

Man Cleared After Leaving Tax Officers In Dark

MONTPELIER, Vt. (AP) — An irate furniture store owner who shut two state auditors in a dark, windowless room after they allegedly insulted his wife has been cleared by the Vermont Supreme Court of charges of hindering a civil officer.

The officers "exited without ceremony, in some trepidation" after the incident and didn't suffer any physical harm, according to the court, which added the episode had "humorous aspects."

The incident occurred last year when two state tax examiners, Dennis Gray and Robert Beeman, were conducting an audit at the Wolcott office of Floyd Buck, who runs stores in three Vermont cities.

The tax examiners were discussing the company's finances with Buck's wife, who keeps the financial records. According to Buck, the tax men "insulted my wife, as good as called her a fool, made demands."

"It wasn't right," he said.

Buck told Gray and Beeman — "in forceful language," the court noted — that he did not have to provide them with electricity. So he unscrewed the two light bulbs in the windowless room where they were going over the books.

Then he stomped out, throwing a bag of seat pads at the door after he slammed it, making it difficult for the tax men to open it.

"Well, I try to be a reasonable person," Buck, 54, said later. "But I was mad as hell."

A state district court convicted Buck on two felony counts of hindering a civil officer and placed him on probation. But the state's high court saw it differently.

In removing the light bulbs "the defendant was merely dealing with his own property as he had a right to do," the court said in its ruling.

As for placing the bag of seat pads against the door: "If a hindrance at all ...

it merely hindered the departure of the agents, not their examination," the justices said.

"Stripped of some of the more humorous aspects, it was alleged and proved they were not assaulted, nor were they threatened with any physical harm."

After the ruling, Buck said, "I'm glad there's still some justice in the state of Vermont."

Tax Audit Director Earle Fennessey said he believed Gray, who still is an auditor, and Beeman, who has left the department to take a job in Arizona, had been intimidated by Buck.

"I'm sure they had reason to feel threatened," he said.

But Fennessey said he doesn't think the ruling will detract from the safety of field examiners.

"I don't think this means it's open season for the taxpaying public on field examiners," he said.

Hance Offers Bill To End Windfall Tax

By BOB CAMPBELL
Avalanche-Journal Staff

U.S. Rep. Kent Hance of Lubbock has introduced legislation to abolish the windfall profits tax on oil and the Department of Energy, and, although he does not expect the bills to be approved in their present form, he said today that they might bring about needed changes for the oil and gas industry.

The congressman said in a telephone interview that he hopes the windfall profits tax at least will be altered to exempt independent oil operators and royalty owners and that the Department of Energy will be made less "meddlesome" in private enterprise.

Both bills were introduced late Tuesday with U.S. Rep. Jake Pickle of Austin and Rep. Tom Loeffler of Kerville as co-sponsors of the windfall profits tax bill.

Loeffler, a Republican member of the House Appropriations Committee, is co-sponsoring the bill to abolish the three-year-old Department of Energy.

Hance and Pickle are members of the House Ways and Means Committee, and Pickle is No. 3 in seniority on the tax-writing body.

"Whether or not the Reagan administration puts these into their priorities will determine how successful we'll be," Hance said, adding that there should be a determination by late March or early April.

"If we're not successful, it puts the heat on the administration to reorganize the Department of Energy and try to make sure it's not meddlesome in energy problems and that its valid functions, like research, are carried on."

Hance said he and Loeffler are considering the introduction of a bill to exempt independent oil operators and royalty owners from the windfall profits tax as "a fallback operation" to the bill introduced Tuesday.

"These two pieces of legislation are actually very simple and very clear," he said. "One would repeal the so-called windfall profits tax. This is nothing but an excise tax which economically punishes domestic producers. It hinders our efforts to become independent of foreign oil."

"The second bill would simply abolish the Department of Energy. A provision of the legislation would allow the president to dismantle the functions of the Energy Department and transfer any necessary duties to other presently existing agencies.

"These legislative proposals would be giant strides in making the United States energy independent. The United States energy industry would be returned to the free market system which allowed it to become so great in previous years."

"Neither the windfall profits tax nor the DOE has produced one barrel of oil, turned one spade of coal or generated one watt of electricity."

Hance said the political complexion of Congress has changed a great deal since the 1980 session, becoming more conservative, and that legislation to abolish or at least put more limits on the windfall profits tax and the DOE has a better chance of approval now.

Iran Holds Trial For American

A-J News Services

John Dwyer, the husband of a freelance writer imprisoned in Iran since May, said the State Department told him early today that Swiss officials in Tehran had met with Iranian officials to discuss his wife's release.

But a Swiss diplomat later reported he had attended an Iranian Revolutionary Court session today, during which Cynthia Dwyer was tried on espionage charges. According to foreign office spokesman Othmar Uhl in Bern, Switzerland, the verdict will be announced Monday.

The Swiss officials are acting on behalf of the United States in negotiating Mrs. Dwyer's release.

Dwyer said the State Department did not give him any details of how the meeting went or about his wife's condition. He said the State Department told him it would call back later with details of the meeting.

Dwyer said he was cautiously optimistic about the prospects for his wife's release.

Meanwhile, Terry Mikelson, press aide of Rep. Arlen Erdahl, R-Minn., a member of the House Foreign Affairs Committee, told the Buffalo Courier-Express that "the State Department told us that the Iranian prosecutor was on the verge of making a decision."

"We were informed by State late last week that all of a sudden the case was much more sensitive than it was before," said the aide to Erdahl, who had been drafting a congressional resolution demanding Mrs. Dwyer's release.

In Iran, Ayatollah Ruhollah Khomeini threatened today to intervene personally if political factions in his Iranian Islamic regime did not unite and said warring factions were "poisoning each other like scorpions."

"God forbid if I am forced to do my duty, I shall take back whatever I have given you," the 80-year-old leader said.

Khomeini's warning came in a half-hour speech at the Jamaran Mosque addressed to a crowd of thousands.

AAM Raps Grain Embargo

WASHINGTON (AP) — President Reagan's Cabinet is debating whether to keep or lift the Soviet grain embargo amid indications there will be little effect either way on American farmers.

But the president of the American Agriculture Movement said today he would favor continuing the boycott only if price supports are increased.

And AAM President Marvin Meek of

Plainview, calling the boycott ineffective, reminded Reagan of his campaign pledge to end the sales ban.

"It still boils down to what we said last November," Meek said. "We're willing to go along with it as long as it doesn't destroy our markets."

A White House official, who asked not to be identified, said a decision today is doubtful because it "is so tough."

"There's powerful symbolism on both sides," he said.

Lifting the embargo would be a gesture to farmers, but retaining or expanding it "would also send a strong signal internationally," he explained. "Economically, it doesn't make that much difference to farmers."

Agriculture Department economists say the 1980 decline in grain prices can be blamed largely on a glut of supplies from bumper 1979 crops, rather than the embargo.

Farm commodity prices may be slightly lower because of the embargo, some government experts say, and food prices probably have not increased quite as much as they otherwise would have.

When former President Carter announced the embargo Jan. 4, 1980, in retaliation for Soviet intervention in Afghanistan, he had the support of farm groups.

The order blocked delivery of 17 million metric tons of U.S. corn and wheat, plus some soybeans and other products, that the Soviet Union had been expected to take last year. It exempted 8 million metric tons of grain that were specified under a 1975 agreement calling for regular purchases of U.S. corn and wheat by the Soviets.

To help offset the embargo's impact on farmers, the Carter administration spent about $3 billion to buy or otherwise withhold from the market all agricultural exports denied the Soviets.

Within weeks, however, farm support began to crumble as grain prices dropped.

The suit originally named former jail administrator Albert Smith as the defendant. However, Judge Halbert O. Woodward's order entered Tuesday changed the defendant to the sheriff's department and jail administration.

Davis charges that on July 29, 1980, he was escorted from his Huntsville cell to the prison administration building, where he was placed in shackles and leg irons. He was later informed that he was being transferred to the Lubbock jail on a bench warrant to assure his appearance as a material witness at the trial of Charles W. White, according to the suit.

Upon his arrival at the jail, Davis claims, he was taken to the fourth floor and placed in a cell.

He claims that shortly before 3 a.m. July 30, he was attacked in his cell by a group of inmates who raped him repeatedly and forced him to commit sodomy and other unnatural acts over a period of two hours. Guards and officers stationed nearby made no effort to rescue him, he claims, despite his cries for help and "the general uproar."

Davis charges that while confined in the Lubbock County jail, he was subjected to inadequate, vague and unsafe standards of reasonable protection

Suspects Sought In Two Holdups

By JACK DOUGLAS

Avalanche-Journal Staff

A night clerk was tormented with a knife about 4:30 a.m. today during a robbery at the Rodeway Inn, 2401 Fourth St., in which two bandits made off with just under $400 in cash and checks, police said.

Responding to the second holdup of the night in Lubbock, officers found Paula Hickum, the 33-year-old clerk, locked in the motel office. The woman, who was not injured, said the men first asked for a room, and then one of the suspects displayed a knife and demanded money.

She said they made off with about $287 and $100 in traveler's checks.

Mrs. Hickum told investigators she unlocked the office for the men after it appeared they wanted to rent a room. While one man filled out a registration slip, the other pulled a knife and told the attendant to do what they said or she would be killed, police said.

While the employee was held at knife-point, the unarmed bandit allegedly walked behind the counter and took a tray containing cash. Mrs. Hickum said the other man then walked around the counter and slightly poked her several times in the rib cage with the point of the knife.

The man then moved the blade across the woman's jaw and demanded her purse, according to reports. He dropped the purse after finding it did not contain money.

Both men fled, police said, after the armed bandit jerked the telephone receiver off the switchboard and grabbed two cushions off a couch in the empty lobby.

Investigators said the woman was visibly shaken but uninjured when they arrived.

Officers located the cushions, telephone receiver and cord and a knit cap outside the office.

The suspects were described as young Mexican-Americans. The armed man reportedly was short, wearing a black hat, light blue coat and blue pants. His companion was tall, and wore a dark blue coat and blue pants.

Both men remained at large early today.

Solons, Nation Face Painful Budget Cuts

WASHINGTON (AP) — Government officials on both ends of the federal funnel — giving and receiving — predict the deep budget cuts sought by President Reagan will inflict political pain on Congress and economic suffering on Americans.

Among the targets reported under consideration by Reagan budget-cutters are such politically popular programs as Social Security, food stamps, child nutrition and economic aid to farmers and cities.

"We begin what may well turn out to be the most painful political process through which any of us will ever go," Rep. James R. Jones, D-Okla., said Tuesday as the House Budget Committee heads began studying its own list of potential program cutbacks.

At the White House, meanwhile, big-city mayors received the bad news from Reagan about his plans for sharp reductions in urban aid. New York Mayor Edward Koch said the president promised "those who are truly in need will not be asked to suffer, but all others, hopefully, will suffer equally."

Reagan, who must persuade a reticent Congress to support the reductions, was to meet with congressional leaders in the Capitol this afternoon to discuss his economic proposals.

The president also plans to make a televised address to the nation Thursday night to spell out his general view of the economy's problems and why his proposed cures are necessary to lower inflation and unemployment and restore healthy economic growth. He is to submit a package of tax cuts, offsetting budget reductions and regulatory changes to Congress Feb. 18.

Getting Congress to enact the budget cuts, however, will not be easy, Jones said as the Budget Committee reviewed 105 suggestions from congressional economists on how to prune billions of dollars from the budget.

"We leave behind the easy talk and get down in the trenches with 105 specific items, every one of which will do some damage to some people somewhere," he said.

Black leaders in Congress, who met with Reagan Tuesday, emerged from their White House meeting saying they feared Reagan's budget cuts will come down hardest on their constituency.

"We told the president we are gravely concerned that policies devised to rein in inflation do not disproportionately burden the poor, the elderly and moderate income people," said Democrat Walter Fauntroy, the District of Columbia's non-voting delegate and the chairman of the Congressional Black Caucus.

Even as the administration worked on its spending cut proposals, Reagan's chief economic spokesman urged Congress Tuesday to raise the national debt limit by $50 billion to finance the current budget deficit.

The House Ways and Means Committee voted to raise the debt ceiling from $935 billion to $985 billion after Treasury Secretary Donald T. Regan and budget director David A. Stockman said the government would reach the current limit in only a few days. Without an increase, the government then would lose its borrowing authority.

Stockman, who consistently voted against raising the debt limit during his four years as a Republican House member from Michigan, said he had no choice but to seek an increase now because "the bills are coming due and they must be paid."

"I voted against those debt-ceiling bills (in the past) because I had no confidence anybody was developing a plan to control spending," he said. "I have confidence that such a plan is being developed now because I am writing it."

Reagan is setting his sights on reducing the 1981 budget at least 2 percent, or about $13 billion from a total of $663 billion.

Singer Withdraws Divorce Petition

LOS ANGELES (UPI) — Singer Helen Reddy says she rushed a decision to end her marriage to estranged husband Jeff Wald and withdrew her petition for divorce one day after she filed it.

"I should have taken more time to make such an important decision," Miss Reddy said Tuesday after changing her mind about the divorce. In action Monday, Miss Reddy cited "irreconcilable differences" as the reason to end her 13-year marriage to the entertainment promoter. She said the couple, who separated last year, will probably continue to live apart. Their 8-year-old son is living with his mother. Wald disclosed last month that he had become a heavy cocaine user. Miss Reddy has had several hit recordings including "I Am Woman," "I Don't Know How To Love Him," "Delta Dawn" and "Leave Me Alone."

Rubin's jail time was suspended when a municipal judge pronounced sentence Tuesday for the attack on the atomic-energy advocate.

Who Says Cows Can't Fly?

LAJAS, Puerto Rico (AP) — The mountain farmer thought his cows were walking funny. Little did he know at the time that the bovines were high on marijuana. Police said Tuesday that the farmer, who was not identified, told authorities his herd of cows apparently stumbled upon a bundle of marijuana that had been tossed from an airplane. Mistaking the marijuana weed for hay, the cows feasted.

Authorities said they found uneaten portions of the pot when they searched the pasture in the island's southwest corner. They said the bale apparently had originated in Colombia.

Southwest Puerto Rico is a common drop point for pilots of small planes attempting to smuggle marijuana into the United States, police said.

Kidnapped Tot Freed Unharmed

METAIRIE, La. (AP) — A 17-month-old girl snatched from her home by a gunman who stuffed her into a gift-wrapped box was found unharmed after a man telephoned her anxious parents and said she was too pretty to kill, authorities say.

"He called and told us... she was such a beautiful baby, otherwise he would have wasted her," the toddler's father, Ron Hocum, said late Tuesday.

He and his wife found their daughter, Lori, sobbing and wandering alone at the Lake Forest Shopping Center several hours after Hocum made a televised appeal for her safe return.

No suspect had been apprehended by early today, but Jefferson Parish sheriff's deputies had a composite sketch of the abductor.

The abduction occurred about 1 p.m. Tuesday when a man armed with a pistol broke into the Hocum home in this well-to-do suburb of New Orleans, authorities said.

The Hocum house is a few doors away from the residence of Gov. David Treen. Hocum is a salesman specializing in luxury foreign cars, authorities said.

The girl was at home with a maid at the time, according to Kathleen Landry of the sheriff's department.

"The man forced himself into the house. He tied up the maid and he stole a camera. He had a big box that was wrapped up like a Christmas present. He put the little girl in the box and he took her and left," she said.

Hocum said his daughter probably didn't realize what was happening to her.

"She probably thought that going out in a big box was fun," he said.

But her family was gripped by terror.

"I'm not sure my heart is still beating," Hocum said. "It was such an emotional experience. Everybody says they know how you feel. But they don't."

Hocum went on television shortly after the abduction to beg the gunman not to harm his daughter.

"I ask you to please take care of her. Keep her warm and give her some milk," he said in the broadcast.

A picture of the girl, who has light blond hair and was described as exceptionally pretty, was given to area police departments and to reporters.

"The little girl is not a child that you could lose in a crowd easily," a deputy sheriff said.

Hocum speculated the gunman may have become frightened because of reports about the abduction. "I think he was discouraged because of all the news coverage," Hocum said.

The man made no ransom demand when he telephoned the Hocums.

Six People Die As Small Planes Collide Over Airport Runway

FORT LAUDERDALE, Fla. (AP) — The fiery collision of two small airplanes that claimed the lives of six people apparently was "just one of those freak things," airport controllers say.

Witnesses who watched helplessly as two planes collided over a runway at Fort Lauderdale Executive Airport said it looked as if the planes would recover. Instead the planes tumbled to the ground, where one broke apart and the other burst into flames.

Six people, including a young student pilot, were killed when a single engine Cessna 172 crashed on take off into a twin-engine Cessna 421, which was preparing to land.

All five people aboard the twin-engine Cessna 421 were burned when the craft plummeted into cars in a parking lot, engulfing five cars in fire, officials said.

Kirk Kingsley, 17, the pilot of the single-engine Cessna 172, was pulled from the wreckage but was pronounced dead at a hospital.

"He rotated (on take off) and came up underneath the twin-engine plane," said Keith Terhune, 27, an employee of Cav Airlines Inc., who witnessed the 4:10 p.m. crash. "It kept going and I thought it would be all right, but the single engine plane just fell out of the sky."

Witnesses felt the young pilot was "going to be all right, but all of a sudden the airplane started to make a right turn and go down and that was it," said another witness, Robert Bradley, 24.

The young Fort Lauderdale pilot had soloed for his first time last month and was practicing touch and go landings Tuesday, officials said.

Joe Lopez, supervisor of the airport control tower, said Kingsley appeared to be a proficient pilot and both planes appeared safe.

"There is no reason to believe there was anything abnormal. It was just one of those freak things," he said.

The air traffic controller on duty at the time of the crash was relieved of his duties and asked to prepare a statement for Federal Aviation Administration investigators.

Officials identified the pilot of the twin-engine plane as William Williams. The passengers were Fort Lauderdale trucking company executive Dale C. Hiatt; his father, Alvia H. Hiatt; Charles Beets, and Dave Benton, a mechanic. All are from Broward County.

Fire Department Captain Robert Lark said the larger aircraft was "very badly torn up" when it fell into a computer company parking lot just north of the end of the runway.

"Fortunately no bystanders were injured and there was no fire damage to the building," Lark said.

FAA spokeswoman Gerrie Cook in Atlanta said the airport was closed immediately after the crash. FAA and National Transportation Safety Board investigators were dispatched to the site.

Defendant In Diet Doctor Murder Criticizes Woman

WHITE PLAINS, N.Y. (AP) — Former headmistress Jean Harris, charged with murder in the death of the developer of the Scarsdale Diet, has characterized Dr. Herman Tarnower's younger lover as "a dishonest adulteress" who "socialized" with servants.

On the witness stand Tuesday, Mrs. Harris also said she once telephoned Lynne Trytoros, 37, anonymously in 1977.

"I was calling her to ask her to leave me alone," Mrs. Harris testified under cross-examination.

Ex-Governor Still In Coma

HARTFORD, Conn. (AP) — Former Connecticut Gov. Ella Grasso's condition has changed little since she slipped into a comatose state four days ago, hospital officials say.

Mrs. Grasso was awake briefly Tuesday evening, then drifted off again into a coma state, officials said. Her condition has been downgraded from serious to critical.

Hartford Hospital spokesman James Battaglio said Mrs. Grasso was alert when awake.

She said she felt comfortable, he reported.

Battaglio said Mrs. Grasso's condition was "essentially about the same."

The 61-year-old former governor has been hospitalized since Dec. 8 with cancer of the liver and intestine. She resigned her office Dec. 31.

Mrs. Grasso's husband, Thomas, was with her throughout the day Tuesday, and her two children, James and Susanne, also visited, Battaglio said.

Mrs. Grasso's vital signs were stable, and she was not on any artificial life-support systems, Battaglio said.

A United States C-47 plane made the first successful landing at the North Pole in 1952.

fair with Mrs. Trytoros drove Mrs. Harris to shoot the 69-year-old cardiologist to death in his home on March 19.

The defense maintains that defendant had driven from Virginia to say good-bye and then kill herself, but that Tarnower was shot in a struggle over Mrs. Harris' gun.

Mrs. Harris, 57, headmistress of The Madeira School for girls in McLean, Va., was Tarnower's lover for 14 years.

She contends she and Tarnower were happy together, and thought Mrs. Trytoros was beneath him socially.

"I didn't think anything second rate belonged in his (Tarnower's) life," Mrs. Harris said during her sixth day on the stand.

"She denigrated him and gave me a great deal of trouble with my integrity and common taste," Mrs. Harris said.

Mrs. Harris said Mrs. Trytoros "socialized" with the van der Vreken, Tarnower's live-in servants, and added, "It's not like me to rub up against people like that."

Prosecutor George Bolen asked Mrs. Harris if she had mentioned Mrs. Trytoros when she was writing a letter to Tarnower the weekend before he was shot.

"Yes, she was part of the letter to him," Mrs. Harris replied.

"How did you refer to Mrs. Trytoros in that letter?" Bolen asked.

"In as many unattractive ways as possible," the defendant replied.

"Did you describe her as a dishonest adulteress?" Bolen asked.

"I think so," she said.

"And did you use the words, 'your psychotic whore'?" he asked.

Meeting Slated On Handicapped

Justin W. Dart Jr., the chairman of the Governor's Commission on Employment for the Handicapped, will be the speaker Thursday at a "call to action" local organizational meeting as part of the International Year of Disabled Persons. The meeting, which will be at 7 p.m. in the Coronado Room in the University Center at Texas Tech University, will be one of forming committees for working on projects in conjunction with the International Year of Disabled Persons. Among the issues to be discussed will be employment and transportation. Dart lives in Austin and has been working with disadvantaged and disabled persons since 1966. He is a member of Coalition of Texans with Disabilities, American Coalition of Citizens with Disabilities, the National Association of the Deaf, the American Council of the Blind, and other disability related organizations. The United Nations has designated 1981 as the International Year of Disabled Persons.

Vickie Daniel Pleads Innocent

LIBERTY (AP) — A composed Vickie Daniel, saying she did not intend to shoot her husband, former Texas House Speaker Price Daniel Jr., pleaded innocent today to a murder charge.

The 33-year-old mother of three answered "not guilty" in a soft voice when asked by State District Judge Clarence Cain how she pleaded at her arraignment.

Cain scheduled a March 20 hearing to consider pretrial motions.

Wearing the same Navy blue suit she wore at her husband's funeral Jan. 21, Mrs. Daniel told reporters "I did not intentionally shoot my husband."

She was accompanied by her lawyer, Andrew Lannie of Baytown, Mrs. Lannie, and one of her sisters, who she would not identify.

Mrs. Daniel said she had been staying with relatives since the shooting Jan. 12 at the couple's fashionable Liberty home. Daniel, 39, was shot once in the stomach with a .22 caliber rifle. Another shot went through the ceiling, said Sheriff C.L. Eckols.

Lannie said he wanted a change of venue because of the prominence of the Daniel family in Liberty.

Daniel's father, Price Daniel Sr., is a former speaker of the Texas House, Texas attorney general, governor, U.S. senator, and Texas Supreme Court justice. The elder Daniel resides in Austin but still maintains his home at the Daniel ranch.

Lannie also has said he will waive the right to a speedy trial. Without such action, the trial, under state law, would have to begin within 120 days of the indictment date.

Wilborn maintains Mrs. Daniel, who filed for divorce on Dec. 31, knowingly and intentionally murdered her husband.

However, Lannie said an altercation preceded the shooting and that part of it was witnessed by 12-year-old Kimberly Moore, Mrs. Daniel's daughter by an earlier marriage.

Mrs. Daniel, who was hospitalized for shock and hysteria immediately after the slaying, was charged with murder on Jan. 24 and indicted four days later.

Daniel's will, filed last week, made no reference to his wife and left all his property in trust for three young children, including one by an earlier marriage.

It is expected that Guerra's plea of guilty to an earlier automobile-related charge will be included in a pre-sentencing report submitted to the judge. The teen-ager was charged with aggravated assault with a motor vehicle in March 1979 for striking Lubbock Police Officer Billy Stafford with his car.

Guerra pleaded guilty to the lesser included offense of assault — another Class A misdemeanor — and was assessed a $250 fine and a year on probation.

"The number-one thing that Eddie Guerra did was speeding," prosecutor Jim Bob Darnell argued Tuesday afternoon. "Because he was speeding, he could not stop."

Darnell reminded jurors of the testimony which indicated Guerra ran a red light at the intersection and a police officer's testimony that Guerra's Corvette had been traveling at about 40 mph at the point of impact.

Defense attorney Jim Alexander argued earlier that his client "was involved in a terrible car accident — but he didn't commit a criminal act."

Alexander argued that the primary issue in the case was whether the stoplight was yellow as Guerra entered the intersection, as his client had testified. He reminded the jury that Guerra had testified that he had looked up, seen the green light and entered the intersection before spotting Mrs. Kirby's Pontiac pulling in front of him.

He also told the jury that the accident had not involved just one person — that Mrs. Kirby had been involved as well in the events leading up to the collision.

Immediately following the accident, the Coast Guard temporarily shut off all traffic into and out of the Barbour's Cut, causing financial woes for shipping businesses that operate in the area.

Most of that business since has resumed, although vessels operating in the vicinity of the oil vacuuming are asked to move at slow speeds. A one-third-mile shore of mile-long Barbour's Cut remained closed Tuesday.

Even that limited shutdown hurt Pasadena Towing Co.

Commissioner chairman Cole said people could contact Human Relations Director Carolyn Lanier, who is authorized to take action on policies set by the commission.

The commission itself is only a policy making board, he emphasized, adding that when topics are introduced on the spur of the moment, the commission usually can't take any action until after all the facts on the case have been gathered.

"All it does is provide publicity," Cole said.

Commissioners also discussed creating a Crisis Contingency Committee that could gather facts about emergency problems and distribute them to other commissioners.

Since the committee would not be a quorum of the commission, it wouldn't have to post its meetings, according to discussion by the commissioners.

According to the law, the specific topic to be discussed by the commission must be posted at least 72 hours before its meeting or at least two hours prior to the meeting if the topic is considered an emergency.

People who approached commissioners about an incident the day before a meeting would have to wait until the next meeting — about 30 days later — before the commission could discuss the problem, Flores complained.

"I see the commission becoming the aristocrat it was meant to oppose," Chatman added.

The commission, drawn from commission membership during its regular meeting Tuesday, includes Bishop Flores, Theron Cole, Gilbert Flores, Tavita Dorow and Joan Ervin, with Ida Alfaro selected as alternate.

Flores and Harold Chatman expressed dissatisfaction that the Open Meetings Law would prevent citizens from taking complaints directly to the commission.

Two ships Jan. 27 caused the rupturing of one and the oil spillage. The cleanup is concentrated inside Barbour's Cut, a manmade inlet of the channel where the leaking ship was towed.

Cleaning stained shores on the western coast of Galveston Bay north of Texas City would take a while, Coast Guard spokesman Doug Bandos said.

"It will take another week or so to clean the oil from the rocks, jetties and piers, but the massive quantity in Barbour's Cut will be cleaned by Thursday," he said.

The 365-foot chemical carrier Lucor Wilcliff struck the 809-foot oil tanker Olympic Glory in the rear left quarter, tearing a 12-foot gash. No one was injured.

Oil Spill Cleanup Nears Completion

HOUSTON (UPI) — The last pools of a 20,000-barrel oil spill hampering traffic to a big Houston Ship Channel terminal should be vacuumed Thursday, a Coast Guard spokesman said.

Traffic in the channel itself is unimpeded one week after the collision of Human Relations Panel Lists 1981 Priorities

A better relationship with the news media and compliance with the Open Meetings Law were two items discussed Tuesday by a Human Relations Commission designed to establish priorities for 1981.

The committee, drawn from commission membership during its regular meeting Tuesday, includes Bishop Flores, Theron Cole, Gilbert Flores, Tavita Dorow and Joan Ervin, with Ida Alfaro selected as alternate.

Flores and Harold Chatman expressed dissatisfaction that the Open Meetings Law would prevent citizens from taking complaints directly to the commission.

Hacking Away At Hydra

PLATO SEEMED to get a kick out of the rulers of his day who avoided making radical changes in the constitution or politically damaging decisions.

"Surely there is something very amusing in the way (they) go on enacting their petty laws and amending them, always imagining they will find some way to put an end to fraud in business," he comments in The Republic.

"They have no idea that really they are cutting off the heads of a hydra." Did he say "hydra?" If Plato could only see us now.

Charles Hobbs, deputy director of welfare for the State of California and one of the chief architects of Ronald Reagan's welfare reform program there, points out the futility of past efforts to reform the welfare industry in "Agenda for Progress: Examining Federal Spending."

MORE THAN a third of the federal budget ($220 billion in 1981) is allocated to income security, a collection of costly and controversial wealth redistribution programs.

Hobbs says that these 21 welfare programs "have spread like cancers without a cure, and those who would control them have been reduced to the use of the equivalents of band-aids and aspirin."

The greatest pitfall facing those who see the need for reducing wealth redistribution is that they will continue to tinker in the mistaken belief that they can work with the welfare industry to accomplish their goals.

Hobbs says it can't be done. "The welfare industry is too firmly entrenched and too committed to its own growth-oriented goals to be 'worked with.'"

Instead, the power of the budget must be used to dismantle the welfare bureaucracy and to overhaul the processes it has used so successfully to meet the goals.

PAST ATTEMPTS to cut back on unnecessary benefits or to remove non-need recipients from the rolls have been largely ineffective due to the welfare industry's demonstrated ability to defend itself against even the modest proposals to reduce or restructure programs.

However, the difficulty of administering the medicine does not eliminate the illness.

"The taxpayers' revolt provides the opportunity for radical surgery, not only on the programs but also, more importantly, on the welfare industry itself."

He details several measures which Congress and the President could take, moves which realistically could reduce welfare expenditures by 25 percent within the next three to five years, and still meet the need for which these programs were established.

But that's a far cry, as Hobbs acknowledges, from saying that it's politically practical.

ONE MAN'S OPINION

 Chick Nude-Alls

SUDDEN THOUGHT: Wonder if the Rev. Jerry Falwell will have a Penthouse in Heaven?

A headline writer who wrote about an "allusive groundhog" has been sort of elusive this week.

The Rev. Mr. Falwell, who objected to Penthouse Magazine's publishing an interview with him, hasn't been hard to find, though. Neither he nor the magazine nudies has run for cover.

Falwell alleges the magazine got the interview from him under false pretenses. Says he always has his eyes open for pornography.

PENTHOUSE publishers call the evangelist a "dangerous man," alleging he uses God to promote a political cause.

Politics and girlie magazines are a couple of areas that a lot of people think could use a little Godly cleaning up, though.

A government audit alleges that the Reagan for President campaign wrongfully held down the reported costs of its New Hampshire primary effort by renting rooms in a Massachusetts motel, 10 miles away, and busing workers across state lines for implorral purposes.

BIG DAUGHTER, the school teacher, reports that one of her first-graders in Lawton watched intently last week as a group of senior citizens filed into the cafeteria.

All of the children were interested in the strangers in their midst, but this one little girl obviously had been keeping up with what was going on in the world, from Iran to Oklahoma.

Finally, she just had to confirm whether her deductions were correct.

"Mrs. Hoke," she asked, "are those the hostages?"

The Rev. Bailey Smith of Del City, Okla., is seeking a second term as president of the Southern Baptist Convention. He once joked from the pulpit that Jews "have funny noses" and, if he wins, some of them will have long faces.

Eastern Airlines and Braniff International broke off merger talks, but Continental Airlines and Western Airlines are going ahead with theirs.

Eastern is Eastern and Continental is Western and never the twain shall meet.

UNDER NEW management, Texas Tech has ended 15 years of foot-dragging and cleared the way for widening clogged University Avenue between 4th and 19th Streets.

President Lauro Cavazos and Board of Regents Chairman J. Fred Bucy are largely responsible for the change in attitude.

Lee Stafford, in his last meeting as a regent, and Jim Bertram as the city's traffic and planning expert, are due credit, too, for ending the long stalemate with a sensible compromise.

The action also fulfilled a goal that Don Workman had set when he first went on the board.

It would have been better for Tech to have given sufficient right of way to make the avenue six lanes wide all along the campus.

However, by providing for right-turn lanes, the university is doing itself, the community and the public a great service. Straight-ahead traffic will thus be free to move.

Bertram, who says the one-mile stretch has the highest accident rate in the city, believes the half-loaf will adequately serve the current need, making University Avenue safer and more convenient.

A few merchants along the east side of the avenue are up in arms because their privileged-class angle parking—one of the few strips of such left in the city—will be taken from them.

However, this is no longer the 1930s and the general public needs thoroughfares more for moving traffic than for storage.

Getting into and out of parallel-parking spaces will be difficult but it won't be as dangerous as blindly backing out of angle-parking slots.

IT WOULD BE better, of course, if a way could be found to remove the parking entirely. The owners of the business property would be well-advised to begin looking ahead and providing for off-street parking lots to serve their tenants' stores.

For the moment, though, let us savor the new spirit of cooperation and enlightened self-interest evidenced by Texas Tech.

Let us hope that the days are gone forever in which, for a period of a dozen years, the Tech administration took a negative attitude toward anything involving the community, even when the university itself was to be the chief beneficiary.

From all appearances, we're back on track of being cooperative rather than confrontational.

Holmes Alexander:

Satirist Whips Us Into Shape

WASHINGTON—No other quotation so deftly catches both Jimmy Carter and Ronald Reagan in the revolving door as those closing lines of Thackeray's Vanity Fair:

"Which of us is happy in this world? Which of us has his desire, or having it, is satisfied..."

The ex-President has crept home with a broken heart; the newcomer has his teeth on the same bitter fruit, having achieved his desire, with all too strong a chance of disappointing himself and the rest of us. If Thackeray is right, such is the law of human nature: "Vanity! All is in vain."

But can't we put the world-wise author to better use than this? Unlike most hucksters of futility, he said it with a smile, being a satirist who poked fun at the foibles of his age, intending to do some good.

