Court to consider terminating jobs at county coliseum

A notice of job elimination will be considered Monday by Scurry County Commissioners Court when it meets at 10 a.m.

In anticipation of a proposal from the Snyder Chamber of Commerce to take over operations of Scurry County Coliseum, commissioners will consider action of a notice advising coliseum employees of their termination on Dec. 31.

The letter advises current employees that they would be considered for employment by the new operators.

If an agreement with the chamber is not reached, the notice further advises that two positions — a secretary and one maintenance worker — will be eliminated because of coliseum budget reductions. Last August, the court acted on a recommendation from the Scurry County Coliseum advisory board that the court contract with the chamber of commerce for operations of the coliseum.

An October target date for a proposal passed, but chamber officials have promised a proposal before the end of the year.

In other business Monday, the court will consider appointment of a local rabies health authority, and the court will consider the renewal of a custody agreement between the sheriff's office and the Texas Department of Criminal Justice. Other items on the agenda are line-item transfers and the approval of bills.

Dr. Miller will join CMH specialty clinic

Dr. George G. Miller, specializing in the diagnosis and treatment of cardiovascular disease, joins the 10 other physicians providing medical specialty services at Cogdell Memorial Hospital Specialty Clinic.

Dr. Miller will be available for consultations at the Specialty Clinic every other Wednesday, beginning Nov. 9.

Dr. Miller was born in Snyder and is the son of Frank and Carol Miller. He graduated from Snyder High School in 1976 and returned to the West Texas area in August. He and his wife, Lisa, have two children, George Givens, Jr., 5, and Austin Daniel, 3.

He is a graduate of the University of Texas at Houston Medical School and completed his residency in internal medicine at Gainesville, Fla. 2,000 early ballots cast Scurry County got off to a good start at the polls as almost 23 percent of the area's registered voters cast ballots before the early voting period ended.

According to the county clerk, 2,130 ballots were cast here in the early period, which ended at 5 p.m. Friday. Another 33 ballots were sent out by mail and will be tabulated if they come back in.

County Clerk Frances Billingsley said the early vote was "very good" and encouraged those who haven't voted to do so on election day, Tuesday.

Texas has 8,641,848 registered voters. More than 500,000 people in the state registered to vote between Aug. 16 and Oct. 9. Scurry County has 9,310 voters.

The polls will be open from 7 a.m. through 7 p.m. on Tuesday. Scurry County residents should vote at the following locations:

Voters residing in Commissioner Precinct 2 will cast their ballots at either Voting Box 5, 6 or 7. Voting Box 5 will be at Fluvanna Community Center, Box 6 the Union Community Center and Box 7 at Scurry County Library.

The feller on Deep Creek says, "Often there is only one difference between a Democrat and a Republican — one is in and one is out."

Hang on just a couple of more days and the circus will be over. If you are not one of the growing numbers who took advantage of the expanded early voting period, then Election Day is Tuesday.

We liked one response that we heard last week. A guy in the coffee shop asked his companion how he was going to vote. We liked his answer. "Just like you...the way I darn well please."

While each of us have our favorites, it all comes down to which candidate can muster the most support and get their backers into the voting booths.

Sometimes voters would like better choices, but people willing to subject themselves to constant public scrutiny and criticism are becoming increasingly difficult to recruit.

There's no reason that a voter should enter the booth this year with lack of information, although an informed voter may have to sift through surface issues.

The candidate who promises to please everybody can be certain of one thing — a reminder at the next election of his failure to deliver.

The importance of voting is best considered in light of information that has been published many times. It ran last week in Ernie McGaughey's First United Methodist Church bulletin.

—In 1645, one vote gave Oliver Cromwell control of England.

—In 1645, one vote caused Charles I of England to be executed.

—In 1776, one vote gave America the English language instead of German.

—In 1845, one vote brought Texas into the Union.

—In 1868, one vote saved President Andrew Johnson from impeachment.

—In 1923, one vote gave Adolf Hitler leadership of the Nazi Party.

—In 1941, one vote saved the Selective Service, just weeks before the attack on Pearl Harbor. In other words, be sure to vote.

Financial aid benefits students, community

Figures released by Western Texas College show that financial aid plays a key role in helping many students through college — and that, in turn, benefits the local economy, WTC administrators say.

Some 60 percent of the 1,161 students enrolled at WTC last fall received some sort of financial aid. The average annual student award was $768, and ranged from a minimum of about $200 up to $2,500, said Dennis Carlton, director of financial aid.

Of the $912,296 awarded in financial aid in 1993-94, some 60 percent, or $550,783, came from federal programs. Most of this was in the form of Pell Grants.

State programs provided $138,833, and local funds provided $222,680 — mostly in the form of scholarships. "Once tuition and fees are paid for, most of a student's money is spent in the community on food, gas and clothes," said Carlton. "We believe that 30 percent or more is spent in this community."

Federal programs include the Pell Grants, which allow funds to be awarded based on special needs, income levels, military veteran status and other criteria. Federal programs also include work study, the Supplementary Education Opportunity Grant (SEOG), the Job Training Partnership Act for training displaced workers, Perkins Grants and veteran programs.

The work study program pays students for working part-time on

Pickup plunges into river

LOS EBANOS, Texas (AP) — A pickup truck plunged off a ferry into the Rio Grande on Friday, killing a child and critically injuring a pregnant woman whose infant was delivered in an emergency Caesarean section.

Customs officials from both sides of the river converged on the ferry to rescue the four occupants of the truck, said Mary Ann Martinez, spokeswoman for the Hidalgo County sheriff's office.

Rescuers pulled the pregnant woman to the U.S. shore of the river, Ms. Martinez said.

"Deputies immediately started performing CPR (cardiopulmonary resuscitation) on the lady and brought her back to life," she said.

The woman was in critical condition after the emergency delivery Friday afternoon at Mission Hospital, supervisor Cristina Santa Ana said.

Two Border Patrol agents face charge

BROWNSVILLE (AP) — Two U.S. Border Patrol agents surrendered Friday to face charges of beating and throwing away the crutches of a one-footed illegal immigrant from Mexico.

Agents David R. Gonzalez and Manny Figueroa are charged with hitting David Bergman, driving him to the Rio Grande, then telling him to swim back to Mexico.

The agents each posted $15,000 bond and drove out of the Cameron County Sheriff's Department without commenting to reporters.

The Cameron County district attorney's office unsealed indictments Friday charging the agents with injuring an invalid, a third-degree felony.

Gonzalez, a six-year veteran, is charged with one count accusing him of striking Bergman. Figueroa, a seven-year veteran, faces two counts: striking Bergman and failing to stop Gonzalez from hitting the man.

Customs spokeswoman Letty Valadez said the agents have been placed on paid leave, but they will pay their own attorneys' fees.

"We still stand firm behind our guys — innocent until proven guilty," Valadez said. "These agents are known for their good work around the sector."

Of the hundreds of complaints against Border Patrol agents annually, she said less than 5 percent are substantiated.

If convicted, the agents would face two to 10 years in prison for each count. Arraignment dates were pending.

Bergman, a Mexican citizen from Matamoros, just across the Rio Grande from Brownsville, told sheriff's investigators that two Border Patrol agents arrested him and three friends in Brownsville on March 16.

Bergman, believed to be in his early 20s, gave this account:

Agents ordered him to place his hands on their truck, but his crutch slipped and caused him to fall. One of the agents slammed his head against the truck and threw him to the ground.

The agents ordered his friends to return to Mexico and drove Bergman to a rural area. His crutches were thrown away and he was told to swim across the river near a sewage treatment plant, he said.

Bergman said the agents discussed among themselves being unable to take him for processing in Brownsville because he was bloody from the beating.

Instead of returning to Mexico, Bergman came back to the U.S. side with his clothes stained with mud and blood, a witness said.

In June 1993, Bergman's foot was caught and severed between a train and railroad tracks as he fled immigration authorities, according to news accounts.

He currently resides in Mexico. "We know his whereabouts. He will be available to testify," Saenz said.

POPPY SALE NOV. 11 — Vernest Tippens, mayor pro tem, receives a poppy from two-year-old Shehala Essery, daughter of Rhonda and Eddie Essery, prior to signing a proclamation for Poppy Day. Shirley Hines, center, is co-chairman

Poppy Day sale is Friday

Poppy Day will be observed on Nov. 11, and poppies will be sold by veterans and their families through the American Legion and its auxiliary. Poppies sold locally were made by Floyd Reeves in the V.A. Medical Center in Temple. The poppy is a symbol of sacrifice.

In the spring of 1919, amidst complete devastation, the poppies bloomed in abundance on the battlefields of France where many men had fallen in battle, and a replica of the poppy has become the Memorial Flower of the American Legion and the Auxiliary. The little red flower was adopted by the American Legion as the Memorial Flower at the National Convention in Cleveland, Sept. 27, 1920.

Handmade from red crepe paper by disabled veterans in hospitals and poppy workrooms in 40 states, more than $300,000 is paid annually to needy and disabled servicemen and women for making the poppies. Materials are furnished free by the department in the state in which the hospital is located.

Other proceeds go to Veterans Affairs and Rehabilitation and for aid to needy veterans and their families. Also, volunteers stress wearing a red poppy to pay tribute to all who died in serving their country.

A flag raising will be held early Friday and breakfast is planned at the American Legion from 5:30 a.m. to 11. Sandwiches and cold cuts will be available from 2:30 to 5 p.m.

Russia's economy receives boost

MOSCOW (AP) — In a move that appeared to confirm his commitment to economic reforms, President Boris Yeltsin today promoted a deputy prime minister in charge of Russia's privatization program to first deputy prime minister.

Anatoly Chubais's promotion follows the resignation Friday of Russia's top advocate of economic reform, Alexander Shokin, and the appointment of Vladimir Panskov as finance minister, the third in four weeks.

A Yeltsin spokesman said the shake-up in the nation's financial power structure, a fallout from the ruble's one-day crash Oct. 11, won't deter Yeltsin from the path of reform.

"Reforms are not going to be curtailed, they are continuing and expanding," said presidential spokesman Yevgeny Baksheyev.

