald Reagan is splitting his high command between a longtime aide and a one-time foe. One will be in charge inside the White House, the other outside.

Edwin Meese III, Reagan's top aide when he was governor of California and his campaign chief of staff, will be counselor to the president, overseeing the Cabinet, domestic policy staff and National Security Council.

James A. Baker III, who directed two presidential campaigns against Reagan, will have equal rank as chief of staff and will concentrate on external matters such as press and congressional relations and patronage.

Both will be members of the security council.

The appointments, announced Friday as Reagan ended a five-day vacation at his California ranch, were the first slots to be filled in the new administration that will take office Jan. 20.

Protest Planned Prison Site

ANDERSON, Texas (AP) — Grimes County residents say their area is doing just fine, thank you, and they don't need a new state prison unit in their back yard.

"This area is growing beautifully. It doesn't need to grow with prisoners, their friends and family," said Rosalie Schuler, who owns property near the 5,368-acre site the Texas Board of Corrections selected for a 2,000-cell prison farm.

Drought-Stricken Crops Producing Poor Yields

COLLEGE STATION, Texas (AP) - The major agricultural activity in Texas is harvesting of drought-stricken cotton, peanuts and pecans - all showing below-average yields and quality, says Dr. Daniel C. Pfannstiel, director of the Texas Agricultural Extension Service. Cotton harvesting is now confined to the High and Rolling Plains and western areas, said Pfannstiel. A heavier frost is still needed in parts of the Rolling Plains to get the harvest under way. While yields from some of the heavily irrigated cotton on the South Plains are good, most yields are poor, with some running only 100 pounds or so per acre. Much Rolling Plains acreage had been plowed under earlier due to poor crop prospects, Pfannstiel said. Peanuts are still being harvested in West Central and Central Texas as well as in parts East and Southwest Texas and the Coastal Bend. Again, yields are short but producers are getting good prices. Texas' pecan crop this year will be only a fraction of the bumper crop produced in 1979, with the drought again being the big factor. Early varieties are now falling in many areas and harvesting has started. Harvesting of sugar beets in the High Plains and sugarcane in the Rio Grande Valley also is active. Fall vegetables are moving to market in the Valley and Winter Garden of Southwest Texas. Early citrus picking is active in the Valley, and watermelon and cantaloupe harvesting is about complete. Most of Texas needs a good rain for growth of small grains and winter pastures, Pfannstiel said. Some early-planted small grains are providing limited grazing, but most forage conditions remain short, with livestock marketings still active in some areas. For every 550 feet of additional elevation, the boiling point of water, 212 degrees F at sea level, is lowered by about one degree.

Reagan Looks For A Few Good Men

DALLAS (AP) - President-elect Ronald Reagan is looking for "dedicated Americans" from the private sector to serve in the top 300 jobs in his administration. But there's a catch. The appointees will have to take whopping pay cuts, wrestle with an often unpredictable Congress and not mind having an egg or two thrown at them. "What this man Reagan wants is really the outstanding doers, with a record of proven achievement," Paul R. Ray, head of a Fort Worth-based executive search company, said Friday. "He doesn't care if they're Republicans or Democrats. That's the interesting part of it."

Ray, a member of a six-man committee scouring Texas for top Reagan appointees, says there's no money - relatively speaking - in going to work for the government. "The people who go into these jobs have to be committed," he said, "because there's no money in it - top pay is only $69,000 to $70,000. These men are used to making $300,000 to $400,000 or more a year, so they have to give up a lot." Ray's task is to select candidates for jobs in the Department of Energy. He says his list should be complete in ten days. Ray said Texans would be included in his list, but he declined to release names. He did add, however, that prospective candidates would be involved in the oil business. Ray said a good candidate for Secretary of Defense would be Tom Phillips, chairman of the board of Raytheon Co., an aerospace and telecommunications corporation that annually receives about $1 billion worth of defense contracts. He also said Dave Lewis, chairman of the board of giant defense contractor General Dynamics, would be another good choice for the job. Ray said there would be no conflict of interest problems raised by such appointments, because the appointees would have to "put their (corporate) stock aside" and sever relations with their companies. "You gotta be a really dedicated American to take these jobs," he added. "It's not easy, you know. You're confronted with the Congress, and you got people throwing eggs at you all time."

BUYING FERTILIZER
When you need a fertilizer for your garden, do you always end up asking yourself these same questions: What's in a bag of fertilizer? What's the best fertilizer for my garden? How can I be sure I'm getting what I need at a price I can afford? Well, it is understandable that many questions arise when the gardener goes to his local nursery or supply store to buy fertilizer. He walks in with good intentions, but then, more often than not, stands there perplexed by what he sees: Stacks and stacks of fertilizer bags with confusing numbers, ingredients and trace elements. And at today's prices, he necessarily wonders which bag is best (and easiest on his pocketbook). He sees a 50-pound bag of "Brand-X" fertilizer marked at $5.95, and right next to it is "Brand-Y" with an imposing $10.95 price tag. What's the difference, he wonders. Is Brand-Y really that much better than Brand-X, or what? Fertilizers can be confusing, but remember that competition in the fertilizer industry is keen, and you can be reasonably sure when you buy a bag of fertilizer that you are getting what you pay for. Of course, there is no sense in paying for something you don't need. All fertilizers should have, somewhere on their labels, a percentage listing their contents, such as 10-10-5, 16-20-0, 15-5-5, etc. This is called the analysis. These percentages are, in order, nitrogen, phosphorous and potassium. Nitrogen produces vigorous vegetative growth and gives the plant a good green color. Phosphorous stimulates the development of a hardy root system and flowering when applied at the proper ratio of nitrogen and potash. Potash is necessary for healthy, more vigorous plants. When choosing a fertilizer, first check the analysis, then read on to find out what else is contained in the bag. The additives are what run the cost of the bag up. Check for trace elements (zinc, iron, sulfur, etc.). Then check to see whether or not the bag of fertilizer has other amendments, such as insecticides, fungicides or weed killers. If you need these to do a particular job, fine. If you don't need them, save your money by selecting a fertilizer that does not contain them.

Cattle Feeding Course Offered

A study of nutritional needs of cattle and feeding programs to best fulfill those needs will be offered in a 12-hour beef cattle supplemental feeding course starting Monday night at Western Texas College. The seminar will examine the nutritional value of native grass, as well as those of improved pastures and other types of grazing. Different types of feed, such as cottonseed cake, breeder cubes, protein blocks, etc., will also be examined and evaluated on the basis of need and cost. Kent Mills, formerly assistant professor of farm and ranch management at WTC, will be the instructor for the course and he may be contacted for further details. Students are to register between 6:15-6:30 p.m. Monday in the lobby of the WTC Learning Resource Center and will pay their registration fees of $20 each there. Classes will meet from 6:30-9:30 p.m. Monday through Thursday nights.

Farm Pest Management
By BILL JANY
Scurry-Mitchell Entomologist

Got pest control problems? Start controlling them in November. During some years, in a West Texas gardener's corner, the root knot nematode strikes. It may be in his tomatoes or in his landscape shrubs. Wherever it is, nematodes cause a lot of misery and disappointment. Did you know that nematodes can be controlled in November? Most gardeners familiar with this beast treat it in the spring prior to planting, or abandon the infested land and grow their garden somewhere else. If you have nematodes, they can be controlled by chemical means or with a natural method in November. Nematodes can be controlled chemically with Vapam. This nematicide is easy to use and provides good control when used properly. Remember, follow directions on the label carefully. The natural method of nematode control is through planting cereal rye (elbony rye). Now, you probably think that this Arizona Aggie lost all his marbles when he went to Ohio this past month... because who in the world grows cereal rye in his back yard! Give me a chance to explain. Cereal rye (elbony rye) is one of the fastest growing, cold-tolerant annual grasses available. That means you can grow it in your garden in winter. The reason it controls nematodes is because nematodes feed inside the roots of this grass. Once they enter the roots, they cannot escape and they die. It's kind of like a natural mousetrap only for nematodes. And you thought man was ingenious! The key to effective control of nematodes with cereal rye is to plant it thick. You want the roots of the rye in every square inch of soil which is infested with nematodes. Like any other natural pest control, planting cereal rye will not control your nematode population completely. It will reduce them to a level where you can grow susceptible plants and not lose them all. Obviously, this method must be repeated each season to keep the nematode population at a low level. If you had a high nematode population, I think the use of Vapam one season and planting cereal rye the following winter would provide more effective control of nematodes in your garden or landscape areas of your yard. Besides reducing your nematode population, cereal rye also beautifies your garden area during the winter and provides organic matter for your garden plants during the next season. Also, as cereal rye decomposes, it releases organic acids that can lower the alkalinity of garden soils and is also toxic to nematodes. Most homeowners have soils which are very alkaline and this benefit will probably do as much good as the reduction of your nematode population.

How do you plant cereal rye? Plant it in November. Because of its cold tolerance you should have a thick mat of rye that is 10-15 inches tall by mid-winter. At this time, the grass should be shredded with a lawn mower and tilled into the soil so that rotting occurs before spring planting. Shredding and tilling about one to two months before planting allows adequate decomposition. Plant cereal rye by seeding directly on top of the garden soil and raking it in. Apply the seed at a rate of one pound per 100 square feet of garden area to insure good coverage. Water your rye weekly and fertilize for maximum growth. Make sure you cut your cereal rye before it forms seed heads as sprouting rye seed in the spring in your garden will be a weed. There is no danger of rye seeded in the fall becoming a weed problem during the spring, since rye plants cannot withstand hot temperatures. Be careful when you purchase cereal rye so that you don't purchase annual rye. Annual rye is used to overseed lawns and does not grow as rapidly or as large as cereal rye. When you go to buy your cereal rye, ask for elbony rye to avoid confusing you nurseryman.