HE WAS TELLING the Victorians—and all of us—not to expect too much of life. And by his kindly jesting at their faults he was hoping to improve his generation and those that came later.

A new biography of Thackeray, "An Uneasy Victorian" (Dodd-Mead), by Ann Monsarrat, suggests to me that President Reagan could find help in the same treatment.

Our American rulers have no shortage of fun-poking political writers, like Art Buchwald, or harpoon cartoonists, like Herblock, and the jesters should not grow arm-weary at it.

But all politicians are created by the democratic electorate, which is too often spared the lash and sits guffawing in the arena seats while the politicians are down in the sand and spurring blood from the thongs of satire.

THACKERAY GOT RICH and famous by flogging his contemporaries, and made them like it. This considerable feat was done by including himself as deserving the same chastisement he was dishing out.

As biographer Monsarrat observed, Charles Dickens in this same period was thrashing the British lower classes to thunderous and munificent applause. But the Dickens readers did not consider themselves low-class and had no objection.

Thackeray, however, made the middle-class and aristocracy his target. Monsarrat has him say, "You dear reader, have faults and petty vanities, and I know them well, for have I not these same frailties myself?"

Thackeray's pet peeve was snobbery, more a 19th century British trait than it is here and now, but his 53 lampoons published during the mid-1840s in the magazine Punch and in book form, was the making of him and just the right medicine for the times.

"The Snobs of England By One of Them" taught the lessons of Christian humility, just as Dickens' tales of slums, debtors, prisons and sweatshops preached for Christian charity.

It would be wrong to say that American journalism and literature has no satiric advocates for humility and charity, but there are not very many that have the comic spirit and touch for the serious subjects of our day.

There is too little awareness that self-government is a mirror image of the population.

We could use a Thackeray.

We need him because his sort of lashing satire might keep President Reagan honest, and his conservative followers true to their mandate.

Not just the politicians but the whole American people, not just the Republican party, but the democratic society, need to be shown their faults—greed, cowardice, hypocrisy—with the light-fingered whip of stinging satire.

It might not save us, but it would chastise us severely to read "The Great American Failure By One of Them."

Sylvia Porter:

Lower Air Fare Rates
 Waiting In The Wings

NEW YORK—As an employee of a major—or even a moderate size—U.S. business corporation, you soon may be eligible for a new advance in "employee benefits"—discounts on your personal airline trips.

That's the bottom line of trends now sweeping the $152 billion domestic travel industry. And it's a whopper.

Sure, travel revenues are up, towering over totals of the early '70s, up $25 billion just since 1978. But travel mileage is down. And the declines cover the range of cars, trains, buses and planes, as corporations, which traditionally account for half the nation's total travel spending, cut their budgets.

Thus, the $22 billion airline sector of the travel industry is reliably reported to be studying the sale of cut-rate seats to major business organizations, just as the airlines already sell cut-rate seats to government workers and to personal travelers.

YOU, AN EMPLOYEE, could benefit because corporate air discounts could go to employees flying on both business and pleasure trips.

You could lose, too, because the airlines almost surely would have to boost some of the bargain-basement rates now being offered for off-peak, advance reservations, longer-duration vacations.

"Corporations have been hurt by the airline pricing system because they usually can't plan as far ahead as the personal traveler can and they don't want their executives off on long trips," says one observer close to the industry.

"Thus, they pay full coach rates, sometimes twice as much as the individual traveler."

the corporations could win.

"Technically, the airlines are right when they say such corporate discounts are illegal. Any fare is illegal if it hasn't been filed with us. And no airline has filed for corporate discounts, yet," said a CAB spokesman.

On the record, most of nearly a dozen major corporations checked say they have not requested business-travel discounts from airlines. Only giant IBM, with an annual air travel bill of $300-$400 million, concedes it is even "considering" such a move.

But CAB sources quietly admit that dozens of big companies are studying such moves now, and that others will follow. As a source close to the travel business for more than 20 years said:

"IF A CORPORATION could offer an air carrier $100 million a year in business travel by its employees and another $25 million in personal travel, the airline would certainly prefer the higher figure. This would be especially so if it faced losing most of the $100 million to a competitor."

"If there were no discrimination," adds a CAB spokesman, "such as against lower-echelon employees or against travel agents, I see no reason, now, why we would reject an airline's application for volume discount rates to corporations for both business and personal travel by their employees."

The emerging pattern is clear: less discrimination against the business flier; more equitable pricing for the corporate and individual flier; greater flexibility in cut-rate flying.

A new "Super Saver" rate system in flying is on the way!

TO CUT THEIR flying costs, most corporations forbid first-class travel except in dire corporate emergencies when, say, coach sections are filled.

Also to reduce costs, many companies have disbanded their internal travel reservation departments, which can't get commissions, and switched to outside travel agencies, which do get commissions. This saves the company the salaries of the travel reservationists.

When airlines began issuing travel coupons to fliers—good for cut rates on other routes or at different times—corporations insisted their business-traveling officials turn in these coupons or face rejection of their entire expense account for a trip.

Recently, too, after analyzing their travel patterns, some companies initiated advance, block booking at cut rates on heavily-traveled routes—on the basis that some executive would be going or coming that way on that day.

IN 1980, PRODDED by the U.S. government's General Services Administration, the airlines filed new tariff rates with the Civil Aeronautics Board. The rates give discounts to federal employees flying on official government business.

Now, major corporations want the same type of discounts federal workers get.

And the CAB, which started hearings in mid-January on airline marketing practices, hints that

James J. Kilpatrick:

Single Out The Double Dipper

WASHINGTON—If a high moral tone ever is to be restored in this country, sexual promiscuity on Capitol Hill will have to stop.

At the moment, 16 federal programs are "indexed" which is to say, their benefits are linked directly to what used to be known as the Cost of Living Index and now is known as the Consumer Price Index (CPI).

The system is imposing a ruinous drain upon the Treasury. It cries out for review and revision.

The device of indexing is of fairly recent vintage. Prior to 1962, as a White House report recently explained, real benefit levels in federal entitlement programs were not adjusted for inflation in any systematic manner.

THEN AN ACT was passed tying civil service retirement benefits to the Cost of Living Index. The following year, military retirement benefits won the same treatment.

A couple of other programs were added in the 60s, but as recently as 1970 the indexed benefits constituted only 3 percent of total budget outlays.

These programs have now gotten completely out of hand. In the current fiscal year more than $200 billion will be paid out under the CPI formula.

By 1986, when the total budget is expected to exceed one trillion dollars, indexed outlays—if left unchanged—will come to an estimated $343 billion.

cent, the following October another boost of 4.3 percent. In March of 1978, the raise was 2.4 percent, in October another 4.9 percent.

SO IT WAS in 1979—an increase of 3.9 percent in March, another boost of 6.9 percent in October. Last year these retirees had increases of 6.0 percent in the spring and 7.7 percent in the fall.

They are now due for another raise next month. The effect of all this has been to keep the retired federal personnel not merely abreast of inflation but well ahead of inflation. Since 1965, the CPI has grown from a base of 100 to a level last fall of 263.6.

Put less mathematically, the market basket that cost $10 in 1965 cost $26.36 in 1980.

But for the double dippers, there has been a happier aspect: Their indexed benefits have grown to 286.8. They have stayed 23 points ahead of the game.

THE LARGEST OF the indexed programs, of course, is Social Security. Automatic annual increases, tied to the CPI, became effective in July of 1975.

The retired worker who was receiving monthly benefits in 1975 of $153 was receiving $179.90 last summer. In this same period the CPI had increased in roughly the same proportion.

So They Say...

Tact is when you fib unto others as you would have them fib unto you.

Now, presumably everyone wants to be fair to old ladies, retired railway engineers, aging petty officers from the Coast Guard, and miners down with the black lung disease.

If the child nutrition program were not linked in some fashion to the increasing cost of food, the program would soon be in trouble. The principle is fine.

But as the White House report makes clear, a system that protects federal beneficiaries raises equity issues for everybody else. Very little private income is so protected.

Moreover, because the Consumer Price Index overstates the importance of home ownership—as if everybody bought a new house every month at whatever the mortgage interests rates might be—the index provides a distorted reflection of actual living costs.

IN SUM, THE formula for computing the government's chief index of prices ought to be revised. The six semiannual programs should be brought back to annual adjustments.

And some discretion should be vested in the President to recommend adjustments at less than the whole change in the CPI. Otherwise the upward spiral of uncontrollable federal outlays will climb out of sight.

Obviously none of this has anything to do with sexual promiscuity on Capitol Hill, but this problem of indexing is so important to any understanding of the budget that perhaps a hooked lead may be forgiven.

Lubbock Man Describes Assault At Nightspot

A Lubbock man said he was assaulted by two men after telling them early today to quit bothering several women at an Avenue Q nightclub.

Ron L. Sims, 19, of 2806 91st St. told police he was in the Jiggers Up at 48th Street and Avenue Q about 1:30 a.m. when he saw the suspects harassing the women. He said that when he intervened the men began arguing with him and they decided to go outside and fight.

Reports state that while Sims scuffled with one suspect, the other got a sharp instrument from his car and allegedly cut the complainant on the stomach.

Police said Sims suffered minor wounds and was taken to Lubbock General Hospital, where he was treated and later released.

The assailants were described as between 18 and 25 years old, traveling in a 1976 green Monte Carlo.

In other activity, Joe Lee Mackey, 24, of 3505 E. Bates St. told police he was shot at about 4:30 p.m. Tuesday outside a cafe at 13th Street and Avenue F.

Mackey told police that while arguing with one man, another approached with a pistol. He said he ran and the armed man fired several shots at him. Mackey was not injured in the shooting, according to police.

The assailants were described as two black men, between 26 and 35 years old.

A 12-year-old girl told police she was stabbed in the hand about 6 p.m. Tuesday after attempting to stop a dispute between several other juveniles at Burns Park, 23rd Street and Avenue K.

Reports indicate the girl was not seriously injured. She described her assailant as an 8-year-old boy.

Two men, ages 23 and 31, were arrested about 11:40 p.m. Tuesday after police found a loaded handgun, which had been reported stolen, in their pickup parked in the 1800 block of Harvard.

Frank R. Gonzales of 2807 Coigate St. said his house was burglarized between Saturday and 1 a.m. today, resulting in a loss of about $2,800, including cash and jewelry.

A Lubbock man jailed on suspicion of public intoxication Monday night after an incident at a local club told police his home may have been burglarized and his car stolen by four men he had been fighting with at the nightspot.

The 30-year-old man was arrested about 11 p.m. outside the Jiggers Up Club, 4801 Ave. Q, and taken to the Lubbock County Jail, according to reports. He was arrested after being involved in a fight with the four men in the parking lot of the club, police said.

When he went home Tuesday morning after bonding out of jail, the man said he discovered his home had been ransacked and burglarized. He said he then went to the club parking lot and his 1977 Chevrolet El Camino was missing.

The man told police he had placed his sport coat on top of the vehicle during the altercation and the coat and car were left at the club when he was arrested.

The victim told officers he believes the four men found the coat, which contained personal papers and his home and car keys, entered his home and stole his car.

Taken in the burglary were a .38-caliber revolver, a .357-magnum revolver, a gold pocket watch and chain, a gold pen and pencil set, a wedding ring, a gold stick pin, a 12-piece silverware set, three bottles of liquor, a stereo system and $1,400 to $1,600 in cash.

The loss was estimated to be between $6,000 and $8,000, reports show.

In other activity, a Lubbock woman told police a man tried to force her car off the road Tuesday morning.

Brenda Paulene Martin said she was westbound on Loop 289 between Indiana and Quaker avenues when she attempted to pass a pickup truck.

As she was doing so, the woman said she noticed a man in a Chevrolet Monte Carlo "inches" behind her vehicle. The man then passed her on the right side of the road and pulled in front of her car, police said.

Both motorists then stopped, and the man began cursing the woman and advising her that she did not own the loop, according to reports. He then got back in his car and drove away, but the woman provided police with the license number of his car, reports show.

Individual Retirement Accounts Seldom Used By Taxpayers

By RAY DE CRANE
(Third of 14 parts)

While complaining that tax shelters are available only to the rich, too few of the not-so-wealthy take advantage of tax shelters that have been created for them.

Individual Retirement Accounts are a perfect example. Tax laws permit employees who are not participants in a pension program to create their own retirement program on a tax-sheltered arrangement.

So what happens? Even though the Labor Department reports that 55 American workers are not covered by either a pension or a profit-sharing program, only 5 percent of those eligible are taking advantage of the IRA opportunity.

Complete details about IRAs can be found in the 1981 edition of "Cut Your Own Taxes and Save" by Ray De Crane. For your copy, send a check or money order for $1.50 (plus 50 cents postage and handling) to "Cut Your Own Taxes and Save" c/o this newspaper, P.O. Box 489, Radio City Station, New York, N.Y. 10019.

With an IRA, the employee can set aside in a special retirement account 15 percent of total compensation or $1,500 yearly, whichever is less. The worker gets two big advantages by making such a move.

The money put into the IRA is deductible on the worker's income tax return.

All the interest earned on this money is sheltered from any income tax while the person is still working. What this means is that the worker who takes advantage of this opportunity is being rewarded by the government for providing for the future.

Better yet, if a worker is eligible for the tax-sheltered IRA and if he or she is married and has a spouse who is unemployed, a spousal account with a higher combined deduction of $1,750 is permissible.

When a spousal account is created, an identical amount must go into the accounts of the two marriage partners. This means that if the full $1,750 is claimed, $875 must go into the husband's retirement account and $875 must go into the wife's. At retirement time each will receive individual pensions.

Should both husband and wife be employed and neither be covered by a pension or profit-sharing program, they can each have their own IRA with potential for a maximum tax-sheltered contribution of $3,000 a year.

There is nothing complicated about opening an IRA. You can do it at your neighborhood savings and loan, bank, brokerage firm or insurance company. Or you may buy a special issue U.S. Retirement Bond.

If you were eligible for an IRA in 1980 and failed to take advantage of this tax-saving opportunity, it is not too late to act. Before April 15, 1981 may open and contribute to an IRA Account and have it treated as a 1980 deduction.

Scholarship To Be Given Masked Rider

The Texas Tech University Student Foundation will award a scholarship of $1,000 to the 1981-82 Red Raider, according to Kathleen Crowl, junior from Odesa and director of the 50-member foundation.

"We hope that the scholarship we are giving for the Red Raider will be continued through an endowment established for support and recognition of Tech's masked rider," Miss Crowl said. "The Red Raider represents all of the students at Texas Tech and Student Foundation members feel the honor of a scholarship is due such a representative."

She said the Student Foundation Executive Committee, which met Jan. 27, also agreed to dedicate "a large percentage" of the annual Senior Challenge proceeds to a Red Raider Endowment drive.

"Ever since the establishment of the Red Raider tradition," Miss Crowl said,

"there seems to have been an effort to support the rider's activities and the mascot from a variety of sources. Often, however, whoever has been the Red Raider has had to pay a lot of the expenses himself or herself. We hope the endowment can correct this."

The Senior Challenge is an annual project of the foundation which solicits graduating seniors to pledge their property deposits and cash gifts to support Student Foundation projects in academic recruiting and new student relations. Cinde Sides, senior from Dimmitt, chairs the fund raising committee.

The Red Raider is the masked rider who, during football games, rides at full gallop around Jones Stadium astride Happy VI-II, Tech's black Quarterhorse mascot. The horse and rider also represent Tech at rodeos, parades and some out-of-town football games.

Judi Henry, assistant to the Dean of Students and chairman of the university's Red Raider Committee, said plans to establish an endowment fund to support the mascot and rider are under way.

"The Student Foundation has really taken the ball and run with it," she said. "The committee is grateful for the student support and will be searching for other ways to develop the endowment."

Application forms for the 1981-82 Red Raider are available in the Dean of Students office, 250 West Hall. Deadline for applying is 5 p.m. Feb. 23. Applicants must have completed 60 hours of academic credit and have a 2.0 grade point average. Selection is based on riding ability, responses during an interview and information supplied on the application.

Fort Worth Firemen Praised For Effort

FORT WORTH (AP) — A department critique says firemen did all they could to save the historic River Crest Country Club, destroyed in a four-alarm fire Jan. 16.

The report said that even with a full fourth alarm complement of fire and equipment on hand from the outset, the third floor would have been gutted and the second floor would have sustained heavy damage.

Equipment problems and a lack of sufficient water pressure did hamper the 60 firemen, the critique conceded.

Smith Says Zimbabwe Whites Still Apprehensive

SALISBURY, Zimbabwe (AP) — Ian Smith, the prime minister who led the white Rhodesians' 15-year defiance of the world, says he is surprised black Prime Minister Robert Mugabe has not turned out to be the "vicious Marxist" he expected.

But the 61-year-old Smith says Zimbabwe's whites remain apprehensive about the future under black rule — although speaking for himself, "I must stay. It's my country."
The former prime minister, looking somewhat weary and resigned, spoke in an interview with The Associated Press in his spartan office on the third floor of the Parliament building here.

In 1965, Smith led this country, at that time the British colony of Rhodesia, in a unilateral declaration of independence to avoid an assumption of power by the black majority. His white-minority regime clung to control in the face of international economic sanctions and a bloody guerrilla war waged by black nationalists.

British-sponsored peace talks led to formal independence and an election last February that brought Mugabe, a black guerrilla leader, to power on April 18, 1980.

The peace accords set aside 20 of the 100 parliamentary seats for whites. The 200,000 whites remaining in Zimbabwe are outnumbered about 35-to-1 by blacks.

All 20 white seats are held by the whites-only Rhodesia Front Party, led by Smith.

The former prime minister said in the interview he believed Mugabe was trying to accommodate both whites and blacks. But Smith had harsh words for so-called "wild boys," who he claims want to drive all whites from Zimbabwe. An average of 1,500 whites leave monthly, most of them to neighboring white-ruled South Africa.

Smith was asked to assess the situation in Zimbabwe as the first anniversary of black rule nears.

"The position is that many white people ... don't know which way they are going," he replied. "When the election results came out, this was a tremendous bombshell, because of the past record and reputation of Mugabe and his colleagues. However, the day of the election, there was a pleasant surprise because he came out with the most conciliatory speech to the nation, saying that as far as he and his government were concerned the theme would be reconciliation and there would be no recrimination, no looking back."

Smith said Mugabe "continues to give the appearance of moderation and of trying to cooperate. But there are a number of his ministers who are moving in the opposite direction, who are provocative and who go out of their way to humiliate and insult white people. This is obviously unsettling to whites who stay here."

Here is partial text of the rest of the interview:

Q. Were you surprised at the way in which Mugabe handled himself after the election?

A. Yes. Because all of us had been more or less led to believe that he was a vicious Marxist, not interested in reconciliation and living with the white people of this country.

Q. Do you see a future for the white people here?

A. It is very difficult to be positive at this stage. I am still hopeful, but I think we have to wait a little longer to find out where this government is headed.

Q. You believe there is a Soviet threat to Zimbabwe. What would you say to the West to counter this?

A. The West has left it a bit late, so it's going to be a bit difficult. They should have done things long ago instead of sitting on the sidelines doing nothing.

It is very important that they try to rescue the situation.

A. Do you think increased investments and Western aid would help?

A. Yes. That is very important. On the other hand, I can understand the apprehension in the minds of the West because they believe the country is going the wrong way. ... So they are waiting. The problem is that white people have been so provoked that they are leaving. And everyone knows that if the white people leave, the country goes down the drain. That has been proven time and time again.

Change In Banking Laws Cause Of Great Turmoil

By CHET CURRIER
NEW YORK (AP) — Policy-makers at the Federal Reserve will be meeting this week amid more than the usual confusion on Wall Street about the outlook for the money supply and interest rates. The Federal Open Market Committee is due to hold its regular monthly meeting Tuesday to set the course of the central bank's credit policy. The FOMC normally does not announce whatever decisions it makes until several weeks afterward. Market analysts thus must draw their own interpretations of the Fed's intentions from the behavior of the money markets in the days following the meetings. Right now, many of these analysts say, the guessing game is especially tricky. In the past month or two, they note, some changes in the banking laws have created considerable turmoil in the statistics on the money supply. Starting Jan. 1, so-called NOW accounts, checking accounts that pay interest, became legal nationwide. That set off an apparent massive shift of money into these accounts, and some measures of the money supply gyrated wildly.

"The weekly money supply statistics may be useless indicators of economic fundamentals until the shifting process comes to a halt," said Edward Yardeni, economist at E.F. Hutton & Co.

In addition, he said, after such a change in the banking system, the validity of procedures used to adjust the statistics for seasonal influences comes into question.

"This leaves both the Fed and financial market participants down the rapids without a paddle," Yardeni observed.

What does all this matter to the typical investor? As the Merrill Lynch Market Letter points out in its latest issue, "E-conomy-watchers pay close attention to the nation's money supply as a guide to future interest rates and business activity."

"Although orderly growth of the money supply has been the primary policy goal of the Federal Reserve Board since October 1979, there have been wide swings over the past year." In the midst of this confusion, it is no surprise that analysts are quite cautious right now in predicting the likely direction of Fed policy, the economy and interest rates in the months ahead.

Still, a good many of them are convinced that the Fed will follow a policy that fosters continued high interest rates for at least a while longer.

"Recently-released economic data not only reveals that the economy was stronger than expected in the fourth quarter of 1980, but also indicates that positive momentum will carry into early 1981," said Robert J. Nurock, an analyst at Butcher & Singer Inc. in Philadelphia. "This environment gives the Fed more leeway to maintain its current policy and lessens fear of consequent short-term economic risk."

Gary Wenglowski, director of economic research at Goldman, Sachs & Co., cited several reasons why the Fed might be likely to "keep the pressure on."

Reported inflation is likely to be high in the near future, he noted, encouraging the Fed to stick with a restrictive approach. At the same time, he added, it might also feel the need to do so for psychological reasons.

Center Working On Sleep Problems

PORTLAND, Ore. (AP) — Almost every person has difficulty sleeping at one time or another, but the problem is usually temporary.

If the sleeplessness persists for three to four weeks or longer, the type of insomnia is of interest to the sleep-disorder program established at the Oregon Neurosciences Center, operating in conjunction with Good Samaritan Hospital and Medical Center.

The director of the new program, Dr. Gerald B. Rich, has been assistant professor of neurology at Johns Hopkins and co-director of the Baltimore Regional Sleep Disorder Center.

The Neurosciences Center Regional Sleep Disorders Program here is the only one of its size in the Northwest. It covers the full spectrum of the field — diagnosis, treatment and research. It plans to enroll about 500 patients during the first year. The Baltimore center sees some 1,000 patients a year.

"The main idea here was to develop the major regional center for the study of sleep-related problems," said Rich. Most patients will be referred by physicians.

Among the disorders to be studied in the new clinic will be those involved with initiating and maintaining sleep.

There can be a variety of causes, from simple situational and transient insomnia to the more persistent, serious psychological problems, some of them the result of using medication, particularly sleep-inducing drugs.

"Most of the sedative-hypnotic drugs are fine for transient circumstances and can be used a week or two with impunity," Rich said. "But they can begin to exert major changes in the architecture of sleep itself." The drugs, and he said they include alcohol, can cause adverse changes.

Depression of any type, or a sense of loss from a variety of circumstances, can make it difficult to fall asleep, he said. There are also physically or biologically based causes, such as manic-depressive illness in its depressed phase. Chronic pains are a great disturber of sleep.

A person's sleep is divided into cycles averaging 90 minutes. There are two different kinds of sleep, REM (rapid eye movement) and non-REM sleep. Most REM sleep, said Rich, occurs in the early morning hours just before awakening.

From 10 to 15 percent of the population has complaints about either the quality or quantity of sleep. The less severe problems are caused by psychological difficulties or emotional upsets.

The average person sleeps about seven hours a night. Roughly, four to nine hours can be the range of normal.

KIDS-ONLY CLUB

Game Gets Guests At Party To Meet

By SHARI LEWIS

Here's a meet 'em-and-greet 'em game that'll have every guest at your party (or each member of your new class or club) running around, introducing him — or herself, and making friends.

I call it "Hidden Treasure." Beforehand, secretly give a coin, a small box of candy or a charm to a couple of people in the group. (If you have, say, 20 people at the party, you might give two people a dime each.)

Then tell the crowd that two people in the group have been given a small amount of money, and that they will each present this money to the 10th person who shakes hands and introduces him — or herself by name.

That's all you'll have to say! Everyone will go around frantically shaking hands and saying their names, and you'll hear two shrieks as two lucky people are the 10th and get their reward.

Actually, everybody will get a reward, because the hidden treasure you get in this game is that everyone meets and greets everyone else, and makes some new friends.

Yesterday's Brain Twister: We all know how much wood a woodchuck can chuck, but do you know if a woodchuck can climb a tree?

Answer: Yes, and very well, thank you.

Today's Brain Twister: A couple of weeks ago, our new president was inaugurated. Do you know who was the first U.S. president to ride to his inauguration in an automobile? (Look for the answer in tomorrow's Kids-Only Club column.)

Electricity Generated On Homemade System

BATH, New Brunswick (AP) — For nearly 15 years, Bernard Hargrove, a 55-year-old electrical engineer, and his family have operated their own hydro generating system, gradually building it to the point where it now displaces about 500 barrels of oil a month.

About half the output from Hargrove's dam is used to heat and light 35 houses and apartments that he owns and rents in this Canadian village about 125 miles northeast of Saint John. He is not allowed to sell directly to other customers, so the other half is sold to the New Brunswick Electric Power Commission.

Hargrove's own home is at the opposite end of town from the dam and is too far for an economical line to let him use his own power. Instead he burns wood.

The surplus electricity, up to 500 kilowatts, is not much power, but the province thinks the price is right, says Lin Titus, manager of strategic development for the power commission.

Titus said Hargrove received a rate based on a portion of what it would cost the commission to generate the electricity in thermal plants. Next to hydro power from dams owned by the commission, it is about the cheapest electricity the province gets.

Titus, who has visited the generating site, a brook running through the Hargrove property, is impressed with the home-grown technology that went into the earth dam and generating plant.

While Hargrove said his system was not particularly expensive to build, it could prove costly to duplicate.

Hargrove scrounged many of the components he used and did the work gradually over a period of years. His second-hand generators, for example, were inexpensive — "going almost as scrap" — but they were difficult to find.

While Titus agreed that the Hargrove dam could be duplicated he was not sure that it would be economical for a private builder who could not use at least some of the electricity himself.

Consumers pay about four times more than the commission pays Hargrove for electricity, so a private producer gets much more benefit from using his electricity himself than selling it to the commission.

Policeman, Deputy Face Drug Charges

OAKLAND, Calif. (AP) — A Berkeley police inspector and an Alameda County Sheriff's deputy have been arrested for investigation of selling cocaine to an undercover officer, authorities say.

Inspector Charles Edward Crane, 39, head of the auto theft detail, and Deputy Beverly Ann Estrada, 24, a courthouse bailiff, were arrested this week as they reported to work, Berkeley police spokesman Andy Goodman said. Goodman said each allegedly sold cocaine to an undercover agent last month.

Meanwhile, Alameda County District Attorney Lowell Jensen said he fired two staff members in connection with the investigation. He would not discuss details.

No Attempt Made To Halt Talks

WASHINGTON (AP) — Although he is now critical of the Carter administration's handling of the hostage crisis, Ronald Reagan never asked former President Carter to stop negotiating for the release of the 52 Americans, says Carter's White House press secretary.

"So far as I'm aware, in the many hours of briefings provided to the president-elect and to his subordinates, never did any of them suggest that their preference was for us to halt the negotiations and allow them to settle the crisis when they took office, by some other means," Jody Powell said Tuesday.

President Reagan told a group of reporters Monday that the Carter administration should not have negotiated for the release of the hostages.

"The first reply we made was the proper reply — there would be no negotiations until the hostages were returned," he said. "And then we violated that."

Powell, expressing surprise at the president's remarks, said Reagan had endorsed the negotiations Sept. 13 — during his campaign for the presidency.

"It's a wonderful, rare privilege to talk about how you would have settled something that somebody has already settled for you," Powell said.

In fact, he said, several members of the incoming Reagan administration "expressed privately their fervent hope that we would resolve the issue before we left office."

"I don't think even a new president ought to be allowed to have things both ways on a matter of such importance," Powell said.

Neither Carter nor Warren M. Christopher, the former deputy secretary of state who headed the negotiations for the release of the hostages, were available Tuesday for comment on Reagan's criticisms.

The negotiations were completed Jan. 20 during the final hours of Carter's administration. The 52 Americans were not freed, however, until after Reagan took office.

The Senate Banking Committee announced Tuesday that it would hold a hearing Feb. 24 on the financial implications of the agreement that led to the release of the hostages.

"There are many lessons to be learned from our conflict with the Iranian government and many pieces of information which heretofore have been suppressed to ensure the safety of the hostages," said Sen. Jake Garn, R-Utah, the committee chairman, and Sen. John Heinz, R-Pa., who will chair the hearing.

Meanwhile, the Palestine Liberation Organization claimed Tuesday that PLO efforts were instrumental in winning the release of the hostages.

Speaking at a news conference, Haitem Hussani, the PLO's spokesman in Washington, said the organization played "a very positive role in trying to bring about a better understanding between Iran and the United States."

This, he said, resulted in the selection of Algeria as the intermediary in the negotiations.

Reagan said Monday that the United States should have issued its own demands and told the Iranians, "here's the price that we put on your keeping them."

However, in a statement Sept. 13, Reagan seemed to be endorsing most of the negotiating demands of the Ayatollah Ruhollah Khomeini. He said the United States "can and should" agree to Khomeini's demands that frozen Iranian assets be released, all claims against Iran be canceled and the U.S. pledge non-intervention in Iran's domestic affairs.

Reagan said Khomeini's fourth condition, the return of the property of the late shah of Iran, can only be met with "due process of law."

Powell said Carter actually had negotiated a more favorable agreement than the one endorsed by Reagan because there are tougher provisions for settling U.S. claims against Iran.

An other times during the presidential campaign, Reagan said he would have given the Iranians 72 hours to free the hostages or face the consequences.

Judge Considering Injunction Against Return Of Iran Funds

DALLAS (AP) — A federal judge says he may issue an order that would ban the return of about $20 million in Iranian funds to Iran, in spite of the agreement that resulted in the release of 52 Americans held hostage in Tehran.

U.S. District Judge Robert W. Porter took no action Tuesday on a request for a preliminary injunction banning the return of the funds by Electronic Data Systems Corp., but said he thought the Justice Department's case against the order was weak.

To gain the release of the American hostages, then-President Carter agreed that all outstanding Iranian assets in the United States would be transferred to the Federal Reserve Bank in New York.

Most of the funds were then to be deposited in an international account, with distribution against claims to be made by an international panel.

The agreement applies to an interest-bearing certificate of deposit worth $20 million being held in a New York bank for payment of a claim by millionaire H. Ross Perot's Dallas-based computer company.

EDS lawyer Thomas W. Luce III told Porter that federal law "allows the president to freeze but not to seize" funds placed aside for payment of Iranian debts. Luce also challenged the validity of the Algerian hostage accords, maintaining that the president cannot supercede a ruling by a federal court.

Porter was not convinced by Justice Department Attorney Mark Rutzick's argument that an injunction would tie the Reagan administration's hands as it reviews the hostage agreement.

"I really don't see any real harm to the government if an injunction were issued," said Porter. "The issue is whether the president, by regulation, can countermand the judgment of the federal courts."

Porter gave the U.S. Attorney's office until 5 p.m. Thursday to file additional information on the case.

In another case, U.S. Attorney Ken Mighell asked U.S. District Judge Barefoot Sanders on Monday to delay action in a $17.3 million suit filed against Iran and the National Iranian Oil Co. by Dresser Industries Inc.

The Dallas-based oil service company claims Carter violated the constitutionally mandated separation of powers when he prohibited U.S. courts from distributing Iranian funds.

Sanders had issued an order last week freezing any Iranian assets held by six Texas banks in another Dresser suit.

Receptions Continue For Freed Americans

By The Associated Press

Two weeks after 52 Americans were released from Iran, crowds are still cheering and cities are still planning welcoming celebrations.

Applauding crowds in Detroit and Rochester, N.Y., greeted freed hostages Charles Jones Jr., Joseph Subic and Thomas Schaeffer on Tuesday.

In Los Angeles, meanwhile, a standing-room-only crowd jammed City Hall's council chambers to honor Jerry Plotkin, a businessman who was in the U.S. Embassy in Tehran when Iranian militants seized it Nov. 4, 1979.

And welcome-home celebrations for other freed captives were planned in Pueblo, Colo., and Memphis, Tenn., among other places.

More than 1,000 well-wishers jammed a downtown Detroit auditorium in honor of Jones and Joseph Subic.

During the hour-long program at Ford Auditorium, the two men were praised by Gov. William Milliken, U.S. Sen. Carl Levin and Mayor Coleman Young.

"We just want to thank you for everything you have given us," said Subic, a 23-year-old Army sergeant. "We just want to be normal again."

Jones, 40, an Air Force Communications officer who was the only black held hostage for 444 days, said in an article for the Detroit Free Press today that "This was just a kidnapping. Charles Jones is not a hero. He's just an ordinary person."

"To me, the attention I'm getting now (should have been given to veterans of Vietnam)," Jones said.

He wrote that he was "willing to die" during his captivity. "I did not want to see the United States humiliated. I don't know if that's patriotism or what."

called "the departing gift of the Ayatollah Khomeini," met with reporters Tuesday.

Among other things, he said the hostages learned last September of the death of the shah through a small insert in an edition of The Sporting News.

"It was in the Aug. 12 issue. I believe, that had an insert about a televised game being canceled to allow a special to be aired. And in parentheses was the name of program — 'The Death of the Shah,'" Royer said.

"That was the first knowledge that the shah was dead and we knew that bargaining ploy was no longer valid," he said.

He also said the hostages tried to ignore the psychological games the militants played, and tried their own "mind games" on their captors, Royer said.

