Fire burns portable classrooms

Teachers and students were coping today after an early morning fire destroyed two portable buildings at Stanfield Elementary.

The fire, which was called in at 5:41 a.m., destroyed a first-grade classroom and a room which was primarily used for storage, school officials said. The displaced class, some 18 students under teacher Elizabeth Jenkins, has been moved to another portable building which was housing a tutoring program for students having difficulty reading. The tutoring program is now being conducted on the school stage.

"It's strictly a temporary deal," said SISD Supt. Gayle Lomax, who spent much of the morning at the fire scene. Lomax said he anticipates the school board will discuss long-range plans to deal with the situation in its Dec. 8 board meeting.

The odor of smoke can be detected in the southeast section of the main building, but there was no physical damage to that structure, Lomax said. Classes got underway after being delayed until 10 o'clock this morning. "We've tried to bring things back to normal as much as we can," said Lomax.

The portable buildings which burned were located on the east side of Stanfield and were the oldest ones on the campus, Lomax said.

GERMANTOWN, Tenn. (AP) — A tornado demolished a home where 16 people were attending a family reunion, killing two and burying injured survivors in the debris.

From North Dakota's snow-slicked roads to tornados in Tennessee, Sunday's storms claimed 10 lives and stymied holiday travelers around the country.

A powerful storm that piled up snow in the Northern California mountains last week was moving east. Thunderstorms stretched from the Deep South to Ohio, while parts of the upper Midwest were digging out from their first big snowstorm of the season. Snow and freezing rain pelted New Hampshire roads during this morning's commute. More than four inches of snow fell in Concord, N.H.

"There are vehicles off the road all over the place," New Hampshire state police communications supervisor Jack Zemla said. "(Highways) must be terrible because nobody's on them."

A pile of bricks and boards was all that remained today of the home that landscape planner Walter Person Jr. bought recently for about $380,000 in a new subdivision of Germantown, a fast-growing suburb of Memphis.

Person, 44, and another man whose identity was not immediately known were killed when a tornado struck the two-story home Sunday afternoon. Thirteen others were hospitalized, Deputy Police Chief Brian Roper said.

Rescue crews aided by search dogs and spotlights dug through debris this morning, searching for the missing 16th person.

About 70 miles away in Friendship, northeast of Memphis, Katherine Thomas, 75, died when a tornado smashed into her home, authorities said.

The Germantown twister ripped a ragged path through the well-to-do neighborhood, destroying 13 houses and damaging 25 other buildings.

"It was like 'Apocalypse Now,'" said Steve Johnston, who along with other neighbors, dug into the rubble with bare hands to help the trapped Person family.

Bricks, broken lumber and other debris littered the area for blocks. A twisted van lay on its back, and the crushed remains of a sport utility vehicle stuck out from what appeared to be the remains of a garage or perhaps parts of a nearby house.

By the time ambulances arrived, Johnston, a Federal Express manager, had a half-dozen bleeding survivors stretched out on his den floor.

"We couldn't stop to take care of them because there were still more back in the house," he said. Johnston, whose own family moved to the suburb five months ago, said he had not yet made time to make friends with his new neighbors.

"We had been planning to take them some cookies or something," he said.

Earlier Sunday, the storm raked Arkansas, causing a few minor injuries. The wind hurled cows into treetops, tossed a mobile home 60 feet and stripped buildings of their roofs.

A suspected tornado struck West Memphis, Ark., damaging an apartment complex and 20 to 30 houses.

The fast-moving cold front blamed for the twisters sent wintry blasts further north. Minnesota had up to 15 inches of snow, which caused hundreds of car accidents.

County receives coliseum proposal

Emphasizing that "it is only a draft," Snyder Chamber of Commerce president-elect Daryl Thomas this morning presented the chamber's proposal to operate the Scurry County Coliseum to the commissioners' court for its initial consideration.

Commissioners took no action, but recessed today's meeting until 8 a.m. Thursday in order to study the proposal.

Thomas, and present chamber president Pearlene Stewart-Nolan, told the court that they felt the proposal would be "fair and equitable to all the citizens of Scurry County" and would hopefully increase the usage of the facility.

Stewart-Nolan stated that in interviewing prospective chamber managers, strong consideration has been given to those who could market the coliseum. The chamber selection committee is expected to recommend a candidate for the position in a meeting set for 4 p.m. Tuesday.

In the proposal, the chamber would accept full responsibility for the management of the coliseum, including the maintenance, use and operation of the facility and the income and revenues generated from the coliseum complex would be used solely for those purposes.

The chamber would pay all operating expenses of the coliseum complex and receive a subsidy from the county for 1995 in the amount of $185,000. The commissioners had previously budgeted $150,000 for the operation.

All employees, permanent and part-time, would be employees of the chamber and day-to-day operations would be directed by the chamber of commerce.

In the proposal, the county would still pay liability insurance on the structures at the complex as well as other casualty insurance.

Building and transportation repairs and improvements to the complex would be paid for by Scurry County if they exceeded $1,000 and total costs to the chamber for repair expenses would not exceed $8,000 per year.

The proposal also stated that the county would agree to make changes to the sound system to bring it to an acceptable level for anticipated events.

Thomas said the chamber and the county would meet once yearly to go over the books of the facility and added, "Our life there will be an open book."

In other business, the court did not take any action on the bid proposals for health insurance for Scurry County employees.

County Judge Bob Doolittle told the 10 insurance agents at the meeting that the court was still considering the proposals and the item would be placed on the Mon-

Some say new Texas law too 'lenient on cattle rustlers'

SAN ANTONIO (AP) — Texas has come a long way from the days when cattle rustlers were summarily hanged.

Too far, some say. In the past, theft of livestock valued at $1,500 or more was a third-degree felony packing sentences of up to 10 years in prison.

