Summer Weather Prevails; Wheat Harvest In County Opens With Rush

Best Quality In Years Grain Dealers Declare

Combines Pour Stream of Golden Harvest Into Waiting Elevators.

Wheat harvest in Floyd County opened this week with a tremendous rush, as summer temperatures opened up and the clouds cleared away, putting the last ripening touch to the grain and making the harvest for the past four days almost ideal.

Grade Is Excellent Although it had been impossible in the rush to obtain an idea of the protein content of the general run of the wheat this week, the test of the grain, since it has become dry enough to handle right, has been above sixty in every field and several loads have come to elevators in Floydada that have tested around 64 pounds to the bushel.

Last week a few fields in the dryer sections of the county were being harvested during mid-day and elevators were operating on moderate basis, but when the higher temperatures of this week hit Tuesday morning, the flood gates opened and trucks have been hauling day and night, with the result that elevator crews are working day and night, the railway tonnage figures have jumped accordingly.

The harvest in this immediate section is practically a week ahead of that in the counties lying immediately north to Amarillo.

At the present rate of harvesting the whole crop in this county is expected to be completed and in the bins or elevators before July 1. Several wheat growers already have finished their jobs and have started their plows turning the stubble.

On account of the low market for wheat as much of the crop as can be stored in bins is being kept off the market, according to reports from over the county.

Reports on yields indicate a fair crop in most instances, running from 10 bushels to a high of 27 bushels per acre in the section being served by Floydada elevators. In some fields the yield is running below 10 bushels. Most crops are yielding 12 to 15 bushels, these reports indicate.

Floyd County Fair To Be Held Again In 1930

Decision to hold the Floyd County fair again this year has been reached but definite dates have not been set by the board of directors of the Floydada Chamber of Commerce, sponsors of the event.

S. W. Ross, secretary, said this week in "Floydada," the official publication of the organization making its initial appearance this month, that: "As things look now the dates will be set very shortly or just as soon as we have had time to find out the exact dates of the other fairs around us but in all probability it will be held in September."

"We want all the suggestions you have to offer and hope that you will begin thinking now something about the plans for a better and bigger Floyd County Fair. We have had a good many inquiries lately from some of the rural communities about the plans for the annual fair and they have declared their intention of competing this year in the various divisions. Floyd County has the reputation of having one of the best fairs in all West Texas and we should strive to keep this reputation, it gets us much favorable publicity that we need and at the same time it is the means of offering the farmers an opportunity to see what their neighbors are doing and to encourage them in many of the things they have been trying to do. The agricultural possibilities in Floyd County have barely been scratched yet and we should offer every encouragement possible to the farmers in developing the possibilities that we have."

Club Women Ask More Interest By Citizens In Girls Camp - Fire

Committee Named to Further Aid Of Organization; Plan Summer Diversion.

Efforts to interest the general citizenship in the work of the Camp Fire organization are being brought to a focus this month by committees appointed at a meeting the first of the week to work out in addition a summer recreation program for the children.

For two or three years some twenty-five women of the study club have been sponsoring the work. At present there are four Camp Fire groups with a membership of approximately fifty girls but they are handicapped in this work because of the lack of local support.

A meeting was called Tuesday morning of this week by the women of the study clubs for the purpose of getting the organization on a more business basis if possible and to give the idea more publicity having in view the idea of trying to "sell" the organization to more of the citizens of Floydada. Those present at the meeting were Mrs. W. C. Grigsby, Mrs. Geo. A. Linder, Mrs. O. P. Rutledge, Mrs. Jack Folley, Claude Wingo, Dick O'Brien, Geo. Palmer, W. E. Patty and S. W. Ross.

To Move Equipment

A committee was appointed to meet with the City Council to work out plans for using the City Park as a play ground for the children through the summer months. The plan as suggested is to move the play ground equipment, donated by the Lions Club from the Andrews Ward school grounds to the park where each week a supervisor will be appointed to look after the children and to direct them in various forms of play. The committee appointed to confer with the council is Mrs. Geo. A. Linder, Mrs. W. C. Grigsby and Claude Wingo.

"The boys and girls of this community should be provided with suitable places for recreation of a wholesome nature; the Camp Fire Girls and Boy Scout organizations direct the boys and girls to useful living, character building and better citizenship; Floydada could do no greater service than to provide the young life of this community with suitable surroundings" one of the speakers at the meeting declared.

A committee has been appointed composed of the following members, R. E. Fry, Geo. A. Linder and S. W. Ross, to work out plans and to secure a suitable camp ground in the vicinity of Floydada for the use of all organizations such as Boy Scouts, Camp Fire Girls, 4-H Girls, service clubs, churches, schools and all other organizations to hold their encampments, picnics and other meetings.

It is believed if the matter is brought to the attention of the people a plan can be worked out that will provide a place where such meetings and gatherings can be held.

State Fire Department Looks Into Fires Here

Investigations of fires in Floydada, checking up on the possibility of incendiary origin, was made last week-end by R. E. Justice, assistant State Fire Marshal of Austin, who was here and took testimony relative to fires that have occurred recently.

The department representative did not divulge for publication the fires that were being investigated nor the decisions reached by himself following the taking of testimony and a study of the scenes of the fires.

While here the assistant state fire marshal made known that in some cities of the state the ratio of fire losses has jumped alarmingly during the period since January 1, and insurance companies are seriously considering withdrawing from some cities and towns of the state where the losses are so high as to indicate a wave of incendiaryism.

Preliminary Report Of Census Gives 12,409 Population Floyd Co.

County Shows Gain of 2,651 in Decade; Number of Farms Also Increase.

Floyd County's population, as given out by Owen M. Unger, District Supervisor of the Census Monday, is 12,409, which is an increase of 2,651 over the population in 1920 when the figures were 9,758.

At the same time the census supervisor made public the figures on the number of farms in the county, putting the total at 1,670. This figure is 185 greater than in 1925, when the number of farms tabulated in the agricultural census was 1,485, according to the official figures of the Bureau of the Census.

Figures for one precinct in the county were released. This is Justice Precinct Number 2, including the City of Lockney where the total is 3,994 compared with 3,574 on January 1, 1920.

The special feature of the census showing the number of persons out of employment as of April 1, put the figures of the total number of people usually working at a gainful occupation reported as without a job at 191 in the whole county.

The reports given out were received generally without comment in Floydada. Figures for the county population are regarded as distinctly disappointing, as were the figures for the city of Floydada.

Lubbock Judge To Hear Injunction Plea Here

Restraining Order Asked on Construction of Center School On Old Site.

Homer L. Pharr, Judge of the Seventy-First Judicial District, of Lubbock, will conduct the hearing of a case in Floydada Saturday determining whether or not a temporary injunction granted by him against the contractor and the trustees of Center School District last Friday shall be made permanent against the construction of a school building for Center District at approximately the same site as the frame school house of the district now being discarded.

The temporary injunction was granted by the Lubbock judge following the announcement of the disqualification of Judge Kenneth Bain to hear the restraining plea. T. M. Noland and W. A. Huckabee are named in the pleadings as plaintiff in the case. L. B. Maxey is the contractor on the building job for the district, and T. J. Gill, W. B. Jordan and Arthur A. Tubbs are the trustees of Center District, named in the suit.

The restraining order, if granted, would enjoin the contractor and the trustees from proceeding further with the construction of the new school building on the present site at which work has been begun. Plaintiffs allege the building should be constructed nearer the geographical center of the district. Maxey was given the building contract recently and had started excavating for the foundation, when the restraining order was issued.

C. of C. To Aid in Staging Baby Beef Feeding Contest

Encouragement to the boys of the county in the feeding of baby beefs is planned by local citizens working with the Chamber of Commerce and O. T. Williams, vocational Agricultural teacher of Floydada High School.

Plans suggested for a contest among the boys were enthusiastically endorsed and details outlined for the event.

A committee composed of George Linder, Judge L. C. Penry, and W. C. Hanna was appointed to work with Mr. Williams and his Vocational Agricultural Classes in feeding out two cars of baby beefs.

To stimulate the boys in this undertaking, they recommended the following prizes to be offered: First prize—Trip to Fort Worth Stock Show. Second prize—$15.00. Third prize—$10.00. Judging will take place some time in March, prior to the shipping of the calves to Fort Worth.

The winners will be determined by the following method: Best calf in the ring—100 points. Calf showing the greatest gain—100 points. Boy making the greatest profit—100 points. Best set of plans and story—100 points. Total—400 points.

Mr. Williams states that the boys will enter their calves in the Fort Worth Livestock Show next spring competing for prizes in both individual and car load lots.

The Second year Vocational Agricultural class has taken thirty four calves, and the first year class of next year is expected to take as many.

The purpose of this is to prove that it is better to market the feed on foot.

Representatives Of 10 Counties Are Expected

Would Popularize Route For Inter-State Tourist Travel.

Representatives of nine counties and cities in Texas and one in New Mexico have been invited to a meeting in Floydada tomorrow afternoon at 2 o'clock to discuss ways and means of creating greater interest in and more popularity for Highway No. 70 through Texas as a route of travel for inter-state traffic.

Big Travel Possibilities The meeting here is the result of a conference between local Chamber of Commerce representatives and representatives of the Plainview Chamber of Commerce, who point out that the travel possibilities of the route are immense, not only for intra-state but inter-state motor traffic, which during the past few years has been allowed to dwindle through lack of advertising. The route at one time was the most popular one for east and west travel through this section of the state.

Invitations have been sent out to representatives of Wichita Falls, Vernon and Wilbarger County, Crowell and Foard County, Paducah and Cottle County, Matador and Mobley County, Plainview and Hale County, Olton and Lamb County, Muleshoe, Farwell, Clovis and Curry County, New Mexico.

In forwarding invitations S. W. Ross, secretary of the Floydada Chamber of Commerce, declared: "It is evident that an organization can be of much benefit and as your city and county is on this important highway, we feel sure that you are interested in seeing this highway better developed and improved the entire distance across the section which it traverses."

"Representatives are being invited from each city and county along the route of U. S. Highway No. 70 and we hope that your city will have a large delegation at this meeting, representing your Chamber of Commerce, your good roads committee, County Judge, County Commissioners and as many other interested citizens from your section as you can possibly get to come."

Trans-Continental Route An impressive recitation of the importance of the route in the records of the state and national highway departments is made by Maury Hopkins, secretary of the Plainview Chamber of Commerce, in a letter seconding the invitation of the local organization for the meeting here tomorrow. In the letter to cities on the route he points out: "Your community is served by one of the main transcontinental highways of America—United States Highway No. 70—which extends through Texas from Farwell east to Wichita Falls, and across the State line at that point into Oklahoma. This road has been known by many names. A good many years ago from Farwell to Crowell it was part of the famous PFF highway. It is known as Highway 23, in part, from Muleshoe to Vernon in Texas Highway Commission records. The segment from Farwell to Vernon has been part of the well known Lee Highway which traverses the continent. On November 11, 1926, the American Association of State Highway officials adopted the road as described above from Wichita Falls to Farwell as part of Highway 70, and part of the United States system of highways. The numeral seventy is applied to the highway from Beaufort on the Atlantic coast in North Carolina, through Knoxville, Nashville and Memphis, Tennessee, Little Rock, Arkansas, Durant, Oklahoma, Wichita Falls, Plainview, your city and other Texas cities, Clovis and Socorro, New Mexico, and on to connect with Highway 66 at Holbrook, Arizona, where the road follows Highway 66 into Nos. 101 and 99 at Los Angeles, California. It is a very important road in the opinion of the United States Department of Agriculture. We are reciting these facts for your information to impress upon you the importance of the road."

"We are immensely interested in the Texas segment of this road, and we believe you are. We are anxious to see it a connected paved road across this State and rapid progress is being made in paving it. From Wichita Falls north to the Texas line, of course has been paved a number of years. From Vernon to Crowell, the paving was opened last month with appropriate ceremonies (Continued on back page—this sec.)

Rotarians, Ahead in Sixth, Grab Ball And Walk Off With Win of H. D. Benefit Game

Case of Brain Against Brawn Wednesday Afternoon at Floydada Baseball Park.

It was a case of brain against brawn in the "world's series" benefit baseball game between the Lions and the Rotarians Wednesday afternoon, the proceeds of which were given to the Council of the Women's Home Demonstration Clubs for use in sending contest winners to the annual A. & M. Short Course at College Station this summer. Brains won. The Rotarians got ahead in the sixth, picked up the ball and walked off with the long end of the score. It was the first time they had taken the lead.

The final score was 10 to 9. All the ballplayers paid as well as played, none being permitted to put their regalia until they had deposited the entrance fee, and although the Home Demonstration Clubs realized little from the game, the contenders for honors had as much fun as if the ball park had been packed with fans.

With Glad Snodgrass in the umpire's box for the first two innings the Lions were running away with the game. After R. B. Wakefield took up the arbiter's duties in the third the Rotarians staged a six-run rally that tied the game up and finally nosed out winners in the sixth, an extra-inning of a scheduled five-inning game, they claimed. Both umpires were good but Wakefield, a Rotarian, was the best—and his side won.

"The boys co-operated with me wonderfully," he commented modestly after the game. "They had to hit the ball of course, before I could call them safe."

The Lions, in play after play, flashed the old-style game of their baseball days, Carl Minor getting a perfect day at second base with several hard chances and never a bobble. Roy Snodgrass and R. A. Garrett for the Rotarians and R. R. Cloud and J. A. Arwine for the Lions were the other outstanding defensive players. Arwine had a bad day at the bat, however.

Lions Club line-up in batting order: Rutledge, ss; Minor, 2b; Cloud, 3b; Jones, p; Wester, c; Arwine, 1b; Stegall, m; Bass, lf; Gilliam, rf; Rotary Club: Garrett, 2b; Moore, ss; O'Brien, 1b; Snodgrass, 3b; Hale m; Sone, p; Linder, lf; McGuire, c.

Score by innings: Lions, 303 300-9. Rotary, 006 031-10.

