

Freed Hostages Reveal Iranian Brutality

By The Associated Press
The emancipated hostages told of beatings and other atrocities at the hands of their Iranian captors today as they telephoned their loved ones back home.
One said he was beaten and placed in solitary confinement for more than five months after he tried to escape. Another said he was told by Iranian interrogators trying to extract information from him that his mother had died. He didn't learn that she was still alive until the freed captives reached Germany this morning.

Col. Leland Holland, 53, security chief of the U.S. Embassy in Tehran, called his 79-year-old mother in Scales Mound, Ill., before dawn.
"He said he had spent a month in what he called the 'dungeon' and said his captors were S.O.B.s," said the colonel's mother, Clara Holland. "He said, 'I didn't fare as badly as some of them did.' He said his house was ransacked and everything taken, including his watch and rings. They took all the furniture and clothes."
Duane "Sam" Gillette called his parents in Columbia, Pa., and Andrew Appel, a spokesman for the family, said later.

"His treatment was at times disgusting. I think President Reagan was polite when he termed the Iranians barbarians."
"We know that his letters were covering up what the real situation was. There was no physical torture, but there was psychological pressure. The food wasn't good and the conditions were very poor."
And the family of Malcolm Kalp in Brockton, Mass., said they learned today that the reason nobody back home heard from him during the 444 days of captivity was that he tried to escape several times and was punished.

Kalp, 43, talked for about half an hour with his brother, Richard Kalp.
"He told us he tried to escape several times," Richard Kalp's wife said. "That sounded like him."
"He said he had written us often and asked if we had received any of his letters. We told him we hadn't and he said he had never received any of ours and we had written too."
"He told us he was beaten by them and placed in solitary confinement because of his escape attempts," said

Kalp's sister-in-law, Linda Kalp. She said he served from 150 days to 170 days in solitary, but she didn't know if it was all served at once.
U.S. Marine Sgt. Johnny McKeel Jr. told his parents in Balch Springs that interrogators told him his mother had died.
Young McKeel quoted the interrogator as saying, "Your mother is dead and if you want to go back to the funeral, you'll have to tell us what we want to know."
The Marine said he gave only his name, rank and serial number. A guard knocked out one of his teeth.

Former hostage Elizabeth Montagne, calling her treatment by Iranian captors "degrading, humiliating and dehumanizing," says the militants forced her to play Russian roulette.
"It was mental abuse," she said in an interview. "There was never a threat of physical beating with ... fists or clubs, but it was mental abuse. And, there were threats with guns."
"I don't want to go into detail about the threats with the guns," Miss Montagne said, "but everyone called it the

Reagan Vows Staffers Will Serve Nation

WASHINGTON (AP) — President Reagan, beginning his first full day as chief executive, watched today as 38 members of his White House staff were sworn-in by Chief Justice Warren Burger.
Reagan told his aides, sworn in as a group, that although he had no doubts about anyone's loyalty to him, they owe their loyalty "to the nation."
"We have a new kind of loyalty now," he said. "Our loyalty must be only to this nation and the people we represent."
Reagan said every judgment "must be made on the basis that no one's going to be seeking office ever again. Now I don't say that we won't seek office ever again, but the decisions will be made on what is good for the people, what is right as against what is wrong, and with no political considerations being discussed."
After the swearing-in, Reagan convened his first Cabinet meeting, even though no members of the Cabinet had been sworn in.

Marine Band." Reagan chuckled to the spouses and children of staff members.
Then he reiterated that all decisions should be made as if there would be no next election — without political considerations.
Reagan entered his first full day in office with a secretary of defense already installed at the Pentagon and the likelihood of having his secretary of state confirmed before the day was over.
Caspar W. Weinberger was confirmed as defense secretary by a 97-2 vote Tuesday a few hours after Reagan was sworn in as the nation's 40th president.
Alexander M. Haig was expected to win confirmation as secretary of state by a similar vote later today.
But just as Weinberger did not escape some criticism Tuesday, neither was Haig likely to be a unanimous choice today.
Sen. Paul S. Sarbanes, D-Md., and Paul Tsongas, D-Mass., voted against Haig when the Senate Foreign Relations Committee recommended his confirmation and Sen. Lowell Weicker, R-Conn., said he would join them in opposing Haig's confirmation today.

Deposits Set Record Here

By BOB CAMPBELL
Avalanche-Journal Staff
The inauguration of Ronald Reagan as president has made Americans more optimistic about the future and will help the economy in terms of improving consumer confidence, two Lubbock bank presidents said today.
As the 10 Lubbock banks reported record deposits of almost $1.4 billion, an increase of about 12 percent over 1979 year-end figures, the bankers were optimistic that inflation will gradually be brought under control by the new administration.
"I very definitely sense an optimistic feeling," Howard Yandell, president of the First National Bank, said.
"I'm not sure if Mr. Reagan will cure all these ills; but I think the fact that we have a new administration coming in and that everyone has indicated they are in favor of a more conservative approach in government spending and fiscal policy is really a plus factor.

"I think it will take a joint effort of everyone concerned to control inflation. I don't think Ronald Reagan can do it by himself."
The First National Bank surged in deposits from $337.6 million in September to $397.5 million at the end of 1980 to remain the biggest bank in town by a comfortable margin.
Lubbock National Bank was second at year-end at $353.2 million.
At the end of 1979, First National led Lubbock National by $342.4 million to $329.9 or only about $12 1/2 million.
Yandell said the increase in deposits was attributable mainly to the new interest-paying checking accounts that were started last July and to an increase in interest rates paid for certificates of deposits.

The bank president said he, like bankers everywhere, is concerned about the high rate of interest for loans and "would feel much better if we could get the interest rates down."
The prime rate is currently 20 percent, he noted.
Yandell said Lubbock area farming prospects look good for 1981 because subsoil moisture conditions are good and because of the healthy commodity prices during the past crop season.
He said the Lubbock building industry remains in an economic trough, but should rebound somewhat on the strength of $42 million pumped into local lending institutions recently by the Lubbock Housing Authority.

The money will be used in loans to home-buyers and should be expended during the coming year, he said.
W. R. Collier, president of American State Bank, said he "is very positive" about the Lubbock economy in 1981.
"However, until we get inflation under control and until interest rates subside somewhat," Collier said, "I cannot see very much enthusiasm on the part of consumers."
He said the Lubbock economy is basically healthy but has "some soft spots" in new home construction and new automobile sales.
"We have experienced an increase in growth from a deposits standpoint and an increase in savings, and I think this is healthy," he said.
"This past year has extremely high

Pistol Ruled As Evidence In Slaying

By KIM COBB
Avalanche-Journal Staff
ARILENE — The pistol alleged to have been fired by Billy Wayne Alexander Jr. in the fatal shooting of a Department of Public Safety trooper last October will be admitted into evidence against the defendant in his trial for capital murder, Judge Robert C. Wright ruled this morning.
With that ruling, Wright ordered the jury, which will be sequestered for the duration of the trial, brought to Arilene's 104th District courtroom at 1 p.m. today to begin hearing testimony in the case.
Criminal District Attorney John Montford was scheduled to call several DPS officers to the stand today to outline the radio transmission made just minutes before Trooper Jerry Don Davis' death and to describe the discovery of the trooper's body.
Defense attorney Floyd Holder opened the proceedings at 8:30 a.m. with several motions — including the request that evidence seized in the search of Alexander's 1979 Thunderbird and a house he formerly rented be suppressed on the basis that those searches were illegal.
DPS officers and Texas Rangers discovered the .357-magnum pistol under the front seat of the Thunderbird, which was parked in a garage adjacent to a house Alexander had rented and at one time shared with longtime girlfriend Elaine Hill.
Alexander took the witness stand this morning to answer questions about the time spent in the house, how long the house had been rented, the contents of the house and any locks on the house and adjacent garage.
The defendant admitted to working as a drug dealer, testifying that his "partner," a Lubbock man, had shared in the rent at one time. Alexander testified that the "partner" was, he thought, still renting the house during the early morning hours of Oct. 6 — just hours after the trooper had been shot. After moving out, he had used the garage for storage, Alexander told the court.
The defendant answered Holder's questions about the car, explaining that he had obtained the car from a man who had reported it stolen. He had stored the Thunderbird in the garage at 1913 62nd St. for about a month after he had obtained the vehicle, he said.
"That car you had tucked away in the garage was hotter than a pistol, right?" Montford asked Alexander.
"It was reported stolen," Alexander answered.
Under further questioning from Montford, the defendant admitted that the car was obtained in an insurance fraud scheme and had been equipped with license tags stolen at the South

Clayton To Retain Most Committee Chairmen

AUSTIN (AP) — Speaker Bill Clayton returned Rep. Bill Presnal, D-Bryan, as chairman of the powerful House Appropriations Committee today and reappointed Rep. Tom Uher, D-Bay City, as head of the State Affairs Committee.
Clayton said he kept in their jobs all 1979 chairmen who were re-elected to the House.
There were exceptions, however.
Rep. Al Brown, D-San Antonio, who faces a special election Feb. 10, was not returned as chairman of the House Constitutional Amendments Committee because of his uncertain status.
The constitutional amendments post — important because the committee will consider Gov. Bill Clements' initiative and referendum proposal — went to Rep. Bob McFarland, R-Arlington.
Rep. Sue McBea, D-Del Rio, who headed the Elections Committee in 1979 was promoted to chairwoman of the Calendar Committee, which regulates the flow of bills to the floor after they are approved by other committees.
Rep. Gerald Hill, D-Austin, was named chairman of the Elections Committee.
Clayton said he tried to distribute chairmanships and vice chairmanships proportionately to the various groupings in the House, including Republicans, blacks, Mexican-Americans and women.
The chairmanship of the Regions, Compacts and Districts Committee, which will handle legislative and congressional redistricting bills, was returned to Rep. Tim Von Dohlen, D-Goliad.
Rep. Craig Washington, D-Houston, one of Clayton's lawyers at his Brihab corruption trial in Houston, again will be chairman of the Human Services Committee. Clayton also reappointed Washington as speaker pro tem, giving him authority to preside over the House in Clayton's absence.

Rep. Buck Florence, D-Hughes Springs, was moved from the chairmanship of the largely inactive Rules Committee to chairman of the Judicial Affairs Committee.
The Judiciary Committee chairmanship, vacated by former Rep. Ben Grant's decision to run for a judgeship, went to Rep. Bob Bush, D-Sherman.
Other chairmanships: Agriculture and Livestock, Rep. Leroy Wieting, D-Portland; Business and Industry, Rep. Chris Semos, D-Dallas; Criminal Jurisprudence, Rep. Lynn Nabers, D-Brownwood; Employment Practices, Rep. Lee Jackson, R-Dallas; Energy Resources, Rep. Joe Hanna, D-Breckenridge; Environmental Affairs, Rep. Bennie Bock II, D-New Braunfels; Financial Institutions, Rep. Stan Schlueter, D-Salado; Government Organization, Rep. Charles Evans, D-Hurst; Health Services, Rep. Ron Wilson, D-Houston; Higher Education, Rep. Wilhelmina Delco, D-Austin; House Administration, Rep. Pete Laney, D-Hale Center; Insurance, Rep. Bob Simpson.

Court Widens Powers Of Police

WASHINGTON (AP) — Police are free to stop vehicles when "circumstantial evidence" suggests the people inside may have committed a crime, the Supreme Court ruled today.
Voting unanimously, the court struck down a ruling that would have held police to a higher standard — prohibiting such stops unless police officers had "probable cause" to suspect a crime.
The ruling reinstated the convictions of two men found guilty of transporting illegal aliens from Mexico to Arizona.
Chief Justice Warren E. Burger, writing for the court, said investigative stops by police can be justified when all the evidence points to the likelihood of criminal activity.
"The totality of the circumstances — the whole picture — must be taken into account," Burger said. "Based upon that whole picture, the detaining officers must have a particularized and objective basis for suspecting the particular person stopped of criminal activity."

The Supreme Court also ruled today that 72-year-old Feodor Fedorenko, a Nazi death camp guard during World War II, must have his U.S. citizenship revoked.
The federal government now can strip Fedorenko of his citizenship and move to deport him.
By a 7-2 vote, the justices said Fedorenko's citizenship was "illegally procured" because he never told immigration officials about his war background.
The court said Fedorenko's misrepresentation 32 years ago violated the Immigration and Nationality Act.
In other action today, the court: — Upheld a Minnesota law banning use of non-returnable milk bottles. The justices said the state legislature had the right to ban one type of container for environmental reasons while allowing continued use of other types.

— Ruled that pledging securities as loan collateral is the same as an "offer of sale" and therefore subject to the same federal anti-fraud laws which cover stock sales. The decision upheld the conviction of William Rubin, a New York accountant, who was found guilty of conspiracy to defraud Bankers Trust Co. of New York.
In the Fedorenko case, Justice Thurgood Marshall, writing for the court, rejected Fedorenko's arguments that his long history as a law-abiding U.S. resident should be weighed in his favor.
Instead, Marshall agreed with the 5th U.S. Circuit Court of Appeals ruling that Fedorenko's behavior since coming to the United States in 1949 can play no part in his legal case.

"We agree ... that district courts lack equitable discretion to refrain from entering a judgment of denaturalization against a naturalized citizen whose citizenship was procured illegally or by willful misrepresentation of material facts," Marshall said.
Justices Byron R. White and John Paul Stevens dissented. Stevens said the court's ruling "may jeopardize the citizenship of countless survivors of Nazi concentration camps."
"That human suffering will be a consequence of today's venture is certainly predictable; that any suffering will be alleviated or avoided is at best doubtful," Stevens said.

Texans Considering Proposals To Reduce Taxes

AUSTIN (AP) — This is tax-paying time and Texans are doing a lot of thinking about some way to reduce soaring taxes.

In turn, this brings up, as it did in California, the idea of by-passing the professional lawmakers and letting ordinary citizens propose and vote on tax reductions and law changes.

"Initiative and referendum" is the unwieldy label attached to it. Gov. Bill Clements gives "I&R" — that's legislative slang — only a 50-50 chance in this Texas legislative session but a lot of others are pushing the proposal, which Clements first presented in his 1978 campaign.

The outcome of Saturday's election in Dallas, which originated by petition, may determine just how far I&R goes in the 67th Legislature. About one-tenth of the city's population voted decisively against the plan to slash the city's property tax rate by 29 percent and to limit tax increases to 5 percent a year.

In his 1978 campaign, which made him Texas' first Republican governor in 104 years, Clements incorporated initiative and referendum in his "Taxpayer Bill of Rights." However, in the 1979 Legislature the proposal for "indirect" initiative and referendum never got the 100 votes needed to send it to voters for a possible constitution change.

An "indirect" proposal would let voters petition the Legislature for action instead of placing the measure directly on the ballot.

Clements' sponsored legislation this time, presented in both the House and Senate, would put a proposition before the Legislature only if a petition is signed by 10 percent of the voters in each of 190 counties. Other legislators have "direct" proposals.

Clements said recently his I&R plan has a "50-50 chance, no better than that." However, he stressed he would present it and support it.

A few days later, Howard Jarvis, who fostered Proposition 13 in California to slash property taxes, predicted Texas could have I&R if they put enough pressure on legislators.

A Texas House committee which studied I&R before this session started recommended no specific bill but said there "appears to be a strong desire" among Texans for initiative and referendum.

"The fear expressed by opponents that its passage could result in wholesale tax changes, affect the Texas economy, etc., is not substantiated," the study group's report said.

Texas 13, headed by former Attorney General Waggoner Carr, is actively working for Clements' bill.

"Texas 13 feels that the elected officials are limited in their ability to control taxes and spending due to the large number and strength of the lobbyists and those who live on government checks," Carr said.

On the other hand, one of the most outspoken opponents to I&R is Houston attorney and lobbyist James K. Nance, member of a prominent Houston law firm with many well-heeled clients over the state.

Nance, recognized as a legal authority on constitutional law, says I&R is "unwise and unsound public policy. . . I&R rules out completely the beneficial give-and-take of the legislative process — the free and open debate that permits compromise, consensus-building, accommodation for minority rights and concerns. Instead, it poses a question, framed in the isolation, in yes-or-no terms.

"I&R offer no assurances that voters will have the opportunity to learn the complexities, or the potential results, of the proposals before them," he said in a recent brief mailed to all legislators.

Nance notes that the Texas Association of School Board Administrators has taken a stand against I&R, along with the Texas Association of Business, Texas Association of Taxpayers, Texas Chemical Council, Houston Chamber of Commerce and the South Texas Chamber of Commerce.

The Texas AFL-CIO not only opposes I&R but says if Clements' bill passes the labor union will use the new petition power to try to pass a corporate income tax bill.

Within the next few weeks, House and Senate committees will scheduled public hearings on the various I&R proposals. Then it will be up to the legislators to decide if they want to give ordinary tax payers any of their lawmaking power.

U.S. Policies Affected By Agreements

By JOHN CUNIFF

NEW YORK (AP) — Having devised two of the more complex financing deals ever attempted by the U.S. government — the Chrysler rescue plan and release of the Iranian hostages — the Carter administration has retired.

But that doesn't mean the problems also retire. Instead, lawyers will be dealing with the agreements and precedents for years to come, and foreign and domestic policies could be affected in subtle ways.

The hostage settlement, for example, might satisfy the governments involved, but it may not be as acceptable to the institutions and individuals connected with the late Shah's frozen assets.

And if the Chrysler agreement is approved by bankers and workers, it could set a pattern for companies avoiding bankruptcy courts and instead reorganizing under the protection of government guarantees.

In each instance the public praise is overwhelming, because immediate and pressing goals have been satisfied, but over time the settlements could begin to look like expedients rather than sound policy-setters.

In the Chrysler case especially, the precedents are obvious:

—The executive branch rather than the courts can now be used in corporate hardship cases. Without federal aid Chrysler would be bankrupt, operating under court-appointed officers.

—Assets that belong to all the people might under some circumstances now be assigned for the benefit of a particular few, such as management and shareholders, without the consent of the people.

—Uncompetitive companies may be saved at the expense of production. The intent is to save Chrysler so as to save jobs and competition, but the opposite could be saved: A weak company with uncertain employment.

Whatever, and despite differences, the deals are huge accomplishments, especially in the human terms expressed by Walter Mondale. "We've got some right here to put those hostages and their families at a very high priority," said the vice president. "We want them home."

