Prime Rate Now 211/2%

NEW YORK (AP) - The prime lending rate rose to another record today, as Citibank raised the rate it charges its best corporate customers one-half point to 21.5 percent.

The increase, which was expected to be matched by other major banks, came just one day after Donald Regan, President-elect Ronald Reagan's choice for treasury secretary, said he thought the key rate would increase to at least 22 or 22.5 percent in the weeks ahead.

The prime had been at 21 percent, a rate it hit on Tuesday. Before this week, the rate had never been above 20 percent.

Cold Front Cools Texas

Feds Studying Chrysler Plan

WASHINGTON (AP) - Federal officials are studying intently the latest pieces of Chrysler Corporation's complex survival plan while awaiting a formal request by the ailing automaker for another $400 million in government loan guarantees.

The federal Chrysler Loan Guarantee Board met for 75 minutes Thursday, the second session this week, to keep track of the automaker's fast-moving efforts to cut more than $1.5 billion in costs through concessions from its employees, banks and suppliers.

The meeting was called "informational" by Treasury Secretary G. William Miller, who heads the board. "Nothing really (is) to be decided" until Chrysler formally requests more loan guarantees, he said.

TI Reduces Employee Hours

DALLAS (AP) - Texas Instruments Inc. will reduce the hours of 17 percent of its worldwide work force - about 15,000 employees - beginning in January and lasting at least through March.

The company cited a "softening in demand for certain company products," along with economic "uncertainties" in 1981, in announcing the cutbacks Thursday.

TI, the largest private employer in Dallas County with about 30,000 workers, has about 90,000 employees worldwide.

"We are not going to break it out by plant site," said public relations director Norman Neureiter. "We are not going to break it out by city and location. Various people are affected in different business areas according to different business

He said the employees are not being laid off. "The people affected will be working, but working a lesser number of hours, varying from plant to plant," Neureiter said.

Iran Demands Gold Deposits

By The Associated Press Iran today told Washington that to win release of the hostages the U.S. government must deposit "the gold and confiscated wealth" of Iran with the Algerian central bank and offer good will guarantees about return of the late shah's fortune, a top Iranian official was quoted as saying.

Algerian intermediaries in the hostage crisis left Tehran today with the "final reply" from Iran. Delegation leader Rehda Malek, the Algerian ambassador to the United States, told a reporter in Tehran that the Iranian response already has been transmitted to officials in Washington.

The comments by Behzad Nabavi, Cabinet-level adviser to Iranian Prime Minister Mohammad Ali Rajai, addressed the Iranian demands that are seen as most difficult for the United States to meet: return of the late Shah Nohammad Reza Pahlavi's wealth and release of the estimated $8 billion in Iranian ets frozen in the United

In what he called Iran's "final reply," Nabavi said "the U.S. government has been informed that it should not only sign the letters and hand them to the Algerian government before the hostages are released but should also transfer the gold and confiscated wealth of the Iranian government to the Algerian central bank,"

Tehran radio said. "As for other properties and assets and the riches plundered by the deposed shah and his relatives ... acceptable guarantees as good will for a proper implementation should be given to the Algerian government." he w as saying.

How would a newcomer to the U.S., or a person blissfully protected from television and other media react to routine conversations of the day in 1980? Tom E. Roy of the Ballinger Ledger suspects a conversation might go like this dialogue he developed with a fabricated friend named Oscar Outofit:

"What do you think about the showdown between the Cowboys and the Eagles this Sunday?"

"That's the trouble with you environmentalists. You can't see the forest for the bushes. Don't you realize what an eagle can do to a herd of sheep? Why, I don't blame them cowboys a bit for trying to get rid of 'em. Course, I don't know what the preachers will say 'bout huntin' on Sunday. They get kindly touchy on things such as that."

Winston Churchill's optimism was well-known, and Jerry Tidwell of the Hood County News came up with this story about the World War II British Prime Minister.

When he was 82, a young photographer snapped Churchill's picture at a formal banquet. Awed to be in the presence of Sir Winston, the photographer blurted out, "I hope I have the honor of taking your picture again when you're 90.'

Sir Winston looked him squarely in the eye. "I don't know why you shouldn't, young man," the venerable statesman replied. "You seem hale and hearty enough to make it through a few more years."

In these days of inflation, we hear the word "billions" mentioned nearly every day. Just how much is a billion?

what court didn't do

182 Two court decisions of some significance were rendered recently on the matter of religion in the public schools. As is often the case when the interests of church and state become entangled, shades of gray are everywhere and the clear line of demarcation we would like to believe exists between God and overnment is, in fact, very hard to locate. But, on the basis of istinctions we find helpful to draw, we suggest that the jurists vere right in one instance and wrong in another.

