

Citizens Voice Mild Opposition To I-27 Project

By MARC FLAKE
Avalanche-Journal Staff

Although some people who own businesses or live along the recommended route of Interstate 27 won't like having to move for the highway, most seem to have a cautious attitude on the project and are waiting before making up their minds, according to a telephone survey by The Avalanche-Journal.

"I'd hate to move," said Harold Massey, owner of M&M Auto Sales, 3650 Avenue H. "But, I'd rather have the interstate. The city needs it."

As long as the state gives him enough time to set up at a new location and tell his customers of the move, he said he wouldn't be opposed.

The recommended route begins at the intersection of the existing I-27 and Loop 289, following U.S. Highway 87 to Fourth Street. It would then cut between Avenues C and D until reaching 16th Street.

Here it would angle southwest joining Avenue H at about 26th Street. It follows on the west side of Avenue H, through the Tahoka Traffic Circle and on U.S. 87 to South Loop 289.

According to an environmental impact statement filed at the State Department of Highways and Public Transportation in May 1979. Route 15 will require the relocation of 108 single-family residences, 112 multi-family units and 163 commercial or industrial enterprises.

Bert Lloyd, 5407 Ave. H, who lives on the east side of the street and may not be relocated, said he has watched the avenue grow from a winding suburban lane to a major traffic artery during the years he has lived there.

He said having an interstate highway at his doorstep would bother him, adding it bothered him when the street was widened, but that it didn't make much difference.

W.A. James, James' Barber Shop, 3408 Ave. H, said he "wouldn't be very

Crowding Reported At School

By LISA PAIKOWSKI

Lubbock school officials are encouraging student transfers in an effort to help thin the ranks at overcrowded Evans Junior High, a victim of the desegregation battle between the schools and the federal government.

The district's top administrators discussed with trustees this morning the need for more space at several schools because of escalating enrollment, with the conversation focusing on Evans in the southwest part of the city.

The junior high, which already has about 1,380 students, is projected to increase in population by some 50 more next year. The only other junior high that approaches that enrollment figure is Mackenzie, with 925.

The factor that figures into the large student body at Evans is the complicated and prolonged desegregation litigation. A junior high south of Loop 289 that was included in the district's 1977 bond package would have helped to relieve the enrollment burden at Evans. But a lawsuit by the Justice Department placed the sale of the bonds on hold.

Since the 1976-77 year, four portable buildings have been added at the Evans campus to help absorb some of the population boom. School trustees were asked to consider the addition of more buildings today (the school needs two more rooms), but board members noted they would like to help relieve rather than just accommodate the overcrowding.

Administrators also told the trustees that a new portable building would cost $25,000 to $26,000, and some $9,500 would be the cost for moving a portable structure from a school that has less need for it to another school like Evans.

Supt. Ed Irons suggested that student transfers from Evans be encouraged.

E.C. Leslie, assistant superintendent for administration, explained following the meeting that students may qualify for transfers for several reasons. Majority-to-minority transfers, he said, would be granted automatically. That policy would allow an Anglo student, for instance, to transfer from Evans, a predominantly Anglo school, to a largely minority junior high such as Alderson.

Students may also apply to transfer to Hutchinson, the district's newest magnet project, Leslie said, but only if the magnet school's requirements are met. The program is aimed largely at high achievers.

But the district will accept special See SCHOOL Page 14

Experts Rap Boost In Retirement Age

WASHINGTON (AP) — Two former Social Security commissioners told Congress today they oppose any effort to raise to 68 the age at which workers could retire and receive full retirement benefits in the next century.

The higher retirement age has been suggested as a way to help rescue the main Social Security trust fund, which pays retirement benefits that fund, one of three that make up the Social Security system, is expected to run short of cash as early as next year.

Robert M. Ball, who was Social Security commissioner from 1962 to 1973, said raising the age for full retirement benefits from 65 to 68 "is simply another way of cutting benefits."

"This significantly reduces the value of the protection that young workers are now paying for. There would be many people who could not get jobs or keep jobs after 65 who would be forced to take the lower benefits," he told the House Subcommittee on Social Security, which is holding three days of hearings on financing the system.

William J. Driver, who just stepped down as commissioner, argued that "the trend toward early retirement is deeply entrenched in our society" and has been encouraged by labor, business and government.