Much the same thing was said in the Chrysler situation, and with some justification, but then the comparisons end.

Some 140,000 jobs are said to be at stake in the Chrysler situation, which means at least a half-million family members. And perhaps that many more jobs are involved in related supplier industries.

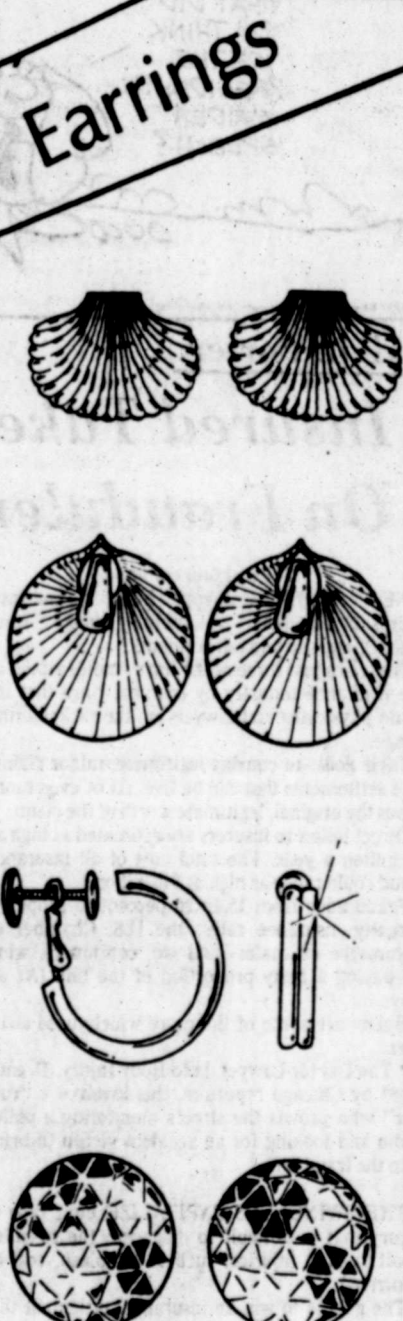

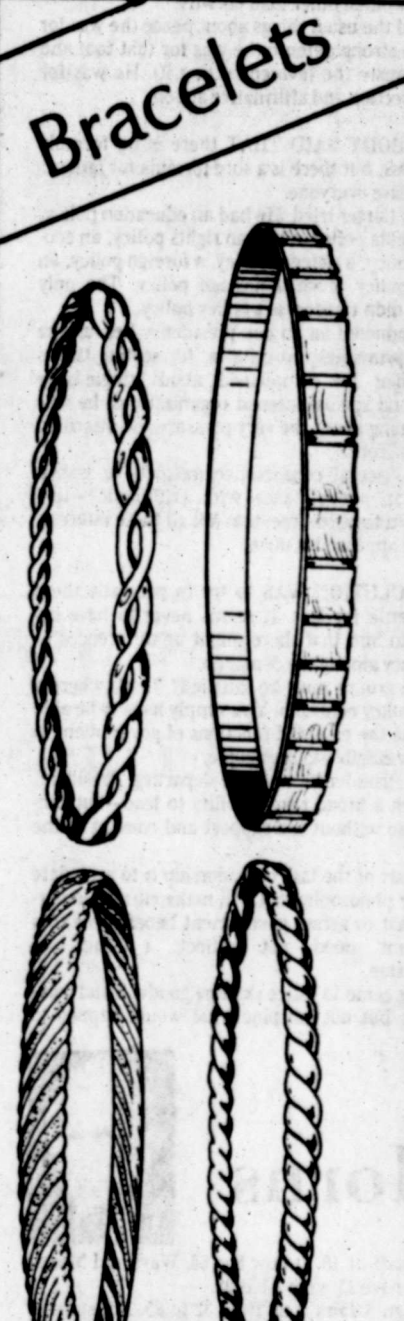

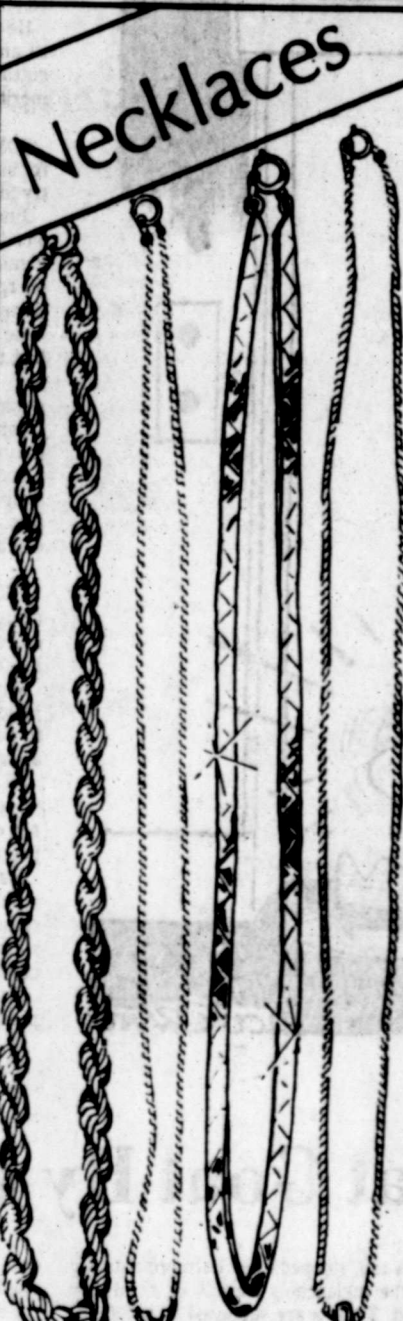

But, whereas the hostages probably would have remained jailed if a settlement weren't reached, there is far less evidence that if Chrysler failed all the jobs mentioned would be lost forever to the country.

In fact, economists who study the Chrysler problem point out that in bankruptcy the company would continue on a diminished scale, and that conceivably it could become more competitive and able to create jobs.

It still might become strong again, and should it do so it would solidify the precedent of a corporation turning to the government rather than the courts. If one can do it, then why not another?

In fact, the possibility would seem to exist that sometime in the future a corporation might present government with the ultimatum: Financial guarantees or the company and all it workers go under.

Bush Content To Play Role Of Invisible Adviser

WASHINGTON (AP) — He's about to become the Cheshire Cat of this political wonderland, disappearing but for an occasional public smile, and yet George Bush says he's looking forward to his new-found role.

He doesn't mind fading from the public view, he says. In fact, he considers it an essential part of being vice president.

The duties of the man who gave Ronald Reagan his toughest challenge for the Republican presidential nomination are as nebulous as the form of Alice's tour guide through another, earlier wonderland. Bush, who gained the vice presidential nomination only after Reagan decided he could not give former President Gerald R. Ford a co-presidency, set forth his views on his new job in an exclusive interview.

He says he doesn't have a lot of details about what he will be allowed to do. And the details he does have indicate "I won't be doing as much substance as I want."

He readily says "You know, there's a lot of expectations (by vice presidents) that are unfulfilled." And he indicates he doesn't expect to shatter that tradition, saying "I just think I may have some ideas of doing things, certain things, and they won't work out."

Bush said he expects to spend the next four years as a behind-the-scenes adviser to President Ronald Reagan.

He says he's not only willing but absolutely intends to disappear into his new job. And he adds "I'm not coming into this with overexpectations" of his authority.

Bush says outgoing vice president Walter F. Mondale probably set the best pattern in the job.

The former Texas oilman says that if you asked him "what specifically did Mondale do, what goal, what pattern... I couldn't name a specific."

"But what he did is to continue to have the confidence of the president of the United States, get his opinion in there and work to fulfill the goals of the administration. That's what you're supposed to be doing. You're not supposed to be posturing out there and trying to get your own name in the paper."

"The way I've sorted it out in my mind is to try to avoid a lot of specific assignments, give the president advice but ... do it quietly. Be available to do a wide array of things that can be useful to the president. Work to see no staff jealousies or rivalries spring up. Be informed."

"In this office you have access to a tremendous amount of information, particularly the way Gov. Reagan has indicated to his own staff — and that will filter through the bureaucracy — that he wants me treated. Be a well-informed person, see people, interesting people, and learn. I look forward to it," he says.

Bush says he believes he has Reagan's confidence even though the two have dissimilar backgrounds and do not always agree on every issue.

He says he was "included in on all final decisions" on the Cabinet appointments. "I felt totally free to make input on various things, sometimes positive, sometimes negative. It didn't always go the way I wanted. But it went that way enough to feel that I was helpful to Reagan, who made the final decisions himself, as he should," Bush said.

Tomorrow's Horoscope

By Bernice Bede Osol

AQUARIUS (Jan. 20-Feb. 18) The opinions of others are important tomorrow, but they should not be taken so seriously that they cause you to act against your own better judgment.

PISCES (Feb. 20-March 20) If your work habits are erratic tomorrow, the results are likely to be similar. Don't do things in fits and starts. Organize your schedule and efforts.

ARIES (March 21-April 19) Basically you're a very adventurous and daring person. Under proper circumstances, these are commendable traits. Tomorrow, however, you may be tempted to take unwise risks.

TAURUS (April 20-May 20) Remorse could later set in if you make important decisions too impulsively tomorrow. Still for time and a chance to study what you're getting into.

GEMINI (May 21-June 20) Keep in mind tomorrow that anything worth doing is worth doing well. Tasks given merely a lick and a promise may have to be done over.

CANCER (June 21-July 22) Treat your resources and possessions with prudence and respect tomorrow. Reckless or extravagant behavior could put you behind the 8-ball.

LEO (July 23-Aug. 22) Look out for your interests tomorrow, but try to do so without being too self-serving. Others will let you know quickly enough if you are.

VIRGO (Aug. 23-Sept. 22) Normally you're pretty good at keeping confidential information to yourself, but tomorrow could be an exception. You might reveal something that's best kept secret.

LIBRA (Sept. 23-Oct. 23) You're a very generous person, but be careful tomorrow what you lend and to whom. Give only if there is a real need.

SCORPIO (Oct. 24-Nov. 22) Be careful tomorrow that you don't overreact and make an issue of something that really isn't one. Let your logic prevail, instead of your emotions and pride.

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 23-Dec. 21) Sometimes your hunches are rather amazing and accurate, but this may not be the case tomorrow. Signals from your intuition could contain a lot of static.

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22-Jan. 20) A well-meaning friend who has caused you some complications previously could create ripples again tomorrow if you permit him or her to get involved in your private affairs.

Claims Of Torture Investigated

ISTANBUL (UPI) — Before the coup in Turkey last Sept. 12, newspapers published the daily terrorism death count. Today they publish the daily security report.

Almost every day newspapers report the capture of yet another "infamous" terror gang, some of them rooted out of caves and forests.

One recent account told how security forces surrounded a forest north of Tarsus in southern Turkey and arrested 11 terrorists. One other terrorist was killed and two escaped. They were said to be members of Dev-sol, an extreme leftist organization.

Another account concerned the capture of 51 members of a gang accused of murder and robbery all over Turkey from a cave near Ankara. The prisoners included an assistant professor at the Middle East Technical University who, according to newspaper reports, lived in the United States for five years as the recipient of a Ford Foundation grant. The unnamed professor, allegedly a leader of the group, was code named "The American."

Another member, called "The Executioner," was quoted by a mass-circulation daily as saying: "They tell me who to kill and pay me money."

According to Turkish security forces, more than 32,000 terrorists have been captured.

Authorities can hold a person for 90 days before making formal charges, powers so wide they can lead to errors. Said one middle-class Turk: "I have a friend who has two daughters. One is a leftist militant, but she has a good student, very quiet and unpolitical."

"When I heard that my friend's daughter had been arrested, I assumed it was the militant one, but it was the other daughter. The security forces made a mistake, but she has to stay in Mamak prison for 90 days. She was going to be married this week."

Stories along these lines have become commonplace. Wounded and frightened by the rampant political terrorism, many Turks welcomed the military coup.

Four months later, the military regime is still popular but even some of its supporters privately criticize what they regard as the excessive zeal of the security forces.

There have been reports of torture inflicted by police and the military. The government announced it is investigating eight prison deaths to determine whether torture was used.

Disappearing Card Trick Demonstrated

By SHARI LEWIS

My dad is a magician. My baby sister used to love to watch him make things disappear. Then he'd say, "Abracadabra," and he'd bring those things back. One day when she was about 3, we heard a loud noise from another part of the house. We ran toward it and found my sister standing over the job, dropping Mother's jewelry into it, saying "Abracadabra" and pressing the handle. She made the jewelry disappear all right, but even Daddy's magic couldn't bring it back!

Here's a real easy magic trick for you to do, in which you make something disappear.

Let your friend pick a card (any card) and put it on top of the rest of the pack. Slip the deck into the little cardboard package in which it originally came. Place the package on the table, and slap the top of it. Now open the top flap and drop out all of the cards. Hand the deck to your pal and say, "Your card has disappeared," and when your friend examines the deck, the selected card will have disappeared!

The secret? Inside the package, on the side attached to the flap, you have stuck a piece of clear double-faced tape. When you slip in the deck, place it so that the top card is on the same side as the tape. As you slap the top of the package, the double-faced tape will stick to that top card. And when you drop out the rest of the deck, that card won't come out with the others!

Footsteps In Snow Lead To Assailants

BURRILLVILLE, R.I. (AP) — A persistent policeman who followed footprints in snow flushed three gunmen out of the woods after a nine-hour chase, authorities said.

Police were called recently to the home of Arthur J. Bernier, who was robbed and beaten. The assailants had fled on foot and Sgt. Robert J. Teller, 39, set out after them.

After following the trio across country roads, a railroad track, a frozen pond and woods, Teller forced the three into the hands of waiting police. The three were being held without bond on charges including armed robbery. Police Chief Joseph A. Menard said.

DR. LAMB

Causes Of Diarrhea

By LAWRENCE LAMB, M.D.
 DEAR DR. LAMB — I have been having diarrhea for a couple of years. When I'm nervous or upset it seems to act up more. For a year now, I've been on a diet a friend gave me. I take wheat germ, bran and honey mix once a day with vitamins. Is there any diet or information of any kind you have that I may follow up on? Do you have a list of diet foods I could eat or a diet sheet I could follow?
 DEAR READER — If celiac sprue is a cause of your diarrhea, the wheat germ and bran could make it definitely worse. Sprue is an allergic-type reaction to gluten found in all cereals — including wheat — except corn and rice.

 The point is that you can't treat a person's diarrhea properly without knowing what causes it. Some people have diarrhea because they have an infection of the bowel. Some of these can be chronic. Others have important diseases such as ulcerative colitis. Still others have a spastic colon.
 Some people have diarrhea because they can't tolerate milk or any foods that contain milk products. In fact, if a complete examination fails to provide any reason for diarrhea then it is sometimes useful to temporarily try a diet that eliminates all milk and foods containing milk products, all cereals except rice and corn (including foods that contain cereals such as cream soups, even ice cream and cold cuts), coffee, tea and spices.

 The various causes of diarrhea and the approach to the problem are discussed in greater detail in The Health Letter number 13-8, What You Need to Know About Diarrhea. Others who want this issue can send 75 cents with a long, stamped, self-addressed envelope for it to me, in care of The Lubbock Avalanche-Journal, P.O. Box 1551, Radio City Station, New York, N.Y. 10019.

Transmigration Plan In Java Hit By Snags

JAKARTA, Indonesia (UPI) — Indonesia's scheme to transfer 2.5 million people from crowded Java to outlying islands is behind schedule, hampered by red tape and corruption.
 The "transmigration" program originally was conceived to solve one of Indonesia's major problems, the overpopulation and impoverishment of its central island of Java.
 The exhausted soil of Java long ago ceased to support its 90 million inhabitants, mostly landless farmers, who are crammed into 51,000 square miles of land — tantamount to nearly half the U.S. population living in the state of Arkansas.
 "Javanese farmers, once prosperous, are now poor and getting poorer by the day," a senior official of the Public Works Ministry said.
 The government also has been pressing the transmigration program in hopes of halting a major drain on the country's treasury. To feed Java, the government spent nearly $1 billion in 1980 to import more than 2 million tons of rice, making Indonesia the world's largest purchaser of the commodity.
 "Transmigration is a key word in our development," the official said. "Moving 2.5 million people from Java to the outer islands might look like an ambitious program. Indeed, it is the largest transmigration program being carried out in the world. But it is an absolute necessity."
 The original plan called for 500,000 families, or 2.5 million people, to be resettled over a five-year period, April 1979 to March 1984, the span of the country's third development plan.
 On paper, the program involved the transportation and resettlement of an average 1,370 people every day on eight daily special flights from Java to Sumatra, Kalimantan, Sulawesi and the Eastern islands.
 The Indonesian government made available a $2.5 billion budget with the resettlement costs estimated at $5,000 per family. The government also purchased American "Hercules" aircraft to move the transmigrants and made available military airports, including those with nightlanding facilities.
 But as Indonesia enters 1981, officials acknowledge the program is far behind schedule. The Central Bureau of Statistics said 110,000 people were moved in 1979 to early 1980.

Novel Explodes Civil War Myths

MIDDLETOWN, Conn. (AP) — A Wesleyan University professor has written a novel he says will explode some myths about the American Civil War.

Richard Slotkin, a professor in the American Studies program at the small university on the Connecticut River, maintains many of the stereotypes common in U.S. history — like the generally accepted motivations for the War Between the States — are not based in fact.

"Southern side has been mythologized; the Northern side has not," he says.

Slotkin, who won the Albert Beveridge Award of the American Historical Association in 1973 for a scholarly work on violence on the American frontier, says he hopes his first novel is a step toward putting the conflict in perspective.

"The Crater" already has been praised by critics for its handling of the subject, the siege of Petersburg, Va., in 1864. The novel focuses on events surrounding the detonation of a tunnel-like mine by Union troops from Pennsylvania, and the subsequent attack on Confederate forces.

The attack fails for a number of reasons, including the eruption of a bloody fight among the northerners at the introduction of black combat troops.

Slotkin tells the story through the voices of many characters, supported by military dispatches.

"I've been faithful in spirit, and in most cases to the letter, true to what happened," says the 38-year-old author-teacher.

"This is not 'Executioners Song,' not 'In Cold Blood,' however," he says, referring to novels by Norman Mailer and Truman Capote which were more non-fiction than fiction.