Our dividing lines are these: First, whether the activity in uestion was prescribed by school administrators or initiated students, and beyond that, whether religious themes are ounded in the course of classroom work to lend them official anction or merely to recognize their undeniable role in istorical and contemporary thought.

By these standards, the U.S. Supreme Court's ruling against he state of Kentucky ordering placement of the Ten Comnandments on perpetual display in all classrooms is apropriate. The banning of before-school prayers by federal ppeals court in New York is more suspect.

When considering the Kentucky decision, we ought to be clear. ight off about what the Supreme Court did not do, lest we allow his decision to be broadly interpreted the way an earlier. court's 1962 decision on mandatory school prayers has been. In the pursuit of this clarity, the lead paragraph in our news ervice account the following morning is regrettable: "The upreme Court Monday barred the Ten Commandments from he walls of public school classrooms." Only if one stretched the teral meaning of that sentence would it be correct. Its essence wrong: the language used by the court in 1980 no more forbids eligious text from occupying its respective place in intructional displays than the 1962 ruling prohibited children rom saying prayers on their own.

What the court said was that the state couldn't order pecially prepared copies of the commandments to occupy pace in the way that symbols of the government of which the chools are a part - like the flag, or the Constitution - often . Kentucky officials tried to sidestep the church-state paration by funding the project privately and printing a disclaimer on each copy, but the thrust of the required display remained obvious. Some argue that the Ten Commandments e deserving of special status because of the contribution to estern civilization, or because the Founding Fathers of this nation made reference to God's inspiration in their earliest orks of state. The answers to these contentions are, first, that other artifacts of our culture's development are not accorded smilar treatment in Kentucky or elsewhere, and second, though respect for the divine may be part and parcel of our law, the specifics of Exodus 20 are not. Kentucky, for example, no nger has laws against adultery and Sunday work, and neither do California and many other states.

Where the highest court confined itself to matters of state action in Kentucky, the New York appellate panel drifted into that are largely affairs of the individual in its refusal to allow prayer meetings at a high school near Albany.

The court courd argue, and did, that the provision of a fax-paid facility to the Students for Voluntary Prayer organization nstitutes "an improper appearance of official support" for religion. But to do so is to ignore the substance of what was occurring, in the same way that the state of Kentucky attempted to deny the religious nature of its wall display. In New York, the students met together like any other school club, on own time and at the school building for purposes of convenience. Allowing them to do so connotes no more state approval for their agenda than it would for the hobbies or interests of countless other recognized organizations. The essential point is that the state must be neutral to religion, not single it out for special treatment propitious or adverse Washington running.

One is in Poland, which has all the ingredients of a major East-West confrontation. While this may be the most immediately and obviously threatening situation, with its superpower involvement and military implications, it is one in which the great decisions are not up to Washington. The other side is stuck with them. The adroitness and restraint - or lack of it - with which Moscow and its clients in the Warsaw regime respond to the popular unrest that thréatens the communist order are shaping the Polish crisis. Washington's role is essentially passive.

Not so with the building crisis to the south. Make that crises - there are several critical situations in Latin America in which U.S. policy is an active and possibly decisive factor, one of which could blow up with potentially disastrous hemispheric consequences by Inauguration

That is in El Salvador, which has been wracked by near civil war since a military regime was booted out in October 1979 by a initially reform-minded junta of younger officers. Central America's smallest country, the size of Massachusetts, but the most densely populated, some 5 million, has had one of the hemisphere's most regressive social structures. A tiny elite, less than 5 percent of the population, has controlled almost all the national wealth, primarily measured in vast coffee plantations. The reformers got as far as a mild land reform when right-wing officers moved in on them in what amounted to a countercoup. Since then, the junta with mixed military and civilian representation has been a government without the ability to govern, despite highly visible backing from the United States, Mexico, Costa Rica, Venezuela and other interested parties who see it, for all its flaws, as the only alternative to polarized extremes of right and left.

Real power in El Salvador rests with far-right army elements connected with the old elite and the junta rightists. They exercise it through paramilitary "death squads," terrorizing the Indian peasants to frustrate land reform and systematically exterminating the leadership of the moderate-to-left opposition coalition.

Which brings us up to date and to the murders at the end of November of six coalition leaders, abducted from a press confereence at a Catholic school three blocks from the U.S. Embassy. Their deaths have escalated the conflict to a dangerously new level, possibly destroying what slight hopes there may have been of the less extreme left coming to terms with the

This is very likely precisely the goal of the extreme right. It appears determined to frustrate any accommodation, to leave no alternative to a military showdown that it is convinced it can win.