Wind-fueled storm strikes school during football game

MAYPEARL, Texas (AP) — Thunderstorms pushed by 70 mph-plus winds roared through North Texas Friday night, crashing into the Maypearl High School stadium during a football game and injuring at least 14 people.

Mike Lee, administrator at Baylor Medical Center in Waxahachie, said 14 people have been treated.

Nine of those people were from the football game between Maypearl and Grandview, where a light standard was downed during the storm.

Three more were from an automobile wreck in Waxahachie, and another person was in an 18-wheeler that was blown onto its side by strong winds.

Two remained in serious condition early Saturday, and 12 were in stable condition, Lee said. More were expected to be admitted, he said.

Most of the injuries were cuts and bruises, although one of those in serious condition with a broken leg, Lee said. The other, who was at the football game, had an apparent heart attack, Lee said.

Those injured at the game initially were taken to the school auditorium, where several children were huddled while the storm passed.

About 600 people were watching the game, which Grandview led 14-0 early in the fourth quarter, when the storm moved through.

A Maypearl player, who identified himself only as Ray, gave Dallas radio station KPLX-FM an account of what it was like on the field when the storm hit.

"The lights went off, and everybody was on the field," said Ray, who wasn't playing because of a leg injury.

"It got real calm, and before we could even think, we couldn't even stand up. It was blowing us over, and we were trying to go against the wind. We tried going back to the field house and couldn't. The wind was too strong."

Ray said he saw a pole get blown over and land on a coach.

"Everybody tried to start taking cover. Everybody got down by the fences and the bleachers," he said.

"There were people literally blowing across the football field," said assistant Maypearl Fire Chief Kent Campbell, who was at the game. "Anything that wasn't tacked down was blowing across the football field. It was just chaos."

The wind was sufficient to flatten the scoreboard, which was mounted on two 5-inch-circumference metal posts.

Jet purchases climax visit

WASHINGTON (AP) — A $1.6 billion purchase agreement for 40 U.S. medium-sized passenger jets for Chinese commercial airlines climaxed the three-day visit by a top-level Chinese economic and trade delegation.

The McDonnell Douglas Corp. jetliner deal was concluded Friday at a signing ceremony at the Commerce Department. It provided the Clinton administration an opportunity just four days before the congressional elections to demonstrate commitment to economic growth through exports.

Campaigning for Democratic candidates in California, President Clinton touted the agreement to an audience of McDonnell Douglas workers, saying, "This is a part of our ongoing effort to expand trade in ways that maintain jobs in the United States."

The agreement calls for 20 of the MD-80 and MD-90 jetliners to be built in China and the remainder in the United States over the next four years. Engines would be made by International Aero Engines in Connecticut. Some earlier McDonnell Douglas jets have been assembled in China.

McDonnell Douglas Chairman John McDonnell said the deal means jobs for 4,600 workers, half of them in the company's Long Beach, Calif., plant and others scattered throughout the country.

The agreement was signed by McDonnell and Chinese Vice Premier Li Lanqing, who headed the delegation of 100 Chinese government and business executives to the trade conference with more than 100 American business leaders.

China, currently replacing aging Soviet model planes, bought 52 jets last year from Boeing, McDonnell Douglas' main U.S. competitor.

Founders of restaurants in West Texas area get honor

The Chon and Natividad Rodriguez family was recently honored with a reception at the Big Spring Heritage Museum.

Big Spring Mayor Tim Blackhear presented an award to their daughter Aurora Harris from the organization, "Hispanic Women For Progress."

The award was presented to the family for success in the restaurant business and their contribution to the community. They received special recognition for their preservation of their heritage.

Chon Rodriguez was born in Chihuahua, Mexico, and Natividad Rodriguez was born in Jalisco, Mexico. Both came to the United States in the early 1900s. They have 15 children.

The Rodriguez family opened their first restaurant in September, 1943, and it was located at Third and Gregg Street under the name of Casa Blanca. They later built the Spanish Inn in 1964 which was located east of their original location. The family owns seven restaurants in West Texas and will open another one in December. The restaurants include Spanish Inn, Alberto's and Casa Blanca, all in Big Spring and Spanish Inns in Snyder, Sweetwater, Odessa, Midland. Alberto's (#2) will open next month in Big Spring at the original site of Casa Blanca.

Besides recognizing their business success, the plaque in the Big Spring museum also recognizes their contributions to the Shriners, Boys Club, Y.M.C.A., Texas Little League, Immaculate Heart of Mary Church, Sacred Heart, St. Thomas Catholic Church and numerous other organizations.

Family memorabilia was also displayed including pictures and newspaper clippings from 1943 to the present and represented all five generations.

Mr. Rodriguez was a member of the Knights of Columbus in which he earned his 4th degree and also a member of the Woodman of The World.

Careful what you wish for...

My opponent apparently is impressed with the 1989 Coopers and Lybrand audit of county operations. One recommendation was to identify non-essential functions of county government and delete them from the budget.

Here are some of the non-essential functions identified by the audit: coliseum, airport, parks, senior citizens center, Boys Club, girls recreation, library and Board of County Development.

Does my opponent plan to eliminate any or all of these activities as part of his "cut, cut, cut" philosophy?

Bush predicts victory in familiar West Texas

LUBBOCK (AP) — Declaring his spirits high and victory imminent, George W. Bush solicited votes Friday in West Texas to break open his tight race for governor.

He touted his slight edge among members of United We Stand America — the group formed from Ross Perot's 1992 presidential bid — as proof that Texas residents aren't happy with their schools, welfare rolls and crime rate under Gov. Ann Richards. "I cut my political teeth right here in Lubbock County," Bush said, alluding to his 1978 loss to Kent Hance in a race for Congress. "Although we came in second in a two-person race, it will be a different story in 1994."

"People are sick of a failed welfare state and they're ready for a change," said Texas Tech law student Andy Keetch, one of about 200 people rallying at a Lubbock airport hangar.

United We Stand announced results Friday of an unscientific, mail-in survey of more than 1,000 of its Texas members. Findings showed 46.1 percent favoring Bush, compared to 44.8 percent backing for Richards.

On Thursday, an independent Mason-Dixon Poll of 824 registered voters showed Bush taking his first statistically significant lead at 4 percent, just over the 3.5 percent margin of error. The survey conducted from Monday to Wednesday showed 48 percent for Bush, 44 percent for Richards, and 8 percent undecided.

Another poll earlier this week found that Richards was favored by 46.76 percent, compared with 43.94 percent for Bush. That survey of 517 voters had a 4-percent error margin, making Richards' edge statistically negligible.

Perot, a Dallas billionaire and political maverick, ignited a flurry of endorsement-posturing this week by announcing his support for Richards, a Democrat.

Earlier Friday, in Dallas, a cast of business leaders, politicians and former professional athletes turned out in force for Bush, a Republican.

Former Perot campaign consultant Tom Luce called Bush visionary for laying out proposals to improve public education. "Under the governor's leadership, she has basically said everything is fine in education, even though property taxes have doubled, even though still half of our youngsters cannot pass basic skills tests, she says everything is fine," Luce said. "Well, I don't buy that, and I know George doesn't."

The Richards campaign disputed Luce's remarks.

Ann Richards touts record as governor in Border visit

LAREDO (AP) — Democratic Gov. Ann Richards on Friday touted her accomplishments to boost the border region's economy and called her opponent, Republican George W. Bush, a stranger to the area.

"This border is blooming," Richards said at a rousing, standing-room-only rally in a firefighters' union hall.

Since her election in 1990, the area has received $1 billion in roadwork, former Laredo State University has become a four-year institution and millions of dollars have been spent to improve water and sewer systems in colonias, she said.

"The Mayflower may have landed in the Northeast. That's history, that's the past. The future of the United States lies right here on this Texas border," she said.

"You are never going to have a better friend in the governor's office in the state of Texas than you have now."

Richards said that before Bush decided to run for governor, "You never saw George Bush before. Quien es (who is) George Bush?"

Richards blasted Bush, saying that when he speaks against welfare, he is including programs that help the elderly.

"Who is this man that would come to you and suggest to you that these old people are doing something wrong because they are sick?" she asked.

Bush spokesman Reggie Bashur said Bush's welfare reform would protect elderly Texans.

Richards traveled through vote-rich South Texas, where Democrats traditionally run strong.

After Laredo, she stopped in Alice and then San Antonio, where she was met with members of a task force seeking to protect Kelly Air Force Base in next year's round of base closures.

WTC briefs

TASP Review

The English, math and reading departments at Western Texas College will sponsor a TASP Review Thursday if a sufficient number of students sign up for it.

Two review sessions are planned at 1 p.m. and 4 p.m. in Building 7B, Room 101. To register for the sessions, students must contact an instructor in either of the three departments or call 573-8511, ext. 312.

Recycling

A program dealing with recycling will be held Tuesday at 7 p.m. in the Science Lecture Hall sponsored by the Western Texas College Science Department.

The topic of discussion will be "What We Can Do" in reference to the recycling of materials such as paper, aluminum, scrap metal, used tires and tree limbs.

A primary concern to be addressed is the recycling of yard trimmings like tree limbs, since these materials account for a large percentage of the waste filling landfill space.

The discussion will be led by WTC instructors Britt Canada, Troy Lilly and Joe Carter.

Yeager exhibit

The Fine Arts Gallery located in the Fine Arts Theatre now features a collection of color photographs on loan from artist Elizabeth Yeager of Midland.

Yeager specializes in photography and print making and earned her master of fine arts degree from Texas Tech in May of 1994.

Currently, she is working as part of a production crew on a Disney movie filming in Austin.

The photos will be hung through Nov. 30.

A&M workshop

Individuals planning to attend Texas A&M next year should attend one of two workshops Tuesday planned by the Western Texas College Counseling Center.

Counselors will discuss the 1993 changes in admission requirements, including the required GPA and the application deadlines of Feb. 1 and March 1.

Also to be discussed are the "foundation courses" required which determines admission to A&M. The more foundation courses a student has, the greater his or her chances are for acceptance.

Workshops will be at 11 a.m. in the Science Lecture Hall and at 11:30 a.m. in the lobby of the Student Center. Handouts only will be available at the second meeting.