Another witness, Stanford G. Ross, who headed the Social Security Administration from 1978 to 1979, urged the subcommittee to take a comprehensive look at the program and make decisions that would rescue the main trust fund, Old Age and Survivors Insurance.

Among the changes he suggested for consideration were:

— Phasing out the benefits for college students and the minimum benefit, and eliminating the burial payment benefit.

— Limiting the amount of payroll taxes that would finance the system and use some general revenues.

— Permitting borrowing between the system's three trust funds: Two of the trust funds — Disability Insurance and Hospital Insurance — are solvent.

— Raising the retirement age to 68 in the early part of the next century. Under this proposal, the early retirement age for partial benefits would be adjusted to 65 from the current 62.

— Phasing in a plan to tax Social Security benefits. This could occur only when Social Security benefits and other income of retirees was over a certain amount, such as $20,000 a year.

Several of the former commissioners told the panel there was an urgent need to restore public confidence.

James B. Cardwell, also a former Social Security commissioner, said his "No. 1 priority and No. 1 concern" was the growing decline in public confidence. As part of that concern, he said, he would oppose tying Social Security to the federal budget so it would not be subject to the whims of budget-cutters.

The hearings began Tuesday with the Congressional Budget Office suggesting ways Congress can bolster the system.

It listed three main strategies that could be used to revive the system on a short-term basis. Change accounting methods in the system's three trust funds, modify the amount of benefits for recipients and find alternatives to financing the system.

Raymond C. Scheppach, deputy director of the office, said the Old Age and Survivors Insurance trust fund could run a deficit of $63.5 billion by 1986. Under the current program, that could reach $128.9 billion by the start of the 1990 fiscal year.

Rules Criticized By City Police

About 75 percent of city police officers are unhappy with current and proposed department rules and regulations, particularly the dress code, Darrel Crump, a representative of the Lubbock Police Officer's Association, told the Civil Service Commission today.

"If they (police officers) are not happy with the rules they have to work under, they're not going to do their jobs well," he said.

Crump asked the commission to hold a review hearing on the rules and regulations to give officers a chance to comment on them.

Nation Waits For Reagan Budget Plan

WASHINGTON (AP) — President Reagan, striving to convince the nation there is an urgent need to overhaul the economy, will tell Congress and the American people tonight "the time for waiting and hoping has passed."

"If we do not act now, the economy will get worse," a senior aide to the president said Reagan will tell a joint session of Congress in a nationally televised address.

One source said Reagan will propose $6 billion in budget cuts this year and $41 billion next year. Another said the 1982 cuts would total $44 billion.

Either way, the 1982 budget cuts would be close to the expected $44.2 billion that the companion tax cut recommendations would cost the treasury.

Those proposals would reduce the federal income tax of a typical family of four with a $20,000 income by more than $1,000 over the next 3½ years.

The Reagan approach — so-called "supply side" economics — is to couple tax cuts with spending cuts in an attempt to reduce inflation and spur economic growth at the same time.

The need to come to grips with an array of economic problems has been the central theme of Reagan's first 29 days in office and the tone of tonight's speech is said to reflect the intensity of that effort.

"He strongly says we really don't have a choice between doing something and not doing something about the economy," said the senior White House official, speaking with the understanding that he would not be identified by name. "If there are alternatives, let's hear them. But we do not have the luxury of choosing not to act."

As Reagan posed for photographs with congressional leaders this morning, a reporter asked whether his proposals would be "equal for the rich and poor." The president replied: "Yes, very much so, very much so."

Reagan held his inch-thick economic package and joked: "I'm doing the whole book tonight."

Then he said he expected his speech would last one-half hour, but House Democratic Leader Jim Wright said,

"We're going to applaud a lot."

A detailed, written message listing specific budget cut proposals, another giving details of tax recommendations, and a third document on proposed revision of government regulations will accompany the 8 p.m. CST speech.

However, not all of the 80 specific spending cuts Reagan reportedly has settled on are expected to be outlined in tonight's speech.

Thirteen hours after the address, Reagan leaves for a four-day visit to his ranch near Santa Barbara, Calif., landing to his Cabinet and economic advisers the initial task of selling the program to Congress, the public and to the hundreds of special interest groups who will feel the impact of the president's budget-cutting decisions.