Seminar On Shoplifting, Checks Set

Can you spot a shoplifter? Maybe, if you are aware of some of the common methods used by shoplifters and some of the tell-tale actions.

A seminar on shoplifting and another widespread problem, bad checks, will be held Tuesday night at Western Texas College and is especially timely in view of the coming holiday shopping season. Lt. Steve Warren from the Snyder Police Department will give the information on shoplifting and Larry Ball from the sheriff's office will discuss fraudulent checks.

Students will register between 6:45-7 Tuesday night in the lobby of the WTC Learning Resource Center and fees of $5 per person will be paid at that time. The class will meet from 7-10 p.m.

Persons planning to attend the class are to pre-register by calling the Continuing Education office at 573-8511, extension 240.

Energy Policy Waiting When Reagan Swept In

HOUSTON (AP)—Michel T. Halbouty had a two-foot package ready for delivery as soon as Ronald Reagan became president-elect.

The package contained the report of Reagan's energy policy task force, a 17-member group headed by Halbouty, Houston geologist and independent oil operator.

expressed over and over again about these things and which I believe very strongly he will accomplish."

He said he expects Reagan to stress "more and more production of energy from all energy sources, all the sources we can possibly produce, not just petroleum."

"And I think more supplies and more reserves will be the main theme, the main stress," he said.

"Conservation will continue to be a very important point but conservation can't do it all as President Carter had intended for it to do. All that conservation does is prolong the demise of the patients."

Halbouty said the surprising Republican control of the U.S. Senate should be of great assistance to Reagan.

"It is a forward step we haven't enjoyed for 25 years," he said.

"I think having control of one house is going to be a great improvement in getting things done that the president may want to see done. I think his recommendations will now have a lot of clout."

Halbouty said to him, the one thing the election proved is that "liberalism is really on the downgrade and is unwinding very rapidly."

"This election proves that to be a liberal is not the thing the people in this country want any more and that those liberals still in the Congress are going to have to watch themselves very carefully," he said. "Otherwise, they will enjoy the same fate as those who have been pulled out."

Halbouty said, "This freedom of going back to conservatism evidently is going on all over the world."

"It seems that conservatism is coming back all over the world and I think this election proves it when you check the number of states that voted for Reagan," he said.

"It proves we are going to get back to the sanity of the ideals proposed by our founding fathers."

Program Monday On Oriental Rugs

Oriental rugs have been known for their beauty for centuries, and they are currently enjoying a new period of popularity as decorators turn again toward traditional looks.

A program on Oriental rugs will be featured in the Scurry County Museum at noon Monday when Mrs. Gene Dulaney will be guest speaker for a brown bag luncheon. Everyone is invited to attend the program and no reservations are necessary. The program will begin about 12:10 and be concluded in time for working people to get back to their jobs by 1 p.m.

An Oriental rug may be an investment as well as a beautiful addition to a room, Mrs. Dulaney says. The rugs are noted for their durability,

SMOKING AND PREGNANCY
Placental abruption - the premature separation of the placenta from the uterus wall - raises the risk that the baby will die before birth, or be born prematurely. Doctors at Penn State College of Medicine found that smoking during pregnancy is strongly related to one type of fatal abruption. Studying 45,470 pregnancies, the doctors found the death rate from this type of abruption was 3.3 per 1000 for babies of non-smokers, 4.7 per 1000 when mothers smoked 1 to 10 cigarettes a day while pregnant, and 5.2 per 1000 when smoking 11 to 20 cigarettes daily.

New 'Snitch' Updating Legend Of Cosa Nostra

By ARTHUR EVERETT
Associated Press Writer
NEW YORK (AP)— Nearly two decades ago, a stubby minor mobster named Joe Valachi sent a chill up American spines with his sensational behind-the-scenes exposure of the organized crime syndicate.

He was the first to identify the mob by the name of La Cosa Nostra, "Our Thing."

Now, in a Manhattan federal courtroom, a latter-day snitch, Aladena "Jimmy the Weasel" Fratianno, is updating the legend of La Cosa

Nostra, following a trial in which the star witness was, again, Fratianno. Five reputed California Mafia members are charged with various crimes connected with the 1977 gangland execution of mobster-turned-informer Frank "The Bomp" Bonpensiero. The jury has been deliberating six days.

At both trials, the prosecution asked Fratianno how a member gets out of the Mafia.

"You come in alive and go out dead," he testified each time. "There's no way out of the organization."

Fratianno, a dapper, silver-haired 67, has admitted participating in 11 gangland murders. He pleaded guilty to two rubouts and became a government witness in 1974 in return for a five-year sentence.

The Weasel cast off his cloak of anonymous government informer in 1978 when he testified at a federal court trial involving a mob-controlled theater in upstate New York.

Fratianno, who claims to have been a close friend of Frank Sinatra, testified he agreed to get Sinatra into the Knights of Malta, a Roman Catholic honor society, if he would do a benefit at the theater.

It later developed that Sinatra never made a deal. He performed at the theater but was not linked to its fraudulent operation.

At the Tieri trial, Fratianno testified that La Cosa Nostra operates in 20 U.S. cities with one family in each city except New York, which has five. He identified Tieri as boss of New York's Genovese family.

Said Assistant U.S. Attorney Nathaniel Akerman: "This is the first time anyone has ever been charged with being the boss of a crime family."

As Valachi had before him, Fratianno said each boss presides over an underboss and a senior counselor, known as a "consigliere." Capos, or captains, supervise lower echelon members, known as soldiers.

The "national commission," he said, is composed of the New York bosses and the Chicago boss, who "more or less handle disputes with other families."

A highlight of Fratianno's testimony here was his account of his 1948 initiation into the Los Angeles Cosa Nostra:

"You are more or less proposed by somebody. Sometimes you do something significant. Sometimes you have a brother or father in it."

"They took me in a room by myself. There was a long table where all of the members were. Most of the members were sitting. There was a gun and a sword crossing one another in the middle of the table."

"They all stood up. We held hands. The boss said something in Italian... Then they prick your finger with a needle or a sword until blood draws. Then you go around and meet each member of the family. You kiss them in the cheek and you're a member."

"They tell you that you come in alive and go out dead. There's no way out of the organization."

Valachi had none of Fratianno's mob prestige when he turned government informer in 1963 before the Senate rackets subcommittee.

Valachi, then 59, had been initiated into the late Vito Genovese's New York family at the age of 27 and worked as a sort of sergeant, above a soldier but below a capo.

During the investigation, FBI agent James Flynn asked Valachi about the crime syndicate:

"What's the name? Is it the Mafia?"

"No, it's not Mafia," Valachi replied.

"We know a lot more than you think," Flynn persisted. "Now I'll give you the first part. You give me the rest. It's along. We had no concrete evidence that anything like this actually existed," said William Hundley, then chief of the Justice Department's Organized Crime and Racketeering section.

"Valachi named names. He showed us what the structure was and how it operates."

Valachi spent the rest of his life in maximum security prisons, his jailers always mindful of the reported price of $100,000 on his head.

On April 3, 1971, he died in La Tuna prison in Texas, 66 years old and a forgotten man, embittered, lonely and sick.

His wife and son refused to claim his body. He was buried in a secret grave lest it be desecrated by the grim organization he had exposed.

He had, in the words of the Weasel, "gone out dead."

10th Hit Brings Out Anne Murray Release

By MARY CAMPBELL
AP Newsfeatures Writer

"Anne Murray's Greatest Hits," was released, says Anne Murray in characteristic straightforward, smiling fashion, "because we finally had nine bona fide hits."

"The 10th song is the latest single, 'Could I Have This Dance?' We may have been a little presumptuous putting it on there. We had our fingers crossed."

"I sing it in the movie 'Urban Cowboy,' during the wedding scene. Jim Ed Norman, my record producer, was working on the film, producing a couple of things in the soundtrack. They had the song and wanted me to sing it. I listened. I said sure."

"I look at movie themes as to whether they'll make a good record. My career is a record career. I have to think of records. I'm not doing movie themes for the sake of doing them."

The album was at No. 28 and climbing on the best-selling records chart of Oct. 25. The single was at No. 53. Miss Murray is usually thought of as singing romantic, middle-of-the-road ballads. But, possibly because "Urban Cowboy" has a lot of country music in it, her album is No. 8 and climbing and her single No. 5 and climbing on the Oct. 25 best-selling country charts.

Miss Murray's first hit record, "Snowbird," was released just 10 years ago. She says, "Things were much better in the past five years than they were in the first."

She exudes an attractive sense of well-being now but she says it wasn't always that way.

She married Bill Langstroth in 1975, and they have a son, 4, and a daughter, 18 months.

Before that, she says, "I was always struggling to find another hit. I didn't have momentum. You need one hit record right after another. So many young people think if they could just get that one record. It takes more than one record to make a career. I had 'Danny's Song' in 1972, 'Love Song' in 1973 and 'You Won't See Me' in 1974 but they were too far apart to have momentum. There were records in between that did nothing."

Her biggest singles have been "Snowbird" and "You Needed Me" from 1978.

