

IN THE WORLD OF SPORTS

ONLY FOUR VETERANS SURVIVE VANISHING RACE OF SPITBALL ARTISTS—BIG LEAGUES WILL BE TOTALLY "DRY" BY 1940, MARTIN PREDICTS

BY PHILIP MARTIN

"What is a spitball?"
The youth who accompanies his sire to a ball game in 1940 may query the old man on that subject. There was a time—many years ago—when a pitcher who didn't know how to spit on the apple or roughen its sides with emery couldn't get to first base, literally speaking. It's different today. There are just four moundsmen in the big leagues now who draw salaries for the tricks they can make a baseball do by spitting on it, or by making a batter believe that they spat on it. Baseball heads determined that freak deliveries must go back in 1920.

Seventeen athletes at that time were famous as hurlers of the saliva ball. The new rule, while banning freak deliveries, gave them permission to retain use of that particular pitching trick. It was nice of the baseball heads to do that, else some of the athletes might now be mowing spacious lawns and trimming shrubbery around country homes.

Of a group that once was legion, only Jack Quinn of the Athletics, Burleigh Grimes of the Pirates, Red Faber of the White Sox and Clarence Mitchell of the Cardinals are left. Quinn and Faber do their stuff before American League batters while Grimes and Mitchell still try to baffle sluggers in the National League. Ten years ago, when the ban was put on, the National League had eight spitball pitchers and the American had nine.

Though Grimes today ranks as one of the best hurlers in the National League, he is 36 years old and probably won't be seen atop the pitching mound more than five years longer. Quinn at 44 and Mitchell at 39 are almost through, neither being conceded a chance of lasting more than another season or two. Old Red Faber, though he is 41, may last as long as Grimes—but I doubt it.

Faber has seen the most continuous service in the majors. Starting 16 seasons ago with the White Sox, he pitched 20 or more victories in four or those years. Grimes and Mitchell went up 14 years ago, the former winning 20 or more games five times in his career. Mitchell

Quinn, whose real name is John Quinn Picus and whose exact age doubtless is more than 44, although record books agree on that figure, opened his first American League seize in 1909. A few years later he drifted out of the picture, only to come back for another try in 1918. Quinn has worked for four American League teams in his last 12 campaigns.

Hall Reviews History Of Texas Independence

A study of the Texas Declaration of Independence, reviewed by Claude V. Hall, former Floydada resident and founder of The Hesperian, who is now Professor of History in East Texas State College, offers some very interesting sidelights on the convention that was held, together with some facts concerning the declaration itself and the men who framed it. The review given by him was made before the Rotary Club at Commerce, where the College is located and is reported by the Commerce Daily Journal under date of March 10, as follows:

In the outset Prof. Hall departed from the usual address by discussing the personnel of the delegates who were sent to Washington on the Brazos on March 1, 1836, and who adopted on the day following the Texas Declaration of Independence. Of the fifty-eight who signed the Declaration there were twenty-six for whom Texas Counties were afterward named; and twenty-six served in that Congress of the Republic of Texas, eight senators and eighteen representatives. One was afterwards president of the Republic and governor of the State, Sam Houston. Two were United States senators from Texas, Houston and Rush and one was vice-president "ad interim" of the Republic. Another, James Collingsworth was the first Supreme Justice of the Republic.

Attention to the errors of history regarding the delegates to the Convention was mentioned. There have been reports to the effect that Ira Ingram was a signer of the Declaration of Independence, but his name does not appear among the signers of the original instrument. Some accounts omit the name of Samuel P. Carson as a signer, but the original shows his name as a signer. Asa Mitchell was said to be a signer but proof of the statement is wholly lacking.

The delegates to the Convention are "clothed with ample, unlimited, or plenary powers as to the form of government to be adopted, and that no constitution should go into effect until the same be submitted to the people, and concurred by a majority thereof."

Thirteen of the delegates were present—Sam Houston, Thomas J. Rusk, Charles S. Taylor, Robert Turner, William Menefee, Samuel A. Maverick, Bailey Hardeman, David Neff, James Collingsworth, Albert H. Latimer, Samuel P. Carson, John Turner, and George C. Childers, the author of the Declaration of Independence for Texas. Five physicians—William Motley, John H. Everett, Thomas H. Key, Benjamin Briggs Goodrick, Lorenzo de Zavala. The only member of the Gospel in the convention was William Carroll Crawford.