"'Faction,' as Mailer calls it, tends to be very contemporary, the taking of testimony that leads to fiction in the not-too-distant time," Slotkin says.

"One of the main functions of the historical novel is the mythologizing of the past, providing a connection to the past," he says. "But many myths need to be exploded."

Slotkin maintains that the romantic story of the Old South has been told time and again in novels and texts, while the issue of blacks in the North and the post-war South has been ignored.

"The North turned its back on the cause," Slotkin says simply.

His novel draws heavily from analytical studies of the slave society by historian Herbert Gutman for some of its characters.

"I tried to get at racism, the language of racism in the novel," Slotkin, a native of Brooklyn, N.Y., says. "For the soldiers of the time, it was a given. I had to write of characters who were not quite sure whether the men on the other side were human or animal."

A student of the Civil War since boyhood, Slotkin says his novel began as a chapter to the second volume of his scholarly work on violence. But he decided to tell the story of the crater in a novel because of the freedom the form offered and because "there's just too much that is questionable."

"In a historical novel, you take things that were there and recombine them. The freedom of fiction allows you to take what you know happened and add your own educated guess about the rest of the details."

And fiction is exerting some pressure on the writing of history, says the Wesleyan professor. Slotkin concedes that social historians like Gutman have made significant additions by minutely studying previous populations.

"But you have to take the analytical views of history and plug them back into a narrative sequence. You have to reconnect the facts of social dynamics discovered by their quantitative work," Slotkin says.

"You have to know your history. Otherwise, you're impoverished today."

Reagan May Carry 'Hidden Scar'

By ARNOLD SAWISLAK
WASHINGTON (UPI) — Ronald Reagan may be the last man to become president with personal, adult recollections of the Great Depression of the 1930s.

That may be of some relevance in trying to guess what changes are coming in the United States, because the economic collapse that began in 1929 had an immense impact on Americans who lived through it.

Reagan was just 19 when the crash came, and although he was able to find work here and there, he saw the ravages of depression first hand in the Midwest. In California, he became a political liberal and avid unionist.

Many of the staunchest conservatives of the time backed away from previously sacrosanct free market orthodoxies when the bottom dropped out for the United States and much of the industrialized world.

Those who tried to keep the conservative faith through the next three decades frequently were described as having to be "dragged kicking and screaming into the 20th Century" and relegated to the political junk heap.

Liberals — and Ronald Reagan was one of them — had their chance during that period to try out their theories that government could keep prevent such cataclysms from ever occurring again.

They succeeded well enough to permanently change both the politics and economics of the world. By easing the pain of extreme economic swings, they won and built political power.

But that cycle now seems to have run its course. The voters who had previously turned off when conservatives warned about the pitfalls of profligate liberalism suddenly began listening again — in England, in Canada, in the United States.

Even the oldtime liberals began moving away from government regulation and intervention in private business that had come to symbolize their efforts to stabilize capitalism and equally distribute its benefits.

About 20 years ago, Reagan, once an avid New Dealer, converted to reborn conservatism, embracing the proposition that most of the problems of the American economy and society are caused, not solved, by government. Left to work as it should, the conservative faith says, the free market will produce a healthy economie and stable social climate.

There are people in the political movement that propelled Reagan to the presidency who believe these precepts without condition. They believe that the way to make the system work is to free it from government restriction.

Many of the new conservatives — men like David Stockman, Jack Kemp and Phil Crane — are much younger than the new president and have never been through the kind of trauma that overtook the nation when Reagan was a young man.

Memory of what life was like in the 1930s has been called "the hidden scar." Many now prosperous Americans of Reagan's era still cannot abide food left on a plate or break out in cold sweat at the idea of borrowing large sums of money.

Up to now, Reagan has shown no trace of that hidden scar. But it could be there and the young men who have never known what hard times really are like may come to see it if they push too hard to dismantle everything the hated liberals have done in the last 50 years.

OSTRACIZE VOTE

Citizens of Athens scratched their votes on pieces of broke pottery. Potsherd ballots cast more than 2,400 years ago have been unearthed by archeologists. Such ballots were known as ostraca, from which the world "ostracize" is derived.

UNTYING THE RIBBONS — Methodist Hospital nurses Alynda Arrington, left, and Nan Pool, who have been wearing yellow ribbons for several months in remembrance of the American hostages in Iran, remove the ribbons and pin them to a Christmas tree following the release of the captives. # Council To Discuss I-27 Route

By SYLVIA TEAGUE
Avalanche-Journal Staff
City Council members will discuss the highway department's recommended route for Interstate 27 through Lubbock when they meet at 9:30 a.m. Thursday.

The council is expected to hear city staff comments about the recommended route, then place a resolution on the agenda for the next council meeting.

The highway department has recommended the highway use Avenue A as the east frontage road between North Loop 289 and Fourth Street, fall between Avenues C and D from Fourth Street to approximately 16th Street, continue southwesterly from 16th Street to about 26th Street, then use Avenue H as the east frontage road to the Traffic Circle and on to South Loop 289.

The highway department will hold a public hearing on Feb. 19 on the proposed route.

Also at the meeting, council members will receive the recommendations of the panel which heard testimony during the Public Utility Regulatory Policies Act hearings in October.

The panel evaluated testimony on 12 electric standards and two gas standards proposed in the 1978 federal law.

The panel's recommendations are virtually identical to positions taken by the three participating utilities — Lubbock Power and Light, Southwestern Public Service and Pioneer Natural Gas — and are not expected to result in significant changes in the way the companies now operate.

The council will consider adopting a resolution opposing an Internal Revenue Service ruling, which city officials say could wreck the municipal bond market.

The controversial ruling would have declared the interest earnings from state government deposits are not deductible by banks if the deposits are secured by pledges of tax exempt securities.

The ruling was to have become effective Jan. 10, but members of Congress and banking representatives persuaded federal officials to put off the effective date until May 31.

The council also will consider passing a resolution of appreciation to U.S. Rep. Kent Hance of Lubbock for his efforts in getting the effective date postponed.

A recently approved $2.1 million federal grant which would allow the city to purchase 16 new buses and land for a Citibus parking facility also will be discussed.

The 35-passenger diesel buses would replace the older Grumman buses which have exceeded their five-year, 200,000-mile life expectancy.

Representatives of the Lubbock Industrial Development Corporation will ask the council to authorize the issuance of industrial revenue bonds to aid Evans Transportation Company.

Electric Utility Board member Betty Wheeler will ask council members to approve a change in policy on the purchase of electric equipment during service changeovers.

Specifically, LP&L officials want to purchase equipment from Southwestern Public Service Company which has been used to serve Altura Towers.

If LP&L has to replace all the equipment as a result of the apartment building's switch to LP&L, it is estimated the cost would be more than $70,000.

By purchasing SPS equipment already there at a cost of more than $38,000, the utility is expected to save about $21,500 in the cost of purchasing new equipment.

Council members also are expected to receive a progress report on the city's delinquent tax collection program. They will discuss the method of selecting architects for city projects and discuss a proposed schedule for the sale of water bonds this year.

Two FBI Agents Say Weinberg Warned To Temper Techniques

NEW YORK (AP) — Two FBI agents have supported a Justice Department attorney's contention that Abscam operative Mel Weinberg was warned in August 1979 to stop "putting words in people's mouths."

The testimony from agents Martin Houlihan and Lawrence Schneider came Tuesday at a due process hearing in U.S. District Court for seven Abscam defendants seeking to have their convictions overturned on grounds of governmental misconduct.

Houlihan said he told Weinberg, a convicted swindler, to "temper his techniques that he had utilized as a con man and realize that he was now working as an agent of the government."

Schneider testified he warned Weinberg that "if he continued to coach, to put words in people's mouths, there was a possibility that convictions could be overturned."

The subject of concern was a June 28, 1979, meeting between Weinberg and Sen. Harrison A. Williams Jr., D-N.J., the only U.S. senator indicted on charges stemming from the undercover FBI investigation.

An open house for the public will be held from 2-4 p.m. Thursday at the Right to Life office, 3303 67th St., Suite 114.

A spokesperson for the group said visitors can view educational materials and obtain information on the pro-life movement and how they can get involved.

The committee also will sponsor a special press showing of the new film, "Assignment: Life," from 1-2 p.m. Thursday.

The Lubbock observance will coincide with the annual "March for Life" demonstration planned by a coalition of pro-life organizations in Washington, D.C.

Abortion Ruling To Be Observed

The Lubbock Right to Life Committee will join other pro-life organizations across the nation Thursday in an observance of the 8th anniversary of the U.S. Supreme Court decision that resulted in the legalization of abortion on demand in the United States.

As part of its observance, the local group will sponsor a vigil in honor of the millions of unborn who the group says have lost their lives since the high court's 1973 decision in the case of Roe vs.

Students Picked To State Choir

Six Lubbock public school choral students have been chosen to sing in the 1981 all-state choir at the Texas Music Educator's Association clinic and convention in San Antonio Feb. 11 through Feb. 14.

The winners were among some 30 students who auditioned in area tryouts in Odessa Jan. 10.

The students who made top scores are Shelly Hudson, Coronado High School, first alto; Emily Brunson, Lubbock High School, first soprano and Kim Claybough, second soprano; Rod Faulkner, first tenor; John Griffith, second bass and David Downum, first tenor, all of Monterey High School.

Choral directors at the schools represented by the top students are Jerry Neuschwander, Coronado; Garland Jarvis, Lubbock High; and Steve Davis, Monterey.

Freed Americans Call Home, Relax At Hospital

WIESBADEN, West Germany (AP) — The 52 former hostages, safe in American hands at last and enjoying their first taste of freedom in 14½ months, settled into a U.S. military hospital today and made their first telephone calls to families in the United States.

Just after noon, some of the hostages appeared on the balconies of the hospital, bantering with hospital personnel in the bright sunlight. Orderlies tossed up a copy of the military newspaper Stars and Stripes to a group of four young men, who autographed the newspaper and threw it back down.

Elizabeth Ann Swift, who was a political officer at the U.S. Embassy in Tehran and one of the two women in the group, also came out to enjoy the sparkling, crisp day and her new freedom.

Warrant Officer Frank Price and his wife, Donna, from Vicksburg, Miss., got a newspaper autographed by three former hostages and chatted with them.

Asked whether he was bitter that the Iranians held the hostages until after he left office, Carter said, "I think that on the day when we are so happy (about the hostages' release) it would be better not to comment on the behavior of the Iranians, which I think is abominable."

Carter To Visit Returnees

PLAINS, Ga. (AP) — Citizen Jimmy Carter, who missed by minutes being able to pronounce America's 52 hostages free while he was still president, headed to West Germany today on a bittersweet mission to hail their deliverance from 44½ days of captivity in Iran.

Carter, making the trip as a special envoy representing President Reagan, said he wanted to talk to each of the hostages individually.

PHOENIX, Ariz. (AP) — Now that Marine Sgt. Jimmy Lopez is safely out of Iran, his proud parents can tell a story they've been keeping secret for more than a year — how Lopez barricaded a door and threw a tear-gas grenade to aid the escape of 15 Americans from the besieged U.S. Embassy in Tehran.

Professionals Convince Executives To Relocate

NEW YORK (UPI) — The complexities of moving executives and other valued employees in this era of two-career couples has created a new profession in America: the relocation counseling specialist.

Such a firm differs from an executive relocation firm. It doesn't actually buy and sell real estate or take charge of moving the family. It only counsels — about job opportunities or career development for a spouse, schooling, sports or other special interests, community lifestyles, home-finding and financing.

"Sometimes the problem is to persuade a man that accepting a transfer is not going to involve a huge sacrifice by some member of his family," said Benno Curtis of Home Buyers Assistance Corp., of Westport, Conn., one of the first such firms.

"A company wanted to move a man from Tucson to the New York metropolitan area. The fellow balked because one of his sons is a junior tennis star and Arizona is in the center of big league tennis," Miss Curtis said.

"We had to find a location in the metropolitan area where the youngster could get top-flight competition all year and also find him a good coach. We also had to convince him that New York does produce tennis stars."

Miss Curtis mentioned problems Exxon and Celanese have experienced in getting people to move east. "One chap Exxon wanted to move to New Jersey objected, saying the Garden state is a criminal's paradise and its air so polluted it ought to be called 'cancer ally.' We had to muster convincing evidence to overcome this preconceived notion."

But most of the time it's a money problem. When ITT wanted people in its headquarters to move from New York to Connecticut, many threw up their hands and said it was financially impossible.

"We had to sit down with these people, go over their financial situations and show them how lower taxes and some other advantages in Connecticut would enable them to pay more for a house there than they would get for the houses they had," Miss Curtis said.

William Vossler left Bunko Ramo to found HBAC in 1972. He said today he is operating as a member of a network that includes firms in Chicago, Minneapolis, Dallas, Atlanta, San Francisco and Los Angeles.

"We were born," Vossler said, "to overcome a situation in which executives offered transfers were practically chanting, 'Hell no, we won't go!' like the anti-war demonstrators of the 1960s. But only about 25 percent of our business involves such reluctance now."

Vossler said the proportion of his company's cases in which he has to help find a job for the spouse of the transferred worker has risen in eight years from 5 to 30 percent and this is what has made the counseling so complex that even top corporations find it too big a job as an in-house operation.

"Often our people have to get the spouse enrolled in a university or other school to take courses leading to a new career," Vossler said.

HBAC has special arrangements with several universities in the New York metropolitan area to help in this career reorientation. The firm also conducts seminars and has a number of innovative programs to help families adjust to new communities and schools.

FDA Official Says Some X-Rays Unnecessary

By JOE GULICK
Avalanche-Journal Staff

Virtually everyone knows what x-rays are and how they are used by doctors, but many people aren't fully familiar with the effects of x-rays and radiation.

According to the Food and Drug Administration nearly 300 million medical x-rays were given last year and about seven out of 10 Americans will receive a medical or dental x-ray sometime this year.

Of those statistics, the FDA believes a significant number of the x-ray examinations are unnecessary. Sometimes doctors request x-ray examinations because the patients insist or for protection from possible malpractice suits, according to FDA Commissioner Jere E. Goyan.

"Even when x-rays are medically needed, the patient may sometimes receive more radiation than necessary because of equipment problems and failure to use proper protective measures," Goyan said.

However, the amount of radiation received in x-rays is relatively small, and the chances that the small amounts of radiation will cause any damage is slight.

If a person legitimately needs an x-ray exam, he should not hesitate to get it. The risks involved in not getting a needed exam are much higher than the risks involved in being exposed to the radiation.

The FDA is simply pointing out that, whenever possible, a person should consider whether to take an x-ray examination. Even though the risks are slight, the FDA questions whether the consumer should take even a slight risk if it is unnecessary.

Author Eric Hall, in his book "Radiation and Life," estimated that a typical chest x-ray involved a risk factor for developing leukemia of about three people in 10 million. Hall adds that this involves roughly the same risk as smoking two cigarettes or driving five miles on the highway.

Radiation comes from a number of sources, both natural and man-made.

Consumer Update

Bricks, for example, constantly emit low levels of radiation, but people who live in brick houses hardly need to go check themselves into a cancer clinic.

As far as man-made sources of radiation go, x-rays and the use of radioactive materials to diagnose and treat diseases (such as radioactive iodine used to treat thyroid disease) make up about 90 percent of radiation exposure to humans yearly.

The FDA recommends that patients communicate with doctors and help play a constructive role in x-ray protection.

The first step is not insisting on an x-ray. The doctor is the trained expert and if the patient is told by the doctor an x-ray examination isn't necessary, he should take the advice. In some cases, however, patients will continue to insist on an x-ray and the doctor will give in.

If the doctor does suggest an x-ray, the FDA recommends asking the doctor how an x-ray will help find out what the problem is. The patient has a right to know how an x-ray will help with his treatment and requesting the information only aids in the doctor-patient communication.

When the doctor explains why an x-ray exam is needed, don't refuse to take the examination because of fear of radiation exposure. Remember, the patient is paying the doctor or dentist for his advice and knowledge, so take his word for it and have confidence in him. If the doctor is not one who inspires confidence, consider getting a new doctor.

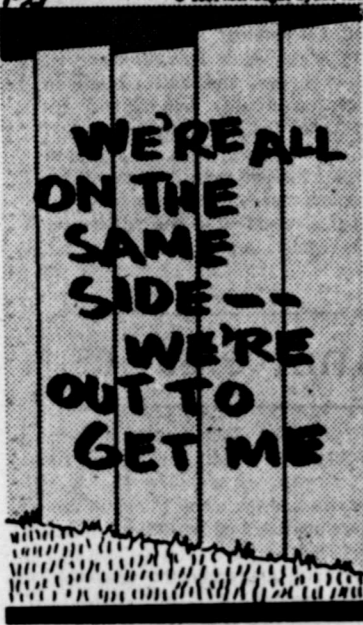

The patient should keep in mind that the risk of not taking a needed x-ray could be considerably higher than the small radiation that will be received. According to Eric Hall, the risk of taking an x-ray exam is less than the risk of driving the distance from Lubbock to Levelland.

For women who are pregnant or think they might be pregnant, inform the doctor before x-rays are taken of the abdomen or lower back. Chances are the question will never come up during a pregnancy, but if it does, the doctor needs to know.

If any patient (adult or child) needs to have x-rays of the abdomen, lower

Evidence Reviewed In Daniel Shooting

LIBERTY (AP) — Law enforcement officers sifted through a stack of evidence and interviews today in an effort to conclude their investigation into the shooting death of Price Daniel Jr.

The former Speaker of the Texas

House died Monday from a gunshot wound in the stomach. No charges have been filed and no arrests made in the case, said Liberty County Sheriff C.L. "Buck" Eckols, who earlier had called the death a homicide.

Daniel, 39, who had tried to carry on the tradition of family political power begun decades ago, was killed in his ranch home on the outskirts of this Liberty County community of 8,000, nestled along the banks of the Trinity River.

Funeral services were scheduled for 2 p.m. today.

District Attorney Carroll E. Wilborn Jr., said, "We have yet to determine whether it was a homicide, in self-defense, provoked, or an accident."

Court records showed that Vickie

Daniel had filed for divorce 21 days ago and a hearing on the action was scheduled for Thursday. She had filed for divorce once before, in November 1976, but withdrew the petition.

In the recent lawsuit, Mrs. Daniel claimed a "conflict of personalities ... with no hope of reconciliation."