"We hoped to achieve the same psychological affect they hoped to have," he said. "We'd tell them that they weren't doing their country any good, that they weren't going to get what they wanted and they were only hurting their country," he said.

A Pennsylvania native who grew up in Texas, Royer served as former deputy assistant director for Iran-America society. He arrived in Tehran as a teacher about six weeks before the takeover.

Royer believes the Iranians stepped up efforts to solve the crisis after Ronald Reagan defeated President Carter, whom he called a "scapegoat for all Iranian ills."

Hostages Shunned Possible Escape

HOUSTON (AP) — Four Americans shunned a chance to escape from militants who overran the U.S. Embassy in Tehran and barricaded themselves inside a nearby building to relay information to Washington, says former hostage William B. Royer Jr.

Royer, 49, Kathryn Koob and two other International Communications Agency employees set up a telephone link with the State Department and forwarded information they got from a Swiss diplomat until they were forced to surrender a day later, he said.

"We perhaps hung on too long," said Royer.

When some 25 militants surrounded the cultural center 24 hours after the Nov. 4, 1979 takeover, he and the others "had no recourse but to surrender," he said.

Deaths In Siege Ruled Justifiable Homicides

LONDON (AP) — A coroner's jury announced verdicts of justifiable homicide today in the deaths of five Iranian Arab terrorists killed by British commandos at the end of London's spectacular Iranian Embassy siege last May.

The terrorists took over the embassy, seized 21 hostages and killed two of them during the six-day siege. Strategic Air Service (SAS) commandos stormed the building May 5, killed five of the terrorists and freed the 19 remaining hostages in an attack that was televised live around the world.

Coroner Paul Knapman told a jury of six men and three women that a verdict of justifiable homicide was valid under a section of British law that allows use of reasonable force "in the circumstances in the prevention of crime."

British law requires an inquest in all cases of violent death and Knapman told the jury alternate verdicts of mistadventure or an open finding would "simply leave things up in the air."

The coroner told jurors that if, during the course of the inquest, he had heard any evidence that the SAS had committed murder or manslaughter, he would have referred the case to the state prosecutor.

Knapman noted that the terrorists, died from multiple injuries in most cases. "But you must remember that the weapons used by the SAS fire 10 rounds per second," he said.

"Imagine peering through the smoke and seeing the enemy and ask yourself whether it is reasonable to shoot first and ask questions afterwards."

On Tuesday two SAS men, identified only by the initials I and CC for security reasons, took the stand and told of the deadly 43-minute operation which ended the siege. They said they took no chances after locating the terrorists, firing multiple volleys at them for fear that they were carrying grenades or other weapons.

The jury took 45 minutes to reach the verdicts.

The terrorists took over the embassy to demand the release of 91 prisoners in Iran's Khuzistan province. Iran is predominantly Persian, but there is an Arab minority in Khuzistan province and there have been attempts to seek self-rule for the province.

The one terrorist who survived, Fowzi Badavi Nejad, pleaded guilty to manslaughter and was sentenced to life imprisonment at London's Old Bailey courthouse last month. He told police the embassy attack was organized in Iraq.

Battle Over Budget First Real Test For Reagan

By DONALD M. ROTHBERG
WASHINGTON (AP) — Ronald Reagan's presidency began with a rush of visual and verbal imagery.

There was the new president in command, meeting with his Cabinet, welcoming the freed hostages to the White House, holding his first news conference. And there was the new president reaffirming the nation's military might while displaying restraint.

The opening scenes were generally well received.

Now, though, comes the action, the budget battle that may be the first test of the credibility of Reagan's script for solving the nation's problems — and how well he is persuading the public he is fighting the good fight against inflation.

Reagan began his term with an extraordinary stroke of good fortune when the American hostages were freed from Iran on Inauguration Day. For a week, the nation celebrated, and Reagan used the White House ceremony to warn terrorists they would face "swift and effective retribution" in the future.

At his first news conference, Reagan dealt with the concern that plagued him during the presidential campaign — that he might be "trigger happy."

Now that the hostages are free, would the United States exact revenge for their long ordeal?

Reagan was the voice of restraint. "I don't think revenge is worthy of us," he said.

Restrained toward Iran, Reagan had tough language for the Soviets. In their drive for what he called a "one world socialist or communist state," Reagan said the Soviet leaders "reserve unto themselves the right to commit any crime, to lie, to cheat."

Analysis

Those were unusually harsh words for an American president.

But they were only words, and talk alone won't be enough as Reagan tries to put into action his pledge to cut the federal budget.

The signals from the new administration are that the budget cuts will be deeper than anyone expected.

Budget Director David Stockman told Congress the administration expects to recommend cutting more than $20 billion from the $663 billion federal budget for the current fiscal year.

If those recommendations prove feasible, the budget battle could end up an interesting exercise in how to deal with inflated public expectations — a problem that tormented Jimmy Carter from the early days of his presidency.

During the weeks before he took office, Reagan transition aides began rolling back on the president-elect's campaign promises of quick cuts in federal spending.

After all, they told reporters, the 1981 fiscal year ends Sept. 30 and there just won't be time to cut very deeply into the current budget. And because it took years for the economy to sink so low, they added, turning it around can't be done overnight.

Down went expectations, but maybe not as far as the Reagan aides wanted.

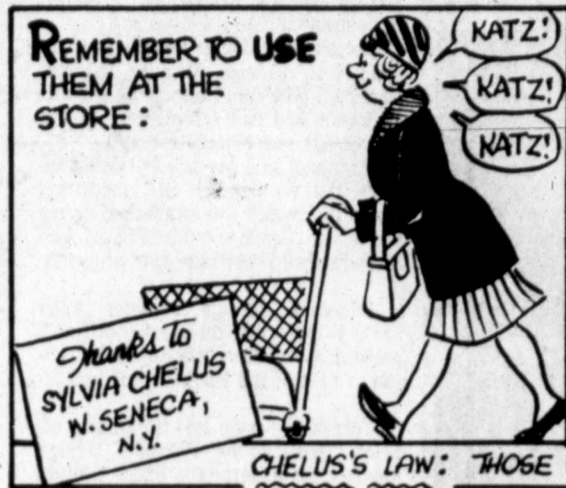

The stock market plunged after Reagan took office, and analysts said the reason was his inaugural address was short on specifics.

Were expectations too high? "I suppose that's possible," White House Chief of Staff James A. Baker III said recently.

Baker said that would be natural as people hope for change.

CHELUS'S LAW: THOSE WHO CLIPPED ARE SOMETIMES CLOPPED

Town Uses Burros To Keep Weeds Down

HUACHUCA CITY, Ariz. (AP) — Mayor Bob Fenimore no sooner put his town's two new lawnmowers to work than they started making funny noises. It sounded more like braying than the usual knocks or rattles.

That is because the lawnmowers are a couple of wild burros, recently captured in the Grand Canyon and adopted by Huachuca City to keep down weeds and vegetation around the town's sewer lagoons.

Town Clerk Terry McGriff estimates the two little gray burros may save the municipal treasury several thousand dollars a year in maintenance around the ponds.

The Arizona Department of Health Services requires towns and cities to keep down plant growth around sewer lagoons. And McGriff said he had come up with the idea for burros after a similar experiment with goats had run into problems.

The town had five goats foraging the 33-acre sewer lagoon area and they were doing a good job of keeping down weeds and grass, he said.

But the local coyotes developed a taste for goat meat and soon there were only three goats. These were penned in the town's dog pound at night for protection until a shelter could be built at the lagoons.

Hay was put in the pens with the goats and they stopped grazing the vegetation around the ponds, which began to grow like crazy.

So the town began to look around for an animal which would graze just about anything and still ward off coyotes. It was about this time that the wild burro roundup began in the Grand Canyon National Park.

The burros had been so successful at surviving in the rugged canyon area that they were destroying grazing for other types of wildlife, and park officials made those rounded up available for adoption.

Town officials took two.

"From my understanding, coyotes won't mess with two full-grown burros," McGriff said. The reason for the coyotes' respect was shown when the wild burros — a jack and a jenny — were unloaded from a horse trailer amid a flurry of flying hooves and loud braying.

If Huachuca City keeps the animals a year, and they do their job well, the town receives title to them. "We don't want to tame them. If we do, then we will defeat the purpose of wild burros," McGriff said.

He said the critters might have to be halter-broken so they would not jump the area's fence.

If the burros work out, they will save the city about $2,000 to $3,000 a year for human crews to mow or spray the vegetation, McGriff estimated.

AQUARIUS (Jan. 20-Feb. 19) Ideas which work for you may not necessarily do the job for another. Make allowances for personality differences and talents when giving advice tomorrow.

PISCES (Feb. 20-March 20) Uncertainty could cause a setback if you begin to question something you were only recently shown to be right. Let today's insights take precedence over tomorrow's.

ARIES (March 21-April 19) Move cautiously and slowly tomorrow, lest you bring someone into your confidence or plans who will blab exactly what you don't want told.

TAURUS (April 20-May 20) Your chances for success will be high tomorrow so long as you stick to your original game plan. Switching horses in midstream could ruin everything.

GEMINI (May 21-June 20) Having many good ideas and all the enthusiasm in the world won't get things done tomorrow unless you discipline yourself to finish what you begin.

CANCER (June 21-July 22) That sentimental you could let someone's sob story cause you to desert your better judgment and take a gamble you normally wouldn't. You may have regrets if you do.

LEO (July 23-Aug. 22) Just when you should be sticking to your guns, as you normally do, tomorrow you could be swayed by someone who really doesn't have all the facts.

VIRGO (Aug. 23-Sept. 22) Continue to check each and every detail as you work along tomorrow. Don't let someone who would rush your job have his or her way.

Something important will be overlooked.

SCORPIO (Oct. 24-Nov. 22) You'd better stay right on top of something being handled for you by another tomorrow because this person, thinking he is doing right, may do exactly the opposite.

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 23-Dec. 21) Be careful tomorrow. You will not be too adept at keeping secrets at this time. With a minimum of coaxing, nosy persons could have you spilling the beans.

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22-Jan. 19) Be satisfied with a small profit tomorrow, rather than holding out because you hear about a better deal. To expect too much from unconfirmed sources could prove to be disappointing.

Iranians Denounce France, Arab Bloc

BEIRUT, Lebanon (UPI) — Iran, halted on the battlefield and threatened with internal disintegration, bitterly accused France and Persian Gulf Arab states of sustaining Iraq's war effort in secret deals that sent jets and oil money to Baghdad.

Tuesday a substantial number of Soviet-made tanks from Eastern European countries, mainly Poland, have been sent to Iraq via Saudi Arabia. But Iran did not single out any Soviet connection in its charges against nations aiding Iraq.

In Washington, official sources said

The Soviet news agency Tass denied the allegations today, saying they were

"absurdities" and "fabrications" spread to justify plans by Britain to resume shipping arms of its own to the battle zone. The first reports had come from London.

Iraq confirmed Tuesday it had received the first of its 60 French Mirage F-1 fighter-bombers ordered before the war and Iran charged France had "breached its neutrality."

Bolstered by delivery of the new aircraft, Iraq Foreign Minister Saadoun Hammadi welcomed efforts by the Organization of Islamic Conference to end the conflict, now in its fifth month.

Hammadi said his country would receive the six-member OIC mediation committee, which was established during the recent Islamic summit in Saudi Arabia, whenever it begins its mediation bid.

Pakistani Foreign Minister Agha Shahi Tuesday met the speaker of Iran's parliament, Hashemi Rafsanjani, in Tehran as part of the Islamic mediation effort.

Tehran television said the Iranian official "thanked the Pakistani foreign minister for his efforts to find a solution to the war" but did not elaborate.

The Baghdad magazine Al-Farabi said today Iran had lost more than 15,351 soldiers in the war, including 6,000 in January alone when it launched an abortive counterattack.

The figures, based on Iraqi military claims, also said Iran had lost 555 airplanes — not counting another 499 jet fighters — 106 helicopters, 1,294 tanks, 568 artillery units, 94 rocket launchers, 69 gunboats and a frigate.

Iraq accused its Arab Gulf neighbors Tuesday of secretly supplying Baghdad with arms and money to keep its war machine going.

The state-run Pars news agency said it had information from an unnamed Gulf state that proved Iraq had deals with Saudi Arabia, Qatar, Kuwait, Bahrain and the United Arab Emirates to provide it with aid.

Pars said the additional revenue received by the Arab Gulf states from increased oil production to make up for the Iraqi and Iranian shortfall was being channeled to Baghdad.

The stalled war effort has caused public bickering between Iran's leaders. Fundamentalist religious leaders blame President Abolhassan Bani-Sadr, who is also commander-in-chief, for the stalemate.

At the same time, Tehran is facing a rebellion of Iraqi-assisted Kurdish tribesmen in northwestern Iran. Iran Tuesday rained artillery fire onto the town of Mahabad, which Kurds seized last week. Six Iraqis were killed in the same area, Pars said.

Tehran Radio said France supplied planes because it "did not want to see Iraq defeated, because they know an Iranian victory would harm their interests."

France, which depends heavily on Iraq for oil, has refused to deliver three missile patrol boats ordered by Iran until Tehran settles financial claims by French businessmen.

During fighting Tuesday, Iraq said its forces killed 117 Iranians around the Iranian town of Gilan Gharb, in the western highlands, and in the Iranian oil fields of southern Khuzistan province. Baghdad said 18 of its men died.

Rift Angers Khomeini

Adjacent to his north Tehran residence and broadcast by Tehran radio. The speech was monitored in Ankara, Turkey.

Khomeini also said "strikes, slowdowns and sensationalism are treason." He ordered Iran's estimated 12 million-member labor force to purge itself of those who provoke industrial action.

Referring to the strikes that toppled the late Shah Mohammad Reza Pahlavi, Khomeini said "Today is not like yesterday. That was your historic duty. Today is just the reverse and ... against Islam and against your country."

He said leaders who refused to resolve their differences despite his previous warnings were "leading our country to serfdom."

"I warn the entire nation, if you don't pay attention, these elders will take our country into the lap of America," he said.

Khomeini named no one, but the warning obviously was aimed at the ruling Islamic Republican Party leaders and President Abolhassan Bani-Sadr, currently involved in a bitter power struggle.

The Moslem fundamentalists of the party even have named a religious leader, Ayatollah Ashiq Hussein Montazari, as the successor to Khomeini when he dies.

Pentagon Urges Defense Boost

WASHINGTON (AP) — The nation, which now spends about 5 percent of its Gross National Product on defense, should boost that figure to as much as 7 percent as soon as possible, the chairman of the Joint Chiefs of Staff told Congress today.

Air Force Gen. David C. Jones, who was accompanied by the uniformed chiefs of the Army, Navy, Air Force and Marine Corps, testified at a House Armed Services Committee hearing on the $180 billion Pentagon budget for fiscal 1982 submitted by former President Carter.

Rep. Samuel Stratton, D-N.Y., noted that the armed forces have said they need tens of billions of dollars to fill out a "hollow Army," convert a 1½-ocean Navy to a three-ocean Navy and build the MX strategic missile system.

"Is it realistic ... that we can actually expect to get that kind of money?" Stratton asked.

"I don't believe it's up to us to decide how much to spend on defense, but I would remind everyone that throughout much of the 1950s and '60s, we spent more than 10 percent of the Gross National Product on defense and we've been down to 5 percent," Jones replied.

On Tuesday, Defense Department Comptroller Jack R. Borsting told the House committee that the Pentagon wants to end the unrealistically low inflation projections that have caused headaches for military planners in recent years.

He said he is working with the Congressional Budget Office and the White House Office of Management and Budget to find a better yardstick to measure future costs.

Borsting disclosed the effort to get more accurate inflation predictions after Rep. William L. Dickinson of Alabama, ranking Republican on the panel, complained that budget shortages caused by unanticipated cost increases had prompted costly delays in buying new weaponry.

Since 1970, the White House budget office has required all federal agencies to use a measure known as the gross national product price deflator to project inflation in their spending plans.

Borsting agreed this measurement has caused large financial headaches for the Pentagon.

But he said that since taking his post last August, he has had frequent discussions with OMB and the Congressional Budget Office on ways to develop a more accurate projection of defense spending.

Budget Cuts Termed As Painful

lion in estimated spending.

For 1982, Reagan's economic advisers are looking to eliminate between $35 billion and $40 billion from a $739 billion budget proposed by the Carter administration, congressional sources said.

A list of potential cuts drawn up by Stockman and circulated through Congress suggests major reductions in a variety of aid programs.

The proposals include eliminating Social Security survivor benefits for college-age students and reducing Social Security disability payments, cutting federal funds for state-run Medicaid programs, tightening rules covering import-related and extended unemployment benefits, phasing out federally subsidized public service jobs and reducing food stamp benefits and child nutrition programs.

Robberies

had been no arrest made in connection with the robbery of Ham's Food Mart, 5212 29th St., about 7:30 p.m. Tuesday.

Store officials have not disclosed how much money was taken in the heist, where 59-year-old attendant Forrest Baker was forced to lie face down on the floor by a pistol-wielding bandit.

Mistaking the robber for a friend playing a joke, Baker said he laughed at the suspect when he entered the store holding the weapon. The attendant said he quit laughing after the gunman became angry and demanded money.

Baker said the an apparently was aware of the store's Crime Eye camera, and made careful moves to prevent activation of the device.

After taking the money, the bandit reportedly made the attendant lie on the floor. Police do not know whether the suspect was on foot or in a vehicle.

The bandit was described as a young, slender white man wearing a gray jacket with a hood.

The two holdups mark the city's third and fourth business robberies of the year.

STUDENTS DEFY STORM — Notre Dame students cross the campus at South Bend, Ind., Tuesday despite arctic winds and blowing snow that made life miserable for even the hardy residents of the Midwest. The snowstorm, called the worst in 25 years as it rolled eastward into Pennsylvania, triggered travel advisories today in the Northeast. (AP Laserphoto)

Giant Snowstorm Moves Into Northeastern Area

The worst snowstorm to hit northwestern Pennsylvania in 25 years hung onto the Northeast with a last blast today, foiling efforts to clean up nearly 2 feet of snow.

Travel advisories were issued early today for the eastern Great Lakes. Forecasters said the area could get another 4 inches of snow before the storm fizzles out.

Snow squalls buried Erie, Pa., with 12 inches of snow Monday and another 5 inches Tuesday. Areas east of Erie reported 24 inches. Western New York was buried with more than 18 inches of snow.

Up to 5 inches blanketed Connecticut. Schools closed, more than 100 travelers abandoned their cars on Interstate 90 and Pennsylvania officials declared a snow emergency.

Meanwhile, the Southwest continued to escape the worst of the winter storms, although clouds covered much of the region today and rain fell over a wide area of South and Central Texas.

But despite a few sprinkles and lowering clouds this morning, forecasters are predicting no rain for the Lubbock area and are calling for partly cloudy skies and warmer weather on Thursday.

Snow flurries were reported in western areas of Lubbock just before noon. Temperatures were expected to be in the mid-40s today, mid-20s tonight and near 50 Thursday.

Occasional light rain is forecast for the Midland-Odessa area and for South Texas today, with the rest of the state, including the South Plains, to have cloudy skies and cool temperatures.

"Low clouds cover most of the Lone Star State except for the Panhandle, northeast and far West Texas, where high clouds were reported," a Lubbock weatherman said this morning.

The extended West Texas forecast is for partly cloudy skies and cooler weather Friday through Sunday. Temperatures will be in the 50s and 60s early in the weekend and will cool into the 40s and 50s.

Strong winds whipped across the Northern Plains to the Northeast, dropping temperatures to single digits and below zero. The cold front crept as far south as Florida, where Tampa had a high of just 50 degrees, the coldest ever for Feb. 3.

Red Oak, Iowa, notched a record 16-below and Shenandoah, Iowa, plunged to 19 degrees below zero. Both readings broke records set in 1956. The temperature at Sault Ste. Marie, Mich., dropped to a record 28 below.

The storms that brought winter back to most of the nation this week were blamed for at least 30 deaths.

Five members of a Milltown, Ind., family — including four youngsters — died Tuesday when a fire apparently kindled by a wood-burning stove swept their two-story frame house on one of the coldest nights of the year.

Three people drowned in Minnesota — a man when his car plunged through the ice of the Mississippi River and two teen-age boys when their snowmobiles went through thin ice on George Lake. A Vermont man died in a fall on ice and a New York truck driver was killed in a collision during a "blinding snowstorm."

Sixteen others died earlier in highway fatalities blamed on icy roads, three died in a North Carolina fire Sunday and a cross-country skier was killed in an avalanche in Utah.

Four brothers trapped overnight on Presque Isle Bay near Erie, Pa., where they were icefishing when the storm hit, made their way to safety Tuesday during a break in the weather. They burned their fishing poles during the night to keep warm.

Reagan Assailed By Soviet Union

MOSCOW (AP) — A senior Soviet official claimed today that President Reagan's campaign against international terrorism may be the prelude to a new crackdown on American "dissidents."

"The march against international terrorism opens the way to introduction of a new, and maybe even more sinister, edition of McCarthyism," Vitaly Kobysch, a commentator for the Communist Party Central Committee, wrote in the latest edition of the weekly Literary Gazette.

"Under the sign of it, everything is possible — to strangle dissidents and to liquidate them mercilessly as was done to the head of the Negro organization Black Panthers," he declared.

Kobysch's article, believed to reflect the highest levels of Kremlin thinking, added a new twist to mounting Soviet rebuttals of Reagan administration charges that Moscow promotes international terrorism, in part by supporting guerrillas in developing countries.

The state-controlled press has reacted by branding the CIA as the "main headquarters" of international terrorism and listing a number of political assassination plots in the 1960s and 1970s allegedly backed by the American espionage organization.

"They tried to throw a stone at us, but they threw a boomerang," another Soviet commentator declared Tuesday night on the main evening TV program, summing up the Soviet response.

In his commentary, Kobysch contended that Secretary of State Alexander Haig erred by "putting the equal sign between terrorism and national liberation movements of people."

"Under the flag of struggle against terrorism," he wrote, "while avalanching charges on the Soviet Union, American imperialism is trying to restore the leading role of the United States by developing a global attack against national liberation movements and all progressive forces in the world."

Kobysch said Moscow shared the U.S. definition of international terrorism "only when it is applied to the Red Brigades in Italy or to neo-Nazis who blast synagogues."

"That which is occurring in Chile, Uruguay, El Salvador, South Africa, South Korea and Israel ... we also regard as international terrorism, while not forgetting that Washington feeds it financially and militarily, organizes it and inspires it," Kobysch wrote.

He said the CIA even recruited the Mafia to assassinate Cuban leader Fidel Castro in the early 1960s.

Jail Attack Alleged By Prisoner

against a "pervasive reign of violence and terror executed and perpetuated by quasi-guards," who Davis describes as inmates acting in a supervisory capacity and administering discipline over the other inmates.

The plaintiff claims that jail administrators by and through their subordinates have been aware of the aggravated rape and aggravated assault directed against him, as well as the abuse of other homosexual inmates at the county facility. He charges further:

— Ruthless extortion of homosexuals for sexual satisfaction; the acquisition of commissary supplies in support of gambling debts.

— The exploitation by brutal coercion of admitted homosexuals to convert non-admitted homosexuals to perform bisexual and homosexual acts until homosexual conversion of the non-homosexual is attained.

— Exploitation of homosexuals by "bawdy house" practices of coerced and homosexual prostitution.

— Aiding, abetting, coercing and promoting homosexuality discriminately by consenting to some homosexual acts perpetuated by some homosexuals and penalizing homosexual acts performed by other homosexual inmates.

Davis claims that he and other homosexual inmates are indifferently treated and situated adversely at the Lubbock jail in comparison to heterosexuals throughout the jail system. He claims that the jail administration, by the actions previously described, seeks to discriminate against him and other classified homosexuals.

The suit claims that jail administrators, through the taking of ordinary care, should have been aware of the acts and known they were injurious and discriminatory.

Davis seeks the $6 million in compensatory, punitive and exemplary damages. He also is seeking an injunction against jail administrators to prevent them from continuing to allow the types of activities he has described.

Panel Approves A&M Regents

AUSTIN (UPI) — A Senate subcommittee today approved Gov. Bill Clements' appointment of three Texas A&M graduates to the Board of Regents of their alma mater.

The appointments now go the Senate for confirmation.

The three prospective new regents are businessman Harvey Roberts Bright of Dallas, attorney William A. McKenzie of Dallas, and oil and gas operator Joe C. Richardson Jr., of Amarillo.

Sen. Chet Brooks, D-Pasadena, asked the three appointees how they feel about spreading the endowment of the Permanent University Fund among other institutions in the Texas A&M and University of Texas systems.

"I favor spreading the PUF funds through the system requirements," Bright said.

McKenzie said he agreed with Bright and said that "PUF should be left for the purpose of excellence in education at the University of Texas and Texas A&M."

"How about excellence in education at some 23 other institutions such as Stephen F. Austin and Sam Houston State College," asked Sen. Roy Blake, D-Nacogdoches.

"The Legislature should bring forth a plan to bring forth funds to make those institutions excellent," McKenzie said. "I don't think you should steal from one to give to the other."

Richardson told the subcommittee, "I don't know all I need to know about that yet."

The subcommittee also approved the re-appointment of Alton Bowen as state commissioner of education.

Meanwhile, the Legislature has begun work on Gov. Bill Clements' crime legislation, and thus far the governor is faring very well.

Tuesday the Senate passed the first bill in the governor's package, a reorganization of the parole system that mandates restitution to crime victims and residence in halfway houses for some parolees.

The House Criminal Jurisprudence Committee also conducted hearings on bills to stiffen penalties for aggravated

Tech Faculty Adopts Policy On Tenure Appeals

By RUTHANNE BROCKWAY
Avalanche-Journal Staff

A policy which proponents say provides more explicit details on tenure denial appeals was adopted Tuesday by Texas Tech University faculty members, but President Lauro Cavazos says he will carefully study the whole tenure policy before deciding whether he favors or opposes the revision.

"It's a very serious proposition any time you change the rules," Cavazos said of the tenure policy.

After discussion at the next Faculty Senate meeting, Feb. 11, the proposed revision will be sent to Cavazos for his consideration. The policy ultimately would need a stamp of approval from the board of regents before it could take effect.

The vote was 64 in favor of revision and 42 against at the Tuesday afternoon meeting attended by about 150 faculty members, including several department chairmen and at least two college deans. There are an estimated 800 eligible voting faculty.

During almost an hour of discussion before the vote, Dr. Len Ainsworth, interim vice president for academic affairs, spoke out at least five times against the revision. He criticized it as a "piecemeal" approach and suggested faculty members wait for Cavazos to review a study of the tenure policy which was conducted in 1978.

Three presidents have held office since that study was completed — Cavazos, interim president Dr. Lawrence Graves, and previous president Dr. Cecil Mackey — yet no changes have been made.

Dr. Ben Newcomb of the history faculty noted the presidency changes and still-unreviewed policy and suggested, "It may be easier to do it piecemeal rather than wait for a comprehensive plan."

Dr. Jacq Collins, also from the history department, helped write the 1978 tenure study but said he had reservations about the final report. "I'm happy three presidents sat on it." Instead, he favored Tuesday's proposition, saying, "I hope it passes. I hope the president and board of regents pass it."

Under Tech's existing policy, the only reason listed for a faculty member appeal of a denial of tenure is if the teacher "alleges that a decision not to reappoint him is caused by considerations violative of academic freedom."

In addition to that reason, the proposed revision adopted Tuesday by the faculty would allow an appeal if the teacher believes the decision to deny tenure was:

- Made without adequate consideration of professional performance;
- Made after significant noncompliance with prescribed procedures;
- Based upon factors lacking a substantial relationship to professional fitness or performance; or
- Based upon a criterion not listed among the prescribed evaluative criteria for reappointment or admission to tenure.

Ainsworth was particularly critical of the last item of the proposal, saying it could be abused to keep the tenure and privilege committee continually tied up in appeals hearings.

Dr. Ernest Sullivan of the English faculty, however, argued that, "Not a single one (of the tenure and privilege committee members in the audience) has complained about working too hard for the university and justice."

Dr. John Walkup of the electrical engineering faculty was among those who voted against the proposal. He questioned the value of the item regarding "adequate consideration of professional performance," saying that the word "adequate" was vague.

Another electrical engineer, Dr. Russell Seacat, chairman of the department, twice questioned the value of the revision saying that in his own department he saw no need for revision because procedures were being followed.

Faculty members in other departments, however, were shaking their heads no and saying that procedures are not always followed in each department on campus as Seacat spoke.

Graves, dean of the College of Arts and Sciences, brought a bit of levity to the discussion with his opening remarks of

"I could be wrong — ah, perish the thought — but," before explaining his objections to the proposal. Graves said the university administration should be responsible for seeing to it that tenure evaluation procedures are followed in each department and college.

Dr. Margaret Wilson, professor of health, physical education and recreation and a former officer in the Faculty Senate, said she understood Graves' point, but argued, "This document will force colleges to do that (rather than find their decisions questioned by the appeals committee)." She claimed that some departments don't have adequate tenure review procedures and said of the revision proposal, "Maybe now they'll get them."

Throughout the debate, Dr. Rod Schoen defended the revision. A Tech law professor who helped write the revision and a former member of the tenure and privilege committee which is responsible for dealing with appeals when a teacher is denied tenure, Schoen said the change will simply expand the categories under which a faculty member who is denied tenure may appeal the decision.

SPAG To Examine Objections To Federal Funding Formula

By DEBBI STALTER
Avalanche-Journal Staff

A federal funding formula which virtually eliminates this region from receiving two types of drug abuse prevention funds is being protested by local health agencies and will come up for discussion by South Plains Association of Governments board members Thursday.

The board is expected to consider a recommendation by SPAG's alcohol abuse advisory committee that a formal objection be registered with the Texas Department of Community Affairs, which channels money from the National Institute on Drug Abuse to local regions.

The money in question would fund educational programs to prevent drug abuse and alternative intervention programs, which focus on finding means to meet the potential alcohol abuser's problems before an abuse pattern has developed.

Oscar Jones, director of drug abuse services with the Lubbock Regional Mental Health-Mental Retardation Center, said his agency is raising strong objection to the pattern that the state agency has followed in awarding funding contracts to larger metropolitan areas including Dallas and Houston and leaving West Texas penniless.

Jones said the allocations are made on a ratio of the number of alcohol abuse incidences compared to population in a region. However, he questions where the state and federal agencies obtain the figures which rank the Lubbock area among the lowest in the state.

The ratio is assessed on a base of 100,000 population and registers the Lubbock area 22nd out of 24 regions in the state for alcohol and drug abuse, Jones said. He noted that his office alone has 105 persons enrolled in a drug treatment program and said he feels there is a much greater incidence of drug and alcohol abuse here than state and federal statistics show.

So far Lubbock has received no funding for the two types of abuse programs and has had to perform minimal services through local efforts alone, he said. Jones pointed out that the Dallas and Houston areas are receiving up to four grants apiece for the programs.

Jones said an estimate of the dollar impact on this area could not be assessed until local statistics on abuse incidences are rectified, but pointed out that alternative intervention program contracts most recently awarded to other areas amounted to as much as $75,000 a grant.

Jones has had plans in the making for a $50,000 mural construction project at a Canyon Lakes site which has run into funding snags for several months and possibly could compete for funds under the alternative intervention program. The mural construction, Jones said, would provide a project for students who have lost interest in normal class settings and are potential dropouts.

The SPAG board of directors will consider the alcohol abuse committee recommendation on the funding at 10 a.m., following an executive committee session at 9 a.m.

Advertising Crackdown Planned

The Better Business Bureau of the South Plains has launched a new effort to try and curb the large number of errors in advertising, relevant to the Truth in Lending Act. The BBB has been contacted by Jurett Smith, Regional Federal Trade Commission in Dallas, and informed it that the FTC plans a crackdown on abuses of this law.

The greatest errors locally are the failures of businesses to reveal all the terms of a loan offer when they use one of the "kicker" terms in an ad, according to BBB officials. Other problems include the quoting of add-on rates and the use of the abbreviation, APR, for annual percentage rate.

The BBB hopes to inform local businesses through direct contact of their oversights and hope to keep local businesses from getting into trouble with the FTC, which sometimes does more than just issue a warning.

All business advertising will be monitored for obvious errors. The BBB will also inform member businesses of minor infractions. Businesses having trouble with the Truth in Lending Law, should contact the BBB office.

The scholarships are awarded to deserving respiratory therapy students by the lung association so that high quality lung care from trained professionals will be available in every community.

Judge Orders Reduction Of Bond For Gilmore

A district judge has ruled that murder suspect Vernon Ray Gilmore's bond, originally set at $20,000 for a recently filed, unrelated burglary charge, should be reduced to $12,000.

Judge Robert C. Wright ordered the bond reduction this morning in his 137th District Court room after hearing Gilmore's attorneys plea for the reduced bond. The original bond was set after Gilmore was charged with an April 22 burglary in which $38,000 in jewelry was taken from a Lubbock residence.

Gilmore still was in Lubbock County Jail at noon today.

Gilmore also stands accused of the Nov. 6 murder of Richard Grier Luster, whose body was found on a road leading into a caliche pit near Lake Ransom Canyon. Investigators termed the murder a "gangland slaying" since Luster was found with bullet wounds in the head and chest from a gun fired at close range.

Gilmore and his companion, Samantha Jane Davidson, who is also charged with the murder, were arrested in late December at the United States-Canada border by U.S. Customs officers as the couple attempted to enter the United States.

A source close to the case said jewelry believed taken in the April 22 burglary was found in the couple's possession at the time of their arrest at the border.

LSD Reconsidered In Report

NEW YORK (UPI) — Whatever happened to psychedelic therapy, alias LSD therapy — under investigation by psychiatrists between 1950 and 1960?

One hardly hears of it in research circles these days. But, says a report in "The Sciences," up to the mid-60s more than a thousand clinical reports on LSD were published. These detailed use of the drug against a range of disorders — from alcoholism to obsessive neurosis and childhood autism.