Two of the delegates were born. They were Jose Anand Francisca Ruiz, Mexicans by nationality, but uncompromising supporters of separation from Mexico authority. Five were born outside of the United States and Texas: namely, Charles S. Taylor, born in London, England; James Power, a native of Ireland; Michael B. Menard, a Canadian by birth; Robert Hamilton, a Scotchman with the characteristics of his race; and Lorenzo de Zavala, who was born in Spain, reared in Yucatan, and educated in Europe. The remaining fifty-one were born in the United States.

George C. Childers was more than a lawyer of marked ability; he was perhaps the most profoundly learned in the science of government in the group at Old Washington. He was born in Nashville, Tennessee, and when he came to Texas he located at Nashville on the Brazos. He was sent to Washington by the president "ad interim," David G. Burnett, to represent Texas as a special envoy. His health had been wretched for many years, and he finally became despondent. His life in 1840, at the age of thirty-six, was ended by his own hand.

In many respects Lorenzo de Zavala was a most remarkable man. He was a scholar of widely linguistic attainment. His interests and activities were many, and he was eminently successful in whatever he undertook. His wife was highly cultured, their home life approaching the ideal. As minister of Mexico to Spain at the outbreak of the Texas Revolution, De Zavala tendered his resignation to Santa Anna when he overthrew the Mexican Constitution of 1824. His letter of resignation was a scathing rebuke to the course of the self-imposed dictator. The De Zavala family adored Texas as a home, which was near the River and Bay of San Jacinto. This home was tendered Houston's army as a hospital for the sick and wounded of the battle of San Jacinto.

When Henry Smith was made governor of the provisional government of Texas, there were eighteen municipalities, and before the Convention at Old Washington five more municipalities were created, Red River district being one among them. Red River was represented at Old Washington by Richard Ellis, Robert Hamilton, Albert H. Latimer, and Colli McKinney. At that time Red River district was quite extensive and indefinite in its boundaries. From 1826 until 1811 it was not known definitely whether that section was in Texas or Arkansas. While Red River district had a senator and three representatives in Congress of the Republic of Texas the same region had representatives in the legislature of Arkansas from what was supposed might be Miller County, Arkansas.

Richard Ellis was president of the Convention at Old Washington. He was afterwards a senator in the Congress of the Republic of Texas. His name was balloted on for Chief Justice of the Supreme Court of the Republic by the Congress, but he was defeated by James Collingsworth. He owned a large plantation in what is now Bowie County.

Albert H. Latimer was a lawyer of no mean ability. He was a man of independent views. Like Houston and Throckmorton, he opposed the secession of Texas from the Union. He contended that war would be inevitable. He incurred much criticism for his course. He was one of the framers of the Texas State Constitution of 1866, which was set aside by the Reconstruction government of Texas.

Robert Hamilton was appointed by Houston as the first Chief Justice of Red River County. Colli McKinney served Red River County in the Congress of the Republic of Texas.

As a whole the delegates at the Convention of Old Washington were men of ability, property and courage, plantation operators predominating over other occupations. A comparison of the Declaration of Independence for Texas with the Declaration of Independence for the United States was made. The critical and meticulous historian in giving the Declaration for the United States a close analysis might be inclined to the view that some of its statements were prejudiced and exaggerated. The Texas Declaration of Independence would not justify such a criticism. Besides, this instrument is a masterpiece of elegant diction. The speaker declared that if he were a teacher of English he would have the constitution of the United States and the Texas Declaration of Independence studied as models of caste on English and choice literature.

Crop rotation is both a preventive and a control measure for plant diseases that are caused by nemas or nematodes. If a nemic disease contaminates a soil, through infested seed, nursery stock, implements, or the like, crop rotation will prevent or at any rate hinder its establishment. If the pest is already established, crop rotation is one of the best means by which soil can be cleaned. It is absolutely necessary to keep out the weeds if good results are to be expected through crop rotation.

