for three distinct reasons-it's handsome, it's durable, it's cheap. Don't do as you may have done in the past and buy China Silk at the price or more. You can get Suesine Silk which is superior to China silk in that it is just as handsome, more durable, at less than half the price.

Surely the economy this will afford is of value to you. It will enable you to get as handsome a dress, and one which will wear longer, for less money-or you can spend the money saved for more elaborate trimmings.

SUESINE SILK is silk built up and strengthened by the interweaving of a few strands of Egyptian cotton. This cotton is the softest and finest quality. It lends increased durability to the silk and makes the beauty more lasting, because of the very fact that it makes the fabric more durable.

The Dress in the Picture is a dainty dauce gown, fashioned from Suesine—it is taken from a living model. Practically every other style of dress can be made of Suesine Silk, House Dresses, Kimonos, Calling Gowns, Evening Costumes, Street Dresses, Evening and Daytime Waste and every kind of apparel which you want to be not only dainty, but durable.

Says Plant Broom Corn.

Judge P. D. Sanders was at Waco last week and tells us that while there he met the proprietor of a large broom factory at that place, who said to him that if the farmers of this section would raise broom corn on a large scale, and ship it cleaned of the seed, Waco would furnish a regular market for it at prices ranging from $60 to $80 per ton. He recommended the Tennessee evergreen variety of broom corn.

The FREE PRESS has little doubt that broom corn would prove a profitable crop to raise on a commercial scale in this locality. We have known of several parties planting a little experimentally from time to time and raising as fine straw as we ever saw grown anywhere. And one party near Haskell, Mr. Geo. Courtney, has been growing it pretty extensively for a year or

SOME WIVES ARE DIFFERENT. Quiet Cynicism, or Good Honest Row -Which Is the Better?

"Most men," said the man of experience, "think it must be awfully nice to have a wife who takes things as coolly as Dave Potter's wife takes them: but others, more discriminating, prefer a good honest row to her style of quiet cynicism. The way she behaved the other day when she found a letter in Dave's pocket from a girl is an example of her method.

'I don't see,' wrote this girl, 'how on earth I can ever live without you.' "Dave's wife read that gush, and a lot more just like it, without ever turning a hair.

'Well,' she said, quietly, 'that girl is a fool. If she knew you as well as I do she would be wondering how on earth she could ever live with you." "And that, in the opinion of the dis-

My sister, Mrs. McDaniel, of Decatur, recommended Dr. Williams' Pink Pills to me and I at once purchased some. The friends of the measure urge that its passage will serve two useful purposes, one of which is that a place will be provided where these people can have the best chance possible for a cure or for prolonging life and that in addition it will remove consumptives from among the people at other places and thereby lessen the danger of infection.

The "One Board" medical bill recently passed by the Senate denies to the Christian Scientists the right to practice and collect fees. Thirty-eight Bills Passed Finally.

Up to date considerably over 500 bills have been introduced in the House and about half that number in the Senate. In the House, Representative McGregor, of Harris County leads in number of bills offered, being the author of 21 measures. Three representatives, viz.: Messrs. Daniel of Houston County, Trenckmann, of Austin County and Gieptner of Hays County, have not introduced any bills at all, In the Senate, Senators Green of San Antonio and Hudspeth of El Paso take the lead in the number of bills presented, each of these gentlemen having introduced 21 bills. All the Senators have offered measures, but Senator Harper of Mexia has offered the least number, having presented only three bills. Up to date only 38 bills have passed finally. Of these 18 are Senate Bills and 7 out of the 18 are local measures, the other 11 being general in character. Of the 20 House bills passed finally, 15 are local measures and 5 are general. A Difference of 18 cents per Mile. If the Legislature votes to reduce railroad fare in Texas to two cents per mile, which conditions may or may not justify as far as I know, how lows the members twenty cents a el, they will make a profit of eighteen in this dainty pocket which should hold vote against them announced that he cents per mile. As there is so much difference, nowever, in the distance necessary to be traveled by the members, this would make the compensation very unequal. The true explanation, however, for this action was that it affected the members themselves and the members were not disposed to kick because other members would get a great deal more than them so long as they were allowed to get the maxiance companies doing business in this mum amount of mileage allowed by the Constitution which was based on Little Progress on Tax Bills. So far the Legislature has made little or no progress toward solving the serious question of taxation so as to provide sufficient revenue for the State. It is thought, however, that when all the bills having that object in view are reported they will be given the rightof-way until they are disposed of.

Refuse to Give up Passes.

The action of the House in voting to postpone the operation of the antifree pass law until January 1, 1908, indicates that they have no desire to interfere with the effect of the words "Good until December 31, 1907," which appears on the passes they now have. Abusing a Privilege. It is understood that Governor Campbell is getting very tired of the extended hearings given by the Legislative committees to the attorneys of railroads and other large corporations. He has reached the conclusion that their purpose in asking for additional hearings is partly for the purpose of delaying action and thereby endangering the passage of the measures. He thinks that they are thus abusing the privilege extended to them of appearing before the committees and it is understood that he will use his influence to check the practice of giving them so much time.