After the shooting Mrs. Daniel, 33, suffering from shock and hysteria, was taken to a local hospital and placed under sedation. Later, on advice of her attorney, she refused to talk with authorities.

In the spacious home at the time of the shooting were the Daniels' two young children and an 11-year-old daughter of Mrs. Daniel by a previous marriage.

Wilborn said he had asked that the 11-year-old girl be questioned.

Eckols said he understood the children were in a back bedroom and did not hear any gunfire.

Daniel, dressed in boots, dungarees and a shirt, was found lying face down in a narrow hallway between the kitchen and the car port.

He was dead at the scene. A rifle was discovered in a nearby room. Two empty shell casings were on the floor.

Daniel had served three terms in the Texas House, the last session as speaker when he pushed several reform measures through the legislature. He later made a bid for state attorney general, but was beaten in the Democratic primary.

Price Daniel Sr. had served as Texas

House speaker, governor, U.S. Senator and State Supreme Court Justice.

The Daniel influence was seldom challenged in Liberty, one resident said. In recent years the family had lived close

Woman Saves Dogs From Death, Trains Hearing Pets For Deaf

By MARLA DONATO
LINCOLNWOOD, Ill. (UPI) — Sassy is no ordinary mutt — Her duties include answering telephones and doorbells, serving as an alarm clock and warding off burglars and other intruders.

Sassy's real specialty is looking after a baby — 17-month-old Malinda Balk, whose parents, Nona and Rick Balk, are deaf.

The furry little mongrel is among more than 200 dogs trained and placed by Hearing Dog Inc., a Colorado-based agency that trains canines to respond to daily sounds that most people take for granted.

Thirty-four states — not including Illinois — have laws allowing hearing dogs to accompany their owners in the same way seeing eye dogs do.

Sassy was given to the Balks by the Rand Park Dog Obedience Training Club. The club gave demonstrations and sponsored other events to come up with the $2,800 it cost to train and bring the dog to its new home.

The dog "works" by making the Balks aware of particular sounds.

For example, when the alarm clock goes off, Sassy jumps on the bed, and kisses the Balks until they get up. It does the same thing in the middle of the night if Malinda starts crying.

When the doorbell rings, the dog runs back and forth from the door to one of the parents. Similarly, Sassy calls attention to the family's specially equipped teletype phone and smoke detector.

Sassy's trainer, Agnes McGrath, said hearing dogs have to keep working if they are to do their job well.

"If they don't work, they forget," said McGrath, who accompanies all the dogs to their new homes and stays for about a week to make sure everything runs smoothly.

McGrath started her school with six dogs as part of an experimental program for a Minnesota anti-cruelty society. She has since become adept in sign language and has placed dogs of all sizes in homes across the nation.

All her dogs, ranging in age from six months to a year, are acquired from animal shelters.

"There are a jillion surplus dogs," she said. "They're excellent animals that no one else wants. They brought Sassy to me and said she was going to be destroyed."

McGrath said she looks for happy, healthy and outgoing animals.

It takes about six months from the time an application is received until a dog is placed. Four of those months are spent custom training a dog to meet an individual's specific needs.

"The Balks needed a dog that likes children," she said. "So I took Sassy to shopping centers and asked mothers if they would let their children play with her to see how she would respond and if she would be gentle."

Although she looks for dogs that like children, she never places a dog with a deaf child.

"Deaf children usually have parents to hear for them," she said. "But a deaf adult, especially one living alone, is living in a world of silence."

The dogs, too, are expected to live a silent life ... except when they hear an intruder. Then, McGrath said, they are trained to "go crazy."

"That's the only time they are allowed to bark," she said. "Even though the people can't hear them, the burglar will. We don't let them bark otherwise."

She has three other trainers who work with 20 dogs at any given time and plans to add another trainer and more kennel space. Meanwhile, requests for the dogs are piling up.

Well-Known Author-Pediatrician To Speak In Lubbock Thursday

Dr. Lendon Smith, nationally-known children's doctor who has written many books and articles, as well as a regular column in McCall's Magazine, and who appears regularly on the Johnny Carson and Phil Donahue talk shows and on his own, syndicated television show, will speak in Lubbock Thursday.

Dr. Smith's lecture, under the auspices of the Junior League of Lubbock, will be in Monterey High School Auditorium Thursday at 7:30 p.m. The speech is free and open to the public.

A former clinical professor of pediatrics at the University of Oregon Medical School and a member of the American Academy of Pediatrics, Dr. Smith is nationally known for his television show, "The Children's Doctor," and his syndicated program, "House Call."

A frequent guest on the Carson and Donahue talk shows, he writes a regular column in McCall's and has written several books, the most recent of which is

"Feed Your Kids Right."

During the last five years, Dr. Smith has increasingly emphasized nutritional counseling for parents, and has devoted much time to the so-called hyperactive child. His lecture in Lubbock will be on "Behavior and Diet." Dr. Smith believes that many behavior problems in children can be traced to problems with the diet and nutrition. He feels that many problems are the result of physiological and chemical imbalances rather than psychological and parental pressures, and believes that there are neurological and biochemical solutions to many problems of odd behavior, allergies and sickness in general.

Among his earlier books are "Dr. Smith's Guide to Feeding Your Child," "Feed Your Kids Right," "Improving Your Child's Behavior Chemistry," "New Wives' Tales," "The Encyclopedia of Baby and Child Care," "The Children's Doctor."

"HOT WATER"

Reducing the temperature to the hot water delivered to the washer will cause a too-cool "warm" water cycle for soil removal, says Bonnie Piernot, a family resource management specialist. Instead, save energy by rinsing in cold water and adjusting the water level setting to match the load size, she says.

hours of interesting and entertaining mental exercise.

Eric Jannersten has been active in bridge journalism for almost half a century and he has dug into his files to collect a fascinating group of problems. They vary in complexity from relatively simple to mind-boggling. The problem shown is among the former.

Declarer is in seven hearts with only six trumps in the combined hands, and West leads a spade. To make the contract, declarer must win with the ten in dummy, cash the ace of diamonds and run the ten of clubs. When this wins, he enters his hand with the king of spades and cashes his three high clubs, discarding all of dummy's diamonds.

Now declarer leads the nine of diamonds, which is high. If West ruffs, declarer overruffs and leads a high spade. If cannot help East to discard on this trick, so he must ruff. Again declarer overruffs and leads the eight of diamonds.

Assuming that West ruffs again, declarer overruffs and leads another spade from dummy. Even if East ruffs again, declarer is in command. He overruffs and can now ruff his remaining diamond with dummy's last trump.

Notice that it makes no difference whether West ruffs the first two diamonds high or low — dummy's trumps are just strong enough to allow declarer to ruff all three of his diamond losers. As with all double dummy problems, there are alternate solutions, depending on the course of the defense. The reader might like to try for himself to see what happens if, for instance, West discards spades instead of ruffing when declarer leads diamonds.

Smithsonian Craftsmen Restoring Old Airplanes

By LOUISE HULL
Smithsonian News Service

It sounds like a standard scene from one of those slapstick movies which pretend that war is funny. But this actually happened.

An aircraft technician in a workshop outside Washington, D.C., had just begun dismantling the engine of an aged warplane when he discovered a frayed, yellowing scrap of paper: "What in the hell are you looking for in here, you silly..."

There was a logical answer, but one which might have surprised the anonymous World War II pilot or crew chief who, in a whimsical moment, had tucked the note in the engine's innards. The technician was looking for missing parts, searching for information on the plane's history and seeking to restore it — not to fly off on other missions, but to go on public display.

The technician was, in fact, a "conservator," a term used by museum people to describe craftsmen who restore and sometimes rebuild relics of the past. He was at work in a facility which serves the Smithsonian's National Air and Space Museum in Washington, D.C.

There is an urgency in his task and that of his 27 fellow craftsmen. Although fewer than 80 years have passed since the Wright brothers first fulfilled the age-old dream of flight, many priceless planes have been lost forever.

The plane whose engine hid that challenging note, for example, was a Corsair, of the type immortalized by Maj. Gregory "Pappy" Boyington and his colleagues of the Marines' Black Sheep Squadron. It was a superb aircraft for its era. The Black Sheep fliers alone scored 97 confirmed victories, 32 probable victories and 21 destroyed aircraft on the ground in the war in the Pacific. Overall, Corsairs were credited with downing 2,140 Japanese planes. But today, of all the Vought F4U Corsairs built by a nation at war, fewer than 50 remain.

"Baa Baa Black Sheep," the popular television series based loosely on the war record of Boyington's squadron, naturally stressed the daring exploits of the pilots. The task of restoring the Corsair which reached the Smithsonian, in contrast, was a job of dogged determination and almost dull routine.

The plane, like every aircraft put through the Smithsonian conservation process, had to be taken apart before it could be put back together. When it was completely dismantled, the parts took up a tenth of the floor space of the 36,000-square-foot restoration shop in Silver Hill, Md.

FAMOUS VISITOR — Charles Parmley of the National Air and Space Museum talks with "Pappy" Boyington, whose Black Sheep Squadron scored many victories with Corsair fighters during World War II. Boyington recently visited the restored aircraft, now on display at the museum. (Smithsonian News Service Photo)

Charles Parmley, a conservator who has been working on aircraft for 37 years, carried out much of the Corsair restoration project. Because the fabric had totally rotted away (not an uncommon occurrence), Parmley had to locate identical fabric and sew it to the aircraft frame by hand. The stitch he used, incidentally, had originated with the folks who manufacture baseballs but has long since been adopted by the aircraft industry. Although the Smithsonian's Corsair had not actually been in combat (it had been a training plane), it was scarred by the passage of time, and many parts were missing. Where possible, they were replaced by the real article. But if genuine parts could not be found, even by cannibalizing other planes, they were reproduced with the same materials, the same tools and the same techniques as those used back in the 1940s when 11,000 Corsairs rolled off the assembly lines.

Sometimes, the mechanics seeking to reproduce a missing part cannot find one or another of the vintage tools used in the old days to make that part. In that case, they reproduce the tool as well.

The goal is perfection — and truth. It's often virtually impossible to tell the difference between the original part and its Smithsonian-produced duplicate. So the craftsmen place a special stamp on the replacement to distinguish it from the original.

The attention to detail is such that, when the preservation work is finished, some of the planes are nearly airworthy. With a few minor modifications, they could be flown again.

"Of course, the Smithsonian is not in the flying business," Ed Chalkey, chief of production operations, points out. "Our aim," he adds, "is to maintain the best aeronautical collection in the world."

Toward that end, the Paul E. Garber Preservation, Restoration and Storage Facility, named after an Air and Space Museum historian emeritus, restores four aircraft a year. Garber joined the Smithsonian in 1920 and was responsible for acquiring a large portion of its aeronautical collection.

Chalkey, who has worked at the Garber Facility for more than 20 years, has a simple restoration philosophy. "To do it right, you have to have your heart in it." The Smithsonian conservators fill this bill: When they're not working at the Garber Facility, many of them are restoring planes at home or attending air shows. Altogether, the multi-talented conservators have restored 34 entire aircraft, plus hundreds of additional items from engines and propellers.

The work sometimes takes the conservators far from Washington, D.C. When they got their hands on a P-40, a fighter craft renowned in World War II, the landing gear was missing. The conservators checked with the military and aircraft buffs from one end of the United States to the other — without success. They were stymied until someone remembered that P-40s in training had sometimes crashed in New Zealand — and a landing gear was found there.

Ban Defeated On Restrooms

DES MOINES, Iowa (UPI) — State Sen. Richard Comito wondered if anything was sacred anymore. His fellow lawmakers simply felt if reporters were good enough to come into the Senate chambers, they were good enough to use the restroom.

Comito, R-Waterloo, this week was defeated in his attempt to ban reporters from the senators' restroom.

"We are really afraid to make decisions on what's right and who is right," Comito said after his amendment was defeated 35-11.

Comito said the ban was needed to protect the senators' "loose talk" and private debates in the restroom, which had been reported by journalists.

"You never know who's sitting in there," he told a Senate caucus.

"Somebody may say something they didn't mean to say and it is taken out of context and the next day we pay for it," he said.

Senators who opposed Comito's amendment were not as serious about the matter.

"I think if they're good enough to come into this chamber, they're good enough to use our restroom," Sen. Joe Brown, D-Montezuma, said of the reporters.

Officers Probe Daniel Shooting

 together on the ranch outside of the city. Since his defeat for attorney general, Daniel had practiced law in Liberty and taught in Houston, at the South Texas School of Law, Texas Southern University, and the University of Houston.

An autopsy was performed Tuesday by Dr. Joe A. Jachimczyk, Harris County Medical Examiner in Houston. He ruled that death was caused by a gunshot wound to the stomach. The slug entered the body near the navel, severed the aorta and lodged against the spine, he reported.

Eckols said there was no indication of an intruder in the home nor any signs to point to a disturbance. However, Wilborn said there were several broken glasses in fragments on the floor. Shock and disbelief at Daniel's death were registered from local street corners to Washington, D.C. Gov. Bill Clements, in Washington for the inauguration of President Reagan, said, "he was a talented and dedicated young man who achieved much for the benefit of our state during his career of public service."

Electric Utility Board Supports Improvements To Local System

By SYLVIA TEAGUE
 Avalanche-Journal Staff
 The Electric Utility Board endorsed $8 million worth of electric system improvements Tuesday which Lubbock Power and Light officials say are needed to keep pace with the city's growth. Carroll McDonald, LP&L sales and service director, said the five proposed projects "are something we badly need."

the west would reduce line losses, "because anytime you're closer to the load, you cut line losses." Currently the power enters the system on the east and must be transmitted to the west. McDonald also told board members LP&L needs to spend $220,000 to upgrade its computer capabilities and install remotes in all major substations. The improved computer capability would permit LP&L personnel to respond more quickly in cases of outages or other emergency situations, he said. The existing computer equipment is linked to only three or four substations, McDonald said. "Without it (the computer improvements), we're shooting in the dark," said LP&L engineer Tommy Buchanan. "We have trouble finding outages and solving them."

LP&L is in the process of beginning to serve Altura Towers, a former SPS customer, McDonald said. If all SPS equipment had to be removed and LP&L had to install new equipment, McDonald said it would cost LP&L $70,000. "We could save $21,000 if we pay them $38,000 for their existing equipment," he said. "We don't even have to go in the building" to change the building over, he said. Board member Betty Wheeler will present the board's recommendation on the policy to the City Council Thursday.

At McDonald's suggestion, the board agreed to meet with City Finance Director Robert Massengale next month to discuss long-term financing options for the projects, to be implemented in the next five years. McDonald said his number one priority among the projects is increasing the capacity of three LP&L substations at a cost of $1.25 million. "There are three substations we need to upgrade very badly," he told board members. "We can overload them, but when we do it for a long period of time, it shortens the life of the substations." The substations now are so overloaded, "we don't hardly have anywhere to go in transferring loads," he said. The three substations to be upgraded are Chalker at 74th Street and Utica Avenue, Co-op at 700 Coronado Drive and Vicksburg on the Brownfield Highway near Vicksburg Avenue. But McDonald said it would take 36 weeks to receive the needed substation transformers, so there is no way to upgrade the substations before the peak usage period this summer. McDonald's second priority is a new substation in north Lubbock and completion of a transmission loop around the city at a cost of $3 million. The new substation would take some of the load from the overloaded Mackenzie substation on Municipal Hill, he said. The third project would permit LP&L to receive power from Southwestern Public Service on the west side of Lubbock and enable the utility to reduce its line losses. Overloaded lines lose electricity which cannot be sold, McDonald said. Last year's system losses, including line losses, were 8.4 percent of LP&L's net generation, McDonald said. At today's fuel costs, that means the company lost about $1.5 million in electricity, he said. McDonald said the tie-in with SPS on

"It would cut our response (time) on outages way down," he said. Lastly, McDonald recommended $400,000 be spent to construct a new LP&L office with underground dispatch capabilities. "The first four are necessary to give good service and to keep up with growth," he said. "We need new facilities, but we can give good service with the present facilities." McDonald said the total cost of all the projects is $8.46 million. The last electric bond election was held in 1973, but McDonald said he's hoping Massengale can offer other long-term financing suggestions besides a bond election. Also at the meeting, the utility board approved a seasonal rate for irrigation customers. Irrigation customers would pay less for electricity used during the off-peak period of October-May than in the peak period between May and October. Board members also recommended

Civic Center Suggests New Rental Rates

By PAT GRAVES
 Avalanche-Journal Staff
 The Lubbock Civic Center Board voted Tuesday to recommend the City Council adopt six new rental rates and one revised rate for seven areas of the Civic Center previously unmentioned in the facility's policy manual. Board Chairman Al Couch said the revisions will be over and above the center's regular rates, which will be reviewed by the city in February. He added the seven proposed amendments will be presented for council approval after that review. The sole change calls for charging $2 per booth per day to exhibitors using the pedestrian mall area for displaying or merchandising in conjunction with an event in another part of the facility. The mall will not be rented separately, and registration and information booths would be excluded.

The current rate is $10 per booth per event, regardless of length. The remaining proposed rates are for areas which have been rented but for which there was no set policy because their use was not anticipated. The new rental rates passed by the board are mezzanine — $150 with food, $300 without food; theatre dinner lobby — $50; grand stairway — $50; fountain plaza — $100; hospitality suite — $50; and the Civic Center parking lot — negotiable. The mezzanine and theatre dinner lobby would be rented only when all other suitable space is booked. The hospitality suite still will be provided for larger events using the center. The chairman of the house, maintenance and concessions committee, John Anderson, reported the group was studying a variety of equipment needs, many of which would be long-term expenditures, for the Civic Center and Auditorium-Coliseum. Among the items being discussed are a computer system for the Civic Center which would handle liquor and supply inventories. Anderson said the committee will meet again to continue studying such items as parking, signs, lights, sound equipment, carpet replacement and cleaning, barricades and staging. In other business, Couch read a letter to Anderson from State Rep. E.L. Short expressing his support for the board's desire to get a Lubbock representative on the Texas Commission of the Arts. Board members became concerned last month when Anderson announced the commission had rejected all five of Lubbock's grant applications, including one to fund a series of summer musicals to have been produced by the Texas Tech music department. At the December meeting, Anderson said he sympathized with the commission because it had more than $1 million in requests but only $342,000 to grant. He added, however, that he felt at least one of the Lubbock projects should have been funded. Anderson and other board members said they thought the rejection was a result of lack of area representation. Board member Bob Nash said it would require the influence of a major contributor to Gov. Bill Clements campaign to get a Lubbock voice on the commission. Short said in his letter Lubbock needs representation on the commission and he welcomes suggestions. Six vacancies will occur in January. Lubbock has not had a commissioner since 1975. At Anderson's suggestion, the board Tuesday referred to Civic Lubbock's booking committee a possible summer musical involving the Tech Music and University Theatres. Civic Lubbock is the board's non-profit counterpart for promotion.