Why should all this concern Americans? Because El Salvador is the already burning fuse that could ignite several other countries in similar if not quite such advanced stages of upheaval.

Because the Salvadoran right is convinced the new people in Washington will not only be more sympathetic to it than the outgoing team, with its constant harping on human rights, but that the Reagan administration will supply it with the military wherewithal to mop up the oppostion - the offensive-capable planes and guns wanted instead of the communication, transportation and other "soft" military aid that has beenforthcoming.

And because there is the growing possibility that if the right isn't already in a position to present President Ronald Reagan with a fait accompli by Jan. 20, its extermination drive may be so far advanced by then that the decisive moves still left open to Washington will be heavily freighted with the prospect of active U.S. military intervention

Lennon is atop almost all details on sales figures for the American record charts with two records. both a single, "Starting Over," and the album he hits before what went down in 13, 1960, in the Sahara Desert. recorded with wife Yoko Ono, "Double Fantasy.

Starting Over was the No. single in charts released Wednesday by the three major music trade publications -Billboard, Cash Box and Record World. "Double Fantasy" took over the No. 1 album slot in the first two magazines but was No. 2 in Record World.

Disc jockeys said they had expected the sales and were equally unsurprised - and in most cases unimpressed — by the first signs of what some predict will be an inundation of records about Lennon.

The only such song anyone seems to be taking seriously is Bobby Vinton's "It Was Nice to Know You, John.'

Lennon's last No. 1 record in Billboard was "Whatever Gets You Through the Night," in November 1974. The latest charts reported on the first full week of sales since Lennon was gunned down in front of his New York apartment Dec.

Geffen Records released the single only two months ago and the album a few weeks

SAN DIEGO (AP) — Christmas shoppers with exotic tastes will find bargain buys in partridges, laying geese and swimming swans this year. But beware of golden rings and pear

A survey conducted in San Diego indicates it would cost $15,582 to obtain all 12 gifts in the "12 Days of Christmas" song, from a partridge in a pear tree to 12 drummers drumming.

That's an increase of 31.8 percent, or almost $4,000, since 1978,

The cost includes such items as cows for the maids a-milking

Inflation sent the price of gold rings up 116 percent in two years, maids a-milking 81 percent and pear trees 67 percent,

Louis Luskey, who runs Luskey's Western Store and claims to be the Fort Worth's biggest western-wear retailer, said his stocks are "exceptionally low.

"This is the first time since World War II that anything like this has happened," said Luskey, who fills mail orders to all 50 states and about 100

His normal warehouse inventory is about 12,000 hats. But this week, he has about 3,000 in stock.

"During normal years a real fine hat would go for between $25 and $50," he said. "Today, the average-selling hat runs between $100 and $150 and we stock them up to $350. Ten years ago nothing was made in that range.'

Luskey built his trade on ranchers and farmers, but now his clientele comprises mainly high school and college students and professionals.

"Doctors and lawvers who wouldn't have worn a hat a couple years ago are now a common sight," he said. "Girls are wearing hats more

Manufacturers estimate industry production will be short of demand by about 12 million hats this year, said Johnny Ward, general manager of felt hat production for Bailey Hat Co.

Ward said his company planned to make about 1.2 million hats but could sell more than twice that number if it had the machinery, raw materials and trained workers. Bailey is putting its customers on allocation and already is sold out through next April, Ward said.

"If we wanted to, we could be sold out through 1984," he said. "There's just no way to prepare for a bubble like this. I never would have dreamed that it would happen.

Gary Rosenthal, president of Stetson Co. in St. Joseph, Mo., said employees "are just breaking our backs to get out as many as we can."

To counter the crunch, Stetson is adding a wing to its Danbury, Conn., hat-body plant and erecting balconies in its St. Joseph factory to install new production lines. The company also may expand from one and a half shifts to

Balloon Brings Surprise Trip

(AP) - Curiosity over a toy balloon bouncing in a rural field has resulted in an unexpected Christmas gift for a middle-aged Texas couple who have never been out of the state - an all expense paid visit to California.

The day after Thanksgiving, a Santa Barbara shopping 157 a Anall — La Cumbre Plaza launched 7,000 red and white helium party balloons to herald the arrival of Santa Claus. They filled the skies over Santa Barbara and then disappeared on a warm west

> Two days later, 1,500 miles away near Rankin, Tex., Jim and Almina Braden were deer hunting when they noticed a bright red object blithely dancing along the ground ahead of them.