CHAPTER XXIII.-CONTINUED. Rapidly thought plowed through suspense in his brain, even as his feet pressed with eager haste the brush and bracken of the riverside. Owatoga had given no hint of his direction-was it up or down the stream?

Down, he would have had to row against the current, and past the village, with more show of detention. Nevertheless, Winslow thought it more likely that he had taken that course. Westward, was ever the Indian's watch-cry, and against the wave, Owatoga's giant strength would have less chance of being overtaken. The possibility of observation was small; it had been a Sabbath day, and in the heat of noon, when all would avoid the river.

All this Owatoga had doubtless considered, thought Winslow, as he tramped the water's edge up and down, peering into every clump and shade. His steps had led him well to the east, when, suddenly, half-way between the water and a ferny coppice, he spied something small and dark lying on the sand. Mechanically he went to examine it, and his heart beat like a forge as he recognized the black bag-the silk trifle she had worn at church the previous day. He stood atil! for a moment, overcome by the feelings of relief and tenderness roused in him by this inanimate thing-this bit of silk that had dangled from her waist.

He raised it from the damp, sandy bed as though it were sacred, fondling it with reverent care. Then, with the touch of it, rushed over him, too, a sense of its practical value! Here was proof of her presence on this spot; then Owatoga had brought her herehe was on the right track at last!

Folding the bag, he was about to stow it in his pocket, when from it dropped a yellow envelope; he stooped to regain it-it was his own. In her possession: this note, which causing is it going to justify its passage of his presence in the forest on that fatal the per diem and mileage bill with night, had caused all the tangle of disreference to that provision which all trust and suffering and apprehension -all the wretched coil. Replacing the letter, he put the bag in his knapsack, with a little sigh, then, as if throwing aside sentiment for practical things, he looked carefully about. She had been here-of that there was proof; but Owatoga had mentioned two boats-where could the other be?

His gaze fell upon a something which looked like two ends of boards joined together in a way that proved man's handiwork. The boat! He made a dash into the coppice, and from it pulled a light canoe. For one moment he stood surveying it, in thankful, silent ecstasy; then he pushed it from shore and was out on the broad breast of the Missouri.

For an idle moment the boat swung with the current; the man at the oars let it drift-up or down? While he hesitated, the sun rose from a grove of trees beyond the bend of the river. It pointed long fingers of light straight up the stream, and motes dancing in its rays, beckoned him to follow.

"An omen!" he exclaimed, in sudden burst of boyish enthusiasm, and straight against the current he headed the boat.

"Westward we go," he said, playfully. giving rein to the new buoyancy. 'Follow at your leisure." and he waved his hand to the sun, which now burnt a huge copper globe on the horizon.

This gentleman is as safe as Winslow noted this with a start of pleasure, "Another landmark! It is well I have before witnessed Owatoga's forest-craft," he thought.

Hiding the boat, he rested in the shade, but only for a little space. For, could not dally, though the grass was ly, surveying the Indian, who, resting came as soon as I could," he said, and soft and yielding-the turf as a feathered couch; the sky a marvelous turgooise canopy, pierced with a thousand emerald spires.

Rising, he studied carefully every spot to discover further signs of the presence of those he sought. "Ah!" and he laughed aloud, triumphantly. On the ground he spied scraps of cornbread and an empty bottle. Winslow sniffed at the latter, and made a wry ently. face. "Poor little girl," he said, smiling, with a pitying shake of the head. One little crust he picked up and slipped into his pocket, glancing shamefacedly at a squirred, which, perched on a near-by limb, seemed to note the action with a teasing tilt of its head and a mocking chatter.

Unlike Owatoga's direct course through the swampy undergrowth, Winslow's unfamiliar feet led him by a circuitous path to the base of a hill on the opposite side from which the Indian and Lavender had emerged the night before.

Here he paused, and taking the diagram from his pocket, studied it again. 'The swamp of tamarack lies here, and just beyond is the hut of the old man of the woods." Just beyond! Where? Beyond this hill? He glanced wearily at the slope; it was beautiful with its carpet of flowers and festoons of ivy looped from tree and shrub. It was inviting-but it was steep; he was tired-"just beyond" was vague, tantalizing.

Obedient to the impulse of fatigue, he sat down to rest against the trunk of a sycamore whose roots coiled about him like protecting arms. Not far away lay the stretch of swampy undergrowth; a few paces to his right loomed the hill like a mound made with giant hands-steep, sharp, without purpose in the landscape.

He was pondering whether to ascend or skirt its base, when his attention was held by the figure of a man coming slowly down. His step was firm and light as an Indian brave's, though from under the cap of skins flowed hair whiter than the aspen's silver lining. into which the meal slowly sifted. Now He was still too far away for Winslow to attract his notice. Interested, the latter watched him as he came, a eyes of Owatoga fixed upon her in gun over his shoulder and two hares dangling in the idle hand.