The papers showed one form of LSD or mind-expanding therapy stressed the mystical experience. A second form dwelled on exploring the unconscious as it is probed in psychoanalysis. The thousand papers told of use of LSD by about 40,000 persons.

The report in the January issue of the New York Academy of Sciences publication is titled: "LSD Reconsidered — Should Clinical Research be Resumed?"

It is a boiled-down version of a report delivered at a Rockefeller University seminar on "Plant Hallucinogens." The author is Dr. Lester Grinspoon, associate professor of psychiatry at Harvard Medical School and a specialist at the Massachusetts Mental Health Center.

"The rise and decline of LSD took an unusual course," he said.

"In 1960, 10 years after it was introduced into psychiatry, its therapeutic prospects were still considered fair and the dangers slight.

"Then the debate received an infusion or irrational passion from the psychedelic crusaders and their enemies.

"The revolutionary proclamations and religious fervor of the non-medical advocates of LSD began to evoke hostile incredulity. Twenty years after its introduction it was a pariah drug, scorned by the medical establishment and banned by the law.

"In rejecting the absurd notion that psychedelic drugs are a panacea, we have chosen to fly to the other extreme — we treat them as entirely worthless and extraordinarily dangerous.

"Maybe the time has come to find an intermediate position."

Grinspoon said psychedelic drug therapy did not die a natural death from loss of interest.

"It was killed by the law," he said.

"Even though many of the researchers who devoted a large part of their careers to psychedelic drugs have retired or died, and many more now ignore them entirely, there are still others who would like to use the drugs if they could, and a few continue to use them illegally.

"Psychedelic drug therapy apparently still goes on underground. People would not continue to practice it under difficult conditions unless they believed they were accomplishing something.

"Many patients regard it as an experience worth having, some as a first step toward change and a few as a turning point in their lives.

"It would simplify matters if we could be sure that they were deceiving themselves, but we do not know enough about what works in psychotherapy to say anything like that.

"No panacea will be discovered here any more than in psychoanalysis or religious epiphanies. Nevertheless, the field obviously has potentialities that are not being allowed to reveal themselves."

"The main danger in psychedelic drug therapy," said Grinspoon, "is the same as the danger of any deep-probing psychotherapy: If the unconscious material that comes up can be neither accepted and integrated nor totally repressed, symptoms may become worse; psychosis or suicide is possible."

Richardson Warns Against Aid Cuts

HONG KONG (AP) — Elliot Richardson, U.S. ambassador-at-large in the Carter administration, said Monday any move by the Reagan administration to cut U.S. foreign aid to Third World countries would be "a disastrous mistake."

Richardson, speaking to American businessmen, said the cuts would create resentment over the widening economic gap between industrialized nations and developing countries.

DR. LAMB

Help Needed

By LAWRENCE LAMB, M.D.

DEAR DR. LAMB — My husband is an alcoholic. I have tried hiding his liquor, putting alum in it, giving him more, fussing and just ignoring it. He knows he has this problem, but absolutely will not go to AA or seek any help. He would raise Cain and drink more if I went to meetings. I can't sneak because of the children. I love him and don't want to leave him. We really need what security he provides. His personality changes completely when he is drinking. He won't hurt me bodily, but his tongue is so cruel.

Doctor, I am so depressed but not suicidal. The boys need me. I read my Bible and am reading "The Power of Positive Thinking" but all this is not helping him.

DEAR READER — There are no easy answers for the person who has a mate who is an alcoholic. Check the yellow pages in your telephone directory under alcoholism and see what organizations are available in your community. The Al-Anon organization for family members of an alcoholic will be familiar with the logistics of the kind of situation you are in and may be able to help.

Now it sounds cruel, but you can't help your husband by letting the situation drag you down, too. If necessary you may need to give him an ultimatum that if your relationship is to continue he must seek help. And you will have to be prepared to carry out your ultimatum.

I am sending you The Health Letter number 14-6, Alcohol Can be Dangerous to Your Health, although most alcoholics are not really concerned about their health. Others who want to know how alcohol affects the body can send 75 cents with a long, stamped, self-addressed envelope for it to me, in care of The Lubbock Avalanche-Journal, P.O. Box 1551, Radio City Station, New York, N.Y. 10019.

Don't overlook enlisting the aid of your minister in getting your husband to seek professional help.

DEAR DR. LAMB — I am desperate. I have fragile capillaries so I bruise very easily. My doctor said to take large doses of vitamin C and rutin, which I do. I am now taking 1000 mg of C and 100 mg of rutin twice daily, but I'm still bruising. Most of the time I don't even know how it happens as it doesn't hurt.

I am 71 years old and take Diapres for blood pressure, Premarin and vitamin E, also one Geritol tablet daily. I lead a very active life and am quite healthy, but this is a real problem. It is only on my arms, seldom on any other parts of my body.

DEAR READER — Occasionally a low level of vitamin C can cause increased fragility of the capillaries, but there are many other causes for this problem and, as your story demonstrates, taking vitamins alone is frequently not the answer.

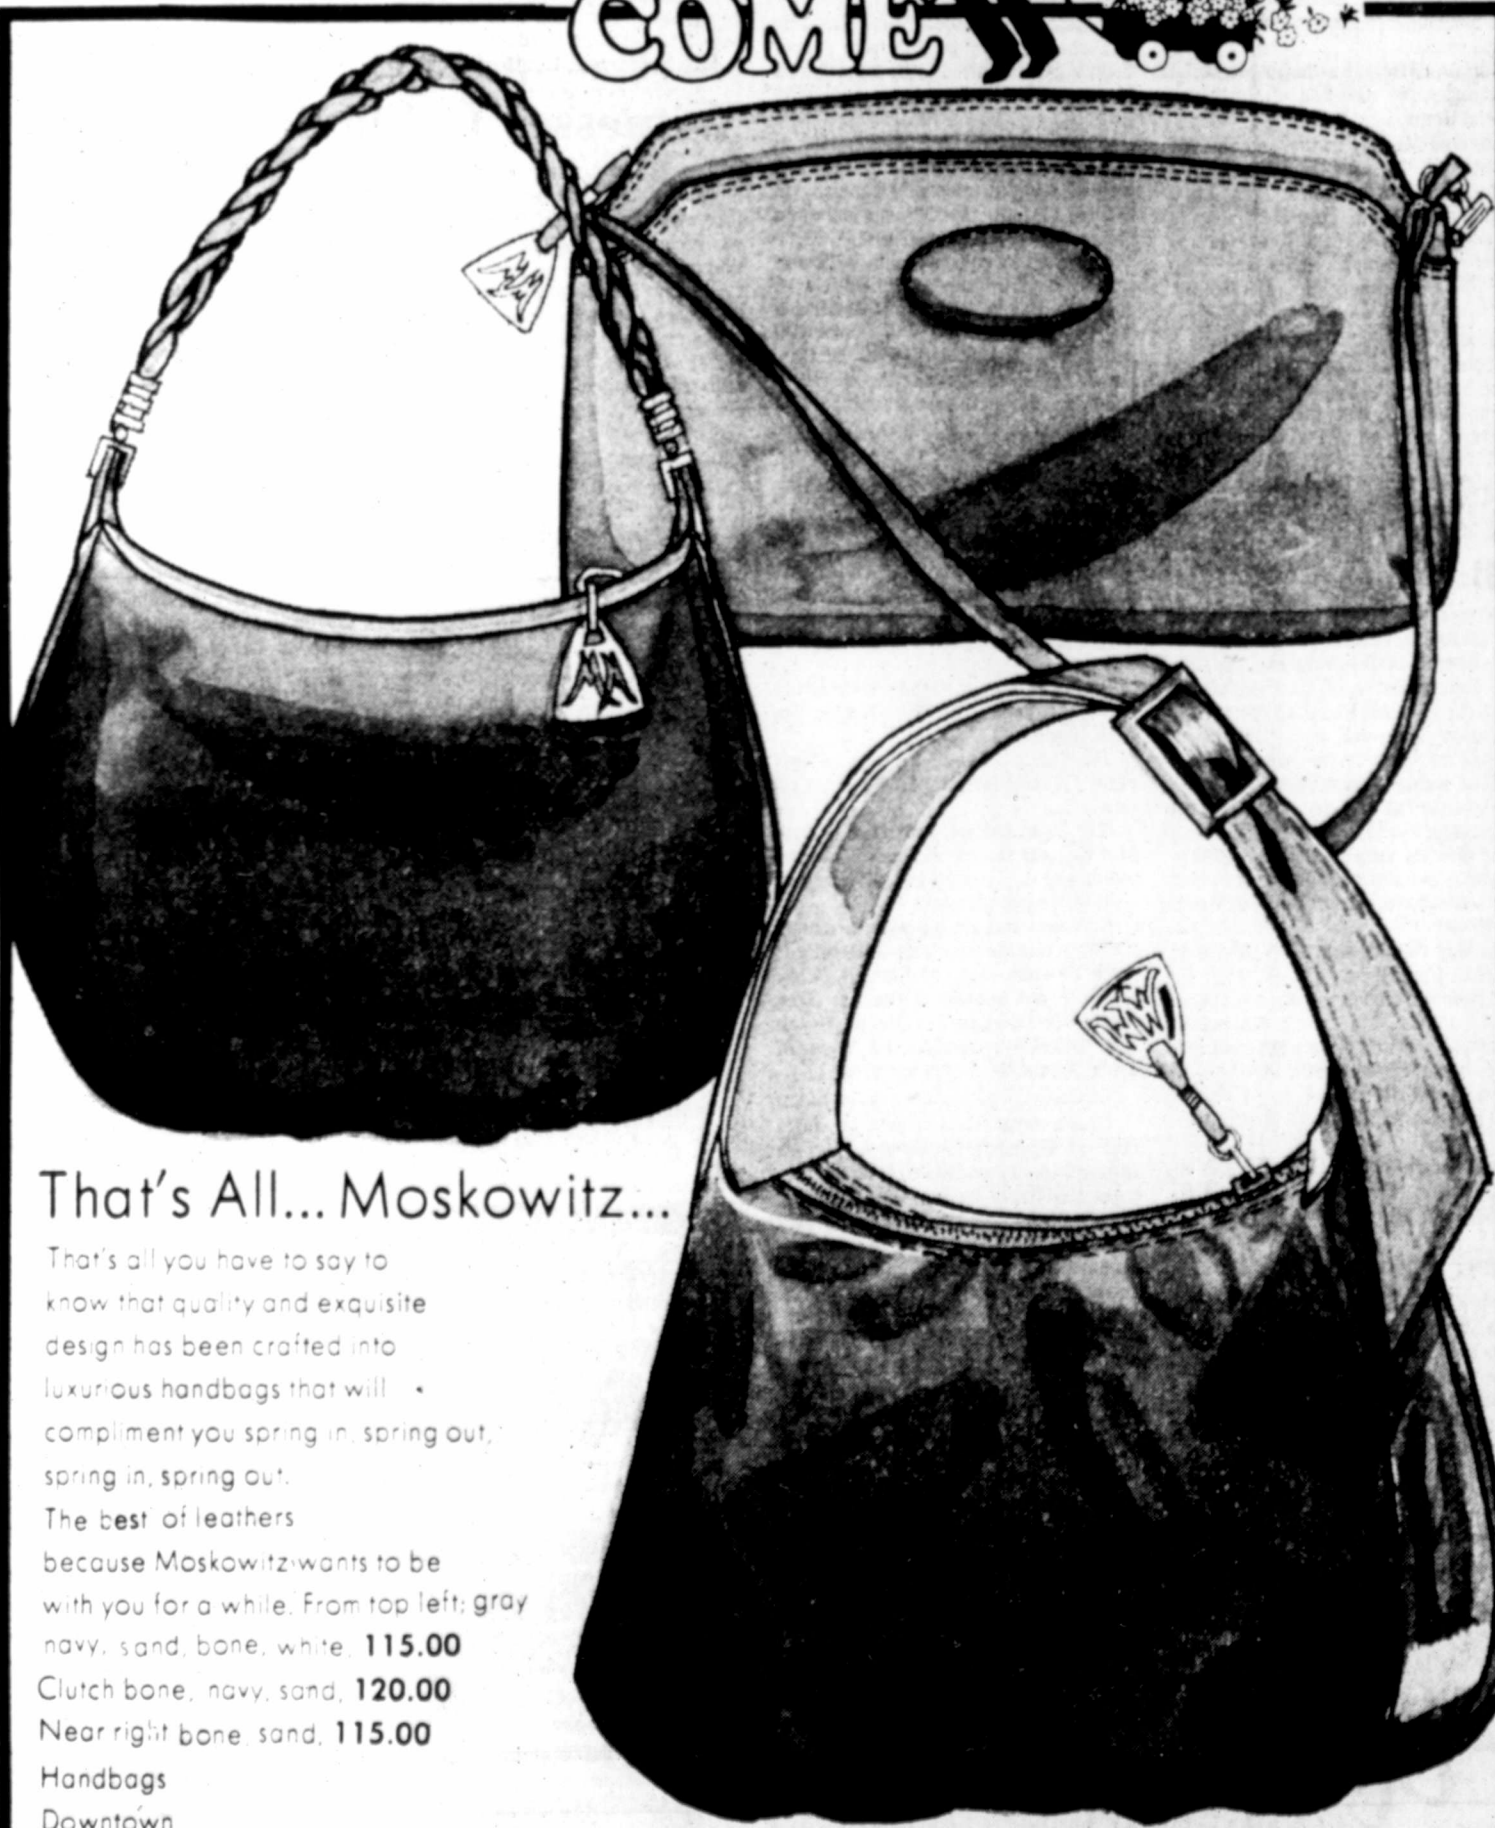

If you have not had them, you need a series of tests to evaluate the clotting mechanism of your blood. Your problem can also be caused by a disorder of the platelets, the tiny cells involved in blood clotting.

Certain medicines can sometimes cause this, including aspirin or common home remedies that contain aspirin. Now that you have tried the vitamin C and rutin routine, talk to your doctor again to see if he is interested in testing your clotting mechanism further to pinpoint the real problem.

Bondsmen Upset With New Policy

By MARY ALICE ROBBINS
Avalanche-Journal Staff

Anyone who lands in the Lubbock County jail after normal business hours on weekdays can expect to remain there for at least several hours.

And if an individual is arrested during a weekend, his stay behind bars could last for several days.

Recent changes in the policy for setting temporary bonds in felony cases and the establishment of a more rigid schedule at the jail have made it increasingly difficult for inmates to obtain prompt release.

Those rule changes, which went into effect early last month, have become a growing concern for local bail bondsmen, about half a dozen of whom staged an impromptu meeting in Sheriff D.L. "Sonny" Keese's office Tuesday to discuss the situation.

Under state law, a sheriff has the authority to set temporary bonds in felony cases. But Keese said he doesn't plan to exercise that authority too freely.

"The only way I'll let anyone out of jail now is if the district attorney's office recommends a temporary bond," Keese said.

In the past, the sheriff said, burglary suspects have been arrested by Lubbock police officers and booked at the county jail. Before police detectives could reach the jail to question the suspects about other local burglaries, the individuals have been released on temporary bonds, he said.

"I just don't believe a man who's charged with a felony needs to be running around on the streets before he has gone before a magistrate," Keese said.

But the bondsmen argue that Kee-see's policies have not been flexible enough. More consideration should be given regarding the type of offense an individual has been arrested for, they said.

"We don't want convicted felons out anymore than anybody else does," said Houston Trammel, a co-owner of Lubbock Bail Bonds.

But Trammel said his main concern is for youths arrested on a first offense, individuals who land in jail because of family arguments and motorists facing felony charges for driving while intoxicated.

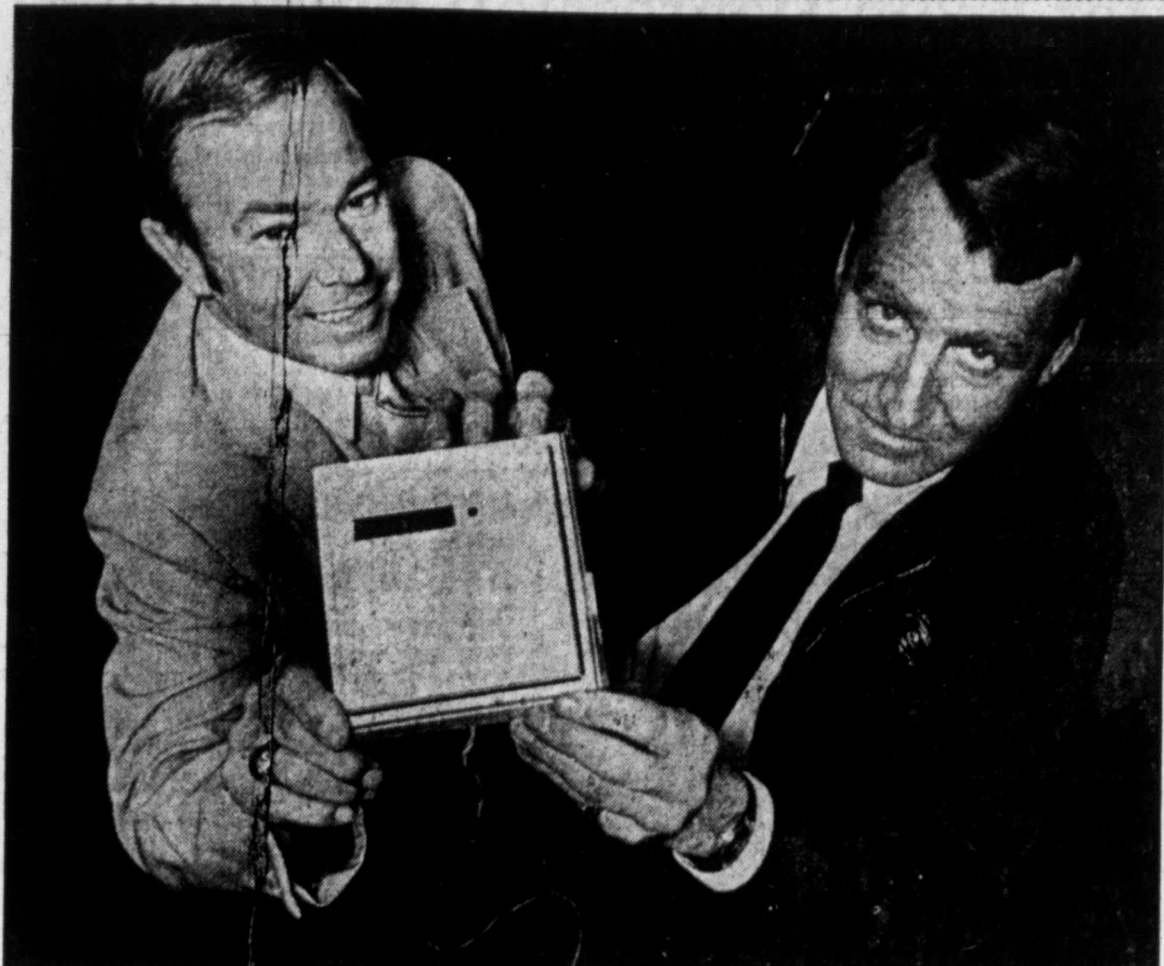

Trammel said he sees no need for individuals arrested for lesser felony violations to have to spend a weekend in the county jail.

Holding a person in jail past the time he normally should report for work also can cause him to lose his job, Trammel said.

District Attorney John Montford said he objects to the practice of setting temporary bonds. "But I also fear the situation where someone can languish there (in jail) without charges being filed," he noted.

The only real problems occur on the weekends, Montford said, when his office is closed. If a case involves a first de-

Smoke Detectors Help Save Life, Property

By JOE GULICK

If not for one small factor, it might have been a tragedy. When Jim was awakened by the shrill buzz, his first thought was that it was his alarm clock signaling time to get up and begin a new day. As he got more awake, he quickly realized it wasn't the alarm clock — it was the smoke alarm he had installed only months before.

Jim's wife was also awakened by the racket and both of them leaped from the bed at the same moment. Their only thought was the safety of their three children.

They breathlessly raced to the children's rooms and were relieved to find them safe and sound in their beds. The family quickly left the house and called the fire department from the neighbor's house.

When the fire department arrived,

Consumer Update

they managed to put out the fire — fortunately only a minor blaze — in a short time. The smoke had activated the alarm before the fire got very big. The damage to the house was relatively slight.

The family had installed four smoke alarms at a cost of about $100. Because of that foresight, they saved thousands of dollars in damages to their home and possibly their lives.

The above story is indicative of hundreds of similar situations in which smoke detectors have saved lives and property. The U.S. Fire Administration recently estimated that use of smoke detectors and other fire alarms can reduce the loss of life from home fires by more than 40 percent.

Lubbock Fire Marshall Robert Stokes said, "I don't see how people can afford to be without them," referring to smoke detectors. See SMOKE Page 8

Changes Elude City Restaurant

By BOB CAMPBELL
Avalanche-Journal Staff

From L.C. "Buck" Peveto's viewpoint, Lubbock was raised on chili.

Since 1925, he has cooked it and served it himself.

The 72-year-old Orange native came here in 1925 with his parents and went to work in a cafe started by his father and another man at 814 Main St.

They called it the Hot Shot, and because the specialty never changed, Peveto never saw any need to change the name.

"Our menu hasn't changed too much," he said, "but people's tastes have changed from what they used to be. You have to have more things."

"Lubbock used to be a Saturday town," he added. "Everybody would come to town, farmers and all, but you don't have that anymore."

"Saturday used to be our big day, the only big day we had. Saturday business started falling off in '52, when the boll stripper came in."

Peveto was 16 and working part-time in a family cafe in Rockdale when the family came to Lubbock. He followed the same routine here until finishing Lubbock High School in 1927.

His father, J.C. Peveto, retired in 1936, and the younger Peveto has been running the Hot Shot ever since.

Obviously, he has seen a lot of Lubbock history.

He watched the county build the old county jail across the street in 1931, and he shared a building first with a barber shop and from 1927 to 1944 with a shooting gallery.

With his wife Ola, whom he married in 1932, he took over the whole building in 1944. They also moved into the east side of it, where the shooting gallery had been, put in booths and remodeled it extensively.

The Hot Shot cooked on uninterruptedly until May 1970, when the tornado that devastated the city also destroyed the restaurant.

"It tore us down pretty good," Peveto

X-Rated Film Ordinance May Be Invalid

By MARC FLAKE
Avalanche-Journal Staff

An existing city ordinance prohibiting the showing of X-rated motion pictures which are visible from public streets may not be specific enough to comply with First Amendment guidelines, city attorney John Ross said Tuesday.

A 1975 Supreme Court ruling on a similar case in Jacksonville, Fla., may have invalidated Lubbock's ordinance, according to Ross, who checked into the laws after being contacted by a local citizen's group complaining about films shown at Circle Drive-In Theater.

Sam Durden, organizer of Citizens Against Pornography, told The Avalanche-Journal that officials had promised to get together with the police department and district attorney's office and develop a liaison to monitor what the two agencies were doing about the group's demand that the 58th Street and Avenue Q theater stop showing the films.

But Ross said Tuesday afternoon there may be little that city officials can do concerning the complaints.

In the Florida case, which involved a drive-in theater with a screen visible from two city streets, Ross noted the Supreme Court struck down a city ordinance similar to Lubbock's because it wasn't specific enough to safeguard First Amendment rights.

Lubbock's ordinance says it is unlawful "to permit any motion picture film, slide or exhibit rated X to be visible from any public street or highway."

Supreme Court rulings, he added, traditionally demand that the entire content of the film must be taken into consideration.

Criminal District Attorney John Montford also noted the legal limitations his office faces, and said the group shouldn't be looking for any "sweeping shut-downs" because his office must consider each film individually.

But the relationship between the Lubbock and Jacksonville, Fla., cases doesn't stop with the supreme court ruling. Durden was a vice squad officer in Jacksonville and was serving in the sheriff's office when the high court decision was handed down, according to records at that city's newspaper, the Jacksonville Times-Union.

Durden said he moved from Florida in August 1980 and could not recall the specifics of the case against the drive-in theater there. He said he left Jacksonville to attend the Sunset School of Preaching in Lubbock.

He said he moved from another Lubbock residence to the 58th Street apartment complex about two weeks ago.

Durden's complaints about the theater mark the second time in three months city officials have been asked to do something about the visibility of the theater's screen. Councilman Alan Henry alerted the council to the complaints in November after receiving a letter from Ramada Inn Manager Marvin Parker.

At the council meeting, Ross cautioned that the Supreme Court has issued several opinions stating theater owners have a first amendment right to show what they want unless the films are found to be obscene by a jury. A theater could not be closed, but could be prosecuted for showing a particular film.

American Women More Apt To Suffer From Depression Epidemic

EDITORS NOTE: Depression is more than feeling down in the dumps. It's an illness and it strikes women twice as often as men. In the first of a three-part series, AP writer Jane See White describes the disease, its forms and its costs.

By JANE SEE WHITE
Associated Press Writer

Odds are, someone you know is depressed — someone who doesn't laugh anymore, who's lost weight, can't sleep. Odds are 2-to-1 that the someone is a woman.

Depression is an epidemic that University of Pennsylvania researcher Martin Seligman estimates costs Americans up to $4 billion a year in lost work and medical bills. Its social cost is enormous — broken marriages, troubled children, suicide, even homicide.

The National Institute of Mental Health says one in every five Americans, 40 million people, have significant symptoms of depression at any one time. About 2.4 million of them suffer severe, clinical depression.

Two-thirds of them are women. Why? The experts aren't sure.

In 1979, 3 million Americans took medicine to fight depression and even more Americans turned to therapists for help.

"Depression is a natural disaster. It breaks up marriages, costs jobs, hampers the capacity to mother," said Maggie Scarf, author of "Unfinished Business," a study of depression in women. "Freud said nobody who has a toothache can be in love. Well, a person who is depressed has a life-ache — the pain just overwhelms everything else."

The pain can be fatal, too. One in 200 episodes of depression ends in suicide. Some victims are well-known — Marilyn Monroe, Jean Seberg. For each suicide, 10 depression victims try to kill themselves and fail.

Depression is the oldest known psychiatric disorder. Even the ancient Greeks suffered from it. But scientists still don't know what causes depression, much less why most of its victims are women.

"Depression isn't like strep throat. We can tell you why you get strep throat," said psychiatrist Jack Ewald, chief of mental health at the Veterans Administration. "Depression is more like cancer — we know there are some things that tend to cause it in susceptible people." Though scientists believe there may be more, two forms of depression have been identified. Most common is what laymen call "a real downer" — an intense sense of sadness and despair, guilt and hopelessness.

"A depressed person isn't just down in the dumps ...," said Frank Ayd, psychiatrist and research director at Taylor Manor Hospital in Ellicott City, Md. "At times life may get lousy for all of us, but guilt and hopelessness are out of place."

Ninety percent of victims suffer this form, called unipolar depression. A moderate case dulls the ability to feel pleasure, causes a nagging sadness, a clinging sense of hopelessness. A severe case can be immobilizing.

—A Kansas City housewife: "I have no desire to do anything ... I don't want to cook and I don't want to eat. Then I get to the point where I don't want to live."

—A Philadelphia mother with a graduate degree in social work: "I've been so depressed for six or seven months that I can hardly get out of bed ... Life's not worth living anymore. I feel like I'm failing in every way — as a wife, as a mother and as a human being." She considered suicide, she said, "but I'd probably mess that up, too."

Most unipolar depression victims lose interest in food — though a few begin to eat all the time. Most feel tired, sapped of energy and have trouble sleeping — though a few begin to sleep all the time.

Indeed, the symptoms of unipolar depression can be so contrary that many depression victims don't know what's wrong.

"I would estimate that half of depressions are misdiagnosed," said Robert Hirschfeld, a psychiatrist and chief of the NIMH Center for the Study of Affective Disorders.

"It's commonly misdiagnosed because people don't complain about feeling sad, they complain about the physical symptoms."

Depression attacks the whole body. It causes constipation, churning stomachs, impotence or frigidity, headache, backache, insomnia.

The complex of symptoms is well documented, but a doctor who isn't thinking of depression might conclude there's something physically wrong. And sometimes depressed people insist they're ill.

"Wearing the dark glasses of melancholia, they think they must ... have some terminal illness," said Ayd, who once surveyed 500 depressed patients and found they'd taken their symptoms to 1,500 medical specialists.

"They kept asking for more tests because they couldn't believe they didn't have a brain tumor," he said.

People who suffer unipolar depression generally get better. Treatment ranges from talk therapy and drugs to electrically induced brain seizures. One type of therapy or another helps in 85 percent of cases, experts say.

Depression takes another, less common form, known as bipolar or manic-depression. It strikes only one person for every 10 struck by unipolar depression, and it strikes men almost as often as women.

Actress Vivien Leigh suffered from bipolar depression, according to her biographers. Dance pioneer Alvin Ailey is another well-known sufferer.

At its most severe, manic-depression torments its victims with wide, uncontrollable mood changes, from high and confident — best in the business, ruler of the earth — to low and worthless.

Studies have found that bipolar depression tends to run in families and experts believe it may be inherited. Treatment with lithium, an antidepressant, works in most cases — but most manic-depressives take the drug for life.

"Depression may be a group of disorders with a number of different causes" said Hirschfeld.

The bidding:

East South West North
Pass Pass 1 ♥ Dble.
Pass 2 NT Pass 3 NT
Pass Pass Pass
Opening lead: Two of ♠.

More often than not, defense is a cooperative venture. It does not help for one member of the partnership to be brilliant if his efforts are going to be nullified by the other.

North had a problem after West opened with one heart in third seat. Our choice would be an overall of one spade because we would not know what to do if South responded two clubs to our takeout double — the hand is not good enough to bid two diamonds now. But far be it for us to quibble with success — the contract had excellent chances, especially with West on lead.

West gave considerable thought to his opening lead. From the bidding, it appeared that declarer was well fortified in hearts. East could not have enough in spades to make that lead appearing, and the fact that West held only two diamonds ruled out a lead in that suit. So West settled on the killing lead of the two of clubs. Unfortunately, East failed to cooperate.

Declarer played the jack from dummy and, without a moment's thought, East covered with the queen. A club was returned to West's ace and a third round cleared the suit as declarer won with the ten. Declarer led a low diamond to West's ace, but West had no way to get to his partner's hand. When the queen of diamonds came tumbling down a bit later, declarer had ten tricks for the taking.

As soon as East put up the queen of clubs, he retired himself for the rest of the hand. Note the difference if he lets the jack of clubs hold the first trick while signaling encouragement with the nine. Declarer cannot come to nine tricks without the diamond suit. When West wins the ace of diamonds, his ace of clubs will fell dummy's king, and another club to the queen will allow East to cash two more tricks in the suit for a one-trick set.

It cannot cost East to play the nine of clubs at trick one. If declarer needed only one club trick for his contract, he surely would have played dummy's king at the first trick in the expectation that West had the ace as part of his opening bid.

At Wit's End...

By ERMA BOMBECK

When you think about it, technology has come no appreciable distance in this country. Oh, sure, we have electronic games to amuse us and garbage compactors (a spinoff of pantyhose), but we still sit around the campfire and our children still carve on the walls.

Medical technology is even worse. The common cold is still a mystery. No one knows why hot flashes occur in the summer but never in the winter when you need them. And not one member of the medical community has tackled the biggest mystery of all — how to stop children's feet from growing.

For years, parents have tried to anticipate the rate of growth. From the time a child is old enough to walk until his final days of college, he never had a pair of shoes that really fit.

I have seen my children's feet through an X-ray machine and have known for a fact that there are a good two sizes to go before he outgrows them. In the two short blocks from the store to the car, there is growth beyond belief and he is saying, "Mom! These shoes are pinching my toe and rubbing my heel."

You could buy 135 pairs of shoes in assorted sizes and not once during the entire year would your child fit in one of them. That's the ways kids' feet are.

There are other mysteries surrounding children's feet. I had a son who took a cab to the bathroom. He never walked anywhere. Everywhere I turned I saw his feet propped up at eye level — on coffee tables, over chairs, on top of the TV set, on the dashboard, on the walls.

I drove him to school right up to his desk. I drove him to ball practice, the library, his friends, houses, to the playground, the activities center, the gym and the drugstore. The kid had virgin feet. Believe me, a piece of lint would have caused him pain. He had his shoes three weeks when he reported there was a hole in the toe.

I figured out once if children's intellect developed at the same rate as their feet, by the time they were five they could speak 15 languages, debate Freud (and win), explain Plato, outwrite Shakespeare, challenge Einstein and make parents obsolete.

You have probably wondered why more children don't run away from home. The truth is, their feet hurt. They go through life with nose tissues stuffed in the toe or their toe stuffed in the toe.

I don't know what the answer is, but until children's feet are given scientific priority, the little toddler with the flipper feet that slap with every step will always be with us.

Committee Restoring Famous Hall While Preserving Architecture

THOMASVILLE, N.C. (Special) — Initial restoration efforts at Brooklyn's historic Borough Hall have been noted with the completion of the Conference Room. Carefully preserving the architecture and creating decorative backgrounds appropriate for important Borough Hall functions are the goals of the Borough Hall Restoration Foundation.

David D. Lee, Home Fashion Director of Abraham and Straus, Brooklyn's leading department store, was asked to design and decorate key reception rooms. With the approval of the Foundation, faithful reproductions and noteworthy adaptations from mahogany collections were chosen for their beauty, usefulness and authenticity.

The highboy is expressive of all the characteristic design details of the period. For example, the hardware is solid brass; the carvings on the cabriole legs are replicas of authentic acanthus carving so popular during Queen Anne's reign.

Chippendale styling is beautifully adapted in the sofa table. Open fretwork along the apron and the bamboo turnings, reminiscent of the Oreint, blend 18th century decorative motifs.

For color direction, talented designer Lee went to the flag of Brooklyn. Various shades of blue suggested the color scheme. He said, "Royal Blue, the color of the carpeting and selected upholstered pieces, is an ideal backdrop for the mahogany furnishings. The color suggests dignity and creates the appropriate ambience for a reception area and an office. It's important that the area does not have a residential feeling."