She says, "I decided in May 1975 to stop taking any more engagements to tour. I needed a break because I hadn't achieved the kind of success I'd set out to achieve. I'd had a good career but it wasn't what I wanted. I wanted a shot at the top and it wasn't happening. I'd be eight months a year on the road, not eating or sleeping right, living out of a suitcase, lonely, and come back with no money. Playing in 3,000-seat auditoriums to 300 people is demoralizing."

"I felt like I was banging my head against a wall. My husband was going through a divorce and we were keeping a low profile. People said this is the way you promote your records and I wasn't selling records, either."

"I think the biggest thing is I was miserable and I wasn't really committed. I think I was worried that if I became very, very successful I would turn into some kind of monster. I guess I was really frightened of success. I've seen people become very successful and get destroyed. They get a glassy-eyed look when they talk to you."

Her wedding, in 1975, was Castro Slowed By Moderates

SAN JUAN, Puerto Rico (AP) — Prime Minister Michael Manley's defeat in the Jamaican election was the latest in a string of political victories for moderates that have slowed the spread of Cuban President Fidel Castro's influence in the Caribbean.

One reason for the swing to moderate and conservative politicians, West Indians say, is a growing realization that the West, with its financial resources, its markets and its tourists, offers perhaps the only practical key to solving the Caribbean's paralyzing economic problems.

Manley's open friendship with Castro frightened off foreign and local investors, and he could not meet the International Monetary Fund's terms for continued loans. Production dropped, unemployment soared, and professionals left the country. The crisis forced the socialist prime minister to call early elections on Oct. 30.

Edward Seaga won the election by linking Manley to Castro's communism and blaming him for Jamaica's economic crisis.

Felines Reach Regional Finals

LUBBOCK—Snyder High School's volleyball girls were to tangle with Lubbock Dunbar here Saturday afternoon in the regional finals in Class AAAA after sidetracking the Cleburne Stingers Saturday morning.

The Snyder team topped Cleburne, 11-9, 15-4, settling down after a jittery start in the regional tournament. Snyder leaped ahead by 6-0 in the first game, but soon found itself barely holding onto an 8-7 advantage.

The going really got tough toward the end, as the Snyder girls led by only 9-7 with 1-09 left. Then it was 10-7 and 10-9 with only 35 seconds remaining. The Stingers hit one out of bounds, but got the serve back with only five seconds remaining. The pressure closed in on Cleburne, however, as they hit the serve into the net.

In the second game, Cleburne took a 4-1 lead early in the game, but Snyder took command and scored 14 straight points to make a rout of it.

Dunbar advanced to the regional finals by downing Graham, 15-8, 15-2.

In Class AAA play, Colorado City was in the finals with Kermit, who had won over Perryton, 15-1, 15-8.

Duran, Leonard End Workouts

NEW ORLEANS (AP) — Welterweight champion Roberto Duran and challenger Sugar Ray Leonard sealed down their workouts this weekend, saying they're close to fighting trim and don't want to go stale.

Duran, in fact, said he wishes he could take on Leonard right now instead of waiting until Nov. 25 to defend his World Boxing Council title.

The champion planned a workout today but intended to take Sunday off, watch a soccer game at City Park and relax a bit.

Leonard, who held the WBC title until Duran took it from him in June, planned to take off both today and Sunday. He said he peaked too early for his first meeting with Duran and didn't plan to make the same mistake this time.

Duran showed another side of his personality during his Friday workout, mugging for television cameras, clowning for fans and teasing trainer Freddie Brown.

It was a reversal of the dour demeanor he showed through the first four days of workouts here.

Brown, however, said Duran is often fun to watch. "He did this for four weeks in Miami," the trainer said.

Television lights went on as Duran worked on the speed bag. He mimed an exaggerated squint, feigned blindness, then burlesqued a missed punch at the bag, carrying through as if he were going to hit Brown by accident.

He and the 73-year-old trainer clinched for a moment as the crowd roared approval. Later, Duran did a stiff-legged impression of Brown skipping rope.

"I wish the fight were today because I'm ready," he said after the workout. He said there is no reason why he can't stay in peak form.

However, Ray Arcel, his other trainer, said he was concerned. "He's in shape and I'm worried sick. We still have 11 days to go and we have to retain that edge," he said.

Leonard said he's ready to go, too.

Leonard's trainers Angelo Dundee and Janks Morton, did not announce workout schedules past Sunday.

Staubach 'n J.R. Boost For CBS

By FRED ROTHENBERG
AP Sports Writer
NEW YORK (AP) — J.R. Ewing and Roger Staubach don't exactly have the same swinging lifestyle. But those two rascals from Dallas have more in common than meets the CBS eye.

CBS made them both celebrities — J.R. in prime time as the entertainment division pushed sex and sin; Staubach on Sunday afternoons as sports showcased "America's Team," the Dallas Cowboys.

And both helped CBS to the No. 1 rating last season — J.R. with the hit series "Dallas" and Staubach pitching in with some of the Cowboys' cliffhangers that helped set the network up for big Sunday night numbers.

And the similarities don't stop there. Both CBS stars hadn't been feeling too well lately. J.R. was flat on his back all summer with some well-publicized bullet wounds, while Staubach was suffering from withdrawal symptoms after retiring from the National Football League.

Last Sunday, J.R. was taken off the injured list and he's expected to be making mischief the rest of the season. Meanwhile, Staubach, in New York for the Cowboys-Giants game, survived Dallas' upset loss in fine style from the broadcast booth. He sounded like he was in the pink as he continues to prove there is life after football.

"I was real worried after I announced my retirement last spring," said Staubach, the Cowboys' clutch quarterback for 11 seasons. "I thought I was having heart problems. I went to see my doctor. But it was only withdrawal symptoms. I thought it was something physical but it was only the chemistry inside my body changing."

Staubach thought he had prepared himself well for facing Sundays without blitzing linebackers around his neck. "But all the hoopla in Dallas caught me off guard," he said. "They played the retirement like I had died. It made me uneasy."

Staubach, ranked as the NFL's all-time leading passer, retired on top after the 1979 season at the age of 38. He left the game to spend more time with his wife, Marianne, and their five children. He knew he had made the right decision when the team went to training camp.

But it got harder when the season started. "That's when I really started missing it," he said. "I missed the time on the field, the physical competition, the satisfaction of doing the job. It wasn't an ego thing. I just missed the thrill of winning football games."

He says his work as a CBS clutter his commentary. "I guess my biggest problem is not a lack of talking; it's saying too much," Staubach admits. "It's hard but I have to realize I don't have to say something after every play."

And like many former players, Staubach dips into his big bag of platitudes much too often. ("He's a heckuva player and that was a heckuva play.")

He does have a low-key, humorous touch, which got him into a political crossfire the week before when he parodied Jimmy Carter by saying that his daughter, Amy, had told him that Dallas' biggest problem against St. Louis would be the bomb.

"If I have something funny to say, I'm going to say it," said Staubach, a staunch supporter of Ronald Reagan. "I'm an entertainer, not just a journalist. I thought it was funny and a timely thing to say. It wasn't a political statement. I'd say the same thing again."

Staubach was very professional in the closing moments of the Giants' 38-35 victory last Sunday. This was the time Staubach used to make stand still, and you could tell it still excited him. "I'd like to be right down there in the middle of it," he said on the air.

Except for this kind of nostalgic lapse, Staubach really seems happy with his new life. He can tend to his real estate business in Dallas and be an active father. He stays in shape by running five miles a day and stokes his competitive fires by playing basketball. "I'm at peace with my life," he said.

Even so, Staubach is discovering that the football hero often lets go before his fans do.

"I want to be an everyday person again," he said. "When you're playing you want the adulation to a degree. But now I'm looking forward to the day when I'm not so much Roger Staubach, football player. Of course I want to be remembered for what I did as a player but I hope someday I can be appreciated for who I am now."

Tragedy At Marshall U. Is Recalled

HUNTINGTON, W. Va. (AP) — More than 500 people jammed the Fifth Avenue Baptist Church for the first of several memorial services here this weekend commemorating the 10th anniversary of a plane crash that killed 75 people, including 37 Marshall University football players.

After the Friday service, many of the people went to the nearby Springhill Cemetery, where a wreath was placed on a grave containing the unidentified remains of six of the crash victims.

The Rev. Edward Carter, one of eight members of the 1970 team who were not aboard the fatal flight, also spoke, as did Lynn Snyder, Marshall's athletic director.

Those killed in the 1970 tragedy included the 37 football players, five Marshall coaches, seven Marshall staff members, 21 team supporters and five members of the crew of the Southern Airways DC-9 that crashed just short of the runway at nearby Tri-State Airport. There were no survivors.

President Woodrow Wilson recommended that the United States declare war on Germany on Dec. 3, 1917.

Campbell-Payton Battle

CHICAGO (AP)—Earl Campbell of the Houston Oilers and Walter Payton of the Chicago Bears will provide one battle within the war Sunday when the two teams meet before a sellout crowd of more than 64,000 in Soldier Field.

"Of course it's going to be billed as Campbell versus Payton," said Bear Coach Neill Armstrong. "Why not? Although they won't be on the field at the same time, they are two of the best running backs in all of football."

Campbell, who led the Oilers to a 38-34 victory over New England Monday night when he carried 30 times for 130 yards and two touchdowns, leads the NFL in rushing with 1,094 yards.

Payton has 899 yards and is third in the league, 18 yards behind Billy Sims of Detroit. Payton went over the 100-yard mark for the fifth time this season in last Sunday's 35-21 victory over Washington and now has rushed over 100 yards 39 times in his career.