A stir in the swamp at his left made the watcher turn his eyes from the old man to fix them on the thicket near. There were cautious footfalls in its recess too. Evidently this part of the woods had no lack of tenantry. Mechanically, and without noise, Winslow took firm hold of his rifle, and kept his eyes fastened on the opening whence the rustling sound.

He had not long to wait. An Indian stepped forth, plainly revealed. He wore buckskin clothes like the white pioneer, but with bead and blanket and curious marks on the red skin. His gaze swept past Winslow, fixed in sardonic interest upon the man slowly descending the hill who came steadily on, unconscious of any presence.

Over the face of the savage crept a diabolical smile as he raised his rifle. But the trigger was not pulled. There was, instead, a flash, a eport from Winslow's gun, and with a yell of astonishment, rage and pain, the Indian dropped to his knees.

Quickly Winslow stood over him gun again leveled, and the old

Then the old pioneer whispered a word to Owatoga, and with long, crouching strides, the latter cleared the vacant space to where his master stood supporting the wounded brave.

"Go to her," was all he said, and slowly Winslow obeyed; he needed time to collect himself and be calm and strong after the first joy of seeing her-alive and well.

Meantime, Boone had told Lavender, in terse words: "I met a youth in the woods, and brought him home with me. You will not object to a stranger by our camp-fire?"

to Fill. The wife of a young instructor who has $800 to $1,000 a year must do her own housework, and can hardly offer her friends even tea and thin bread and butter. She is probably gently bred, often college trained, almost always plucky and independent, says Atlantic. Even if she could leave the baby, she will not, after the first year or so, accept a great deal of hospitality while the pleasure of returning it is entirely out of reach. Nor is there in this any commercial element of social barter. She simply knows that friendships may be spoiled by having all the favors on one side, and wisely avoids the danger. She keeps her friends, and has, probably, a pleasant neighborhood life, but that does not prevent her missing the larger opportunities. Carried on in various lines, this certainly makes a "difference," and the difference is felt the more keenly just because of the general democracy of sentiment, and because a faculty of say 250 members may easily embrace all the degrees between a two-maid establishment with wine-cellar attachment and a nomaid establishment with corn meal musb for dinner and salt cellar attachment.

WHY KIDNEY DISEASE IS DANGEROUS.

that reason the FREE PRESS has builds sidewalks, plants shade Neglect of the First Warning Symptoms is the Prine Cause of so Many Deaths from the Dreaded Bright's Disease.

It is Easily Curable in the Early Stages.

Kidney diseases are so destructive to human life because they do not manifest alarming symptoms until the constitution is seriously weakened and the strength exhausted. Then, too the remedies employed by many physicians are of indifferent or doubtful value, and the patient rapidly sinks under the disease. The wisest course is to apply a reliable kidney and liver remedy on the first appearance of the symptoms. A little uneasiness in the small of the back, digestive troubles, bowel irregularities and disorder in the urinary organs are matters of small moment in the estimation of strong men and women, yet they have a serious meaning. They show clearly that the kidneys are suffering and need help, which must be forthcoming at once to prevent serious, perhaps fatal consequences. A few doses of Prickly Ash Bitters at this time would prove of incalculable value in restoring the weakened organs to health. An investment of one dollar in a bottle of Prickly Ash Bitters when the disease is yet in the early stage will save hundreds of dollars in doctor's bills, besides the suffering that would surely follow should the disease be allowed to fasten itself in the body. The excellent curative power of Prickly Ash Bitters is not confined to the first stages of kidney disease. It is equally efficacious in severe or chronic cases. Physicians have used it as a last resort, in cases that defied their best efforts, with the most brilliant results, and it has shown its superiority over the many so-called kidney cures, now being loudly advertised, in instances innu-

Three Jubilees.

An instance of the remarkable fertility of the rural population in certain parts of Germany is furnished by a woman named Mimel, aged 69, an inmate of the workhouse at Pitschen. who has just become a grandmother for the fiftieth time. She had done well for her country, and it is not explained why none of her numerous progeny are providing for her in her old age. The hero of a good jubilee of another sort is one Adolph Grone, 64 a laborer, no home, who has been sentenced at Hanover for the fiftieth time to three months' imprisonment for willfully damaging property. Grone seemed disappointed at the leniency of the sentence, and said that he wanted to be comfortably lodged in fail during the cold winter months. Fraulein Wokurka has celebrated her diamond jubilee as member of the chorus of the Dresden opera house. The popular old lady, who is 67, is still in robust health and was made the recipient of many marks of sympathy and esteem from her colleagues.

Names Rooms After Flowers.

One woman who has built a country home on a most elaborate plan has introduced many novel ideas in its arrangement and furnishings. She is going to name every guest chamber after a flower, and is carrying out that idea to the smallest detail. Thus the walls of the violet room, which is perhaps the prettiest room of all, are covered with French tapestry in the design of which violets predominate. The drapery on the dressing table is of muslin and lace tied with bunches of violets, and mauve ribbon is chosen to tie the hangings of the bed as well as the curtains. Even a mammoth bottle of violet perfume is not forgot-comes-sometimes two." Dr. George E. Vincent of the University of Chicago made this remark just after he had finished a talk to students at manual training high school, says the Kansas City Star. "The first I ever knew of superstitions," he said, "was when my father broke a mirror at home. It worried him, and I asked my mother why.

