Personnel requests on college agenda

Western Texas College board of trustees will consider approval of employment for two persons and a proposal to deed property to the Noah Project during a meeting set for 7 this evening.

The board is expected to formally approve the hiring of Deidra Graves and Lynda McCormack as student services specialists. The two women will be charged with developing a plan to promote the college and improve attendance.

Trustees are also expected to deed property obtained through tax foreclosure to the Noah Project. The property is on U.S. Highway 180 at Beaumont Street. The land is also owned by the city, county and school district. The county has already approved the request and the city and school district are expected to do so in the near future. Noah Project is a shelter for battered women.

Approval of the financial report and previous minutes are the only other action items on tonight's agenda.

During information and discussion, the board will give pre-bid consideration to lighting equipment for the Fine Arts Theatre, and the 1995-96 college catalogue.

Trustees will also discuss a board planning meeting set for Saturday, and upcoming trustee conferences.

Airport issues face county on Tuesday

A brief agenda, two dealing with airport issues, faces the Scurry County Commissioners Court when it convenes at 10 a.m. Tuesday.

The court will consider calling another public hearing to discuss rules and regulations at the county-owned airport.

A public hearing was held Sept. 17 at which time proposed regulations were discussed, but no formal action taken. The airport board had asked for time to review the various proposals.

The proposed regulations were written in anticipation of using airport property for commercial development. Doug Hutchinson, executive director of the Development Corporation of Snyder, assisted the court in formulating the proposed rules.

Also on the court's agenda is a request from an individual to conduct a commercial activity at the airport.

Also on the agenda are line-item transfers and the approval of bills.

Largest COT class to meet

The largest-ever group to participate in a correctional officer training academy through Western Texas College will begin classes Monday, Oct. 17.

Some 155 students were certified as eligible for the academy, which will be held at 1811 25th Street. The academy ends Nov. 9 and those who successfully complete the course will be eligible to be hired by the Texas Department of Criminal Justice.

Approximately 1,500 people have been certified through the college since it began the classes in 1989.

Linda Proctor, Criminal Justice Training Center (CJTC) secretary, said a few applications will still be accepted for the next academy, to begin in January. The application limit, 225, was half full 10 days ago, and more applications were taken during the past week. The academy begins Jan. 23 and will run through Feb. 15 here. Applications are available on the college campus.

Classes will be held from 8 a.m. to 5 p.m. Monday through Friday.

Tuition is $300.

As soon as the January class fills, CJTC administrators will begin taking applications for a class to be held April 2-26.

WTC also conducts in-service training for security and non-security officers from prison units here, in Abilene, Colorado City, Lamesa and Fort Stockton. The program began in 1991 with the training of Price Daniel officers. Currently WTC is serving 40 to 45 officers a week through that program.

Report says marines filmed Diana and riding instructor

LONDON (AP) — In the latest royal scandal, a British tabloid reported that marine commandos videotaped Princess Diana having sex with her riding instructor in his garden in 1988.

Defense officials huffed and puffed and said they weren't into that sort of thing, and Buckingham Palace dismissed the story in Sunday's News of the World as speculation.

But some legislators said it looks like security chiefs may have been more guilty of prying than spying.

The paper said the steamy session is alleged to have taken place when Diana secretly visited Maj. James Hewitt at his cottage in the village of Ebford, southwest England, four years before her separation from Prince Charles.

The paper quoted ex-marine sergeant Glyn Jones as saying his five-member team was under orders to carry out surveillance on the couple, apparently for the security services.

In a book published this week, Hewitt, 36, alleges he had an affair with Diana that started in 1986 and ended after he returned from the Gulf War in 1991.

Diana, now 33, and Charles, the 45-year-old eldest son and heir of Queen Elizabeth II, formally separated in December 1992 after 11 years of marriage. They have two sons.

The News of the World quoted Jones as saying his team set up two observation posts with videos in a ditch and a hedge at the Hewitt cottage one night in the fall of 1988. They also sneaked a microphone into the garden.

He said Diana arrived about 10:30 p.m. and shortly afterward the team in the garden reported seeing a man and woman kissing under a tree. The team then reported that "the male and female were making love in the back garden of the house."