Possibility Of Damage From X-Rays Slight

 back or areas near the sex organs, the FDA recommends asking the doctor if a shield can be used. It may not be possible, because a shield might prevent the doctor from seeing what he needs to view on the x-ray. If it is possible, a lead shield can be used to cover the sex organs during the x-ray examination. Dental x-rays are going to be necessary from time to time because the dentist will need to view what is going on with the teeth below the gumline. The dental patient should discuss with his dentist how often he recommends taking x-rays. The FDA recommends keeping an "X-ray Record Card," in which records are kept of dates x-rays are made, the type of x-ray examination made, the physician involved, and the address where the x-rays are kept. In some cases, it is possible for a doctor to refer to a previous x-ray rather than take a new one. If the doctor needs to go ahead and take new x-rays, comparing to the older ones may show any changes that have occurred in the area being x-rayed. Interested consumers can write the Food and Drug Administration, Dept. HFX-28, Rockville Maryland, 20857, for more information on x-rays and for a free x-ray examination card.

Judge's Ruling Awaited In Prison Site Dispute

AUSTIN (AP) — State officials whose prison site search has been stymied for three years will not know until Friday whether their latest attempt will be stopped by a judge. State District Judge Pete Lowry, who listened to two days of testimony, said Tuesday he would rule at the end of the week in a suit filed by 10 Grimes County residents who don't want a prison in their community. Prison officials agreed in court Tuesday not to purchase the land until Lowry's ruling. The plaintiffs' suit claims the state violated the Open Meetings Act in approving the $6.7 million for 5,968 acres near Navasota. They also claimed the prison would have a detrimental effect on nearby property. Roy Weaver, calling himself the largest queen bee producer in the world, said pesticides used on cotton at the prison "kills our bees."

Man Leaves Inspiring Message

By JOHN CUNNIFF
NEW YORK (AP) — David Lillenthal, former chairman of the Tennessee Valley Authority, first chairman of the Atomic Energy Commission, and a successful private businessman, was passionate about America's future.

He was restless too, and frustrated by what he thought was a waste of human energy, "the nation's greatest asset." It built the country and now it could "resuscitate" it, he said, if freed to do its work.

Lillenthal died last week at age 81, but the message he left is an inspiring, provocative one. He enunciated it to a newsman called to his office one day five years ago after he finished his morning newspaper.

"I'm mad as hell this morning," he said, rising from his desk and handing the newsman a clipping that told of plans for a $237 million government-aided pilot plant to convert coal to synthetic crude oil.

It could have been done 24 years ago, he said, with private parties putting up all the money if the government would guarantee minimum prices. It didn't. The plant wasn't built. And what would have been, in his view, a "very comfortable" alternative to foreign oil was lost.

There was bite but not scorn in his voice. "There is timidity, a lack of resolution in the decision centers," he said. A lamentable lack of leadership, public and private; an inaction, a negativism, he said.

This, he continued, isn't the way to build a country.

"If we make up our mind, if we get the lead out, we'll find this is the greatest underdeveloped country in the world, and that it doesn't have to be timid and fearful of growth." But, he said, we hold ourselves back.

"We talk about the energy problem and conserving energy while we waste the basic energy, human energy, through unemployment and through lack of a massive program of across-the-board improvements of human skills," he said, his voice intense but the tone barely rising.

"This country isn't done," he said. "The 'limits of growth' doctrine is phoney" he declared flatly, maintaining it represented European not American, thinking. "We should appreciate the basic dynamics of this country and forget our roots in Europe," he said.

He explained that in his view an energy shortage results from an underuse of human energy. Human energy, "drive, brainpower, creativity, imagination," puts other energy to work for human use.

Utilize this energy, he said, and you solve the problems of producing power for factories and homes, as well as the other essentials of life, including the development of a rich culture and sound government.

TVA didn't change people from being powerless, dispirited people by saving energy, he said. "It came from the use of energy," human energy in conjunction with the raw energy latent in the area.

He paused briefly to explain that for two years he had been growing increasingly impatient with inaction and that he was eager to speak out. He was often associated with the past, he knew, but he said the models of the past were inappropriate of the country's resuscitation.

"It's a different country today," he said. The nation is stalled and somewhat dispirited, descriptions that were also applied to it in the 1930s. But he said he felt there were immense differences too.

"Today, the centers of human energy and imagination are widely scattered," he said. "Out sources of energy of all kinds are dispersed. We have multiple sources of strength. The future of America is one of diversity rather than concentration."

In short, he urged Americans to look to themselves, to their private organizations, to local leaders, rather than to the bureaucracies of big government or big business, which he said may have lost their missions.

"It isn't because of the size of big business that I am afraid," he said. "It is the centralization of decision making. It has dampened the initiative and managerial skills within the units," he said. "In centralized decision making, bigness defeats itself."

He went on to express his faith in diversity.

"In the smaller units of a big company is where you find the resourcefulness, the energy, the imagination. Energizing leadership isn't to be found in one place; it is diffused."

"There is more leadership in local communities than in Washington or New York or other centers of corporate or government activity, and there always has been," he said. Leadership, he said, rises from within rather than descends from above. It comes from small, private, individual efforts. And it comes from action, not speeches, he said.

He stopped abruptly, fearful he said that people might think he was preaching. But he did want it known that in doing something specific — not talking, reporting or analyzing it — the example to follow is set.

The mood of the country, he said, "can be turned around much sooner than you think," but not, he added, by government fiat or in fact by any one leader, but instead by local leaders demonstrating through specific projects what can be done.

"Momentum is the secret of American development," he concluded. "If we wait we lose it."

He said that five years ago.

Days In Drunk Tank Show Activist New Side Of Life

MOSCOW (UPI) — A Jewish activist recently released from 10 days in a Soviet drunk tank said it showed him a side of life most people never see.

"There were 27 drunkards in my cell, talking about how it feels after you drink one glass of vodka, then two, three, four and five — a whole liter (quart). For me who can't get one glass down it was a new world," he said.

His account fascinated friends who gathered to celebrate his release around a table piled with salads, cold cuts and bottles of wine.

The activist, an unemployed scientist, was arrested on charges of hooliganism and locked up for 10 days after a police witness said he resisted arrest at a Zionist demonstration.

He and four others were kept in a local jail, apparently to give them a taste of life behind bars and to stop their monthly protests against a clampdown on visas for Israel.

The prisoners wear their own clothes and are spared the sheared-sheep haircut required in regular prisons.

Although smoking is forbidden, the released prisoner said his cellmates managed to smuggle in cigarettes.

He said 80 percent of the inmates were there because their wives, mothers or other family members could not stand their drinking and asked the police to take them away.

"But when they're sober they're quite normal," the Jewish activist said. "My story was interesting for them. Maybe they never met an intellectual before."

After a breakfast of kasha — buckwheat grits — the routine is for prisoners to be taken from the jail near the Sheremetevo airport west of Moscow to the city to clear streets or work in factories.

The five Jews were not allowed to go

Malpractice Suits Hike Cost Of Medical Care

NEW YORK (UPI)—A new medical malpractice lawsuit storm is blowing up that could prove worse than the one in the early 1970s.

Then both claims and malpractice insurance rates shot sky high. Some insurance companies quit the business, forcing doctors and hospital groups to organize their own mutual malpractice insurance companies in some areas.

The new surge in malpractice suits is important to the business world. The huge losses have to be borne by insurance companies and their stockholders.

Hospitals, increasingly operated as businesses for profit, pay two-thirds of the total cost of malpractice insurance and 75 percent of the lawsuits arise from treatments within hospitals.

Figures are not completely up to date but Perspective, the magazine of Blue Cross and Blue Shield, says the big companies that have been writing such business for years had a $150 million underwriting loss on it in 1979 against a profit of about $20 million the year before. When the 1980 figures are in, the article predicts, the figures will show another big surge and it expresses concern about the long-term viability of the new physician-and hospital-owned malpractice insurance carriers.

A New York lawyer, who specializes in defending doctors and insurance companies against medical malpractice suits told this reporter there's enough of this kind of business in the New York metropolitan area alone to keep 70 lawyers busy the year around. On reflection, he refused to allow his name to be used: "My clients wouldn't like that."

The Perspective article said malprac-tics suits and the practice of defensive medicine probably are costing $10 billion a year.

"Defensive medicine," means ordering many expensive tests and other procedures designed more to protect the doctors and hospital from technical charges of negligence than because they are really necessary in treating the patient.

The year 1979 saw some truly spectacular malpractice judgments: $21 million and $7.6 million in California and $4.9 million and $2.8 million in New York, for example. In 1980, the Connecticut Supreme Court upheld a $3.6 million judgment against a hospital.

A book by Thomas R. Mulroy of Chicago, "Hospital Liability Revisited," (Inquiry Books, Chicago) seems to have frightened the health care industry considerably because it called attention to a hitherto largely ignored 1975 New Jersey court decision.

Known as the Corieto decision, that ruling held the administration and trustees of a hospital and all the doctors on its professional staff could be held liable along with the hospital and the guilty physician in a case of malpractice.

The court, in effect, accepted the plaintiff's argument that the entire administration and staff of a hospital had to be aware of the facts if a surgeon was allowed to perform an operation for which he was not competent and, therefore, must share in the liability.

Author Mulroy predicted this doctrine will take root and warned doctors and hospital administrators the only defense against this legal doctrine is much better standards of care for patients.

Sense Of Renewal Sweeps U.S.

10 Inaugural Events Attended By Reagans

WASHINGTON (UPI) — President Reagan, resplendent in white tie and tails, went to 10 inaugural balls — but danced at only two.

At each of the balls — including a youth dance and veterans gala as well as the eight official inaugural fetes — the new president reported on the American hostages released after 444 days of captivity in Iran and flying to a U.S. military hospital at Wiesbaden, West Germany.

He called them "prisoners of war."

"I think you would like to have a little news that I have just learned — that the planes have landed in Algiers," Reagan told some 5,000 ballgoers at the Washington Hilton Hotel. "I just won't call them hostages. They're prisoners of war."

At his next stop, the Sheraton Washington Hotel, Reagan gave 10,000 ballgoers what he called "a little update" on the "prisoners of war."

"Our Americans — and I have never felt confident calling them hostages, they were prisoners of war — all 52 are hale and hearty in Algeria and are preparing to board American planes to take them home," he said.

By the time the presidential party made its last stop at the Smithsonian Museum of American History, Reagan was reporting that the plane was "minutes away from Wiesbaden."

Nancy Reagan was at her husband's side, wearing a $10,000 gold-beaded toga designed by Galanos, long white gloves, dangling diamond earrings and diamonds and pearls in her hair, which was pulled back into a braided chignon.

The Reagans began the evening by visiting a veteran's dance in honor of Congressional Medal of Honor winners and a youth disco dance.

They appeared for only five to 10 minutes at each of the balls but even so they didn't get home for their first night in the White House until 12:25 a.m. EST Tuesday morning.

The Reagans didn't dance until their seventh stop when they broke into a sedate fox trot on the stage of the federal Pension Building ballroom to the strains of "Moonlight Serenade." Their second dance was at the Smithsonian Museum of American History to "You'll Never Know."

Bush Assumes Vice Presidential Role

WASHINGTON (UPI) — George Bush's first day as vice president was typical of what is likely to be his routine — praising Ronald Reagan, thanking political supporters and keeping a schedule of appearances heavy on ceremony.

Bush — chosen by Reagan because of his Republican establishment credentials and wide-ranging experience in Washington — was inaugurated Tuesday as the nation's 43rd vice president.

Minutes before Reagan was sworn in, Bush took the oath of office from Supreme Court Justice Potter Stewart, an old friend who had sworn him in as U.N. ambassador in 1971.

He later said he had felt "a great lump in my throat" upon taking office.

Bush, who had opposed Reagan for the GOP nomination, was solemn during the swearing-in, but smiled most of the rest of the long day that began with a call from Walter Mondale and ended early today.

"What a day, what a day," he told reporters in the morning. He kept the jovial attitude throughout the day.

During a ride down Pennsylvania Avenue in an open-top limousine, he and his wife, Barbara, waved energetically to tens of thousands of well-wishers.

Bush spent about 10 minutes at each of nine evening balls. At each, he sounded like the prototype vice president — praising his boss and profusely thanking thousands of supporters who had paid $100 apiece to attend.

"This has been the most thrilling day of my life and it would not be possible without all of you in this room," Bush

WASHINGTON (AP) — In one extraordinary hour, two emotions swept America: a sense of renewal and an appreciation of freedom. It is a new beginning and a clean end to an ugly piece of business.

Ronald Reagan, 69, the oldest man ever to take the presidency, the first divorced man, the first professional actor in that office, succeeds a drawn and gray Jimmy Carter.

And it falls to Reagan to announce the news America wanted:

The hostages are free. The hostages are airborne. The hostages are on the way to Athens, Algiers, Frankfurt — and home.

For America, this sunlit Tuesday was a day of change and liberation.

Carter goes home, a two-day stubble of whiskers on his chin. He dances cheek-to-cheek with his Rosalynn to the rhythm of a country band on the streets of Plains.

Reagan takes the 35-word oath of office, swearing to preserve, protect and defend the Constitution, and offers "this breed called Americans" a speech of hope.

His inaugural address is vintage Reagan: "We have every right to dream heroic dreams," he says, and pledges: "It is not my intention to do away with government. It is rather to make it work — work with us, not over us; to stand by our side, not ride on our back."

The celebration of freedom is born with the liberty flight, on their 444th day of captivity in Iran, of the hostages, 50 men and two women.

Seized by a band of Moslem fanatics on Nov. 4, 1979, they had been prisoners in an undeclared war of wills that became Carter's obsession.

But, perhaps by deliberate calculation of the Iranians, their release is delayed until Carter had surrendered the presidency to Reagan.

So Reagan, dressed in a flashy cutaway, gets the chance to lift a glass of California wine at an inaugural luncheon in the Capitol and announce, "Some 30 minutes ago, the planes bearing our prisoners left Iranian airspace and they're now free of Iran."

He offers this toast: "To all of us together, doing what we all know we can do to make this country what it should be, what it can be, what it always has been."

Across America, church bells peal. Some 400,000 people line Pennsylvania Avenue for the inaugural parade. Many of them hold transistor radios to their ears to keep up with the hostage drama.

Reagan's gleaming limousine proceeds down the avenue. Four years ago, Jimmy Carter and Rosalynn, holding hands, walked.

Now the Carters ride to Andrews Air Force Base for their leavetaking. At the airport, the ex-president encounters Anita Schaefer, wife of a hostage, Col. Thomas Shaefer.

Mrs. Shaefer: "I hope that some day you can meet my husband."

Carter: "I'll be with him tomorrow in Germany and I'll tell him you love him."

Later, he tells reporters: "I had to fight back the tears."

Three thousand people await the Carters at a military airport in Macon, carved from the red Georgia clay.

Carter is weary, unshaven. But when he reaches Plains, townspeople leave their television sets showing Reagan's parade to welcome Carter back home.

In Washington, workmen in the White House hang photographs of the Reagans on the wall. One shows Reagan the cowboy, asleep in a hammock, wearing boots.

Behind the White House, the national Christmas tree has been restrung with bright lights.

Present Administration Spared Frustration Of Hostage Crisis

By WALTER R. MEARS
WASHINGTON (AP) — In a way, President Reagan has been liberated, too.

He never did say exactly what he would have done about the American hostages held in Iran held them captive into his administration. Now it won't be necessary.

Instead, Reagan took office freed of the agonizing, marathon crisis that had defied Jimmy Carter for a year and more.

The 52 captives' release cleared Reagan's foreign policy agenda of a burden that could have become as troublesome for him as for his predecessor.

It was a subject Reagan had addressed repeatedly during the campaign that led him to the White House. Sometimes he spoke cautiously, sometimes in tough terms. One theme was consistent: he blamed Carter foreign policy failures for the fact the hostages were seized in the first place.

"I believe that this administration's foreign policy helped create the entire situation that made their kidnap possible," he said two weeks before the election. "And I think the fact that they're still there is a humiliation and a disgrace to the country."

He said he had some ideas on steps to get them out but wouldn't discuss them publicly. "I certainly wouldn't stand by and do nothing," Reagan said.

Talk like that would have been an instant problem for the new administration were the hostages still captive. He'd promised action, but unspecified action.

And he frustration of America's power to act had rested for more than 14 months in the fact that force beyond that already applied could have jeopardized the very lives the United States sought to save.

Reagan the candidate said that had he been in office when the Americans were seized, he would have set a deadline for release and warned the captors that he would take unpleasant steps if they did not comply.

That campaign statement could foretell the outlines of policies the new administration will have to shape if such a thing happens again. That will be difficult, but not nearly as difficult as handling an existing crisis in which Americans are pawns.

While the new president often talked tough — perhaps a factor in the Iranian decision to let the hostages go as he took over — Reagan said more than four months ago he would accept most of the terms written into the release agreement.

That was on Sept. 15, amid signals that the hostages might be freed during the campaign, to Carter's benefit. Reagan strategists wanted a piece of that action, if action there were. So the Republican presidential nominee accepted the Iranian proposal before the Democratic president did.

"We can and should agree to unfreezing the Iranian assets now held by us, cancellation of any and all claims against Iran and non-intervention in Iran's domestic affairs," all conditioned on release of the hostages, Reagan said then.

Analysis

stood on the Capitol steps and told the nation it will take years to solve the country's economic problems.

By the end of the day, the widely-watched average was down 20.31 points, to 950.68, as declining stocks outnumbered those advancing by a margin of more than 3-1 on the New York Stock Exchange.

Reagan is generally popular in the investment community — his election set off a wave of buying. But prices fell back the next day and have gyrated since then.

In his inaugural address, Reagan pledged to "reawaken this industrial giant" and to "lighten our punitive tax burden."

