Allow me to say to the producers of Haskell county through the columns of your paper, that this promises to be a year, plenty here and it is a common occurrence for the farmer when crop prospects are flourishing to deal too liberally on credit with his merchant and, therefore, he buys many articles that he could get along without. I am not trying to injure the merchant in his business, but I take the position that a person can not save anything only when has something to save. When times are like they were last year we try to be very saving, but can not econo mize then, because we have nothing to save, so, if we would do this year like we had to do last year, we would have more to call our own at gathering time. With letters remaining in the Haskell post- cash or its equivalent—the produce-to pay with, the merchant would give us more for a dollar than he could afford to give if it were charged on the books. While they will pat you on the back and make you feel like you have an interest in the store if your crop is promising, they would much rather sell to you for the cash and give you a little more. With judicious saving during prosperous years most of us would find it easier to get over the hard years.

His Last Hope Realized.

From the Sentinel, Gebo, Mont. In the first opening of Oklahoma to settlers in 1889, the editor of this paper was among the seekers after fortune who made the big race one fine day in April. During his traveling about and afterwards his camping upon his claim, he encountered much bad water, which, together with the severe heat, gave him a very severe diarrhoea which it seemed almost impossible to check, and along in June the case became so bad he expected to die. One day one of his neighbors brought him one small bottle of Chamberlain's Colic, Cholera and Diarrhoea Remedy as a last hope. A big dose was given him while he was rolling about on the ground in great agony, and in a few minutes the dose was repeated. The good effect of the medicine was soon oticed and within an the patient was taking his first sound sleep for a fortnight. That one little bottle worked a complete cure, and he cannot help but feel grateful. The season for bowel disorders being at Sick stock or poultry should not eat cheap stock food any more than sick persons should expect to be cared by food. When your stock and poultry are sick give them medicine. Don't stuff them with worthless stock foods. Unload the bowels and stir up the torpid liver and the animal will be cured, if it be possible to cure it. Black-Draught Stock and Poultry Medicine unloads the bowels and stirs up the torpid liver. It cures every malady of stock if taken in time. Secure a 25-cant can of Black-Draught Stock and Poultry Medicine and it will pay for itself ten times over. Horses work better. Cows give more milk. Hogs gain flesh. And hens lay more eggs. It solves the problem of making as much blood, flesh and energy as possible out of the smallest amount of food consumed. Buy a can from your dealer. J. B. BELSHER, St. Louis, Mo.