"I don't approach this game any differently and I'll do what I've always done," said Payton in reference to his first meeting against Campbell in a regular season game. "It's not Earl Campbell versus Walter Payton. It's the Houston Oilers organization versus the Chicago organization."

Houston has a 7-3 record with four straight victories and is tied for first place in the American Conference Central with Cleveland. The Bears are in the cellar in the National Conference Central with a 4-6 record but are only two games behind first-place Detroit.

In addition to Campbell, the Oilers had a hot hand from quarterback Kenny Stabler in the victory over the Patriots. Stabler completed 15 of 17 passes for 258 yards and three touchdowns. He was 8-of-8 in the first half when Houston took a 24-6 lead.

"We knew it wouldn't be enough," said Stabler of the 24 points. "Those guys are high-powered. Shoot, I thought 38 might not be enough against New England."

It nearly wasn't and the Oilers didn't lock it up until Greg Stenrick intercepted a Steve Grogan pass in the end zone with 35 seconds left to play.

"I'm glad they won," said Armstrong. "Teams that lose on Monday night come back with a lot more intensity the following Sunday.

"But Houston is tough defensively and Campbell is the big problem. It's Campbell run, run, run. Even when you know he's going to run, he's hard to stop. He has tremendous thighs and those big thigh pads he wears are like weapons. One man isn't going to bring him down."

The Bears have come up with another dimension in their offense in quarterback Vince Evans who succeeded Mike Phipps and will be making his fifth straight start.

Evans completed 11 of 18 passes for 210 yards against the Redskins including touchdown strikes of 40 and 12 yards to James Scott and 54 yards to Payton.

"He's a regular now and our passing efficiency definitely has picked up," said Armstrong. "He's throwing touchdown passes. He's staying in the pocket longer, reads the defenses better and he's getting better at spotting his receivers."

Evans also can scramble and has rushed for 138 yards, scoring four touchdowns.

Andrews Explosion In Third Period Subdues Tigers, 28-0

by Bill McClellan
Andrews' Mustangs overcame a first-half defensive stand by Snyder here Friday night to score 20 third-quarter points and wrap up their regular season with a 28-0 victory.

The Mustangs, 10-0 and ranked No. 4 in Class AAAA, are slated to host Lubbock Estacado in bi-district action Nov. 21 at 7:30 p.m.

Snyder, which fell to 2-8 on the year, displayed some of its best defense of the season following Andrews' opening drive, which put the visitors on top 8-0 with only 1:47 gone in the game.

The Mustangs bought the TD in five plays, driving 42 yards to score on a Van Pearcy 13-yard run. The march was highlighted by a QB Keith Brooks pass to David Smartt for 18 steps, down to the Tiger 13.

The initial PAT kick by Jamie Price failed, but Snyder was flagged for off-sides, and Brooks ran over the conversion.

Both teams traded fumbles before Snyder got untracked offensively. After Jesse Hernandez fell on a Brooks fumble at the Snyder 36, the Tigers began to move.

Quarterback Mike Roemisch crashed for eight yards on first down and fullback Mark Shaw followed it with a six-yard pickup. Four plays later Snyder moved to the opponent 27, but a five-yard penalty pushed the Tigers back to the 32.

Roemisch scrambled east and west on the ensuing play, finally able to turn it upfield for a 17-yard gain, giving Snyder a first-and-10 at the Andrews 15.

But fate was to be unkind to Snyder again in their final ballgame of the season. Though the Tigers advanced to the 5-yard line - converting on a fourth-and-one situation along the way - fullback Perry Echols was stripped of the ball on a hard run towards the Mustang goal line and the visitors were there to pounce on it.

The Tigers never threatened again in the game, though the defense - keyed by big plays from Tony Degrate, Neil Evans and Matt Davis in particular - held the highly-touted Mustangs throughout the half.

Andrews drove to the Snyder 13-yard line early in the second half, but was denied the paystripe as Degrate shot through the line to dump Brooks for a six-yard loss on third down. Pearcy regained only three steps on fourth, and the Tigers took over.

Fighting a strong wind in the second quarter, the Tigers were only able to get limited yardage, and the breeze limited Snyder's punting game severely. But another fumble gave Andrews possession at the 39-yard line, but Brooks bobbled the ball on the first play from scrimmage, and Degrate was there again to recover for Snyder.

Snyder went into intermission leading in total yardage 96 to 82, but that was to change quickly in the second half.

Andrews came alive in the third period to put the game away. After holding Snyder to a punting situation, the Mustangs plowed 70 yards on six plays to score with 7:30 left in the quarter. Brooks kept it outside and ran the ball in from 37 yards out on a fourth-and-one play that caught the Tigers stacking the middle of the line. Price's boot after was good.

After holding the Tigers again, Andrews marched for another TD. This time the 57-yard drive took only three plays as Brooks connected with a wide-open Smartt for 51 strides with 3:55 showing on the clock. Price's conversion attempt failed.

The Mustangs bagged the victory on their next offensive effort, overcoming a clipping penalty and driving 48 yards in six plays to score.

Pearcy, who had runs of 15, 36 and 10 yards on the march, pushed it in from the 2-yard line with 10 seconds remaining in the quarter. Price's kick after was good.

The fourth quarter was a battle of defenses as Andrews and Snyder both brought in substitutes offensively. The Mustangs held Snyder to only 32 total yards in the second half, while accumulating 195 of their own, mostly in the third quarter.

All-district runningback Pearcy picked up 149 yards in 16 carries to lead all ballcarriers. He got 84 of that in the third period alone. Leading ground gainer for Snyder was Kirk Herrley with 49 yards on 14 carries.

Degrate, Hernandez and Matt Taggart recovered a fumble each for the Tigers, while Dee Stewart picked up three Snyder miscues and Adam Smith and Victor Conaway intercepted a pass apiece for the Mustangs.

Both teams traded fumbles before Snyder got untracked offensively. After Jesse Hernandez fell on a Brooks fumble at the Snyder 36, the Tigers began to move.

Only Four Winners In Sunday NFL Matches

by The Associated Press
Cleveland at Pittsburgh and Los Angeles at New England, two games with plenty of offensive potential, are the only National Football League matchups Sunday in which both teams have winning records.

In fact, after the dust clears Sunday, all four teams will still have winning records but if Pittsburgh and Los Angeles lose, their playoff hopes will fade considerably.

In other games, it's Philadelphia, 9-1, at Washington, 3-7; Houston, 7-3, at Chicago, 4-6; Kansas City, 5-5, at San Diego, 6-4; St. Louis, 3-7, at Dallas, 7-3; Tampa Bay, 4-5-1, at Minnesota 5-5; Buffalo, 7-3, at Cincinnati, 3-7; New Orleans, 0-10, at Atlanta, 7-3; the New York Jets, 2-8, at Denver, 5-5; Green Bay, 4-5-1, at New York Giants, 2-8; Baltimore, 5-5, at Detroit, 6-4, and San Francisco, 3-7, at Miami, 5-5.

On Monday night, Oakland, 7-3, is at Seattle, 4-6.

New England is tied with Buffalo for first in the AFC East. Los Angeles trails Atlanta by one game in the NFC West. Both teams are coming off losses. Los Angeles was shocked by Miami 35-14 and New England was outscored by Houston 38-34 Monday night.

After falling to Houston's quarterback Ken Stabler and running back Earl Campbell the Patriots face Vince Ferragamo, third-rated quarterback in the NFL, and halfback Wendell Tyler, a 1,109-yard pusher-last season who is rounding into form after a dislocated hip.

Ferragamo directs the NFL's top-rated offense.

"A lot of people feel he may be the best quarterback in the NFL," said New England Coach Ron Erhardt said.

Los Angeles, which gave up 66 points the past two weeks against New Orleans and Miami, will go against the second highest scoring team in the NFL. The Rams will be without starting linebacker Bob Brudzinski who walked out over a contract dispute two weeks ago.

Cleveland is tied with Houston atop the AFC Central, with Pittsburgh one game back.

When Cleveland beat Pittsburgh 27-26 three weeks ago, the Steelers were missing Terry Bradshaw, Franco Harris and Lynn Swann on offense and middle linebacker Jack Lambert on defense. They'll all be back Sunday, and none is more eager than the hard-nosed Lambert, making his first start since he was hurt four weeks ago.

"It feels great to be back," said Lambert. "I wasn't doing too well watching the guys on TV. In fact, I was slowly losing my mind."

In the earlier game in Cleveland, Browns' quarterback Brian Sipe passed for 349 yards and four touchdowns. Sipe has passed for 12 TDs and 1,047 yards in his last three games against the Steelers. But Cleveland is 0-10 at Three Rivers Stadium since it opened in 1979.

"I'm anxious to go to Pittsburgh," said Sipe. "I think we are as good as they are now. They are the yardstick for us."

And Sunday's game will be a measuring stick for playoff chances.

"If you want to go to the Super Bowl, you've got to pay the toll in Pittsburgh," said Cleveland Coach Sam Rutigliano.

"If we don't win," said Steeler cornerback J.T. Thomas, "our chances of making the playoffs will be pretty bleak."

McCaulley Bombed By Borden County

GAIL-The Borden County Coyotes broke a 20-20 deadlock with a four-touchdown outburst in the second quarter here Friday night and went on to decision the McCaulley Eagles, 82-32, in District 2-A six-man football.

The Coyotes got four touchdowns apiece from Jim Rinehart and Bart McMeans as they completely dominated the action after the first quarter of play. The Borden County team led by 48-32 at half-time and then shut out the visiting Eagles in the second half while adding steadily to their own total.