For questions or more information, call Dan Osborn at 573-8511, ext. 273.

Serbs ready for 'final battle'

SARAJEVO, Bosnia-Herzegovina (AP) — Bosnian army commanders vowed today to press on with their most successful offensive in 2 1/2 years of war, despite Serb claims they had blunted the assault and were gearing for a showdown.

"We will not stop at what we have achieved ... we have the strength and the possibility to continue," Gen. Mehmet Alagic, the Bosnian commander whose troops captured a key Serb-held town Thursday, told Sarajevo's Oslobođenje daily newspaper.

"We are going to liberate further territories," he said.

Bosnian Serb leaders, meeting Friday in their stronghold of Pale, east of Sarajevo, announced a general callup, suspended university classes, set up student brigades, canceled all leaves and toughening penalties against deserters.

"We are headed for the final battle," declared Bosnian Serb leader Radovan Karadzic.

Throughout the war, Serbs have used their heavy advantage in firepower to take control of 70 percent of Bosnia. In recent weeks, however, better-motivated and more numerous troops of the Muslim-led government army have taken up to 160 square miles of territory.

The latest Serb setback came Thursday when Kupres, a town in central Bosnia that the Serbs held since the beginning of the war, fell to the Bosnian army and an allied Bosnian Croat militia.

Bosnian government officials say the fall of Kupres was a sign that fortunes had shifted decisively against the Serbs in the war. The town of 3,500 people sits on a plateau linking Serb-held territory in northwest Bosnia and neighboring Croatia with Serb lands in central Bosnia.

It was one of the first regions Bosnian Serbs captured when the war began in April 1992.

In Kupres, Bosnian Croat militias dug in Friday and ducked Bosnian Serb shelling. Bodies of Serb soldiers were still lying on the outskirts of town. Streets were deserted except for an abandoned cow and a couple driving a car slowly down a main street.

The new military equation comes under diplomatic scrutiny today as top U.N. officials, including the military commander for Bosnia, Lt. Gen. Sir Michael Rose, meet in Zagreb, Croatia, with representatives of the United States, Russia, Britain, France and Germany.

Those countries drew up a peace plan that would divide Bosnia, giving the Serbs 49 percent instead of the 70 percent they have held. Croats and Muslims would get 51 percent under the plan.

Simpson jurors get soaps

LOS ANGELES (AP) — Jurors in the O.J. Simpson case say they need "All My Children" and "Home Improvement" to lead normal lives while avoiding the trial's media juggernaut.

Suggested "The MacNeil-Lehrer NewsHour." The jury was thinking more along the lines of soaps and sitcoms.

In the end, soaps and sitcoms won.

Under a proposed plan hammered out by attorneys Friday, jurors will be allowed to watch tapes of their favorite TV shows and news programs with all references to the Simpson case edited out.

The 12 jurors sworn in Thursday had already been ordered to avoid all media and bookstores. The TV proposal, which will be formalized next week, will remain in effect until it makes a decision on whether to sequester the jurors.

Among the shows jurors want to watch are two of the top-rated situation comedies, "Roseanne" and "Home Improvement."

The judge solicited lists from the jurors after they were sworn in. He got a pretty eclectic collection, including "Melrose Place," "Star Trek" reruns, "All My Children," "Martin," "ER," "60 Minutes," "SeaQuest," "Sisters" and "Living Single."

Also on the list was the Home Shopping Network. It wasn't clear whether that would be live or taped.

Jurors may watch live sporting events, but nothing on ESPN, the all-sports cable channel that has covered the Simpson case, said defense attorney Shawn Chapman.

And they'll get newspapers — probably the Los Angeles Times, Daily News and Sentinel, the city's black newspaper — with Simpson stories clipped out by court staff.

Boyfriend didn't want kids

UNION, S.C. (AP) — Susan Smith's new boyfriend was leaving her because he wasn't ready to be a father to her two boys. She was divorcing her husband after accusing him of cheating on her.

"Her whole world was crashing," a law enforcement source said Friday, speaking on condition of anonymity. "She caught her husband in adultery. She was having a relationship with another guy and he was breaking it off. He had told her he wasn't ready for a ready-made family."

Then, police say, Mrs. Smith sent her car plunging into a murky lake with 3-year-old Michael and 14-month-old Alex strapped into their safety seats. She concocted a story of a carjack-kidnapping, but confessed after nine days of tearful on-camera pleas for the boys' safe return, police say.

A memorial wreath and bouquets of flowers were left at the lake's edge Friday.

New prayers went out Friday night for the family and for a community coping with "a lot of broken hearts," as Mayor Burton Williamson Sr. described the town during a memorial service.

"Those children will always be part of all of us," said the Rev. A.L. Brackett, one of several ministers who spoke at the service designed for mourning and racial reconciliation. Mrs. Smith, who is white, had claimed a black man abducted the children.

Funerals for the boys will be held Sunday.

campus. Students serve as office aides, lab assistants and help in the student center, library and dorm. These jobs, which amounted a payroll of $55,818 last year, are funded through a combination of federal (75%) and local (25%) dollars.

State programs include the Texas Public Education Grant, which is funded through a portion of each student's tuition. Other programs are through the Texas Employment Commission, the Texas Department of Criminal Justice and the Texas Rehabilitation Commission. These programs are specifically-sponsored, determined by the agency, and can fluctuate greatly.

In 1992, for instance, when Wall's Industries temporarily closed, TEC funding amounted to $62,595.

Tuition and fees at Western Texas College are about $350 to $400 per semester, based on 15 hours. Books cost about $200. Students residing in the dorm pay $1,025, which includes 15 meals weekly at the cafeteria.

WTC administrators said costs to attend the local community college is about half that of four-year institutions in the area.

FOR THE BEST CD RATES CALL 728-5221 THE CITY NATIONAL BANK Of Colorado City

SEEING STARS!
and BLUE RIBBONS

Veribanc, Inc., a Bank Rating Service has named THE CITY NATIONAL BANK of Colorado City a Blue Ribbon Bank for the 2nd Quarter of 1994.

The Blue Ribbon Bank award is given to those institutions which demonstrate exceptional attention to safety, soundness and financial strength. This award is the oldest form of national recognition presented to banks by private sector analysts. For The City National Bank to qualify for the Blue Ribbon, it first had to receive VERIBANC's highest (Green, with 3 stars) rating, then satisfy additional criteria searching 15 different safety aspects of bank operations. These include balance sheet, income statement, loan portfolio, compliance with federal capital requirements, and off-balance sheet exposure.

VERIBANC's Rating System:

GREEN: The bank meets high capital standards (equity is 5% or more of assets) and it is operating profitably. This is the safest color rating, based on the criteria described.

STARS: Three, two, one or zero stars are assigned to each institution (three being the most preferred) which show another dimension of a bank's financial condition by examining threats offered by problem loans, failure to meet Federal Capital requirements, and insider lending. A star rating less than three indicates a deficiency.

BLUE: The premium Blue Ribbon designation, which was awarded CNB, is applied to a small portion of GREEN. 3 STARS banks which have met exceptionally high standards.

The Directors, Officers and Employees of the City National Bank would like to thank you, our customers, for allowing us to achieve such an award. We will strive to keep The City National Bank a Blue Ribbon Bank and one you will enjoy doing business with for years to come.

West Point athletes suspended

WEST POINT, N.Y. (AP) — Three West Point athletes have been barred from playing football for the rest of the 1994 season for groping female cadets when the women ran past during a pep rally. The three unidentified athletes were also restricted to the U.S. Military Academy grounds for 90 days, received demerits and were ordered to march for 80 hours, the academy said Friday. Two other players who were also accused of running their hands across the breasts of female cadets on Oct. 20 were cleared because of insufficient evidence, academy spokeswoman Andrea Hamburger said. The incident occurred during a "spirit run," in which the cadets ran through a cordon of about 200 Army football players. Col. Alan A. Fox, brigade tactical officer at the academy, handed out the most severe penalty he could impose. More serious offenses can be referred to the superintendent, who can expel cadets. The academy had moved quickly on the case to avoid comparisons to the Tailhook scandal, in which dozens of women were molested by drunken aviators who formed a gantlet in a hotel hallway during a 1991 convention in Las Vegas. The names of the athletes' accusers were not disclosed. "It was handled very quickly, very professionally," said 21-year-old Stephanie Arnold, who as deputy brigade commander is the No. 2 cadet at the academy and the highest-ranking female student, "and I think if other things come up, women will feel very confident they can go and tell people about it." Officials learned of the incident when several female cadets complained that same day. Eighteen of the 51 women cadets in the spirit run said their breasts were touched; three of them believed the touching was accidental. None of the women could identify the players involved. Of the five players who came under suspicion, three came forward and said they had brushed against the women inadvertently. The two others were turned in by their teammates. The spirit run was suspended after the incident. Then on Thursday, cadets at a pep rally were made to run past a line of players instead of through a cordon.

Soldiers launch assault

ISLAMABAD, Pakistan (AP) — Soldiers launched an assault today on heavily armed Islamic militants who are holding as many as 60 people hostage in northwest Pakistan. Five people were killed and another 25 wounded as soldiers tried to quash a three-day-old uprising in the Malakand district, 95 miles northwest of Islamabad. Troops were trying to retake the airport at Saidu Sharif, the largest in northern Pakistan, a government official said on condition of anonymity. Militants overran the airport early Thursday, dumped dozens of boulders on the runway and posted sentries on the perimeter, witnesses said. In nearby Matta, a village in the heart of Malakand, tribesmen were holding as many as 60 people hostage, including two judges and a legislator. They released 10 hostages late Friday, police said. Prime Minister Benazir Bhutto has promised to implement Islamic law in Malakand, along the border with Afghanistan.

Open Letter

Dear Editor:

This is in response to Wayland Huddleston's newspaper advertising and verbal accusations made while campaigning for county commissioner, Precinct 2. Simply stated, Mr. Huddleston appears to be running a campaign based on misinformation and/or disinformation. His advertising and public speeches have been littered with allegations of misconduct by his opponent and other members of the Commissioners Court.