A. J. Folley was official score-keeper for the game.

The only casualties of the game and the work outs which preceded it were R. B. Wakefield and Robt. McGuire. Wakefield stuck his finger in a fast one in a workout Saturday afternoon and could not be in the line-up. McGuire stooped for a low one behind the bat in the third inning and strained his trousers too severely. The game was held up while he backed out of the gate and went after a change.

Fire Boys Challenge It was the first time the Rotary boys had won anything from anybody since the club's organization, and they were happy about it. Issue of a challenge to the club by the boys of the Floydada Fire Department was announced early this morning. G. R. Strickland, speaking for the department, asked that the game be played next Wednesday beginning at 5 o'clock. The challenge was accepted for a five-inning game, proceeds to go to the H. D. Women's Council funds.

The Mazaroff Mystery

by J.S. Fletcher

W.V.U. SERVICE Copyright by Alfred A. Knopf, Inc. Illustrations by Irwin Myers

SYNOPSIS

CHAPTER I—Mervyn Holt, bachelor World War veteran, is engaged, in London, by a man calling himself Salim Mazaroff, as a traveling companion. After a short tour the two put up at the Woodcock inn, on Marrasdale moor. They meet, casually, Mrs. Elphinstone and Miss Merchison, and later, Mazaroff informs Holt that they are his wife and daughter, who have long believed him dead. Mazaroff's right name, he tells Holt, is Merchison. He had left his wife shortly after their marriage before she shot the girl, of whose existence he had been unaware. That night Mazaroff falls to return to the hotel, and there is no explanation of his disappearance.

CHAPTER II—Holt meets Miss Merchison—Sheila—and with her goes to her cousin's (Verner Courthouse) shooting box, hoping to learn of Mazaroff's whereabouts. At Courthouse's is a man named Armintrade and a London doctor, Eccleshare. They know nothing of Mazaroff. Police Sergeant Manners and a newspaper man, Downes, question Holt. Mazaroff's body is found in "Reliance" dead. He has been shot. The dead man's lawyer, Crole, with Maythorne, private inquiry agent, arrives Crole having heard of his client's disappearance. He tells Holt Mazaroff carried diamonds worth a large sum, and was in the habit of making a display of them cautiously. Neither the diamonds, nor anything of value, are found on Mazaroff's body.

CHAPTER III—Mrs. Elphinstone scoffs at the idea that "Mazaroff" is Merchison, and produces apparent proofs of his death. Maythorne finds something at the scene of the murder, and pockets it. A gun found near the spot is identified as the property of Musgrave, landlord of the Woodcock inn. It had been stolen from him.

CHAPTER IV—Evidence at the inquest proves "Mazaroff" was Merchison. He will make a few days before his death. He had a large amount of money, an immense amount, to Holt. Mazaroff had the will in his possession, and it is missing. A shiftless character named Parslave is found to have left Marrasdale moor hurriedly. From Mazaroff's papers it is learned that Herman Kloop, then in London, has been a close friend of Mazaroff's in South Africa.

CHAPTER V—Kloop tells Crole "Mazaroff" had two remarkable diamonds in his possession. It is learned that he had offered to sell these to Lord and Lady Locke. Lord Locke says that Herman Kloop, then in London, has been a close friend of Mazaroff's in South Africa.

CHAPTER VI—The girl has Merchison's "stolen" will, which she has "stolen" from her mother. Her explanation seems to link Mrs. Elphinstone with the murder. Maythorne produces the "stolen" will, which she had found at the scene of the murder. Sheila does not recognize it.

CHAPTER VII

The Missing Man.

I was back at Ashington mansions soon after nine o'clock on the following morning, and by half past Sheila and I were walking down Edgware road on our way to Maythorne's office. Amidst the crowded London streets, we were alone in a sense in which we could not have been alone in the solitudes of Marrasdale, and the sensation was as novel as it was delightful. Yet I knew it could not last, and we had not been walking far when Sheila voiced exactly what I was feeling.

"Mervyn—I'll have to go back, you know," she said. "I've done what I came for, given you the will—and now I'll have to go home—soon, anyway—and face the music. Of course, my mother has guessed long since what's happened. And—there'll be a nice row! I shall have the liveliest quarter of an hour I ever had in my life. And I shall only have one retort to make—not a nice one to make to one's own mother—and that's to ask her what she was doing with that will and how she got it? And, if I know her, she won't say."

"There may be developments before it comes to that," I remarked. "The fact is, we none of us know where we are. I don't, anyhow! I feel as if I didn't know what on earth's going to turn up next."

"Anything may," said Sheila. "I suppose the thing is, in these cases, to be ready for anything and surprised at nothing."

And at that very moment a surprise was within touching distance of us. Suddenly Sheila stopped dead and clutched my arm; turning sharply on her, I saw that she was staring as if fascinated at the open door of a tobacconist's shop, a few yards ahead of us.

"Mervyn!" she whispered. "Parslave! Gone in there!"

"Parslave!" I exclaimed. "The man missing from Marrasdale? Impossible!"

"I tell you Parslave has just gone into that shop—the tobacco shop! Parslave is in that shop! Come back!"

within its shelter; I half-hidden, kept an eye on the tobacconist's door. And presently out came a tall, wiry fellow, obviously a countryman, bronzed in cheek and neck; he turned along the pavement, away from us.

Sheila came out of the doorway and glanced down the street.

"That's Parslave!" she said. "But I knew it was. What next?"

"We must follow him," I answered. "No matter where he goes, I'm going to track him. Look here!—I'll keep a little way behind him; you keep a little behind me."

So we began our chase of this man who had disappeared from Birnsdale on the night of Mazaroff's murder, and for whom the police had already instituted a hue-and-cry.

Parslave went slowly away in front, and just as slowly Sheila sauntered after me in the rear. He was an easy man to follow, and it needed little watchfulness of my part to see that he had not the ghost of an idea that he was being followed.

He turned to his right sharply, into Praed street, crossed the roadway, and a little further along the other side, turned again. Sauntering after him, at a considerable distance, I saw him enter the side door of a house—a rather bigger, more pretentious house than those that flanked it. Then he disappeared. I hastened my steps, walked swiftly past the house he had entered, and on the side door, on a dirty, uncleaned brass plate read, to my utter amazement:

"Dr. Eccleshare
Surgery Hours 9:30 to 11 a. m. 7 to 8:30 p. m."

I turned back to the top of the street, where Sheila was already hanging about.

"Got him?" she asked.

I touched her arm with one hand, pointing with the other to the house at the further end of the street.

"You see that house down there?—the one that stands out from the rest?"

"I see it."

"That's Eccleshare's! Eccleshare's, do you understand? Doctor Eccleshare. Eccleshare's—good Lord! And—Parslave's in there!"

The silence fell upon us. We stood, mutually questioning each other. Sheila spoke first.

"Eccleshare's house!—and Parslave in it? Then here's some devilry at work. Mervyn—what's to be done? Of course, I see how things are. Eccleshare sent Parslave here—to hide!"

But I had been thinking during that moment of silence—thinking fast.

"There's only one thing to be done," I said. "Look here—you do just what I tell you. Get a taxi-cab. Go straight to Maythorne's—103B Conduit street—got that?—and tell him exactly what's happened. Get him to come back here with you, and to bring his clerk, Cottingley. Meanwhile, I'll keep an eye on Parslave and that house. Now—hurry!"

She went off on the instant, without as much as a word, and I turned to watch the house, not fifty yards away. And I had not watched long before Parslave came out again, and came my way, too. He was carrying a rush basket, such as servants use when they go shopping. I sauntered after him (on the opposite side). He went to a grocer's shop; he bought potatoes and a couple of fine cauliflower. And, that little domestic mission fulfilled, he went leisurely back to Doctor Eccleshare's. I pictured him and some housekeeper woman in there—Parslave would doubtless be peeling the potatoes, like any tame family man, and exchanging pleasant talk with the female presiding genius—and yonder in the North-brian wilds, three hundred miles away, the police were wanting him on suspicion of murder!

I was laughing softly over this when a hand was laid on my arm. I looked sharply round—to see Maythorne's queer clerk, Cottingley. He jerked a thumb over his left shoulder, silently, and following the gesture I saw, a few yards away, Sheila, Maythorne, and a strange man, somebody or other got up for the part of the confirmed loafer, the type that just hangs about, and hangs about.

"Governor!" said Cottingley, as if introducing Maythorne. "Here."

I went up to Maythorne and Sheila, Cottingley at my heels. The loafer person made a slinking movement to the rear, and began to study the contents of a shop window. Maythorne gave me a glance that meant more things than I could realize.

"Now then, Holt," he said, plunging straight into business, "Miss Merchison's given us a description of this man Parslave—just you give us another, so that Cottingley and this other man of mine will know him to the last detail. Here—Johnson!"

The loafer individual slid close to us, like a shadow sifted by a moving light, and he kept his eyes on me without blinking while I rapidly but thoroughly detailed a description of Parslave.

Cottingley nodded at Maythorne, nudged the loafer, and they turned away, with seeming utter indifference. Sheila stared after them in obvious wonder.

Maythorne laughed and motioned us toward the end of Praed street.

"You two young people can go off duty now," he said. "Parslave is as safe as if we'd got him inside the jewel case at the Tower! Take my advice—go somewhere and have the day to yourselves. Leave all this to me—the only thing is that I want you, Holt, to look in at my office at six o'clock sharp this evening. Now—I'm off! Business!"

He was in the taxicab which he had kept waiting and was being driven away before we could say anything. We both looked at each other and laughed.

"That's good advice of Maythorne's, anyhow," I said. "Let's follow it. Let's go somewhere where we can talk about—"

"What?" she said as I hesitated. "Ourselves!" said I. "We've had enough of other people."

We had a delightful lunch in a delightful, old-fashioned inn; we spent the afternoon amongst the autumn-tinted lanes, and . . .

But that, after all, has nothing to do with this story, though it has all to do with Sheila and myself. At half past five I took her back to her friend's flat, and then went out to Conduit street and Maythorne. He immediately waved a telegram at me.

"Here you are, Holt," he said. "More developments. A wire from your man, Webster."

There was no great amount of wording in Webster's telegram, but such words as were there conveyed a good deal of highly important information. This is what Webster said:

"Courthouse, Armintrade, Eccleshare, Mr. and Mrs. Elphinstone all left here for Carlisle by eight o'clock train this morning."

I handed back the telegram without comment.

"Carlisle, of course, meant London," Maythorne said. "The scene of operation's shifted, Holt—we've got some of the chief actors close at hand."

"Mrs. Elphinstone, of course, has come after her daughter," I suggested.

"And the will," he answered. "Or to find out what her daughter's done with the will. Well—there are two men we'll have to have a pretty straight talk with tomorrow. We're going to have it out with Armintrade. After that we're going to interview Eccleshare—and Parslave, possibly with a little police assistance, if need be. But tonight you and I are going to see Mrs. Elphinstone. We know where she's to be found—and we'll go now and find her."

"Where?" I asked, wondering if he had some further information.

"Can you doubt," he answered, with a laugh. "She'll be found at Ashington mansions—where, I suppose, you've just left her daughter. I want to ask Mrs. Elphinstone a question or two. And I may as well tell you, Holt—she won't answer 'em! Tonight, at any rate."

"That I quite expect," said I. "Just so! But she'll answer 'em tomorrow—or next day—or the day after that," he said, with a significant glance. "The thing is, first, to put them to her."

We rode up to Malda Vale and got out of our cab some twenty or thirty yards short of Ashington mansions. Maythorne immediately nudged my elbow.

"What did I tell you?" he said. "They're here now!"

In front of the main entrance to the flats a taxicab stood. And within it sat a woman—a tall, angular, elderly woman, dressed in somewhat rusty black, who stared straight in front of her until attracted by our momentary halt and seeing our eyes turn in her direction, she gave us a quick side glance only to withdraw it sharply and to look ahead again, still more steadily. We passed on and entered the door.

"I've seen that woman before," remarked Maythorne, as we crossed the hall to the elevator. "At Marrasdale."

"So have I," I answered. "I saw her about the Woodcock—in fact, I took her for the cook. What can she be doing—here?"

"Mrs. Elphinstone will know," he said. "But—I shan't ask her that, now. Well—what's this Miss Apperley's number?" he went on, as we were whirled upwards. "Twenty-seven? Right! Now then, Holt—we walk straight in! We'll excuse ourselves to Miss Apperley afterward."

I did as he bade me. Without ceremony as much as a rap, I opened the door of Miss Apperley's sitting room, and Maythorne and I entered abreast. We plunged into the middle of things. An acrimonious debate was already at its full height. Sheila stood, indignant and defiant, by the center table. Mrs. Elphinstone was enthroned, obviously in a fine temper, in an elbow chair by the hearth. Mr. Elphinstone was perched on the edge of a chair in another corner, nursing the handle of his umbrella and apparently as uncomfortable as a nervous and peaceable man can be.

"—not one word, good mother, till you tell me how you came into possession of that will!" Sheila was saying with emphasis, as we strode in. "It's up to you to speak first—you're . . ."

She broke off there, or, rather, Maythorne broke things off for her. He strode forward and took the words out of Sheila's mouth.

"Your daughter's in the right, Mrs. Elphinstone," he said in cool, even accents. "It's up to you to give explanations. Now, come, Mrs. Elphinstone—how did you obtain possession of Mazaroff's will—which is now safe, let me tell you, safe—in Mr. Crole's strong room. Come?"

Mr. Elphinstone groaned—wearily. But Mrs. Elphinstone showed temper—and fight.

"How dare you speak to me—like that?" she demanded. "What right—"

"My dear lady!" interrupted Maythorne. "Be calm, and don't be foolish. Think a little. Here is a very wealthy man murdered under most suspicious circumstances. He had his will in his pocket, with other papers, and with valuables, and with money. He is not only murdered, but he is robbed of everything he had on him. Nothing can be discovered about his missing property. Then a few nights later, your daughter accidentally finds out that the will is in—your hands! What do you suppose the police authorities will say to that, Mrs. Elphinstone? I'm asking you."