But a change in the Texas penal code that took effect Sept. 1 made cattle-theft losses of $1,500 to $20,000 fourth-degree felonies. Such crimes are punishable by a year in jail or, if no violence or weapon is used during the crime, mandatory probation.

"The new law is not even a slap on the wrist for rustlers," said Steve Munday, a spokesman for the Texas and Southwestern Cattle Raisers Association. "It is a green light for the decriminalization of that offense."

In 1993, the most recent statistics available, 145 theft cases were solved by special rangers — who are employees of the cattle raisers' group but are commissioned as law enforcement officers by the Texas Department of Public Safety and the Oklahoma Crime Bureau.

The rangers recovered or accounted for 2,145 head of cattle and horses and other related property worth a total of about $2.8 million.

More than 476 years of prison time and probation sentences were assessed against offenders. Restitution, fines, court costs and attorneys' fees topped $865,000.

No statistics are available yet for the period since Sept. 1, but special ranger Robin Clark, 43, said he has seen an increase in the number of cattle thefts since the new law took effect.

"The crooks aren't dumb," he said.

The increase in cases could be an ominous sign in a state that leads the nation with 14.8 million head of cattle and calves valued at about $8.8 billion.

Texas is No. 1 in the nation with 185,000 farms and ranches covering 130 million acres. Officials estimate that economic activity from cattle sales in 1994 will be about $26.4 billion.

Protecting cattle was already a frustrating job before the change, Clark said.

Greyhound hopes restructuring will avoid bankruptcy

DALLAS (AP) — Greyhound Lines Inc. has made a tender offer that it hopes will keep it out of bankruptcy court.

The Dallas-based bus line announced Sunday that more than 63 percent of its large bondholders have indicated they will tender their holdings to the company.

Lotto Texas

by The Associated Press
No tickets correctly matched all six numbers drawn Saturday night for the twice-weekly Lotto Texas game, state lottery officials said. The jackpot was worth $3 million.

The numbers drawn Saturday night from a field of 50 were: 38, 20, 35, 41, 45, and 22.

There were 86 tickets sold with five of the six numbers, with each ticket worth $2,125. There were 5,279 tickets with four of six numbers, with each winning $124. And there were 103,728 tickets sold with three of six numbers, with each worth an automatic $3.

Lottery officials estimate the jackpot for Wednesday night's game will be $10 million.

If the tender offer is successful, it would complete the company's financial restructuring, a Greyhound financial adviser said Sunday.

"This is more than just a step," said Wilbur Ross Jr. of Rothschild Inc. "It's THE step. There are bad implications if we don't have this done before Christmas."

The offer is set to expire Dec. 21.

According to a press release, the Greyhound board has approved the preparation of documents necessary for filing a pre-packaged bankruptcy plan should the offer be unsuccessful.

The offer, mailed Nov. 23, requires the tendering of at least 90 percent of Greyhound's convertible, subordinated debt and the successful completion of a $35 million stock offering to current shareholders.

On Nov. 10, Greyhound and a subcommittee of bondholders agreed to the reorganization. The plan would give the bondholders about 45 percent of Greyhound.

In exchange, the debt holders would forgive $98.9 million in debt and $4.5 million in interest. They also would get to nominate two of Greyhound's nine directors.

The creditors agreed to give Greyhound until about Jan. 10 to complete the restructuring, which the company wants to finish by the end of the year to avoid $15 million in taxes.

The reorganization plan still needs approval by both bondholders and shareholders, which the company said it expects to get next month.

Memberships, contributions declining...

Environmental groups said struggling

WASHINGTON (AP) — Just as a new and more conservative Republican Congress threatens to roll back environmental regulations, major environmental groups are struggling to stem declining memberships and dwindling contributions.

The financial problems threatening many of the country's environmental organizations was dramatized last week when the 102-year-old Sierra Club, announced a 10 percent cut in staff after losing $2.9 million over the last four years.

The Wilderness Society, National Wildlife Federation and the National Audubon Society also have faced membership problems and disappointing revenues since the booming growth that accompanied the 20th anniversary of Earth Day nearly five years ago.

But spokesmen for the three conservation groups said the worst seems to be over with membership either stabilized or rebounding. But even groups with continued growth are uneasy and are re-examining their programs with an eye toward cutting costs and getting the most out of limited resources.

The environmental movement's membership and revenue concerns come at a time when environmentalists are under some of the sharpest attacks in years from conservatives in Congress, property-rights advocates and commercial interests that see environmental regulation as the enemy of economic growth.

This followed two years in which many environmentalists have become complacent, partly because the Clinton administration had put card-carrying environmentalists in many key positions of power. For example: Vice President Al Gore and Interior Secretary Bruce Babbitt.

But environmentalists found the recently completed 103rd Congress anything but pro-environment. And they fear the new, clearly more conservative Republican-led Congress may try to emasculate environmental laws altogether by hamstringing regulators. A growing number of legislators want to toughen risk assessment requirements and protect property owners from intrusive environmental regulations.

Some environmental leaders suggest the new hostility in Congress may spur membership and contributions, but others see that as little to cheer about.

"It reminds me of a mortician saying it's great that there's a big death wave," says Erik Olson, who follows congressional issues for the Natural Resources Defense Council, a leading environmental group.

Jack Murray, the NRDC's director of development, says the apparent attempt by some leaders in the next Congress "to dismantle the environmental laws of this country" can't help but increase interest in environmental organizations. "There's no doubt our membership income will grow."

The NRDC with revenues of $22.3 million last year, has had steady growth since 1990. But in the last few years "we haven't had strong growth," said Murray. "We haven't been immune."

In recent years the National Audubon Society has undergone both membership and financial shocks as it refocused its interests — to the dismay of some longtime members — and felt the pressures of the faltering economy. "But, we've seen a real bounce back in 1994," said Tom Martin, Audubon's chief operating officer.

Like the Sierra Club, both the Audubon Society and the Wilderness Society have reduced staff at various times in recent years because of budget difficulties.