FOND OF MYSTERY MORTALITY REPORT

ALL PEOPLE HAVE SOME TRACE OF SUPERSTITION.

"'It's bad luck, she said. "Bad luck, I pondered. 'Why is it bad luck?" It was a mystery to me. But I began learning something about these mysterious beliefs. It brings bad luck to cut the cord on a package,' they told me. 'It should be untied.' 'It's bad luck to put on the left shoe first,' and 'it's bad luck to get out on the wrong side of bed.' No one knows why all these things bring evil, but many persons believe they do.

"In the south so many superstitions originate among the negroes that they are almost innumerable. No one explains the reasons for their 'voodoos.

"Some superstitions are sensible For instance, it is said bad luck will come if one passes beneath a ladder. Maybe it will. Maybe some persons have been taught valuable lessons in passing beneath them. It is uncomfortable to have a bucket of paint or an ax dropped on one's head. Perhaps this superstition originated from some one who underwent such an experi-

"The belief that if you pass a pin without picking it up you will have bad luck originated many years ago Pins were costly then and children were taught to pick them up and keep them for their value. They formed the habit, and it has been handed down from generation to generation until it has become a superstition. Perhaps some children who did not pick up pins had bad luck when they got home-bad luck administered by the parent, forcibly and quickly, and with stinging effect." Dr. Vincent smiled when he spoke of the number 11. So many persons are afraid of it he did not deem it worthy of mention. Last week Dr. Vincent was lecturing on the subject, "Superstition," He declared that everyone had some particular superstition to which deference was shown. An old woman who had listened attentively arose and declared she had none.

"None at all?" she was asked. "None," she replied.

A gray-haired man sitting by he side nudged her.

"How about them coffee grounds?"

She blushed and took her seat. And of course the audience laughed.

Gounod's Old Guitar.

St. Cloud is about to do honor to the memory of Gounod. The illustrious composer at one time lived there. and for years inhabited a pretty villa at Montretout, where he composed the greater number of his master pieces.

During the Franco-Prusslan war the German soldiers sacked the property and burned down the house. Everything was destroyed with the exception of a guitar, which to-day is to be seen in the Opera museum. This guitar is precious to admirers of "Faust" and "Mirellie" for more than one reason, for it is said that its chords re sounded to the composer's first musieal conceptions. It bears in the center, written by the master's hand, the words: "Nemi aprile, 1862."

It is now proposed to erect a monument to Gounod, which will be surmounted by a bronze reproduction of J. B. Carpeaux's bust of the great mu-

Cup Winning Stream.

In the New Britain city clerk's of fice is a silver cup enclosed in a glass case, says the Hartford Times. The cup was won by New Britain firemen in a state parade and tournament in New Haven 50 years ago. The event which the firemen won was a stream throwing contest. Fifty or more of the husky fire laddles dragged a small "tub," as it was called, through the streets of the Elm City, and the crowd on the sidewalks laughed and jeered the firemen from the Hardware City. "Laugh, if you will, but he laughs best who laughs last," yelled back the foreman in answer to a particularly noisy party, and he expectorated tobacco juice. In the contest the stream from the "tub" was thrown skyward far in excess of other competing teams. The next day the company returned to the home city and were given a reception in spite of the prevailing heavy rainfall. The foreman of the company spoke, and in his remarks said:

"This water fall is the water which was sent up in New Haven yesterday."

HEREDITY IS NOT ALL.

Physicians New Believe Less in Transmission of Disease.

Medical men are coming round to the view that it is the personal history that is of primary insortance, or, in other words, that a man's own manner of life, his record of health, and his circumstances should be more carefully considered than the illnesses that his ancestors died of. Dr. Rabagliati, a medical examiner for insurance companies, who is well known in the profession which he adorns, and of high repute in the north of England. has devoted much thought to this The city is in a very unhealthy locaquestion of heredity from a life insur- tion, where the mortality is very ance point of view. A contest is expected over the will of Mrs. Isabelle Beecher Hooker, sister of Henry Ward Beecher. Mrs. Katherine Burton Powers of Brookline, Mass, granddaughter of Mrs. Hooker, is expected to contest the will. COFFEE THRESHED HER.

"For over fifteen years," writes a patient, hopeful little Ills, woman, 'while a coffee drinker, I suffered from Spinal Irritation and Nervous trouble. I was treated by good physicians, but did not get much relief.

"I never suspected that coffee might be aggravating my condition. I was downhearted and discouraged, but prayed daily that I might find something to help me.

"Several years ago while at a friend's house, I drank a cup of Postum and thought I had never tasted anything more delicious. "From that time on I used Postum instead of coffee, and soon began to improve in health, so that now I can walk half a dozen blocks or more with ease, and do many other things that I never thought I would be able to do again in this world. "My appetite is good, I sleep well, and find life worth living, indeed. A lady of my acquaintance said she did not like Postum, it was so weak and tasteless. "I explained to her the difference when it is made right-boiled accord ing to directions. She was glad to know this because coffee did not agree with her. Now her folks say they expect to use Postum the rest of their lives." Name given by Postum Co., Battle Creek, Mich. Read the little book, "The Road to Wellville," in pkgs. "There's a reason."