The following statements are either direct quotes made by Mr. Huddleston in a public forum or excerpts from ads in the Snyder Daily News:

- "Know the truth about what is going on in County government."
- "Return honest and fair government to the Commissioner's Court."
- "I will not be a party to illegal meetings."
- "I've seen the injustices and dishonesty at work in our county government."
- "I've watched as problems were created that should have never been. I just can't close my eyes to these facts and walk away."

Regarding the first four quotes, if Mr. Huddleston knew there was something dishonest or illegal going on, why didn't he do his civic duty and immediately report these crimes to the appropriate authorities, rather than wait until election time? (i.e. Scurry County Attorney, Judge, or Sheriff). I assume he was aware of all of the illegal deeds he accuses "county government" of, because by his own admission he has not only "seen injustices and dishonesty at work in our county government," but he also "watched as problems were created that should have never been."

For the record, Mr. Huddleston did address illegal meetings at the political forum hosted by WTC. I asked him what illegal meetings he was talking about, and he stated he'd rather not go into it, but he would see me after the meeting. When I asked why he couldn't tell the audience, he acquiesced and provided five dates where illegal meetings allegedly took place:

- 3/5/92--Commissioners Court had an unposted meeting.
- 6/9/92--Commissioners Court attended the Child Welfare board.
- 3/3/93--Commissioners Court attended a Child Welfare board meeting in Abilene.
- 5/21/93--Commissioners Court had lunch at Reta's.
- 8/1/94--Commissioners Court met with Chamber of Commerce personnel to discuss the Coliseum.

He may be right about the first and last meeting noted above, but just because Mr. Huddleston makes these allegations does not make them true. In regards to the Child Welfare board meetings, I applaud the commissioners for attending them. In fact, I thought it was part of their duties. However, I doubt that the authors of the Texas Open Meetings Act meant for us to classify lunch at Reta's as an "illegal meeting." Yet Mr. Huddleston is apparently saying that people who share the same office cannot meet in a social setting for the purpose of breaking bread. The bottom line is that Mr. Huddleston appears to be running a campaign designed to terrorize the public into voting for him. If this is the case, then voting for such a politician might not be a change for the good of the county. Remember, his allegations were not always at his opponent, but also directed at county government and the commissioners court. I wonder what kind of cooperation he would get from these people, should he win his race? Ever hear of Gridlock?

I am not a member of any political party, although I did vote in the Republican primary, but I am only too happy to vote for the individual who I believe is right for the job, regardless of party affiliation. I do plan to vote for some Democrats this election. I wrote this letter because I felt Mr. Huddleston is not playing fair. Voters should remember that the burden of proof is on the one who makes the accusations, not the accused. Please know that I did not write to offend anyone, especially Mr. Huddleston. If there is anyone who takes offense by this letter, please accept my sincere apology, and know that I just want what's good for the community.

ATTENTION Snyder Water Consumers

Please read and vote according to your conviction on or before Nov. 8.

At the United We Stand, America forum held at Towle Park Barn, the following question was given to each of the four candidates running for county commissioner and the two candidates for county judge:

The County of Scurry, through the purchase of treated water from Snyder, paid the city over $40,000 in 1993. Of this amount, over $4,000 went south to pay our so-called part of a new water district, which now includes Abilene, San Angelo and Midland. Since Scurry County has never received one gallon of water from anywhere except Lake J.B. Thomas, do you think it fair and just for us to have to be paying for the production and distribution of water in this new formed water district?

All four candidates for commissioner stated that they did not think was fair and just.

The County Judge candidates responded as follows:

- Bobby Goodwin - "Leave it like it is, no change necessary."
- Ricky Fritz - "Against have to pay it."

Now you know how the candidates feel about you and your public water bills.

So, as a self-appointed spokesman for Water Consumers in Scurry County, let me urge you to cast your vote for our friend,

Ricky Fritz
for County Judge

Long-time teacher enjoys PE and 'kiddoes'

Students are important to Doug Chitsey. So much so in fact that he has spent nearly three decades working with them — first as a coach and later as a physical education instructor.

Also, he and his wife, Judy, have reared a son and daughter.

This is Chitsey's third year to teach physical education at Central. Previously, he was the PE instructor at North for 19 years. He has served 22 years in Snyder in all.

Before taking his first job in Snyder, Chitsey coached football in Colorado City for seven years. Prior to that, he was the football coach in Hermleigh for two years.

A graduate of Hermleigh High School, Chitsey, the oldest child in his family, went on to teach his brother and sister in Hermleigh and later his niece's son in Snyder.

He also taught his own children in Snyder much to the dismay of his son, also named Doug, who often told his dad "you expect more from me than the others."

Chitsey recently reflected that that was the case. Years ago when father and son were at the same school, Chitsey said Doug had a "few adjustments" to make.

Chitsey also taught Wanda Hudgins, a longtime Central teacher until she moved a few years ago, when he taught at Hermleigh. Joe May, another longtime Snyder teacher, also taught Chitsey when he was a student at Hermleigh High School. Chitsey and the late W.C. Hodges also coached football in Hermleigh at the same time. He now teaches Hodges' great-granddaughter, who attends Central.

In years past, Chitsey said he, Hudgins and Hodges also taught in the same building at North for several years.

A sports enthusiast who continued to play slow pitch for years even as an adult, Chitsey quite naturally gravitated towards coaching when choosing a career. He earned a bachelor of science degree in PE at Sul Ross. As a college senior, he said he joked that he made a deal with the school, "If you let me out, I'll never come back."

Chitsey loved coaching and missed it after he quit but he decidated early in his career that being at home with his family was more important. He tried to be involved in whatever sports his son and daughter participated in.

Football remains his favorite sport but he said he has no time to sit and watch games. He has also golfed in years past.

Teaching PE was another natural choice for Chitsey, who said he "likes to watch kiddoes play and be around them."

During his years as a PE teacher, Chitsey said he has seen the program expand to include all grades.

Central PE classes consists mostly of tag games as his philosophy is, "Keep those kids moving." He also likes all the students to participate and, weather permitting, they conduct most PE classes outside. During inclement days, they use the gymnasium.

Chitsey described his working conditions at Central as excellent.

When he first quit coaching football, Chitsey owned a farm implement business in Colorado City for two years. He learned of Snyder's need for a PE instructor through John Short, former high school counselor.

After Snyder ISD hired Chitsey, he sold his business. Chitsey has also been engaged in the cattle business for several years. With two children to put through college, he said he entered the field as a way to earn extra money.

His son will graduate dental school in May and his daughter, Amy Dierschke, teaches fourth grade in Garland. Chitsey's wife is the resource teacher at Westbrook.

When he isn't teaching, Chitsey is usually working with his cattle. Raised on a farm, this was also another natural choice for the Hermleigh native.

When asked to share school day memories, he recalled three. The first concerned a first-year student who was having trouble adjusting to school life, especially to a fellow student. Chitsey said the youngster zeroed in on him and asked, "Would you come over here and help me whoop this boy?"

Another time, he told a student, "I saw your daddy today. Was he hunting me or you?"

To which the student responded, "Well, I hope he wasn't hunting me."

Another precious memory is of the staff at North, who were so helpful when a gas leak caused Chitsey's home in Colorado City to blow up three years ago. Though they were home at the time, no one was hurt, he said.

LOVES HIS WORK — Doug Chitsey, veteran Snyder teacher, loves his work — teaching PE to Central Elementary students. A priority as well as basic philosophy revolves around the concept of "keeping the students moving." Before transferring to Central three years ago, Chitsey taught PE at North Elementary School for 19 years. He is shown hanging up a jump rope. Living in Colorado City, Chitsey said he doesn't mind the commute because it gives him the opportunity to see new things. He also raises cattle in his spare time. (SDN Staff Photo)

The Dark Ages is the period beginning with the sack of Rome in A.D. 476 and ending about the end of the 10th century. The term is derived from the idea that this period in Europe was characterized by intellectual stagnation, widespread ignorance and poverty.

Across the Herring Pond

By Phillip Alder

In Great Britain, this is Guy Fawkes Day, named for the person who masterminded the attempt to blow up the Houses of Parliament on this date in 1605, during the opening address by King James I. Unfortunately for Guy Fawkes, one of his gang was especially friendly with a Member of Parliament. This gang member sent his friend a letter, telling him not to attend the opening of parliament. The MP realized there could only be one reason for this strange request. The cellars were searched, the gunpowder kegs defused and the conspirators arrested.

Guy Fawkes didn't keep proper control of his gang. Today's deal, from a tournament in London, also features control, of the most important suit: trumps.