"They were about ready to shoot it," said La Cumbre spokeswoman DanaFox, "but decided to take a closef look. 22

It was a fully inflated On Murder Charge balloon with the following message printed across it: Season's Greetings from La Cumbre Plaza, La Cumbre Road and State Street, Santa

The Braden's weren't exactly sure where Santa Barbara was but took a wrote the city's Chamber of Commerce 'to inquire about their find, said Ms. Fox. They had heard of the town from recent press reports about President-elect Reagan's hilltop ranch, which is nearby.

'We thought it might be interesting to know how long it took the balloon to reach Texas from the date it was released," wrote Mrs. Braden, a 51-year-old hospital nurse. "Thank you for any information you might be able to send us.

La Cumbre officials were so excited about the whole thing that they called the couple back instead, and with a Christmas gift they won't soon required for construction and forget - a free vacation in sunny Santa Barbara,

"When I called to tell her," excited, just as tickled as can be. They have never been out of Texas before.

SANTA BARBARA, Calif. Tex., population 500 - will stay at one of the city's finest hotels, see all the tourist attractions, dine at the best restaurants and of course shop for lots of free gifts at La Cumbre Plaza.

Ms. Fox said putting a message on the balloons was actually just a last-minute idea on her part, and one that prompted a few questions, at

"It was kind of funny," she said. "A lot of people said why did you spend your money to have your logo put on them when they're just going to go up in the sky.' In fact I caught a little hell for doing that and then thought to myself, 'gee maybe that wasn't such a good idea to spend the extra money.

There's a couple in Texas who think it was.

Woman Indicted

DALLAS (AP) - A 62-yearold Dallas woman, accused of fatally shooting her husband during the "Who Shot J.R.?" episode of the television show "Dallas," has been indicted on a murder charge.

Wessie Myrl McKee was accused Wednesday of killing William Randolph McKee, 61, an independent insurance

Police said the couple was watching "Dallas" in their home Nov. 21 when McKee informed his wife he was seeing another woman and intended to file for a divorce.

An argument ensued, police said, and Mrs. McKer allegedly shot ther husband once in the chest with a .38caliber revolver.

TIGER DRIVE-IN

By Abigail Van Buren

DEAR ABBY: I wrote to you a year ago, saying that I had been married for 17 years, had a nice family and a good husband, but he and I just weren't able to communicate with. each other. I had spells of depression, cried easily and didn't. know what to do. You suggested that my husband and I should get counseling at our local mental health clinic. Well, he refused to go, so I went without him, and now I have another problem.

I have fallen in love with my therapist. Abby, he's the kindest, most gentle and understanding man I've ever met. He has helped me so much, I am a new woman. It's even helped my marriage. But what am I going to do about the therapist? I'm afraid if I tell him how I feel about him he'll drop me as a patient, and I don't want that. Even though there's no hope for making my dream come true (I dream about him nearly every night), I look forward to our sessions. Please help me.

CALL ME SHIRLEY

DEAR SHIRLEY: Tell your therapist how you feel about him so your feelings can be discussed and recognized for what they are. Most therapists are familiar with such situations and know how to deal with them. He is there to help you, and in order to be helped to the fullest, you must be completely open and honest with him.

DEAR ABBY: I am a happily married 29-year-old woman. recently changed jobs, and my problem is my supervisor. He's a conceited, middle-aged married man who fancies himself to be quite a fox. He keeps asking me to go out with him. I told him no from the start, but he kids me about it every day, and I go along with the kidding, pretending it's, all in fun, but I know he is serious.

Abby, I don't want him for an enemy, so how can I get him to leave me alone without insulting him?

DEAR REDHEAD: Tell him that you have a very tender conscience, and if you were ever to see himoutside the office you would surely break down and tell your husband - and his wife. That should cool him off.

DEAR ABBY: In reply to KEEPING THE PEACE, you wisely wrote: "Speak-up. Silence implies agreement." That caused me to recall the words attributed to the prominent German theologian, the Rev. Martin Niemoller: In Germany, the Nazis first came for the communists, and I didn't speak up because I wasn't a communist. Then they came for the Jews, and I didn't speak up because I vasn't a Jew. Then they came for the trade unionists, and I didn't speak up because I wasn't a trade unionist. Then they came for the Catholics, and I didn't speak up because I was Protestant. Then they came for me, and by that time there-was no one left to speak for me.' ARTHUR H. PRINCE, MEMPHIS, TENN.

DEAR ARTHUR: The above has been in my column, several times over the years, but it's worth repeating.