The Value and Importance of Ethical Remedies.

Remedies which physicians sanction for family use, as they act most beneficially and are gentle yet prompt in effect, and called ethical, because they are of Known Excellence and Quality and of Known Component Parts.

To gain the full confidence of the Well-Informed of the world and the approval of the most eminent physicians, it is essential that the component parts be known to and approved by them, and, therefore, the California Fig Syrup Company has published for many years past in its advertisements and upon every package a full statement thereof. The perfect purity and uniformity of product which they demand in a laxative remedy of an ethical character are assured by the California Fig Syrup Company's original method manufacture, known to the Company only.

There are other ethical remedies approved by physicians, but the product of the California Fig Syrup Company possesses the advantage over all other family laxatives that it cleanses, sweetens and relieves the internal organs on which it acts, without disturbing the natural functions or any debilitating after effects and without having to increase the quantity from time to time.

This valuable remedy has been long and favorably known under the name of Syrup of Figs, and has attained to world-wide acceptance as the most excellent of family laxatives, and as its pure laxative principles, obtained from Senna, are well known to physicians and the Well-Informed of the world to be the best of natural laxatives, we have adopted the more elaborate name of Syrup of Figs and Elixir of Senna, as more fully descriptive of the remedy, but doubtlessly it will always be called for by the shorter name of Syrup of Figs; and to get its beneficial effects, always note, when purchasing, the full name of the Company-California Fig Syrup Co .plainly printed on the front of every package, whether you simply call for Syrup of Figs, or by the full name, Syrup of Figs and Elixir of Senna, as Syrup of Figs and Elixir of Senna is the one laxative remedy manufactured by the California Fig Syrup Company, and the same heretofore known by the name, Syrup of Figs, which has given satisfaction to millions. The genuine is for sale by all leading druggists throughout the United States in original packages of one size only, the regular price of which is fifty cents per bottle.

Every bottle is sold under the general guarantee of the Company, filed with the Secretary of Agriculture, at Washington, D. C., the remedy is not adulterated or misbranded within the meaning of the Food and Drugs Act, June 30th, 1906.

Admired Statesman's Stature. A German journalist visiting in Washington, himself a man of stalwart proportions, was rather inclined to look with something like contempt on the many undersized statesmen he saw in the national legislature. But when Secretary Taft bore down upon him he gasped in wonder. They were introduced and after a short chat the secretary departed. Just as he disappeared from the German's admiring gaze the towering form of Congressman Sulloway hove into view. The German looked at the New Hampshire man long and earnestly. "Last year, after having my little girl treated by a very prominent physician for an obstinate case of eczema, I resorted to the Cuticura Remedies, and was so well pleased with the almost instantaneous relief afforded that we discarded the physician's prescription and relied entirely on the Cuticura Soan, Cuticura Ointment, and Cuticura Pills. When we commenced with the Cuticura Remedies her feet and limbs were covered with running sores. In about six weeks we had her completely well, and there has been no recurrence of the trouble.

"In July of this year a little boy in our family poisoned his hands and arms with poison oak, and in twentyfour hours his hands and arms were a mass of torturing sores. We used only the Cuticura Remedies, washing his hands and arms with the Cuticura Soap, and anointing them with the Cuticura Ointment, and then gave him the Cuticura Resolvent, Inabout three weeks his hands and arms healed up. So we have lots of cause for feeling grateful for the Cuticura Remedies. We find that the Cuticura Remedies are a valuable household standby, living as we do twelve miles from a doctor. The town and church of Stratford had a decided bent toward Presbyterianism, and there is reason to think that he did not get on well with it in this respect. Himself the wisest of preachers, he does not seem to have been fond of preaching. That which sounds most like it -and very wise it is-comes from Polonius, whom he calls "a prating old fool." We fear that when he walked to church with his wife he went no farther than the porch, but strolled along the Avon, where he was found by Susanna and Judith on "a grassy bank" in close converse with "daisies pied and violets blue," and "herb-o'grace" as became Sunday. And in winter he was not sorry "when coughing drowned the parson's saw." The preacher and the poet have never got on well together, and will not until they are identically the same person. as Cardinal Newman says; and they must not divide and antagonize what God have joined together .- Theodore T. Austin, Tex., March 26 .- The killing of Tarrant County's District Attorney, Jefferson D. McLean has had its inevitable consequence. After having lain neglected for several days on the Speaker's table, the Dean anti-gambling bill was called up in the House yesterday morning on the question of concurring in the Senate amendments. Last night the House adopted a conference report which virtually retains all the amendments, amendments so in reducing the death rate from Tuberdrastic, that, until the Fort Worth tragedy, it was thought they would kill the bill.

The bill, as the conferees reported it, makes gambling a felony, the punishment a term in the penitentiary. It is also declared to be a felony to rent a building or room to be used as a gambling hall.