"They said the female was wearing a long riding coat and not much else, while the male only had his top on. They were having a real steamy time," Jones said.

Jones was quoted as saying the marine corps major who ordered the surveillance confiscated the video and conversation tapes and ordered secrecy.

An unnamed senior officer in the Corps of Royal Marines told the British national news agency Press Association that marine commando surveillance teams are sometimes used against criminals. "But it is absolute nonsense to think that they would be used to spy on VIPs," he said.

But legislator James Hill of the governing Conservative Party said: "It's got to stop. There is no question in my mind that we cannot have any employee of the state or the armed forces being used as a spying service on the royals."

Woman promises to give kidney to future husband

MISSION VIEJO, Calif. (AP) — Victoria Ingram is promising her heart to fiance Randall Curlee. She's already promised her kidney.

Ingram and Curlee plan to marry tomorrow and spend their honeymoon in the hospital, where a doctor will transplant one of Ingram's kidneys into Curlee on Wednesday.

Curlee, 46, who knew he needed a transplant, took Ingram to see his doctor so she would understand how his diabetes would affect their future.

The doctor warned that only 4,000 kidneys become available each year for the 36,000 people awaiting a transplant. Curlee's relatives weren't compatible as donors.

"Victoria said, 'Why don't you test me?'" Curlee said. "Both the doctor and I looked at each other, and we thought it was way off the wall."

They got tested and forgot about it. Then the phone rang.

"The doctor explained to us that our immune systems are identical, and that it was like winning the lottery," Curlee said.

"I feel gifted," said the 45-year-old Ingram. "It's something I can give him that we'll both enjoy."

Teresa Doggett: spending priorities important in Texas

EDITOR'S NOTE: Republican Teresa Doggett is seeking the state comptroller's job held by Democrat John Sharp. A profile of the incumbent ran earlier.

By PEGGY FIKAC
Associated Press Writer
AUSTIN (AP) — When Republican comptroller candidate Teresa Doggett talks about responsible state budgeting, she couches it in terms Texans deal with every day.

"Just like when you're in a position where you've decided to buy a new house and you have to save your money, you just can't go out for steak every day... In the meantime, you've got to eat chili," she said.

"And that's what I think most people in this state would be willing to do if they knew the real truth about what's going on financially in the state."

Mrs. Doggett, an Austin businesswoman, is trying to unseat Democratic incumbent John Sharp in her first race for public office.

She questions Sharp's budget ideas, which she says have saved the state from spending about $6 billion. For example, she said such maneuvers as speeded-up tax collections have "not really saved any money."

"It looks good on paper, but what I'm really trying to get to is the reality of what we really owe, and how we're going to pay for it," she said.

Mrs. Doggett says she wants to curb "excessive" state spending and take steps to reduce the approximately $10 billion in state debt. She says Texans should be informed about how much the state already owes when asked to vote on new debt.

She has outlined several economic proposals, including continuing to reward employees who save state money but also dedicating part of the savings to education, crime-fighting and paying off state bonded debt.

She has suggested dedicating lottery proceeds to an education endowment, doing more to privatize governmental work, simplifying the state tax structure and using surplus budget funds to reduce the corporate franchise tax.

A tax issue cropped up in Mrs. Doggett's campaign when it was reported that she was involved in two companies that in the past had been delinquent in paying some state franchise taxes.

She owns and operates the companies with her husband, John Doggett, who got national attention when he testified during U.S. Senate confirmation hearings on Supreme Court Justice Clarence Thomas.

Her husband took responsibility for the late payments, saying he handled company taxes. He said the tax problems were minor and had been resolved.

Mrs. Doggett, who previously has worked in banking and for the U.S. Department of Agriculture and has practiced law, would break barriers if she's elected: The comptroller's post has never been filled by a black or a woman.

She has received support in the effort from two nationally known figures — controversial political consultant Ed Rollins and former U.S. Attorney General Edwin Meese III.

Rollins, who ran Ronald Reagan's 1984 campaign, caused an uproar last year when he said campaign money was used to help suppress the black vote in the New Jersey gubernatorial election. He later recanted.

CHICAGO (AP) — The Rev. Jesse Jackson got a PUSH celebrating his 53rd birthday — from People United to Serve Humanity, a civil-rights group he helped organize.