Rinehart had extra points to go with his four touchdowns to make him high point man for the night with 26. McMeans followed with his 24 points and then came Junior Benavides with a touchdown and three conversions, for 12 points. Maurice Herridge with a touchdown and extra point for seven, Darrell Green and Sammy Williams with one touchdown each, and Tim Buchanan with one extra point.

Todd Stevens got three touchdowns to pace McCaulley in scoring, while Gordon Pippin got two touchdowns and Roy Gardner got two extra points for the Eagles.

The Coyotes finished their season with a 6-4 record, while McCaulley was 0-10 for the season.

$85,000 Paid For Top Mare

LEXINGTON, Ky. (AP)—The top price of $85,000 was paid by John T. Ward Jr. as agent for John Oxley of Tulsa, Okla., for a 14-year-old mare at the November Breeding Stock Sale at Keeneland Friday.

Jim Williams, a Keeneland spokesman, said Ward purchased Loyal Ruler, a 14-year-old mare by Gallant Man out of Tout a l'Heure.

The mare, in foal to Caucasus, is consigned by Mr. and Mrs. Vincent Moscarelli. Loyal Ruler is dam of Crumbs, a stakes winner of $152,980.

Williams said sales figures in Friday's session had total of 282 horses sold for $4,060,900, an average of $14,400. Two stallion shares were also sold for $20,000.

Six-day totals show that 1,680 horses and 69 stallion shares have been sold for $98,677,900, according to Williams.

The final session is today.

RECORD RETENTION
[How Long Must They Be Stored]
You are required to keep the books and records of your business available at all times for inspection by the Internal Revenue Service. The records must be kept as long as their contents may be necessary in the administration of the income tax laws.

Records supporting items on a tax return should be kept until the statute of limitations for that return runs out. Usually, the federal "statute of limitations" for an income tax return expires three years after the return is due or filed, or two years from the date the tax was paid, whichever occurs later. Records relating to the cost of property should be kept for three years after the sale of that property. In other words, all the documentation necessary to support the construction or acquisition costs of property which you owned for several years should be retained to support the cost of that asset.

Occasionally, Congress passes laws which affect prior business transactions. If your records can substantiate the timing and the nature of prior transactions, you may be entitled to some tax relief.

Retained copies of your tax returns will help you in preparing your future tax returns and in making computations if you later file a claim for refund. They may also be helpful for the personal representative of your estate. Since the tax return itself, without all the supporting documentation, is not too bulky, we suggest you keep all tax returns for an indefinite period of time.

If you own property or businesses in more than one state, you may want to check the statute of limitations in each state, since some are longer than the federal statute.

Real Bobby Ewing Sues 'Dallas'

DALLAS (AP) — The continuing saga of the hit television series "Dallas" has taken a turn its producers weren't expecting — Bobby Ewing is "madder 'n hell" and has decided to sue.

But this Bobby Ewing is the president of the Dallas-based Ewing Oil Company, not the oft-abused brother of arch-villain J.R. Ewing and is represented by famed Houston attorney Richard "Racehorse" Haynes.

"I'm not gonna be walked on," Ewing growled after the $4 million civil suit was filed Friday in federal court with U.S. District Judge Robert Porter.

The suit, which names "Dallas" producers Lorimar Productions Inc. of Los Angeles, is partially in response to an Oct. 9 suit filed in Los Angeles against Ewing by the production company.

"They made me madder 'n hell," he added. "We'll go all the way to the Supreme Court if we have to. They'll think a second time before they start walking on anybody else in Dallas."

The hugely popular series is expected to draw record audiences next week when the identity of the person who "shot" J.R. in the show's final episode last season will be revealed.

In an interview last summer, Haynes offered to defend J.R.'s assailant.

Lorimar alleges that Ewing infringed on their show's copyright by marketing a line of T-shirts, blue jeans, caps and paperweights that refer to "Ewing Oil" and "Bobby Ewing."

A California court issued a restraining order that prohibits Ewing from selling the items until the case, scheduled to get a Dec. 1 hearing, is resolved.

But Ewing's suit says Lorimar is using similar strategy in a game it is currently marketing.

The game, the suit claims, refers to companies and individuals in the city and county of Dallas and uses trademarks "which are confusingly similar" to real Dallas companies.

Ewing also contends that Lorimar's distribution of "fake stock certificates bearing the name Ewing Land, Oil and Cattle Company" causes confusion in the business done by Ewing Oil Company.

And he says the show's copyright claim to the "fictitious oil company" called Ewing Oil has improperly restricted his use for business purposes a name he legitimately acquired at birth.

"Why don't they sue my mama and daddy for giving me my name?" Ewing groused.

"They walked into town with a very arrogant attitude," Ewing said. "Somebody's gonna stop 'em and we're gonna start with me."

Ex-Con Vows To Fight Habitual Criminal Law

SAN ANTONIO, Texas (AP) — William J. Rummel, who spent almost eight years in prison as a "habitual criminal," is a free man now but he vows he'll fight to change the law that ordered him behind bars for life.

Rummel was freed Friday from the same courtroom where he was sentenced to life imprisonment for three crimes totaling $230.

In Texas, a man convicted of three felonies — regardless of the amount of money involved — goes to prison for a mandatory life sentence under the habitual criminal law.

Rummel, looking much older than his 37 years, pleaded guilty before U.S. District Judge Ed Prado in a plea bargain that set him free after serving seven years, nine months and 15 days of his life sentence. He also served about 3½ years on his first two convictions and was involved in a dozen crimes stretching back to his teen-aged years.

The blond, balding Rummel told reporters he was not bitter about the time he spent behind bars, but said he would attempt to convince the Texas

Legislature to change the habitual criminal law, which he termed "archaic."

"Nothing was settled here today," Rummel said. "I'm not a political activist; I plan to do what I can" to change the law he has fought since he went to prison.

He said he knew of another man serving life in the Texas penitentiary as a habitual criminal based on a third offense for stealing a package of pork chops.

Rummel spent much of his prison term trying to get the U.S. Supreme Court to declare the law unconstitutional, but the high court ruled last April it would not tamper with criminal penalties of individual states. He filed his own brief with the 5th U.S. Circuit Court of Appeals, which appointed Houston attorney Scott Atlas to represent him.

U.S. District Judge D.W. Suttle of San Antonio last month ruled that Rummel should be freed or retried because he did not receive effective counsel from his court-appointed attorney during a 1973 trial for theft by

Sales Of Home Alarms Soars With Crime Rate

LOS ANGELES (AP) — Once every 10 seconds, a home burglary occurs somewhere in the United States, a statistic that makes it seem it's only a matter of time until the thieves drop in at your place.

Little wonder that sales of home alarms are soaring. Homeowners can spend as little or as much as they want on security — 39 cents for a package of window decals that falsely proclaim the house to be protected by a guard service, to thousands of dollars a month for sophisticated electronic systems and real guards.

Experts say a rough rule of thumb for homeowners is 1 percent to 2 percent of the market value of the house and its contents — or $1,000 to $2,000 for every $100,000.

The cost of a specific home alarm system depends on a number of factors, including the size, location and physical layout of a house, the nature of the valuables to be protected, the degree of security desired and the homeowner's general lifestyle — how visible is the wealth?

The cost of a home security system also depends in large part on the psychology of the buyer — and when the purchase takes place.

"Many people who buy residential security buy it after having an incident and they buy it in a period of stress and will tend to overprotect," says Pat Munro of ADT Inc., a leading residential and commercial security company.

"We try to discourage them from that, because no matter how much you spend, nothing is foolproof. Unless the homeowner knows of a really factual threat above and beyond the normal thing of someone just wanting to rip them off, they should not overprotect because it gets exorbitant."

The simplest and cheapest alarms start at about $10 for battery-powered devices that go off when they're disturbed. These alarms are basically noisemakers, depending on sound to either frighten the intruder away or bring help.

The next level of alarm is one which signals for help, usually through a leased telephone line connected directly to the nearest police station. However, authorities say at least 95 percent of alarms triggered this way are false and many communities have begun to discourage their use.

After a police survey showed that 99.1 percent of the alarms at their headquarters were false, the city of Thousand Oaks imposed a policy "blacklisting" homes and businesses whose alarms cried wolf too often.

Police were authorized to ignore alarms coming from locations that had turned in three false alarms in 30 days or four in a month. Other cities, Los Angeles among them, have enacted ordinances to fine repeat offenders.

The third kind of system signals a central station staffed by the alarm company. With these systems, an alarm company employee calls the home after an alarm is sounded and checks on the situation. If anything is out of the ordinary, the employee calls the police.

Blood Drive Is Slated Thursday

The Cogdell Hospital Auxiliary will conduct a blood drive Thursday to replenish supplies. It will be held in the conference room from 2-8 p.m.

"Remember, hospitals don't need blood, people do," said Ouida Bruner, spokesperson for the auxiliary. "And the only source for this vital fluid is a healthy human being," she added.

The donor also is benefited, she said. In addition to helping fulfill a vital community need, each donor receives a thorough pre-donation interview. A careful medical history is taken and temperature, pulse, blood pressure and hemoglobin are checked. After the blood is drawn, it is carefully typed and tested for diseases which could be transmitted to the recipient. Should any of these tests indicate the need for medical attention, the donor is notified and referred to a physician.

"Its like a mini-physical," she said. The response to the last blood drive was very encouraging, she said, and more people would be on hand to draw the blood this time, she promised.

The auxiliary sponsors a drive every two months. About 70 pints have been collected in the last four months, she said.