The Senate will assuredly adopt the conference report, and there is just as Whisky, a half pint. Shake well and much certainty that the Governor will use in teaspoonful doses every four sign the bill.

Resenthal, the Planist, Made Much Trouble in Hotel.

Rosenthal, the planist, is one of those entitled to have his crankiness termed "the eccentricities of genius," says the San Francisco Chronicie. When he inspected his rooms at the Majestic upon his arrival very late the other night, he went softly to the adjoining doors, and placing his ears close to the cracks, exclaimed in broken English, "Zgodd, ne sounds pass thees." After nodding his approval of the grand plane and the furniture he frowned at the tan-colored window shades. "Must be green." He was assured that a change would be made especially for him the next day. At five o'clock in the morning Rosenthal, clad only in his pajamas, came scurrying excitedly down stairs and into the office, where the drowsy "Ze street cars! Noise! Must stopped! Nervous me! I cannot

In any medical compound as much depends upon the manner in which it is compounded as upon the ingredients used.

First, there must be a due proportion of the ingredients. Each drug in the pharmacopeia has its special action. To combine any drug with other drugs that have slightly different action, the combination must be made with strict reference to the use for which the compound is intended. The drugs may be well selected as to their efficacy, but the compound ENTIRELY SPOILED BY THE PROPORTION in which they are combined.

It takes years and years of experience to discover this proportion. There is no law of chemistry, of pharmacy, by which the exact balance of proportion can be determined. EXPERIENCE IS THE ONLY GUIDE.

In compounding a catarrh remedy Dr. Hartman has had many years' experience. In the use of the various ingredients which compose the catarrh remedy, Peruna, he has learned, little by little, how to harmonize the action of each ingredient, how to combine them into a stable compound, how to arrange them into such nice proportions as to blend the taste, the operation and the chemical peculiarities of each several ingredient in order to produce a pharmaceutical product beyond the criticism of doctors, pharmacists or chemists.

WE REPEAT, THAT AS MUCH DEPENDS ON THE WAY IN WHICH THE DRUGS ARE COMBINED AS DEPENDS UPON THE DRUGS THEM-

The compound must present a stability which is not affected by changes of temperature, not affected by exposure to the air, not affected by age. It must be so combined that it will remain just the same whether used in the logging or mining camps of the northwest or the coffee plantations of the tropics.

A complete list of the ingredients of Peruna would not enable any druggist or physician to reproduce Peruna. It is the skill and sagacity by which these ingredients are brought together that give Peruna much of its peculiar claims as efficacious catarrh remedy. However much virtue each ingredient of Peruna may possess, the value of the compound depends largely upon the manner and proportion in which they are combined. The right ingredients, put together rightly, is the only way a medical compound can be made of real value.

Dr. Williams' Pink Pills Cured Stub orn Rheumatism When Other Treatment Gave No Relief.

Dr. Williams' Pink Pills have been curing the most stubborn cases of rheumatism for nearly a generation and thousands of grateful patients have given testimony that cannot be

Mr. Robert Odbert, a machinist, living at 201 Cameron Street, Detroit, Mich., had a very distressing experience with rheumatism for about two years. He makes the following state-"About the year 1887 I felt the effects of rheumatism which gradually grew worse until I was compelled to give up work for a time. The years of '97 and '98 I was confined to my bed most of the time. I was under doctors' treatment but found no relief. My legs were swollen from the hips downward and red blotches appeared all over them. Frequently they pained me so that I had to bind them tigatly with strips of linen. This sometimes relieved the pain but at other times failed to do so. At times I had to crawl to my work, using two crutches. During, these spells I suffered greatly from pain around my heart which I at tributed to the rheumatism.

"At last my mother wrote me and esked me to try Dr. Williams' Pink Pills. I did and in a short time I found myself getting better and have had no trouble since. I may here add that I consider myself perfectly cured. I have not had the least sign of the disease since and feel better now than I ever did. For these reasons I recommend Dr. Williams' Pink Pills to any one affected the same as I was."

Dr. Williams' Pink Pills are sold by all druggists, or sent by mail, postpaid on receipt of price, 50 cents per box, six boxes for $2.50, by the Dr. Williams Medicine Co., Schenectady, N. Y.

Scentmakers, for example, need some one with a very delicate sense of smell to aid them in mixing the ingredients of perfumes in proper proportions. Contractors for the lighting of streets, large public buildings and pleasure grounds very often engage "smellers" to find escapes of gas, one shilling being generally paid for each escape reported. WHEN FERTILIZERS SHOULD BE APPLIED.