Dow Jones Average Dips On Day Of Inauguration

NEW YORK (AP) — Ronald Reagan may have a lot of friends on Wall Street, but they weren't very evident the day he was sworn in as president.

In a flurry of selling that started shortly before Reagan was sworn in as the nation's 40th president, stock prices were driven down and the market wound up Tuesday with a deep loss.

The U.S. dollar also suffered in the aftermath of Reagan's inauguration and the release of the 52 Americans from Iran, but that drop was seen as a reaction to declining interest rates on money markets.

The Dow Jones average of 30 industrial stocks was up .85 at noon, as Reagan posed a wage-price freeze without any warning and in opposition to his own philosophy. But Carter did it in a wholesale way.

Last year, for example, he said he had balanced the budget, but three weeks later everyone could see it was unbalanced again. He promised to cut inflation, but he condoned inflationary spending. He instituted wage-price guidelines, but after a year he relaxed the wage standard. He began a new economic program just weeks before the elections.

New President Faces Challenge Of Keeping Public Confidence

By JOHN CUNNIFF
NEW YORK (AP) — Whatever programs Ronald Reagan decides to push during his presidency must be pushed hard, long and with few reservations if he is to sustain credibility and public confidence.

Which is to say that consistency is a much admired virtue of leaders and an economic necessity as well. Anyway, that seems to be the message running through a vast assortment of recently published commentary.

It is also a criticism of former President Jimmy Carter, who embarked on four different economic programs that left business uncertain about what to expect next and, consequently, wary of taking long-term risks.

His wasn't the only administration to attract that charge. Nixon, for one, imposed a wage-price freeze without any warning and in opposition to his own philosophy. But Carter did it in a wholesale way.

Last year, for example, he said he had balanced the budget, but three weeks later everyone could see it was unbalanced again. He promised to cut inflation, but he condoned inflationary spending. He instituted wage-price guidelines, but after a year he relaxed the wage standard. He began a new economic program just weeks before the elections.

And the result seems to have been a loss of credibility and public confidence, rooted in the feeling that if the boss didn't believe in his programs after a few weeks then they couldn't be trusted at all.

Reagan comes into office with his economic goals clear. He hopes to cut spending, cut the size of the bureaucracy, cut taxes, cut red tape and wasteful regulations, spur investments, raise productivity.

Because he has stated his views so distinctly, the burden on him to follow through or else lose respect is now probably greater than it ever was on Carter. His performance or lack of it is measurable.

And so, even before he took the oath of office speculation arose over whether he might postpone goals that months earlier he had so strongly espoused. Earlier one has heard them — that the closer he got to the big job the more realistic he was becoming, that he would back off from his tax-cut proposals, that he move slowly rather than aggressively.

His term has just begun, and there are indications the public wants to give him every break, but in a few months the ubiquitous polls will begin picking up the mood and the assessment of the American people.

What will they think if President Reagan hasn't really pushed for a major tax cut? Will they accept an explanation that states that the necessity of increasing defense spending precludes any tax cut now?

Or that revenue declines because of a recession will lead to an "unexpectedly" high budget deficit.

Hostages Smile Despite Ordeal

FIRST OUT — Hostages Elizabeth Ann Swift, left, and Bruce Laingen, thank the Air Algeria air crew for their hospitality, as they step out of the Algerian aircraft at Algiers airport early Wednesday morning. (AP Laserphoto)

Jubilation Reported On Frankfurt Flight

NEW YORK (AP) — Drinks, handshakes and jubilation marked the flights taking the former American hostages from Algiers to Frankfurt, one of the medical crew members said today.

"It was a kind of party atmosphere the whole way back," said Tech. Sgt. Jerold Duttman of the 55th Aerial Medical Squadron, based in West Germany.

"They were up constantly," he said in an interview on ABC-TV's "Good Morning America" show. "We had beverages on the aircraft. Everybody had a real good time."

Duttman said, "They were all very jubilant when they came on the airplane and greeted everybody with handshakes and smiling faces."

He added, "They talked about coming home and just being super hot, ready to go! They really didn't need an airplane to come back."

Capt. Gretchen Malaski, the medical crew director on one of the aircraft which carried the ex-hostages, said they were "elated, full of enthusiasm. ... We had a couple of Marines who ate two or three meals. Very few of them sat still during the entire flight. They were up and talking with each other, talking with the crew."

She said some had lost some weight.

Duttman said the former hostages said they found out from a news magazine that Richard Queen, who had been held hostage, was released last year because of illness. The article on Queen had been cut out of the magazine but the Iranian censor had missed a reference to it in the table of contents, he said.

Miss Malaski said Col. Thomas Schaeffer, who was the ranking military hostage, was moved by the reception of the crowd that greeted them at Frankfurt's Rhine Main airport.

ALGIERS, Algeria (AP) — There was no band and no fanfare as the 52 Americans from Iran walked their first steps of freedom in 14½ months in a chill rain. But most were smiling as their leader flung up his arms and gave the V-for-victory sign.

Some walked jauntily, others more slowly, a few shambled. But none looked noticeably unwell, and almost all were smiling beneath the blazing arc lights at Algiers' Houari Boumediene Airport early today.

Bruce Laingen, charge d'affaires and the highest-ranking diplomat representing the United States in Iran when the U.S. Embassy was seized, flung his arms up wide, fingers raised in the victory sign, as he led the group across the airport.

"Thank you, thank you," the freed Americans called out as they walked the 100 yards from the red and white Algerian Airways 727 jet which flew them to freedom.

About 150 members of the foreign press had waited for hours. The group of U.S. officials who had helped negotiate the hostages' freedom through Algerian mediators had waited and worked for weeks.

The former captives, looking almost festive in brightly colored hooded jackets and sweaters, had waited for 444 days.

The pause between the moment their aircraft, lights gleaming, taxied in from the east and the appearance on the aircraft steps of the first to emerge was tense.

Applause broke out as the two women hostages, Kathryn Koob and Elizabeth Ann Swift, walked down the steps, their hands clasped.

They were followed by middle-aged diplomats and young Marines, many bearded. Looming above the rest was William Keough, the 6-foot, 6-inch school teacher, who is not a diplomat but who happened to be collating school papers at the embassy on Nov. 4, 1979, when militantly Islamic young Iranians stormed in.

"We're from the school here," called three excited children of diplomats from behind the steel barriers.

"Hi," Keough called back, smiling broadly.

Miss Koob, Miss Swift and some of the newcomers wore yellow ribbons, symbolizing the popular song "Tie a Yellow Ribbon 'Round the Old Oak Tree." The ballad of a convict to his girl friend outside came to symbolize America's wait for the captives' release.

Double rows of blue-uniformed Algerian police, standing at attention facing the penned-off reporters, never allowed themselves a backward glance as the Americans trooped into the airport VIP lounge.

There, Deputy Secretary of State Warren Christopher, who headed the U.S. team that negotiated the Americans' release for $8 billion to $9 billion in frozen Iranian assets, greeted the hostages along with other American officials.

Algerian Foreign Minister Mohamed Benyahia, the chief intermediary in the talks, said, "It is ... my duty at this moment to deliver your fellow citizens to you, Mr. Christopher, who officially represents the American government here."

Christopher responded: "I have the great honor and privilege in affirming that you are back home and safely in our hands. This event answers our prayers and we are more than delighted to accept the responsibility of seeing to it that you return to your homes and families."

Algerian television, in a special late-night live relay, showed the former captives drinking Algerian orange juice and eating cookies served by white-jacketed waiters.

A few of the Americans declined the refreshments, and some looked sadder as they blinked in the glare of the television lights.

Wisecracks mingled with emotion as they headed for the two U.S. Air Force hospital planes taking them to West Germany, for a readjustment period in the U.S. military hospital in Wiesbaden.

Militants Bombard Departing Captives With Mud, Chants

By United Press International

Iranian militants spewed their venom against the United States until the last, hurling mud at the bus carrying the American hostages to the airport and chanting "Down with Reagan" and "Down with America" as the captives were led aboard the freedom flight.

Iran's official Pars news agency, in an unusually graphic and at times sarcastic account of the departure, said the Algerian Embassy staff stood around watching "as if on guard" as the 52 captives were placed aboard the Algerian jet.

A French television journalist in Iran said the bus that carried the hostages through Tehran's streets was splattered with mud — obviously flung at the bus by Iranians.

Pars said as the hostages were taken from a bus, Islamic Revolutionary Guards broke into a chant.

"Allah Akbar (God is great)," the crowd chanted as Ahmad Azizi, an official of the prime minister's office, led the hostages aboard the Algerian jet, Pars said.

"During the process of the boarding of the plane, slogans in English were shouted (including) 'Down with America' and 'Down with Reagan,'" Pars said.

The timing of the departure may have been the biggest indignity of all — especially to outgoing President Carter.

Pars said the bus carrying the hostages approached the plane on the runway at 7:40 local time (11:10 a.m. EST) and 20 minutes later, "the hostages were in the process of being boarded."

Engines at Tehran's airport whined to life at 8:20 (11:50 a.m. EST). Then Pars reported:

"After 444 days, the American hostages boarded the plane to leave Iran. The plane is currently moving on the runway."

There was a pause. Then:

"Tehran Pars News Agency. The hostages plane is now taking off at 8:55 hours (12:25 p.m. EST). Now."

Texas Senator Advocates Distant Ties With Leadership Of Iran

WASHINGTON (AP) — The relationship between the United States and Iran must remain decidedly cool despite the release of the 52 American hostages, says Sen. Lloyd Bentsen.

"I don't think we can, or should, contemplate anything approaching normal relations with the outlaw band that is now attempting to rule Iran," the Texas Democrat said Tuesday. "I presume we'll have an arm's-length relationship — dealing through a third country — and the longer the arm the better."

Bentsen, in a statement, suggested that the way to prevent any future occurrences like the 14½-month-long hostage crisis might be stating clearly the response that could be expected.

"We must prepare a government policy statement that will act as a positive deterrent to any such irresponsible violations of international law in the future," he said.

Sen. John Tower, R-Texas, said he was not prepared to comment on the terms of the agreement that freed the hostages until the details become available.

He said in a statement that he was delighted the hostages are on their way home. "I'm glad the long ordeal is over," Tower said.

House Majority Leader Jim Wright of Fort Worth said the "unlawful and humiliating treatment" that the hostages received should not be forgotten.

"Not since the Middle Ages have such despicable acts been committed by any government to the official peaceful emissaries of another," Wright said in a statement. "Personally, I do not see how the United States could resume normal relations with Iran in the absence of some very decided changes in its government and in its attitude toward us."

Rep. Henry B. Gonzalez, a San Antonio Democrat, said the declaration of hostilities against Iran that he had introduced earlier should still be approved by Congress.

"It would formally define, in other words, Iran as an enemy," he said about his proposed resolution. "We must make Iran pay for its crime against the United States and the civilized world. That's my feeling — we must make them pay."

Released Iranian Assets Amount To $2.9 Billion

WASHINGTON (UPI) — Iran got nearly $2.9 billion in immediate cash through the unprecedented financial transactions that led to release of the hostages, U.S. officials say.

The money came not from U.S. taxpayers but from $12 billion in Iranian assets frozen by the United States 10 days after the Americans were seized on Nov. 4, 1979.

Eventually, Iran will get back more of the frozen money, the exact amount depending on how outstanding loans and claims are settled.

G. William Miller, treasury secretary in the outgoing administration, told reporters the transaction that freed the hostages was perhaps the largest in history — "Nothing like it has ever been done before."

The Federal Reserve and the Bank of England stayed partially open all night to handle it.

At 3:16 a.m. EST Tuesday, a telex machine at the Treasury Department received authorization from U.S. negotiators in Algeria to begin moving the frozen assets.

At 6:43 a.m. the Federal Reserve Bank of New York sent a cryptic wire to the Bank of England in London: "Value today transfer all funds in our dollar deposit account as fiscal agent of the United States government to the account on your books for Banque Centrale d'Algerie as escrow agent ..."

The sum included $5.5 billion in Iranian deposits with European branches of U.S. banks and interest on those deposits; $1.4 billion from the sale of U.S. Securities owned by Iran; $940 million from Iranian-owned gold that had been held by the New York Federal Reserve bank; and about $137 million in "miscellaneous" accounts.

Americans Enter Cheery Surroundings

WIESBADEN, West Germany (UPI) — The 444-day hostage drama ended as it began — sort of.

The 52 Americans were again secluded in a walled-in compound, but this time it was almost like being home.

They were besieged again at the Wiesbaden Air Force hospital — by reporters, not the Iranian crowds who in the early days of the hostage drama gathered outside the U.S. Embassy chanting slogans of hate against America.

The white stucco three-story hospital building, lined by balconies, is on the edge of the military community in Wiesbaden, a West German city of 750,000.

American flags festooned the balcony railings and yellow ribbons are everywhere — on bushes and trees inside the fenced-in yard, tied to tables in the already-set dining room.

Military guards blockaded the gates to keep out the curious. Inside their hospital cocoons, the hostages, now officially called "returnees," have every facility to re-establish broken ties to their previous lives.

A bank of telephones were at their fingertips to call families back home without charge. The 22 servicemen among the hostages found new uniforms laid out, tailored and tagged with their names.

The rooms they occupy are simple, but sunny and inviting. Every one, including those of the two women returnees, comes complete with shaving cream and razors, plus toothbrush and toothpaste.

A special reading room is crowded with paperback books and current issues of a wide selection of American magazines. Dining room tables are fully laid.

But the biggest greeting of all had nothing to do with military thoroughness. All over the hospital were posters drawn by servicemen's children.

"We missed you" or "We love you," they said. Some were huge, as tall as eight feet.

One "unauthorized" banner, however, was hauled down before the returnees arrived. It said, "Free at last, Iran is the past."

Settlement Reached In Club Fire Suits

COVINGTON, Ky. (AP) — Makers of wire insulation have agreed in an out-of-court settlement to pay $2.5 million in damages in connection with the Beverly Hills Supper Club fire 3½ years ago, a federal judge has announced.

The settlement brings to approximately $22 million the total damages collected in continuing litigation in the case.

U.S. District Judge Carl Rubin listed on Tuesday the names of 28 companies that agreed to the latest settlement. They were part of a class of defendants, manufacturers of polyvinyl chloride wire insulation, and may or may not have produced products used to build the Southgate club, where 165 people died May 28, 1977.

A few years ago, Rubin permitted the survivors and relatives of the victims to sue the entire industry. They alleged that PVC wire insulation gives off poisonous gas when burned and may have contributed to the deaths.

Fugitive Businessman To Remain In Bahamas

NASSAU, Bahamas (AP) — Fugitive businessman Robert Vesco will be allowed to remain in the Bahamas indefinitely while the Cabinet considers his plea for political asylum and his appeal of a government deportation order, officials say.

Prime Minister Lynden O. Pindling had set a Tuesday deadline for Vesco to leave the Bahamas, but a government spokesman said an extension of the deadline had been granted.

"The case is still pending, and I don't believe anything will be done until the Cabinet makes a decision," said the spokesman, who asked not to be identified.

The spokesman called Vesco's extension a "day-to-day thing" and said he had "no idea" how long it would take to make a decision.

"This isn't like a court case. ... He filed a legal appeal to the Ministry of Home Affairs and the Cabinet just sits around the table and makes a decision," the spokesman said.

Vesco, 45, has been sought by U.S. authorities since the early 1970s. The U.S. government contends he looted Investors Overseas Services of $224 million while he headed the company, and that he tried to have charges in the case dropped by contributing $200,000 in 1972 to Richard Nixon's presidential re-election campaign.

After fleeing the United States, Vesco went first to Costa Rica, but was asked to leave by that Central American nation's government.

Because he has given up his U.S. citizenship, Vesco faces the possibility of becoming a man without a country if he is ordered out of the Bahamas.

On Nov. 11, Bahamian officials gave Vesco 30 days to leave this nation of some 700 islands off Florida's east coast, but they later granted a brief extension of that deadline.

Girls Enroll In Private School

ALEXANDRIA, La. (AP) — Three white teen-age girls who defied a desegregation order are now enrolled in a private school, without their academic records, and credits for last semester's work at an all-white public school, parents say.

U.S. District Judge Nauman Scott ordered officials at rural Buckeye High School to withhold the academic records of Michelle Laborde, Lynda McNeal and Ramona Carbo, all 13.

The girls were not entitled to credit that they will return to the public school system next year. That's what we hope to do."

A state educator has said the loss of academic credit need not affect their standing at a private school, which could test them to determine their grade level.

Scott's order was the latest in a series of rulings that began when state District Judge Richard Lee started helping the girls in their fight to remain at Buckeye.

Last August, Scott issued a Rapides Parish desegregation plan that among other things transferred 106 Buckeye students to Jones Street. Among those students were the girls now known locally as the "Buckeye Three."

The girls' parents, saying they opposed busing, assigned custody of their daughters to friends in Buckeye's new attendance zone.

Lee granted the custody change, but Scott said the move was a ploy to circumvent desegregation.

Scott had threatened to hold Lee in contempt of court since the state judge twice sent police to Buckeye to be sure the girls were enrolled in defiance of the federal court's order.

But Scott dropped the contempt-of-court charges in a compromise last week when he told the girls they could attend Buckeye for the final week of this semester, which ends Friday, and keep their credits provided they transferred to Jones Street.

He gave the girls' parents until Monday to sign the compromise agreement, but they refused to do so.

for last semester's work because they were enrolled at Buckeye illegally, he said.

"No scholastic achievement credits have been earned. None could be confiscated, expropriated or forfeited," Scott said Tuesday.

The three had been ordered to enroll in mostly black Jones Street Junior High in Alexandria, a 15-mile bus ride from their homes.

"The Justice Department and Judge Scott have blackmailed us. They are punishing the children for something they have not done," Ina Laborde, Michelle's mother, said Tuesday.

She said an appeal would be filed with the U.S. 5th Circuit Court in New Orleans or with the Supreme Court.

"The children have been enrolled in a private school," she said. "I would think

Ohio Police Nab Man Wanted For Crime Spree In Michigan

HURON, Ohio (AP) — Police who pursued and stopped a stolen car discovered a 52-year-old Michigan man in the trunk and learned that the driver was wanted in a string of abductions in Michigan, authorities say.

In the hour-long Michigan spree Tuesday, a gunman commandeered three cars — one with a sleeping baby on the seat, another with a 72-year-old woman inside — and shot a pharmacist, police said.