Housing Secretary Henry Cisneros and hundreds of community leaders and activists marked Jackson's birthday Saturday with prayer, gospel songs and speeches praising his work to fight racism.

"When Hispanics in Los Angeles or blacks in Chicago have a problem, they don't call 911; they call Jesse Jackson," Cisneros said. "No one will ever say Jesse Jackson has lived in vain because along the way he has helped a lot of people."

Jackson said he would continue to work toward equality for everyone. "I am as determined today as I have ever been to keep the hope alive," Jackson said. "We have to end racism."

During World War II, Benito Mussolini was dismissed as premier of Italy in 1943.

Caged children freed

HALIFAX, Mass. (AP) — Two brothers, 4 and 6, were regularly locked in dog cages as part of a "tough love" discipline by their mother and grandmother, according to a published report. Virginia Steele told social workers that she and her daughter, Dianne Fabiano, put the boys in portable dog cages inside the house when they misbehaved, according to documents filed in Plymouth District Court and obtained by The Enterprise of Brockton for a study published Sunday. The two boys and their 7-year-old brother were placed in foster care after workers found the 6-year-old locked in a cage last month, said Lorraine Carl, a spokeswoman for the Social Services Department. Two other cages were found in the house, with blankets inside, but it was unclear whether the 7-year-old also was caged. He reportedly slept in his mother's bed at night.

Dear Abby

Home Sprinkler System Is Best Fire Insurance Money Can Buy

by Abigail Van Buren

© 1994 Universal Press Syndicate

DEAR ABBY: It is a national disgrace that the United States has the highest fire death rate of any country in the industrialized world. In recent months, we have all heard or read about devastating fire deaths. A number of firefighters have been killed this year, and recently eight children under 14, who were left home alone in Illinois, died in a house fire. As president of the International Association of Fire Chiefs, I am asking your readers to think seriously about fire prevention.

Every October during Fire Prevention Week, we encourage the public to change the batteries in their smoke detectors ("Change your clock, change your battery").

But you can do more to protect your family and home. I urge your readers to consider installing residential fire sprinklers. There has never been a multiple loss of life due to fire or smoke in a building equipped with a sprinkler system. For less than what homeowners pay to install carpeting, they can install an instant firefighting system that could save children, adults, senior citizens — even the family pet. (Part of the cost can be recouped through reduced homeowner's insurance premiums, but more important, sprinklers are the best life insurance policy money can buy.) It is a small price to pay to protect the lives of loved ones.

Abby, your readers should also be encouraged to stay in motels and hotels equipped with sprinkler systems. They should demand that facilities such as nursing and retirement homes have the same fire protection. Every year, senior citizens in these facilities die needlessly because they can't move fast enough to escape.

For readers who may think that sprinkler systems are conspicuous and ugly, or fear they may go off accidentally and ruin their homes, the newer systems are inconspicuous, and the chance of a sprinkler going off accidentally is only one in 16 million!

Individuals and families must take responsibility for their own lives. Installing a sprinkler system is the best way of fulfilling that responsibility.

CHIEF TOM SIEGFRIED

DEAR CHIEF SIEGFRIED: The fact that there has never been a multiple loss of life due to fire in a building with a sprinkler system is one that every family should take into consideration.

Readers, for a free copy of "Fire Sprinkler Facts," write to: Operation Life Safety, 4025 Fair Ridge Drive, Fairfax, Va. 22033-2868. (Please allow eight weeks.)

DEAR ABBY: Concerning the grandmother who resented people asking how old she is: I, too, am a grandmother, and I also look younger than I am; but when people ask me how old I am, I give them my sweetest smile and say, "I'm old enough to know the score, and young enough to enjoy the game."

MARY IN HOUSTON

DEAR ABBY: Regarding people who ask how old I am, I have a ready answer. I add five years to my age; then they say, "Really? You look great for your age!" I smile and say "Thank you."

SIDNEY KONIGSBURG,
HOLLYWOOD, FLA.
P.S. I'm only 76.

DEAR ABBY: I have the perfect answer to "How old are you?" Being 61, I reply, "I am celebrating the 40th anniversary of my 21st birthday." It gives the questioner something to think about — and also answers a dumb question.