Many dairy cows are undersized and low producing because they did not get enough of the right kind of feed when they were young and growing. After a heifer has freshened and is producing milk it is difficult for her to make up for growth lost through poor feeding when young.

Appearances are often deceiving and a rank growth of soft pasture grass may seem to be good feed for sheep when it is not. The sheep raiser should judge the condition of his flock by feeling of the bone of the loin or back of the sheep. Ewes in lamb, especially, should be kept gaining steadily throughout the fall and winter. In open wet falls there is danger of waiting too long to start feeding.

For Governor

Dallas, March 24.—Declaring that he was a life-long Democrat, Jim Young, Kaufman attorney and former Congressman, launched his campaign in a radio speech here at a state-wide rally of his friends. Mr. Young based his campaign on a program of tax reduction.

Mr. Young contended that the farms of Texas have decreased in value and productivity, though through an antiquated system the small land owners were bearing more than their share of the burdens of the state expenses. He proposed to equalize the tax burdens by reducing the farm taxes and levying toll on the natural resources of the state, such as oil, gas, sulphur and other minerals.

"The farmer and the ranchman has been a stabilizing influence in our community life and the support and mainstay of our system of government," he declared, "I advocate that the burden of taxes be made lighter on the farmer and the small land owner. It should be placed on those who have become rich in our natural resources of oil, gas and other minerals."

Mr. Young argued that expenses of government must be curtailed and the places of waste found and abolished. Mr. Young said that he did not mean, however, that the large corporations should be unjustly taxed.

Mr. Young went on record as opposed to a statewide bond issue for road building or for any other purpose. He declared that it was his opinion that the present funds were all that the highway commission could judiciously expend for highway construction.

Sunday School Lesson

THE LESSONS IN REVIEW

The International Uniform Sunday School Lesson for March 30. Review of the Quarter's Lessons. Devotional reading: I John 3:1-7.

A review of the quarter's lessons suggests how quickly we have passed into this portion of the new year and how large and vast are the Christian interests that have entered into the twelve lessons of the quarter.

Commencing with the preparation for the coming of Jesus and his birth in Bethlehem, we have passed through the quiet years of Nazareth and have visited the scene of his early ministry as he began to preach his gospel of repentance and redemption.

We have seen not only the comprehensiveness of his program, but we have studied the depth and reality of his example and teaching in the standards of the kingdom which he came to proclaim and in the nature of the Christian life. We have found that life represented in the highlights of the beatitudes and in the deeply rooted encourage of that brotherly love which Christ suggested as the earthly counterpart of the perfection of the heavenly Father.

The Truth of Religion

It seems trite and commonplace to say that the Christian life is a life of blessedness and love, but in that trite and commonplace saying is expressed the sublime truth of the Christian religion; and until in larger measure those who name the name of Christ partake of and express in their lives the blessedness and love that the Master enjoins and that he comes to impart, it is folly to think of the most simple and elemental way of Christian living as trite or commonplace.

In this respect it is the old paths for which we must ask and the old paths which we must follow—the ways of simple honesty and kindness, of sympathy, forbearance, and love. We have seen how the Kingdom of God means essentially a putting of first things first, that the Kingdom of God is in reality the rule of God, and that hence that Kingdom has its rise in the heart—the only place where it could have its rise and where such rule could be vitally and truly expressed.

In the temperance lesson we have had enunciated the Golden Rule, and have seen some of the ways in which it may be applied in the modern world with its personal and social problems. From that we have passed to the meaning of Christianity as a power to meet human need in its manifestations of practical helpfulness and in its mission of social transformation.

We have seen how the purposes of Christianity depend upon Christian propagandism, upon going forth to preach and to teach and to apply the gospel in daily living with our fellowmen. We have seen how in that great Christian task even the lowliest and humblest may be closely associated with the Master and bound into the great fellowship of those who are striving to do his will and to establish his kingdom.