The driver, a 34-year-old Detroit man whose name was not released, was arrested after he crashed into a parked car here, police Sgt. Stan Puder said.

In the trunk, police found a 52-year-old Clio, Mich., man who had been abducted earlier in the day, Puder said.

His name was not released.

The driver, in custody here, faces a concealed weapons charge as well as kidnapping and car theft charges in Ohio, Puder said.

In Flint, Mich., Sgt. Joe Wood said the spree began when a gunman forced a man to drive him to downtown Flint. The victim got away when the gunman forced him to stop for gasoline.

Wood said the gunman got behind the wheel and drove three blocks to police headquarters and commandeered a parked car.

He drove that car, with an infant sleeping in the back seat, to Bokor's Pharmacy on Flint's south side, where he left the car and forced his way into a third car with 72-year-old Sally Silver inside, Wood said.

David Snyder, a pharmacist at Bokor's, came outside and exchanged gunfire with the gunman and was wounded in the shoulder, according to Wood.

The gunman drove off with the elderly woman and released her after taking her purse and $100, Wood said.

The man found in the trunk was abducted sometime after the gunman sped away from Flint, police said.

The baby was reunited with her mother, who had been inside police headquarters paying a traffic ticket, Wood said.

"The kid never woke up. She was the only one who stayed calm during the whole thing," he added.

Flint police planned to send detectives to Huron, according to Puder.

Huron police were alerted to the stolen car when someone spotted a man with a gun outside a Huron party store and called police.

Trimming The Grapevine

THE COACHING PERFORMANCE by Texas A&M's Shelby Metcalf is preposterous. There is no better word to describe it.

He apparently misjudged the budding balance of the Southwest Conference when he wrote a prescription for league domination that did not include a backcourt, let alone one quality guard. It was apparent while viewing last year's team that the Aggies one year hence would be less in need of a replacement for spasmic David Britton than for the unremarkable David Goff. Both are now graduated and Metcalf, with three recruiting years in which to supplement his macho front line, has come up with nothing better than Tyrone Ladson.

A coach like Metcalf, who may be the least capable technician among the nine-member board of SWC mentors, cannot afford such lack of foresight. Once a game has begun, he is unable to compensate for a team's weaknesses — nay, even use a team's strengths to the utmost — the way Gerald Myers or Eddie Sutton do year after year...

A local observer of the SWC had predicted in preseason that Texas A&M would crack the final four of the 1981 NCAA post-season tournament. Now, it appears that a berth among the final four in the SWC's post-season tournament may be a more realistic goal...

THE SCHOLASTIC INELIGIBILITY of A&M center Rudy Woods cannot hurt. His absence will speed the development of sophomore Claude Riley.

Woods had been cited as a pre-season All-America candidate one year ago. By season's end, he had panned out as the nation's most overrated big man. This season, he failed to be overrated because no one took the trouble to rate him in the first place...

The various college all-star football games have indicated that perhaps UCLA's Freeman McNeil — and not South Carolina's George Rogers — may be the best professional prospect among running backs in the upcoming National Football League draft.

Also, Portland State quarterback Neil Lomax has proven to be no slouch despite having played for four years at a NCAA Division II school. He may be drafted ahead of Purdue's Mark Herrmann, although both are first-round cinches.

JOHN MADDEN HAS CAST a 230-pound media shadow on Tom Flores, his successor as head coach of the Super Bowl Oakland Raiders. Reports from New Orleans indicate that during interview sessions, Madden, in town as an analyst with CBS Sports, is generally ringed by no less than 20 writers while Flores can count on the attentions of not more than two or three...

The National Basketball Association's ban on the use of zone defenses is a farce. There is no NBA team that does not play a basic match-up zone at least 75 percent of the time...

First-year head coach Stan Albeck of the San Antonio Spurs is a frontrunner for NBA Coach of the Year. He has resurrected the Spurs who, for years, were the team without a defense. Albeck has given the Spurs a means of victory other than the raucous offense led by George Gervin.

Another NBA team with a new lease on life and, coincidentally, a first-year coach, is Indiana. At this writing, the once-forsorn Pacers are second in the Central Division under Jack McKinney, who has shaped a winning team from the likes of such anonymity as Johnny Davis, Mike Bantom and James Edwards. Also, McKinney has veteran George McGinnis playing unselfish basketball for the first time in his career.

Coaching, no matter what the sport, is 90 percent of the game...

A glance at NBA rosters reveals that, of the nation's 10 most prestigious collegiate basketball conferences, only the SWC and the Ivy League have failed to send one rookie into the pros this season. David Britton, who in December had received a 10-day contract from the Washington Bullets, is long gone...

Former Houston schoolboy star James Griffin, who disappointed SWC coaches by electing to play his college ball at Illinois of the Big Ten, has finally cracked the Illini's starting lineup. The 6-foot-10 center, now a junior, backed up Derek Holcomb until this season.

A 15-point lead is a safe margin in some sports and a borderline advantage in others but hardly breathing space when you're facing the Estacado Matadors. Ask the Dunbar Panthers. They learned the hard way Tuesday.

With a red-hot start the Panthers jumped out to as much as a 16-point advantage but when the screaming, standing-room-only crowd in the Dunbar gym had departed, it was Estacado that emerged with a 65-61 district 1-4A victory.

"The game was not untypical of Dunbar-Estacado basketball," Mat coach J.J. Wood said. "We came in here anticipating something like this. No matter what the team's records are, we always have a game of this nature."

"Dunbar was hitting so well in the first period, they were playing inspired ball. They just outfigured us in the first half and they got a hot-streak going. When you get a hot streak going, it makes you play harder," he said.

The first one and a half periods belonged to the Panthers, now 5-16 on the season and 0-2 in district games. With Roland Comacho and Kirk Coats canning everything they threw in the general direction of the basket, Dunbar broke a 4-4 tie with a 15-2 scoring spurt and led 23-8 entering the second quarter.

Comacho, the Panthers' most consistent outside shooter, scored 10 of his 20 points in the first eight minutes while Coats, a sophomore, contributed six in the big quarter.

Dunbar opened its lead to 29-13 with 5:16 to play in the half before the Mats began to make a move. Three consecutive steals resulted in three Mat buckets, cutting the lead to 29-19, and basket-swapping put the halftime score at 33-23.

"Dunbar did a real good job of breaking down our offense in their zone. We never did run a real good offense tonight," Wood said.

The problem was the Panthers encountered the same problem — no offense — in the third period and were outscored 20-8 as the Matadors took a 43-41 lead into the final eight minutes.

"One of our problems was in the second half some of the kids thought about blowing them (Estacado) out," Dunbar coach Joe McWilliams said. "And in the

Unlikely Hoop By King Crowns Coronado 52-50

By RUSS PARSONS
Avalanche-Journal Sports Staff
The game was Coronado's last pre-district tuneup and Mustang coach Barry Arwine was hoping to get his group running like new. But there was a fly in the ointment.

Orlando King and he dribbled back and forth through the Coronado defense before launching a 30-foot prayer shot with two seconds left to beat the Ponies 52-50 Tuesday night.

Coronado had tied the score by patiently working a set play that sprang guard Robby Garner open for a 15-foot shot. He made it and, with just under a minute left, the game was knotted at 50.

Palo Duro inbounded the ball and it was apparent that something was amiss, the Dons just couldn't find an offensive rhythm. Coach Ed Smith called a time out with 0:43 showing to try and fix that. He couldn't. Palo Duro came out after the time out and continued its erratic passing, flirting with disaster (or at least overtime) several times before King took matters in his own hands.

King made a pair of free throws at the 3:14 mark to put PD back up by one at 48-47.

LHS Westerners' 'Drama Club' Drops Curtain On Cage Foe

Those Lubbock High Westerners sure have a flair for the dramatic.

Playing in front of a home crowd in the LHS gym Tuesday night, the Westerners had leads of 10 and nine points as late as the third quarter, but had to rally for a 63-62 non-district victory over Tascosa.

LHS was behind 62-61 with 10 seconds to play, but a tipin by Kirk Cole, the game's leading scorer with 13 points, gave the Westerners the lead for good.

The win enabled LHS to reach the 500 mark for the season at 11-11. The Westerners led 13-10 after one quarter, but were outscored 21-18 in the second as the Rebels rallied to tie the score at halftime. Tascosa led by one after three quarters, but in the final period the Westerners scored 16 to the Rebels' 14 for the victory.

"I thought some of the things that had plagued us all year were there again," said Arwine. "I don't think John Lord had the kind of game we needed to get from him."

Garner, who was aflame from outside all night, missed half of a two-shot foul with 2:50 remaining to set up the climactic action.

"We were hitting in the first half and they (Estacado) weren't. But in the second half we gave them more opportunities to score and they started hitting the shots they weren't hitting in the first half. And you can't expect us to go out and shot the entire game like we did the first half," he said.

A Turon Patterson bucket gave Dunbar a 41-35 lead with 3:28 remaining in the third period but then the Mats hit the final eight points of the period on buckets by Rodney Guyton, Jerry Gray, James Barnett and Kenneth Cade.

Saints' Shakeup Precedes Bum

NEW ORLEANS (AP) — With the resignation of general manager Steve Rosenbloom, it appears likely that former Houston Oilers' coach Bum Phillips will be named head coach of the New Orleans Saints before the Super Bowl on Sunday.

Chances of an early announcement had dimmed over Senior Bowl week as Phillips, Rosenbloom and Saints owner John Mecom Jr. said there were still several details to be ironed out before an agreement could be reached.

Although all three repeatedly brushed it off as an easily resolved detail earlier, the issue of who would control team personnel apparently became an impassable barrier.

As coach and general manager at Houston, Phillips had total control of drafts and trades. Rosenbloom said he had that authority with the Saints, working through Dick Steinberg, his hand-picked vice president for personnel.

"I already have a general manager," Mecom said earlier, when he was asked if the issue of player personnel could be a stumbling block to hiring Phillips.

Mecom, Rosenbloom and Steinberg met Tuesday. When Rosenbloom could not get a commitment to building through the draft, with him and Steinberg continuing to make personnel decisions, they both quit, The AP learned.

Their brief statement made no mention of the struggle. None of those involved could be reached for follow-up comment.

The resignation statement said:

"We came to the Saints with a mutual understanding and agreement in philosophy with the ownership on how to construct a stable winning organization.

"It has been apparent for some time that there exists a difference of opinion regarding how these goals should be approached. Under these circumstances, we feel that this decision is the best for all concerned.

"We do not feel that further comment on the situation is necessary."

Last Saturday, Mecom gave the first hints that he was becoming disenchanted with Rosenbloom. He said he didn't like Rosenbloom's describing the Saints' 8-8 record in 1979 as "cosmetic," among other things.

Rosenbloom joined the Saints after that 1979 season, the team's best ever, and before this year's skid to 1-15. He said his job was never in jeopardy but joined with Mecom in firing coach Dick Nolan with four games left in the season.

Mecom has not announced that he is going to hire Phillips, but he said Monday that Phillips was 99 percent sure to be the next New Orleans coach.

No news conference has been scheduled to announce the new coach.

Rosenbloom grew up in the NFL, son of the late Carroll Rosenbloom, owner of the Baltimore Colts and later the Los Angeles Rams.

After his father's death, the control of the Rams passed to Rosenbloom's stepmother. They had personal differences and Rosenbloom left Los Angeles and joined the Saints.

The Houston Chronicle quoted Mecom as saying Monday he had "decided on Bum" and an official announcement will be made as soon as he confers with Pete Rozelle, National Football League commissioner.

Mecom said he had been unable to reach Rozelle, who reportedly was in Washington for President Ronald Reagan's inauguration.

Phillips said he was looking forward to tackling his second rebuilding job.

"Anybody can do good in one place," he said. "I'm looking forward to the opportunity to do good in two places. I've said it a million times, but that's what Don Shula did in Baltimore and Miami. Now John Mecom has given me the opportunity to do it."

Phillips was fired after the Oilers lost to the Oakland Raiders 27-7 in the wild-card game of the American Football Conference championship playoffs.

The announced reason for the firing was a difference of opinion over whether he should have an offensive coordinator. Phillips had a career record of 59-38 with the Oilers.

Virginia Cager Ralph Sampson Likes Game

CHARLOTTEVILLE, Va. (AP) — Last year, in his freshman season, he led Virginia's Cavaliers to the National Invitation Tournament title, then passed up a shot at the pros. This year, Ralph Sampson says he's enjoying college basketball even more.

"It was fun playing last year," says the 7-foot-4 sophomore who has led Virginia to a No. 2 national ranking this season. "It's a lot more fun now. We're winning and we're a better team."

Sampson, who was wooed by the Boston Celtics of the National Basketball Association last spring but decided against declaring himself a hardship case, won't talk about the pros right now. All he wants is a national championship.

"We thought about the national title the first of the year. We're still thinking about it, but it's in the back of our minds. Right now, we're taking one game at a time," he says.

Sampson was voted the most valuable player in the NIT last year after a season in which he averaged 14.9 points, 11.2 rebounds and 4.6 blocked shots per game.

This season, he's averaging 20.3 points, 12.2 rebounds and four blocked shots per game.

But Sampson also has 44 turnovers, more than double the number of the next Virginia player, and he's hitting only 59.4 percent of his free throws compared with 70.2 percent last year.

"I've got to work on the turnovers and the free throws," Sampson says.

Because of a case of the flu just at the start of the season, Sampson weighs just 210 pounds compared with the 225 he'd like to weigh, and some people think he's not tough enough.

"I may not look strong, but I'm definitely stronger than last year and I'm gonna get stronger during the year," he says.

Sampson says he doesn't worry about statistics. "I'm not worried about who makes the most points, just who wins," he says.

As a matter of fact, he says some of his best games have been on defense with no statistics to evaluate his performance.

Hard-Nosed Van Eeghen Runs Hard For Raiders

NEW ORLEANS (UPI) — Mark van Eeghen, the Oakland Raiders' tough-yardage runner, was really enjoying himself.

He was completely relaxed, sitting on the silver helmet off to the side of the end zone in the Superdome, answering all kinds of questions by newsmen about his life, his college career at Colgate and about Sunday's confrontation with the Philadelphia Eagles in Super Bowl XV, when he was suddenly interrupted.

"What I came here to find out is how's your love life?" a new intruder butted in.

That's actually a laundered version of the question which was considerably more to the point.

Van Eeghen, whose head had been down as he was talking to the reporters kneeling around him, looked up to see who would have the brass to ask him such a nosy non-football question.

He saw it was Rocky Bleier, the Pittsburgh Steelers' recently retired running back, and both of them started laughing.

Bleier is now covering Sunday's contest and the local events leading up to it for Pittsburgh's Channel 11, WIC. After he and van Eeghen got through laughing, Bleier came right back with a straight question, one he could share on the air with his listeners.

"What do you see as the key matchup in Sunday's game?" he asked the Raiders' curly-haired, 28-year-old fullback.

"Our tackles against their ends," van Eeghen replied.

Bleier asked him another question or two, then wished van Eeghen luck and moved on to some of the other Oakland players. Before he did, he talked to one newsman he knew about van Eeghen.

"He's their bread-and-butter ballplayer," Bleier said. "He's the one who has been consistently able to get them those third-down conversions."

Van Eeghen has done that and then some, having been the Raiders' biggest ground gainer this season with his 838 yards in 222 tries for a 3.8-yard average that included five touchdowns, and that's one of the chief reasons they are only the second wild-card team ever to make it to the Super Bowl.

"I was never recruited," says van Eeghen, who is winding up his seventh season with the Raiders and got his chance for regular employment with them only after Marv Hubbard was laid off four seasons ago.

Van Eeghen, who comes from Cranston, R.I., broke Colgate's 25-year-old school career rushing record with 2,591 yards in three seasons, but was still rather surprised when the Raiders made him their third-round choice in the 1974 draft. That wasn't too bad for a fellow who never really set out to play football in school and got through it with an ordinary financial-aid grant based on need.

"I felt a bit intimidated when I reported to a professional football camp for the first time in 1974," he says. "Here I was just a kid wondering what I was doing there. I was tempted to quit a number of times."

But van Eeghen hung in, and when Hubbard, who also starred at Colgate, got hurt, he made the most of his opportunity.

"Marv is a good friend of mine and I was sorry he got hurt, but that's the way those things go sometimes. I'm sure somebody eventually will be coming along to take my job," he said.

Van Eeghen earned a Bachelor of Arts degree in economics — which is every bit as important to him as his football career — and which he plans to use. Fairly soon, too.

"I guess I thought I'd end up in a business career, and I imagine I will when I'm finished playing," he says. "Football hasn't knocked that out for me. It has only postponed it."

For all the success he has had with the Raiders picking up yardage when they needed it most, through opposing lines and around them, van Eeghen is aware of his limitations.

"I'm not the biggest fullback in the league, I'm not the fastest and I'm not the strongest," he concedes. "I've gotta be doing something right, though. I'd rather have a player with more desire and less ability than one with more ability and less desire. Maybe that's where I fit in."

Jaworski, Eagles List Necessity

NEW ORLEANS (AP) — Philadelphia Eagles' quarterback Ron Jaworski said the key to Super Bowl XV is going to be first-down yardage.

The Eagles scheduled a workout today at the Superdome after a photo and interview session with the media.

Jaworski said after Tuesday's drill that if the Eagles let the Raiders hold them on first down, they're going to dictate the game.

"We can't let them put us in second-and-ten or second-and-seven situations," Jaworski said.

The Eagles' quarterback noted that Oakland has a strong secondary and a great linebacker in Ted Hendricks.

"I've looked at six game films and still don't know what Hendricks is doing," Jaworski said. "I'm not their coaching staff, but I think they'd tell him (Hendricks) to go where he wants to go. They've got great confidence in their cornerbacks."

Jaworski was excited about the practice performance of wide receiver Charlie Smith, who had been sidelined with a double fracture of the jaw since the last game of the regular season against Dallas.

"Charlie had a super practice today and made some great catches," Jaworski said.

On the same subject, Eagles' coach Dick Vermeil said Smith was close to starting in the Super Bowl.

"He ran really well and made some great catches," said Vermeil. "If he keeps going like this, I think he'll be a starter. I'll make that decision later, but if I had to make it now, he'd start."

Smith wears a specially-designed facemask to protect his jaw.

Eagles' center Guy Morris said he thought the Eagles were the better team.