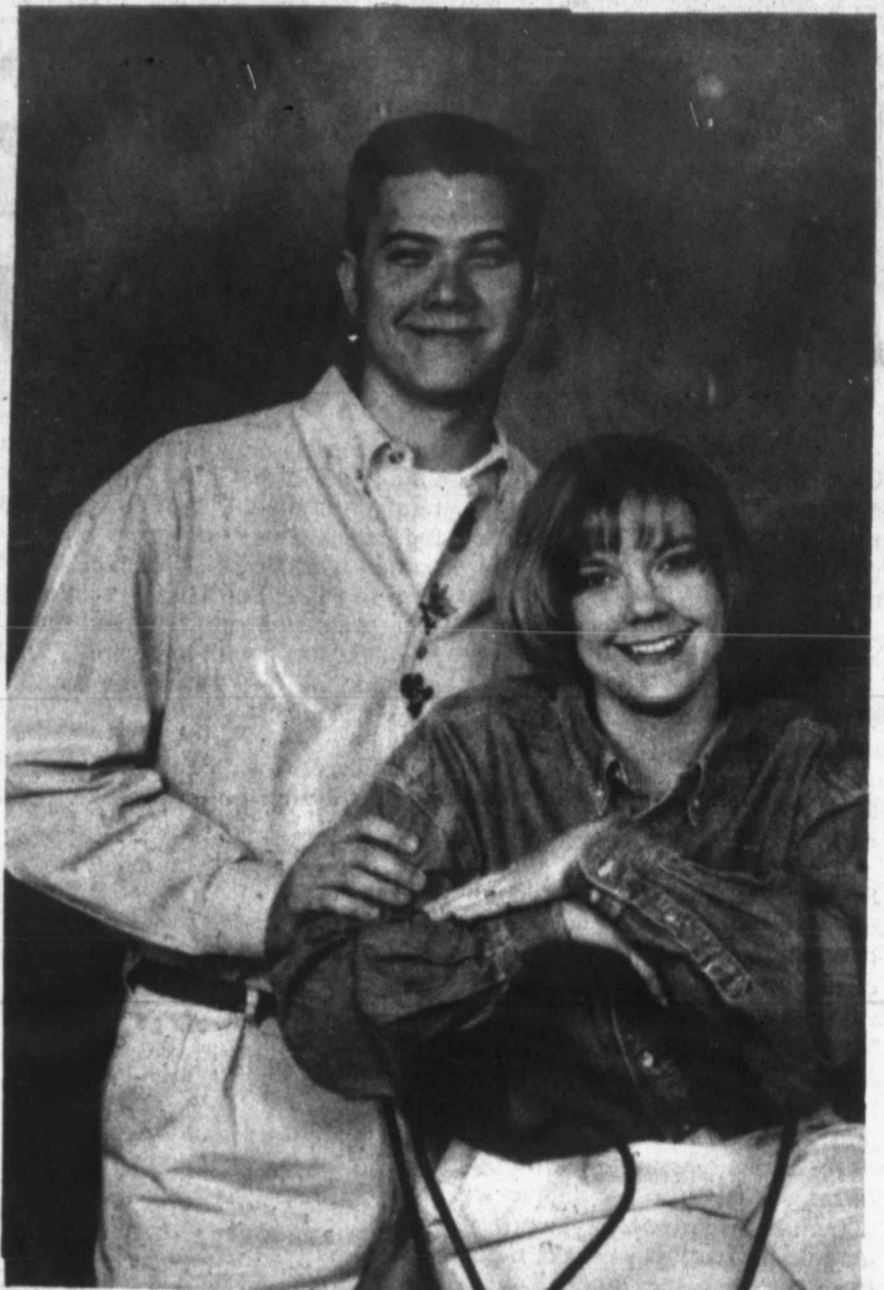

When North raised South's preempt, East was worried that he was being talked out of a game or slam. Perhaps he should have doubled. Then West would have bid four no-trump to show his minor two-suiter. However, five clubs goes one down, whereas four spades can be beaten.

West led the heart two. South, wondering if this was a singleton or from the king, decided that if East had a heart void, the contract was probably doomed. South called for dummy's heart ace. Then he continued with another heart: king, jack, diamond two.

Despite his partner's discard, East switched to the diamond king. South won with dummy's ace and played a club, leaving the defenders with no resource.

"Ace and another trump is useless too," observed East. "Declarer just runs the heart suit."

"True," replied West. "But how about switching to the spade two? Then we maintain trump control and win one spade, one heart and two clubs."

Metropolitan treat

NEW YORK (AP) — The audience at the Metropolitan Opera got a Halloween treat. The trick was played on Luciano Pavarotti.

The tenor, singing in Monday night's "Tosca," repeated an aria to his own great surprise. Normally, the Metropolitan, unlike other opera houses, does not repeat an aria when applause brings a production to a halt.

"That was our trick or treat for Halloween — trick Luciano and treat the audience," conductor James Levine said at intermission.

Pavarotti received a long ovation for his third-act aria "E lucevan le stelle."

"When he heard the music that precedes the aria instead of the music that follows it, he got a stunned look on his face," said Joseph Volpe, Met general manager. "He walked around to the front of the table, slowly, like in disbelief."

Then Pavarotti sang the aria again.

Volpe said this was the first time an artist had encored an aria since the Met opened in Lincoln Center in 1966.

Inez Teaff introduced Ruby Deavers who gave the vocational talk. Deavers, a longtime employee of Snyder Drug for several years, told of her job duties and expounded on the services including a post office and window service.

Genetha Payne was hostess to 16 members and two guests. October birthdays included Maxie McNew, Pat Faver and Leona Wiggins. Judy Bynum gave the benediction.

Copperfield's plans

LONDON (AP) — David Copperfield hopes to try a new trick — making some kids appear. But he'll need the help of fiancée Claudia Schiffer.

Copperfield, appearing in London, told reporters Wednesday that he is trying to talk Schiffer into taking a hiatus from modeling to have children.

"She said that it's a good idea," he said. But no date had been set — for children or the wedding.

Obesity and health: just the facts

By Peter H. Gott, M.D.

DEAR DR. GOTT: I was sickened by your blatant bigotry and stupidity when you answered a reader and said that fat people harbor bacteria on their bodies that lead to body odor. You should know that obese persons have no monopoly on body odor. Have you ever smelled an athlete at the end of a work-out?

Perhaps the reader was using the wrong kind of soap or needed to change her deodorant.

Fat people are not inferior to thin individuals. This is a stereotype, much like others: Jews are tightwads, blacks are shiftless, Polish are stupid, women are helpless, Germans are cold-hearted, Native Americans are savages, Italians are all in the Mafia, doctors are self-righteous money-grubbers, etc., etc.

Fat people, who may be extremely creative and intelligent, are often denied jobs and other opportunities. Most of us spend our entire lives trying to lose weight; when we do, we regain it plus more. When we stay fat, we are the objects of contempt, abuse, shame, insults, and discrimination. We are often unfairly berated and scolded by doctors.

Dr. Gott, you have a problem. It smells of bigotry and stinks of ignorance. You need a few new brain cells. Clean up your act!

DEAR READER: Whew! Are you ticked off? And I'll bet you a chocolate sundae that I am not the cause of your rage.

In my answer to the original question, I stated that bacteria and yeasts are easily harbored in the nooks and crannies of obese people's skins. These microorganisms can, indeed, cause body odor because they chemically interact with perspiration.

Of course, the same chemical reactions occur with thin people, too — but not to the same degree, because slim individuals do not have as many areas where the skin surfaces touch and provide an ideal environment for microorganisms. As you pointed out, a change of soap or deodorant may solve the difficulty.

I have no problem with people who are overweight. From a cosmetic standpoint, I don't make value judgments about them.

However, from a medical standpoint, I would be abdicating my responsibility if I failed to mention that obesity is increasing in the United States and often leads to serious health consequences, including hypertension, diabetes and heart disease, among other complications.

Therefore, it makes sense for overweight individuals to address these potential problems by losing adipose tissue.

Although some obese patients absolutely cannot shed pounds by following diets, the vast majority can. Thus, I recommend that any stout person learn and accept an appropriate diet with restrictions, such as low-fat, no sugar, modest portions, no alcohol or junk food. This change in eating habits almost always works, and — if adhered to regularly — will not lead to the weight-loss/weight-gain "yo-yo effect" that poses more risk than simply being overweight and staying that way.

I am aware that obese people experience discrimination in our society. This is unjust and I abhor it. Nonetheless, obesity clearly increases the risk of illness, so making a social (rather than medical) issue out of this isn't going to make it disappear.

Maybe you should more constructively channel your anger by seeking medical attention and the services of a registered dietitian or a support group, such as Weight Watchers or Over-Eaters Anonymous. Like all the rest of us, you can make choices about your health.

Is an illness also a disease?

By Peter H. Gott, M.D.

DEAR DR. GOTT: What is the difference between an illness and a disease?

DEAR READER: None, as far as I'm concerned. I use the two terms interchangeably. In writing this column, day after day, I sometimes get annoyed with myself if I repeat words again and again. Therefore, I believe the column is more readable if I use synonyms, such as affliction, disorder, ailment and so forth.

DEAR DR. GOTT: I recently purchased a bed frame and box spring from a man who died of prostate cancer. Do I have any cause for concern?

DEAR READER: Cancer is not considered contagious in the customary sense of a cold or sore throat. You will not develop cancer as a consequence of sleeping in a bed occupied by a person with such a disease. (If this were true, hospitals would have to recycle their beds.)

Although no one knows the cause of cancer, it is not spread from one person to another.

DEAR DR. GOTT: I'm a 65-year-old female vegetarian. Some fruits and vegetables cause digestive disturbances. I have abdominal pain, get red rashes on my chest and face and have terrible gas. Do I need gallbladder surgery for correction of this problem?

DEAR READER: In some people, a strict vegetarian diet may lead to indigestion and gas. Ordinarily, this responds to the elimination of edibles (such as beans and cabbage) that are associated with symptoms.

Nonetheless, gallstones or an inflamed gallbladder could cause you symptoms. But don't consider surgery until an ultrasound test and other examinations have proved that the gallbladder is at fault. Remember, too, that there is non-surgical treatment for gallstones, involving pills or ultrasound. Your doctor can advise you.

To give you more information, I am sending you a free copy of my Health Report "Gallbladder Disease." Other readers who would like a copy should send $2 plus a long, self-addressed, stamped envelope to P.O. Box 2433,

New York, NY 10163. Be sure to mention the title.

DEAR DR. GOTT: My 40-year-old son has been diagnosed with candidiasis. The treatment to date has been a strict diet to eliminate anything of a yeasty nature. Do you feel this is appropriate, or should something else be done?

DEAR READER: Chronic candidiasis (infection with the candida yeast) is considered by many authorities to be a "fad ailment," used to explain malaise, depression and fatigue in otherwise healthy individuals.

In my experience, the candidiasis diet is difficult for patients to follow because it is so restrictive (no sugar or yeast-containing foods). However, if your son feels better on such a diet, he will not be harmed by following it.

In addition, his doctor should check him for anemia, underactive thyroid, Lyme disease and other metabolic abnormalities — all of which have been associated with the symptoms I mentioned.

Richards wins in mock vote

AUSTIN (AP) — The real election comes next Tuesday, of course, but Gov. Ann Richards came up a winner with students on Thursday night.

More than 85,000 students from across the state participated in the mock election at 700 schools.

Richards drew 42,865 votes, or about 50.3 percent, compared with 38,400 votes, or 45.1 percent, for Republican challenger George W. Bush.

Libertarian candidate Keary Ehlers received 3,897 votes from students in the mock election, which was sponsored statewide by the Austin American-Statesman, KRLU Television of Austin and Junior Scholastic Magazine.