Mrs. Elphinstone looked at him half-wonderingly, as thoroughly obstinate and slightly stupid people will look at a questioner; and did see quite well that she was wondering how he dared to be so plain-spoken and unceremonious.

Mr. Elphinstone groaned once more—audibly. "Most distressing!" he murmured. "Most—unpleasant. Really—I—I think, Marlon, that—you know—I—I were you—I—I think I should say—"

"Mrs. Elphinstone will have to say how she got it, and from whom," observed Maythorne. "That will be without doubt abstracted—stolen—from Mazaroff's pocket by the man who murdered him. And, Mrs. Elphinstone, it is later discovered in Mrs. Elphinstone's keeping. How came it there?"

Mrs. Elphinstone suddenly gathered up her wraps and her umbrella and rose from her chair.

"What right have you to ask me questions?" she demanded, facing Maythorne. "You're not a policeman, as far as I'm aware, and I don't know that you've any authority. I am going, and whoever wishes to see me will find me at Short's hotel. You'll find me there, Sheila—I shall not run after you again."

"That's a useful thing to know, Mrs. Elphinstone," said Maythorne, still perturbed. "You will no doubt be called upon at Short's. This is a matter of murder! And whether you like it or not, Mrs. Elphinstone—or, as it should be, Merchison—I am going to know who murdered Mazaroff. If you know, you're already an accessory after the crime."

Mrs. Elphinstone was at the door by this time, and her eyes were as hard as ever as she swept us all with a half contemptuous glance.

"Are you coming, Malcolm? As for you, Sheila, if you want me again, you'll have to come to me. Otherwise—"

She made a gesture which seemed to indicate that she washed her hands of her daughter and of everybody present, and without waiting for Mr. Elphinstone, she marched off down the corridor.

Mr. Elphinstone shook his head—wearily and despondently. He looked round at all of us as if he wanted to speak, but no words came, and he presently turned and went after his wife. Maythorne closed the door, and glanced at us.

"You may think I was too explicit—perhaps brutal—with Mrs. Elphinstone," he said, "but I don't believe any of you understand. Knowing what I do—and Crole, of course, knows it now—I cannot keep this information from the police! It's impossible! We know—the police know—that Mazaroff was robbed as well as murdered. That will was on him! How did Mrs. Elphinstone get it? She is shielding somebody. That's the truth! Now, then—who is it?" Then, without waiting for any reply or remark, he tapped my shoulder and set off. I lingered a moment to exchange a word or two with Sheila, and then followed him.

"You think that, Maythorne?" I asked as we paused at the door of the elevator.

"Of course!" he exclaimed. "Doesn't need half an eye nor an ounce of brain to be dead certain of that! She knows—knows! And, as I said in there—who is it? Here's one thing certain, Holt—if she won't speak, I'll have to tell the police. But between now and tomorrow she'll have time to reflect. And in the meantime—"

He broke off abruptly. We went down and into the street, and in silence walked quickly down Edgware road. I knew what he was after—Cottingley. And Cottingley, suddenly appeared before us in Praed street, as if he had shot out of the earth.

"He's come!" said Cottingley. "Alone. They're both in the house, now. All's arranged." Maythorne nodded; they whispered together a moment; then Maythorne and I turned away.

"Did he mean that Eccleshare had come?" I asked. "And that—they'll watch him?"

"Eccleshare, of course," answered Maythorne. "Who else? Watch him?—Aye, they'll watch both of 'em!"

I went back to my rooms thoroughly muddled in mind by the day's events. "Seemed hopeless to try to piece them together, and yet I could scarcely refrain from the attempt. And underneath everything lay an uncomfortable suspicion, which forced itself upon me how, ever much I fought against it, was Mrs. Elphinstone an accessory to Mazaroff's murder, and if so, after or . . . before? Out of all speculations one clear fact emerged—she had come into possession of that will, which, without doubt, was in Mazaroff's pocket when his murderer shot him.

We Were Shown Into Crole's Private Room at Once; There by Crole's Desk Sat Mr. Herman Kloop.

All this was still seething in my mind when I met Maythorne next morning, at Crole's office. We were shown into Crole's private room at once; there, by Crole's desk, sat Mr. Herman Kloop. He gave us a knowing look as we walked in, and Kloop nodded at him, as much as to say that whatever was to be said first was to come from the diamond merchant.

"News!" remarked Crole, laconically. "Another development!"

We sat down and turned on Kloop.

"I came round to Mr. Crole as soon as I had breakfasted—to tell him," he said. "Now I tell you. It is what I learned last night—late. From some of my friends in our trade. Mazaroff's pair of blue diamonds have been sold! They have been sold to a syndicate of three well-known dealers. A fancy price, too!" he added, with a chuckle.

"What price?" asked Maythorne. "It is said—and I dare say it's quite correct—two hundred thousand pounds," Kloop replied. "Of course—they're worth that—and more. Sufficiently more to give the buyers a nice big profit—when they sell. As—equally of course—they will."

"Well?" Maythorne asked. "But—who sold?"

Kloop laughed, glancing at Crole. "To be sure!" he replied. "A pertinent question! Armintrade sold. No concealment about that. Armintrade—the bank man."

"Armintrade only returned from the north last night," said Maythorne. "Where and how was this deal carried out?"

"Yes," answered Kloop. "I can tell something of that, but not precise details. I should say—by correspondence."

Maythorne looked at Crole; Crole shook his head.

"What concerns us," he remarked, "is the fact that Armintrade sold these things—Mazaroff's property. We know that Armintrade was in possession of what we'll call Blue Diamond Number One, and we also know that Mazaroff had Blue Diamond Number Two on him when he went north. So—Mazaroff must have met Armintrade and handed over to him the second diamond. They must have met—unknown to anyone—at Marrasdale."

Armintrade's name was openly, freely mentioned to you in connection with this?" he asked. "Was Mazaroff's name mentioned?"

"Oh, to be sure! As the source from which the diamonds came."

Maythorne got up from his chair and began to button his overcoat. "There's only one thing to be done," he said, glancing at Crole. "You and I and Holt must see Armintrade at once. We want an explanation. As far as I'm aware, those diamonds, since the moment of Mazaroff's death, have been the property of Mr. Holt here. Isn't that so, Crole?"

"Yes," answered Crole, laconically. "He got up from his desk, crossed over to a safe in the corner, and unlocked it, took from some inner receptacle an oblong envelope. 'Here's the will,' he said. 'I'll take it with me. But I think Armintrade will be found to be all right. By that I mean that he will have acted within his rights. How, I don't know. But—come along.'"

We parted from Kloop in the street outside; Crole, Maythorne, and I got into a taxicab and set off for Courthouse's bank. Maythorne seemed to be thinking hard. He looked up at last.

"It seems pretty clear—now!—that Mazaroff wasn't murdered for the sake of those diamonds," he muttered, as if somewhat dissatisfied at the new turn of affairs. "In that case—what was he murdered for?—what was the motive?"

"He'd other valuable property on him, you know," observed Crole. "And there are other people to question when we've done with Armintrade. Eccleshare, for instance, and that man Parslave."

We entered Courthouse's bank together and sent in our cards to Armintrade. He took small notice of Maythorne and myself; his attention gave itself to the solicitor.

"Well, Mr. Crole?" he began. "What can I do for you?"

"You can give us some much-needed information, Mr. Armintrade," replied Crole, promptly. "You are aware, of course, that, having acted as the late Mr. Mazaroff's solicitors here in London, I have employed Mr. Maythorne to inquire into the mystery of his murder. Now, we have ascertained from Mr. Herman Kloop of Cape Town, a close personal friend of Mazaroff's, now in London, that Mazaroff possessed two extremely valuable diamonds, one of which was in his possession when he went forth to Marrasdale, and the other of which had been in your keeping, as Mazaroff's agent, for some months. Kloop tells us that you have sold these two diamonds to a syndicate for two hundred thousand pounds. Is that correct?"

Armintrade, whose smile, sardonic and inscrutable, had never left his eyes, nodded. "Quite correct," he answered.

"Do you mind telling us all about it?" Crole asked. "I gather the whole thing is plain enough—when explained."

"Plain as a pikestaff," replied Armintrade, with a laugh. "I have acted as agent or intermediary, or whatever you like to call it, for Mr. Mazaroff for some time. Well, now, as regards these blue diamonds—great rarities. I have had the first in my hands for some time. The second he handed to me personally at Marrasdale the day after he arrived at the Woodcock."

"Ah—you met him there?"

"Certainly I met him there!"

"Well? And what happened?"

"We discussed the sale of the diamonds, and came to an arrangement."

"May I ask what it was?"

"Certainly! He gave me an option on them."

"Ah! I see! An option? Just so. You were to have them at a price?"

"Of course. But I'll show you the terms in Mazaroff's handwriting. He had brought me this, already written and signed—there you are!"

He produced a sheet of letter paper and handed it to Crole, who took and read it attentively. "I see!" he said, handing it back. "He gave you the option for one month of buying the diamonds for a hundred and seventy-five thousand pounds. And—you have taken it up. Then—what about the option money? Which, of course, should and would have been paid to Mazaroff."

"Exactly! The money is at the disposal of the late Salim Mazaroff's rightful heir or heirs, beneficiaries, residuary legatees, or whoever has a proper and legal right to it."

Crole pointed to me.

"Mr. Holt there is Mazaroff's residuary legatee," he said. "He comes in for—everything!"

Armintrade laughed, and gave me a shy smile.

"Lucky for Mr. Holt!" he remarked. "But are you sure of that? I understand that the will made at York is lost?"

"The will is here!" said Crole, holding up his envelope. "You can see it and read it."

Armintrade's face underwent a change as he took and read the will. He gave a long, careful look at the signature; another at Crole as he handed back the paper.

"What," he asked, "what do you, a solicitor, say about that will?"

"That nothing whatever can upset it," answered Crole, promptly. "It won't be contested, either. Everything that Mazaroff died possessed of belongs to Mr. Mervyn Holt. So—"

"So I owe Mr. Holt one hundred and seventy-five thousand pounds," said Armintrade with a laugh. "Very good!—shall I send the check and the papers along to you, Mr. Crole? Just so—it shall be done at once. Glad you've found the will."

We all rose. For the first time Maythorne spoke—addressing Armintrade.

"You didn't think it necessary to give evidence at the inquest?" he suggested.

"What evidence had I to give?" asked Armintrade. "My affairs with Mazaroff had nothing to do with his murder."

"Have you any theory, yourself, about his murder?" continued Maythorne.

"I have had two. One was that he may have been followed from London by somebody who knew that he had the second blue diamond on him—he was a very careless, thoughtless man!—the other that it was just a common, vulgar murder for the sake of robbery by one or other of those men whom he had been treating at the Woodcock. For instance, where is that man who disappeared—Parslave? So far, I believe, the police have failed to track him. Possibly he murdered Mazaroff, robbed the body and cleared out. Anyhow—his vanished!"

What Makes a Good Business Town?

A good business town is created by the complete co-operation of every citizen in supporting the local business, professional and industrial institutions and in furthering the development of all community activities.

Whatever is good for business is also good for the community, for as business profits so the community prospers. It is, therefore, of interest to all of us that ours should be a good business town.

In judging the progress we are making as a business town let us see if we fulfill the following standards:

1. The citizens spend their money at home.
2. The number of business institutions is increasing.
3. There is an active general commercial organization such as a Chamber of Commerce with a high percentage of eligible concerns as members.
4. Business rentals are as low as in competing towns and the premises well kept.
5. The amount of bank deposits and savings deposits increase faster than population growth, and banking interests provide for local borrowers first.
6. A higher than normal increase in population.
7. An increasing railroad business, postal receipts, building construction and real estate transfers.
8. An increasing amount of insurance issued and held.
9. An honest civic administration and fair taxes.
10. Good streets and highways; utility services.
11. Efficient Fire and Police protection.
12. A church-going community—honest and thrifty.

Do we meet the standards in this community? In order to be judged a good business town we must.

Folks, it's good business for all of us to strive to make a Good Business Town of Sunday School at 10 a. m. next Sunday, June 22. Everyone come and be here on time. Prayer meeting Thursday night.

The church has given us the second and fourth Sunday of each month to go elsewhere and preach if we wish, so if there is any community that would like to have preaching at their school house or church, we would be glad to come on the second and fourth Sundays. We will be with the Nazarene people the first and third Sundays of each month on South Fourth and Tennessee streets, Floydada, Texas. We are interested in the whole County of Floyd for the Kingdom of God and our Savior, Jesus Christ. So let us know and we will go anywhere you want us. Our phone number is 337J, Floydada.

J. W. Burgett will preach at the morning hour in the absence of the pastor who is engaged in a series of services at Ralls. Everyone is invited to participate in the services of the church with a friendly welcome. Every endeavor is particularly urged to lend his presence and assistance to the local society as it has been entered in a contest in which two other local societies are engaged. Let your loyalty to your endeavor be depicted in a very forceful way by being present at 7:30 Sunday evening.

FIRST BAPTIST CHURCH

Dick O'Brien, Pastor
With the attendance at the Sunday school and B. Y. P. U. last Sunday a little below the Sunday before we should be warned that an organization will not run of its own accord, but will only go as we go with it and make it go. While there were 421 in Sunday school and 165 in the B. Y. P. U. and no special reason to be discouraged, we cannot afford to be satisfied to "let well enough alone." Nothing short of our best is worthy of Him whom we serve. He gave His best for us, and asks us to give our best for Him. Remember "loyalty to the program" is our motto for this year.

The regular program will be carried out next Sunday, if the Lord permit. The Sunday school invites those visiting or vacationing in our midst to attend its teaching session at 9:45. There is a department and a class for every age. The Training service, the only A. I. organization of its kind on the plains, invites you to enjoy its delightful program at 7:30 in the evening. A large number of our folks are expected to attend the associational meeting at Cone on Sunday afternoon. A very attractive program has been arranged for this meeting. The two preaching services at 11:00 in the morning and 8:30 in the evening urges all who like good music and good fellowship to worship with us. The report on the New Orleans convention by Mrs. Lon V. Smith, last Sunday morning was greatly enjoyed by the congregation. Several have said that it was the best report of its kind they had ever heard. The pastor is inclined to agree with them.