"Our problems crested a year or so ago when we laid off six people," says Wilderness Society spokesman Ben Beach. Nevertheless, since 1990 membership has dropped from 400,000 to 275,000 and annual revenues from nearly $18 million to $15 million.

The National Wildlife Federation's membership of 1.7 million is about what it was in 1985, but about 200,000 fewer than what it was in 1990.

States' rights studied

SALT LAKE CITY (AP) — The intense opposition in the West to Clinton administration environmental policies gets an airing when governors begin a regional meeting today.

Voters angry about what states' rights supporters called a federal government "War on the West" made sure on Nov. 8 that Republicans will dominate the Western Governor's Association.

Governors from 18 Western states and three U.S. territories are expected to attend the group's winter meeting, which runs through Tuesday in St. George, a desert boomtown 270 miles south of Salt Lake City. Also invited are nine governors-elect.

The current breakdown is 11 Democrats, six Republicans and an Independent. After the first of the year, the association will have 11 Republicans and seven Democrats.

Utah Gov. Mike Leavitt, recently elected chairman of the Republican Governor's Association, is the conference host and vice chairman. Topics include mining law reform, the Endangered Species Act, grazing issues and national parks.

Clinton has proposed that Westerners pay more for letting cattle and sheep graze on federal land.

Many Westerners see the government as imposing economic ruin and threatening their small-town individualistic way of life.

Get answers on blood in urine

By Peter H. Gott, M.D.

DEAR DR. GOTT: I'm a 66-year-old female in apparent good health. A recent exam revealed I have blood in my urine. I underwent an IVP and cystoscopy by a urologist and was told things were OK and not to worry about the situation. Well, I do. Is blood in the urine normal? Are additional tests in order?

DEAR READER: As I've emphasized before, blood in the urine is never normal. It can be caused by tumors, kidney stones, infections, and a host of other factors, many of which are serious. Of course, blood in the urine may be relatively unimportant, too, for example, patients taking anticoagulant drugs, such as Coumadin, may occasionally show temporary urinary bleeding. Also, people may sporadically have blood in the urine for no recognizable cause.

Your urologist properly searched for tumors or stones. I am glad that your IVP (kidney X-ray) and cystoscopy (bladder examination) were normal. I hope that the doctor performed a urine culture to check for infection; if not, this test should be done.

If these tests failed to reveal a cause for the blood in your urine, I believe that you can safely discontinue testing and have your urine monitored for blood every few months. In most instances, the bleeding will stop and not recur. If it continues or returns, the urologist will have to re-examine you.

To give you more information, I am sending you free copies of my Health Report "Kidney Disorders" and "Bladder and Urinary Tract Infections." Other readers who would like copies should send $2 for each report plus a long, self-addressed, stamped envelope to P.O. Box 2433, New York, NY 10163. Be sure to mention the titles.

DEAR DR. GOTT: A recent newspaper article indicated that a protein called enterostatin cut the fat intake in animals by 50 to 80 percent. Even though this is a natural substance in the body, it may be 10 years before it could appear on the market in pill form for human consumption. In light of all the fat pills and diet centers that accomplish very little, don't you feel this would be of high priority for the Food and Drug Administration, if they are truly interested in our well-being? Are there any natural foods that contain enterostatin?

DEAR READER: A protein such as this would undoubtedly be a boon in the treatment of obesity. The drug should certainly demand a high priority within the FDA. However, as with any new discovery, much testing and analysis must be performed before the compound is released for human consumption.

Unfortunately, many "natural substances" produce unwanted side effects. Therefore, this drug and others like it must first be studied extensively. I am not aware of any foods that contain enterostatin.

Remember that caloric reduction in the diet is a good way for most people to lose weight. The addition of regular exercise will enhance the process.

3-dimensional, computerized cadaver released on Internet

CHICAGO (AP) — Sixteen months ago, a killer was executed in Texas. Today, his body is a teaching tool for the world, made available on the Internet as the first three-dimensional, computerized cadaver.

The "Visible Man" is a detailed atlas of the human body, assembled digitally from thousands of X-ray, magnetic and photo images of cross-sections of the body.

The National Library of Medicine is unveiling the "Visible Man" today at the annual meeting of the Radiological Society of North America.

"This is the first time such detailed information about an entire human body has been compiled," said Dr. Donald A.B. Lindberg, director of the library, which is the equivalent of the Library of Congress for medical matters.

The digitalized cadaver will be available free to anyone who gets permission from the library. But the data is so extensive that downloading it takes up to two weeks of uninterrupted time on the Internet, and up to 15 gigabytes of storage space, enough to accommodate about 50 times the contents of The Encyclopedia Britannica.

The information would fill more than 30 typical personal computers and is expected to be sought mainly by medical schools and researchers, said Michael Ackerman, a computer specialist with the library.

The "Visible Man" will be an immediate teaching tool for medical students, and in the future, it could be used to develop surgery simulators much like the flight simulators used to train pilots today, he said.

"We hold this out as an example of the future of health care ... which more and more will become visual rather than textual," Ackerman said in an interview. "It's a whole different way of looking at medicine."

Commercial ventures also hope to capitalize on the "Visible Man," Ackerman said; one idea is "Fantastic Voyage: The Game," based on the Isaac Asimov book that was later made into a movie, in which a group of scientists is miniaturized and injected into the bloodstream of a dying man.

The library is spending $1.4 million to develop the "Visible Man" and a "Visible Woman," which is still more than a year away, said Victor Spitzer, a computer-imager and anatomist at the University of Colorado Health Sciences Center in Denver.

Don't finesse: Exit first

By Phillip Alder

It was Hanukkah. Rabbi Sam Shapiro and his family were back from the synagogue, feeling happy. They were enjoying this holiday and even the freezing weather failed to dampen their spirits. Following a delicious lunch, the card table was set up for the family's traditional bridge game. The Rabbi and his wife, Lucyle, played against their daughters, Elyse and Judy.

