CARD OF THANKS
 The kindness and sympathy of neighbors and friends in our recent sorrow will always be remembered. May God bless each of you.—The family of Gertrude Davis.

Prepared by American Foundation for Animal Health
 Mastitis still is one of the major "headaches" of the dairy farmer, but it is well to remember that there are ways in which losses can be reduced.
 One of the factors which make mastitis such a complex problem is that there are many predisposing conditions. They include barnyard litter, hitting stumps, barnyard machinery or high door sills with the udder, improperly regulated milking machines, dirty milking equipment, leaving milking machines on too long, improper cleansing of the udder prior to milking, and many others. These conditions can set the stage for the invasion of the udder by any one of the various mastitis-causing organisms.

Mastitis is one of the major causes of lost production in many dairy herds.
 A key question before attempting to treat a case of mastitis and clear it up is to determine which drug or drugs will destroy the organism or organisms involved. Once this has been determined, proper treatment can be started. But until the most effective drugs have been determined, there is danger of using an incorrect treatment. That is why diagnosis by a veterinarian is important at the outset. And while treatment of mastitis usually requires some days, it is a good plan to have the veterinarian supervise the whole course and determine when the infection is completely eliminated.
 The attack on mastitis should also include isolation from the milking string of all known or suspected mastitis cows, and a persistent follow-up to make sure the infection is eliminated.
 In the case of some treatments for mastitis, it is necessary to withhold milk from the market for a specified period. Farmers should check with the veterinarian on this point.
 A vigorous preventive program can also pay handsome dividends when dealing with this disease.

Don't Outlaw Guns... Crack Down on Outlaws!

In the light of the rash of ill-advised and highly restrictive anti-gun laws being proposed throughout the country, I feel I must once again state my position, as firmly as possible. I do not believe that anti-firearms legislation is the solution to eliminating or even reducing crimes of violence, and most responsible police officers and crime experts agree with me.

Certainly no reasonable person opposes regulations concerning the carrying of concealed weapons, or the prohibition of sales of firearms to criminals, mental incompetents and the like. But why should a peaceable, law-abiding hunter, collector or target shooter be oppressed by the same harsh restrictions? New York's Sullivan Law proves my point. There is no evidence whatever that it has prevented criminals from obtaining guns. On the contrary, many experts claim the law encourages crime; a burglar in New York can break into almost any home in the city with the virtual certainty that the homeowner will have no firearm with which to defend himself!

Guns don't commit crimes; people do. Let's not outlaw guns—let's punish the persons who misuse them!

Summer weather often brings eye problems to cattle—problems which may mean the difference between a profit and a loss under today's narrow margins.

One of the most serious eye problems is pinkeye, a disease which may sweep through half a herd in a short time. When it does, the result may be heavy dollar losses, from a drop in milk production of as much as 25 percent, or a shrink in weight.

Although all breeds and ages of cattle may be affected and pinkeye may occur at other times of the year, the disease most often comes during the summer and white-faced cattle seem to be most susceptible.

Once pinkeye appears in a herd, it may spread rapidly by such means as direct head contact, tail switching or by flies, especially face flies.

Frequently pinkeye is confused with allergy, eye injury, a foreign object in the eye, faulty nutrition or the early stages of some infectious disease such as pasteurellosis, malignant catarrhal fever and infectious bovine rhinotracheitis.

Tail switching is a common method of transmitting pinkeye from animal to animal.

This emphasizes the importance of calling a veterinarian to make a diagnosis whenever eye symptoms are first noticed. Promptness in this is also important because the sooner treatment is started, the better the chances for keeping losses at a minimum.

Pinkeye occurs in two forms, acute and chronic. The acute form is the most common and it is characterized by sudden appearance, watering of the eyes and a white or gray spot on the cornea. If the stricken animals are not given prompt and proper treatment, the chronic form may develop that can mean extensive eye damage, blindness or even death.

Alertness for signs of pinkeye, and immediate action if the disease gains a foothold in a herd, will pay big dividends for farmers this summer.