There was one addition for baptism last Sunday. The baptismal service has been set for the last Sunday in June. There are several awaiting baptism, and we hope a number of others will be ready by the 5th Sunday.

CHRISTIAN CHURCH BIBLE SCHOOL IS BIG SUCCESS

Success to a degree unanticipated was enjoyed by the Daily Vacation Bible School of the First Christian Church which closed last Sunday with a record attendance. Rev. Claud Wingo, pastor of the church, stated that attendance had been so large that the various departments were crowded for room. But in spite of the crowded conditions, excellent work was accomplished during the school, he said.
Instructors during the school were as follows: Mrs. Jno. A. Enoch and Mrs. A. A. Bishop, kindergarten department; Miss Myrtice Meador and Mrs. Viola Fawver, Primary department; Miss Daisy Lee Gresham, Mrs. Zell Probasco, Hazel Probasco and Mrs. L. H. Dorrell, Junior department; Mrs. J. B. Jenkins, Mary Alice Summerville, Mrs. L. B. Fawver and Mrs. Wingo, Intermediate department.
Interest and attendance in all departments was more than expected.

it was stated. The Intermediate Department of the school was especially large in attendance.

THE GREAT COMMISSION

The International Uniform Sunday School Lesson for June 22, The Great Commission. Matt. 28: 1-10.

The great commission was the commission from our Lord to the disciples to go forth into the world and make disciples of all nations in His name and in His fellowship. In the fulfillment of this commission the disciples were assured of the spiritual presence of the Master. "Lo, I am with you always, even unto the ends of the world."

The power of that commission has been manifest in the growth and progress of the Christian Church. Judged from the supremacy of the Church's ideal, and from the standpoint of the condition of the world in which the Church has to perform its work, it might seem at times that the progress of the Church and of the Gospel has not been great. But when one looks back over the years and sees the conditions under which the Christian Church began, the immensity of the forces of ignorance and of evil with which the Church has had to contend the marvel is that even in 19 centuries such progress should have been achieved.

Where Science Has Failed
In our own day it is true that the progress of science in its revolutionizing of life seems immense. But science has not been particularly successful in solving many of the deeper problems associated with its own service. Where it ought to be, in harmony with its own principles, constructive, it has been, in large measure, destructive. Its implements and its agencies have been used too often not to benefit, but to destroy men and to make the conditions of their life not easier, but harder.

When one observes in our own generation the failure of these most enlightened forces to accomplish the most enlightened ends and purposes, he gets a proper perspective of the way in which even the Christian forces of life have had to proceed. The Kingdom of Heaven is still a small measure of heaven in the immensity of a world that is only slowly transformed.

But when one looks beneath the surface, he sees how vital and real has been this fulfillment of the commission of Jesus. The preaching of the Gospel and the living of the Gospel have been vital factors and forces despite all the shortcomings and defects of the religion of which this earnest preaching and practice have been a part. Wherever the Gospel has been fulfilled and earnestly proclaimed, it has produced much the same results, whether it be among savages in the heart of Africa, in the slum regions of a great city, or in social and intellectual circles of the more highly favored and called.

When the true experience of religion has come to men, it has made them responsive to the great commission and the divine commissioner. The men of wealth and social distinction who hears the call of Christ becomes a humble and earnest servant of his fellowmen. The man of education and training when he understands the reality of this commission becomes a teacher of his fellowmen. His educational advantages are not an occasion of arrogance or of superiority or of separation from his fellowmen.

Wreckers Demolish City Hotel, Oldest Landmark In City

Frame Building Damaged by Fire February 9, Was Built In 1891.

Floydada's oldest landmark, the City Hotel, was completely demolished last week by a wrecking crew which began work tearing down the old frame structure the latter part of last week. The City Hotel was damaged beyond repairs in a fire of the night of February 9, of this year.

The first unit of the two-story building was constructed in 1891 by J. K. Gwynn, founder of the town. At the time of the fire, it was known as the Hanks Hotel, and was the property of R. E. Harrison, of Corinth, Mississippi. E. T. Hanks operated the hotel at the time of the fire, and suffered considerable loss in furnishings.

The history of the hotel has been a long and varied one under numerous managers and ownerships. Prior to Mr. Hanks management of the hotel, it was operated for some five or six years by J. A. Callihan, who sold the property to Mr. Harrison, who leased it to Mr. Hanks. Before the fire, the value of the building was estimated at approximately $4,000.

Wrecking of the building was in charge of Wilkinson and Maxwell, local wrecking contractors.

Aviation War-Picture Is Thriller At Palace

"The Sky Hawk," the first all-talking drama filmed in the air, is a new talking-picture thriller to be shown in Floydada for the first time Sunday afternoon, June 22. John Garrick, Helen Chandler, Gilbert Emery and a score of other famous film characters who have been seen in silent war pictures have the leading parts in "The Sky Hawk."

If you are a lover of thrills, or sensational sights, you are sure to enjoy this picture, according to Mr. Deakins. It is filled with daring aviation stunts, typical of thousands of such stunts and circumstances during the great World War. Included in the unusual sights is a Zeppelin raid over London.

The picture is a Fox Movietone production.

TEMPORARY PASTURES FOR SHEEP

A system of temporary pastures for sheep utilizes lands of low fertility and at the same time insures a revenue from them without much expense for commercial fertilizer. Soybeans are one of the best temporary pastures for sheep where the soil is thin. Wheat, where it can be grown successfully, provides better winter and early spring pasture than rye. Oats and field peas sown together make an excellent spring pasture for sheep. On fairly fertile land rape is the most economical forage. Alfalfa or sweetclover is good pasture for sheep, but it is necessary to guard against bloat. In some regions alfalfa pasture is quite likely to cause bloat while in other regions there is little or no danger of alfalfa causing bloat in sheep.

Never boil new peas; let them simmer. Salt the water very lightly. Some cooks add the salt when the cooking is half done. Do not cover while cooking, and do not cook longer than necessary for tenderness.

Prune production in the United States has increased greatly in recent years. This country supplies 75 per cent of the total world production.

A manure pit is desirable for the temporary storage of manure if it is fitted with a tent trap or cone trap to catch flies that may breed before the pit is emptied. To retain the fertilizing value of manure, it should be protected from rain and the air excluded as much as possible. There is no need to cover a large part of the top of the pit with a trap, but merely to leave holes large enough to attract flies to the light. Cover the holes with ordinary conical fly traps with the legs cut off so the bottom of the trap will fit closely to the box. In large bins two or more holes covered with traps should be provided.

Western farmers who must combat injurious rodents—which in some localities destroy 25 per cent or more of the farm crops and range forage—can now do so cheaply and efficiently through bait-mixing stations established by the United States Biological Survey. The most effective bait for poisoning ground squirrels, prairie dogs, field mice, and some other rodents is made from good, clean, specially steam-rolled oats, says the Biological Survey. At a bait-mixing station in Idaho, in 1929, more than 400,000 pounds of oats were prepared for poisoning in Idaho and other States and at a saving of $23,560.

Chicks will grow faster if their ration includes sour milk, skim milk, or buttermilk to drink in addition to the grain feeds and green feeds. Mix milk with the mash if wet-mash feeding is preferred.

Gas Kitchen On Wheels

A gas kitchen on wheels, an innovation of the Lone Star Gas Company, by which compressed natural gas is delivered in portable steel cylinders to homes not having pipe line gas service, is to be seen in Floyd County soon, when demonstrations of this new convenience for the farm home are to be made.

In addition, a model kitchen has been especially designed and constructed on a truck chassis. This travelling kitchen will be along also, giving special demonstrations. The interior of the truck is equipped with standard gas appliances, including a cook stove, water heater, refrigerator, lights and small wall making contest and thirteen contestants in the butter judging event. Competition was keen, as was shown by the high scores tabulated.

Economy was exemplified in the making of the beautiful dresses shown, none of the garments having represented a cost exceeding $6. This was the first year that a contest in the afternoon dress class has been staged in the county, and the butter judging contest was also the first held by the club women.

The all-day meeting of the Home Demonstration Clubs opened Thursday morning at 10 o'clock in the High School auditorium. The butter judging contest was held in the morning session and the points were scored on the dresses with the exception of the scores on appearance which were made in the afternoon following a revue in which the makers of the respective garments wore the dresses entered in the competition.

A lunch served cafeteria style and furnished by the women of the clubs was enjoyed at the noon hour by the 150 women in attendance.

The score cards used in the contests were as follows:

Dress Making—suitability of garment to purpose, 10 points; material and trimming, 10 points; originality, beauty, and interest of design, 15 points; workmanship, 15 points; appearance on person, 35 points; laundering possibilities, 5 points; pressing, 10 points; total 100 points.

Butter judging—flavor, 45 points for perfect; texture, 25 points for perfect; color 15 points for perfect; salt, 10 points for perfect, and package, 5 points for perfect.

CRAZY WATER Might Do The Same For You

Man Well Known in West Texas Relieved By Crazy Water.

After Everything Else Had Failed.

Lubbock, Texas, Feb. 15, 1930.

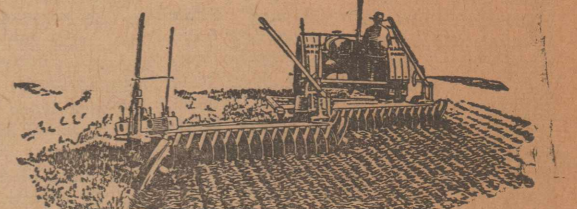

Crazy Water Hotel Co., Mineral Wells, Texas.

Gentlemen: Three weeks ago today I came to the Crazy Water Hotel on a stretcher from the city of Lubbock, Texas, with what the doctors called typhoid spine and told me that there was no medicine that would cure me. I started drinking Crazy Water and taking the baths. On the 12th day after my arrival at the Crazy Water Hotel I took to the wheel chair and on the 17th day I started walking on crutches and can now walk without them; so I feel that if Crazy Water can do this for me, I cannot say enough for it.

Yours very truly,
I. F. HOLLAND.

with his daughter, Mrs. L. B. Fawver, and other relatives.

Mr. Hart moved to Floyd County from Iowa more than thirty years ago and made his visit here coincide with the dates for the meeting of the Floyd County Old Settlers' organization, which he enjoyed greatly, he said. Spotted wheat crop conditions, similar to those prevalent in this section prevail around Friona, generally speaking, Mr. Hart observed.

Put Your Discs in Deep—The Oliver Hart-Parr Will Pull Them

There's no reason to "skim" your land with a one-way disc plow if you are using an Oliver Hart-Parr Tractor. Set the plow down where it belongs—the Hart-Parr will pull it.

With Oliver Hart-Parr Power, you can plow full width at any depth. Many farmers are using two and even three one-way disc plows behind the larger Hart-Parrs. The Oliver Hart-Parr is built to handle the ordinary work of the farm and has surplus power for the peak loads. For instance, the Oliver Hart-Parr 18-36 pulled 32 h.p. on the draw-bar and 43 h.p. on the belt in official tests—16 h.p. over its draw-bar rating and 7 h.p. above its belt rating. This surplus power means many added years of service.

Come in and see them. Our guarantee is backed by the manufacturer "Under the Oliver Flag".

Democratic Executive Committee Makes Election Assessments

Assessments Over $1,200 Needed For Primaries Ticket For First Primary Long: Candidates Assessments Lower.

Although it is some three weeks until the actual ballots for the Democratic Primary in Floyd County will be made up, the Executive Committee of the party, assembled in Floydada Monday morning, with Judge J. N. Stalbird presiding, decided the order in which the names of the candidates will appear on the ticket, and made the assessments against the candidates as required by statute.

Many County Aspirants
 The committee also decided the manner of choosing the party's nominees, deciding upon the double primary. Although the cost of the two primaries this year will be about the same, possibly a little more, than it was two years ago, the cost per candidate will be much lower. There are more offices to run for and more aspirants than usual for the majority of them. Thus, Precinct Two and Precinct Four each furnishes six candidates for commissioner, this job having become a prize worthwhile to the man who is successful. Precinct Three only has one candidate for commissioner and Precinct One has three.

The highest assessment made were against the candidates for county judge, county clerk, assessor candidates and collector candidate. These were set at $35 per candidate. Two years ago, when candidate-customers were few the committee had to set the sheriff and tax collector assessment at $100. This year the sheriff candidates will pay $30 each and the collector candidates $5 more. The job of assessor and the job of collector of taxes are figured as the most remunerative offices which the voters of the county have at their disposal to award aspirants.

Assessments made against other candidates were as follows: district clerk, $20; county attorney $25; county superintendent $20; treasurer $25; county commissioner $30; county surveyor $25; justices of the peace $8; public weigher $7.50, constable $5. The total revenue the committee will have at their disposal will be $1,263.50 if all candidates who applied for places on the ticket pay their assessments.

State Ticket Long
 Not only is the county ticket a long one, but the state ticket is as well. All the major offices have a long list of honor seekers, the governor list being the longest with thirteen. None of the candidates for state office pay anything to the county committee to get their names on the ticket. The legislature, in recent years, has changed the law so that each state candidate is required to pay $100 to the state executive committee, which committee certifies the names to the county committees respectively of the state, the local candidates

E. B. Reeves Assisted With First Edition of Hesperian

E. B. (Elmer) Reeves of Alanreed, Gray County, who assisted with the first issue of The Floyd County Hesperian, then appearing under the title of Hesperian-Gazette, had the pleasure recently (he called it pleasure) of looking over the plant as it is operated today. Mr. Reeves, the first honest-to-goodness printer's devil The Hesperian ever had, was in Floydada during the reunion held by the Floyd County Old Settlers' Association and on occasion of his visit to the city made an inspection trip through some of Floyd County's Oldest Institutions.