The amount of blood the hospital has used this year, month by month, follows: January, 25; February, 40; March, 36; April, 31; May, 28; June, 11; July, 21; August, 41; September, 25; October, 32.

Sun Takes Rap For 2 Wrecks In Dallas

DALLAS (AP) — Two vehicles rounded a corner in front of an elementary school within minutes of each other and struck four people crossing the street to get to the school, police said Thursday.

"We had two wrecks about five minutes apart," police spokesman Ed Spencer said. "What happened was the sun blinded both the drivers."

Spencer said the accidents occurred while children crossed the busy East Dallas street on their way to school. First, a woman driving a car hit a 50-year-old man, injuring him slightly.

Captive Countess Freed By Police

ROME (AP) — Like knights to the rescue, police freed an Italian countess held captive for 40 years in a room of her ancestral home, but authorities are still puzzled over why her alleged captors — the woman's two brothers and a sister-in-law — kept her locked away.

"The people in the village say she went to bed with her father and they locked her up to punish her," Cpl. Antonio Pavone, a police officer in the northern Italian town of Piacenza told The Associated Press in a telephone interview Friday.

"We don't know if that is a true story. Other people say the family wanted her money. We don't know if that's true either, or even if she had a lot of money."

Acting on a tip from neighbors, police broke into the family's home on a farm near Piacenza last week and freed the 65-year-old countess, Giovanni Portapuglia. She had not been allowed to leave her room or use a toilet and was living amid her own excrement, police said.

Local Pair Exchange Vows In Double Ring Ceremony

Miss Lisa von Roeder became the bride of James Carl Williams during a double ring ceremony at 7:30 p.m. Oct. 24 at Trinity United Methodist Church. The Rev. James Merrell, pastor of the church, officiated.

The bride is the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Max von Roeder, Snyder. The bridegroom's parents are Mr. and Mrs. Beryl Williams, also of Snyder.

A rainbow candelabrum with fresh greenery and bouquets of fresh flowers in shades of ivory, burgandy and rose decorated the front of the church. Low votive candles and greenery lighted the altar rail and the choir loft.

Given in marriage by her father, the bride wore a candlelight silhouette gown of organza with silk embroidery, accented by tiny pearls and trimmed with Alencon lace on the bodice, while the sleeves were of lace. The A-line skirt of organza flowed to a chapel train. Her veil was candlelight illusion edged with lace and fitted to a lace covered bandeau.

Mrs. Mark Duke attended her sister as matron of honor. She was attired in a formal Quiana gown and chiffon jacket in dusty rose color.

The bride and her attendant carried bouquets of rose buds, lilies of the valley, tiny mums in shades of winter white, burgandy and dusty rose trimmed with streamers of winter white lace. The bouquets were made by the bride's aunt, Mrs. Lindy Clark.

Amy Richardson, the bride's cousin, was flower girl. She wore a long candlelight dress trimmed in dusty rose velvet ribbon and lace. She carried a white wicker basket of rose petals.

Jimmy Spence was best man. The bridegroom and best man were attired in dark brown suits with candlelight pleated tuxedo shirts and dark brown bow ties.

Jeremy Gebben of Manitou Springs, Colo., also cousin of the bride, served as ring bearer. He carried a candlelight satin pillow.

Ushers included Mark Duke and Gerald Pylant. Nolan von Roeder, the bride's brother, lighted the candles and also ushered during the ceremony.

Mr. and Mrs. Kirk Merrell of Canyon sang "Follow Me," accompanying themselves on the guitar.

Piano selections of wedding music was provided by Mrs. Virgil Mott before the ceremony began. She played traditional wedding music at the organ for the ceremony.

The reception bridal table was covered with ivory lace, highlighted with an antique punch bowl and three-tiered square wedding cake. The cake was decorated with touches of fresh flowers complimenting the pair of white dove, candle tapers and streamers.

A brown woven cloth and copper appointments were used on the bridegroom's table, where a double ring chocolate cake and coffee were served.

Houseparty members included Temi Holladay and Teresa McKee, both of Snyder; Mrs. Ronald Gill, San Angelo; Denise Clark, McMinnville, Ore., and Mary Semik, Lubbock.

The bridegroom's parents were hosts to a rehearsal dinner at The Shack Restaurant.

The bride attended Snyder schools and Angelo State University, and is a 1979 graduate of Texas Tech University. She is presently employed by Grimmett Brothers in Snyder.

Her husband also attended Snyder schools and is a 1976 graduate of Angelo State University. Currently, he is farming.

After a wedding trip to Ruidoso, N.M., the couple reside in Snyder.

ABOUT COOKING VENISON

Bag a deer for food this season? Wild game can stretch the budget year 'round.

Deer meat-venison-is comparable to beef, except that it is low in fat. It provides protein needed for growth and repair of body tissue, muscles, blood, skin and hair.

Venison also provides iron, thiamine, riboflavin and niacin. It can furnish the two servings of meat needed daily, or a part of the servings in this group. Count two or three ounces of lean venison as a serving.

Venison dishes that are quick and easy to prepare are popular for camp cooking during the hunt. A favorite is backstrap and tenderloin—or "tenders" as campers call them—pan fried in an iron skillet, or a stew cooked in a Dutch oven while campers are on the hunt.

As soon as the liver and heart are "dressed," they are ready to cook, and will provide a quick meal for hungry hunters.

But because venison roasts, steaks, ground and chopped venison demand more elaborate preparation—more utensils, ingredients, or temperature—they are usually cooked at home.

The quality of dishes from venison will be only as good as the quality of the venison and other ingredients. The quality of the meat is affected by the age, sex, manner in which the animal was killed and the way it is dressed.

The male deer-the buck-may taste more "gamey" than the doe. Deer killed cleanly will be more tender than those killed after being wounded, excited or chased.

Since venison has little fat and corresponds in quality to beef carcasses with little or no external fat, it is best cooked the same as lean beef. Tender cuts such as the loin and ribs can be pan fried or roasted. Round steak, meat from the leg and the less tender cuts are best when cooked by moist heat—braising, stewing and pot roasting.

Do not overcook venison. Its short fibers toughen quickly if overcooked or cooked at too high a temperature. Plan to serve it medium to well done, never rare or overcooked.

Use acid to tenderize. Vinegar, tomato sauce and French dressing sauces are good for tenderizing venison. Cover slices or chunks of venison and allow to stand in the marinating sauces for at least 24 hours. Pan fry to medium-done.

Reduce the sugar in sauce recipes for venison. The natural flavor is sweeter than other meats. Reduce the sugar in sauces for domestic meats by one fourth.

Remove all visible fat before cooking. The gamey flavor is exaggerated in the fat. If fat is desired, ground pork or beef fat may be substituted.

For a sound night's sleep, keep your bedroom cool and airy. Have a light snack before bedtime but don't stuff yourself. A glass of milk and cookies or yogurt and fruit are nice, and both contain calcium.

The French colony of Mauritius, an island in the Indian Ocean, was captured by the British in 1810. The British were concerned about the island because they considered it a threat to their vessels in the India trade.

Upon restoration of peace between Britain and France in 1814, Britain retained possession of the island under the Treaty of Paris.

The couple plans a Jan. 3 wedding at Southside Baptist Church in Abilene.

An Orderly Household Keeps Family Prepared

Do you know what to do if someone in your family should die? Does your family know what to do if you should die?

"Setting Your Household in Order" was the topic of the Stargazers Extension Homemakers Club Thursday meeting. Blanche Chisum, Scurry County Extension Agent, presented the program.

"I don't intend to tell you how to arrange your glassware, where to store the pots and pans or how to arrange your furniture," Mrs. Chisum told the group. "Setting your household in order has to do with the plans and information which would be needed if and when you should die."

She touched on the subjects of wills, life and health insurance, credit cards, bank checking and savings accounts, investments, debts and household inventory. She also gave the group a sheet containing the information a completed questionnaire furnished by the Texas Agricultural Extension Service would make a nice gift for the family, she noted.

Following Mrs. Chisum's speech, Dale Neves gave a demonstration on needlepoint using plastic netting. She showed placemats, coasters, Christmas decorations and ash trays that she had made.

In the business section of the meeting, the group planned a pot luck supper for the December meeting. New officers were approved and include Pauline Withers, president; Dale Neves, vice president; Alta Bavousett, secretary-treasurer; Carolyn Goodwin, council delegate and Dot Stokes, reporter.

For an activity, Stargazer members began making tissue box covers.

Members attending the meeting were Dot Stokes, presiding officer, Dale Neves, Carolyn Goodwin, Alta Bavousett, Pauline Withers, Bertie Wilson and new member Gwen Sorrells.

Random notrump thoughts

By Oswald Jacoby and Alan Sontag

Another point about notrump is that 4-3-3-3 distribution is weaker than either 4-4-2 or 5-3-3-2.

In standard American the opening notrump is a hand with 4-3-3-3, 4-4-3-2 or 5-3-3-2 distribution and 16 to 18 high-card points.

There is a further provision that any doubleton should include the jack or higher card.

Everyone likes to open notrump and with this in mind experts have reduced the minimum requirement to 15 high-card points and eliminated the restriction on the doubleton.

We have no objection to this. That is, you can play 15 to 17, but we object to going the whole hog and using 15-18. We call that a scattershot notrump and don't like it because partner can't respond with any accuracy.

Some players like to open notrump with a singleton ace or king. They are welcome to that, but we know that it is a losing action in the long run. Such hands are too likely to do better in a suit.