This was the first deal. Over Judy's three-club rebid, Elyse might have continued with three diamonds, hoping her sister could bid three no-trump with a heart stopper. But Elyse chose the straightforward approach, jumping to five clubs.

Lucyle, happy her daughters hadn't bid a slam, led from her shorter red suit.

When the dummy came down, Judy saw that the contract appeared to rest on the spade finesse. And if the finesse was winning, she could bring home an overtrick. But she wanted to give herself the best chance to make her contract. After winning the first trick in hand and drawing trumps, Judy cashed her other two diamond tricks, ending in the dummy. Then she called for the heart four.

The Rabbi won with the king as Lucyle signaled an odd number of hearts with the two. It was clear to the Rabbi that if he cashed the heart ace, he would be employed, forced either to lead into dummy's spade tenace or to concede a ruff and discard. In desperation, he returned a low heart.

After winning with her queen, Judy took the spade finesse for a possible overtrick. It lost and she made her contract exactly.

"Nice try, Sam," said Lucyle appreciatively. "Sorry I didn't lead a major at trick one."

Annual mammograms urged in two studies

CHICAGO (AP) — Women in their 40s should have regular mammograms, and annual ones offer a better chance of early detection of breast cancer, researchers reported at a radiological meeting today.

The two studies, both supporting yearly tests for women in their 40s, follow a decision last year by the National Cancer Institute to withdraw its recommendation that women begin routine mammography in their 40s. The NCI said women should decide for themselves whether to take the exam after consulting with their doctors.

The American Medical Association still recommends that women in their 40s have routine mammograms. The AMA also has recommended women start with a baseline mammogram at 35.

The studies were presented at the annual conference of the Radiological Society of North America by Dr. Linda Warren, executive director of the Screening Mammography Program of British Columbia, and Dr. Stephen A. Feig and Dr. Emily F. Conant of the Thomas Jefferson University Hospital in Philadelphia.

Warren, a radiology professor at the University of British Columbia in Vancouver, Canada, studied 150,147 women between July 1988 and September 1993; about 34 percent were under age 50.

Overall, she said, 15 percent of the detected cancers were in that age group. And almost 87 percent of the 150 cancers found in women in their 40s were in an early, curable stage — before the cancer had spread to the lymph nodes, the study found.

Feig, a radiology professor, said recent research indicates tumors in younger, premenopausal women who are still hormonally active tend to grow faster. That, he said, makes early detection among women in their 40s even more critical.

Feig assisted Dr. Emily F. Conant, an assistant radiology professor, on a three-year study at Thomas Jefferson Hospital. Their retrospective analysis of 615 patients 40 and up diagnosed with breast cancer indicated women who had annual mammograms had the best chance of recovery and the most treatment options, said Conant.

Of the 615, 88 women in their 40s had cancers detected solely by mammography; self-examination had not sufficed, Conant said.

Tigers upend Steers

BIG SPRING — Snyder senior Brad Gober scored 19 points as the Tigers defeated host Big Spring 75-62 Saturday afternoon.

The Tigers (3-1) took advantage of a good shooting day by their front line players and defensive play that disrupted the Big Spring (0-4) offense to steal the victory.

Behind the shooting of Gober, the Tigers opened up a 20-8 advantage at the end of the first quarter. They were able to extend that lead to 43-30 at the end of the first half.

"We were able to come out firing," Snyder head coach Bud Birks said. "We took the lead early and basically kept the pressure on with a good shooting effort."

The Tigers also shot the ball well from the free-throw line, converting 25 of 36 shots.

"Most of our misses from the free-throw line were on the front end of a one-and-one," Birks said. "I count those as two misses instead of just one."

"You can bet that as we will get better at the (free-throw) line," Snyder, which usually plays outstanding defense, was unable to keep up its defensive intensity throughout the course of the game.

The Steers were held to just eight points in the first quarter and third quarters, but converted for 22 points in the second and 24 in the fourth.

"I thought we played very spotty on defense," Birks said. "We didn't play consistently."

"We had too many letdowns. Those letdowns enabled them to pick up two big quarters."

At the beginning of the season, Birks said that the outcome of games throughout the year will depend on his team's defense.

Against Big Spring, though, the offense was able to bail out the defense during its letdowns.

"I thought the offense played better than it has almost all year," Birks said. "I think we have a ways to go, but we shot the ball better than we have in the past."

"We just have to be more intense on defense."

In junior varsity action, Big Spring defeated Snyder 58-47 Saturday.

Both the Snyder varsity and junior varsity Tigers travel to Seminole Tuesday to take on the Indians in a non-district game.

The junior varsity is scheduled to tip-off at 6 p.m. with the varsity to follow at 7:30.

Monday's Game

Title hopes remain for most NFL teams

by The Associated Press

With a chance to distinguish themselves as serious division title contenders, five teams came through and four teams didn't.

Yet with only one month left in the NFL season, it's safe to say that only five teams have played themselves out of the playoffs.

Miami, Pittsburgh, Cleveland, San Diego and Chicago on Sunday won games that kept them or put them in first place. Four other teams — the Jets, Vikings, Chiefs and Eagles — failed to take advantage of major opportunities.

Heading into December, only the Dallas Cowboys and San Francisco 49ers have virtually locked up their divisions. That leaves 21 teams fighting for 12 playoff spots, and 14 of those teams are at or within one game of .500.

Miami and San Diego are the closest to joining Dallas and San Francisco as teams that will clinch their division the soonest.

The Dolphins took a two-game lead in the AFC East with a wild 28-24 victory over the Jets. San Diego, which beat the Los Angeles Rams 31-17, has a two-game lead in the AFC West.

Pittsburgh beat the Los Angeles Raiders 21-3 and Cleveland beat Houston 34-10 to stay in a tie for the AFC Central lead. And Chicago took over first place in the NFC Central by beating Phoenix 19-16 in overtime.