"'Twas back some 40 years ago, Mr. Reeves said, that he inked the forms for the first print of the early newspaper in Floyd County. 'I had a big roller that I pulled across the hand-set type to ink it for the print. I do not remember just what kind of press we had but it was quite different from the one in use today.

"Claude V. Hall was editor and I used to come in and help out every week. I was then about twelve or thirteen years old and for the work I received 25 cents or 50 cents, which looked as big to me as $10 would now."

Mr. Reeves is a son of R. P. Reeves, 75, one of the pioneers of Floyd County. The elder Mr. Reeves was also here for the reunion of old timers and paid a visit to The Hesperian office.

E. B. Reeves is a sister of Mrs. R. C. Scott and was a guest in her home during his visit here.

HOLMES SHIPS 112 POUND PIG, ONLY 84 DAYS OLD

Sale of an eighty-four day old pig, weighing 112 pounds was an unusual sale made Monday of last week by Holmes Brothers, Floyd County raisers of registered Duroc hogs. The animal in question was a type pig, being of a most unusual weight for its age. The boar was shipped June 9 to R. R. Mitchell, at Pampa. This shipment made the fourth hog shipped to Pampa by Holmes Brothers during the past few months.

Holmes Brothers ship many registered Duroc hogs from Floyd County each year, and, like many other Floyd County hog raisers, are finding it profitable to market Floyd County feed-stuff "on the hoof."

After the First Twenty-five Thousand Miles

THE VALUE of sound design, good materials and careful craftsmanship is especially apparent in the new Ford after the first twenty-five thousand miles. Long, continuous service emphasizes its mechanical reliability and economy of operation and up-keep.

As you drive the Ford through many months and years you will develop an increasing pride in its appearance and a growing respect for the substantial worth that has been built into it. From every standpoint—in everything that goes to make a good automobile—you will know that you have made a far-seeing, satisfactory purchase.

Wherever you go, you hear enthusiastic praise of the car and this significant, oft-repeated phrase—"I'm glad I bought a Ford."

A FORD owner in New York tells of a 13,000-mile trip across the United States and back in sixty days and says "the car was extremely economical to operate, comfortable and speedy." A grateful father tells how the Triplex shatter-proof glass windshield saved his wife and children from serious injury.

To test tires, a large company drove a new Ford day and night, for an average of 500 miles every twenty-four hours. It was still giving satisfactory service after 105,000 miles.

A Ford car that had fallen into Fernan Lake was submerged for twelve days before being raised. After a new battery and carburetor bowl were installed, it was driven back to Spokane under its own power.

Many police departments have written of the special advantages of the Ford in crowded traffic because of its alert speed, acceleration, and ease of control. An increasing number of fleet owners are also purchasing the Ford because their cost figures have given conclusive proof of its economy of operation and up-keep.

In addition to important triumphs in Germany, France and Italy, the Ford won part of seven leading places in a contest and, first and second in the Rafaela Argentina, first and second in the run from Copenhagen-to-Paris-to-Copenhagen, three gold medals in England, first ranking in the durability test over the tortuous Amancas road in Peru, and first place in the 1930 reliability run conducted by the Royal Automobile Club of Sweden.

This contest was an exceptionally severe test of endurance and sturdy construction because it was held in the dead of winter and covered 600 miles of steady running over snow-covered country roads and mountainous hills.

Fun And Instruction Make Full Program At Meeting Of Fire Boys

State Volunteer Firemen in Session at San Angelo Demand Better Arson Law.

There was plenty of amusement and a fine program of instruction for the volunteer firemen of the state at their meeting last week in San Angelo, G. R. Strickland chief of the Floydada Fire Department, said upon the return of the Floydada delegation from that city Friday of last week. Horace Kincaid, George Sherrill and L. V. Rogers were the other members of the local department who attended the meeting.

"We had addresses from some of the best posted fire fighters and fire prevention men of the whole country, and there wasn't any excuse for a man not learning a lot about a fireman's duties and responsibilities at this meeting," Mr. Strickland said.

One of the things which came in for discussion and resolutions at the meeting was the inadequacy of the Texas Arson Law, on which the volunteer firemen took a decided stand favoring an amendment to the present state law that would make the law more strict. "It is beginning to become common knowledge that our arson law in Texas is a poor one," Mr. Strickland said, "In fact, it is practically impossible to 'stick' a man in this state unless you actually see him start an incendiary fire. Circumstantial evidence is almost barred under our present statutes and practices."

The amendments suggested by the firemen would make it an offense to set fire to a house, whether or not it is destroyed or seriously damaged, and would also make it an offense to attempt to set fire to a house or to aid, counsel or procure the burning of any building or property. Changes in the wording of the statutes would make it possible to secure convictions for arson, whereas at this time the offense is not clearly set out in the statutes, and a conviction on circumstantial evidence is almost impossible.

MACYL BURKE WRITES OF TRIP TO NEWFOUNDLAND

Macyl A. Burke, who sailed the first of the month for France from Dallas, where he has been making his home with his parents, Mr. and Mrs. W. J. Burke, since their removal there to make their home, stated on a card dated June 5 that he was enroute to Dunkirk, France.

The card, written from Botwood Newfoundland, 3600 miles from Dallas, read in part as follows: "Well, this is some piece from Paris but it is foreign soil. We are working as a couple of able-bodied seamen on the 'Oxelosuno,' a Swedish freighter. This is right next door to the North Pole."

"We sail from here to Dunkirk, France. I am keeping a notebook of the trip and will have a copy sent to you from Paris."

Representatives Of 10 Counties Are Expected

(Continued from page 1—this sec.) and possibly you were represented at the meeting. From Crowell to Paducah, part of the road is paved and the other is being paved. From Paducah to the Motley county line, it is our information that the pavement is opened and is being traveled. Motley County has voted the bonds for paving its part of the road. Floyd County has not voted its bonds as yet, but has an excellent grade through the county. Hale County has voted bonds, and the grade and drainage structures have been in for some time. Paving of that part of the road east from Plainview to the Floyd County line has been contracted, and work will start right away. From Plainview west to the Lamb County line, no paving has been done but the grade is ready. From Lamb County west to the New Mexico line, there is an excellent dirt grade. Such is the physical condition of the road through Texas.

"We believe that Highway 70 through Texas, and for that matter through this part of the Southwest in particular, should be advertised and given more attention than it has been in the past. For the people of Oklahoma, north and west Texas, and all the eastern states, Highway 70 offers an excellent road not only into your own section of Texas, but on to New Mexico, Arizona, California, and the Pacific coast. Conversely it offers a splendid road for the people of the Pacific coast to the eastern part of the United States. Taking it all in all, it is a wonderful road."

"Much is being heard of the famous Carlsbad Cavern at Carlsbad, New Mexico. Many roads are being projected in the direction of Carlsbad. With the splendid connection that Highway 70 has with the road from Carlsbad to Clovis, New Mexico, there is no reason why Highway 70 should not carry a big part of the Cavern travel, and we believe that we should particularly stress this feature. We could go on reciting the importance of this road, but we only wish to arouse your attention to the possibilities it offers."

"Having these things in mind, the Chamber of Commerce at Floydada, and the Board of City Development at Plainview, are taking the lead in calling a road meeting on Friday afternoon, June 20th, at two o'clock at Floydada in the District Court room of representatives along the route of Highway 70 in Texas, and we want your organization to be represented. We are very anxious to have chamber of commerce officials, highway committees of chambers of commerce, county commissioners, county judges and other interested prominent citizens at this meeting. We want every community and every county represented with a hope that as an outgrowth of this meeting we will have developed some well-organized plan for arousing more interest for this highway through Texas—that interest being two-fold; first, to get a permanent road constructed over the entire route, and second, to promote the use of Highway 70 by tourists from all parts of the United States."

NO COUNTY COURT JURORS TO BE USED 'TIL JULY 14

On account of the present busy times, no county court juries are to be summoned for service for the present, Judge Wm McGehee told a reporter for The Hesperian Tuesday of this week.

The next summons for jury service in his court will be for the weeks of July 14 and July 21.

"Times are very busy on the farms of Floyd County just now and since we do not have any jury cases that are demanding immediate attention, I felt it would not be a bad idea to pass the jury docket for the present," Judge McGehee said.

SEVERE ELECTRICAL STORM

A damaging rain of from three to six inches fell in that section, and the electrical storm that accompanied it was very severe.

In his effort to break the trans-continental flight record set recently by Colonel and Mrs. Charles A. WHAT MAKES A GOOD BUSINESS TOWN

There is not a man or woman in Floydada who does not appreciate the importance of Floydada being a good business town. Local business conditions serve as our best barometer of local prosperity. Certainly we all desire to be prosperous. To achieve this prosperity it is essential that our neighbors prosper likewise. Practically every person in Floydada is dependent on the other citizens of this community for his individual prosperity. Therefore any movement toward a greater prosperity must be a group movement—a cooperative movement. Our merchants should co-operate in an endeavor to give ever better values and better service, and our fellow citizens should reciprocate with their full support. As a business in Floydada prospers, so does the entire community prosper, for what is good for business is good for the community. Therefore it must be the aim of every resident to see that Floydada not only achieves the reputation of being a good business town, but that it maintains this reputation.

The twelve essential points are the fundamental factors that determine the status of Floydada as a business town. Too great an emphasis cannot be placed upon point number one—"The citizens spend their money at home." Unless our citizens do spend our money at home, they are handicapping the possibility of Floydada strengthening its position as a business town.

A study of community development emphasizes the fact that a good business town is not created by accident, but rather by a carefully planned program supported by the residents of the community. The Community Development Campaign discusses the question of What Makes a Good Business Town in this issue of The Hesperian, and presents in a clear and concise form the essential factors. After you have read what is there written, you can judge for yourself where Floydada stands in this respect.

PLEASE YOUR CUSTOMERS

Cream dealers say that one of the serious defects of warm weather cream is the smothered flavor that comes with a tightly covered can of warm cream. Even though placed in cold or ice water, the result of covering the container tightly will be the same.

The injury done is to the flavor only, of course. The remedy suggested by the cream buyers is not to cover the cream tightly until the cream is cold. A few stirrings after the can of cream is in the cooling tank will lower the temperature more quickly, they say, and help very materially to eliminate smothered flavor. Warm cream should not be mixed with cold, they suggest.

The matter of a little difference in flavor, possibly, will not mean any actual difference when you get to the cream station, since the cream is bought on butter fat content. However, it does make a difference in the price for which the cream people can sell the cream. Thus, if it came about that all the people of a given territory followed the practice that would eliminate a given fault of the product the grade of the cream to the ultimate consumer would be higher and the demand for the cream over cream otherwise handled increased by just that much.

If you've read thus far, get this added thought that will apply to cream sales: Years ago somebody began saying that short staple cotton would hurt the market. Some cotton raisers kept putting short staple on the market and got as much money for theirs per pound as did their neighbors who tried to raise longer staple. They said long staple talk was just something else to be telling the farmers, trying to tend to their business for them. The result has been this has become a "short staple" section in the minds of the cotton factors of the world and the cotton is graded off before it ever gets to market. Similarly, since this section has become a very considerable producer of butterfat the quality will count if small matters, such as smothered cream, are given careful attention.

Farmers have long thought of themselves as not "having to get along" with anybody. They are the most independent class of people of the world. However, it pays anybody to get along with their customers, in reason. Farmers are beginning to learn they also have customers to please. If Floyd County farmers won't take the trouble to please the trade, the farmers of some other county will please them—and get the profitable end of the business.

Frank Putnam, the prohibition repeal candidate for governor, says that if all the people of the country who are violating the letter or spirit of the Prohibition Laws were in prison there would be fifty million on the inside of the walls and the other seventy million would be so busy guarding and feeding them there wouldn't be anybody left to make a living.

Four members of the faculty of Texas Technological College resigned recently to take places with other institutions of higher learning where a better wage scale prevailed. The University of Texas and the A. & M. College, with their huge endowment that is steadily growing, are about the only institutions of higher learning in Texas that are not feeling the pinch of poverty. Schools, senior and junior, all over the state, denominational and otherwise, are said to have had their hardest year during 1929 in a decade or more.

The newest restaurant in New York has employed 50 redheaded waitresses. Probably because it matches the hue most visitors like to paint the town in.

Eskimos, according to explorers, rarely spank their children. But when they do, we imagine they make the fur fly.

Perhaps that's the only way Eskimos can teach their kids not to blubber.

Nowadays, a writer says, any child who hasn't had a couple of major operations, couldn't hold up its head in a classroom. Indeed, the modern youngster seems proud to be considered a cut-up.

HONEYMOON JUNE

(By Gertrude Friend Scoggins) June month—bride month. Perfumed posies, Blue skies—butterflies, Sweethearts—roses

Moon light—Starlight, Promised wife Wedding Bells, Bliss for Life!

Bride's first pastry, Bridgroom beams; Pie looks delicious, A perfect dream!

The groom takes a bite, His head begins to shake, It's not like the pie His mother used to make!

His bride pouts a bit, In fact begins to bawl! Groom grabs that pie And gobbles it all!

A pig stunted by early weaning will never make so profitable a hog as it would without this setback. A good brood sow properly fed and handled should furnish a good flow of milk until the pigs are 10 to 12 weeks old. A sow that can not do this should be discarded from the herd.

Folks, I ain't a bit superstitious whatsoever. But there's just one thing that gets me going. This Friday the Thirteenth stuff is sure a bugaboo to me. I ain't never seen it fall to bring some kind of tragedy, hard luck or something of the kind. Take last Friday for instance: On Friday, June 13, Major Seagraves, holder of the world's speed record died in a speedboat accident. Major Seagraves held the automobile speed record of 231 miles per hour, and at the time of his fatal accident, was driving a speedboat 100 miles per hour.

Major Seagraves, Jack Sharkey, Bobbie Jones and Charlie Paddock are my favorite sportsmen, and it is with sincere sorrow that I learned of the Major's death.