A word to the wise: Thirty-three points is supposed to give a good play for a slam. If both hands are 4-3-3-3 you really should have 34 or 35.

Another word to the wise: Tens and nines are great cards in notrump. They aren't to be sneezed at in suit contracts, either.

Thus, S-Q J 10 9 H-K 10 8 D-A 10 4 C-K Q 10 is only a 15-point hand, but it is really worth 16 and should be treated as such. In fact it is probably worth more than a bad 16 like: S-K J 3 2 H-K 5 4 D-A 8 2 C-K Q 5.

For Best Food Buys Plan Before Shopping

COLLEGE STATION—Doing the best job of buying starts before you walk into the supermarket: it begins with inventory, meal planning and a "super shopping list."

That's how Marilyn Haggard, a foods and nutrition specialist, sums up food buying, and she also has a step-by-step technique for success.

Ms. Haggard is on the home economics staff of the Texas Agricultural Extension Service, the Texas A&M University System.

TAKE INVENTORY: Take inventory of the food in your cabinets, refrigerator and freezer. This information helps you use food ads a bit later to plan meals on a weekly basis.

PLAN MEALS WEEKLY: Plan meals on a weekly basis. Involve family members in the plans: They can help with menu selection and in assuring variety.

This pre-planning a week ahead helps you make use of seasonal best buys, specials and coupons—and that saves money.

Planning menus on a weekly basis also helps cut down "impulse buying," and it answers the ever-present question, "What shall I fix for dinner?"

MAKE SUPER SHOPPING LIST: Once you've taken inventory and planned your meals, make a super shopping list.

This starts with a "running" grocery list. It's a list you keep in a handy place in the kitchen so you can jot down food items on it during the week as supplies run low.

Near your list, keep coupons and food ads to keep the whole system efficient.

BUYING STEPS: Before you go to the store, organize your coupons and group your shopping list by areas of the store. This helps eliminate time and added steps.

Eat before shopping—you'll probably do less impulse buying if you aren't hungry.

Follow your shopping list, but be flexible—so you can take advantage of unadvertised specials.

Woodrow Wilson became the first president of the United States to leave the country while in office when he sailed for the Versailles Peace Conference in 1918. The conference discussed the terms of peace following the termination of hostilities in World War I and resulted in the signing of the Treaty of Versailles in June of 1919.

Don Foster Attends Home Convention

Don Foster, representing Leisure Lodge nursing home of Snyder joined colleagues in San Antonio last week for the 30th Annual Convention of the Texas Nursing Home Association held at the San Antonio Convention Center.

While there, he attended four sessions of lectures to earn six official hours of credit toward the continuing education requirements of the Texas Board of Licensure for Nursing Home Administrators.

A number of social events were held, each emphasizing the theme, "We've Come a Long Way."

A featured luncheon speaker was CBS Newsmen Douglas Edwards. An awards luncheon honored top achievements and presented a multi-media review of highlights of the association's 30 year history.

Educational and commercial displays in the San Antonio Convention Center numbered 106, all related to the newest equipment and innovative techniques for the long-term care profession.

Common Sense Cooking
By RUTH McDANIEL

Dear Ruth,

First I would like to say that I enjoy your column and love your cookbook.

I'd like to know if egg whites can be frozen, and if they can be beaten stiff, and can they be used in angel cake and pies?

Also, I'm looking for a Pumpkin Brownie recipe. If you have one, please enclose it in the self-addressed stamped envelope. Thanks,

Mary A.

Dear Mary,

Thanks for your nice note. I'm glad you like my cookbook, you must have the old edition as the directions for freezing and using frozen egg whites is on page 123 of the new edition.

Here's how to do it: Spoon 1 egg white into each section of an ice cube tray. When frozen, remove cubes from tray and store in freezer in plastic bag. They'll keep up to 7 months. Thaw in covered dish in refrigerator and use promptly. Egg whites should never be refrozen.

If you plan to beat them, be sure they're at room temperature before beating to get maximum volume. They'll beat up just as stiff as fresh eggs.

Top Box Office Star Is Out Of This World

HACKENSACK, N.J. (AP) — Who's the biggest box-office attraction of 1980? It's not Robert Redford, John Travolta, or even Clint Eastwood. It's a 900-year-old wookie who stands kneehigh to a wookie and sports plattitudes in a voice that sounds like a cross between Walter Brennan and the Cookie Monster.

He is Yoda, the pint-sized hero of "The Empire Strikes Back" and a star in any galaxy. In the runaway hit sequel to "Star Wars," the learned leprechaun with the big ears has done more than levitate spaceships and teach Luke Skywalker the ways of The Force. He has thrust Frank Oz, the man behind the wee fellow, from out of the Muppets' shadow and into a limelight all his own.

No matter that the 36-year-old Oz has been the force behind such marvelous creations as the inimitable Miss Piggy, the Cookie Monster, Grover, and Fozzie Bear. Jim Henson, the creator of the mini-industry known as the Muppets, rightfully gets the lion's share of the attention and acclaim. The bearded Henson may do American Express credit-card commercials, but he doesn't leave home without Frank Oz.

With a little luck, Oz just might accomplish what no mortal or Jedi master has ever done: receive an Academy Award nomination — as best supporting actor — for a character made of latex, electronic gadgetry, and movie magic.

Considering that "The Empire Strikes Back" has become the most popular movie of the year and that the film's director, Irvin Kirshner, has called Yoda "the heart, the pulsating center" of the entire film, a case could certainly be made for an Oscar nomination for the man behind Yoda.

Oz came close last year, when his portrayal of Miss Piggy in "The Muppet Movie" became the subject of a feverish write-in campaign for best actress.

Says Oz in a rare interview, by telephone from his working base in London: "The attention was very nice. If you ask Miss Piggy, she'll deny that the Oscar meant very much to her and that she was honored to even be considered in the same company as those other great actresses. But I'm sure she cries in her pillow at night and hates every one of them."

What about a nomination for his performance as Yoda? "The thought has occurred to me, but not for very long," Oz admits. "If you start thinking about acceptance speeches before the fact, it's not very constructive."

Oz says he took the role of the Spock-eared Yoda for purely selfish motives. Henson Associates, the Muppets' parent company, plans to make a fantasy movie using puppets and Oz wanted to see how "Star Wars" genius George Lucas and his brain trust operated.

The balding, mustachioed Oz took an immediate liking to the balding lilliputian from the swamp planet of Dagobah.

"My main concern during the two weeks of filming Yoda's scenes was getting the complex mechanics of the character to work right, and then I could do the acting. It took me and two other people to work Yoda."

The working conditions were less than conducive to award-winning performances. The set for the scenes on the swamp planet was appropriately fetid and steamy (thanks to a sugabase smoke), and the cast and crew were reduced to wearing gas masks while Oz and his assistants manipulated the two-foot-high Yoda from a narrow trench.

Did Oz ever dream that Yoda would develop a cult following, his elfin visage adorning T-shirts, toys, posters, jewelry, Halloween masks, and notebooks? "When you start thinking about making a character into a star, you're in big trouble."

Oz has a tendency to stay in the background, downplaying his own contributions and praising his colleagues. The major reason he's so publicity-shy is that he likes his characters to stand on their own two feet: A puppet loses its magic if its strings are too visible.

While Oz did make a rare nonpuppet acting appearance recently — as a prison guard in "The Blues Brothers" — the course he has charted for himself over the next year will take him behind the cameras more. And may preclude a reprise as Yoda in the next "Star Wars" adventure. "I've talked to George Lucas about doing Yoda again," says Oz, "but I have two new movies I'm very involved in, so it's still up in the air. If I can work it into my schedule, I'd love to do Yoda again."

Oz's immediate plans focus on the sequel to "The Muppet Movie," which will be released next summer. Oz is a co-producer. Then he and Henson will direct "The Dark Crystal," a fantasy film inspired by Brian Froud's delicate paintings of gnomes and elves.

It is a far cry from Oz's childhood puppeteering in Oakland, Calif. A naturalized American, Oz and his parents (both amateur puppeteers) emigrated from Belgium when Oz was Yoda-high. He says he never dreamed that puppets could lead to such success.

"I really looked up to the most popular kid in my grammar school, and I remember one day when I was doing a puppet show that he came up to me and said, 'What the heck are you doing this stuff for? Puppets are stupid. You'll never make any money doing that.'"

"It's nice to look back on that grammar-school experience and realize that being a puppeteer is a very worthwhile profession. It's given me a lot of satisfaction."

Pour the Champagne And Hold the Judgment

By Abigail Van Buren

© 1980 by Universal Press Syndicate

DEAR ABBY: My husband's mother, who has been widowed for some years, is going on a world cruise with a gentleman friend of hers. Although they have been going together for several years, they never married.

They have booked adjoining staterooms and, as far as I know, are planning to tour the world as man and wife. My husband wants us to throw a bon voyage party, but I say what they are doing is improper and I refuse to be a party to it.

What do you think? I would be grateful if you could settle the argument.

DISAPPROVING DAUGHTER-IN-LAW

DEAR DISAPPROVING: I may not settle the argument, but if I were you, I wouldn't presume to pass judgment on my husband's widowed mother. Throw the party, wish her bon voyage, and thank God you don't have to schlepp chicken soup to her every day in a nursing home!

DEAR ABBY: A woman I knew only slightly showed up at a country club dance wearing a dress exactly like the one I was wearing. (May I add, it was a very expensive dress.) When we saw each other, I laughed, and said, "Well, it just proves that we both have good taste."