Students voted for the governor's race, the U.S. Senate race and for the U.S. House of Representatives seats in their area. They also participated in a survey about various issues, including crime and health. Results of those survey questions will be released on Friday.

In the U.S. Senate race, Kay Bailey Hutchison trounced challengers Richard Fisher and Pierre Blomdeau. The incumbent Republican U.S. Senator received 46,376 votes from students who participated all over the state. It's exciting to see students learning about the democratic process."

Ms. Fajardo-Ethridge said teachers statewide have been helping students understand how governments operate and how elected officials are chosen.

Tugboat captain pleads guilty in oil spill off Puerto Rico

SAN JUAN, Puerto Rico (AP) — A tugboat skipper pleaded guilty Friday to negligence charges for letting a barge run aground in January, spilling nearly 800,000 gallons of oil into the Atlantic Ocean off Puerto Rico.

As Roy McMichael entered the plea in U.S. District Court, the Coast Guard issued a report concluding he shared blame for the Jan. 7 spill, which has cost at least $86 million to clean up.

Two sailors on McMichael's tugboat, the Emily S, also surrendered their licenses, said Cmdr. Robert G. Ross of the U.S. Coast Guard.

"Tank vessel operators can't spill oil through negligence and expect to be able to just walk away as if nothing happened," Ross said. "I'm hoping this plea sends a message."

No sentencing date was set, said U.S. Attorney Guillermo Gil. Under the Federal Water Pollution Control Act, McMichael could be sentenced to up to one year in prison and fined twice the loss.

Researchers have technique to genetically alter monkeys

MADISON, Wis. (AP) — Researchers have isolated cells from monkey embryos that can be used to regenerate tissue and create genetically altered monkeys with disorders that mimic human diseases.

The discovery is an important step toward human gene therapy in which any kind of tissue, such as blood or bone cells, would be grown in the laboratory to replace diseased tissue, said Barbara Knowles, a geneticist at the Jackson Laboratory in Bar Harbor, Maine.

Knowles called the technique a "genetic Band-aid."

However, it could raise a thicket of ethical questions because it involves genetic manipulations that can be passed on from one generation to the next. Some animal rights groups object to genetic manipulation of animals, while others question who should make decisions about genetically altering human beings.

Authorities said human gene therapy is not likely to be attempted for years. Similar work has been done in mice for a decade.

James Thomson and John Hearn of the University of Wisconsin primate center isolated embryonic stem cells from rhesus monkeys and marmosets. The critical feature of the cells is that they are the parent cells of the many tissues in the body, and they can be induced to grow into any kind of tissue; Hearn said in an interview Thursday.

The government-supported center has applied for a patent on the isolating technique.

Researchers must closely study the characteristics of the cells before they can attempt to genetically alter them to produce monkeys with AIDS, multiple sclerosis, Lou Gehrig's disease and other mutations, Hearn said.

The first "transgenic" monkeys are two to four years away, said Richard Dukelow of the National Institutes of Health, who directs the government's network of primate centers.

"The possibility of transgenic work in primates would be tremendous," said Jeffrey Roberts, assistant director of the primate center at the University of California, Davis.

One use could be in the study of animals' immune system responses, which is important in the development of vaccines.

Rudolf Jaenisch of the Whitehead Institute and the Massachusetts Institute of Technology said that some human diseases, such as cystic fibrosis, can be produced in mice. But because the physiology of mice is so different, the mice don't come down with the same symptoms as humans.

Will Hidalgo politics affect election?

EDINBURG (AP) — An alleged drug kingpin uses tear gas to escape from the Hidalgo County Jail.

— A convicted murderer skips a signature bond approved by a sheriff who himself is awaiting sentencing for corruption.

— A judge refuses to submit to court-ordered paternity tests.

— Another judge orders reporters to use his name in every story about a high-publicity trial.

Do headlines like these indicate that the wheels of justice have rolled into a ditch in the state's seventh most-populous county?

"I guess when you start adding things up, it does sound a little weird," says Jerry Polinard, a University of Texas-Pan American political scientist.

"We may be a county that's a little more public than others as far as fighting goes," adds District Attorney Rene Guerra, who often finds himself in well-publicized scrapes with judges and the Democratic establishment.

Polinard says the fast-growing border county of about 410,000 people has a history of producing colorful politicians. One thing voters here have never produced, however, is a Republican, county-wide officeholder.

Now, Polinard and other observers wonder whether controversies swirling around Sheriff Brig Marmolejo Jr. will have far-reaching consequences in the governor's race.

That's because Hidalgo County is renowned for a high Democratic voter turnout, especially when spurred by hot local races. For example, amid local rivalries this spring, the county trailed only Dallas and Harris counties in total turnout in the Democratic runoff.

A local race to replace Marmolejo on the Nov. 8 ballot would have helped Democratic Gov. Ann Richards's efforts against GOP challenger George W. Bush, Polinard said.

"I imagine Richards was falling on her knees every night hoping they would get that sheriff's race on the ballot," Polinard said. A high turnout in Hidalgo County, the logic goes, could help push a Democrat over the top in a tight statewide race.

But it was not to be. District Attorney Guerra successfully appealed a district judge's decision that would have let voters choose the next sheriff. The Texas Supreme Court agreed that Marmolejo can remain in office until sentenced.

In July, a federal jury in Laredo convicted Marmolejo of taking more than $151,000 in bribes for allowing a jailed drug trafficker to have sex with his wife and girlfriend while the sheriff stood guard.

Marmolejo has been on paid leave pending his sentencing, which could come later this month.

Guerra's position angered fellow Democrats.

"It was ludicrous for a district attorney in a county of our size to make an argument that a jury's verdict doesn't mean anything," said Ramon Garcia, chairman of the Hidalgo County Democratic Committee. Garcia accuses Guerra of blocking an election so that the prosecutor can try to influence the county commission's eventual selection of the next sheriff.

Guerra denies that. He said he simply defended state election codes permitting convicted elected officials to remain in office until their conviction becomes final upon sentencing.

"The ignorant don't want to understand that the Constitution cuts both ways for everybody," he said.

The tensions increased on Oct. 25, when Marmolejo approved a signature bond for Raul Guerrero Rosillo, who a few hours earlier had been convicted in a bar room killing.

Rosillo skipped the bond. Now he's believed to have fled to his native Mexico.

are conducting separate investigations into the sheriff's role in Rosillo's release. And Guerra has reversed himself, now saying that he'll file a petition to remove Marmolejo because of the Rosillo release and the federal court's delay in sentencing him.

The sheriff's downfall began with the escape of another man from the county jail on April 18, 1993. An accomplice carrying a gun and a canister of tear gas walked into the jail and sprung Raul Valladares, a Mexican citizen awaiting trial on U.S. charges of possessing more than 1,000 kilos of cocaine.

Valladares is accused of being a top lieutenant of Juan Garcia Abrego, the reputed head of one of the largest drug trafficking organizations in North America.

"The escape was under very suspicious circumstances," Assistant U.S. Attorney Greg Surovic said. "It still is under suspicious circumstances. But we've never been able to prove that anyone inside the jail was involved."

However, an investigation led by the U.S. Drug Enforcement Administration uncovered other bribery, money laundering and racketeering charges against Marmolejo and his top jailer, Mario Salinas.

Local letters to the editor fume about the behavior of public officials in the county seat of Edinburg. But Polinard noted that Marmolejo and two state district judges behind the recent negative headlines are on their way out.

Judge Raul Longoria, who refused to take court-ordered blood tests before settling a woman's child-support lawsuit, is retiring for health reasons. And Judge Fidencio M. Guerra Jr., who ordered reporters to use his name in every story during a high-publicity trial, was voted out of office in the Democratic runoff.

Garcia disputes the notion that such incidents tarnish the county's image.

"You've got things going on all over the state, I don't think there's anything unique (here)," he said. "The fact that you have some individuals giving you a little more notoriety than you want, well, that just goes along with it."

His Republican counterpart has a different spin.

"This has much to do with the fact that, since the beginning of time basically, the county has been run by the Democratic Party," said Chris Brisack, chairman of the local GOP committee. "If we had a strong, two-party system, we could have somebody looking over the shoulder of these guys."

Grayum house built in 1909

EDITOR'S NOTE: This article was written by Mary Westmoreland for the Scurry County Historical Commission. Mrs. Westmoreland is a member of Historic Scurry County, Inc., Snyder Penwomen and a secretary/copywriter at KSNV radio. Sources were the Centennial Edition of the Scurry County Times published in 1937, "Historical Markers in Scurry County (1969)," "The Snyder Signal" (1912), Dr. Ruth Akers, Dot Wolfe, Patti Wolfe Musselman, Frances Wiman, Jerry and Melinda Pechacek, Mae Brush, Donna Fowler, Mrs. Larry McAden and Aline Parks.

One of the most stately mansions ever built in Snyder still stands today at 2300 32nd Street, a stalwart, impressive home, and a testimonial to the staunchness of pioneers who settled this area of West Texas. Built for F.J. Grayum in 1909 by Higginbotham Lumber Company, the two-story yellow brick house has four Doric columns in front with banistered porches on the front and east, and balconies above. The walls are two bricks thick, built from brick that was bought in East Texas and sent to Colorado City on the T&P Railroad. The hardwood floors are two inches thick, and the house features oak woodwork, solid brass hardware, beveled glass doors, ornate crystal and silver chandeliers, a fireplace in the "parlor," 11-foot ceilings on the first floor, and 2,000 square feet of floor space on both floors and the basement. The basement originally housed boilers that produced steam heat for the entire house. The house has changed owners four times since the Grayum Family lived in it. Some of the families have made structural changes to better adapt the massive house to their style of living, with plenty of room for families to grow and prosper. Most of the owners have been business and/or professional people, and all have been people of vision and prominence in this community. The great expanse of the house and its unique character seem to be the two things that most attracted each family.

The original owner, F.J. Grayum, founded Snyder's first drug store in 1890. The store was bought and sold several times, and was finally purchased in 1928 by Joe and Lee Stinson. The first bank in Scurry County was also founded by Mr. Grayum and one of his associates in 1890, as a private institution, and in 1905 it was purchased by W.A. Fuller and Associates and became Snyder National Bank.