But I just knew that something awful was going to happen. It never fails on Friday the Thirteenth. That may sound foolish to some of you folks but it is sure the way I feel about things. But there ain't much need to worry no more for a long time. The Thirteenth of the months don't fall on Friday again until February 1931. Just watch for that date, folks. It never fails.

But honestly, I'm a firm believer in luck. Take O. O. McIntire for instance. Mac says that he doesn't attribute his success as a columnist to hard work, stick-ability and that kinda stuff, but that it is all "just luck". Famous minds run along the same channels, don't you know

And all these years of hard work wasted, dern it.

But me and Mack don't mean the kind of luck that people say is responsible for failures. No sir. That kind of "hard luck" is merely a polite name for sleeping sickness. What we mean is that things over which we have no control often enter into our lives and are responsible for some of the biggest successes.

Beginners Luck is a good example of what I am trying to say. I know that there is such a thing as beginners' Luck because Halitosis was happy for two whole weeks after we were married.

Halitosis says that modern fiction runs too much to love. My idea is that modern love runs too much to fiction.

That guy on California Street says that June is the month of weddings and cooing. The billing comes later.

In spite of what the old timers will say, dollars do go farther nowadays. They make their long trips in automobiles, however. Future historians will no doubt refer to our period as the Rolling Can Age. Almost everybody has a car nowadays (except me and a few others who can hardly call their "wrecks" a car). They all seem to be on the go—except of course when you are looking for a parking space and then apparently traffic of all kinds ceases and pulls over to the curb.

But now comes the really big season for motoring. The tourists, the mosquitoes, and the flies are all beginning to swarm. And the fellows who cater to the tourist trade are grinning from ear to ear. Drivers, back seat "co-pilots" and others, all must eat and sleep. And make merry. Most tourists start out with their minds made up to come home broke, if they are not already that way. And all of the obliging vendors along the way always try to help them avoid the disappointment of coming home with some money.

And the sad part about the whole darn thing, folks, is the fact that these tourists ain't coming or going, by way of Floyd County. Motorists have already learned their lesson about riding over rough or muddy roads of this county. Pavement all around us has left us dern near completely out of the picture. If we ever expect to get back into the big "travel and buy" business, we have just got to pave our highways. It's not a question of wanting to now, folks, it's a matter of keeping up with the times.

To say that it's wrong to pave the highways of Floyd County, in my estimation, is just about like the new rookie in the military parade. "Everybody was out of step except Johnnie."

Boy, this wheat harvest in full motion shore looks good to me. If wheat were only bringing about $1.25 per bushel now—man, man! It looks to me like that if wheat goes much lower, some of our farmers who depend altogether on wheat are going to have to board with the Federal Farm Board next year.

They tell me that a parrot will live a hundred years. I don't believe it. I don't believe they will live to be over ninety years old, so just to prove to the public that I am right I think I will buy one and keep the dern thing till it dies.

There's a story going around the square this week about a lady that called into one of the local dry goods stores to buy a new window curtain. "Are you positive these curtains won't shrink she asked. "You know they are for my bedroom."

One of our bright young clerks replied: "Lady, with your figure, you should worry whether they shrink or not."

Contemporary Thought

THOSE WHO CANNOT PAY

Lubbock Avalanche-Journal: The Carnegie Corporation, the Millbank Memorial fund, the Russell Sage Foundation and the Twentieth Century fund are jointly financing a study which has as its objective a practical answer to the following question: "How can a family of moderate means secure adequate scientific medical service at a cost which it can afford?" Cooperating with these philanthropies are the American Medical association, the Metropolitan Life Insurance company, the United States Public Health Service and some of the leading members of the medical profession are on the committee making the study of this grave problem.

Hospitals are not now self-supporting and physicians as a group are not receiving adequate incomes, yet the committee is hopeful of working out a plan whereby medical treatment may be made more easily available and less expensive and the incomes of doctors and hospitals can be increased.

This seems to disprove the axiom "You cannot eat your cake and have it." Even that can be accomplished by the magic of modern efficiency and cooperation. Perhaps medical experts suspect the existence of waste and inefficiency. Or they may have in mind a standard treatment of all with a sliding scale of charges under which the rich would bear most of the burden.

Old-Fashioned White Satin Gown to Be Featured in June Weddings This Year

BY HARRIET

June brides this year, so far as their costumes are concerned, have foregone the modern and gone 100 per cent old-fashioned.

While chiffon, mousseline de soie, organdie, net and other materials are preferred by many, the majority of June brides prefer the white satin of her mother's day.

Many of them are off-white, bordering on the delicate dawn tones of pink or the rich cast of old ivory, but broadly speaking, the white satin wedding gown is the classical, conservative choice of the season's bride.

Lace is found on many of the new gowns. When one has lovely old duchesse or rose point right in the attic, why not use it? Nothing is more feminine nor more bride-like than a touch of lace.

Some of the gowns use a bit for a demure yoke. Others have it lining the neck and sleeves and running up the sleeves in a deep cuff decoration. Others use it for the cap that fastens the veil, in quaint Dutch fashion, or in the new halo type that stands up from the head, wired with delicate white cording.

Two of the season's best gowns are pictured today, one from this country, the other an import.

The Henri Bendel gown, created in New York, uses fine old rose point lace for an ornamental yoke that points down in the front and back and extends over to outline the sleeves. This is an admirable idea for the bride who intends to remove the long sleeves after the ceremony and wear the gown for evening. Straps of the lace run up the cuff until well above the elbow also.

The other wedding gown is a Jean Patou creation. It is an extremely youthful gown, combining white satin with tulle and not a bit of lace for decoration. It relies on its "sculpturing" for its perfect adornment. It is a gown that has a bloused bodice, with the train fashioning a back panel that loops up at the waistline and then falls in a graceful long train below.

There are two panels from hip-line to the floor in front, to balance the extreme length of the back train. The sleeves are long and tight-cuffed, with quaint mitt-cuffs to end them. The sleeves and bodice are cut in one, which gives a graceful shoulder line. The neckline is cut with a cut-out below the round yoke that is very near the base of the neck. It is as though it were simulating a decollete and then placing a yoke in to make it demure.

The veil is a cap one, too, with ribbons and orange blossoms for trim.

ripening as usual and most combines stand idle until almost noon.

Mr. and Mrs. C. P. Looper had as their guests Sunday Mr. Looper's brothers, Homer Looper and family, and R. D. Looper and family of Plainview and entertained them with an outdoor picnic on the canyon.

Mr. and Mrs. G. L. Kirk visited in Lubbock Thursday and Friday.

BAKER GIRLS MEET

Part of the Baker 4 H Club girls met at the home of Miss Annie Jewell Fawer on Wednesday of last week, for the purpose of staying in the habit of meeting. Everyone has all of their work completed and there is not anything for us to do.

Everyone enjoyed the evening very much and more especially when the delightful refreshments were served. After the meeting in the evening, nine of the girls spent the night with Miss Annie Graves. All enjoyed the nice time.

BAKER 4-H CLUB

Girls of Baker 4-H Club had as their lesson on the last meeting day "cooking a meal." The girls met at Maggie Jones' home and prepared the dinner as Miss Strange gave us instructions. The dinner was served at 12 o'clock and everyone enjoyed it lots better than the lesson.

After the dinner was served the president called the house to order. The girls who failed to have their sewing completed last meeting turned it in and all made good grades. Each girl was given her part to carry to the encampment even though it was knocked out.

As we are getting a bank account started which amounts to a little more than fifty dollars, we selected a treasurer who is Miss Grace Shelton. Everyone is enjoying the club more and more each meeting.

Mrs. Wilson Kimble and daughter, Mary Anne, and son, John, left Wednesday of last week in their car for Ft. Worth, where they will spend the summer with Mrs. Kimble's mother, Mrs. E. M. McClintchey.

Miss Margaret Looper, of Denton, spent the week end with her cousin, Miss Pattye Looper.

Mr. and Mrs. A. D. Cummings In Chicago To Spend Summer Months

Trip From Floydada to Chicago Offers Wide Variety of Scenery, He Says.

The Hesperian is in receipt of a letter from A. D. Cummings (4561-3 Blackstone Ave.) in Chicago, some of which is written in personal vein but is of interest to our readers. Mr. and Mrs. Cummings are in Chicago to spend the summer in study at Northwestern University, and will return to Floydada this fall. He will be principal of the high school the ensuing term. Portions of the letter are given herewith:

"Rose and I left Canyon Saturday morning. We had a fine trip. The first night we were in Oklahoma City. We spent about half of Sunday driving around there. Judging from the amount of building that is going on around there the 'Mary Sudik' or something else is making them quite prosperous. We enjoyed driving around there.

"The rest of the trip was made up mostly of scenery. Crops looked good in northern Oklahoma and in the little strip of Kansas that we were through, but the rest of the country looked very poor, so far as farming is concerned, until we got to Springfield, Ill. From there most of the way to Chicago crops looked fine. You know that is the famous Cornbelt, where the land sells from $300-$400 per acre. By the way, that corn is planted like an orchard so that it makes a row each way that you look at it. They plow it one way one time, then another the next. I bet if milo were planted that way and worked it would make a lot more to the acre. There is very little power machinery used from the Panhandle to here. Up in the Ozarks they are still plowing with one mule and a walking plow. That was one thing that I didn't expect to see. However, land was advertised at about eighty dollars an acre. They could make that much off an acre in ten year. There are some wonderful barns through that country, and I don't see how they find anything to put in them. However, there are some fine barns from here to Springfield and it is easily seen how they are filled.

"We got here yesterday about twelve. We have our apartment out near the University. Things are not as high as might be expected. We didn't experience any trouble getting out to the University. Motorists here drive like fury, and that is about all a fellow has to do to get along, except that he has to stop about as fast as he drives. Yesterday afternoon we drove out on the lake front. It was my first view of a body of water. It looked SOME larger than our lakes. It is impossible for one to understand just how the lakes look without seeing them. All my life I have read about them, but yesterday just a little bit of how they looked dawned on me. Those hotels out on the lake front are wonderful. They are built where a few years ago people went in bathing. They have pulled some kind of engineering feat there and moved the lake back.

"I can't tell you my impressions of this city, and I don't know that you have not seen much more of it than I have. The thing is about as one would guess—just one town after another. We will be in a part where there are large buildings, and then we will come out to a place where there is very little traffic, and just small buildings of one to three stories. Most of the apartments are old buildings. That is in this part of town.

"We are not as crowded here as looks like we would be. There is a vacant lot in the block by us, and we have the car parked there. A great many buildings are empty so I guess the Hoover Prosperity has been at work here too. You know Will Rogers says that we just can't stand this 'continued prosperity' much longer.

"I went out to the offices of Rotary International this morning. The trip out there was most enjoyable. Those fellows are sure nice to visitors. They showed me all through the plant, and Ches Perry came around and introduced himself to me. They just make one feel like one of them. I am expecting to be out there pretty often summer. I have a friend who works in the Publicity Department. I met him at the Dallas Convention. He is a fine fellow, and has agreed to take me in charge for this summer. I have a friend who anything in Chicago that I ought to see. He says that as soon as he is through with the Convention, that is, about the first of July he is going to check up on what I have seen and what I have not and we are going to see everything that is worth seeing that we can get to.

He took me out to lunch at the Sherman Hotel Coffee Shop today. "I have probably told you enough of my experiences. I haven't seen any hoodlums. I think that they arrested about six hundred last night for the murder of Lingle, but we never knew anything about it until we read it in the paper. The fellow we rented our apartment from said that in about ten years that he had been a salesman on the streets he had never seen an act of violence."

Dr. Gilbert S. Lambert Now Endorses Sargon

DR. GILBERT S. LAMBERT

"For over two years I suffered with chronic stomach trouble and constipation that I was unable to correct with ordinary medicines. My appetite failed, I couldn't sleep and I was losing weight rapidly. I had frequent biliary attacks when my complexion became yellow as if I had jaundice.

"The Sargon treatment appealed to me because of its scientific background. Three bottles taken with Sargon Soft Mass Pills overcame my troubles, and I am in better physical tone than in years."—Dr. Gilbert S. Lambert, well known retired physician of San Francisco. "THE BEST PLACE TO BUY GOOD MERCHANDISE"

Decatur, One-Story House of Unusual Design; Graceful Lines Add to Beauty

Informal Exterior And Sweeping Roof Pretty

Interior Arrangement Is Worthy Of Special Note.

The average bungalow is a stereotyped affair,—a broad expanse of roof covering a box like structure with a square open porch at the front. The home builder who desires to construct a home with one floor yet wants something that is not conventional will do well to study the plans of the Decatur, which is illustrated in adjacent columns.

Here is a dwelling that is delightful in its free, informal exterior lines. The sweeping extension of the roof and the face of the facade to form a wall which shields the family gathered on the terrace off the living room is a happy expression of architectural art. The irregular roof lines, the charming chimney and the well balanced window areas all appeal to the home lover.

The interior arrangement also contains merit. The sleeping unit with the two chambers and bath grouped by themselves off a private hall in a practical application of commonsense design. The breakfast nook in its alcove off the kitchen is a decided convenience. Each room has points that mark the Decatur as a modern home.