None of the children attended school, social workers said. Steele said the younger boys were locked in the cages at night to prevent them from hurting their mother after Fabiano once awakened to find one of the boys standing over her with scissors. The 6-year-old, who was hyperactive, often flew into rages and would hit, bite and trip people, Steele said. No charges have been filed against the children's mother or Steele. The boys' father, Richard Fabiano, who was separated from his wife, said the cages were used only as playhouses and had no locks. He said his wife had approached social workers to ask for help in dealing with her two younger sons, but rather than provide support, they simply came with police and took the boys away. "The oldest one had nothing to do with this and he was dragged from his room and told he'd never see his mother again," he said. "I'm trying to get them back for their mother."

From both sides of the world

By Phillip Alder

Bridge is a great game because it transcends international barriers. A new book containing an interesting collection of deals, "On the Other Hand," has been written by Kathie Wei-Sender, who came to the United States from China, and Martin Hoffman, who was born in Czechoslovakia and reached the United States a couple of years ago via England. It is published by C&T (800-525-4718, $12.95). I noticed that a few of the analyses are truncated, leaving the reader to do some thinking. Perhaps you consider this to be a good feature; perhaps you don't.

Today's deal from the book is the sort that most players would get wrong. You are shown the North-South hands and asked to plan the play in six hearts, West having led a low trump.

North might have been bidding game in a 4-3 fit, but he had a ruffing value in his singleton spade.

South won the first trick with the heart ace over East's queen. He cashed the spade ace, ruffed a spade in the dummy, crossed to hand with a club and ruffed another spade, with dummy's heart king. However, now South had to lose two tricks, a club and a heart.

As the authors point out, the fatal error occurred at trick one. As South was going to have to ruff two spades in the dummy, he should have put up dummy's heart king. A spade to the ace, a spade ruff, a diamond ruff, a spade ruff and a club to the ace are followed by the heart ace. When the queen drops, South draws West's last trump and claims, conceding a club trick.

The heart finesse was a Greek gift.

Yeager can't quit

HUNTINGTON, W.Va. (AP) — Forty-seven years after breaking the sound barrier, Chuck Yeager says he can't break his flying habit.

"I can't stop. Technology is moving so fast, if I took a year off I'd never catch up," he said.

Yeager, 71, said he spends about two weeks every month training at Edwards Air Force Base in California.

Yeager, the first person to break the sound barrier, retired from the Air Force as a brigadier general in 1975.

According to the Census Bureau, 54 percent of all Americans live in the 672 counties adjacent to the Atlantic and Pacific Oceans, the Gulf of Mexico and the Great Lakes.

Perot blasts Clinton, takes phone calls

DALLAS (AP) — Ross Perot launched his national radio call-in show by attacking President Clinton's handling of the U.S. military involvement in Haiti, Iraq and Somalia.

"The worst situation you can have is an inexperienced, insecure person risking other people's lives," Perot said Sunday. "If there was ever a time when we needed a strong president who understood war, it's right now."

Perot, who urged his supporters last week to vote Republican in November, said Clinton lost respect around the world with his handling of the U.S. military presence in Haiti, Iraq and Somalia.

Immigration looms as key political issue

By Walter Mears AP Special Correspondent

WASHINGTON (AP) — Emotional, divisive and persistent, the immigration issue flaring in state election campaigns this year carries a message for President Clinton and prospective Republican challengers in 1996.

It's not going away, the concern is growing, and steps to stem illegal immigration may well be a major issue in the next campaign for the White House.

At this point, says Barbara Jordan, the former Texas congresswoman now heading the U.S. Commission on Immigration Reform, the rhetoric is damaging efforts to deal with "one of the most complex and emotional issues of our time."

Her commission has just issued its first recommendations, for tightened borders, denial of all but emergency public services to illegal aliens, and for a computerized registry that would use Social Security numbers and data from the Immigration and Naturalization Service to prevent undocumented workers from getting jobs.

That worker verification proposal has stirred controversy with civil libertarians. The administration has endorsed the objective, but not the system the commission said Clinton should set up immediately as a pilot program.

Stern proposals, over the signature of a black woman political leader, herself a proven champion of civil liberties. Ms. Jordan now is a professor at the University of Texas.