The Grayum's daughter, Edna, probably had the first wedding to be held in the house. The Snyder Signal carried the account of her "beautiful and elegantly appointed home wedding" that took place on October 15, 1912. Miss Edna was married to Mr. William Iverson Hargis, Jr. "before a ribbon latted arch."

After the ceremony, "the guests were ushered upstairs to register in the bride's book and to view the numerous handsome presents." Then they were shown to the dining room "where the bridecake was cut, amid much merriment." After their wedding trip, Mr. and Mrs. Hargis moved to Dallas. The Grayums also moved from Snyder.

The "big house," as Dr. Ruth Ackers called it, was bought by D.P. Yoder, Ruth's father. Dr. Ackers stated that, "Dad bought the house and 19 acres in 1919 for $9,000." There was a servant's house in back, and farther down in the "canyon" a small creek ran through their land. On the bank was a split-level barn. The ground level part was used as a garage, and they kept a cow in the lower part. Mr. and Mrs. Yoder had nine children, with Dr. Ackers being the middle child. She said her mother always kept kitchen help, but the girls did the housework, "and during the dust bowl days, that was quite a task." They kept the floors varnished and polished, and used area rugs throughout the house. Mr. Yoder owned and operated the power, light and ice plant, and his family enjoyed the modern conveniences. The plant was located on Avenue M where the TU Electric Service Center is today.

There was no landscaping when the family moved into the house except for the natural mesquites and brush behind the structures. Mrs. Yoder hired professionals to landscape the yards. The cedars and elms that were planted then stood in the front yard for many years. The big house was used often for community gatherings and church activities. Dr. Ackers said the back stairs were used many times by the Yoder teenagers coming home from dates at night. Eight of the nine children took advantage of college educations offered to all of them, and seven of them are still living. Dr. Ackers is a well-known podiatrist currently living and practicing in Abilene. She said that of the nine children, she was the only one who had a wedding in the "big house."

Mr. Yoder and his associate, E.J. Anderson, sold the power plant to Texas Electric Service Company in 1926, and Mr. Yoder purchased an interest in the Chevrolet dealership, which was located on 26th Street near the Deep Creek bridge which became known as the Yoder Bridge. In 1930 he became the sole owner of the dealership. Mr. Yoder passed away in 1942.

On March 23, 1952 Mrs. Yoder donated two acres of land to the Calvary Baptist Church for their building, and in 1958 she sold the majestic home on 32nd Street to Charles (Chuck) and Dot Wolfe. Mrs. Yoder passed away in 1975.

With a new family settled in, the big house that seemed to have been built for busy families and lots of entertaining, underwent several changes. The Wolfes modernized the kitchen and remodeled the staircase that led from the kitchen to the second floor where it joined the front staircase on the landing. The front staircase had originally started its ascent from the entry hall in a straight pattern. The Yoders changed the bottom of the staircase to curve upward from the entry hall, and installed a partition behind the original base of the stairs. The base was left in the entry hall and today an antique chest sits on it.

In the dining room a window in the west wall was closed by the Wolfes, but the tall front windows, on the north were left. A garage was added on the west side of the house. (See GRAYUM, Page 11B)

Feinstein housekeeper did have legal papers

SACRAMENTO, Calif. (AP) — A Guatemalan housekeeper whose two-year employment by Sen. Dianne Feinstein has come under scrutiny in the Democrat's tight re-election race insisted Friday she had documents allowing her to work legally in the United States.

"Yes, I was legal," Annabella Paiz, speaking in Spanish from her Concord home, said in a telephone interview with The Associated Press. "I already talked with her (Feinstein), and I'm not going to say anything more."

She did not identify the documents.

Feinstein's opponent, GOP Rep. Michael Huffington, accused the Democrat of employing an illegal immigrant in her home, and launched a statewide TV advertising campaign denouncing the incumbent.

Last week, it was disclosed that the Huffingtons illegally employed an undocumented immigrant from Guatemala as their children's nanny from 1989 to 1993.

Houston couple can't adopt

HOUSTON (AP) — A state district judge has rejected a white couple's attempt to adopt a Hispanic foster child, raising questions of whether a recent state law to make interracial adoptions easier is actually working.

State District Judge Charles Gonzalez denied Robert and Susan Fucile's request on Thursday to adopt a 2 1/2-year-old San Antonio girl, saying the couple had no standing to sue.

The couple also asked for a temporary restraining order so they could go ahead with adoption proceedings, but Gonzalez also denied that request.

"This is absolutely racist," said Mrs. Fucile. "The department said they were trying to get an ethnic match. They're also being retaliatory because we spoke to U.S. Sen. (Phil) Gramm (for help with the matter)."

It was the second time the couple had been denied adoption rights of the girl. In early October, their case was similarly denied for lack of standing.

Another hearing on the matter is scheduled for Nov. 28 with a different judge.

A new state law allows interracial adoptions as long as the adoptive parents help foster "a sense of identity consistent with the child's racial and ethnic background."

Lawyers for the Texas Department of Protective and Regulatory Services said the Fuciles had not established enough contact with the child. They also said it was unfair to tie up the courts when a little girl's life lies in the limbo of foster care.

I am a native of Scurry County. I'm 56 years old, in good health and used to long hours and hard work.

Having been a farmer for 37 years, I'm proficient in maintenance and operation of heavy equipment and experienced in dirt work. I've worked a lot of hands over the years and I've never asked or expected any of them to do anything that I wouldn't do myself.

During the years when I was paying for farmland and equipment, building a home and raising my family, being conservative was a must. Every purchase had to be justified. Those were tough times, but I worked through them. If elected, I understand how important it will be to determine "true needs" from the "wants" of the county, and stand accountable for how I spend taxpayer dollars.

Being a politician was never on my life's agenda--but, there comes a time when you need to try to make a difference or get out of the way. For me, this time has come. I've seen the injustices and dishonesty at work in our county government. I've watched as problems were created that should have never been. I just can't close my eyes to these facts and walk away.

If you are ready for a positive change in your county government, then I ask for your vote and support in this election.

GOP looking for possible party switchers

By WALTER R. MEARS
AP Special Correspondent
WASHINGTON (AP) — After the votes are counted and the congressional lineups chosen, there may be yet another campaign — this one conducted in Capitol privacy. Republicans think they may have a chance to recruit crossover Democrats in a new, more conservative Congress.

It's rare, but it happens. And the premium goes up, of course, the closer the prospective party-switchers come to tipping party control to one chamber or the other.

The outlook in Tuesday's midterm elections is for GOP gains that would narrow the Democrats margin in the House and might tip Senate control back to the Republicans for the first time since 1986. That would take a net gain of seven seats, and it is far too close to call any such outcome.

When Republicans last won the Senate, on Ronald Reagan's coattails in the 1980 elections, seven of the dozen seats they gained were captured with bare majorities of 51 percent or less. When Democrats seized it back in 1986, the numbers were the mirror image.

So it's the close ones that will determine what happens, and even the professionally optimistic Republican Party chairman, Haley Barbour, acknowledges they could tip either way.

In the new Congress, Republicans would have to win outright control to install the majority leader and the committee chairmen who run the place. A 50-50 tie is all the Democrats need to stay in charge, functionally, although philosophically, the Republicans would be a force to be placated on anything and everything the White House wants.

In a tie, the vice president votes.

Al Gore once joked that his job was a powerhouse, that every time he voted, the White House won. His was the tie-breaker that passed President Clinton's economic program in 1993, one of three happened, Republicans would try to entice Sen. Richard Shelby, a conservative Alabama Democrat who votes their way more often than Clinton's, to sign on with their side.

party switchers in the postwar era. Some quit and ran under the new banner in special elections, some simply moved to the other side of the chamber. The balance reads the Republicans' way; seven left the Democrats for the GOP.

That speaks largely to the changing political climate of the new South and Sunbelt states. In a House run by the Democrats for 40 years, the Republicans had few Capitol favors to bestow.

Party leaders talk of four to six prospective switches already on their target list, and they're looking for more. Persuasion and promises work best, so it may not have helped when Rep. Bill Paxton, the campaign chairman, said the best way conservative Democrats can avoid a scorched earth campaign for the next two years is to convert to the GOP. "I have names on paper," Paxton threatened. Barbour preferred the carrot, not the stick. He said whatever the numbers, the House Democratic caucus will be a more liberal forum next year, and the Republican, larger, more conservative, and more hospitable to like-minded Democrats even if they were signing on with the minority side.

deadlocks he's broken.

But it's a risky way to do legislative business. Find one defector, any defector, on a major issue, and the Democrats lose.

Were this election to produce an equally divided Senate, a highly hypothetical longshot, there would be a high-intensity hunt for somebody to cross the aisle, switch parties and make a majority.

There's been speculation for months that if that improbable

Shelby has repeatedly said no, no plans to switch parties. He has not said never, and he's laying low just now. A man who could tip Senate control to the Republicans would be a politician with unmatched bargaining power. Wait and see makes sense. There's preferment, committee positions, the kind of clout a newly elected member waits years to get, all potentially available.

house. Upstairs two of the five bedrooms were combined to make a master bedroom suite and a new bathroom. The Wolfes also had a new heating and cooling system installed, and Chuck, who was a well-known photographer, made his darkroom in the basement since it was no longer needed for the old heating system. Eventually the Wolfes remodeled or redecorated every room in the house.

There were five children in the Wolfe family, four of them girls, and as girls are known to do they often played like they were getting married. Many happy hours were spent coming down the stairs, each girl dressed in some sort of bridal garb. They dreamed of some day coming down as a real bride, but when the time came none of them were married in the house.

Another of the Wolfe children's favorite places was a huge mesquite tree about 25 yards from the back of the house. They built tree houses in it, and "practically lived in the old tree."