As a general rule, which has but few exceptions, the greater part of the fertilizer should be applied to the soil before planting the crop it is intended to benefit. This rule is not only in accord with theoretical considerations, but is also abundantly sustained in actual practice, as shown by carefully conducted field experiments instituted for the express purpose of ascertaining the truth, says Hon. R. J. Redding, Director Georgia Experiment Station, Department of Agriculture, in Virginia-Carolina Fertilizer Almanac. The theory underlying the rule is the fact that most of the ingredients composing a commercial fertilizer are not immediately soluble and availible, but must undergo certain chemical changes in the mediately soluble and availible, but must undergo certain chemical changes in the soil before the plant food will be in the proper condition to be taken up by the roots of the plants. This is particularly true in regard to saits of potash, and in less degree to acid phosphate. It is a fact, also, that some forms of potash, notably kainit, cause chemical changes in the condition of the plant food already present in a soil, whereby the before insoluble r i non-available plant food already in the soil, becomes available. The organic substances which are largely used in the make up of commercial fertilizers for the purpose of supplying nitrogen to the plants—such as cotton-seed meal, dried blood, fish scrap, tankage, etc., also require time in which to undergo chemical decomposition and such change of form as will enable the roots.

age, etc., also require time in which to undergo chemical decomposition and such change of form as will enable the roots to appropriate the nitrogen. Even sulphate of ammonia, a highly soluble chemical sait, which sometimes enters into the composition of a fertilizer in a very limited amount, must undergo a complete chemical decomposition in the soil before the plants can make any use of the nitrogen, which it contains in the form of ammonia sulphate. This must be converted into nitrate, or nitrate of lime.

Nitrate of soda is the one chemical fertilizer sait that is immediately available, producing a very prompt effect when applied to a growing crop (and it should be applied to none other).

Acid phosphate and potash may be applied to the soil and bedded on from two to six weeks before planting time. It is claimed by some experts that potash saits may be applied with better results even several months before planting. A more practical and convenient rule, however, is to apply a complete fertilizer from one to three weeks before planting the crop, when the latter is a corn, cotton, tobacco, or other summer-growing crop, always taking care to mix the fertilizer thoroughly with the soil of the open bedding furrow in which it shall be applied and then "listing," or throwing two furrows on it.

Experiments on the farm of the Georgia applied and then "listing," or throwing two furrows on it.

Experiments on the farm of the Georgia Experiments on the farm of the Georgia Experiment Station, projected for the purpose of comparing on the one hand the affectiveness of a complete fertilizer applied two weeks before planting, and, on the other hand, the effectiveness of the same quantity of the same fertilizer applied in the furrows with the seed, were followed by an unexpected and surprising result—viz., the cotton seeds planted on the plats in which the fertilizer had been applied and bedded on two weeks before, came ur quicker and gave a more uniform stat of more vigorous plants than resulted the plats in which the fertilizer was at middle in the furrows plants than resulted ...he plats in which the fertilizer was a just in the furrows with the seeds. While this result was not contemplated, it was quickly explained by the fact that the fertilizer that had been in the ground two weeks had undergone the chemical changes already alluded to, and its plant food was ready for the immediate wants of the young plants. This result suggests that it may be expedient, in any case, to apply a small quantity—say 20 to 25 pounds—of nitrate of soda in the same furrow with the cotton or corn seeds, which may be done with perfect safety with cotton seeds, and without danger to corn if not placed in immediate contact with the seed.

APPLYING FERTILIZER AT THE APPLYING FERTILIZER AT THE TIME OF PLANTING.

and without danger to corn ir not placed in immediate contact with the seed.

APPLYING FERTILIZER AT THE TIME OF PLANTING.

This may be understood to mean either applying the fertilizer, bedding on it and immediately planting the seed; or it may refer to the practice of putting the fertilizer in the furrow with the seed. In the latter case, there is always a manifest danger that the coming growing season may be unusually dry, in which event the fertilizer, being so lightly covered, may not be dissolved and properly disseminated through the soil. It may also follow that the fertilizer being so concentrated—en masse, as it were—around the tender rootlets of the young plants that the latter may be injured or "burned"—a not inconsiderable danger. The plan is not advisable except when a very light application is to be made per acre. This caution is especially applicable to seeds that are planted in very shallow furrows and bût lightly covered, such as cotton, and it is generally safer to interpose some soil, or, better, deposit the fertilizer in one furrow and plant the seeds in a furrow immediately beside; or, vice versa, plant the seeds first in the furrow, and then the fertilizer in a furrow close beside it. But the preferred plan is to bed on the fertilizer, and then plant the seeds, after harrowing down the beds.

I have often applied 50 to 100 pounds of a "complete" fertilizer per acre in the furrow with the cotton seeds; but it was "away back" in the late sixties and early seventies when fertilizers soid at 36 to 360 at 0n, and very light applications were supposed to be in the interest of a wise economy. We did not know much about fertilizers in those days, and were afraid to "put too much grano on the cotton." That time has passed and gone, and the up-to-date farmer has found that 500 and 500 pounds of fertilizer for cotton, a properly balanced high-grade fertilizer, to each acre of cotton is not dangerous or excessive, but simply liberal and judicious. Indeed, it is a question of simple arithmetic. If 100

Rosenthal, the Canist, Made Much Trouble in Hotel.