"The personality of our club will prevail over their style," Morris said. "We're supposed to be hard-working guys and I know they don't work as hard as we do."

Morris said he thought Oakland would have a difficult time against the Philadelphia defense. He said he didn't think the Raiders would run against the Eagles and that they weren't good enough to win with a pass.

Eagles' Max Runnager To Avoid Duel With Oakland's Ray Guy

NEW ORLEANS (AP) — Super Bowl XV could be decided by Max Runnager of the Philadelphia Eagles, or by Ray Guy of the Oakland Raiders.

They'll be the teams' punters when the Eagles and Raiders meet Sunday in the New Orleans Superdome for the National Football League championship.

The Eagles are outclassed in punting because Guy is recognized as one of the premier players in his specialty in the history of the NFL.

Runnager, however, believes he can handle the job for the Eagles by keeping his own abilities in mind.

"He almost always boots deep and forces the opposition to go a long way to score," said Runnager. "I'm not going to get into a kicking contest with him. I'm just going to stay within myself."

Runnager averaged 38.8 yards per punt in the Eagles' drive to the National Football Conference championship, while Guy was 43.6 for the American Football Conference champion Raiders.

Runnager admits he can't compete in a punting contest with Guy, the only punting specialist ever selected as a No. 1 draft choice.

"If he kicks one 60 yards, I'm not going to try and kick one 65," Runnager said. "You have to remember that it's just you and the ball and how you connect."

Runnager said, however, that he isn't underestimating his key role in Sunday's game.

"He (Guy) can kick the ball out of the stadium," Runnager said. "All I can do is not try and outkick him, but kick steady, try and keep the field position balanced."

"If I try to kick with him, it will just mess me up," he added. "I don't want to do that. There is a lot more to this game than any other game."

Ex-Dodger Johnson Traces Drug, Alcohol Abuse

NEW YORK (UPI) — Lou Johnson, or "Sweet Lou" as everybody still calls him, always was one of the best talkers in baseball, and being back with his beloved Dodgers now, he had plenty he wanted to talk about.

He had just finished a workout at Dodger Stadium Tuesday, getting up a good honest sweat and he looked right at home now in the clubhouse wearing his Dodger uniform with the same No. 41 he wore when he helped them to a pair of National League pennants in 1965 and 1966.

Lou Johnson had been having some hard times recently and Peter O'Malley, the Dodgers' president, heard about it. He had had a soft spot for Sweet Lou a long time, ever since he got to know him while operating the Spokane, Wash., club and sent him up to the Dodgers in 1965.

O'Malley got wind of the fact Johnson was having trouble with drugs and alcohol. Big trouble. He also found out how Johnson had voluntarily entered The Meadows two months ago, a rehabilitation center in Wickenburg, Ariz.

So O'Malley decided to do whatever he could to give Sweet Lou some kind of meaningful purpose, and he did it by making him a minor-league batting instructor and member of the club's community relations program, in which two other ex-Dodgers, Don Newcombe and Roy Campanella, also are involved.

Back in 1969, Johnson was all finished. It was all gone — the flashy cars, the good clothes and the good times. Drugs and drinking took care of everything.

"I went from bad to worse," he said. "I'll tell you how bad it was. I saw death staring me in the face. Hey, man, my whole world had gone kaput. The drugs made me think I could do anything I wanted. They made me think I was God. I was plain out of my head was what it was. And it all started with alcohol."

In time, Johnson's tolerance for alcohol disappeared almost completely.

"I couldn't handle it any more," he said. "I knew I was in trouble. My wife, Jacquelyn, put up with this for 10 years, but she stayed with me. If not for her, I'd be dead."

Two months ago, when it got so bad, Johnson felt there was no way out, he remembered Don Newcombe and how he was working now with drug and alcohol abusers.

"I told him," Johnson said. "He talked with me, spent time with me. Finally, I decided to admit to the world what I really was — an alcohol and drug abuser. That's when I went to The Meadows. I wish you would please put it in the paper how grateful I am to the people in Wickenburg. Especially my counselors. The first thing they did was make me get rid of all the hate and resentment, the fear I had repressed for so many years. They helped me find myself and my motivation for drinking and taking drugs. In my case, it was the hate I had in me because I wasn't able to stay at the top as long as I felt I should've. Maybe I looked happy to everybody, but I was angry and crying on the inside.

"What I would like to do now, working in community relations, is talk to young people and tell them about the most cunning, baffling, powerful and patient killer in the world — alcohol. It'll wait for you until you get there. I was there, so I know. But now I'm the most totally happy person in the world. My mother in Lexington, Ky., was the last one to know when I went in for rehabilitation. When she found out, she told me, 'It's all right to admit it to the world. It saved your life. I'm happy.'"

Marvin Barnes Alleges Police Vendetta

PROVIDENCE (AP) — Marvin Barnes, a former Providence College All-American and professional basketball player, says some Providence police officers are out to get him.

Barnes, 28, pleaded innocent Tuesday in District Court to possession of marijuana. He was arrested last week after a chase in cars and on foot during which two warning shots were fired over his head.

He pleaded innocent last week to driving violations stemming from the incident in South Providence. Police detectives said they chased Barnes' auto through three red lights before he abandoned the car and fled on foot.

Police said they fired two shots in warning because they thought Barnes was a robber who could be armed.

"Let's not make it like they're bothering me for no reason, (or) because they have nothing better to do. It's specific things I did in my life," he said.

"He controls his own destiny," said Maj. Walter J. Clark, administrative aide to Police Chief Angelo P. Ricci. He said many of the defendants were saddened by Barnes' problems.

"He had the opportunity that few of us will ever see. Unfortunately, he missed too many layup shots, both on and off the court," Clark said, referring to Barnes' checkered career in the old American Basketball Association and the NBA.

Clark said the department "has no ax to grind, with him or anyone else."

Barnes served time in the Adult Correctional Institutions in 1977 for violation of probation after a handgun was found in his luggage at a Detroit airport. The probation had been imposed in 1974, after he pleaded guilty to assaulting a Providence teammate with a tire iron.

But he said police resent him for the testimony he gave in a brutality case in the early 1970s, which resulted in a procedure being established for handling complaints of excessive use of force.

Dunbar used a full-court pressure defense and a pair of scoring bursts — at the beginning of the second and fourth periods — to dump Estacado 55-47 Tuesday in a district game in the Panther gym.

The Panthers' constant pressure caused many of the Matadors' 39 turnovers, a 10-2 Dunbar scoring burst at the beginning of the second quarter gave the Panthers the lead and a 6-0 run in the first minute of the final eight minutes salted away the victory.

Dunbar is now 3-2 in district 1-4A and 12-8 overall while Estacado, losing to the Panthers for the third consecutive time this season, fell to 1-4 and 12-10.

Developers Trying Novel Ideas

By PHILIP GREER
And MYRON KANDEL
If you've been into house-hunting lately you know the feeling. Interest rates are sky-high, but if you wait for them to come down, you know the price of the house is going up, so it looks like there's no way out from behind the eight ball. Real estate developers have the same problem and they've come up with some novel ideas for getting people into the houses they want — and getting some profits into their own pockets.

One of the more imaginative plans is something called the mortgage rollback program run by one developer, Florida Residential Communities Inc., in central Florida. If things go right — and if they go quickly — a home buyer can almost have his cake and eat it, too.

The plan is simple to describe, although it wasn't that easy to set up. A buyer decides on a house and a price. The mortgage rate is whatever the local banks around Orlando and Daytona, Fla., are charging. But anytime during the first 12 months after the closing, the buyer can decide to refinance the mortgage, at no cost. It can only be done once, and only if the mortgage rate drops by at least a point.

What it does is guarantee a buyer the price of the house — it won't go up if mortgage rates come down and more people get into the market — and holds out the promise of a lower interest rate if the market slides off.

Burt Bines, the president of FRC, says the plan is keeping him in business. "It's the thing that's selling most of our houses," he told us.

And while Bines' business isn't exactly booming, he's doing as well as he did last year, although mortgage rates in his area are a good deal higher than they were than and prices, of course, are higher too.

"There are two main reasons why people aren't buying houses," Bines says, explaining where the mortgage rollback program came from. "One is that they can't afford the price, but with many of them you can work out the numbers. The other is that many people just can't accept today's mortgage rates. Builders and banks have tried to come up with a number of plans for that group. Some of them subsidize the mortgage for a few months; others rebate part of the price of the house to apply against mortgage payments. We decided that those ideas don't solve the main problem — being saddled with a high-interest mortgage for as long as you own the house."

Along with a couple of savings and loans in the area, Bines came up with the mortgage rollback plan. A spokesman at the Mortgage Bankers Association in Washington said he hadn't heard of anything similar anywhere else in the country, although he said it sounded like a good way to drum up business.

The savings and loans and FRC split the cost of re-financing the mortgage (the buyer is guaranteed to qualify for the new mortgage, provided he hasn't defaulted on the old one), but of course that's a cost they'd rather not have to pay — and sometimes they don't have to.

Last winter, for instance, when the idea was tried out, the mortgage rate was 14 percent. By the time of the closings, rates had fallen sharply and mortgages were 12 percent. The buyers got the lower rate, but now won't be refinancing unless mortgage charges drop very sharply to, at most, 11 percent.

"Real estate people around here are very innovative and usually they don't want people to adopt their ideas," Bines says. "But this is different. We've had a problem getting the word out and getting banks to go along. We tell them it's better to have a mortgage at a slightly lower rate, and keep business moving, than not to have one at all, but many of them have been unwilling to go along. I'd like to have people everywhere going into real estate offices and asking for the plan, to get it going more strongly."

For FRC, Bines says, the plan has been a lifesaver.

"About 75 percent of our traffic has been people walking in the door and asking about the MRG," he says. "It's kept us going so far. In January 1980 we sold 20 units. This month is a tough one to gauge — the first couple of weeks after the holiday are always slow — but it looks like we'll do better than last year. A normal month's sales for FRC is about 35 units — houses and condominiums, ranging from $5,000 to $130,000 — a month."

Winter May Offer Chance To Test Anti-Viral Drug

ATLANTA (UPI) — This winter may offer physicians and health officials the first real chance to test the effectiveness of a comparatively new anti-viral drug, amantadine, against influenza.

Epidemic influenza has been reported in several states by the national Centers for Disease Control. There have been regional outbreaks in other states. Deaths due to influenza and pneumonia in 121 major U.S. cities indicate that the seasonal ailment is widespread.

Amantadine hydrochloride, the chemical agent's generic name, was licensed by the Food and Drug Administration in 1966. But its cost and uncertainty about side effects have limited its use.

In October 1979, researchers reported to the National Institutes of Health that years of research showed amantadine was about 70 percent effective in preventing influenza-A, the most common type of influenza, which includes the A-Brazil and A-Bangkok viruses. The latter virus has been identified as causing the widespread influenza activity this winter.

The scientists also said the drug, taken even after the start of an infection, showed promise of reducing the duration and severity of the illness.

After hearing from the medical experts, the NIH came up with a consensus statement suggesting the possible use of amantadine in conjunction with vaccination to stop or prevent flu epidemics in nursing homes. It said nursing home patients should be vaccinated and then be treated with amantadine for 10-14 days.

This would be the first flu season offering a chance of wide-scale use of amantadine since the NIH statement came out. Outbreaks during the 1979-80 winter were caused by the B-Singapore virus, against which amantadine was not recommended.

The CDC reported last November that amantadine along with a vaccination program was used to curb an outbreak of influenza in a San Francisco nursing home. The amantadine treatment was discontinued after five days because of some undesirable side effects. But no further influenza activity was reported in the facility.

Researchers say amantadine is best considered as an adjunct, rather than as an alternative, to flu vaccine. They say it should be used as a preventive measure in "closed populations" such as nursing homes, for brief periods during epidemics.

Amantadine only works while it is being taken. Endo Laboratories, which manufactures amantadine under the trade name Symmetrel, said the drug should be taken for at least 10 days following contact with someone with influenza. It should be taken for up to 90 days during an epidemic when a vaccine is not available.

Amantadine, a chemical compound, was isolated during the 1930s from a rare type of petroleum found in Czechoslovakia but only milligram amounts could be refined.

It remained a chemical curiosity until a way could be found to synthesize it and make it available in reasonable quantities for study and experiment. A relatively easy synthesis was discovered in 1956 by Princeton University researchers.

Selloff Casts Spotlight On Advisory Services

By CHET CURRIER
NEW YORK (AP) — The "Joe Granville selloff" in the stock market early this month cast a spotlight on a diverse group of independent entrepreneurs who make their living giving investment advice.

Thanks to the sharp decline in stock prices that followed his recommendation to "sell everything," the controversial Granville is now probably the best known of the breed.

But there are uncounted hundreds of others engaged in selling newsletters and other publications that counsel their readers on what to do with their savings and investments.

A few of them are located in New York City, but many more operate far from Wall Street. Granville, whose headquarters are in Holly Hill, Fla., near Daytona Beach, is only one of many based in Florida. Others are scattered from Hartford, Conn., to Camano Island, Wash., from La Jolla, Calif., to Toronto, Canada.

There are several big operations in the field. The Value Line Investment Survey boasts more than 50 analysts and some 90,000 subscribers. Merrill Lynch, the nation's largest investment firm, got into the game several years ago with its Merrill Lynch Market Letter.

Many another advisory service, however, is relatively small, and strongly imprinted with the ideas and theories of the individual who runs it. This is particularly true of the subspecies known as gold bugs, who thrived in the inflation-ridden 1970s.

It is rare indeed for any single service

Chicago Board Of Trade Fills Officer Posts

CHICAGO (AP) — Members of the Chicago Board of Trade have elected Leslie Rosenthal as chairman and Ralph I. Goldenberg as vice chairman of the 132-year-old exchange.

Rosenthal, elected this week, replaces Alfred H. Gruetzmacher, while Goldenberg succeeds Thomas P. Cunningham Jr. They take office Monday, and each will serve one-year terms.

Rosenthal and Goldenberg ran without opponents.

Rosenthal, managing partner of Rosenthal and Co., became a Board of Trade member in 1958. He is past vice chairman of the exchange and chairman of the Board of Trade Clearing Corp. He began as a runner on the exchange floor three decades ago.

Goldenberg is an independent trader and currently a member of the exchange's board of directors. He joined the exchange in 1961.

The members also elected five representatives to three-year terms on the board of directors. Elected were Michael D. Andreas, John F. Gilmore Jr., Neal E. Kottke, Warren F. Smith and J. Peter Steidlmyer.

Rosenthal and Goldenberg are scheduled to attend their first regular board meeting Feb. 17. The exchange's annual meeting is set for Feb. 19.

The exchange's board of directors consists of the chairman, vice chairman, 15 public directors and the exchange president.

Today In History

THE ALMANAC

By United Press International
 Today is Wednesday, Jan. 21, the 21st day of 1980 with 344 to follow.

The moon is full.
 The morning stars are Venus, Jupiter and Saturn.

The evening stars are Mercury and Mars.

Those born on this date are under the sign of Aquarius.

Civil War Gen. Thomas Jonathan Jackson — a Confederate commander known as "Stonewall Jackson" — was born Jan. 21, 1824.

On this date in history:
 In 1861, Jefferson Davis resigned from the United States Senate, 12 days before Mississippi seceded from the Union.

In 1954, the world's first atomic-powered submarine, the "Nautilus" was launched at Groton, Conn.

In 1977, President Carter pardoned American draft evaders and ordered a case-by-case study of deserters.

In 1979, the Pittsburgh Steelers defeated the Dallas Cowboys, 35-31, in the Super Bowl at Miami.

A thought for the day: President Harry Truman said, "A president cannot always be popular."

FBI To Investigate Prisoners' Deaths

ST. CLAIR, Mo. (AP) — FBI agents say they will investigate the deaths of two St. Clair City Jail inmates who died in a fire one apparently set in hopes of being freed from her cell.

Amelia West set fire to her foam-rubber mattress in the unattended facility this weekend, hours after she and her husband Kenneth were arrested on charges of vagrancy, authorities said. State Fire Marshal Bill Frawley said Mrs. West apparently started the fire believing someone would take her out of the cell.

She was pronounced dead soon after the fire, and inmate Arnold Gumpenberger, 21, who been arrested on charges of drunken and disorderly conduct, died the next day. FBI agent John J. Heidtke said the agency's investigation might concern whether civil rights violations occurred when prisoners were left unattended.

to have as great a market impact as Granville did on Jan. 7, when the Dow Jones industrial average fell 23.80 on record volume. But observers say it's conceivable that a similar storm could hit the precious-metals markets if one of the leading gold bugs should cry "sell."

Although gold is perhaps the most popular specialized subject for these advisers, there are many more — penny stocks, options, new issues, and mutual funds, to name a few.

Still, many services continue to concentrate on general commentary on where the stock market is going and what stocks to buy.

Most of these rely partly, if not exclusively, on technical analysis — the study of stock market charts and indicators, rather than outside "fundamentals" such as trends in corporate profits or interest rates.

Investment advisers must register with the Securities and Exchange Commission, but there is little other regulation. Opponents of regulation contend it would violate the First Amendment rights of freedom of speech and freedom of the press.

One attraction of the field, obviously, is the money that can be made. Granville is a self-described multimillionaire. Others may not be in that league, but a lot of them are surely getting along quite well.

If you have, for example, 5,000 subscribers paying $150 a year, that adds up to a gross income of $750,000 before postage, printing, advertising and other costs. And the pot can be sweetened by making speaking appearances, holding investment seminars, or providing one-on-one advice for wealthy individuals.

What the typical customer gets for his $150 is another question. If the advice is good, $150 is presumably a great bargain. But with the diversity of opinions they carry, the letters obviously can't all be right.

Some critics argue that most of them are usually wrong. This presumption has, in fact, been translated into an indicator used by many analysts in their efforts to predict the market.

Under this "contrary opinion" theory, when most services are bullish, it's a good time to sell. Conversely, when they are filled with gloom, a rally may be in the offing.

"Since most advisory services are trend followers, they are most bearish at market bottoms and least bearish at market tops," says Investors Intelligence of Larchmont, N.Y., a service that specializes in monitoring dozens of other services.

As of Jan. 9, the bears outnumbered the bulls by a healthy margin. For that reason, Investors Intelligence said, "we are compelled to remain bullish despite the sell signal given by Joe Granville."