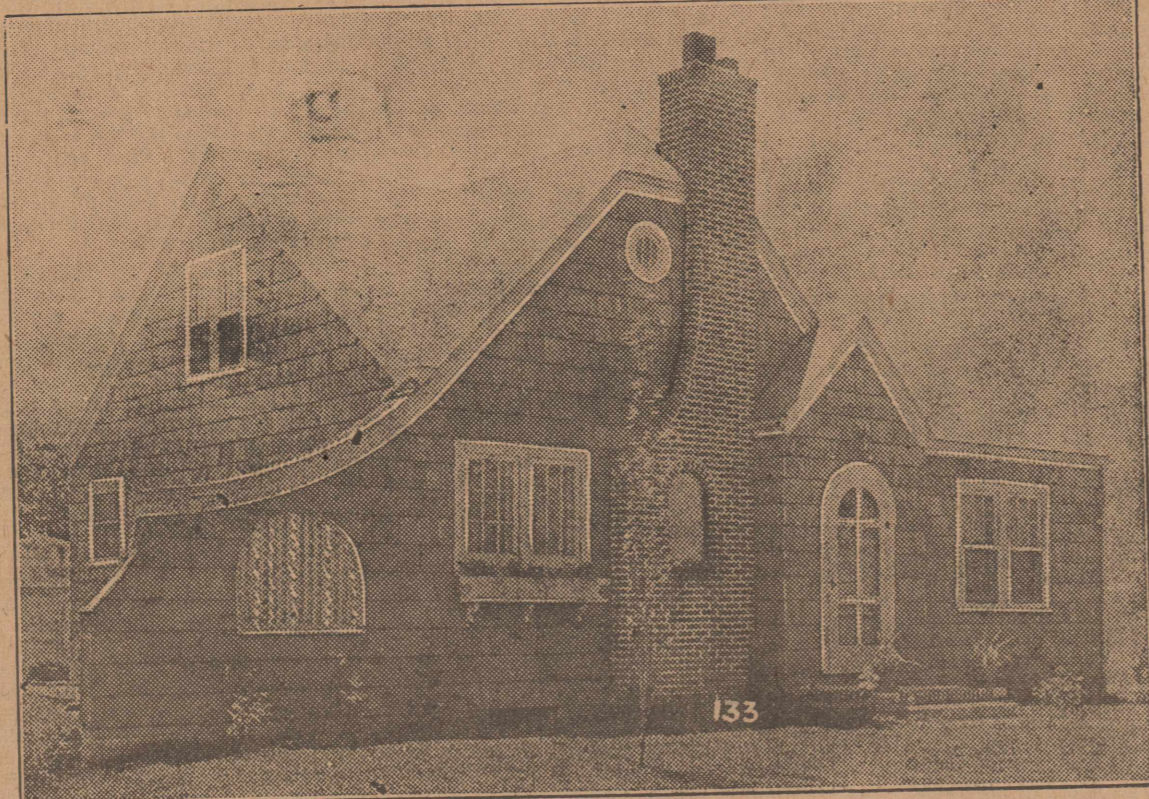

Well Designed
The exterior lines show the thought and care that has gone into the design of this one story house. The construction idea behind the plan is equally practical. The footings and foundation walls of the residence are constructed of concrete blocks. The sides of the house are grey stained shingles, laid 10 inches to the weather. Under the shingles is a coating of tarred felt which insulates the house and aids in conserving fuel.

Plans Are Practical
This is a home that has actually been constructed. The plans have been tried by a critical home owner and pronounced satisfactory. One of the advantages of using plans of houses that have been constructed in other localities is their evident satisfaction. Each has proven itself.

The dimensions of the Decatur are 34 feet by 28 feet, a size which conserves roofing. One of the disadvantages of the average bungalow is the wide expanse of roofing and the extreme foundation walls which result from its shape. The Decatur being more square, conserve on foundations and roofing.

Living Room Delightful
The living room is larger than is common in a one story house, being 19 feet long and 13 feet 3 inches wide. At one end is a pair of doors leading to a concrete slat terrace outside. This terrace is shielded by the extension of the front of the dwelling and forms a secluded spot where the family can lounge on hot summer days. It takes the place of the old fashioned

Unusually Attractive Residence

Above is shown the Decatur, 34 feet by 28 feet in dimensions, with five rooms, a breakfast nook, and a bath. The residence is planned for the builder who desires a one-story home and yet all the conveniences that are usually found in a much larger structure of two stories. The lines of the front are especially pleasing to the eye and interior details are carefully worked out to assure comfort and attractiveness.

When you plan your home with your local lumber man, you will find some of the suggestions given in the floor plans at the left of interest and perhaps assistance. You may wish to incorporate some of the features in the outline you desire.

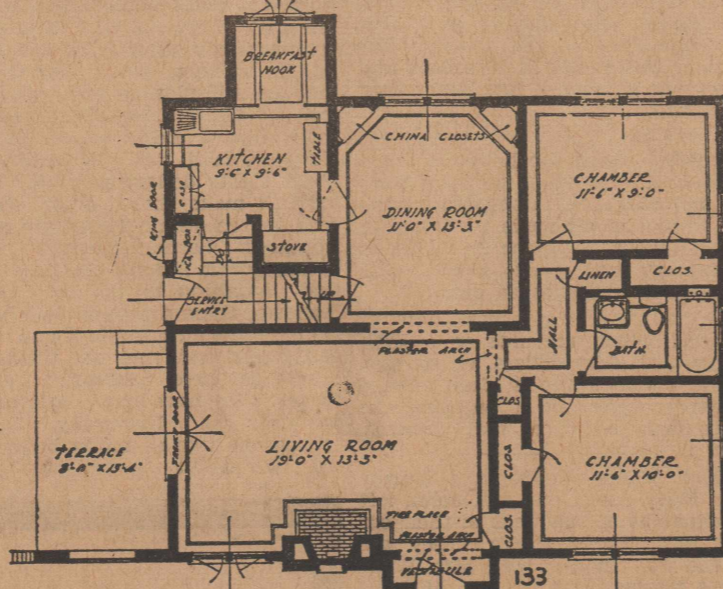

The living room is especially large. It is 19 feet long and 13 feet, 3 inches wide. Two bedrooms are included in the sleeping unit. The bath has provisions for a built-in tub. A spacious basement, reached from the service entry off the front porch and serves this purpose just as satisfactorily.

During the colder months of the year the family can gather in front of the large fireplace which graces the living room. This is constructed with a brick hearth and face. It burns real logs.

Just within the plaster arch which separates the shallow vestibule from the living room is a closet which may be used for the storage of overcoats, rubbers, umbrellas and like articles.

Sleeping Unit
Mention has been made of the sleeping unit of the dwelling. Here are the two bedrooms and the bath. The bath lies between the bed rooms and each chamber is served by a private hall.

The bath is snug and compactly arranged. It contains a built-in tub, resting flat on the floor. The medicine cabinet is built in also, and is of steel. Each of the chambers is equipped to living quarters or in one of the popular "lounge rooms" with pool table, book cases, and writing table.

'Cellar' May Be Turned Into Living Quarters

Amusement Room or 'Den' Is New Use For Space.

Back in our grandfather's day the basement enjoyed the more plebeian name of "cellar." And plebeian aptly expresses the esteem in which the cellar was held. No one was proud of the cellar and few instances are recorded of a host exhibiting his cellar to a house guest.

The cellars of our grandfather's day were dark, gloomy and often damp. A hole excavated in the ground beneath the house, rough brick side walls and (in the more plutocratic homes) a cement floor—that succinctly describes the old familiar cellar.

The furnace, the coal pile and the cast off accumulation of household articles, too good to throw away yet never to be used again,

The housewife will be delighted with the kitchen of the Decatur which is arranged to save steps. The gas stove is located in an alcove. The sink, situated under a window is flanked on one side by a kitchen cabinet which reaches to the ceiling. Besides the pantry case is the refrigerator, which may be served by an outside icer. The use of an outside icing door makes it unnecessary for the iceman to enter the dwelling when delivering ice. Dirt and water are never tramped in when this method of delivering ice to the refrigerator is used.

LOCATE FUEL BIN HANDY TO DRIVE FOR DELIVERY

If you propose to heat the new house with a coal burning heating plant, place the fuel bin on the side of the house near the drive way. Often fuel bins are located on the wrong side of the house from the delivery standpoint thus causing extra expense when coal is delivered.

The fuel bin door should be close at hand to the fire door of the heating plant so that no extra labor will be involved when handling coal. Often the furnace may be located with the fire door facing the fuel bin. In general the location of the fuel bin and heater is determined by the location of the chimney.

Mrs. Velma Miller of Dallas is visiting friends and relatives here this week.

Mrs. J. L. Heim, of Paducah, and Mrs. J. W. Harper, of Wellington, were in Floydada on business Wednesday. They visited with their nephew, Harper Scoggins, while here.

had their home here. Barrels and boxes were thrust into odd corners while last winter's ash heap dustily waited a belated removal. Sometime grandma stored her jellies and preserves on hanging shelves, lurking dangerously in unexpected spots.

Today cellars are being transformed into basements in keeping with the dignity of that name. They are becoming more important in the home builder's estimation as he sees more opportunities for putting them into active use.

This tendency to make the basement a group of agreeable and habitable rooms is the outgrowth of the economic desire to make use of the whole house plus the influence of the manufacturer of building products. The fuel oil heater advertised to be dustless and clean—some of the more recent models, indeed, have been glorified with colors after the fashion of the modern gas cooking stove. The steel window manufacturers invite the home owner to build sunlight and fresh air in the basement level. The cement mill and the maker of linoleum rugs show the value of concrete floors properly and attractively covered. The builder of billiard tables points out the desirability of using a part of the basement for this indoor amusement.

All of these influences have caused the home owner to appreciate the importance of the basement. His old time cellar was a grim necessity, built primarily for housing the heating plant and its accessories. It was avoided by all. The newer basement is presented as an opportunity to add at little expense a group of rooms to the living quarters. Since the excavated space is there, lying fallow, only a small amount of work and money are needed to recreate it into a useful, valuable addition.

When the basement is finished off into rooms, these quarters are immediately attractive. The function of living can be carried on as satisfactorily here as in any other part of the house. One family with a hillside home used a part of the basement for cooking and dining rooms. The kitchen was well lighted while its location made it cool in the summer. Lounging rooms, dens, and private offices for professional men are often located in the basement. A workshop for the man or boy who likes to handle tools can be placed on this floor.

The basement is an ideal location for the play room for the children of the house. Here they can gather on cold, disagreeable or rainy days. The mother knows that they will come to no harm as they are off the street, out of the way of danger. Playthings are confined to one room by this arrangement and the rest of the house becomes more orderly.

As you go into the newer homes you find that the owners are turning this former neglected space into a useful part of the home. The space is available, they reason—why not use it to the full. As a result they construct several more rooms at slight expense.

INSULATE FLOORS TO SAVE EXPENSE ON HEAT FUEL

Uninsulated floors will cause waste of heat. The amount will vary with the tightness of the floor joints, and whether there is a basement below the floor.

Floors which are over basements are usually warmer than those which are over ordinary earth. Cold does not develop so easily in the basement as here the heating plant is located and the temperature is milder.

Cracks in floor cause large fuel bills and the remedy is to make certain that the floors are well constructed in the first place. A hardwood floor is usually a guarantee of a tight floor for its construction is such that tightness is assured. But with the ordinary soft wood floors that are often found in small cottages crevices develop through which air creeps. Higher fuel bills result.

Make the floors air tight by laying heavy insulating paper between the rough and finished flooring or beneath the ordinary flooring. Seal the joints with lath and plaster or with wall board will also do.

Mr. and Mrs. M. E. Rogers and children spent Friday and a part of last Saturday in Altus, Oklahoma on business.

Mrs. Guy Stewart and daughter Coleta of Crosbyton were week end guests of Mrs. Troy Leonard.

LIGHT AND WATER PLANTS USED IN RURAL HOMES

If the new home is located on the edge of town or in the country, it is nowadays possible to have electric lighting and running water, for manufacturing plants have come to the rescue of the rural home builder by devising small lighting and pumping plants.

These plants usually operate by gasoline engines of very low horsepower. They are efficient and economical, operating most satisfactorily.

In this modern age there is no excuse for not having all of the comfort and conveniences of city life. They await the investment of the home builder.

Local Golfers Winners Over Players Of Spur

Four-City Golf League Plans Also Completed For Three Months Schedule.

Golfers of the Floydada Country Club Sunday afternoon won their inter-city match play with members of the Spur Golf Club, taking seven matches and losing four of eleven foursomes. In addition to the eleven foursomes a match of much interest was a foursome in which Adams, a pro from Paris, Texas and Robbins of Spur, were matched against Quails of Post and Clonts of Floydada. Adams and Robbins won this match five and four.

In this last-named match the club course record was smashed by the Paris pro, who took a 32 on his first nine holes and a 35 on the last for a total of 67 on the eighteen holes. His thirty-two on the first nine broke the course record for nine holes, also.

A golf league, the schedule for which was left for George Samson, of Post, to work out, was organized this week, with clubs of Matador, Spur, Post and Floydada entered.

In this series of games the plan is to have two matches each week, the different clubs to be hosts on the dates which will be announced.

G. C. Tubbs, who has been acting as secretary of the local golfers in the arrangements, said this week that play in the series of golf games would begin around July 1, he thought, and continue through July,
August and September.

Mrs. Jack Henry and Mrs. Billy
Standiforth were guests of Mrs.
John Mayo, of Dougherty, at lunchcon Friday.

"I CANNOT PRAISE
THIS KONJOLA TOO STRONGLY"

Says Wichita Lady Suffered For Twelve Years From Stomach Trouble.

MRS. DELLA SETTLE

"I cannot praise this Konjola too strongly, because I tried many other medicines and treatments, but none gave the remarkable relief that Konjola did," said Mrs. Della Settle, 1719 Mildred Avenue, Wichita.
"I just had to force myself to eat, and nearly everything I ate made me sick. I had cramping pains in my stomach and bowels until I could hardly endure them, and I simply felt miserable all the time.
"Finally I decided to put Konjola to the test. That proved to be a wise decision. Right from the start I noticed improvement. I now have a much better appetite, and meals are a pleasure as food digests without pains or misery in my stomach. My bowels are functioning as they should, and it is certainly a relief to be rid of that tired, worn-out feeling. I gladly endorse this splendid medicine that restored my health."

Konjola has become the most talked of medicine in America because it makes good. And Konjola makes good in the most stubborn cases when given a fair trial and from six to eight bottles are used.
Konjola is sold in Floydada, Texas, at Floydada Drug Company and by all the best druggists in all towns throughout this entire section.

the same press later this year.

During the past four years numerous short poems from Mrs. Scoggins' pen have appeared in the merit.

League Of University Enlists 5,000 Schools

50,000 Children of State Take Part In Contests Annually.