The authentic taupe shade in the walls is beautifully accented with sparkling white paint on doors and selected moldings. It's all a very pleasing background for the priceless oil portraits of past Borough presidents.

Supporting the restoration are many manufacturers. In addition to Thomasville Furniture Industries, Milliken, Lee's Carpets and Sunset Lighting have provided products. 20th Century Workroom and Lee Upholstery Company also have donated services.

Borough Hall has a long and colorful history. Although the cornerstone was laid April 28, 1836, construction was suspended the following year when a general economic crisis made it impossible to market the bonds for the building's completion. Final work was not completed until 1849. Today, Borough Hall is one of New York City's finest Greek Revival buildings.

The front of the building has an imposing portico with six fluted Ionic columns rising three stories above a broad flight of steps which sweep up to the entrance. A single pediment surmounts the columns above the cornice line of the roof. At the center, above the main roof, is a handsome Georgian eclectic domed cupola with a clock below.

The building has served as a City Hall and as a seat of government for more than 50 years, as the executive office of the Borough of Brooklyn for the 80 years since its union with the City of New York in 1898.

Earlier this year, Borough Hall was designated a national landmark and officially listed in the National Register of Historic Places. Matching grant-in-aid funds of historic preservation under the National Historic Preservation Acts are available.

Borough Hall Restoration Foundation, under the chairmanship of Robert Tammaro, is actively working to raise funds from private and public sources to continue the restoration program.

Almost 14,000 home fires in the United States last year had their beginning in fireplaces, according to New Mexico State University extension specialists.

CHARACTERISTIC DESIGN — The Conference Room near Borough President Howard Golden's office includes several key reproductions of 18th century furnishings including this highboy and sofa table.

DEAR ABBY

Facts On Transsexualism Save Man's Life

DEAR ABBY: Nearly three years ago, I saw a letter in your column from a man who was tormented and frustrated because he had always felt that he should have been a woman. He said he was not a homosexual, but he felt like a woman with a man's body.

You advised him to contact the Janus Information Facility for legitimate, enlightening literature concerning this condition.

Abby, since I also had those feelings, I wrote for the literature, and was put in touch with doctors who studied my case. After much soul-searching, I know now that I am a transsexual.

I am now living happily as a woman. I was scheduled for a sex-change operation at John Hopkins, but that type of operation is no longer performed there because the surgeons who specialized in it left for other hospitals, so I am going to Cleveland.

Abby, had it not been for your column, I wouldn't have known where to turn. I was so miserable I was on the verge of suicide!

Please advise others with this problem to get help through a legitimate source as I did. And make it plain that not everyone who thinks he wants to be of the other sex is a candidate for a sex-change operation. Before surgery is permitted, the doctors make sure the person is a true transsexual for whom surgery is the only answer.

Thank you for saving my life.

GERI

DEAR GERI: I'm glad you wrote. Anyone interested in up-to-date literature concerning transsexualism may write to Dr. Paul Walker, 1952 Union St., San Francisco, Calif. 94123. Please enclose a stamped, self-addressed long envelope for a reply.

DEAR ABBY: Isn't it a pity that wigs for men aren't as acceptable to society as wigs for women? Women today can wear wigs without encountering any snide remarks. Not so for men.

If society were to wholeheartedly endorse wigs for men, it would not only be a bonanza for the economy, it would be a big boost for the balding man's ego. I would appreciate your comments.

MOTHER OF A BALDING SON

DEAR MOTHER: Hairpieces or toupees (please, not "wigs") are big business today. There are any number of men who wear them and joke about it publicly. Of course, there are many who wear them quietly. (Some hairpieces look so natural they aren't detectable.)

How a man feels about himself is far more important than how "society" perceives him. There are a lot of men out there who have lost no sleep over lost hair. A pox on "society."

***

DEAR ABBY: After reading the letter from NO COMPLIMENTS, I just had to write.

Exhibit On Ancient Farmers Prepared For Tour Of U.S.

CAIRO, Egypt (AP) — An exhibit is being prepared here for a tour of U.S. farm states, showing how ancient Egyptians tilled the Nile Valley. It also includes wheat and barley seeds found in King Tut's tomb.

The Heritage Center of Bismark, N.D., is host of the first exhibit early next year, according to Sheryle D. Ameen, representing a group of Arab-Americans participating in the program.

"The exhibit traces the development of agriculture in ancient Egypt and shows the early tools and technology used — the beginning of civilization," Miss Ameen said.

The Egyptian Museum, the home of the famous King Tutankhamen collection, and the Egyptian Museum of Agriculture are offering 60 items that are 3,500 to 7,000 years old. They range from statues of farmers and deities to tools and seeds.

A reciprocal exhibit from North Dakota to Egypt also is planned. North Dakota and the governorate of Giza, site of the Sphinx and Egypt's most famous pyramids on the outskirts of Cairo, declared themselves "sisters" in 1975 after a visit to Cairo by the governor of the American state.

The exhibit is sponsored in part by the National Endowment for the Humanities and by the Naif S. Attiyyeh Foundation, supported by Americans of Arab origin in rural areas of the U.S.

"The exhibits are intended to be a cultural exchange that illustrates how the ancestors of both people lived centuries ago," Miss Ameen said. The exhibit from North Dakota will focus on how the American Indians and early settlers lived and worked in farm communities in the U.S.

"Doctors are looking forward to being able to support more patients who in the past would not have been considered worth the risk of infection to provide the central venous line," he said.

Patients who stand to benefit, he said, include those with extremely bad burns — which can boost the need for calories to as much as three times normal as the body struggles to repair itself — and those whose cancer therapy makes them unable to keep down ordinary food.

"In three words it is: life, death and renewal," Miss Ameen said in an interview. "This is what we want to show."

Miss Ameen was assisted in the selection of the items from Egypt by Egyptologists from the museum at the University of Pennsylvania. An Egyptian among them, Zahi Hawass, traveled with her to Egypt recently to help.

The exhibit will include the seeds taken from King Tut's tomb, and from earlier periods dating back 7,000 years, said Hawass. The earlier ones are from a settlement in the western Nile Delta known as Beni Salama, the first known farm community site in Egypt.

FDA Approves Intravenous Solution

NEW ORLEANS (AP) — Federal approval of a high-calorie liquid nutrient should mean an end to weight loss for hospital patients who have not been able

Bank Robberies Attributed To Death Wish

SAN DIEGO (UPI) — Pain from the cancer that is killing James Johnson Jr. drove him to a desperate series of bank robberies in hopes police would kill him and end his agony, Johnson's neighbors and family say.

U.S. Customs agents stopped Johnson, 52, last week at Calexico on the U.S.-Mexico border as he tried to re-enter the United States. A check through the national crime computer in Washington found he was wanted for a $35,000 bank robbery in Los Angeles and FBI agents took him into custody.

Although the arrest warrant named only one robbery, Johnson is suspected of holding up three branches of the Western Federal Savings and Loan Association and taking a total of $46,000 — all because of what friends and family said was a "death wish."

Johnson, a previously convicted bank robber, was identified as the suspect in the robberies when a witness took down the license number of a getaway truck. Johnson was a janitor at UCLA. He moved to Southern California last year from Arkansas.

A neighbor, Arthur Wilson, said Johnson's lung cancer caused severe pain and that recent surgery had left a hole in his back.

"He's probably out robbing banks," Wilson said, "to get someone to — well, you know."

Wilson's son, Arthur Jr., said he thought Johnson may have robbed the banks in an effort to get someone to kill him.

"He wants someone to take him out," he said.

to get enough calories from intravenous feeding, according to a spokesman for a drug manufacturer.

Food and Drug Administration approval of the solution, IntraLipid, will be announced in next week's issue of the Federal Register, said Ronald DeVore of Cutter Laboratories of Berkeley, Calif., which will market it.

Up to now, intravenous solutions fed into an arm vein could provide fewer than 1,000 calories a day, Mel Snyder, a Cutter spokesman, said this week at a meeting of the American Society for Parenteral and Enteral Nutrition.

"That was not enough to keep most patients at their usual weight, he said.

"What the doctor and patient basically pray for is that the patient will get well quick enough to begin eating before he depletes the blood proteins which protect him against infection," Snyder said.

The only way a doctor could ensure a full calorie count was to insert a feeding tube just outside the heart, he said. But that left patients open to the risk of infection.

"The end of this catheter is lying just outside the heart, and any infection will be immediately transmitted to the valves of the heart and could be fatal," Snyder said.

With the newly approved solution, he said, patients can take in up to 2,500 calories through a vein in the arm, and more through the catheter.

Snyder described the approval as a breakthrough that would let community hospitals treat patients who otherwise would have to go to a medical center to have a catheter implanted.

"Doctors are looking forward to being able to support more patients who in the past would not have been considered worth the risk of infection to provide the central venous line," he said.

Patients who stand to benefit, he said, include those with extremely bad burns — which can boost the need for calories to as much as three times normal as the body struggles to repair itself — and those whose cancer therapy makes them unable to keep down ordinary food.

You and the Law

Presented by the State Bar of Texas

Q: My husband deserted me after we were married only six or seven months and I have no idea where he is now. We have no children or possessions. Is there a way I can have our marriage dissolved without paying court and lawyer fees?

A: Anyone may file her own lawsuit, but we recommend that you consult an attorney to make certain the marriage is dissolved by divorce or annulment.

As part of the lawsuit, you will need to locate your husband or to publish notice to him in the appropriate newspaper. There are also court costs, but if you cannot afford these expenses, the law provides that you may file a Pauper's Oath.

Since your marriage is a matter of public record, you will want the fact of divorce on permanent file in the County where you live.

Q: Is there a formula for determining the size of a lawyer's fee for handling an estate, or is the fee negotiable?

A: You've asked about one of the biggest problem areas between lawyers and their clients. At your first meeting with an attorney on any matter, you should discuss the fee structure.

To answer your question, there really isn't any set formula. A small estate could require a lot of work; a large estate might be settled relatively quickly. A lawyer can predict the services that normally would be performed and can estimate the fee based on the amount of work needed. Remember that you may discuss fees with one or several attorneys before you hire counsel to settle the estate.

Q: Is there any way we can be released from responsibility for our 17-year old son?

A: A married 17-year old is no longer a minor for whom you are responsible, but if your son is single, two courses are open to you. You may bring a suit to terminate the parent-child relationship. Another adult will then be appointed managing conservator until the child is 18.

Since this may be a more severe step than you wish to take, you may instead have your son petition the Court to remove his disabilities — that is, declare him an adult. A minor may bring this suit when he is 17, or when he is 16 if he lives away from home.

Q: We put a fence about a foot on our side of the boundary line rather than cut down trees on the boundary. Can the owner of the adjacent land ever claim ownership to all the land on his side of our fence instead of just to the boundary line?

A: In order to protect your rights to your property outside the fenced area, you should continue to pay all taxes pursuant to that property. Do continue to inform the adjacent owner that the land is not his, and demand and prevent him from constructing any improvement or otherwise occupying the disputed land. If you fail to do these things for a period of years, then your neighbor may eventually make some claim of ownership, based on your relinquishment of the land.

Q: Does a municipal utility district have the right to tax a motor vehicle with water and sewer hook-ups? I'm told this is a "Reserve Capacity Fee."

A: Under the Texas Water Code that regulates the utility districts, a unit is authorized to supply water and collect and remove waste. The district may set a fee for connecting a motor vehicle into this service, although that particular wording, "Reserve Capacity Fee," is not specifically named in the law.

Send your questions to "You and the Law," State Bar of Texas, P.O. Box 12487, Austin, 78711. Answers may appear in columns in hypothetical terms, personal answers not possible.

Robbers Familiar With Surroundings

SACRAMENTO, Calif. (AP) — Four masked robbers who held up parishioners at gunpoint during a service apparently were familiar with the church, police said.

But authorities said they had few other leads in the holdup this week. The robbers, two men and two women, had nailed shut some of the exits of the Calvary Assembly of God Church in suburban Rio Linda before they entered, police said.

One of the robbers forced a woman to walk down the aisles with a pillowcase, collecting valuables from the 30 parishioners. Another robber went into a room where children were staying and made threats against their safety, one victim said.

Canadians Fear New Energy Regulation

DALLAS (UPI) — While deregulation of the energy industry is drawing plaudits from U.S. oil and natural gas producers, officials in the energy-rich western Canadian provinces fear a new energy policy there, which increases regulation, is going to drive resource development south of the border.

Robert McClelland, British Columbia minister of mines and resources, was in Dallas recently to dissuade oil and gas producers from moving rigs out of Canada to new developments in the United States.

The meeting with executives from 20 companies ended a quick tour of the state and similar meetings in Houston, Fort Worth, El Paso and San Antonio.

In October, Prime Minister Pierre Trudeau, in an effort to increase national income and Canadian control in the energy industry, announced the National Energy Program. The program decreased incentives for exploration and development of oil and natural gas and implemented taxes on production to purchase multinational corporations.

"A few years ago the program would not have hit us so hard. But with the moves made to deregulate (in the United States) and the resources available in the Southwest, people now have somewhere to go," he said.

The long-term effects of the program on British Columbia could cost citizens $1.2 billion in lost revenues and increased taxes through 1984.

"Our province, though larger than Texas in size, has a population of only 2 1/2 million so you can see what a serious effect that is," McClelland said. McClelland said British Columbia, Alberta and Saskatchewan are fighting the program on economic and constitutional grounds through lobbying efforts and may file suits to contest it.

In what is developing as a confrontation of western and eastern provinces, McClelland said officials would attempt to show the eastern provinces the harm the program will mean to their manufacturing interests if investors pull out of western Canada.

State Official Matches Funds With Texans

AUSTIN (AP) — If you see Laura Lynn Addikison of Dallas, tell her Leonard Baker has $4.55 he would like to give her.

Baker, who recently sent a $24,000 check to a Houston man, also has 75 cents for Rick Sweat, formerly of Amarillo.

The state tries to match Texans with their unclaimed bank accounts, inheritances or insurance benefits, and Baker, director of the escheat division of the state treasurer's office, is in charge.

"More than likely we're not going to find them," Baker said.

At any one time, the treasurer has about $14 million in unclaimed funds. The state spends the money, but will reimburse owners who come forward.

The state gets the money after it lies dormant for seven years. Financial institutions, insurers and corporations must send in the funds after failing to find the owners.

"We run an ad in a newspaper in the city of the last-known address on accounts of $5 or more," Baker said. "We run them one time and one time only."

Now there's another way for Texans who think they are long-lost heirs to find out if Baker has any money for them. Mark Burris, 26, soon will publish his first Burris Escheatage Report.

For $178 per year, Burris will send you a monthly list of unclaimed funds.

"The people at the treasurer's office were excited, very cooperative and maybe amazed that someone would take an interest in publishing this information," Burris said at his Austin office-apartment.

Burris admits his market is collection agencies and lawyers who can make a buck by connecting the unclaimed funds with the rightful owners.

The money becomes the state's as soon as it is reported to Baker. However, there is no statute of limitations on claiming the money. If you can prove it's yours, you can claim it any time.

Oriental Rug Showing

A large selection of handmade Oriental and Persian Rugs (new and old). Kerman-Kashan-Tabriz-Ardebil-Suk-Saruk.

Good handmade Oriental Rugs are recognized as one of the finest investments on today's market. You will appreciate these values!

Concord House is proud to present this fabulous showing and sale

Oriental rugs and carpets have been protected for centuries and the rugs and carpets produced today are the same in almost every respect as those produced 500 years ago. The best known and most beautiful rugs come from Persia but there also excellent pieces that come from China, Afghanistan, Turkey, Pakistan, India and Romania. There are other countries in Asia and Africa who produce handmade rugs, but we do not have enough space here to enumerate all of them. All these rugs are made of wool. There are exceptions such as some of the Persian Qum that are made of pure silk. One may ask why is a hand made oriental rug or carpet the most prized and sought after of all floor coverings? The main reasons are:

- 1) An oriental rug, being entirely hand made, has a guaranteed durability, even accidental damage can be repaired without decreasing the rug's value. This cannot be said of a machine made rug which once damaged, loses its value.
- 2) The decorative value of an oriental rug in undeniable it greatly enhances a room and creates an immediate impression of friendly warmth on entering.
- 3) Provided it is used with care, the value of an oriental rug increases year by year. It is a safe investment and can be turned into ready cash at any time. It is sometimes believed that oriental rugs and carpets are very expensive items. This is not so. We have many fine pieces that sell at under $500.00. A brief summary of our rugs and carpets, and their characteristics, is as follows:

Persian: The finest pieces come from the towns such as Isfahan, Qum, Kashan, Tabriz and Kerman. In addition there are the nomadic rugs of coarse weave such as Hamadan, Shiraz, Abadek, Afshar and Belouch. We also have Kelims which have no pile, which come in colorful, geometric designs. Chinese: The thickest pile of all carpets and rugs. They are very luxurious and come in embossed Aubusson, Floral and Peking designs. Pakistan: Specialties in Bokhara and Afghan designs and in excellent copies of Persian design. Considerably less expensive than Persian rugs. Afghan: In well known elephant foot designs in red and gold. Useful for offices and hallways. Other designs are also produced. India: Mainly heavy pile. Produced with beautiful pastel backgrounds in Floral, Aubusson or Chinese Peking designs. Turkish: Made of wool, silk and artificial silk. Some rugs rival those of Persia in quality and design. Reasonably priced. Romanian: mainly copies of Persian designs, but we also have large carpets with the Aubusson design made in wool supplied from England. Extremely good value at very low prices.

More Big-Screen TVs Expected In Homes

NEW YORK (UPI) — About 1 percent of color television receivers sold for home use in the United States this year will be big screen systems, but that will change dramatically, says Henry Kloss, who also predicts that Americans will have "viewing rooms" in their homes.

Kloss is a Boston manufacturer and inventor whose designs helped make the big screen TV practical for the home. He told United Press International that at least 22 U.S. and foreign companies are making these receivers to sell for from $2,500 to $4,000 — the lowest price about three times as much as a good standard color receiver.

Kloss, who set out 13 years ago to adapt big screen TV to the home in the hope that it would provide incentive for better programming, thinks it has the potential right now to capture 5 to 8 percent of the unit home color TV market and a much bigger dollar share. General Electric Corp. has made virtually the same prediction.

"I am sure that would be enough to enable the big screen home viewers to have some influence in getting networks and program producers to do a better job," Kloss said.

Kloss thinks big screen home TV will both help and benefit from the videodisc. Many of the movies and other programs recorded on videodiscs were intended for showing on huge theater screens or stages and just do not boil down to the scale of the standard television tube. He says the improvement in reproduction quality on a 5 1/2 by 4-foot home big screen is phenomenal.

Kloss has manufactured 30,000 big screen receivers in the last dozen years, but he concedes that most of them found their way to clubs and bars. But from now on most of the big screens will go into homes, he said, and the impact on the entertainment world will be substantial.

Home big screen TV is ideal for grand opera and any kind of entertainment that requires spectacular staging and scenery and large casts.

The main elements of Kloss's original design for home big screen television are three separate picture tubes for red, green and blue light waves and a picture projection tube using a telescopic principle. Some of his ideas are used in most of systems now on the market.

Kloss's firm, Kloss Video, which is opening a new plant that will increase its capacity ten-fold, makes a big screen home TV receiver called Novabeam.

It consists of a compact receiver-projector with three lenses in the front, from which the picture is projected on the screen from a distance of about nine feet. He said the picture is five times as bright as a typical movie and can be viewed in daylight. It is priced at just under $3,000.

He predicted families will set aside one room in the house, perhaps a basement or attic rumpus room, for big screen television.

Although it can be used for display of business and educational data, Kloss said that, in the present state of the art, big screen home TV is much better suited for colorful entertainment. The present systems will not, for example, increase substantially the amount of text matter that can be satisfactorily transmitted and displayed on an ordinary TV receiver.

But Kloss said he believes specialized home big screen receivers can be designed to accept and display large amounts of text. That could have a big impact on the publishing industries, for example by eliminating use of paper and printing and eliminating shipping books and periodicals.

But that is all in the future.

Writer Updates Economic News

By CHET CURRIER
NEW YORK (AP) — Suppose that, just for the sake of variety, the neighborhood woodchuck decided to do something different on Groundhog Day this year.

Instead of just peeking out of his winter residence for the customary weather forecast, what if he turned his predicting powers to the American economy?

His credentials for the job are certainly good. Like any conventional economist, he is used to working with shadowy figures. And he's familiar with the hazards of sticking his neck out too far.

To give the little marmot a fighting chance in his new assignment, he will need a fill-in on where the economy stands today. That briefing is hereby provided:

While you were busy getting ready for your annual hibernation, Ronald Reagan won the presidency. His election was great for the stock market (the Dow went up 16 points) but his inauguration was not (the Dow went down 20 points).

President Reagan wants to increase military spending, cut taxes drastically, and balance the budget. The experts say that is an impossible combination. But if he does not do it all, and soon, they say, the whole country will feel betrayed.

The recession of 1979 never came. It arrived in 1980, but left again so quickly that many people were sure it would soon be back. It does not appear to have returned yet, though, unless you ask the manufacturers of cars and houses, who report that it has been here all along and shows no sign of going away.

After the oil shortage a while back which resulted in higher prices, there was an oil glut which resulted in higher prices. Last week there was full decontrol of oil, which resulted in higher prices.

The Federal Reserve, according to its critics, has been both too lax and too stringent in controlling the money supply. To be honest about it, just keeping track of the money supply has been a problem.

A few months back, a new method was adopted to try to do a better job, but then along came the NOW accounts in January that threw the calculations out of whack. There also was some mention of Social Security payments distorting the seasonal adjustments, or something like that.

The numbers, in any case, will certainly be revised.

Speaking of Social Security, the payroll tax went up between 8 percent and 24 percent last month. It will go up much further in the next few years, but the system still might collapse.

The weather has been hostile all around. At the same time that it was too cold in the East and too hot in the West, it was too dry almost everywhere.

Oranges froze in Florida. An aunt in Oklahoma writes that the farmers are desperate for rain. A friend in Rhode Island tells of panic buying of peanut butter, which is now selling in New York for $2 or more for an 18-ounce jar.

A lunch of a tuna fish sandwich and a soft drink, in a brown paper bag with a pickle, went up to $3.25 last week at a Manhattan coffee shop.

While inflation keeps roaring ahead, sad to report, some of the inflation investments are not doing so well. Gold is down 40 percent (more if you adjust for inflation) in the past year.

When an occasional bit of good news crops up — say, a rise in industrial production or a drop in unemployment — it depresses all the markets because it implies that interest rates will stay high.

There does not seem to be much point in continuing. The groundhog just scurried back into his burrow for six more weeks. Or maybe a lot longer than that.

Former Iran Captive, Volunteer In Rescue Attempt Old Friends

BELLEVUE, Neb. (AP) — Paul Needham and Charles Williamson played football together at Bellevue High School. Their parents worked shoulder-to-shoulder at Offutt Air Force Base near here.

And when military officials sought a crew to rescue Needham and others held hostage in Iran, Williamson, an Air Force pilot, volunteered — never mentioning he hoped to bring back an old friend.

The mission failed, leaving eight servicemen — five of them Williamson's close Air Force buddies — dead in the Iranian desert.

Last week, in a bittersweet reunion at a homecoming celebration for Needham, the two men honored each other and the eight who died.

"Help us not to forget their sacrifice," Williamson told a somber crowd of about 2,000 outside City Hall as eight red, white and blue banners hung limp below a large yellow one honoring the 30-year-old ex-hostage.

"They gave their lives for freedom in the belief that freedom is all-important," said Williamson, a 29-year-old Air Force captain.

Needham, also an Air Force captain, arrived a little late and bounded up the steps of the speaker's platform to clasp Williamson's hand.

"I want to make certain we remember the eight men who died trying to rescue us. I think of their families an awful lot," Needham said.

In an interview before the ceremony, Williamson said he knew Needham was being held captive in Iran when he volunteered for the rescue mission.

"But I never told anyone I knew him. When you're training as hard as we were, you don't have time to talk or think about things like that," Williamson said.

Needham was one class ahead of Williamson at Bellevue High School. Their fathers worked together at Offutt and their mothers both built bomb parts at a Bellevue munitions factory during the Vietnam War.

Although they played football together, they did not socialize and went their separate ways after high school, Williamson said.

Williamson, who flew in for the ceremony from Eglin Air Force Base in Florida, was representing the Talon Unit of the Air Force's special operations wing. The unit lost eight men when a helicopter collided with a C-130 troop transport plane just after the mission was scrubbed.

"I almost didn't come for personal reasons, but they deserve recognition, too," Williamson said of his fallen comrades.

Williamson said his meeting with Needham on Thursday was the first time the two had talked since Needham was freed from Iranian captivity after 444 days.

"He's tried to call my house several times and has talked to my wife," Williamson said. "I think it was his father who told him when he got back to the states that I was a participant in the rescue mission."

600 Workers Well-Paid For Repairing N-Plant

SAN ONOFRE, Calif. (AP) — They're called "sponges" because of the amount of radiation they absorb on the job, but the 600 workers repairing leaks inside an aging nuclear generator here say the pay is too good to refuse.

"It's boring work, but it's more money than I've ever made before," a 22-year-old college student said of the $600 a week he earns.

"It's hot inside the plastic suit we wear, but you aren't in there for more than two minutes or so," said a 29-year-old construction worker. The two workers declined to allow their names to be used.

The "sponges," or "jumpers," were hired to repair an estimated 7,500 leaking steam generator pipes. The leaks were discovered last April, but inspectors said no radioactive water escaped from the plant.

People from all walks of life showed up to answer a brief newspaper advertisement in a San Diego newspaper last fall.

Southern California Edison Co. is using the volunteers for a month or two at a time, until their radiation limit is reached, and rehiring them after a new three-month exposure period begins.

The Nuclear Regulatory Commission allows the workers to be exposed to 3,000 millirems of radioactivity in three months. A rem is a measure of the damage radiation causes to humans. In an average medical X-ray, an NRC official said, a person is exposed to 20 to 25 millirems of radiation.

Sixty-six regular workers at San Onofre were overexposed last fall. Two weeks ago, Edison was fined $150,000 for what the NRC called lax safety measures and inadequate monitoring.

Since then, worker safety at San Onofre has improved greatly, the NRC says.

Edison, majority owner of the nuclear plant between San Diego and Los Angeles, says it hired 100 health physicists and spent hundreds of thousands of dollars for new protective clothing and radiation monitoring equipment.

The repairs, which are expected to cost $37 million, involve boring out 7,500 of the generator's 10,200 pipes and inserting new metal sleeves. But first thousands of gallons of water and radioactive residue must be flushed out after 12 years of bombardment by radioactive particles.

Edison says it is the first time the process has been tried on a commercial generator.

Two other generators are under construction at San Onofre, which is expected to be closed several more months. Each down day costs Edison customers a reported $400,000 in fuel replacement costs, but Edison says it would cost $100 million and take three years to install a new generator.

Lawmakers Delay Action On Sexual Abuse Bill

AUSTIN (AP) — A Dallas policeman has stunned a House committee with accounts of children who became, in effect, sexual playthings of their parents.

One member of the House Criminal Jurisprudence Committee was ready to send to the House floor immediately

Gov. Bill Clements' bill raising penalties for rape, sexual abuse and injury of children.

The committee wanted more time to study the bill and voted 8-1 Tuesday to send it to a subcommittee, but with orders to bring the measure back on Feb.

17. Detective Tom Sewell of the Dallas Police Department's juvenile section said he had investigated a case in which a mother watched as her husband forced their children to drink his semen. "I didn't know people did this sort of thing to their children. The seven-, eight- and nine-year-olds that we see missed in their homes to an extent you can't believe. We see so much oral sodomy ... it almost becomes commonplace," said Sewell, a 26-year veteran of the police force.

He read aloud the confessions of a Dallas couple who are serving 20-year sentences — the maximum — for sexually abusing the woman's 11-year-old daughter.

The woman said the girl had been compelled to have intercourse with her stepfather and to perform homosexual acts with her.

"When my mother gets tired of having intercourse with my daddy, he makes me have intercourse with him," the girl's statement said.

"Twenty years! With ... early parole and time off for good behavior, this is not enough," Sewell said. "There are cases that deserve punishment. Under the present law, justice cannot be adequately served."

Clements' bill increases the maximum punishment for sexual abuse or rape of a child from 20 years to life and the minimum penalty from two years to five years. It also raises the maximum prison term for indecency with a child from 10 to 20 years and for injury to a child from 20 years to life in aggravated cases.

A KDFW-TV series on child abuse caught the governor's eye, and a videotape was shown to the committee.

"The youngest child raped in Dallas County was two months old," said investigative reporter Tom Steyer, who did the series.

The committee also sent to subcommittee three bills designed to make it easier to obtain aggravated rape convictions. Aggravated rape differs from ordinary rape in the degree of violence and in the punishment.

Each bill would enable a jury to convict a defendant of aggravated rape if the evidence established that the victim feared she would be killed, severely injured or kidnapped.

Texas Senate Approves Paroles Measure

AUSTIN (AP) — The legislative hot potato of reorganizing the Texas Board of Pardons and Paroles Board is in the House now.

Sensors passed on voice vote Tuesday the measure aimed at ending bickering among those who recommend clemency for state prison inmates.

"This is the heart of the governor's anti-crime program," said Sen. Ray Far-abee, D-Wichita Falls, author of the measure.

The administration of the pardons and parole system presently is made up of a three-member board plus six parole commissioners, appointed equally by the governor, the chief justice of the Texas Supreme Court and the chief judge of the Texas Court of Criminal Appeals.

The governor has the final say on all pardons and paroles, after receiving recommendations from the board and parole commissioners.

In recent months there has been a continuing controversy about the large number of parole recommendations turned down by Gov. Bill Clements.

Farabee explained his bill would make the six parole commissioners regular state employees controlled by the board, instead of appointed officials, subject to senate confirmation. The governor would have a new power of selecting the chairman and vice chairman of the three-member board.

He said the bill also provided authorization to spend $4.5 million the next two years for halfway houses where prison inmates nearing the end of their terms could be eased back into civilian life.

"In the past there have been controversies and it was difficult to know who was boss, who was in charge," Farabee said. "This really is an attempt to clarify the responsibilities of the commissioners, it will not take away their power."

He said a special provision retains the parole commissioners' independence with their votes counting equally with those on the board in considering a parole action.

"I wonder if we are just treating the symptom instead of the cause," said Sen. Carlos Truan, D-Corpus Christi, in discussing the numerous parole rejections by Clements.

Legislator Still Proposing Repeal Of State Blue Law

AUSTIN (UPI) — If Rep. Doyle Willis, D-Fort Worth, were running for governor, there would be but one issue in his platform.

"I don't know what other issue there would be other than the blue law," said Willis, a crusty 74-year-old former state senator.

Texas' blue law prohibits stores from selling on Sundays most household and personal items that are not eatable or drinkable, a law Willis said that most Texans want repealed.

"If you can buy beer on Sunday, why can't you buy pantyhose, a hammer or something else you need," he said. "It's a little silly."

Willis always has been a hardcore opponent of the statute that prohibits sale of certain items on Sunday, and he said he thought his bill could gain passage this session. Last session "we didn't even get out of the blocks" and the legislation died in a business and industry subcommittee.

The Fort Worth legislator said lobby organizations that represent large department stores have usually done their share to defeat legislation repealing Texas' blue law. Willis said department stores do not want groceries and other smaller stores competing for the same business on Sundays.

"They also argue that it will force people to work on Sunday, but that old dog won't hunt anymore," he said.

Pharmacists, Consumers Pushing Passage Of Generic Drug Statute

AUSTIN (AP) — Pharmacists and consumer activists want the Legislature to approve a law allowing druggists to substitute lower-cost drugs for brand-name products, but they can't agree on what the law should say.

One pharmacists' group says the best law would be no law.

"We'll be concentrating our efforts on getting the anti-substitution provision simply revoked," said Wayne Beisel, spokesman for the Texas Pharmaceutical Association.

Current law forbids druggists to substitute a cheaper medicine for a name brand unless the prescribing doctor gives written permission.

The Association of Community Organizations for Reform Now supports the Drug Product Selection Act sponsored by Rep. Ted Lyons, D-Mesquite, and Sens. Chet Brooks, D-Pasadena, and Kent Caperton, D-Bryan.

"We will probably be introducing legislation ourselves, getting the anti-substitution provision revoked," Beisel said. He said the association was opposed to the "formulary," a list of approved drugs, included in Lyons' bill.

ACORN spokesman Margot Beutler said the list is a health safeguard, but Beisel said it wasn't needed because a competent pharmacist would not "jeopardize his career by dispensing an inferior drug."

"We are in favor of generic drugs, and we won't oppose Lyons' bill. We just don't like some aspects of it," he said.

Miss Beutler said only Texas and Indiana ban druggists' substituting generic drugs, and that an ACORN survey of drug prices showed consumers could save 20 percent to 40 percent on medicine costs if generics were routinely prescribed.

Clayton Eyes Employee Freeze

AUSTIN (UPI) — House Speaker Bill Clayton's version of a state budget bill would freeze the number of state employees at a level about 6,000 workers below the number called for in the Legislature Budget Board plan.

Clayton filed his own version of a proposed state spending bill Tuesday, trimming $195 million from the bill prepared by the budget board.

Clayton's proposal, co-sponsored by Rep. Bill Pressnall, D-Bryan, chairman of the Appropriations Committee, also would hand statewide elected officials a substantial pay raise.

The bill would fix the salary of all statewide elected officials at the same level as an associate justice of the Supreme Court — meaning some officials would receive raises of up to $8,500 a year.

"We're just putting all elected officials that run statewide on the same basis," Clayton said. "The Department of Agriculture is just as important to agriculture as the supreme court is to the judiciary. We should seek to attract the best candidate we can for those offices."

Clayton, of Springlake, said the budget bill he filed will be the starting point for the Appropriations Committee's budget hearings in the House. The Senate uses the LBB bill as the basis for its budget considerations.