Among teams that missed chances to reach first place or get close, Minnesota lost to Tampa Bay 20-17 in overtime, Philadelphia lost to Atlanta 28-21 and Kansas City lost to Seattle, 10-9.

In other games, the New York Giants beat Washington 21-19, Denver edged Cincinnati 15-13 and New England beat Indianapolis 12-10.

Tonight's game is San Francisco at New Orleans, with the 49ers having a chance to clinch the AFC West.

Week 13 began Thursday with Dallas beating Green Bay 42-31 and Detroit defeating Buffalo 35-21.

Dolphins 28, Jets 24

At East Rutherford, N.J., Dan Marino came up with a new trick in leading the Dolphins to a comeback victory in the fourth quarter for the 29th time in his career.

Trailing 24-21, the Dolphins (8-4) were moving downfield behind Marino's precision passes. When they got to the Jets' 8, the Dolphins ran to the line of scrimmage and Marino, fighting the noise of the crowd, gave a hand signal that seemed to indicate he would spike the ball to stop the clock.

Instead, he fired a pass to the front corner of the end zone, and Mark Ingram caught it before defensive back Kerry Glenn turned around. It was Ingram's fourth TD reception of the game.

"Credit Bernie with coming up with that play," Marino said of backup Bernie Kosar, who used the gambit in Cleveland.

Chargers 31, Rams 17
At San Diego, Darrien Gordon had a 75-yard punt return for a touchdown and an acrobatic end-zone interception. Fellow cornerback Sean Vanhorse sealed the win with a 50-yard interception return for a touchdown with 51 seconds left.

The Rams (4-8) led 14-6 at halftime, and fans were booing the Chargers (9-3) before the momentum turned.

Steelers 21, Raiders 3
At Los Angeles, there was no need for Pittsburgh's defense to bail out its offense. Not even on Gary Anderson's worst day of the season.

Pittsburgh (9-3) scored three offensive TDs, equaling the total it scored in the previous five games, and the defense held Los Angeles (6-6) to 179 total yards and recorded five sacks.

Browns 34, Oilers 10
At Cleveland, Vinny Testaverde played a full game for the first time in six weeks and threw two TD passes, and Leroy Hoard rushed 23 times for 103 yards and two touchdowns for the Browns (9-3).

Cleveland's defense, which has given up the fewest points in the NFL, kept the Oilers (1-11) scoreless in the second half. Houston lost its eighth straight and its second in a row under new coach Jeff Fisher.

Buccaneers 20, Vikings 17, OT
At Minneapolis, a great comeback led by Warren Moon went for naught.

Moon threw a 40-yard TD pass to Qadry Ismail on fourth-and-long with 1:27 left, then tossed a 2-point pass to Cris Carter to tie it.

But in overtime, Eric Guliford botched a punt return and the Bucs recovered to set up a 22-yard field goal by Michael Husted. Tampa Bay (3-9) snapped a six-game losing streak and sent Minnesota (7-5) to its third loss in a row.

Falcons 28, Eagles 21
At Atlanta, Jeff George threw for 364 yards and combined with Terance Mathis on two touchdown passes, helping offset a 91-yard touchdown run by Herschel Walker.

The Falcons (6-6) stayed in the crowded race for wild-card spots. Philadelphia (7-5), which looked to be a serious threat to Dallas in the NFC East just three weeks ago, lost its third straight.

Seahawks 10, Chiefs 9
At Seattle, the Seahawks (5-7) scored all 10 of their points in the fourth quarter after Joe Montana left the game with a foot injury. The winning points came on John Kasay's 32-yard field goal with 1:42 left.

The 38-year-old Montana went over 40,000 career passing yards — only the fifth NFL quarterback to do so — but missed most of the third quarter and all of the fourth.

The Chiefs (7-5) initially said Montana had a sprained left foot, but that was before X-rays were taken. After that, they refused to release an update.

Giants 21, Redskins 19
At Washington, the Giants (5-7) won their second straight as Dave Brown passed for two touchdowns and ran for another in the rain. Rodney Hampton rushed for 106 yards on 34 carries.

Broncos 15, Bengals 13
At Denver, John Elway threw a 16-yard touchdown pass to Anthony Miller and Jason Elam kicked three field goals as the Broncos (6-6) reached .500 for the first time this season.

Patriots 12, Colts 10
At Indianapolis, Matt Bahr kicked four field goals and Drew Bledsoe set a single-season New England passing yardage record as the Pats (6-6) moved into a three-way tie for second place in the AFC East.

Bowl game picture comes into focus

DALLAS (AP) — Southern California will make its first appearance in the Cotton Bowl to play Texas Tech on Jan. 2, a source close to the bowl told The Associated Press today.

The Trojans (7-3-1) finished third in the Pac-10 after last Saturday's 17-17 tie with Notre Dame.

The same source, who requested anonymity, said North Carolina will be the opponent for Texas in the Sun Bowl Dec. 30 in El Paso.

The Cotton Bowl committee will officially vote on the invitation to the Trojans in a meeting Monday night.

Alamo Bowl officials have decided to invite Baylor to play in the New Year's Eve game in San Antonio against the No. 24 Washington State.

The decision to invite Baylor came after Alamo Bowl officials met for two hours Sunday night trying to figure out their options, according to newspaper reports today.

Alamo Bowl executives planned to formally announce their choice in a news conference this afternoon.

Texas Christian received and accepted an invitation from the Independence Bowl on Saturday, much to the dismay of Alamo Bowl officials.

The Horned Frogs will play No. 19 Virginia in the Dec. 28 game. Most bowl matchups are already set, but a few were still unsettled Sunday.

Miami's 23-7 win over Boston College virtually guaranteed the fourth-ranked Hurricanes a berth in the Orange Bowl against No. 1 Nebraska.