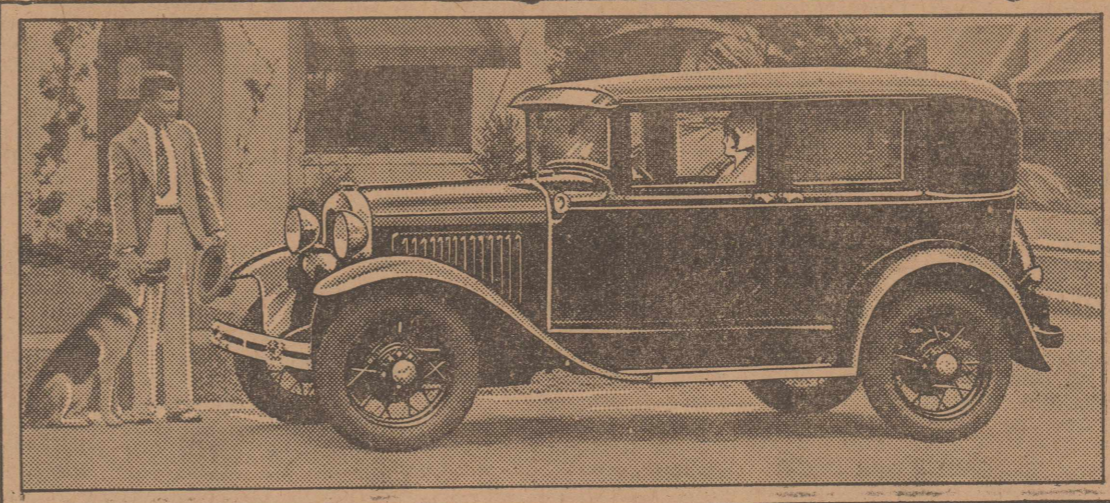

In the University of Texas Interscholastic League, Texas has the right to boast of one of the greatest organizations in the United States. Organized at the Texas State Teachers' Association by representatives of the University of Texas at Abilene in November, 1910, as a debating league with less than 100 people participating the first year, it now enlists more than 5,000 schools involving participation in its events of not less than 50,000 school children of Texas.

Most of the time since its inception, the University Interscholastic League has been a part of the Division of Extension of the University and under the leadership of the director of this department. For the last few years, however, the director has been the nominal head, but has entrusted the leadership of the organization to the "chief" of the Interscholastic League Bureau. Roy Bedichek, who is now chief of the bureau, became a member of the executive staff of the league in 1918, at which time Roy B. Henderson became director of athletics, which position he still holds.

In practically every improvement of the league since that time these men have played a major part. Such has been the success of the organization during the twelve years of their direction in enlisting the cooperation of the Schools of Texas, that the University now boasts of a scholastic organization larger by far than any other like organization in the world. So large indeed, has this scholastic group become, that all departments employ 1,800 state, district, and county officials, and 3,000 judges, referees, umpires, etc., in its annual round of contests.

The state executive committee appoints the district committees from among prominent school men and women employed in the respective districts in which they

Ford Offers New De Luxe Sedan

The De Luxe Sedan, recently added to the Ford line, is designed for those who desire distinctiveness and unusual comfort in an automobile. The interior is inviting and roomy with wide doors to both compartments. Absence of rear window gives the car a striking individuality and affords privacy to the occupants.

Interior trimmings and appointments are luxurious. Upholstery is either in brown mohair or a deep tan Bedford cord patterned after that used in high-priced cars. Other refinements include arm rests for the rear seat, mahogany finished garnish moldings on the windshield, flexible robe rail and hardware in an attractive pattern.

The front seat is adjustable within a range of four inches to suit the convenience and comfort of the driver. It is moved quickly and easily by a small, inconspicuous handle in the front center of the seat just above the floor.

The De Luxe Sedan, like other Ford body types, can be obtained in any one of several color combinations.

serve. The county executive committees are selected by a vote of the teachers at the annual sessions of the teachers institutes held throughout the state, usually in September of each year.

Except for the workers in the League Bureau at the University who are selected by the Board of Regents on the same basis as other employees of the University, the officer of the league serving throughout the state do not receive pay for their services. It is left optional with the various committees as to whether they are to give compensation to the judges of the contest though payment here is usually confined to reimbursement of the expenses incurred by those serving. In all cases, the committees must take their own responsibility as to how the money is to be raised, and are required to keep the financial affairs of the organization in the clear.

Origin of Idea
The idea for what is known as the University Interscholastic League was first suggested in 1910 by John A. Lomas, who was at that time registrar of the University. After his return from a tour of the universities of the western part of the United States made as an agent of Dr. Sidney E. Mezes, then president of the University, for the purpose of obtaining information that would help in extending the usefulness of the University, he reported that the best extension project for the institution was, in his own words "the fostering of a league among the public schools for the promotion of educational contests."

Dr. Mezes accepted the suggestion and appointed Dr. E. D. Shurter, then professor of public speaking in the University, to undertake the organization and direction of the league. He was made a member of the working force of the Division of Extension under which the new organization was destined to function. The department was itself young and, desiring to extend its usefulness to all parts of the state, full cooperation was given Dr. Shurter to the end that he appeared before the Abilene convention of the Texas State Teachers' Association in November, 1910, with a well-developed plan for the launching of the league among the schools of the state.

An organization known as the University Debating League was formed, and the first annual meeting was held at the University in May, 1911. At this meeting, in addition to the holding of contests for a president, vice president, secretary, treasurer, executive committee, district directors, and county directors, were adopted. The principal of the school winning the debate the preceding year was to be president, and the principal of the school winning the declamation contest was to be vice president. In case the two events were won by the same school, the vice presidency was given to the principal of the school winning second place in the debate. The directorship of each district was to be given to the principal of the highest ranking school at or near the center of the district, and the county directorship was to be given to the county superintendent of some representative school man selected by teacher of the county. The name of the organization was changed to the University Debating and Declamation League.

Athletic Contests Started
Before the organization of the league, the athletic department of the University had been conducting invitation meets at the University to foster the development of athletics in the high schools. In 1911 the public school leaders of the state were invited by the University authorities to participate in the organization of an institution which would have control and direction of athletics in the high schools of Texas. Dr. Charles W. Ramsell, professor of history in the University, had planned the organization to be known as the University Interscholastic Athletic Association and was given direction of it, which he held until 1913 when the organization merged with the University Debating and Declamation League.

Name of League
The new organization was called the University Interscholastic League, and, though many changes and additions have come into the organization, it still retains the name and general purpose given it at its beginning. The purpose of the league is, as given in its constitution, "to organize and direct, through the medium of properly supervised and controlled contests, desirable school activities, thereby assisting in the preparation for citizenship." This purpose is in harmony with the stated objectives of organizations formed in other states to control and direct interscholastic activities.

The organization of the league as it stands is a result of much experimentation, according to Roy Bedichek, chief of the League Bureau. Though departments of the league have expanded, new officials having been added to take care of the special needs of such departments, the general scheme of direction through state, district, and county executive committees has been retained throughout its history. Through the work of committee the League has produced during its existence an imposing array of cooperative and educational activities by the school children of Texas.

The league has shortcomings which it is gradually remedying, but it bids fair to bring accomplishments as yet undreamed of. However, looking down the long vistas of the years that are to come, it is mandatory that those who are to succeed these who have wrought so well carry on the splendid ideals which the league has prompted throughout its existence. If this league can perpetuate itself, building a monument of character that gives to the citizenship a rich treasure of brawn, brain, and soul, then leadership in the Southwest will indeed be safe and the great institutions which are now most prized will be secure.

Mrs. G. C. Beedy and children, of Morton, came Sunday for a visit with her parents, Mr. and Mrs. W. P. Martin. They were guests of Mrs. James Colville and Mrs. A. A. Beedy Monday.

Cases of 'Jake' Still Puzzle Medics, College Dean Says

New York, N. Y., June 14. (UP)—Cause of the paralysis of 25,000 persons believed to be sufferers from drinking Jamaica ginger is not positively determined, Dr. Henry H. Rusby, dean of the college of pharmacy of Columbia University, New York City, told United Press in an interview in which he discussed the legal and scientific aspects of the so-called "jake" poisoning cases.

Dr. Rusby said most authorities agreed regarding the symptoms of the poisoning and that most sufferers experienced acute paralysis of the lower limbs.

Cause of this suffering, he said, was still a mystery to many scientific students.

"Many suggestions have been made as to the identity of the poisoning agent, but it has not yet been determined," Dr. Rusby said. "Probably a number of injurious constituents have resulted from the use of denatured alcohol as a menstruum."

"Both carbolic acid and creosote have been found in small quantities, but neither of these would produce the effects noted. Recently, Prof. A. R. Bliss, Jr., dean of the school of pharmacy of the University of Tennessee, has found iso-propyl alcohol in the fluid extract."

"This would come nearer to producing the poisoning effects, but still there is some other poisonous adulterant of the ginger used in the preparation."

Dr. Rusby said that much of this fluid extract is not from the ginger itself but from the oleoresin extracted from it, the majority of which is imported to the United States.

Control of the ginger drink has been passed from the federal department of Food, Drug and Insecticide division to the prohibition department, Dr. Rusby said. The prohibition department, he said, had no control over the purity of the fluid extract.

"Here is another disastrous sequel of the 'Great Crime' described by Dr. Wiley's recent book, 'The History of Crime.' The elimination of the old bureau of chemistry, one of the most beneficent of institutions providing for the safety of our people, but objectionable to the 'interests' which prey upon public misfortune, has thrown an impossible burden upon the officials who are charged with the responsibilities that were borne by that bureau. Doubtless the present drug unit could have done better than they have, but unquestionably they have had thrust upon them many times as much work as it would be possible for them to perform with the means with which they are now provided. The real responsibility for the delinquencies of this unit rests upon congress."

Floyd County Singers Take Active Part in Convention

John F. Taylor Heads Group For Ninth Time

Over 3,000 Attend Two-Day Session Held At Lockney.

Lovers of music from 25 West Texas and Eastern New Mexico counties made Lockney their mecca Saturday and Sunday of last week during the ninth annual session of the Plateau Singing Convention, attended by a crowd estimated at 3,000 to 4,500 people. Floyd County singers, led by C. M. Lyles, president of the county convention, took an active part in the two-day program.

Business Session Saturday
John F. Taylor of Clovis, N. M., was unanimously elected to the presidency of the singing convention for the ninth consecutive time in the business session Saturday afternoon of the committee at large and the advisory committee.

Other officials of the Plateau Convention, the largest group of singers in a similar organization in the world, elected were Earl Raper, Runningwater, Texas, first vice president; J. P. McClish, Tatum, New Mexico, re-elected second vice-president; Miss Evelyn Taylor, Clovis, N. M., re-elected secretary; J. S. Garrett, Hereford, Texas, assistant secretary.

The committee voted a change of the constitution to make provision for the place of second vice-president.

The advisory board appointed by President Taylor includes B. P. Abbott, Bovina, Texas; F. M. Hillard, Tulla, Texas; J. E. Brannon, Littlefield, Texas; M. B. Keator, Tucuman, N. M.; Fred Hodges, Portales, N. M.; R. G. Peipelman, Melrose, N. M. Mr. Hillard and Mr. Peipelman are the new members, succeeding Earl Raper, Runningwater, Texas, and Arthur Nutt, Lovington, N. M.

Officials Well Pleased
Officials of the organization were highly enthused over the reception accorded them by the citizens of Lockney and the Chamber of Commerce. Floyd County had the largest delegation present Sunday, hundreds from the various communities and Floydada being in attendance.

The convention opened Saturday morning at 10 o'clock in the Lockney auditorium, continued through Saturday afternoon and night and opened again Sunday morning at 8:45 o'clock. The closing song was sung shortly after 4 o'clock. Special numbers by the Harmony Four with the Baxter-Stamps Music Company of Dallas, solos by representatives of several counties embraced in the organization, quarters, addresses, and songs by the entire group comprised the program extending through the two-day convention.

Dr. Joe McCollum of Lockney made the welcome address Sunday morning.

President Taylor directed the general convention and everything was conducted in a most orderly manner. W. D. Biggers, superintendent of schools at Lockney, and D. D. Shipley of Floydada made talks of welcome to the visitors Saturday morning.

Members of the Stamps Quartet were Austin Williams, first tenor; V. O. Fossett, second tenor and pianist; Howard L. Wright, baritone, and W. Allen Sims, bass. Mr. Sims was unable to be present Saturday because of the illness of his father.

Boy Scouts of the Lockney troop acted as escorts for the visitors, conducting them to their rooms in Lockney homes.

Lockney Wins, 2-1
As a special entertainment feature Lockney and Floydada baseball teams staged a baseball game Sunday afternoon, Lockney finally winning in the tenth inning by a score of 2-1.

The Plateau Singing Convention was organized in 1922 and the first annual convention was held in the Lyceum Theatre at Clovis, N. M., in June 1922. Over 6,000 people at-

Two years ago the 15th of June, Dougherty installed its first two water meters, at the South Plains Lumber yard and L. L. Collins Grocery. Since that time 40 meters have been set. 118,000 gallons of water were metered out for the month of May while 12,000 gallons were used on the parks, making a total of 130,000 gallons pumped last month.

In a few more days the hair-cutting question will have been solved. Practically every prospective in our town has been shorn since the hot weather started. We wish to thank the barbers who have tried to settle with us, but since the rush is about over we would advise now, that you wait until late summer.

The organization of singers is purely a philanthropic institution and has not been organized for financial or commercial gain. "We come for the fellowship, the friendship and the singing," was the way President Taylor summed up the purpose of the organization in a short address.

Selection of the meeting place for next year will not be made until a mid-year meeting in January.

Counties in Texas and New Mexico that are represented in the convention are Chaves, Cochran, Terry, Eddy, Hockley, Lynn, Randall, Castro, Parmer, Quay, Lamb, Swisher, Carson, Roosevelt, Bailey, Curry, DeBaca, Deaf Smith, Briscoe, Potter, Lea, Floyd, Union, Lubbock, and Hale.