Smoke Detectors Available In Two Types

ring to the relatively small investment involved and the great protection offered.

According to a Better Business Bureau booklet called "Tips on Residential Alarm Systems," smoke alarms are basically of two main types: ionization smoke alarms and photoelectric alarms.

The ionization alarms use a small shielded piece of radioactive material that reacts when there are changes in the flow of electrical currents in the air caused by smoke particles. Ionization devices usually warn of open, flaming fires faster than other heat or smoke detectors, the BBB booklet says.

Photoelectric smoke alarms use a beam of light that, when broken by smoke particles, indicates there is trouble. The BBB publication said large smoke particles, which are produced mainly by smoldering fires, set off photoelectric alarms faster than smaller smoke particles. Thus, photoelectric devices are generally more effective against warning of smoldering fires.

The power source for a smoke alarm can be either house current or batteries. If batteries are used, the consumer should consider what type to use. The power supply of alkaline batteries slowly decreases as they wear out. According to the BBB booklet, some alarms using alkaline batteries for power need periodic adjustment to maintain proper functioning.

Mercury batteries maintain fairly constant voltage, but when they run out of power, the voltage drop is rapid, the BBB booklet says. The detectors are designed so that when battery power fails, the device emits a light or beep to warn the consumer of the failure. With mercury batteries, the power may drop off so suddenly, the warning may be very brief or nonexistent, the BBB booklet warns.

Detectors powered by household current have their drawbacks as well. If the electricity is not working, the detector will not work. There may not be a handy electrical outlet near where the smoke devices will be located and the BBB booklet warns against using power from an extension cord.

Stokes said he felt there were advantages with both household current and battery powered devices, but he personally preferred battery powered detectors.

"But these require care," he said. "A person has to change the batteries from time to time. They are only as good as the maintenance put on them."

In the past, the warnings that batteries are losing power have been relatively brief, Stokes said. Now every smoke alarm has to warn for three weeks that the batteries are failing, he added.

If the consumer prefers to use house current, Stokes recommends putting the detectors on a separate circuit from other electrical uses. That way, if the power on another circuit should fail, the smoke detector circuit is still working.

Some of the newer detectors operate on household current with a battery backup if current should fail.

Stokes said new homes are required by law to have smoke detectors in or near every bedroom. As for the houses in Lubbock that weren't equipped with detectors, he said residents are installing the smoke detectors regularly, some of them elaborate installations.

"People are beginning to realize these things save lives," Stokes said. He added that he is surprised an enterprising insurance company hasn't offered lower rates to homeowners who have smoke detectors.

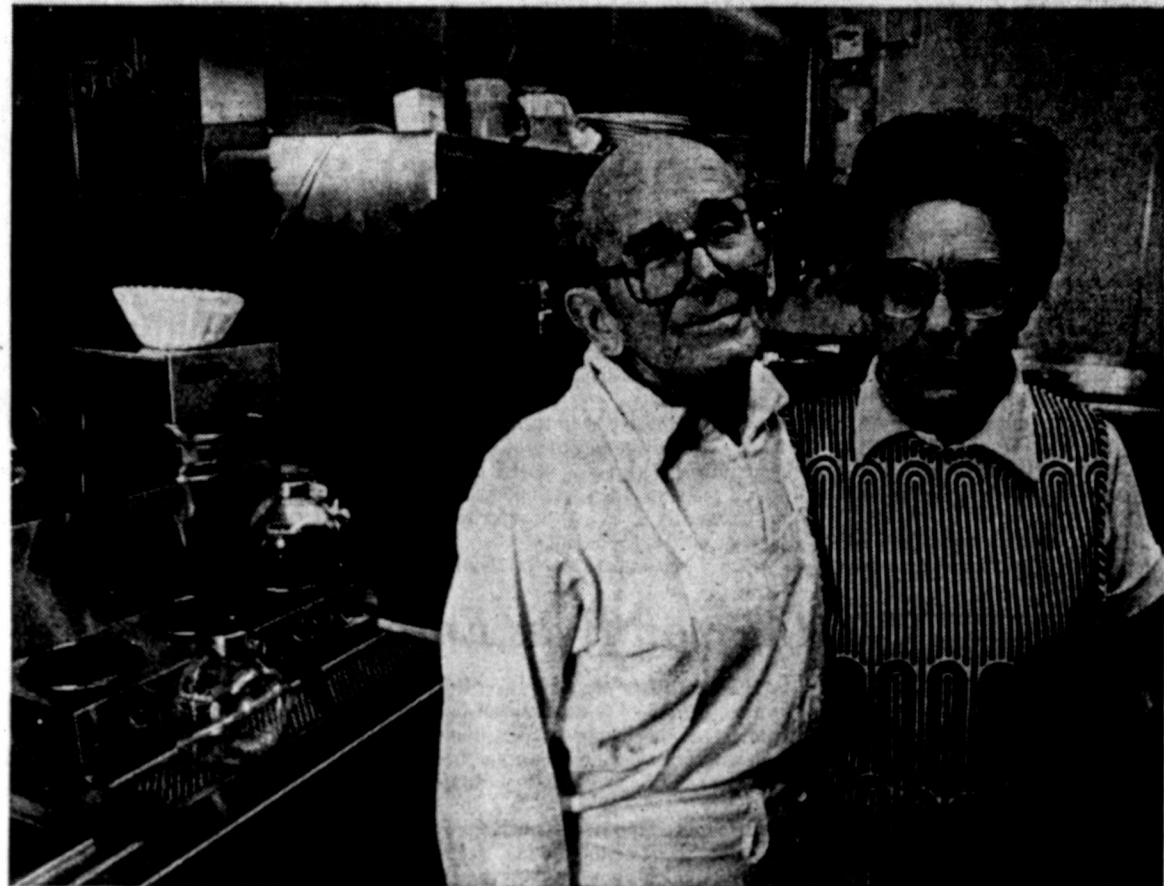

"Every second is of the utmost importance to fire suppression people," Stokes said.

Each minute might amount to hundreds or thousands of dollars in damages, he said.

Underwriters Laboratories is an independent testing laboratory that tests performance levels in smoke detectors, as well as many other items used in the home. If a device passes the UL test, it is given a seal that the manufacturer can display on the packaging. The BBB recommends that consumers do not buy any smoke detector that does not have the UL seal of approval.

The BBB booklet "Tips on Residential Alarm Systems" is free at the South Plains BBB at 1015 15th St. In addition to smoke detector information, the booklet lists suggestions for locations of smoke detectors and also information on home burglar alarm systems.

SINCE 1925 — Hot Shot restaurant proprietors Buck and Ola Peveto have seen Lubbock grow from a small town from their 814 Main St. vantage point. Peveto has been working at the restaurant since 1925, and his wife has helped him since their marriage in 1932. The restaurant's specialty, chili, has not changed over the years. ## Longtime Owners Of Restaurant Note Many Changes In Lubbock said. "It took the roof off and tore the walls down."

They rebuilt, however, and re-opened six months later with the restaurant as it is today.

On the south wall, they have a series of photographs of the Hot Shot in its various stages over the decades.

The restaurant does not stay open on Saturdays anymore. With the disappearance of the harvest hand, it caters mainly to the courthouse crowd and closes at 5 p.m. Monday through Friday.

Asked what it takes to run a successful business through more than a half-century, Peveto said, "You've got to really work at it. You've got to stay with it and watch your p's and q's, and you've got to have a good wife to help you.

"My wife has been a real help. She's been the main ramrod."

Mrs. Peveto has been especially important in recent months, he said, since he was diagnosed as having a malignant tumor on a kidney and operated on Dec. 24. The restaurant was closed through the holidays and re-opened Jan. 5.

Peveto has been taking daily radiation treatments, he said, and has been able to spend increasing time at work.

"Lubbock is still about the same type of town as it's always been," he said. "The businesses are scattered now. Everything used to be on Main and Broadway, but now it's scattered all over town."

"The people are still about the same. Everybody lived about equal, and everybody didn't want too much then, like they do now. They were more content with what they had.

"Things have been changing all along for the last 20 years. The modern days are pretty good if you can get any help to help you work. That's the trouble nowadays. Help is so hard to find."

Peveto said he has had a relatively untroubled career, adding, "People are easy to get along with."

He has been robbed only once — by an employee who broke in after hours and stole $25 about 30 years ago — and has never had a fight or other memorable trouble among customers.

He and his wife have three children, Kenneth Peveto and Mary Lynn Parker, both of Dallas, and Ginger White of Lubbock. They have eight grandchildren.

Water Board Vote Under Investigation

Criminal District Attorney John Montford's office is looking into possible voting irregularities in last month's water board election based on Lubbock County Tax Assessor-Collector Frank Stuart's report that 22 unregistered voters may have cast ballots in the race.

Montford filed a motion in 99th District Court Tuesday asking the court to impound all election records from the Jan. 17 Lubbock County Water Control Improvement District No. 1 race. He said the motion was filed on behalf of his office after an examination of Stuart's report and has nothing to do with a defeated water board candidate's plans to contest the election.

Lubbock pharmacist Dale Miller, a three-year veteran of the board, has indicated he may file suit to contest the results of the election. An official canvass of votes Monday in that election showed Miller lost the race by 18 votes to firefighter George Whitworth.

Miller charged Monday that 22 of the persons who voted absentee in the election were not qualified voters. He indicated earlier that the number of unregistered voters — if proven — were enough to hand him the election.

Spanish Network Added To Cable TV

By CELESTE HENLEY
A-J Television Editor

Spanish-language television has been introduced to Lubbock viewers with the advent this week of Spanish International Network and GalaVision.

The former is a basic cable service, airing on cable channel 10, 24 hours daily. Programming includes movies, novels, live coverage of sporting events, specials, news and variety, comedy and public service shows.

GalaVision, according to Jim Brown, general manager of Lubbock Cable TV, is comparable to Home Box Office. This is a pay station for Spanish-speaking subscribers and offers approximately 70 hours per week of first-run movies, novels, specials and sporting events, all presented uncensored and without commercial interruptions.

GalaVision, like HBO, is on a convert-and-persons having one may tune into cable channel 21 for programming.

"We had no other choice, since the Spanish International Network is on the air 24 hours daily," Brown said of the cancellation of WFAA and KERA programming from cable channel 10.

"We have moved WFAA to cable channel 12, signing on at 11 p.m. daily after the Texas Tech radio station signs off, and continuing until Tech signs on in the morning. We have completely dropped KERA, since it was in competition with our own public broadcast station," Brown said. "We feel it is our duty to get behind our local station and give it our full support. During fund-raising drives, we learned that some area viewers were sending donations to KERA instead of supporting Channel 5."

"Everyone has phoned who could phone," admitted Brown in talking about the deletion of the Fort Worth/Dallas stations. "The biggest complaint has been about the news carried on WFAA. However, it is the corporation's position that we serve all the populace of Lubbock and we have had innumerable requests for Spanish programming, both the network and GalaVision."

Brown added that the changing of WFAA to cable channel 12 is temporary, because Lubbock Cable TV has ordered sufficient equipment to carry eight to 10 additional channels "effective as early as May or as late as June."

"WFAA is a strong consideration when we add the channels," Brown said. Other considerations are the Cable News Network, WOR New York and ESPN, a sports network comparable to cable channel 6.

Brown said that over the weekend more than 250 viewers subscribed to GalaVision, and numbers were not available for new subscribers due to the added Spanish-speaking network.

Judge Sets 25-Year Term In Attempted Rape Case

By KIM COBB
Avalanche-Journal Staff

Carlos Aguirre was sentenced to 25 years imprisonment Tuesday for the July 5, 1980, attempted rape of a young Slaton woman — but it took three trials to reach what prosecutors hope is the end of the line for Aguirre's unusual case.

The 28-year-old man already has faced trial twice on the same first-degree felony charge of burglary of a habitation with intent to commit rape. His first trial resulted in a deadlocked jury and the 40-year sentence handed down by a second jury was overturned when the defense attorney produced evidence that jurors had discussed possible parole in computing his sentence.

Jurors in Judge John McFall's 237th District Court deliberated about 25 minutes Tuesday before finding Aguirre guilty of breaking into the woman's house and attempting to rape her. The defendant elected to receive punishment from the judge, who handed down the 25-year-sentence just minutes after the jury's guilty verdict.

Before this week's court proceedings, Aguirre turned down an offer by the Criminal District Attorney's office which would have allowed the defendant to plead guilty and accept a 15-year prison term rather than face a third trial.

The victim reportedly was reluctant to testify against her assailant again in what was her fourth trip to the witness stand. She had testified against Aguirre in a pre-trial bond reduction hearing as well as his three trials.

but so did two Slaton police officers who had stopped at the woman's house to investigate the screams they heard while on routine patrol in the neighborhood.

Berlanga countered that the only face-to-face contact the victim had with her attacker was at the front door. The man who tried to rape her, he argued, threw her face-down on the floor and flipped off the light.

He also asked jurors to consider why his client, if he had committed the crime, would have waited in his car behind the house, where Aguirre was arrested, if he had been guilty of a crime.

"Waiting for what?" Berlanga asked. "He didn't have any reason to run."

Aguirre took the witness stand — as he did in his two previous trials — to tell jurors he was in his car behind the woman's house not because he had been inside the residence, but because he had thrown up a large amount of liquor.

The defendant told the jury he went to a friend's house at about 8 p.m. and stayed two hours while drinking. After that visit, he went to play dominos with some friends at a service station, Aguirre testified.

He was on his way home sometime after 10:30 p.m. when he was forced to pull his car off the road, he continued.

"My stomach started hurting," Aguirre told the jury, adding that he stopped the car and got out to throw up. He was out of the car about five minutes then crawled into the vehicle to lie down when police approached him, he testified.

The defendant acknowledged hearing testimony from the woman that he was the man who had broken into her home through a front door, taken a shotgun from her hands and attempted to undress her until the arrival of the police.

"Is that a true statement Carlos?" Berlanga asked.

"No sir," Aguirre answered.

"Did you attempt to rape her?" Berlanga asked.

"No sir," Aguirre answered.

Local Bondsmen Rap Revised Jail Policy

gree felony, the staff will come in on a weekend to handle the filing of charges, he said.

Montford said his office also responds, even on weekends, if an attorney calls regarding a temporary bond for a client. But he emphasized that the office could not run around the clock.

And Montford added he is not inclined to question the sheriff's procedures. Managing the bail bond situation is the sheriff's responsibility, he said.

But bondsmen are hopeful they can convince Keesee to make some changes in the temporary bonding policy. They also would like to see more flexibility in the jail's daytime schedule.

"They've got it cut down so we can't get anybody out of jail except for a few hours each day," complained National Bonding Co. owner Sonny Byrd.

Byrd said prisoner releases are not permitted during mealtimes or visiting hours. If necessary paperwork cannot be completed before one of these periods, an individual must sit in jail another two or three hours, the bondsmen said.

Another problem, according to Byrd, involves individuals who are arrested for DWI or public intoxication.

State law requires persons arrested for drinking to be held at least four hours. In the past, the four-hour period started when the individual was arrested, Byrd said.

However, the new policy requires the four hours to begin after a suspect is booked, Byrd said. If there is a backlog in booking at the jail, he said, an individual probably will be detained all night.

Byrd said he sees the need for "some minor changes" on the release time procedures.

Negotiations With Polish Solidarity Break Down

WARSAW, Poland (AP) — Talks broke down between striking workers and the government in the southern city of Bielsko-Biala, and Deputy Administration Minister Czeslaw Kotela returned to Warsaw, Polish state radio reported today.

Solidarity trade union leader Lech Walesa, who was attempting to mediate an end to a nine-day-old general strike in Bielsko-Biala, told The Associated Press by telephone, "I am still optimistic," but added:

"Whatever we are doing here is forced upon us by life. We don't want to go on striking anywhere. But we are constrained to do so."

"We are not afraid, and even if we should lose — it's better to fall standing upright than to go ignominiously backward."

The general strike is to support allegations of official corruption in Bielsko-Biala, and Walesa traveled there Tuesday from Rzeszow, which is 130 miles to the east.

Deputy Agriculture Minister Andrzej Kacala was supposed to return to Rzeszow today to continue negotiations on the demand of private farmers to form an independent union, or Rural Solidarity.

Walesa and Kacala met Monday in Rzeszow. On Tuesday, Kacala went to Ustrzyki Dolne, 50 miles to the southeast on the Soviet border, to meet with disgruntled farmers there.

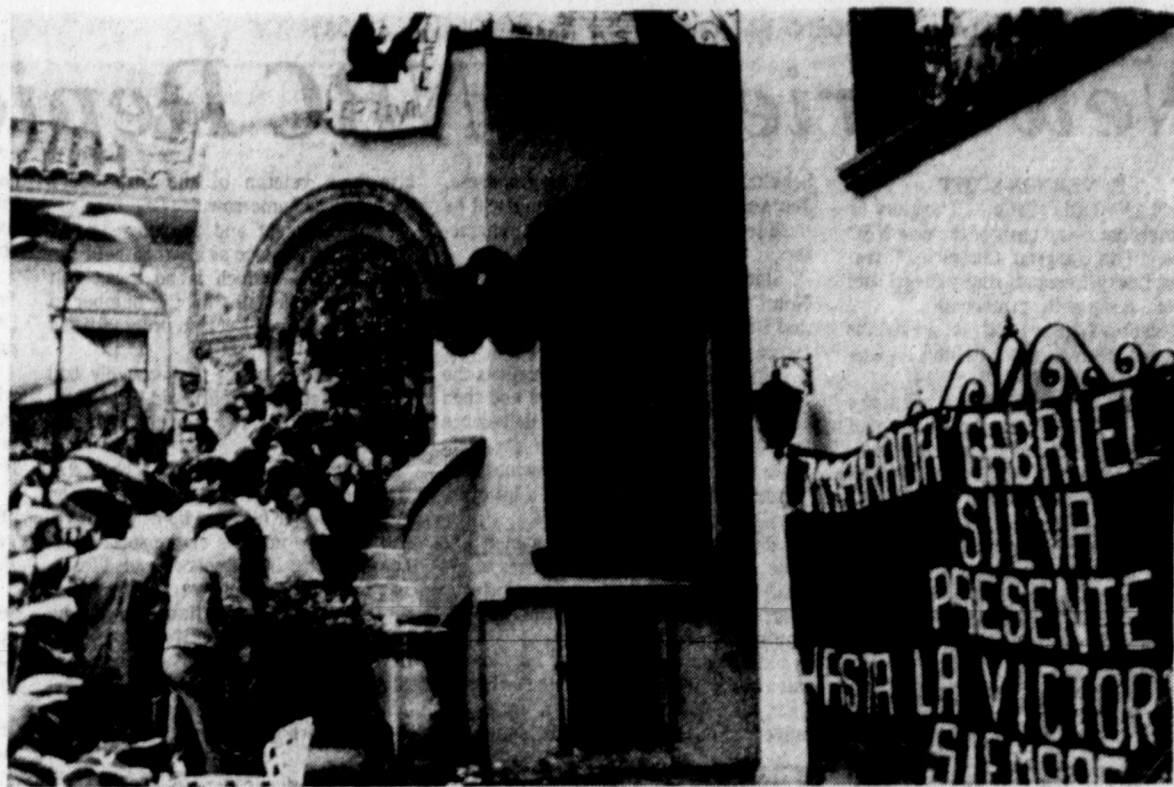

Another government negotiator, Jan Jablonski, met in Jelenia Gora, 280 miles west of Rzeszow, with workers demanding the removal of Trade Union Affairs Minister Stanislaw Ciosek for alleged misconduct in office.

Bielsko-Biala's provincial governor and three deputy governors resigned Tuesday under pressure from the local chapter of Solidarity, which also wants the mayor and deputy mayor of the provincial capital to quit, Warsaw Television reported.

The union accused the officials of misconduct in office, and the TV report said Premier Josef Pinkowski would consider the resignations today.

Bielsko-Biala is a textile center, and the leader of the Polish Communist Party, Stanislaw Kania, said the first six days of the strike there cost $70 million in lost production.

Kania, speaking to a committee preparing for a party congress next month, accused Solidarity of seeking to become a "political opposition party" and of spreading anarchy. He opposed an independent farmers' union, saying, "Is the countryside to be a scene of cooperation between the people's regime and peasant-farmers, or is it to be the scene of political struggle?"

Peru Wants Markers Placed Along Border

LIMA, Peru (AP) — Peru has called for demarcation of its border with Ecuador along the disputed 50-mile mountainous stretch where the armed forces of the two South American neighbors battled for five days last week.

Acting Foreign Minister Felipe Osterling told a news conference Tuesday military observers from the United States and three other nations confirmed that a cease-fire was in force in the area "and that the only thing we had done was to oust the invaders from our territory and re-establish peace in our zone."

"The next step," he continued, "and we are sure that they will agree, is to place the border markers along our frontier to keep these incidents from ever happening again."

The placement of border markers along the crest of the Condor mountain range about 800 miles north of Lima began after a border war between the two countries in 1941 and a 1942 treaty establishing the boundary.

The demarcation stopped in 1951, leaving the 50-mile gap, when President Galo Plaza Lasso of Ecuador declared the treaty void. He said the discovery of the Cenepa River in the area gave Ecuador the right to additional territory on the eastern slopes that would give it access to the Marañon and Amazon Rivers.

Peru's ground and air forces went into action last Wednesday against three military posts which Ecuador established last month on the Peruvian side of the border as defined by the 1942 treaty.

Both sides reported the fighting ended Sunday, and Peru claimed to have driven the Ecuadoreans from all three posts. This was confirmed by a Peruvian news photographer who toured the area Sunday in a Peruvian army helicopter.

The United States, Argentina, Brazil and Chile sent military attaches from their embassies in Lima and Quito to the Condor as cease-fire observers because they were guarantors and co-signers of the 1942 treaty. But there was no independent report of their findings available yet.

North Korea Attacks Aid To Neighbor

TOKYO (AP) — North Korea's Communist Party newspaper today denounced President Reagan's pledge of military aid to South Korea as "a filthy criminal document... of aggression and war."

It said the communique issued Monday after Reagan met South Korean President Chun Doo-hwan at the White House "was intended to perpetuate the division of Korea, legalize the U.S. imperialists' military occupation of South Korea, reduce South Korea to a permanent colony of the U.S. imperialists and gravely jeopardize Korean reunification and peace and a rare document of treachery for selling the interests of the country and the nation ... to the U.S. imperialist master."

"Reagan must give up at once the reckless maneuvers to persistently pursue the policy of military occupation of South Korea and step up acts of aggression and war against our people," the commentary in Rodong Sinmun said.

"The harder the United States tries to intensify its policy of aggression and war by instigating traitor Chun Doo-hwan isolated within and without, the further it will be isolated and rejected by the world people."

It said Chun must realize that "clinging to the sleeves of the master will never be a means of prolonging his remaining days" and called for his resignation.

First Woman Prime Minister Installed

OSLO, Norway (AP) — King Olav today officially installed Gro Harlem Brundtland as this Scandinavian nation's first woman prime minister and, at 41, the youngest ever.

The ceremony at the royal palace also saw the installation of Mrs. Brundtland's 17-member Cabinet, which included three new ministers and four women.

Mrs. Brundtland, a Harvard-educated doctor and mother of four, was the Labor Party's deputy chairwoman when she was unanimously recommended by party leaders Tuesday to succeed Odvar Nordli, 53. He resigned for health reasons last week after heading a Labor-led coalition government for five years.

From the palace, Mrs. Brundtland went directly to the top floor of the 18-story government building, where she was met by Nordli.

"This is a historical occasion for Norway and for the Nordic countries," he said as he handed over his office keys.

New Series On NBC Depicts Notorious Gangsters

By VERNON SCOTT
HOLLYWOOD (UPI) — The glory of gangsterdom is the basis of the new NBC series, "The Gangster Chronicles," featuring Lucky Luciano, Bugs Siegel and Meyer Lansky as the protagonists.
 Because Lansky still is alive, the name has been changed to Michael Lasker.
 This trio of mafiosi heroes will make their debut Feb. 12 in a three-hour pilot which thereafter becomes a weekly hour dramatic series for the network. Flattering Fred Silverman hopes it will hike NBC's sagging ratings.
 "The Gangster Chronicles" would appear to combine elements of "The Godfather" with the old "Untouchables" series — an inside look at the workings of organized crime abetted by a plenitude of violence.
 In addition to Luciano, Siegel and Lansky, such other felonious names as Al Capone, Arnold Rothstein, Dutch Schultz, Legs Diamond, Vito Genovese, Joe Adonis and Lepke Buchalter will be included in the cast of criminal characters.

 Stars of the new series are Michael Nouri as Luciano, Joe Penny as Siegel and Brian Benben as Lasker, a trinity of terror.
 The three-hour pilot show depicts the three criminals as kids in 1908 and then follows their growth through adolescence into the '20s and '30s when gangsters wore black hats and shirts, white ties, pinstriped suits and attended a lot of funerals for one another.
 The era and the men, or men like them, were the subjects of scores of old Warner Bros. gangster movies, usually starring George Raft, Edward G. Robinson and James Cagney.
 As Luciano, Nouri is the best known member of the cast. He starred as Dracula in the defunct "Cliffhanger" series and appeared in the "Beacon Hill" series. He also is a veteran of the soap opera "Search For Tomorrow."

 An intelligent and passionate actor, Nouri plays Luciano as a sympathetic human being — which is no mean feat when one speculates on the number of cement overcoats Luciano ordered fitted for his enemies.
 "Luciano was not a thoroughly bad man, not at all," Nouri said after completing the first few segments of the show.
 "If you're going to play a character well, you don't see him in terms of good or bad. You see him as a human being reacting to the impacts of the social, economic and family influences in his life."
 "Luciano's strongest motivational force was a desire to find love and be happy, like anyone else. He had a highly developed sense of honor and dignity. I play him from a visceral point of view — not sympathetic, not unsympathetic."
 Nouri, who was signed for the part last summer, took advantage of the actors' strike which delayed the start of the series. He set out to learn all he could about Lucky Luciano.

 He studied such books as "The Last Testament of Lucky Luciano," "Meyer Lansky," "99 Times Guilty" and a biography of Vito Genovese.
 A resident of New York, Nouri — whose father immigrated to the United States from Iraq — hung out at Italian restaurants and bars the length and breadth of Manhattan.
 "I was looking to make contact with anyone who might have known Luciano or any of the other members of the underworld of the period," Nouri said.
 "I got to know one bar and restaurant owner pretty well and told him what I was doing. He was a Sicilian. He taught me a lot of the language, mannerisms and customs of the underworld."
 "The closer you get to a valid source, the less information you get. The mafia was and is deeply a part of their personal and family lives."
 "They all keep extremely low profiles. It's an internationalized thing. Lifestyle and business are closely associated. An outsider has no chance to gain much information and absolutely no trust."
 "The people on the inside would no more discuss their activities and connections than any man would discuss certain things about his wife. It's an attitude I've come to respect."
 "So I was left to my own devices on how to characterize Luciano. I assimilated the information from my research and focused on the key events in his life. I don't use an accent. I wanted to represent the man's emotions and intellect."

 "By virtue of the fact that gangsters are the central figures in the series, I guess you could say they are the heroes. The events are seen through their eyes. Liberties are taken with the facts to create an interesting series. But the show is based on actual occurrences."
 "The series is more interesting than 'The Untouchables' because it deals with the higher echelons of crime, their families and private lives, not just the action — although there is plenty of violence, too. We're much more sophisticated than most crime shows."

"I'll tell you this, it's not like any other TV series you've ever seen."

TV Network Sustains Cartoon To Narrow Margin In Ratings

By PETER J. BOYER
LOS ANGELES (AP) — ABC could not have anticipated with much enthusiasm Super Bowl XV. Not only is ABC the only network that does not get to cash in on the big game, but this particular Super Bowl figured to push NBC ahead of ABC for the third time in four weeks.
 ABC finds itself in a race to stay out of the cellar. What to do? This:
 ABC, knowing a thrashing was inevitable, scheduled a cartoon, "Scooby Goes Hollywood," in the 7-8 time period. That seemed reasonable. No sense sacrificing a hot show to the Super Bowl. Then the network did something that demonstrates just how important network brass think the ratings race is, and how worried ABC's executive corps must really be.
 Instead of just taking a whipping with "Scooby," ABC "sustained" the show, which is TV talk for putting a program on the air without selling advertising time.
 That means that ABC lost a lot of money for that one hour on Sunday. So, why did they do it? Because the A.C. Nielsen Co., which tabulates the network ratings competition, does not count sustained programs in its ratings, since ratings are kept for the purpose of advertising rates.
 Get the picture? By eating that hour, ABC did not take a ratings drubbing because it was not rated at all. ABC still finished last for the week, but the margin of defeat was less than it might have been had "Scooby" been rated. And that ratings point or two might save ABC from last place in the long run, if it is a tight finish for second and third place.

 And some said creativity had dried up at ABC.
 A few weeks ago, Tom Snyder took to the podium at a broadcasters' luncheon here to discuss the matter of responsibility in radio and television.
 He went on about the TV press, and how criticism of the electronic media is very often valid. He denounced "reports that you and I know are not meant to inform, but to titillate."
 Snyder even went so far as to admit his own culpability. He was not proud of some of the things he did in the early days of the "Tomorrow" show, he said. He was not proud of some of the guests he invited to the show for spectacle.
 He was not proud that he used to invite Nazis to the studio, he said.
 "All of us have to do some soul-searching," Snyder said. "Because, friends, we are accountable..."

 Cut to: Studio 3A, NBC New York, set of the new, ethically cleansed "Tomorrow Coast-to-Coast." Last Wednesday night, Tom Snyder appears on the screen.
 To his left sits a heavy-set fellow with puffy face. He is Harold Covington, leader of the American National Socialist Party. A Nazi. Harold will be on the show later, Tom said. Right now, he just wanted to show you his best-up face. He was attacked on his way to the show.
 Harold waves a red cap, claiming it belonged to one of the "15 or 20" thugs who attacked him.
 The spectacle concluded, Harold left the stage and Tom went on with the show.

Chicago Mayor Jane Byrne Upset With Media

CHICAGO (UPI) — Mayor Jane M. Byrne denied her former maid has been placed on the city payroll, but she's done some housecleaning of her own in City Hall.

Mrs. Byrne's press secretary, Ray McCarthy, told reporters this week they no longer will be allowed to "loiter" in the mayor's outer office to quiz mayoral visitors — or the mayor herself.

The mayor also removed a phone used by reporters.

The action reportedly stemmed from news reports the mayor has put her former maid, Johnnie Mae Nix, on the payroll as a $20,300-a-year administrative secretary.

"It's nothing to get excited about," McCarthy told City Hall reporters. He said they will have "the same accessibility as before but are not to go into the outer office without an appointment."

McCarthy also denied reports Miss Nix is the mayor's former maid.

HY GARDNER HAS THE ANSWER: Glad You Asked That!

Let's make all future January 20ths our newest national holiday — "The Rebirth of a Nation" — not only because it marks almost to the moment the day and date our 40th president took his oath of office, but because 52 of our countrymen and women finally gained their freedom after 444 grueling days of enforced and humiliating captivity.

Subtly President Reagan made reference to the climate of our populace in his informal talk at the tailend of the Sinatra-Carson gala when he asked, "How can we love our country without loving our countrymen?" We saw the answer reflected in the eyes and spirit of folks the next day. Instead of being silently dejected, almost everyone appeared to stand tall, proud and confident again. Especially when they heard that the new president invited outgoing President Jimmy Carter to fly to Germany and act as his representative to greet the "hostages."

Random Notes from Our TV-Ringside Seat: When Sinatra sang "Nancy" directly to our newest first lady, her eyes glistened, then fogged. The song, inspired originally by Frank's daughter, Nancy, was written by comedian Phil Silvers, not quite regarded as a sentimentalist. (Some day remind us to relate the incident well worth retelling about when Phil and his longtime friend Frank were in wartime Rome with the U.S.O. and visited the Pope.)

One of so many memorable highlights of the Inaugural gala was listening to Mel Tillis and his fiddling musicians. All seemed to have red hair — or maybe the lighting painted them red. We thought what a laugh it would bring if Henny Youngman came in playing his violin, for a surprise encore — complete with a red wig.

Our most famous living soldier, five-star General Omar Bradley, being rolled into the amphitheatre seated in his wheelchair while General Jimmy Stewart (who went from making movies to WW II combat as a flying Air Force colonel) saluted his commander-in-chief, Ronald Reagan. And when Ronnie (another veteran) jumped to his feet and briskly returned the salute, it provided another unexpected highlight of the evening.

Send your questions to Hy Gardner, "Glad You Asked That," care of The Lubbock Avalanche-Journal, P.O. Box 19620, Irvine, Calif. 92714. Marilyn and Hy Gardner will answer as many questions as they can in their column, but the volume of mail makes personal replies impossible.

Nazi Death Camp Revisited

By PETER J. BOYER
LOS ANGELES (AP) — When Kitty Felix was a youngster in Poland around 1940, she was fascinated by the occupying German troops, drawn by their shining black boots and splendid uniforms. Although her family warned her about the Nazis, she often sneaked out to watch the military parades.

Then one day she was walking down the street with a friend. When her friend failed to leave the sidewalk at the approach of a German officer, the officer withdrew his service revolver and shot him dead.

"The fact that Germans were out to kill people like me came to me very suddenly."

Kitty Felix Hart, now a radiographer in England, was soon to learn more of the Nazi horror first hand: She and her mother became prisoners at the Auschwitz-Birkenau death camp. In a remarkable documentary tonight on PBS, she returns to Auschwitz to recount her life in hell.

(The documentary airs at 7 p.m. on KTXT-TV, Channel 5 in Lubbock.)

Against the many recent TV dramas dealing with Nazi Germany and the Holocaust, "Return to Auschwitz" is quietly reflective, unadorned; and in its way, it is more devastating.

"I don't know what it will do to me to see it," Kitty says at the beginning of the documentary. But intent that the memory of Auschwitz and its two million victims not die with Auschwitz survivors, she determines to visit the grim memorial with her son David, a doctor living in Canada.