No. 2 Penn State will play No. 12 Oregon in the Rose Bowl, and Notre Dame is expected to play No. 5 Colorado in the Fiesta Bowl.

The Sugar Bowl hasn't announced its matchup, however, if Florida beats Alabama in the SEC title game, look for a possible rematch of Saturday's Florida-Florida State game which resulted in a 31-31 tie.

Attack on kin forgiven

LEWISBURG, W. Va. (AP) — Melissa Scott has forgiven the former beauty queen who attacked her family over a romantic rivalry — even if the woman continues to deny she meant to harm anyone. "I forgive her," Mrs. Scott said. "But she has to change. She's pretty much a miserable person. She should get psychiatric assistance. She should be punished for what she did."

Tracy Lippard was convicted Tuesday of two counts of second-degree attempted murder and five other misdemeanors.

Prosecutors had said Tracy Lippard wanted to kill the whole family when, armed with a pistol, hammer, and knife, she drove to the home of Rodney and Carlynn Weikle and their daughter Melissa, who was seven months pregnant with the child of Lippard's former boyfriend, Todd Scott.

Lippard hit the father on the head with the hammer and pulled out the gun when the Weikles subdued her. After she was arrested, she allegedly told a cellmate she wanted to rip open the belly of Melissa Weikle.

After the verdict, the two women saw each other in the courthouse hallway.

"She tried to apologize and I just told her basically she knew what she did," Mrs. Scott said.

Lippard, 23, insists she didn't mean to hurt anyone.

"I am innocent of attempting to do harm to anyone," Lippard said.

Defense attorney Paul Detch said he was happy with the verdict, and said Lippard's testimony "humanized her" to the jury. Lippard had been charged with three felony counts of first-degree murder.

"My key was to mock her beauty-queen image," said Detch, who repeatedly referred to her as a Barbie doll in the trial. "I had to make her come across as a human being."

She faces up to 6 1/2 years in jail at sentencing Jan. 4.

Lippard testified she did not plan on harming the family. She said she meant only to confront Scott to determine if he was loyal to her.

Detch said Lippard, who has been unable to find work since the case began, does not plan to profit from what happened, despite numerous offers.

"We have discussed the fact there are television opportunities," Detch said, without elaborating.

New technology might change how deaf people 'hear' sounds

WASHINGTON (AP) — A vest designed to help video game players "feel" sounds is bringing a new dimension of sensation to the deaf and those with partial hearing.

Developed by former defense contractor, Aura Systems, the Interactor game vest was created to focus and intensify sound so that video game players could strap it on and feel every slam dunk and tackle that they see on their screens.

But now the vest, which sells in toy stores for about $100, is making waves among the hearing impaired.

"It's sort of accidental that the hearing impaired found it as exciting as they seem to have," said John Winfield, who markets the vest. "I've been focusing it for society in general but whatever segment of society enjoys it, I want to share it with."

One communications teacher at Gallaudet University's Model Secondary School for the Deaf in Washington said the vests might help the deaf and those with partial hearing monitor their voice levels.

Deaf aerobics instructors say the Interactor and a vibrating dance floor with a built-in transducer, a hand-sized vibration amplifier which reverberates according to music, speech, or sounds just like a regular speaker does when plugged into a receiver, help them stay in step with their classes.

"It's interactive technology," said Howard Schlieper, who runs the school's Sight, Sounds & Vibes lab. He uses the vest, floor, and oscillating theater seats, to introduce students to the pitch and intensity of sound.

Schlieper's lab is soundproof, but the vibration from a sound system hooked up to musical instruments, transducers, laser beams, television monitors, several speakers and the chairs, vests, and dance floor spreads beyond the room to distant classrooms.

"We use it to teach the physics of sound and light," he said. "Maybe the kids can hear some sound but not all of it. The transducer focuses and almost intensifies the sound."

But the amplifier gives more thump than noise. The deeper the sound, the stronger the vibrations. So percussion- and bass-filled rap and heavy metal deliver more punch than, say, country or classical music.

Response to the technology has been mixed at Gallaudet since the vests hit the market in August, but a group of students in a recent class in the lab felt strongly about the rhythms beating from within the vest, floor, and seats.

Aimee Armour preferred the beat of rap music to the heavy metal music Schlieper played. "It gives you a headache," she explained. "But now I know why my mom likes classical music. It kind of calms me down."

Jeremy Tharpe, a sophomore who wears a hearing aid, seemed startled to find she could hear a little of the music. "I'm deaf but I can hear this pretty good."

Others at the school, so far the only place where the technology has been tested by the deaf community, were less enthusiastic.

Sophomore Jessica Jordan, speaking through an interpreter, said the idea of the vests made her feel inadequate.

"I can't hear anything," she said. "It makes me feel like people are making a big deal out of things people are hearing. I really don't like to think that if I weren't deaf I wouldn't need that."

Winfield admits the technology can't serve every need. "I think if the children are older and the rest of the family is deaf, and they're not used to sound, it's liable to be a new frontier. But even if just a small amount of people use it, it's a good thing."

Jill Bianco, a junior from a deaf family, disagreed. "This feels funny," she said, explaining the intrusion into her deafness.

"I like the quiet feeling. It's perfect."

Several deals setting stage for approval of GATT rules

WASHINGTON (AP) — Long before the Clinton administration cut a deal to win Republican leader Bob Dole's support for a new world trade accord, it struck many others aimed at satisfying special interests ranging from TWA pensioners to U.S. textile manufacturers.

Critics of the accord, reached under the General Agreement on Tariffs and Trade, denounce the deals as pork-barrel politics—usual even though the administration says every one is legitimate. Because the fast-track rules of debating trade agreements preclude amendments, the administration constructed the GATT ratifying legislation with an eye toward pleasing in advance as many members of Congress — and the varied interests they represent — as possible.