She said the immigration debate must be put back into civil terms. "We cannot and should not allow immigrants to become the scapegoats for all our social ills," she said.

Then again, civility never has ruled in times of stress over immigration, and this is one, especially along the Sun Belt border states where illegal immigrants are a costly problem and a political target.

In California, it is a double issue — in the campaign for governor, and in the debate over a ballot proposition that would deny virtually all government services to illegal aliens. That would include public education, even though the Supreme Court ruled in 1982 that it cannot be denied.

Republican Gov. Pete Wilson supports the measure, which draws substantial majorities in California public opinion polls. It wouldn't stand up in court, but Wilson says it would challenge the system and force the Supreme Court to look at it again.

He's already gone to court three times, filing suits that demand ballot proposition as no more than posturing, but advocates action to make it impossible for illegal aliens to get jobs in the United States, and to keep them out with border patrols with military backup. What's more she said Wilson must take the blame for il-

Democratic Gov. Lawton Chiles. He's trying to fend off the challenge of Jeb Bush, 41, son of the former president, and immigration is one of the issues.

Chiles is trying to make it his. "The day that I stopped the Cuban immigration crisis, you said I was acting hastily," he told Bush in a campaign debate. Chiles said if he hadn't acted, there would be 30,000 more people on Florida streets.

The administration diverted the Cuban boat people to the U.S. Naval base at Guantanamo Bay, as it had earlier with Haitian refugees. Since then, the invasion of Haiti and an immigration deal with Havana have stemmed the flow.

In California, the attorney general unveiled Operation Gatekeeper, calling it the most comprehensive and aggressive border patrol effort in history.

But those pieces don't add up to the policy Clinton is going to need to deal with the problem — and answer the issue.

more than $10 billion from the federal government to cover state costs incurred because of illegal immigration. The latest lawsuit sounds like a campaign speech: "The massive and unlawful migration of foreign nationals ... constitutes an invasion ... against which the United States is obligated to protect California."

Wilson also has asked Attorney General Janet Reno to declare an immigration emergency, to which she replied that he shouldn't "get caught up in politics."

Forget that. The issue has helped Wilson come back in the polls to a claim a narrow re-election edge over Democrat Kathleen Brown. She opposes the "Save Our State" legal immigration because as a senator, he opposed toughened entry measures that would have kept out migrant Mexican workers when farming and other business interests wanted their labor.

This in a state that will be pivotal in the 1996 presidential election, with 54 electoral votes to the winner, 20 percent of the majority that will make a president. Clinton carried the state by 13 percent in 1992, but his standing has slumped. And there's more than the issue involved. A re-elected Wilson could become a 1996 challenger.

Suing Washington over illegal immigrants isn't a Republican preserve; it's been done by five states, among them Florida, and

Ivan, the gorilla, to be moved to zoo in Atlanta

TACOMA, Wash. (AP) — After almost 30 years in an urban jungle, the gorilla who had animal activists going ape is heading for green grass — and a simian social life — at the Atlanta zoo.

Ivan, a 450-pound western lowland ape, is leaving by plane Tuesday for Zoo Atlanta, where 20 other gorillas live, after spending 27 years alone at a circus-themed shopping mall.

The 30-year-old silverback gorilla was captured in the Congo when he was a baby and sold to the founder of the mall, Earl Irwin. The gorilla was housed in a 40-by-40-foot concrete compound next to a T-shirt shop.

"I'm glad it's happening now, and that it's not too late for Ivan," said Terry Maple, director of Zoo Atlanta.

Ivan's isolation angered animal rights activists, including singer Michael Jackson, who once proposed adding the ape to his menagerie.

Irwin resisted any move, saying the gorilla would suffer more in a new, unfamiliar environment. But the mall filed for bankruptcy reorganization in 1992, and a new home had to be found for Ivan.

Zoo Atlanta's gorilla habitat is home to Willie B., a gorilla who, like Ivan, spent most of his life in isolation. The $4.5 million exhibit mimics a rain forest setting in 11/2 acres.

Ivan won't just be tossed in with the gorilla community there. He'll spend the first three months in his own isolated suite. A shuttered window separating him from the others will gradually be opened, and gorilla experts will monitor his reactions.