Chuck Wolfe's photography studio was located on the corner of 26th Street and Ave. R, where Preferred Risk Insurance is today. Dot helped him in the business, and his photographic expertise eventually led them into another business. Chuck made pictures for airplane manufacturers, and even became a pilot himself. He and Dot began publishing "General Aviation News," a business they were still in at the time of his death in 1977. Dot and the children who were still at home moved from the big house the following year to another Snyder location. Today she lives in Fort Worth. Her son, Dennis, lives in Charlotte, N.C. Her oldest daughter, Phyllis, lives in Plains; Paula lives in Atlanta, Ga; Patti in Fort Worth and Penny in Mineral Wells. Dot has seven grandchildren. Before moving from Snyder she sold the 32nd Street home to Dr. David and Frances Wiman. The house had been leased between the time Dot moved out and the Wimans moved in, and the new owners decided on extensive redecorating, as well as adding on to the house.

Jim Shearer, a Snyder native and friend of the family and a prominent ASID interior designer, was hired to supervise the work. A huge den was added onto the back of the house, and a swimming pool and fence in the back yard. The servants' quarters in back was torn down to make room for the pool, and a water well was dug. The roof of the new room became a deck, and a winding exterior staircase led down to the pool. Doors opened from the second floor of the house onto the deck, and near the doors was a small area that Frances made into a small art studio for herself.

Downstairs the entire west wall of the dining room was mirrored, and in the living room white chintz curtains with green plaid borders were hung from ceiling to floor on all the windows. All the wooden floors were stripped and refinished.

There were changes outside, too, some of them not welcomed. Massive numbers of bees took up residence in the columns at the second floor level, and had to be exterminated. One January an ice storm damaged the elm trees in front so badly that all but one of them died and had to be taken out. And once the historical marker was stolen from the curbside and had to be replaced.

One of the happiest times Frances recalls was at Christmas when she wrapped a wide ribbon of red material completely around the house and tied a giant red bow in front because she felt the house had been a gift from God.

Frances lives in Abilene now, where she earned a Master's degree in psychology and is a counselor. Her eldest son, Thomas David, and her daughter, Shanda, also live in Abilene. Thomas David is a very accomplished author and recently won the Ruth Lilly Award, having been nominated for the national award by Stanford University. He is an Oxford scholar, a teacher, and has been granted a Fellowship to the University of Texas beginning next February. One of his first published works was a poem written about the years their family lived in the 32nd Street home, titled "Hardwood Floors." Frances has another son, Paul Christian, who is living in California and finishing his college education. She also has a grandson in Abilene.

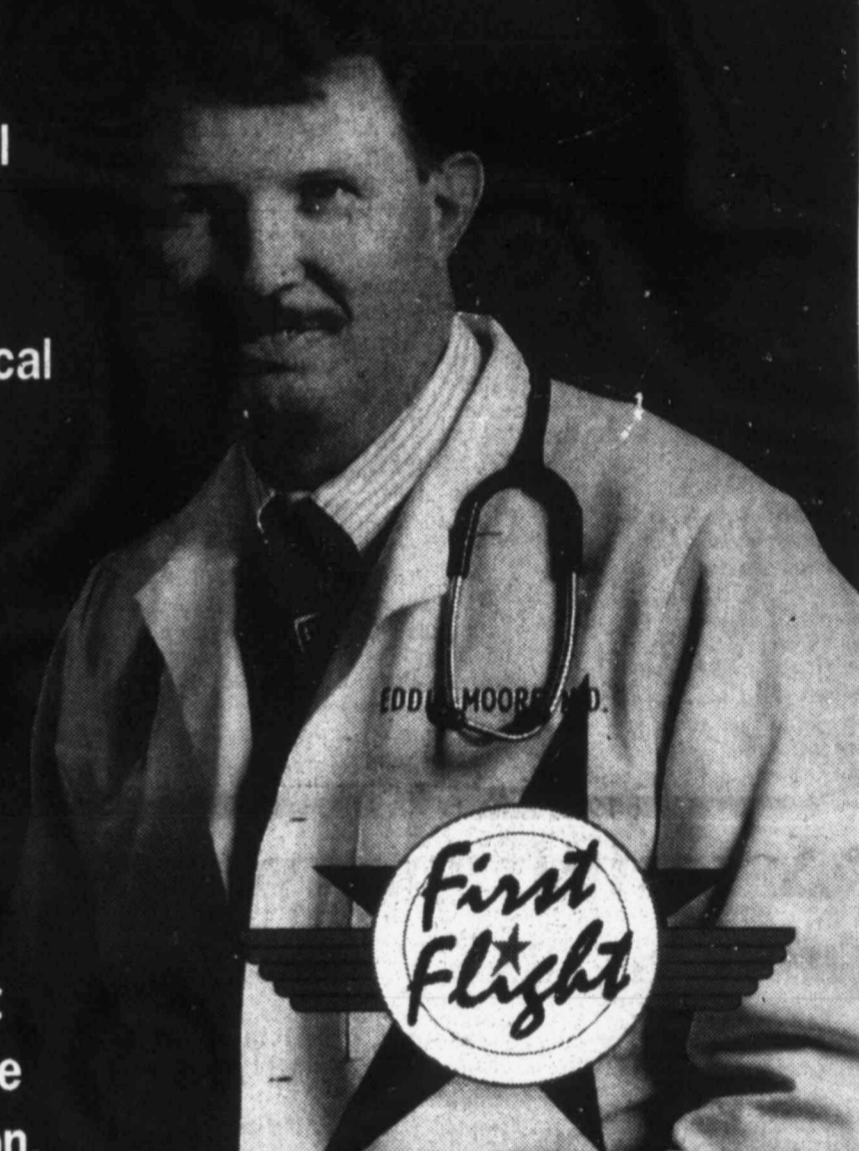

Current owners of the historical home are Jerry and Melinda Pechacek. He is owner of Mesquite Oil Tools in Snyder, and Melinda takes courses at Western Texas College in addition to caring for their children, Courtney, Joe David, Justin, Nicole and Chad. Like all the other families before them, they love the vastness and character of the house. And like all the others, they've incorporated their personalities and interests into the decor to make it a home uniquely their own. While some changes and repairs have been made, the Pechaceks haven't yet fulfilled all their plans for the house. Outside they've taken out the giant cedars that stood on each side of the front steps, planted flowers in large beds in front of the porch, and given the trim a new coat of white paint. So the grand old house stands as beautiful as when it was first built, and continues its nearly century-old tradition of being a haven for families who want lots of room in which to flourish.

Navy will salvage female pilot's F-14

WASHINGTON (AP) — The Navy has decided to conduct a salvage operation to recover the F-14 Tomcat fighter jet that crashed into the Pacific Ocean last week, killing one of the service's first female combat pilots.

"They have decided to go forward and salvage the plane," Navy spokesman Lt. Conrad Chun said Friday.

The estimated cost of the operation will be about $100,000, the spokesman said.

The body of the 29-year-old pilot, Lt. Kara Hultgreen, whose family lives in San Antonio, has not been found.

It is hoped that the recovery of the fighter jet may offer clues as to the reasons for the crash, Chun said. The accident occurred several dozen miles off the coast.

Although the jet's radar intercept officer survived after ejecting from the aircraft, he has not been able to provide enough information to answer questions about why the combat jet rolled sharply as it was approaching aircraft carrier USS Abraham Lincoln and crashed into the sea.

Hultgreen apparently was ejected down into the water from the aircraft moments after the radio intercept officer ejected clear of the jet.

Chun called the operation a challenge because it must be conducted in waters about 4,000 feet deep.

He said he did not know when the recovery effort might begin.

San Marcos seeks declaration of mistrial

SAN MARCOS (AP) — A lawyer for the city of Austin wants a state district judge to declare a mistrial in the court battle between landowners and the city over an ordinance aimed at protecting the environment.

The Save Our Springs water-quality ordinance was passed overwhelmingly by Austin voters in 1992. The law seeks to limit development near Barton Springs to protect endangered species.

Landowners interested in developing their property filed suit against the city, contending the ordinance is unconstitutional.

Senior Judge John Forbis had a hearing on Friday to consider the motion by Tom Watkins, a lawyer hired by the city to defend the ordinance. Forbis said he would likely rule on the motion next week.

Watkins said a mistrial should be declared because Roy Minton, a lawyer for the landowners, raised questions about the City Council's posture regarding a possible settlement of the case.

Under questioning by Minton, Austan Librach, the city's environmental director, said that the council had refused to let Watkins "budge an inch" in an effort to settle the case out of court.

Watkins said this was inadmissible evidence. Minton said he would oppose Watkins' motion vigorously.

"We need to try this lawsuit to a verdict," Minton said. "I can't believe he's serious about it."

Bees attack woman, kill cats

FLORESVILLE (AP) — Bees attacked a woman, her husband and grandson and killed 12 cats kept as pets at their farm.

"They covered (the cats') whole face and body," said Tillie Dziuk, 63, who was not seriously injured.

Mrs. Dziuk, who raises honeybees and has a hive about eight feet from her home, was stung Thursday on the back of her neck, lip and several times on her legs. Her husband was stung once in the back, and their grandson was stung twice.

None of the family members sought treatment, said Wilson

County sheriff's Deputy Calvin Pundt. Mrs. Dziuk used her own home remedy for the stings, he said.

Pundt said the bees calmed down after about two hours. The hives then were destroyed, and the bees were sent to the Texas A&M Honeybee Identification Lab for testing to see if they were African-ized bees, he said.

The lab's director said she had not received the samples Friday morning.

Mrs. Dziuk said the incident happened about 8 a.m. outside her farmhouse on U.S. 181 about four miles south of Floresville, which is 20 miles southeast of San Antonio.

Ex-health spa tycoon pleads guilty to fraud

HOUSTON (AP) — Attorneys for Richard Minns will not say why the former health spa tycoon pleaded guilty to eight counts of passport fraud.

U.S. District Judge Lynn Hughes accepted the plea Thursday, the second day of Minns' trial.

Defense attorneys for Minns had maintained Minns was striving for privacy and did not have any criminal intent when he obtained the passports.

"My wish was that we went to trial. Mr. Minns thought, under the circumstances, it was best to enter the plea," said Mike Ramsey, Minns' attorney.

Asked why Minns felt that way, Ramsey said, "I can't answer that."

Minns, who fled the country after his ex-girlfriend was shot by a hired gunman, could be sentenced to 40 years in prison and fined $2.5 million when he is sentenced Nov. 14.