"It's an abuse of executive power and a cynical payoff to those who support the White House wanted in return," said consumer advocate Ralph Nader, a leader of the accord's liberal opposition, which includes labor unions and environmentalists.

The new GATT agreement cuts worldwide tariffs by a third and lowers global barriers to the sale of U.S. intellectual property, such as computer programs, and services, such as insurance.

It will create jobs and on average raise American wages, the administration insists. But it also could send to low-wage countries U.S. jobs in such labor-intensive manufacturing industries as apparel.

The lame-duck Democratic-controlled House is scheduled to vote Tuesday, after four hours of debate. The Senate is expected to talk for 20 hours and then vote on Thursday.

Ira Shapiro, general counsel of the Office of the U.S. Trade Representative, says criticism such as Nader's "is reminiscent of that great scene in 'Casablanca' — 'My God, there's gambling in the back room.'"

"The revelation that there have been compromises to get this through is hardly surprising," he said.

To win the critical support of Dole, R-Kan., the administration last week endorsed the creation of a panel of five judges to monitor the decisions of the World Trade Organization, a new international body that is to police the accord. Dole, the incoming Senate majority leader, had threatened to withhold support unless the administration pledged to cut the capital-gains tax.

In some ways, other compromises reached during seven months of mostly closed-door negotiations with lawmakers ratifying GATT are even more complex than deals produced during the seven years of international talks that led to the creation of the 123-nation pact.

They fall into two main categories: those designed to offer partial protection to the industries most likely to be hurt by the free-trade accord and those needed to offset $12 billion in tariff revenue expected to be lost during the accord's first five years.

Included among the protectionist measures are new labeling rules aimed at reducing shipments of clothing sewn in China, higher effective tariffs on wheat imports, provisions sought by tobacco growers and changes in U.S. anti-dumping laws that will make it easier for U.S. manufacturers to win punitive tariffs on foreign competitors.

The National Retail Federation contends the provision aimed at China will drive up prices on products from shoes to sweaters for millions of American consumers.

But the American Textile Manufacturers Institute says it will end a longstanding inequity. No longer will garments sewn in China be counted as coming from Hong Kong simply because the cloth was cut there. The concession was so important to the industry that the institute is supporting GATT even though the pact would phase out textile quotas over 10 years.

Cabin in jetliner doubled as an airborne delivery room

WASHINGTON (AP) — One moment Theresa de Bara was just another passenger on TWA Flight 265, flying to Disney World with her husband and 3-year-old daughter. The next moment she was experiencing the "unadulterated terror" of giving birth to a premature baby at 30,000 feet.

Born two months early and weighing 4 pounds, 6 ounces, Matthew Dulles (Dulles for the airport) de Bara, was reported in stable condition Sunday at Reston Hospital Center in one of Washington's Virginia suburbs.

Mrs. de Bara, a 35-year-old payroll supervisor for Capital Cities-ABC Inc. in New York, credits her fellow passengers, who happened to include an internist and two paramedics, the flight crew — and providence.

"With the help of God and the doctor and ... those paramedics we just got through it," she said Sunday in a telephone interview from her brother-in-law's home in Wappingers Falls, N.Y.

"If I didn't believe in God at that time, which is not the case, I certainly would have called on Him then."

Mrs. de Bara said she had gotten her doctor's OK before setting out on what was supposed to be a fun trip to Disney World with her husband, Santiago, and their daughter, Amanda.

Flight 265 took off from New York's JFK Airport and had reached its cruising altitude of 30,000 feet when Mrs. de Bara, seven months pregnant, began to feel the contractions of childbirth.

While flight attendants served drinks to the 150 or so passengers, the pain worsened, and the de Baras realized it was time to ask for help.

"It was just unadulterated terror giving birth in an airplane where you know they can't possibly be fully prepared for this type of thing," Mrs. de Bara said.

Flight attendants asked for assistance and Dr. Steven H. Rachlin, a Long Island internist, stepped forward.

Convention starts

DALLAS (AP) — The president of the Texas Farm Bureau says the government remains one of the biggest allies that farmers would like to have in their corner.

Bob Stallman spoke with reporters Sunday in Dallas as the group opened its state convention.

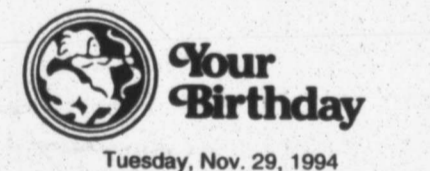

Stallman noted that farm subsidies have been reduced more in the United States than in the nations that comprise the biggest competition for U.S. farmers.

"We can compete against individual producers in other countries, but our pockets aren't deep enough to compete against foreign governments," he said.

"Access to markets and a level playing field is what we ask of our own government."

The Farm Bureau Convention will continue through Wednesday at the Hyatt Regency in Dallas.

Fraternal Twin Has Answer For Dumb Identical Question

DEAR ABBY: After reading Carole Beth's letter about all the dumb questions she's asked regarding her twin sons, I had to let you know the question that I am still most asked, as I, too, am a twin.

When people find out that I have a twin brother, they ask, "Are you identical?"

I answer, "No, he's a male and I'm a female."

Abby, it amazes me that people don't understand that identical means just that — if one is a boy and the other is a girl, they are not identical!

Please print this. My twin brother and I look very different in other aspects as well: eye color, hair, etc.
KATHLEEN PURCELL,
TUCSON, ARIZ.

DEAR KATHLEEN: The terms "identical" and "fraternal" when referring to twins do not refer to appearance; the terms indicate whether or not the twins are the result of one ovum (egg) or two. Identical twins are the result of one ovum (egg) that has been split and produces same-sex twins. Fraternal twins are the result of two individual eggs. All boy-girl twins are fraternal.

DEAR ABBY: As I read the letter from "Careful in Georgia," who put her children on a leash to protect them in crowds, a thought occurred to me: It's much easier for a father to lose his children in a courtroom.