She is an articulate guide, leading her son through those hellish acres, spilling forth well-wed remembrances of unthinkable crimes against humanity. Here is the road on which she arrived: there is the barracks she stayed in; and there are some of the open pits in which bodies were burned.

"There are people in this world who say this never happened," she tells David. "Thirty members of your family died here... everybody's ashes are here."

She sees the gates through which she entered Auschwitz and recalled her first thoughts:

"The whole place was lit up when I came here and there was the smell of roasting meat... I wondered why there should be the smell of roasting meat."

The incomprehensibility of such a place and such deeds are reflected in David's innocent curiosity. How did you wash? Did you have toilet paper? Newspapers?

Kitty tells him that each prisoner had a bowl attached to his body. "And if you didn't have your bowl, you didn't have your soap; if you didn't have your bowl, you didn't have your toilet."

"It was very easy to lose the desire to live, let me tell you."

It is a shock to come face to face with

ROOFED FOREST

BOSTON (AP) — Fiber glass fabric roofs, typically installed over sports stadiums, soon will be used to enclose a full-scale tropical forest here at the Franklin Park Zoo. Pygmy hippos, gorillas, ante-lope and crocodiles will live and move about freely beneath 40,000 square feet of translucent fiber glass fabric. The exhibit, scheduled for completion in 1982, will span 220-feet and rise 70 feet at its apex.

No. 1855-1981 SWB PICKUP, 5-speed
SALE PRICE $5997<sup>00</sup>***

1981 DATSUN TRUCKS. MORE POWER. LESS GAS.

The secret is Datsun's revolutionary NAPS-2 engine. It's a 2.2-liter hemi-head powerplant that gives better mileage and over 18% more torque than last year's engine. Every 1981 Datsun truck has it. Take your pick and take a test drive. You've got to try it to believe it.

Li'l Hustler with standard 5-speed transmission. Remember, use estimated MPG for comparison. Your mileage may differ, depending on speed, weather and trip length. Your actual highway mileage will probably be less.

Desegregation Conflict Taken To Appeals Court

NEW ORLEANS (AP) — Three white girls who tried to sidestep a federal desegregation order but lost their fight to stay in their all-white school have asked the U.S. 5th Circuit Court of Appeals for help.

In a petition filed Tuesday, their lawyer asked for dismissal of orders issued by U.S. District Judge Nauman Scott, who drew up a desegregation plan for Rapides Parish and then, in an effort to enforce it, clashed with state District Judge Richard Lee of Alexandria.

Lee helped the girls attend all-white Buckeye High School, in defiance of Scott's orders, by giving legal custody of them to family friends living in the Buckeye attendance zone.

"We asked reversal of all orders that the federal judge issued that are in conflict with the constitutionally secured right of the young girls to attend the Buckeye school," J. Mimos Simon said Tuesday.

The girls, known locally as the "Buckeye Three," now attend a private school in Rapides Parish, but Scott has forbidden public school officials from releasing their academic credits for this year.

In his petition, Simon also asked for the release of those records and claimed Scott lacked jurisdiction in the case.

"We are private citizens, and private citizens cannot violate the Constitution of the United States," Simon said. "Basically, we argue that as citizens these young ladies have the right to move about, to attend any school of their choice. Their residency is a matter to be determined by state courts.

"In the absence of any constitutional violation, the federal court has no authority to intervene. There has to be some action by state officials that is segregative in nature or intent," he said.

The Buckeye dispute began when Scott issued a parishwide school desegregation order last August. Among other things, it transferred some 100 students from rural Buckeye High to the 54 percent black Jones Street Junior High in Alexandria, the parish's largest town.

Included in the transfer were Michelle Laborde, Lynde McNeal and Ramona Carbo, all 13.

Their parents, saying they objected to the 15-mile bus ride, gave up custody of the girls to friends living in the newly defined Buckeye attendance zone.

Lee approved the move, but Scott denounced it as a "sham" intended to circumvent desegregation.

When Lee insisted custody was a state court matter and no business of the federal court, the two judges began issuing orders and counter-orders in the case.

Lee told school officials to admit the girls at Buckeye, but Scott ordered them not to.

Twice Lee called out state troopers or sheriff's deputies to escort the girls to school, and he even accompanied them himself.

But Scott threatened to hold Lee, the girls' parents and guardians, and school officials in contempt of court if the teenagers stayed at Buckeye.

Lee was threatened with fines of $1,000 a day for every day he opposed Scott's orders.

Scott also told school officials to withhold the girls' academic records for the first semester of the year unless they enrolled at Jones Street Junior High for the second semester.

They refused and transferred to a private school that came into being when the desegregation order first was issued.

Soldier Given Prison Term In Suicide Case

NEWPORT NEWS, Va. (AP) — A defense lawyer says he's pleased with a jury's decision to sentence Army Spec. 5 Nancy Jean Varraso to eight years and a dishonorable discharge in the hanging death of a soldier who prosecutors described as her lesbian rival.

The jury, which handed down the sentence Tuesday, could have imposed life imprisonment on the conviction of second-degree murder. The discharge carries an automatic reduction to the lowest enlisted grade.

Miss Varraso, 23, who has been in the Army four years, also will have to forfeit all pay and allowances. She will be eligible for parole in roughly 2 1/2 years.

"We're very happy with it. We're very satisfied," said civilian defense lawyer Martin S. Cosgrove of Ms. Varraso's hometown of Quincy, Mass.

Miss Varraso had been charged with premeditated, or first-degree, murder in the hanging death of Pfc. Tammy Meza-Luna last Sept. 28 at Fort Story in Virginia Beach.

Prosecutor Capt. Keith Hodges argued the defendant's actions directly caused Mrs. Meza-Luna's death.

Leaving the victim — an emotionally unstable woman who threatened suicide in the days before her death — in the woods at night with her hands tied and a noose around her neck amounted to murder, Hodges argued.

In a statement Miss Varraso tried to repudiate after she gave it to investigators, she said she helped Mrs. Meza-Luna commit suicide.

Cosgrove, who first fought to suppress the statement, read from it verbatim to the jury of four officers and three enlisted personnel, arguing it showed no murder had occurred.

He relied on cross-examinations and his closing statement to rebut the government's theory of a motive based in homosexual jealousy.

The prosecution's star witness was Spec. 4 Becky Smith, Miss Varraso's former lover, pictured by herself and other witnesses as passive and cowed by the defendant's threats to her and to those who interfered with the relationship.

The government argued Mrs. Meza-Luna came between the two lovers. She had been seen in a sexually compromising position with Miss Smith the night before she died.

The sentence will be reviewed by a court-martial convening officer, and the case automatically goes to the Army Court of Military Review. The next appeal step is the Military Court of Appeals.

Four Elderly Persons Killed In NJ Boarding Home Blaze

POINT PLEASANT BEACH, N.J. (AP) — Fire swept through the Keifer's Quarter boarding home, killing four elderly people and injuring 15 in the fourth boarding home fire in New Jersey in less than a year, officials say.

The blaze late Tuesday at the facility in this seaside community destroyed the wood-frame building, which housed 21 residents in need of partial care.

St. Barnabas Burn Center, about 60 miles away, said Point Pleasant Hospital vice president Thomas Lonergan.

Five of the victims were in guarded condition and another seven were treated for minor injuries, Lonergan said.

Three of the dead were critically injured and were awaiting transfer to the Howard Wagner, Florence Keating and Fred Budde, no ages or addresses available. A fourth victim, a woman, was not identified immediately.

Police Sgt. Robert McCann said the cause of the fire was under investigation. "It seems it started in a sitting room on the first floor," he said.

William Dunkel, 83, who survived the blaze, said he was awake when the fire broke out a little before 10 p.m. and heard alarms ringing in the three-story building.

"My neighbor, Joe, knocked on my door and said, 'Don't you smell the smoke?' We went to the stairs and they were full of smoke. So I went back to my room, opened the window and put my head out," said Dunkel. "I called Joe and said 'get out of the smoke, put your head out the window and get some oxygen'."

"We waited for the fire department, and they were quick ... but not quick enough. It happened so quick. I forgot to take my teeth," he said.

Only 19 of the 21 Keifer's Quarter residents were there at the time of the fire. Two others were ill and were being treated at local at the time of the blaze, Lonergan said.

Dr. Frederick Fuller, director of the St. Barnabas Burn Center, was to examine the victims and decide how to transport them to that facility.

"We know there are three critically burned," said Harry Gaynor, president of the National Burn Victim Foundation, who accompanied Fuller. "One of the women is 90 years old. He (Fuller) will decide whether or not we will transport them by air or by ambulance."

The fire was reported under control by about 10:45 p.m., said police officer Gary Schadevall.

A total of 61 elderly people have died in four home fires in New Jersey since July.

In Keansburg, 31 elderly persons died in a Jan 9 fire at the Beachview Rest Home. Officials called that blaze the worst boarding home fire in New Jersey history.

Also last month, three died when fire broke out in a Camden facility.

Last July 26, 23 died when a fire swept through the Brintley Inn boarding home in Bradley Beach.

St. Helens Shows Signs Of Activity

VANCOUVER, Wash. (AP) — A stirring of earthquake activity around Mount St. Helens this week is probably just the volcano's way of "giving us a kick in the seismograph," one scientist says.

"It's just letting us know that it hasn't given up on us," said Bob Norris, spokesman for the University of Washington geophysics center in Seattle.

A seismic burst was detected at noon Tuesday, and a plume of steam reached 1,500 feet above the crater of the 8,400-foot volcano. A smaller seismic burst was recorded near the mountain at 6:21 p.m., Norris said.

Small earthquakes and harmonic

tremors, which indicate the movement of molten rock inside the mountain, have been recorded since Sunday after nearly a month of quiet on the volcano.

But the recent break in the volcano's long seismic silence doesn't necessarily mean the mountain is gearing up for another explosion, Norris said.

"This activity seems to be typical of what we've seen during quiet periods between eruptions," he said.

Excellent visibility on Tuesday enabled U.S. Geological Survey scientists to venture into the crater to look for changes in the lava dome, the mound of hardened lava that grew bigger than Seattle's Kingdom stadium earlier this year.

A U.S. Forest Service spotter plane reported a red glow in the crater — common during observations on cold mornings, said Forest Service spokesman Thom Corcoran.

The good visibility meant the Forest Service red zone 12 miles around the mountain was open to loggers and others with permits to be in the restricted area.

The volcano's last explosive eruption was in mid-October, the fifth since the May 18 blast that left 62 people dead or missing.

Indian Tribe Seeks Land Compensation

PORTLAND, Ore. (AP) — An Oregon Indian band is seeking up to $128 million for land it contends the U.S. government seized without paying the $12,000, 20 blankets and 18 pairs of pants called for in an 1853 treaty.

The Cow Creek Band of the Umpqua tribe told the U.S. Court of Claims in Washington, D.C., it wants to be paid for 800 square miles of land near Canyonville, in southwestern Oregon. The band says the land was taken without just compensation, in violation of the Fifth Amendment to the U.S. Constitution.

A treaty signed on Sept. 19, 1853, specified the government was to pay the Indians $12,000, 20 blankets, 18 pairs of pants, shirts, and other clothes and provisions for the territory, which included the Cow Creeks' main ancestral land.

The tribe's lawyer, Dennis Whittlesey, said the tribe was never paid, and that a reservation which was also supposed to be provided was never forthcoming.

Whittlesey asked the Court of Claims on Monday to give the Cow Creeks the value of their land as of Sept. 19, 1853, plus interest.

Oregon land sold for up to $2.50 an acre when the treaty was signed. At that rate, with interest, compensation for the 800 square miles would now be $128 million, said Whittlesey.

MONEY NOT GOAL FARMINGTON, Conn. (AP) — The economy notwithstanding, today's college students are not mercenary, but are opting for jobs that offer public or community service over financial gain, a recent survey indicates.

Grain Futures

CHICAGO (AP) — Grain and soybean futures prices were sharply higher Tuesday, with all but wheat posting limit or near-limit advances on the Chicago Board of Trade.

Sources said export figures released Monday encouraged buying, particularly in corn. The U.S. Agriculture Department reported that corn inspected for export in the seven days ended Jan. 29 was 58.8 million bushels, up 13.3 million from a week earlier.

Persistence Pays: Tech Wins On Road

By CHUCK McDONALD
Assistant Sports Editor

FORT WORTH — Well, what do ya know? There is life on the road after all. Of course, after going a full season and a half without a Southwest Conference win outside of Lubbock, nothing came easy for Texas Tech here Tuesday night at the Daniel-Meyer Coliseum. But somehow, even after missing five of nine free throws in the final minute and a half of regulation, the Red Raiders went wild in overtime and defeated TCU 70-60. And for the Raiders it was a sweet win indeed.

"It sure is good to win one on the road," said Tech coach Gerald Myers. "I'm telling you, it's been a long time."

The win boosts Tech to 5-5 SWC mark (11-9 overall) while the Frogs slipped 4-6 and 7-13.

It was a victory the Raiders nearly didn't get. Leading 44-34 on a Ralph Brewster layup with four minutes in regulation, it seemed like Tech had this one in the bag, but as has often been the case when the Raiders leave Lubbock, they let it slip away.

When Clarence Swanegan, who scored 20 for the Raiders, hit both ends of a one-and-one, the Raiders still led 46-38 with only 1:46 to go. But after Darrell Browder tossed in a long bomb to make it 46-40, the Raiders suddenly got weak-kneed at the free throw line.

First, Ben Hill missed both ends of a two-shot foul with 1:30 to play. Then, Nelson Franse missed the front end of a one-and-one, and, suddenly, TCU made it a 46-44 game on another Browder bucket with 1:11 to play.

Over the next 30 seconds, freshman Bubba Jennings hit four in a row from the line and with only 38 ticks left, Tech led 50-46. After TCU had made it a 50-48 game, Steve Smith missed yet another one-and-one opportunity and, with 14 seconds left, TCU's Kenny Hart went to the line with a chance to tie.

Hart had the same affliction as the Raiders, and missed both shots on the two-shot foul.

Jennings was fouled and went to the line with eight seconds left and Tech still holding to a 50-48 advantage. Jennings, who led Tech with 22 points, had already made six consecutive free throws, but this one was way off the mark. After a time out, TCU brought the ball down court and Warren Bridges hit a 12-foot bank shot at the buzzer to send the game into overtime at 50-50.

"We lost our momentum when we missed all those free throws," said Myers. "I think they might have been trying a little too hard."

"I don't know what it was about the free throws," said Jennings. "We just missed them. But this win will help us a lot. Now we know we can win on the road."

Exactly how the Raiders, who could score only 50 points in 40 minutes, managed to score 20 in a five-minute overtime was a mystery to just about everybody on hand.

"I didn't think either one of these teams could have scored 20 points in five minutes if they'd taken the defenses off the floor," said TCU coach Jim Killing-sworth.

The Raiders scored those 20 points by missing only one shot in the overtime period, and taking the ball away from the Frogs and scoring on break-away layups.

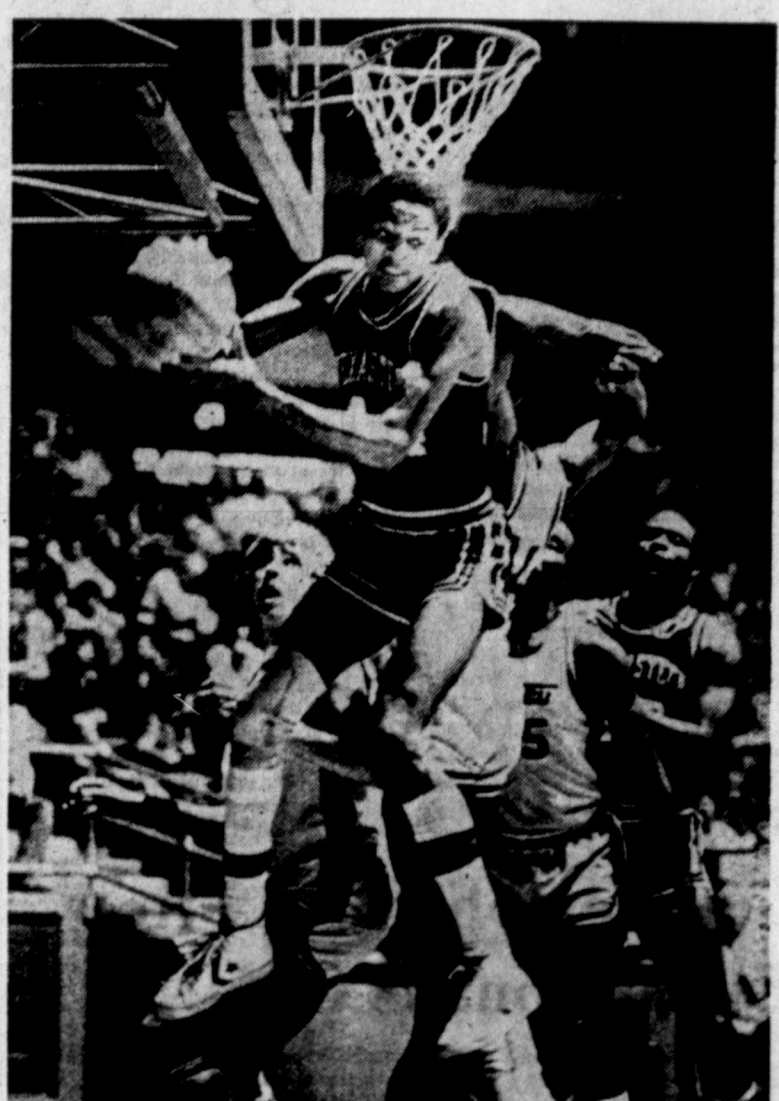

Swanegan put Tech up 52-50 with a short bank shot 50 seconds into the OT, and then Jennings found the back door open for a layup to give Tech a 54-52 lead with 3:17 left.

Hill, who finished with 11 points, worked his way inside for two layups, and it was 58-52. After a couple of Browder free throws, Hill got his third inside bucket, and Brewster hit a pair of free throws to make it 62-54.

Tech's final eight points came on two Jennings' layups, two more Brewster free throws and, finally, a pair of free throws from Jennings.

Brewster, making only his second start of the season, had 12 rebounds and

Picked-Up Pieces

IT IS AKIN TO the motion picture disaster film in that there is no good reason for this collection of stars to be in one place at one time.

It is the National Football League's Pro Bowl game, a worthless exhibition which can be enjoyed only by the fan whose obsession with the sport has entered the realm of the pathological.

Here is a yawner that, despite its star-studded premise, offers fewer memorable plays than the typical New Orleans-San Francisco regular-season game.

The NBA and major league baseball all-star games at least give guarantees of individual brilliance and fine rivalry. Excitement is generated. Here are true show-cases.

The Pro Bowl merely represents the NFL and the network's last opportunity to cup their hands beneath a windfall of advertising profits. It symbolizes the NFL's contempt for the American sports fan: plant a football and any 22 players on a gridiron, and the sucker in his living room is spellbound. He is hooked.

As for the 72 Pro Bowl players, this game functions as a lark. It's party time. A week in Honolulu means the freedom to eat fresh pineapple (yummy), and partake of the camaraderie that a high number prefer to being at home with their families (chummy). The main goal of participation is to avoid injury, no matter how many times Sunday's announcers chirped: "And you don't think these guys WANT to win?"

Of course they wanted to win — but that was six weeks ago...

THERE ARE FEW things more hypocritical than the nonchalant pose of a college basketball coach immediately after one of his players has incurred a possibly serious injury.

Coach will stand there with his hands in his pockets (Shelby Metcalf is accustomed to doing this for a full 40 minutes), or stroll to the scorer's table, or chat with an assistant, or survey the bench for a substitute, or frantically wave over another player for consultation...or order a corn dog with the works.

Why must they pretend to be unconcerned, detached? Few things are more disconcerting to the college coach than the sight of one of his players — star or not — crash-landing on his back or writhing on the floor while grasping a knee.

Why not be the first to arrive at the player's side? Why not be the first to show he cares?

It is obvious that these men are afraid to appear "weak," humane. Too many college coaches labor in the "macho man" syndrome.

No matter how much you hear in this culture of sensitivity awareness and increased expression of emotion, Americans still are afraid to show they feel...

JUST WHEN YOU THOUGHT the era of wheeling and dealing in major league baseball was finished, the St. Louis Cardinals, California Angels and Boston Red Sox respond by trading star players as though they were dime-a-pack baseball cards.

The Cardinals, under new general manager and field manager Whitey Herzog, unloaded, among others, catchers Ted Simmons and Terry Kennedy, pitchers Pete Vuckovich and Rollie Fingers, third baseman Ken Reitz and outfielder Leon Durham. Herzog added, in addition to signing free-agent catcher Darrell Porter, pitchers Bruce Sutter and Larry Sorenson, utility man Gene Tenace and outfielder Sixto Lezcano.

The Angels dealt third baseman Carney Lansford, pitcher Frank Tanana, and outfielders Joe Rudi and Rick Miller to Boston in exchange for center fielder Fred Lynn, shortstop Rick Burleson and third baseman Butch Hobson.

Contrast the Texas Rangers (who might do well to nickname Arlington Stadium "Fat City"). They got rid of only one piece of name equipment, Richie Zisk, and replaced him, in a trade with Seattle, with shortstop Mario Mendoza.

This is known as building for a future that is no different than your past...

The unabridged Eric Gale dictionary defines racquetball as "Tennis for those who are all aggression, no finesse."

Do Mustangs Fail To Hold Early Lead? Wright!

By RAY GLASS
Avalanche-Journal Sports Staff

A pressuring Plainview zone defense shut down Coronado's inside game in the second half and the Bulldogs' Gilbert Wright exploded for 16 points in the final 16 minutes to give PHS a come-from-behind 52-49 district victory over the Mustangs Tuesday in the CHS gym.

The Plainview defense, which allowed 6-foot-5 John Lord 14 points on seven of nine field goals in the first half, held Lord and 6-6 Mark Sobosie to a combined seven points in the final two periods before both Coronado big men fouled out late in the game.

Meanwhile, the 6-3 Wright had six points in the third period and 10 in the final eight minutes as the Bulldogs erased a 26-24 Mustang halftime lead and survived a last-second shot to finish the first half of the District 4-5A with a 3-1 record and a 13-14 overall mark.

Coronado, with one league game to play before winding up its first-half schedule, slipped to 1-2 and 12-14.

Their defense in the second half beat us, that and our inability to stop Wright. They pressured our outside shooters and we didn't get any inside scoring," Coronado Coach Barry Arnwine said.

We didn't shoot as well in the second half as we did in the first (40 percent to 50 percent) and we didn't get as good shots in the second half. They (Lord and Sobosie) went after Wright hard on defense but he just did a super job inside."

Despite the Bulldog comeback, Coronado had a chance to tie the game and send it into overtime with a shot in the final seconds.

Wright's offensive rebound and layin with 1:58 to play put the Bulldogs up 50-45 and Jerry Walker added a free throw 56 seconds later to push the advantage to 51-45 with 1:02 to play.

Lord, who was one of six from the floor in the second half, missed a short jumper but Mike Ahlenius put the rebound back in to cut the lead to 51-47 with 47 seconds to play. On Plainview's next trip down the floor, Walker was called for an offensive foul, sending Robney Garner to the free-throw line.

Garner calmly sank both ends of the one and one, pulling the Mustangs to within a single bucket, 51-49, with 37 seconds showing on the scoreboard clock.

The Bulldogs ran a spread offense to run the clock down and Garner fouled point guard Alton Jackson with 12 seconds to play. But Jackson, who earlier missed the front end of a one and one at the 1:24 mark, missed his first shot and, after Ahlenius yanked down the rebound, Coronado called time out to set up a play.

The Mustangs' Kurt Johnson brought the ball downcourt and passed into the corner to forward Cody Love. But Love was pressured by two defenders and passed back to Johnson, whose 20-footer bounced off the back of the rim.

"The final play was similar to what we wanted," Arnwine said. "But 12 seconds doesn't give you a whole lot of time. We would rather Cody had shot the shot but the last shot didn't beat us."

Bulldog Richie Norrell, who pulled down the missed shot and was fouled by Lord with no time showing on the clock, hit one of two free throws to give Plainview its final three-point margin.

Wright led all scorers with 22 points and teammate Lee Carter added 12. Lord paced the Mustangs with 16 points while Love tossed in 12 and Garner had 10.

Lord's torrid shooting in the first two periods put the Mustangs on top. He connected on five of his first seven field-goal attempts and scored 10 points as Coronado managed a 14-12 lead after the first quarter.

CHS five times led by its largest margin of the night, six points, in the second period before Carter rolled in a layin and canned a 20-footer in the last two minutes of the half to bring Plainview within 26-24 at halftime.

Lord dominated the middle of the lane in the first half and had seven blocked shots and three rebounds to go with his 14 points.

Plainview outscored the hosts 12-10 in the third period to pull even at 36 entering the game's final eight minutes and the Bulldogs took their first lead of the contest at the 7:48 mark when Wright hit both ends of a one and one for a 38-36 lead. The score was tied three times after that before the Bulldogs opened their five-point margin.

Wright and Norrell had eight rebounds apiece while Lord, Sobosie and Garner finished the night with six apiece.

Gay Hemphill, PHS Roll Past Coronado Girls

Seniors Gay Hemphill and Donna Jackson shredded a sagging Coronado zone defense for 43 points as the Bulldogs blasted past the Mustangs 56-35 in the District 4-5A second-half opener for both teams Tuesday in the CHS gym.

The 6-foot Miss Hemphill glided for 33 points from both post positions while Miss Jackson, operating mainly from the low pivot spot, tallied 10 as the Bulldogs moved to 22-7 for the season.

The loss dropped the Mustangs two games below the .500 level with an 11-13 season mark.

Miss Hemphill, voted a high school All-American last year, showed some all-around moves within five feet of the bucket, twisting and driving around defenders for nine layups.

She connected on all but two shots during the contest, nailing 13 of 15 field goals and all seven of her charity tosses to come within three points of outscoring the entire Coronado squad.

The Bulldogs blew the game open in the first eight minutes, outscoring the Mustangs 21-6 in the first quarter with Miss Hemphill collecting 10 points, a pair of free throws, a short jumper and three layups. She also had a game-high nine rebounds.

Leanne Wade led the Coronado effort with 15 points and Tami Scott pumped in 10, all in the second half.

But the Mustangs had problems generating an offense, due in part to 29 turnovers, full-court Plainview defensive pressure and a tight man-to-man curtain thrown up by the Bulldogs.

Raiders Beat Frogs In OT

10 points for the Raiders.

Defensively, Tech was led by Jeff Taylor, who calmly neutralized TCU's high scoring Darrell Browder. Although he fouled out in only 25 minutes of playing time, Taylor limited Browder to a six-of-20 shooting night. As a team, the Frogs hit only 25 of 66 efforts, and in the second half shot only 24 percent.

"This was the worst team game we've played," said Killingsworth. "We had no patience out there tonight. The reason we didn't make many shots is because we didn't take very good shots."

The win was Tech's 19th in a row over TCU, and Myers credited the Raiders' defensive effort for the victory.

"Browder is a great basketball player," said Myers, "but we have a great defensive guard in Jeff Taylor. It takes a stiper defensive effort to stop Browder, and that's what we got from Taylor."

"The important thing for us is that our guys took it to them in overtime when it seemed like they had the momentum."

Trailing 23-22 at the intermission, Tech out-scored TCU 10-2 in the first eight minutes of the second period, and went ahead 33-25 when Jennings hit a cannon shot with 12:04 remaining. The Raiders kept that eight-point margin, finally stretching it to 10 with four minutes to go.

TCU got 14 points from reserve Jeff Baker and 11 from Deckery Johnson to complement Browder's 17-point outing.

The Raiders led the entire first half until Jeff Baker hit from 20 feet out with only six seconds remaining to boost the Frogs to their 23-22 halftime advantage.

SWC Plays According To Odds, Favorites Win

By The Associated Press
 Surprise, surprise, surprise. There were no surprises in Tuesday night's Southwest Conference basketball.

On one of the few nights in a season of upsets and strange goings-on, all four games went just about as expected.

But the Arkansas Razorbacks served notice that they are on their way to mounting a serious challenge to Houston's first-place spot.

Arkansas beat Texas, 54-48. Houston held on to first place by whipping Southern Methodist, 79-64; Baylor edged Rice, 60-59, and Texas Tech had to go into overtime to beat Texas Christian, 70-60.

With the conference season past the halfway point, Houston holds a two-game edge over the Razorbacks, and Baylor and Rice are tied in third place, four games off the pace.

Arkansas coach Eddie Sutton called the victory over Texas "a big win."

"As long as we can continue to put heat on Houston, we're in the race," the coach said.

"Anytime you beat Texas, it's a great victory. Our fans put a premium on victories over Texas," Sutton said after Arkansas avenged an earlier 62-60 loss to Texas at home.

U.S. Reed had 16 points, grabbed three steals and hit four important free throws in the final frantic minutes of the game. Scott Hastings had 14 for Arkansas. LaSalle Thompson led all scorers, hitting 17 for Texas.

Texas coach Abe Lemons blamed the loss on the failure to hit free throws, mental errors and said the Longhorns' shooting was "terrible."

"We just wore out. I really don't know whether to let them off some or work them harder," Lemons said.

Rob Williams provided the points and Larry Micheaux the inspiration as the Houston Cougars pounded Southern Methodist, 79-64.

Williams had 29 points and Micheaux shaved his head after last Saturday's 81-70 loss to Texas Tech. He finished Tuesday night's game against the Mustangs with 19 points and 10 rebounds.

Houston coach Guy Lewis had high praise for Micheaux's performance.

"This was Larry's finest game; we finally got the ball to him," Lewis said.

The Cougars got off to a fast start, building leads of 10-0 and 15-2 as they got even with the Mustangs for a triple overtime loss to SMU in Dallas earlier in the season.

That fast start made the difference, according to SMU coach Dave Bliss.

"Once again early in the game we had one of those cold streaks where we just couldn't get a basket and that contributed to our getting so far down in the first half," Bliss said.

Joe Copeland's layup with one second remaining powered the Baylor Bears to a 60-59 victory over the Rice Owls.

Rice led throughout most of the game, but the lead changed hands four times in the final 33 seconds.

Ricky Pierce had 16 points for Rice and Terry Teagle had 15 for the Bears.

Baylor coach Jim Haller said, "I have never seen two teams play the last minute in such a pressure situation without either making a mistake."

Rice coach Mike Schuler found it difficult to believe the Owls lost because "we were in control of the game until right at the finish."

"It's a shame to lose a game like this one. We played awfully well and you can't fault our kids," Schuler said.

Sonics Deny Bid To Deal Westphal; Williams Out

SEATTLE (AP) — Veteran guard Paul Westphal of the Seattle SuperSonics said Tuesday that the Sonics had told him they were not seeking to trade him.

Over the weekend, reports surfaced before the National Basketball Association All-Star game that Westphal was being actively shopped around the league by Seattle.

"Lenny Wilkens (the Sonic coach) told me today that they weren't trying to go out and actively trade me," Westphal told the weekly meeting of the Puget Sound Sportswriters and Broadcasters Association.

"So I believe him. Lenny said that there were some teams that called up about me and he decided they'd (the Sonics) rather not make a move at this time."

Westphal, a nine-year NBA veteran, is in the final year of a contract and the four-time All-Star will be free to go to another club next season under the league's new right of first refusal.

He is represented by controversial lawyer-agent Howard Slusher, of Los Angeles. Slusher also represents holdout Sonic guard Gus Williams.

"I'm essentially in the same position as Gus Williams," Westphal said, "in that my contract is up at the end of the season."

"I imagine the Sonics will have to make the same decision about me as they will about Gus — whether they want to have me here or lose me."

"It's just up to them. It's their decision. If they decide to trade me, that wouldn't hurt my feelings even though I'm very happy here. Professional basketball is a business and people get traded all the time."

"It's not over yet," Westphal replied when asked about his opinion on a winner in the Williams vs. Sonics case. "I imagine Gus Williams will be the only winner."

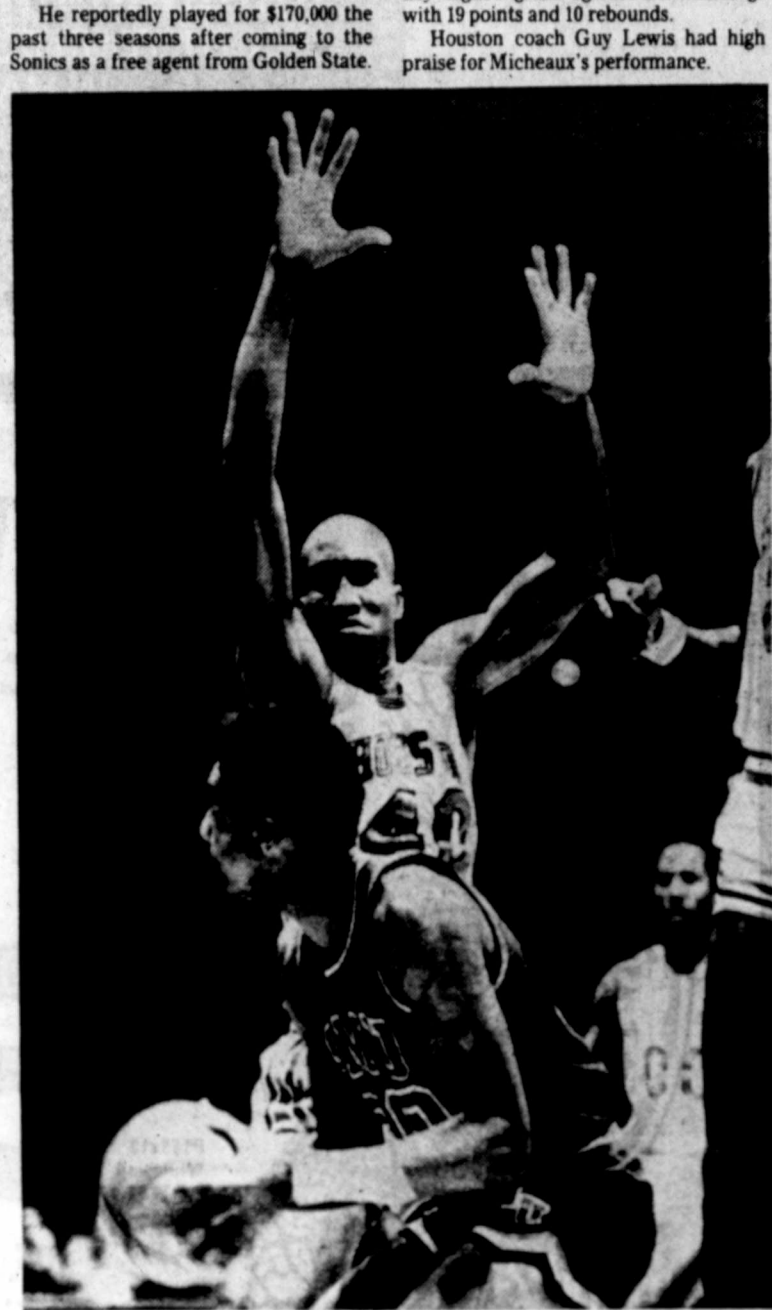

It was pointed out to Westphal that Williams hasn't made a dime from the Sonics this season.