Rosenthal, the plantst, is one of those entitled to have his crankiness termed "the eccentricities of genius," says the San Francisco Chronicle. When he inspected his rooms at the Majestic upon his arrival very late 'he other night, he went softly to the adjoining doors, and placing his ears close to the cracks, exclaimed in broken English, "Zgodd, ne sounds pass thees." After nodding his approval of the grand plane and the furniture he frowned at the tan-colored window shades. "Must be green." He was assured that a change would be made especially for him the next day.

At five o'clock in the morning Rosenthal, clad only in his pajamas, came scurrying excitedly down stairs and into the office, where the drowsy night clerk was nodding at the desk.

In any medical compound as much depends upon the manner in which it is compounded as upon the ingredients used.

First, there must be a due proportion of the ingredients. Each drug in the pharmacopeia has its special action. To combine any drug with other drugs that have slightly different action, the combination must be made with strict reference to the use for which the compound is intended. The drugs may be well selected as to their efficacy, but the compound ENTIRELY SPOILED BY THE PROPORTION in which they are combined.

It takes years and years of experience to discover this proportion. There is no law of chemistry, of pharmacy, by which the exact balance of proportion can be determined. EXPERIENCE IS THE ONLY GUIDE.

In compounding a catarrh remedy Dr. Hartman has had many years' experience. In the use of the various ingredients which compose the catarrh remedy, Peruna, he has loarned, little by little, how to harmonize the action of each ingredient, how to combine them into a stable compound, how to arrange them into such nice proportions as to blend the taste, the operation and the chemical peculiarities of each several ingredient in order to produce a pharmaceutical product beyond the criticism of doctors, pharmacists or chemists.

WE REPEAT, THAT AS MUCH DEPENDS ON THE WAY IN WHICH THE DRUGS ARE COMBINED AS DEPENDS UPON THE DRUGS THEM-

The compound must present a stability which is not affected by changes of temperature, not affected by exposure to the air, not affected by age. It must be so combined that it will remain just the same whether used in the logging or mining camps of the northwest or the coffee plantations of the tropics.

A complete list of the ingredients of Peruna would not enable any druggist or physician to reproduce Peruna. It is the skill and sagacity by which these ingredients are brought together that give Peruna much of its peculiar claims as an efficacious catarrh remedy.

However much virtue each ingredient of Peruna may possess, the value of the compound depends largely upon the manner and proportion in which they are combined. The right ingredients, put together rightly, is the only way a medical compound can be made of real value.

Lavender Creighton's Lovers By OLIVIA B. STROHM

His words and manner, coming so soon after Lavender's confession, let in a flood of light on Winslow's brain. This, then, was the "somebody else." smile and reckless, debonair manner, she had "no right to love him." No right to love him-Winslow, to whom the day was more splendid, the night more blest because with tuem came thought and dreams of her!

The sudden suspicion made him stagger for a moment, and as if to add fuel to his pent-up rage, the Spantard commented further with a sidelong look in his direction. "It is, of course, a great joy that you are safeeven under the circumstances-but, well, the only trouble is, that our friend, the schoolmaster here, appears to think the end justifies the means, and naturally, an indignant brother would not agree with him."

With fury which jealousy, alone, could have kindled in him to so white a heat, Winslow turned to the crowd, and called in a loud voice: "One moment-let me have your attention,

Most of the party had dismounted, and now stood in groups idly amused, and only slightly interested in the proceedings. There were murmurs of assent, and the burly Tobias Judson, who had used Winslow to start with them from the tavern, came good-naturedly forward. "Thet you did, Pardner, and ef we hadn't a ben so d-d smart, we'd a-known ye was goin'."

Two or three others limped along, groaning, between their companions. Confusion followed, and in the excitement, one fact alone was clear. The relief party, with Rev. Luke at its head, had come, without warning, upon the besiegers and routed them after a sharp fight. To each man, in his version of the fray, Boone lent ears willing, yet tingling with discontent that he could know of it but as a tale rehearsed.

"I thank you all from the bottom of thisoldheart," he said. "My heart, which leaps yet at thought of this night's danger. 'Tis the worst of old age that we must let others do for us; that others must risk their lives for ours -ours, that are not worth the trouble," he ended, bitterly.

He moved to the litter that had been placed near a new-built fire. The sufferer's head was swathed in a rude bandage, but as Boone approached, the eyes opened-eyes large, glittering and dark as the night which, for them, no more could star nor fire make bright.

One of those who bent above him rose and said aside to Boone: "He hain't long to linger. He was shot by one o' the red spawn o' hell, and it's odds of he rallies enough to curse

Lavender placed a large basket on the ground, and waved her big hat across her face, rosy from brow to chin with the midday heat.

"It was very warm on the road, but how cool and nice under this trellis." She picked a blossom of the cucumber vine that grew above, and the stir of leaves brought a feathery shower about her, all fragrant green and white.

"Yes'm, it's real nice. Mr. Winslow fixed the vines so's it would be shady."

"It was good of him to take the trouble." Then, looking directly into the octoroon's eyes, Lavender went on: "It was about Mr. Winslow that I wanted to speak to you to-day."

The quick smile, the evident pleasure in her listener's every feature, was reward enough for the condescension. 'About him? About Mr. Winslow?"