And from this we have passed more vitally to consider the contents of that message concerning Jesus which it is our privilege to proclaim and to live. We have found this, first of all, in the testimony of Jesus concerning himself. We have seen the uniqueness of his personality. The lessons, indeed, have centered in him as our chief lesson and example. But in him we have found, also, the exposition of teaching, or philosophy, of life, simple but none the less real and vital—a philosophy founded in the plain and common sense appreciation of true values, rather than in mere speculation and logic.

Miss Ruth Jenkins of Floydada was one of the party of Jarvis Hall girls, dormitory in Texas Christian University, who attended the opera "Lucia" in Dallas March 12. The group was chaperoned by one of the matrons of the school. They made the trip by bus.

Surginer On U. Of T. Student's Assembly

Local Boy Elected By Students As Representative From School of Business Administration.

Garner Surginer, Floydada student at the University of Texas, is another of the many Floyd County youths to attract wide interest in the colleges of this and neighboring states.

Surginer was elected to the Students' Assembly as a representative from the School of Business Administration in a recent election held on the campus of Texas University. The assembly is composed of students from the various departments of the school and constitutes a part of the student government system.

Surginer is serving this year as the senior manager of men's physical training at the University, where he is enrolled as a junior student in the School of Business Administration. Last year Surginer was appointed junior manager and in recognition for his excellent services he was promoted to the senior manager's position. He acts as one of the members of the student council on intramural athletics.

A position on the Students' Assembly carries with it a singular honor, viewed with envy by the students on the campus. Surginer is also a member of the Acacia fraternity at the U. of T.

“Local Investment—Try First at Home”

“Try First at Home” has become a national slogan. It was originated to counteract the very human tendency that “the grass across the way is greener”; it has become a national slogan because it has proved itself!

There is only one place in the world where you can spend your dollars AND SEE THEM WORK FOR YOU. Where you can have them return to you with big dividends. That is in your community. They are emblems of your civic loyalty and interest. They work for you by giving you a greater and more prosperous community—good city government, with law and order—improved schools and churches—better streets—and increased service and business facilities.

NOWHERE ELSE is the purchasing power of your dollar greater than in your own town!
 NOWHERE ELSE can the comforts, conveniences and necessities of life be secured at a lower cost!
 NOWHERE ELSE will your money buy for you the careful, personal service characterized by individual interest that is rendered you by your community!

What sense is there in sending these dollars out of town for the things you need, when your local business and professional men can supply these needs—yes, supply them with better quality and at a lower cost? They do not say “Keep your dollars here”—they merely say

TRY FIRST AT HOME

The glamour of “out-of-town” shopping fades for the man or woman who realizes that the dollar spent “out of town” never returns to benefit either them or the community in which they live.

The “out-of-town” dollar goes into the structure of some other community’s prosperity, depriving OUR community of just that much business energy and building force, and in no way making it possible for OUR OWN COMMUNITY INTERESTS TO INCREASE THE VALUE OF OUR SERVICE TO YOU!

TRY FIRST AT HOME—the “out-of-town” dollar is gone forever; the “home-spent” dollar returns to you in

READ THE FOOD LABEL SAYS U. S. SPECIALIST

"Read-the-Label" clubs could help greatly in bringing about the results intended by Federal pure food legislation, says W. R. M. Wharton, of the United States Department of Agriculture, who is chief of the eastern district for the Food, Drug, and Insecticide Administration. The Federal food and drugs act is strict in requiring that labels shall not mislead consumers as to the quantity, quality, or constituents of foods and drugs sold in containers. Consequently, a purchaser who reads the label carefully and intelligently can make sure that he or she—as most frequently happens—she is getting what she thinks she is paying for.

Suppose you ask for a bottle of Mayonnaise and your grocers offer a substitute labeled merely "Salad Dressing." Mayonnaise must contain not less than 50 per cent of edible vegetable oil and it must contain at least 78 per cent of a combination of this oil and egg yolk. Salad dressing may contain many ingredients less expensive than oil and egg yolk. These ingredients are not injurious to health, but if you pay the price of Mayonnaise and get a less valuable product you are not getting your money's worth. A pinched-in bottle of flavoring extract may look larger than a plane bottle. The label must show the actual amount of liquid in each bottle. Assuming equal quality in the two bottles, the label will tell which quantity is the better buy.