"He wasn't making all that much anyway," Westphal replied.

Williams reportedly asked for a one-year, $800,000 contract from Seattle. The Sonics said they offered him a five-year pact worth $2.5 million.

ROBINSON REJECTS NFL

PORTLAND, Ore. (UPI) — University of Southern California football coach John Robinson said Monday he rejected two offers to coach professional football at the end of the 1980 collegiate season. "I seriously considered offers from the Washington Redskins and New Orleans Saints," Robinson said at a news conference, "but I'm pretty well locked in at USC. My contract runs for four more years and I have a five-year option after that. Besides, I like the collegiate atmosphere and stability."

R-r-r-ing...NCAA May Call Kansas State In Probe

KANSAS CITY, Mo. (AP) — A lengthy investigation has uncovered possible violations of National Collegiate Athletic Association rules in the Kansas State track program, the Kansas City Times said Wednesday.

In a copyright story, the newspaper said the violations primarily centered on the use of telephone credit-card numbers.

The Times said interviews with former and present members of the track team indicated that:

- Ardes Lee Gardner Jr., a former K-State trackster, Vince Parrette, the Big Eight triple-jump champion and Willie Major, another sprinter, allegedly were furnished use of athletic department telephone credit-card numbers. Those three, and several people K-State officials, maintain they have never heard of, ran up long distance charges exceeding $7,000 from August 1978 to July 1980, the newspaper said.

- Parrette was given an oil company credit card which he used to buy tires for his personal vehicle.

- Gardner was given $114 to help defray travel expenses, and a $430 student loan which head track coach Mike Ross allegedly told Gardner he would not have to repay.

The use of the athletic department credit card would come under the "extra benefits" classification. In other words, a service provided to athletes which is not available to other students would be in violation of NCAA regulations.

Ross, asked if he furnished telephone credit card numbers to any athlete, answered, "Heavens, no."

But Jerome Howe, an assistant track coach, was quoted as saying it was not unusual for athletes to be given the telephone credit card numbers to make recruiting calls.

"I write it out," Howe said. "And I tell them, 'When you're done with it, throw it away.' I know that's a lot of trust. You've got to hope the kid never cheats you."

Howe's admission apparently shocked K-State athletic director DeLoss Dodds, who said, "When Jerome said that I nearly fell through my seat."

"Coaches know the rules," said Dodds, a former K-State track coach. "They know they can't give a credit card to a kid. They know if something like that went on, that their job's in jeopardy. When you hire somebody, you've got to hire somebody you think's honest."

The newspaper said it was unclear exactly who did what for whom. Gardner said Ross was the source of the telephone credit card number, but Ross denied it. In separate interviews, Major and Parrette said they did not get the numbers from Ross, but refused to say how they got them. The Times said sources close to a Southwestern Bell Telephone Co. investigation of the matter claim that Gardner, Major and Parrette told investigators the numbers came from Ross.

The Times said Gardner, who has left K-State, ran up long distance charges that could approach $3,000 beginning Dec. 28, 1978. He was quoted as saying Ross promised him and his wife, Lori, use of athletic department telephone credit cards to induce him to transfer from Fullerton in January, 1979. The Gardner says in signed affidavits that Ross assured them they would not have to pay the bills.

Regarding Parrette's use of an oil company credit card to buy tires, Ross, Howe and Colbert all said that it was routine for track athletes to be given a credit card to purchase gas for university vehicles used on trips or for an athlete's personal vehicle if it were to be used on a school trip.

Wichita State Coach Denies Alleged Wrongdoing

WICHITA, Kan. (UPI) — Wichita State basketball coach Gene Smithson, denying allegations that players received cash from coaches, has called a news conference today to answer the charges.

"They're ridiculous, just ridiculous," Smithson said Tuesday of reports by the Kansas City Times. "I'll guarantee it (a clean ship). We've got some great men with a lot of character."

Wichita State sports information director Kevin Weiberg said Smithson and athletic director Ted Bredehoft were scheduled to appear at a news conference at noon to reply to the charges.

The Times reported that former players at Wichita State — which currently is ranked 20th in the nation — were given cash and other gifts by coaches and fans. The Times also said the NCAA has been studying the school's basketball program for nearly a year.

Assistant Wichita State coach Jeff Jones refused to comment on the allegations.

"It's very sensitive now," Jones said Tuesday. "I can't say anything. We want to wait until it all comes out to make a sound judgment."

Bredehoft said earlier that he had not heard of any NCAA probe into the Missouri Valley Conference school's basketball program, as the newspaper had charged.

"It is the NCAA's policy that in any type of NCAA inquiry — even the most preliminary type of inquiry — that the institution is first notified," Bredehoft said. "And we have not received any notification."

David Berst, director of rules enforcement for the NCAA, said the association sometimes gathers information, to help determine whether an investigation should be held, without notifying the school.

Berst would not confirm or deny that an investigation had begun.

The Times reported that Richard Williams of Hollywood, Fla., who was kicked off the team last year for violating curfew, said he received more than $3,000 in cash, clothing and airline tickets over a two-year period. Williams said $1,800 came from assistant coach Jeff Jones.

Auguster Jackson of Birmingham, Ala., told the newspaper that when he was recruited in 1978, he was given $500 cash by Dr. Arthur Fromm, a supporter of the school's athletic program. Jackson said he was twice given $300 in cash by assistant coach Rich Shore.

Tyrone Augburns, now at Cleveland State, said he was given $164 for a plane ticket and later received a small amount of cash from Jones.

Lawrence Howell of Boynton, Okla., said he asked Smithson for money so he could fly to California. Howell said Smithson told him it would be arranged as a loan to avoid trouble for the department and Howell said he later received $250 in cash from Shore.

The players also told the Times that money also was handed out at parties thrown by boosters of the athletic program.

Kush Remains On Stand, Answers Accusations

PHOENIX, Ariz. (AP) — Two players who claimed they saw former Arizona State football coach Frank Kush strike punter Kevin Rutledge in a 1978 game later denied it, Kush testified Tuesday in a $2.2 million damage suit.

Ex-Sun Devil linebacker Gary Bouck was quoted anonymously by Arizona State's campus newspaper as saying he saw the incident, Kush said, and word back got to him that one-time Arizona State offensive tackle Steve Chambers "was spilling his guts about the thing."

But Kush said when he questioned the two players privately about the alleged incident, they both denied making any comments.

Rutledge is suing Kush, the university, former Sun Devil assistant coach Bill Maskill and others — claiming Kush punched him in the mouth following a poor punt during Arizona State's 41-7 loss to Washington Oct. 28, 1978 in Seattle.

He also contends Kush and Maskill subsequently harassed him into quitting the team and forfeiting his scholarship.

Kush, testifying for the second straight day, told the court that he had no recollection of ever grabbing Rutledge's facemask but said there was "a possibility" that he may have slapped Rutledge's helmet at the time.

Rutledge testified Kush grabbed his facemask in the Washington game while he still had his helmet on and chinstrap fastened, shook his head from side to side and up down, and landed a "knuckle-punch" which Rutledge said split his upper lip.

Kush said he was unaware of the alleged incident until a conversation with Gene Felker — the executive director of Arizona State's football booster club, the Sun Angels.

"It was on Oct. 6, 1979. We had an open date on our schedule that weekend and I ran into him at a jog-a-thon at the ASU track," Kush told the court. "He said he saw a confrontation up there at the Washington game between me and Rutledge."

"He said my arms were in back of me and Rutledge was in front of me," Kush added. "He said my hands were in a position that it looked like I was going to swing."

Kush said he told Felker that, "I definitely did not hit the young man."

In an Oct. 19, 1979 front-page story in the ASU "State Press," Bouck said he had seen Kush punch Rutledge, but asked that he be quoted anonymously because he feared repercussions in his

"football future and education."

"One or two of the other players told me Bouck was the one who made the statement in the student newspaper and

Oilers Hire Assistants

HOUSTON (AP) — Two new assistant coaches have joined the Houston Oilers. Head coach Ed Biles has named Elijah Pitts, an assistant coach at Buffalo the past three seasons, as offensive backfield coach of the Oilers.

Pitts was a running back on Packer teams coached by Vince Lombardi that won six titles, including the first two Super Bowls. Pitts scored two touchdowns in Green Bay's 35-10 victory over Kansas City in Super Bowl I.

"It's important for us to have people that are known winners," Biles said in announcing Pitts' appointment. "He brings a wealth of knowledge to our organization. It's a tremendous boost for us to have people that have been successful at all levels of the NFL."

Pitts joined an Oiler staff that already includes offensive line coach Ray Callahan, hired last week, and Bob Gambold and Andy Bourgeois, holdovers from the staff of former Coach Bum Phillips.

Biles also hired Jim Shofner, the Cleveland Browns' quarterback coach the last three years, as offensive coordinator.

Brian Sipe, statistically the best quarterback in the National Football League in 1980, often credited Shofner for his development.

Shofner, 46, was a Browns' top draft choice from Texas Christian in 1958. He played in the Cleveland defensive backfield until retiring in 1963.

Shofner took TCU's head coaching job in 1974 and held that post for three seasons. He then returned to the 49ers' coaching staff in 1977 as defensive backfield coach.

Woody Widenhofer, defensive coordinator for the Pittsburgh Steelers, Tuesday turned down an offer to join the Houston Oilers in a similar position.

I talked to him about it in my office," Kush told the court Tuesday. "He said he did not say it. He was not the one."

Rutledge has testified that Kush called him "gutless" after the alleged incident and swore at him repeatedly. In the locker room after the game, Rutledge said Kush told him to go stick his head in a bucket of water and drown

Donovan Not Holding Grudges

WASHINGTON (AP) — Raymond J. Donovan, confirmed as labor secretary after a two-week delay, says he harbors no grudges that his approval was held up in the Senate by unsubstantiated allegations that he had ties to organized crime.

"I'm not a grudge carrier," the 50-year-old New Jersey construction executive told reporters Tuesday after the Senate confirmed him on a vote of 80-17 — the most opposition to any of President Reagan's Cabinet choices.

"The Senate has a job to do and has done it," he said. "My personal feelings are put aside. My professional responsibilities will be just that, professional."

Donovan, who could be sworn in as early as today, was the last member of the Reagan Cabinet to be confirmed.

In other action Tuesday on top-level administration appointments:

— The Senate Intelligence Committee unanimously recommended confirmation of Navy Adm. Robert Inman as deputy director of the CIA. Inman, who has headed the National Security Agency since 1977, is expected to be easily confirmed by the full Senate by week's end.

— The Senate voted 91-6 to approve Frank Carlucci as deputy defense secretary despite some questions by conservatives about whether he is committed to Reagan's philosophy. Sen. Jesse Helms, R-N.C., cited a clash over legal aid to farm workers during the Nixon administration between Carlucci, then director of the Office of Economic Opportunity, and then-California Gov. Reagan.

— William P. Clark's nomination as deputy secretary of state was approved on a 10-4 vote by the Senate Foreign Relations Committee. Some Democrats said Clark is unqualified for the job because he has no experience and little knowledge of foreign affairs. A confirmation vote by the full Senate is expected Thursday.

All the votes against Donovan in the Senate were cast by Democrats, who expressed concern about the numerous allegations of ties between him and his business and labor racketeers and organized criminals. Donovan was executive vice president of Schiavone Construction Co. of Secaucus, N.J.

Many of the allegations were made by Ralph Picardo, an FBI informant, but the FBI said it failed to corroborate any of them and Republicans insisted that fairness dictated a "yes" vote on the nomination.

To do otherwise, said Sen. John East, R-N.C., would be "giving a veto power to the underworld on any potential nominee that comes before the Senate."

Sen. Orrin Hatch, R-Utah, chairman of the Senate Labor and Human Resources Committee and Donovan's principal defender on the Senate floor, said the New Jersey businessman had undergone the "most thorough and exhaustive background investigation ever conducted by the FBI on a Cabinet nominee."

Kennedy, who led the opposition, said the record "fails to show that the nominee possess(es) that degree of independence and sensitivity essential in a labor secretary."

Kennedy specially referred to an incident in which a close friend and business associate of Donovan was subpoenaed before a federal grand jury investigating labor extortion. Donovan said at the Senate committee's hearings that he didn't know of the subpoena at the time.

Sen. Thomas Eagleton, D-Mo., also singled out the subpoena incident, declaring, "I find it difficult to believe" Donovan's account of the episode.

But Eagleton said he also was concerned by the number of allegations, "all of which in the aggregate cause me to oppose Mr. Donovan's confirmation."

He added, "Given the allegations surrounding Mr. Donovan, I doubt whether the Senate would confirm him if the president had nominated him to be attorney general of the United States."

Foe Of Superfund Heads Agency In Charge Of Dispersing Money

WASHINGTON (AP) — When he was in Congress last year, David Stockman was one of the most vocal critics of the bill creating a "superfund" to clean up hazardous chemical wastes. Now, as White House budget director, he heads the agency deciding how to implement it.

Supporters of the superfund, in and out of government, fear Stockman will use his position to weaken the legislation passed last year to deal with such disasters as Love Canal in Niagara Falls, N.Y.

A Stockman associate confirmed that an executive order implementing the $1.6 billion fund was one of a number of last minute Carter administration actions under routine review by aides to President Reagan. The order, signed a day before Carter left office, has been sent to Stockman's Office of Management and Budget for action.

"When something is done in a great hurry at the last minute, you should take a look at it," said Fred Khedoury, assistant director of OMB.

That superfund bill provides for most of the money to come from assessments on chemical manufacturers. The federal government is to use the fund to clean up chemical dumps and spills, then try to recover the cost from the companies responsible.

"There's no reason to think that just because we are reviewing something, we're doing it with an eye toward impairing the program," Khedoury said.

On the House floor last year, Stockman, a Michigan Republican, attacked the superfund legislation as an "open-ended enabling statute that ... makes EPA the czar over every hazardous waste site in the country."

He proposed instead that the federal government provide money to help individual state governments deal with chemical wastes within their borders. The Stockman proposal was defeated, and Stockman voted against the superfund bill on several occasions.

But Khedoury said it was "ridiculous to say that just because he (Stockman) opposed it, he's going to sabotage it now. He's sworn to carry out the laws, and we will do so in a manner consistent with the policy goals of the president."

The Carter order delegated the power to administer the superfund program to a number of federal agencies, principally the Environmental Protection Agency.

Members of the EPA staff and lobbyists for environmental protection groups say privately the Reagan Administration might try to weaken EPA's role, and give the powers instead to another agency, such as the Federal Emergency Management Agency, over which OMB has more direct control.

WASHINGTON (AP) — Education Secretary T.H. Bell says the nation's schools and colleges can expect less regulation, less paperwork and less money from the federal government.

Bell also said in an interview Tuesday he is uncertain whether the federal government can afford to keep paying 8 percent to 9 percent of the nation's school bill, as it has for the past decade.

And he vowed anew to continue to lighten the regulatory burden on schools, as he did Monday when he tossed out the Carter administration's proposed bilingual education regulations that educators said would have added $1 billion to school costs over the next five years.

Bell singled out the Guaranteed Student Loan Program, which will cost more than $2 billion this year, as a likely target for budget cuts. Under it, any college student, rich or poor, can get a heavily subsidized 9 percent loan. "Is it right for the federal government to pay an interest subsidy on loans made to children of millionaires?" Bell asked.

He also would not rule out the possibility of cuts in the $1.1 billion program to help educate handicapped children.

When Congress in 1976 ordered improvements in educating the handicapped, it said the federal government eventually should pick up 40 percent of the extra cost. Although the federal share has never exceeded 12 percent, Bell said, "I don't anticipate that there'd be any more dollars, if any at all, given the state of the economy and the national budget."

Bell promised "we are not going to abandon the civil rights" of students who cannot speak English. He said he will issue less onerous bilingual education rules, but his department will still scrutinize school districts' plans for educating students who face language barriers.

Bell also said 500 school districts, including some major cities, that reached bilingual education agreements with federal education officials during the past five years should not back off their commitments. "They've entered into an agreement and we would like to see them live by it," he said. "We're not inviting them to abandon those agreements."

On another matter, Bell said he will meet in a few days with a delegation

Solon Calls On President To Honor Human Rights

WASHINGTON (AP) — The Reagan administration will be making a "grave mistake" if it tries to abandon human rights as a major component of U.S. foreign policy, says the chairman of a House panel dedicated to overseeing human rights issues.

Also during the closed caucus, two second-term liberal Democrats — Michael Barnes of Maryland and Howard Wolpe of Michigan — were named to chair subcommittees, triumphing over more moderate colleagues.

Congress Hears Comments Of Women's Lobby

WASHINGTON (AP) — Women's rights leaders are telling Congress the federal budget should not be balanced on the backs of women and the poor.

Eleanor Smeal, head of the National Organization for Women, and representatives of about 80 others are expressing concern that President Reagan's yet-unannounced budget cuts will tear out hard-won turf of years of fighting for women's rights.

They were making their case today during Women's Rights Lobby Day on Capitol Hill. Members of the 19-member Congresswomen's Caucus pledged to do all they could to correct inequities in Social Security, pension, job pay and other problems women say they face.

A spokeswoman for the lobbying effort said there is fear Reagan's budget cuts could fall very hard on poor women and their families.

"There is worry — not that President Reagan will target women's issues — but that he will go against certain social programs, such as family planning," she said. "And very often the people who benefit the most from these programs are women, poor women."

Ann Smith of the Congresswomen's Caucus said the 19 members do not have one big package of bills, but rather will work individually on various pieces of legislation they think are important to women.

Rep. Mary Rose Oaker, D-Ohio, for example, is heading a task force on Social Security where she will push her proposals to improve retirement payments for women.

In a prepared statement being presented today, Mrs. Smeal said women are not treated equally with men.

"If a married woman works and contributes to Social Security, then she will in the name of dependency, receive a lower return for her tax dollars," she said.

Bell Advises Schools To Expect Fewer Government Regulations

WASHINGTON (AP) — Education Secretary T.H. Bell says the nation's schools and colleges can expect less regulation, less paperwork and less money from the federal government.

from the University of North Carolina in an attempt to settle a charge that the state has kept vestiges of segregation in its public universities. The Education Department has taken the state before an administrative law judge and threatened to cut off $100 million in federal funds. "I don't know what the probabilities are for settlement," Bell said.

past four years. This is his third stint in the federal government. He was U.S. commissioner of education from 1974-76.

His nomination to head the Education Department, which President Reagan has vowed to abolish, rankled some conservatives because Bell testified in 1979 on behalf of the Carter administration's bill to create the Cabinet agency.

Now, however, Bell voices agreement with the Reagan administration's goal "to cut down the size and the omnipresence of government."

Rep. Don Bonker, D-Wash., said Tuesday his subcommittee on human rights and international organizations would strive to make sure administration officials comply with a variety of human-rights reporting and implementation provisions already written into law by Congress.

Barnes ousted Rep. Gus Yatron, D-Pa., as chairman of the subcommittee on inter-American affairs, while Wolpe, a former Peace Corps consultant and specialist on Nigeria, won in a fight with Rep. Dan Mica, D-Fla., for chairmanship of the Africa subcommittee.

Yatron, who has 10 years' more seniority in the House than Barnes, later ascribed his defeat to "a political power play. My voting record was too conservative."

Bell also said in an interview Tuesday he is uncertain whether the federal government can afford to keep paying 8 percent to 9 percent of the nation's school bill, as it has for the past decade.

Bell, 59, is a softspoken Mormon and former Marine who was Utah's state school superintendent from 1963 to 1970 and its higher education chief for the past four years. This is his third stint in the federal government. He was U.S. commissioner of education from 1974-76.

Moves such as Reagan's enthusiastic White House welcome for South Korean President Chun Doo-hwan have indicated the administration "intends to de-emphasize human rights, if not abandon it altogether, as a major ingredient of American foreign policy," Bonker said.

However, other committee Democrats said a bigger factor was dissatisfaction over Yatron's heavy focus on the needs of his Pennsylvania district at the expense of subcommittee duties.

He also would not rule out the possibility of cuts in the $1.1 billion program to help educate handicapped children.

When Congress in 1976 ordered improvements in educating the handicapped, it said the federal government eventually should pick up 40 percent of the extra cost. Although the federal share has never exceeded 12 percent, Bell said, "I don't anticipate that there'd be any more dollars, if any at all, given the state of the economy and the national budget."

Now, however, Bell voices agreement with the Reagan administration's goal "to cut down the size and the omnipresence of government."

"It would be a grave mistake for this administration to abandon a commitment to human rights, because there is widespread support within this country for those policies," he warned.

Barnes, 37, said later that examining U.S. policy toward strife-torn El Salvador "would certainly be high on our agenda."

When Congress in 1976 ordered improvements in educating the handicapped, it said the federal government eventually should pick up 40 percent of the extra cost. Although the federal share has never exceeded 12 percent, Bell said, "I don't anticipate that there'd be any more dollars, if any at all, given the state of the economy and the national budget."

On another matter, Bell said he will meet in a few days with a delegation

Bonker commented after he was re-elected to his subcommittee chairmanship during a caucus of the full House Foreign Affairs Committee's Democratic majority.

Wolpe, 41, has written two books dealing with Nigeria. During the late 1960s he helped train Peace Corps volunteers headed for Africa and gave lectures on Africa at the State Department's Foreign Service Institute.

When Congress in 1976 ordered improvements in educating the handicapped, it said the federal government eventually should pick up 40 percent of the extra cost. ## Reimbursement Sought In Spiro Agnew Case

ANNAPOLIS, Md. (AP) — Maryland officials are seeking repayment of $200,000 that former Vice President Spiro T. Agnew and Jerome B. Wolf allegedly received as kickbacks on state engineering contracts.

Wolff and three others in the alleged scheme have told federal authorities in sworn statements that they received the funds and funneled the money to Agnew.

Wolff and the others made their admissions in 1973 during a federal investigation which led to Agnew's resignation. As a result of those admissions, three Montgomery County residents filed suit in 1976 seeking to recover what they charged was taxpayers' money allegedly taken from the state by fraud.

The state joined the case as a plaintiff last November.

The other individuals are Lester Matz and Allen Green, both engineers, and I.H. "Bud" Hammerman II, a close associate of Agnew's. In November, Hammerman, a developer, agreed to pay the state treasurer $30,000 he received as part of the alleged scheme, plus $22,455 in interest. Neither Matz nor Green is a defendant in the suit.

Agnew resigned from the vice presidency in October 1973 and pleaded no contest to one tax count in federal court.

Diana G. Motz, an assistant state attorney general, said the state is seeking reimbursement of funds allegedly paid to the two from 1967 to 1972, including three of the years Agnew served as vice president under Richard Nixon.

Wolff was head of the old State Roads Commission during Agnew's tenure as Maryland governor.

The motion for summary judgement in a four-year-old lawsuit was filed Tuesday in Anne Arundel County Circuit Court.

If Judge Bruce C. Williams does not grant the motion, a trial is scheduled to start April 20 in the case.

The state's motion contended that Agnew, who was governor of Maryland from 1967 until 1968 when he resigned to become vice president, and Wolff "breached the fiduciary duty" they owed the state by receiving alleged payments from contractors awarded state engineering contracts.

Jury Considers Garwood's Fate

Stock Mart Mixed In Trading

NEW YORK (AP) — The stock market was mixed today as the week's erratic trading pattern continued.

The noon Dow Jones average of 30 industrial stocks was off 1.96 points to 939.42 after being down 4.61 points a half hour earlier.

Advances held a 6-5 edge over declines among New York Stock Exchange-listed issues.

Alan Poole of Laidlaw Adams and Peck said the market has been heading lower in a zigzag course because of signs of a weakening economy and a belief that "nothing is going to be corrected with the wave of a magic wand."

He said investors are uncertain about what President Reagan will say in his address on the economy Thursday night and are not sure specific details of spending and tax cuts will be unveiled.

Meanwhile, Treasury Secretary Donald Regan told the Senate Finance Committee that the new administration "will not back off" from any budget cut proposals it makes.

The NYSE's composite index of all of its listed common stocks rose 0.03 to 73.51.

Big Board volume reached 20.79 million shares over the first two hours, down from 21.57 million in the comparable period Tuesday.

Gulf & Western headed the active list, down 1/4 at 14 1/4, in trading that included a block of 300,000 shares changing hands at 14 1/4.

Oil stocks helped pace the rally in the final 30 minutes of trading Tuesday, but were mixed today.

Exxon was down 1/4 at 75 1/4; Atlantic Richfield, which said its Anacosta Copper unit will stop selling refined metal, fell 1/4 to 58 1/4.

International Business Machines, which reported it dipped into its cash and securities for more than $1 billion last year to reduce its outside borrowing, was down 1/4 at 63 1/4.

Active issues included UAL, unchanged at 21 1/4; Whittaker, down 1/4 at 32 1/4; BankAmerica, up 1/4 at 27 1/4; and Sperry, down 1/4 at 54 1/4.

CAMP LEJEUNE, N.C. (AP) — A jury of five Marine officers, all veterans of Vietnam, today began deliberating charges that Pfc. Robert Garwood collaborated with his captors during almost 14 years in Vietnam and assaulted a fellow prisoner of war.

The jury began considering the charges at 9:30 a.m. after hearing 17 pages of instructions by military judge Col. R.E. Switzer.

Switzer said the jury may find Garwood innocent of the charges if it believes defense claims that the 34-year-old Indiana native was mentally ill during the period of his captivity and could not distinguish between right and wrong.

Garwood could face life imprisonment if he is convicted. Switzer detailed the charges in his instructions to the jury, saying Garwood was accused of "holding intercourse" with the Vietnamese by wearing their uniform, carrying arms and accepting a position in their army, acting as an interpreter during political indoctrination classes in POW camps, acting as an informer concerning prisoners' complaints, questioning POWs about military units and attitudes, teaching them Vietnamese, suggesting they "cross over" to the other side, and acting as an armed guard.

The other charge accuses Garwood of mistreating Army Pfc. David N. Harker by striking him in the ribs with his hands without justifiable cause.

Under military regulations, only one vote need be taken during deliberations, and four of the five Marine officers on the jury must agree in order to return a guilty verdict.

Garwood, an Indianapolis native, was a teen-age jeep driver when he was captured in 1965 near Da Nang. He returned home in 1979 after passing a note to a Finnish businessman in Hanoi.

Major Changes Expected In Financial Business

By CHET CURRIER
NEW YORK (AP) — When is a bank no longer a bank, a savings and loan no longer a savings and loan, a mutual fund no longer a mutual fund, a stock brokerage firm no longer a brokerage firm?
Answer: In the not very distant future.

At least that is the picture many experts paint when they start describing a kind of undeclared revolution that is already under way in the American financial-services business.

It is taking place fitfully, in one market today and another tomorrow, so that at any given moment only parts of it may be visible to a casual observer.

You might notice randomly that a savings institution has begun offering a form of checking account that pays interest, or that a brokerage firm is taking part in a plan to offer a new type of mortgage.

Financial people say these are only bits and pieces of something much bigger — a vast overhaul of the system that is certain to continue through the mid-1980s, if only because of legislation that is already on the books.

Recent laws have, among other things, decreed changes in many of the rules under which banks and savings institutions operate — including the much-debated Regulation Q that sets limits on how much interest they can pay out. It is scheduled to be eliminated by stages over the next five years.

"The actual events of the financial world are confused with the image of what used to be," Walter Wriston, chairman of Citicorp, the New York bank holding company, pointed out in a speech the other day to a Wall Street audience.

"The image is that banks are places to deposit money and get loans; that brokerage firms are places where securities are bought, sold and distributed; that thrifts (savings institutions) are places to maintain savings and obtain mortgages.

"Yet the reality of the actual events taking place is that computers, satellites, electronics fund transfer mechanisms, micro-circuitry and high-speed optical telephone lines are eliminating the constraints of time, geography and volume in financial transactions.

"A man in Texas takes his money out of a savings and loan, calls a toll-free telephone number in Arizona, and his money ends up in a money-market fund in Boston — or anywhere else on the globe.

"The financial marketplace today is everywhere, any time. The parties to the transactions could be anyone with the ability to punch in the right numbers anywhere."

Wriston pointed out that, like most upheavals, this one has been met with much protest in the established order. The banks cry foul when Merrill Lynch, a broker, offers something called a "cash management account" that looks, sounds and acts like a checking account.

The brokers, for their part, protest to regulators that the banks, in various ways, keep trying to invade their turf.

Wriston described this kind of special pleading as "a sorry spectacle" and a "losing game for everyone." It often winds up, he said, with businessmen who claim to be advocates of free enterprise seeking to have themselves exempted from all-out competition.

"The public doesn't really care about our interneecine problems," Wriston added. "What the public wants and is entitled to is a fair return on its money. If we can't serve them, they will — and should — go elsewhere."

Utah Man Says Debts Top $613.4 Billion

SALT LAKE CITY (UPI) — Uncle Sam still holds the record for having the largest debt in America — but E. Sterling Hunsaker of Kearns, Utah, is closing in fast.

Hunsaker, 59, who has started more than 50 companies in his 40 years in business, has filed for bankruptcy claiming $613.4 billion in debts. The national debt is expected shortly to reach $935 billion.

It is the largest bankruptcy anyone in the Utah federal court can remember. "We're not quite sure how to handle it," said bankruptcy clerk Mike Shepherd. "It's very complicated."

How can one man owe two-thirds of the national debt? The answer, says Hunsaker, lies in gold and oil certificates sold by a Panamanian trust company using 15 mining claims he owns to attract investors. None of the claims has been mined. The gold is still in the ground.

It all started when Hunsaker came up with a plan to build a cement plant near Redding, Utah, that would use tar sand as fuel. Hunsaker said he has developed a unique method of recovering natural gas, oil and gold from tar-sand deposits — a plan major oil companies rejected as too costly.

But Hunsaker said he thinks his process will work, and he set out to raise money.

He said he made a deal with some people who operated Kingbridge International Fudiciary Trust — a Panamanian-based trust company. In exchange for 40 percent of his company, Kingbridge agreed to help raise $200 million for the plant.

The trust company began issuing gold certificates and gold bonds against Hunsaker's claims. The bonds were not supposed to be redeemed for 20 years, Hunsaker said, but the investors suddenly began demanding payment and suing him.

"I wasn't supposed to have to pay anything unless I got funds to develop my properties," he said. "I waited for the funding, but it didn't happen."

"I got taken for a long ride and the only way I could stop was to file for bankruptcy and kill the whole project."

Hunsaker said he does not know how many certificates were actually sold or how much money trust officers made and kept for themselves. But he had to list all of the authorized issues of certificates and letters of credit in his bankruptcy petition. They total a staggering $613,406,718,185.53.

Hunsaker said he probably owes local investors between $800,000 and $1.5 million in cash. The rest of the debt, he said, is on paper only and he hopes the bankruptcy judge will declare it null and void.

In any case, creditors will have to fight over Hunsaker's meager assets — listed at $7,310. If all debts are honored, creditors will receive about one millionth-of-a-cent on the dollar.

Hunsaker said he spent three months preparing all of the court documents without the assistance of a lawyer. "When you are as broke as I am, you can't afford a lawyer," he said.

Increase In Rustling Blamed On Economy

MARIANNA, Ark. (AP) — Ranchers here are finding cattle slaughtered and butchered in their pastures, and Lee County Sheriff Robert May Jr. says the increase in rustling probably has just begun.

"I know we're going to have more of it," he said. "Times are hard and it's gotten worse lately."

May said rustlers drive along deserted dirt roads or along the Mississippi River levee late at night to find unprotected animals. Then, in the glare of headlights, the cattle are shot and butchered on the spot.

The beef is sold to area residents at cut-rate prices, he said.

"Most of the people who buy it are poor people looking for a bargain and trying to feed their families," May said. "It's a difficult thing to prove. ... You've got to have the evidence before you can prosecute."

Cattle rustling is classified as theft of property and is a Class C felony. Some cattle farmers say they would like to see rustlers severely punished.

"Poverty doesn't give you a right to do wrong and if we hanged a few rustlers, it might help," said H.L. Guest of Marianna.

One of Guest's heifers, weighing 350 pounds and worth about $350, was shot and butchered last December.

May said four such butcherings were reported in the county in January. More have likely gone unreported, May said, because farmers with larger herds do not always notice when one animal is missing.

Some farmers are fighting the black market prices by insuring their herds. John Kilcrease, a Farm Bureau insurance agent, said a small percentage of farmers have theft insurance on their herds or on individually registered cattle.

But he said insurance sales are not increasing because farmers generally "don't lose enough cattle to offset the amount of the premium, or at least they haven't in the past."

Guest said only farmers with a real love for cattle continue to stay in the business these days, since much of their grazing land has been turned over to cultivation of soybeans and rice.

"You hadn't got any business with cattle unless you got a love for it, and I dearly love them," Guest said.