PAUL M. CLEMENTS,
DADS AGAINST DIVORCE
DISCRIMINATION,
STERLING, MASS.

DEAR PAUL: It is generally assumed that children of divorced parents would be better off with their mother than they'd be with their father. However, it ain't necessarily so!

DEAR ABBY: Like so many others who read your column, I never thought I'd write, but the letter I read today inspired me. The woman who lost her father wrote about her mother listening to the telephone answering machine message taped just before her father died.

She said her mother found comfort in listening to his voice and she was criticized for it. The same thing happened to me.

My beloved sister died unexpectedly at 45. Ten years before she died, just for fun she sang with a blues band, and she taped a song she loved to sing. It was "Some of These Days."

It has been years since I heard that tape, but on the day of her memorial service, I played it, and her beautiful voice rang out as she sang, "Some of these days, you're gonna miss me, honey ..."

Instead of turning it off, I played it again and again. I found it comforting. Sign me ...

I recently went to the Coney Island Hospital and took my portable keyboard along. I told some jokes and sang some funny songs at a patient's bedside.

He replied, "I hope you get better, too."

Attempts to help woman said spurned

DETROIT (AP) — Two doctors who offered to help a woman before she killed herself to end her pain from rheumatoid arthritis say they were spurned by Dr. Jack Kevorkian, a newspaper reported today.

One of Kevorkian's lawyers, Geoffrey Fieger, said the doctors weren't asked to help the woman because they were just seeking publicity. The Detroit Free Press reported. The doctors denied the charge.

Kevorkian was present Saturday at the death of Margaret Garrish, 72, who also suffered from colonic diverticulitis, osteoporosis and other ailments. Both her legs had been amputated and she had lost an eye.

Dr. John Nelson of Traverse

City, Mich., and Dr. Pavan Grover of Houston said they offered to help Garrish after seeing a videotaped interview between the woman and an attorney for Kevorkian in which she says she is in so much pain that she is considering suicide.

"I'm not saying that in medicine we have the answers to everything. But if her main problem was pain, I don't see why we couldn't have helped her," Grover said.

Parts of the tape were played on national television after Kevorkian and his lawyers released it in March. The doctors said they offered to visit Margaret Garrish at her home — where she died after inhaling carbon monoxide on Saturday — or to fly her to their clinics, but never received any response.

Fieger said Nelson and Grover were among seven doctors who responded to the tape, but he said they were all insincere.

Oakland County Medical Examiner Ljubisa Dragovic ruled Garrish's death a homicide, saying she couldn't have killed herself without someone's help.

It was the 21st death at which Kevorkian was present since 1990 but the first since Nov. 22, 1993.

Royal Oak police continued investigating the death Sunday but declined to comment. Oakland County Prosecutor Richard Thompson, who has charged Kevorkian with murder in some previous deaths, declined to comment until after police complete their investigation.

Kevorkian left a "certification of medicine" form at Garrish's home, listing her diseases, her diagnosis, her prognosis and her family physician, said Michael Schwartz, another Kevorkian lawyer. Kevorkian wasn't at the house when police arrived.

Kevorkian didn't talk to police Sunday, Schwartz said. He refused to reveal Kevorkian's location but said he was in the Detroit area.

The state's temporary ban on assisted suicide was enacted in February 1993. It set up a commission to determine whether assisted suicide should be legal.

The bill gave the commission 15 months to come up with a report, and said the law would expire six months after the Legislature received the report.

Bentsen skeptical of GOP proposals to cut back taxes

WASHINGTON (AP) — Treasury Secretary Lloyd Bentsen says he has doubts about the Republicans' plans to cut taxes and adds that the stock market is wary of the idea, too.

Outlining administration budget plans in the wake of a Republican election landslide, Bentsen said President Clinton is open to GOP-backed plans for middle-class tax relief and reducing the capital-gains tax.

But, aides say this is a big proviso, Bentsen said any tax cuts must not add to the federal deficit.

"What you want to make sure is that you pay for all these things and you don't cook the books in the process," Bentsen told CBS on Sunday.

He challenged Republicans to specify how they would drastically trim federal spending, then put that plan to a vote before approving a balanced budget amendment. "Tell us what the nation faces ... and vote on that first," he said.

In a subtle dig at the GOP, Bentsen attributed the stock market's recent plunge to uncertainty over the federal deficit.

"They want to know, is this reduction in the deficit going to continue? Are we going to start cooking the books down here in order to justify tax cuts?"

House Republicans, in their "Contract With America," set forth a number of additional tax cuts they would seek, including reducing the capital-gains tax and providing tax relief to middle-income families with children. The Republican sweep has left the administration scrambling to overhaul the president's budget to cope with the new political realities.

Bentsen has said the administration favored some type of middle-class tax cuts, as long as they were paid for. On Sunday, he did not commit to a capital-gains reduction but called the proposal "something that is quite attractive."

In exchange for Sen. Bob Dole's crucial support of a world trade agreement, Bentsen wrote the incoming Senate majority leader a letter promising that the administration would give the capital-gains issue serious consideration.

Offering a list of Clinton's priorities in a GOP Congress, Bentsen said the administration would:

—Maintain reductions in the federal deficit. "I think that is an absolute imperative."

—Offer a scaled-down health care plan with "partial" cost containment measures, along with assurances that health insurance will follow Americans from job to job.

—Embrace welfare reform, although he suggested that some GOP plans are too severe. "I don't see situations where children will be taken from their mothers and taken to orphanages."

He also exposed a split in the Clinton Cabinet, disavowing Labor Secretary Robert Reich's plea to overhaul business tax credits that Reich calls "corporate welfare."

Less than a week after Clinton called the concept "an attractive idea," Bentsen said it was not an administration proposal. And he took a personal stand against calls to reduce the tax breaks.

"I didn't find myself very excited about them. No, I didn't," said Bentsen, the Cabinet's leading voice on the economy.