Do you hate to write letters because you don't know what to say? Thank-you notes, sympathy letters, congratulations, how to decline and accept invitations and how to write an interesting letter are included in Abby's booklet, "How to Write Letters for, All Occasions." Send $1 and a long, stamped (28 cents), self-addressed envelope to: Abby, Letter Booklet, 132 Lasky Drive, Beverly Hills, Calif.

Attention Wears Thin For Tony

by BILL MCCLELLAN

HE WAS AMAZED at first, elated second, and now is a little tired and a little bored. But he'll be working his tail off before

I'm talking, of course, about Tony Degrate, Snyder's 6-4, 250pound tackle who has been - or rather is being - recruited by 50odd colleges across the land, including Oklahoma, Nebraska and several Southwest Conference schools.

His initial amazement is justified. "WHEN I DIDN'T have a very good year I didn't think anybody would be interested anymore," said the athlete, who only made honorable mention on this year's all-district team. "I knew several schools had planned to look at me early in the season, but when we didn't have a good season, I thought it was all over with."

That was before recruiters began beating a path to his door. "I couldn't believe it," he said. "I was hoping, but I wasn't expecting anything like this. I'm still not sure exactly why they are recruiting me as heavily as they are. I'm sure size has a lot to do with it. From the people (scouts) I've talked to, you have to be big just to have a chance. There are some real good athletes in this district, but they just aren't big enough," he

THERE WAS SOME question late last school year whether Degrate might be recruited for his pitching skills. His fastball, his strength, has been clocked in the mid-80 mph range. He had possibilities, especially if he could add to his arsenal and have a good senior year.

"No, I'll have to commit (sign) with someone in February. I'm definately going to play football - or try too," he grinned Degtate feels he has narrowed his selection down to four major universities. Baylor, Texas, Nebraska and Oklahoma.

"I'm not sure where I'll go yet, but it will probably be one of those four," he said.

LIKE ANY other schoolboy recruit ever heard about, the excitment begins to wear off after weeks of telephone calls, visits and endless questions

TONY DEGRATE

"You know, when all this first started, I was really excited. Now it's getting to me. I'm just like everyone else. I'll tell someone I talked to Fred Akers last night and they'll make a big deal out of it. Well, I guess it is a pretty big deal, but I've got to prove myself first. I'll just be glad when all this (recruiting) is over with. It was fun at first, but now I just want to get it past

FOR TONY, IT'S enjoy it while you can. Come spring training, it's a whole different ballgame.

TULSA'S. WIN OVER Louisville recently gained the Gold Rush a lot of attention. As editor Wacil McNair recently pointed out, Coach Nolan Richardson's team has defeated Oklahoma, Central Oklahoma State and Oral Roberts, and could become temporary "king" of the state with a win over Oklahoma State this Saturday.

AND SPEAKING OF Tulsa, we recently carried the news, that former Western Texas standout Paul Pressey had been selected MVC Player of the Week. Well, he's also been picked Sports Illustrated's college basketball player of the week, too.

IT WOULDN'T BE fair to laud former Western Texas athletes without pointing out that current standout Keith Denis leads the WJCAC conference in field goal percentage (.675) or that Duster Shari Teal leads the loop in blocked shots (33). Our congratulations to them.

Into Focus This Week

Playoff Picture Comes

While all five National Conference playoff berths have been clinched, seven AFC teams are in the running for its five playoff positions.

The final weekend of the regular season gets under way Saturday with four teams who can't make the playoffs, including a unique announcerless contest in Miami's Orange Bowl between the Dolphins and the New York Jets. The other contest pits the Chicago Bears against Tampa

The regular season ends Monday night with Pittsburgh at San Diego.

If Buffalo, 10-5, beats San Francisco, 6-9, or if both Buffalo and New England lose, the Bills win the AFC East. If New England, 9-6, topples the Saints, 1-14, and Buffalo loses, then the Patriots are the division champions because of a better division record.

Cleveland, 10-5, downs Cincinnati, 6-9, the Browns win the title. If Cleveland loses, Houston wins, regardless of how the Oilers fare against Minnesota.

Houston, 10-5, can clinch a wild card by beating Minnesota, 9-6. Cleveland and Houston are assured of at least a wild card if New England loses.

Pittsburgh can be a wild card if New England loses, Cleveland and Houston win and the Steelers, 9-6, beat San Diego, 10-5.

If San Diego beats Pittsburgh in this game of musical chairs, the Chargers win the AFC West. If San Diego loses, Oakland, 10-5, would win the division regardless of how the Raiders do against the Giants,