My look-alike didn't laugh. Instead she appeared to be angry, embarrassed and ill at ease. Shortly after, she disappeared. Later in the evening I saw her wearing a different dress! Would you believe this foolish woman had actually rushed home and changed?

Would you have felt insulted or relieved had you been in my place?

XEROXED

DEAR XEROXED: Neither. I'd have felt a little sorry for a woman who placed so much importance on what she was wearing.

DEAR ABBY: After years of accepting congratulations and gifts on my birthday just for having been born, it suddenly occurred to me who really deserved the gifts.

After that, on my birthday, I sent my mother one rose for every year of my life. I enclosed a note, "With loving thanks." She knew who had sent them.

Now that she is no longer living, I send a contribution on my birthday to my mother's favorite charity in her name. The card still says, "With loving thanks."

DIANA

DEAR DIANA: Thank you for sharing a beautiful idea.

CONFIDENTIAL TO MOREY: I don't want to spoil your day, but your normal weight for the rest of your life is what you weighed when you were 25!

Bomb Squad Lives On Life's Edge

LISNASKEA, Northern Ireland (AP) — Sgt. Martin Walsh hunched over a milk churn packed with explosives on a country road culvert along Northern Ireland's violence-torn border with the Irish Republic.

He radioed to his backup team 100 yards down the road that defusing the bomb, planted by Irish Republican Army guerrillas to ambush a British army patrol, looked pretty straightforward.

But, as he gingerly eased the timing mechanism out through the neck of the metal churn, he rasped suddenly: "There's something else here ..."

Those were his last words. The bomb had been boobytrapped. It exploded as he lifted the timer, killing him instantly.

Walsh was one of 17 British army bomb disposal specialists, or Ammunition Technical Officers, killed by IRA bombs in Northern Ireland since 1971. A score have been wounded, blinded or maimed.

"You throw away the book here," one 27-year-old veteran bomb disposal lieutenant says. "PIRA (the 'provisional' wing of the IRA) are always coming up with new twists."

ATOs wear 80-pound protective suits armored with plaited nylon sheets when they work on bombs. But the sergeant notes wryly: "They're little more than psychological aids. If you're next to a bomb that explodes, you're going to get it."

The ATOs, prime targets for the "Provos," have neutralized about one-third of all bombs planted by the IRA and other terrorists in the province's 11 years of sectarian feuding and IRA insurrection.

The Roman Catholic IRA is fighting to wrest Northern Ireland from British rule and reunite the Protestant-dominated province with the predominately Catholic Republic.

Appropriately, EOD 321 is code-named "Felix," after the cat with nine lives. The colonel is known as "Top Cat." He has left Northern Ireland after a one-year tour and was awarded the Order of the British Empire for his work.

The 14 ATO teams across this volatile province have defused some 4,000 bombs, everything from tape cassette incendiaries containing half-ounce charges of gelignite to loaded gasoline tankers turned into monster napalm bombs.

Bombs come in all shapes and sizes in Northern Ireland — letters, cars, biscuit tins, beer kegs, even dead bodies.

Nearly 7,000 of them have exploded, causing the worst destruction in Western Europe since World War II and a large percentage of the 2,054 deaths from the conflict.

"It's a war of nerves between us and the terrorists and they have the advantage all the time," says the burly Forshaw.

ATO men, all volunteers or non-coms, serve four-month tours here. Few have done more than three. Some have tackled more than 50 bombs. Others have never even gotten a sniff of a "live one." But the strain tells either way.

Neutralizing a bomb sometimes takes a few seconds to snip the detonator wire of an incendiary. Often it means four or five gut-wrenching, cold-sweat hours of concentration and near-surgical skill to defuse a booby-trapped blockbuster that can wreck a street.

The tension of four months on the edge, heightened by being cooped up in fortified bases except when tackling bombs, does not easily dissipate.

"It takes weeks to decompress," says Capt. "Frank," a young Scotsman, waiting on standby inside the military's main base in Belfast. "At home after a tour here even the phone ringing makes me jump."

"This isn't like World War II, where you could look at a German aerial bomb, tag it as a Mark VI or whatever and know exactly how to handle it," says Forshaw.

Your being depressed and isolated may be in addition to your problems with speech and balance, but I'm sending you The Health Letter number 16-6, Strokes. It will give you more information about these problems. Others who want this issue can send 75 cents with a long, stamped, self-addressed envelope for it to me, in care of this newspaper, P.O. The only way to define the extent of your problem is to have a good examination. You should see a neurologist. Sometimes certain forms of artery blockages can be corrected. It depends on the total situation for the patient.

Now people who have illnesses need to have adequate amounts of social contacts, too. Staying at home in an isolated situation promotes depression. I know it's hard when it's difficult for you to get around and must be even more difficult when it's a problem to speak but do make an effort to improve your contacts with friends and relatives. Plans To Widen Road Are Okayed

AUSTIN, Texas (AP) — Plans to widen Farm Road 2154 in College Station were approved conditionally Thursday by the State Highway and Public Transportation Commission.

The commission said the state would provide about $990,000 for widening and pavement of the 1.4 miles if the city would adjust utility lines and construct driveways and sidewalks.

The commission also approved installation of traffic signals at the intersection of Texas 349 and Texas 158 in Midland at an estimated cost of 450,000.

Your Money At Stake In PUC Numbers Game

AUSTIN, Texas (AP) — The Texas Public Utilities Commission is playing a never-ending numbers game, with your money as the stakes.

Here is how the game is played: A major utility comes to the PUC pleading poverty and asking for a multi-million-dollar rate increase. The cities the utility serves then jump up and down and tell the PUC that the utility is doing quite well, and needs only a small increase. Then consumer groups have their turn and usually say the utility doesn't deserve any increase.

The three PUC commissioners serve as umpires. The utility sends in an expert with a bucket of impressive credentials who testifies that the proposed rates are fair.

Then the cities and consumer groups send in their experts, backed by equally impressive credentials, who testify that the rates are too high. The PUC has its own staff experts who seem to agree a little bit with all the other experts.

"It's just one expert disagreeing with another expert," said John Bell, who recently resigned as the PUC general counsel. "It's pure-deed judgment."

"It's a question of reasonableness," said George Cowden, PUC chairman.

"Everyone has a different notion of handling these numbers, and how you massage them," said Jack Hopper, a utility consultant and PUC critic, who added the process involves a "wasteland of numbers."

One thing you can be sure of at a PUC rate hearing is that all sides — the utility company that says it needs more money, the cities that say the company doesn't need that much, and the consumers who say no increase is needed — will have an expert or two to back their arguments. It was that way in the recent Texas Electric Service Co. case. TESCO, which serves 78 North, Central and West Texas cities, wanted $123 million in rate hikes. The cities said only $24 million more was needed. The PUC staff recommended a $69.4 million hike. Consumer groups fighting the increase intervened.

PUC granted a $69.4 million rate raise, about $3 million more than a hearing examiner recommended after listening to the experts' testimony.

What were the $69.4 million decisions made by the commission? Everyone involved with the PUC agreed there are three major factors in setting rates: rate of return on equity, construction work in progress (CWIP) and "elasticity."

All are judgment calls. The rate of return involves keeping stockholders happy and attracting investment capital.

"The financial community tells us there should be a return on stockholders' money of 16.5 to 17.5 percent," said George Hedrick, TESCO's manager of public information.

The PUC granted a 15.5 percent rate of return.

Mountain People Reject Notion Of Outside Help

LANDO, W.Va. (AP) —

Nadine Warren's job is to try to help the mentally handicapped in this mountainous coal region, but the fierce self-reliance and isolation of people in the rural hollows often stands in the way.

"Folks down here are used to taking care of their own," says Miss Warren, assistant director of programs for the Exceptional Individual Center in Mingo County.

The center opened last year to deal with the mentally retarded and emotionally disturbed in the county and operates from a modern, cedarshingled building in Lando that contrasts sharply with the ragtag coalfield housing nearby.

There's a similar contrast between the center's approach to mental handicaps and the attitudes and traditions of the mountain folks who have little truck with the center's therapeutic notions. Strong family cohesion, each family minding its own business, and distrust of outsiders are ingrained in these parts.

The center "is a place you can go to if you need help," says Miss Warren, "and there are a lot of people who should be here. But first you have to know you need help."

That's where the problem lies, she says. "I've seen a mentally retarded child lying there on the floor and the parent says, 'When he gets better, I'll send him.' You can't force people into anything."

So Miss Warren, a Mingo County native herself, travels the backwoods roads, explaining the center to the skeptical and suspicious and trying to lure those in need.

Intermarriage among blood relatives is not rare in Mingo County and is considered a genetic factor in some of the disabilities Miss Warren encounters. She has seen it at work during her decade's experience in special education.

But Miss Warren is circumspect in discussing subjects like intermarriage and genetics with prospective clients in the hollows. "What's normal here is different somewhere else. They're not aware that they're doing anything wrong."

Miss Warren sees nothing inherently wrong with the attitude of independence that keeps many mountain people from using the center. The same insistence on caring for their own, for example, keeps Mingo County families from shunting their oldsters to nursing homes.

Education is the key, Miss Warren believes. The county Board of Education, the state Welfare Department, civic organizations and clients all are helping to spread word of the center and its programs, she says.

Miss Warren sees great potential for the center once people in the area overcome their suspicions.

She also plans to add a program for gifted children to foster their creativity, but so far the response has been slow.

"If we could get a Mozart from Mingo County, that would be beautiful," she says.

The University of Michigan says it awarded a total of 353,912 academic degrees between 1845 and 1979.