However, Reagan was kicking off that campaign today with a private briefing See REAGAN AIRS Page 14

Raiders Ink Dozen Grid Standouts

By NORVAL POLLARD
Executive Sports Editor

Texas Tech's 1981 recruiting effort, delayed three weeks by a coaching change, showed early signs of paying big dividends this morning as the Red Raiders outwrestled the University of Oklahoma for the services of Greenville running back Robert Lewis and outlasted Nebraska in the battle to sign highly touted Midland running back Jerry Zachery.

Lewis, a 5-1, 180-pounder who rushed for 1,276 yards as a senior, was the first of 12 players to ink national letters of intent with Tech before noon on this, the NCAA's official signing day.

Also autographing national letters with the Raiders were quarterbacks Kevin Williams of Houston Lamar and Rusty Roark of Monahan; wide receiver Troy Smith of Amarillo Palo Duro; linebackers Tony Pullins of Houston Aldine and Wayne Dawson of Temple; tight ends Buzz Tatom of Richardson and Mark Gold of Round Rock; and defensive linemen Willie Johnson of Shallowater, Joe Walter of North Garland and Hasson Arabakrr, a 6-3, 230-pounder from Pasadena (Calif.) City College.

The 12 signings put the Raiders over the midway mark in their recruiting expectations. Tech hopes to sign all 21 high school gridgers who inked Southwest Conference letters of intent with the Raiders last week.

Those players who had not signed national letters as of noon today were: running backs Gerald Bean of Houston Yates, Ronnie Thomas of Victoria Stroman and Ansel Cole of San Antonio Jay, linebackers Joe McMeans of Jayton and William Harris of Stafford Dulles; defensive linemen Sid Chambers of Burkburnett, Scott Davis of Plano, Tim Crawford of Houston Kashmere and James Martin of Klondike; and offensive lineman Don Oberdieck of Plano.

Tech coaches were confident this morning that they would sign all 21 prospects, although Nebraska and Oklahoma See TEXAS TECH Page 14

Robbers Ruin Trip Plans

DES MOINES, Iowa (UPI) — Elton Adams just wanted to take his vacation in Hawaii.

Instead, he spent Tuesday looking over police mug shots, trying to find the people who robbed him, and robbed him, and robbed him.

Adams, 65, told police a woman jumped into his car while he was stopped at an intersection Monday night. He said she wrestled away his wallet containing $150 and fled.

In an attempt to learn her identity, he stopped in a nearby pool hall — only to be robbed again by a man who took $300 in travelers checks.

Adams returned home to find his house had been burglarized.

Judge To Rule On Brothel List

SAN ANTONIO (AP) — A state judge must decide whether a local newspaper's First Amendment rights are more important than the reputations of 3,000 people whose names are on a "brothel list" police say they seized from a San Antonio brothel.

The Thursday hearing in District Judge James Onion's court is the latest episode in a controversy that has raged in the nation's 10th-largest city since Oct. 2, when vice squad officers seized the list of names and arrested three women at what police claim is a brothel.

Editors of "El Pueblo," a community newspaper that claims to have a copy of the list, said it includes some of the city's most well-known political movers and shakers — influential businessmen, school board members and even some judges.

"We believe that the people of San Antonio want the names on that list made public," said Antonio Cabral, spokesman for El Pueblo's editorial board.

"We believe that the people of San Antonio want to know what kind of men are legislating laws and then breaking them themselves, what kind of men are sending people to jail when they themselves should be in jail, what kind of men use their wealth and influence not only to control the city but also to promote illegal businesses like a house of prostitution."

Onion issued a temporary restraining order on Feb. 10 forbidding the publishing of the names pending Thursday's hearing, at which El Pueblo's attorneys plan to argue the freedom of the press.

Onion's order named Armandina Saldivar, a longtime critic of the local establishment and member of El Pueblo's board. However, Mrs. Saldivar went into hiding and process servers have been unable to locate her.

From an undisclosed location, Mrs. Saldivar told reporters by telephone that El Pueblo editors would "rot in jail" rather than yield to pressure and threats to keep the names from being published. She said she would talk to reporters today on the steps of the federal building.

Cabral said efforts to keep the list being published included offers of bribes to some staff members of the newspaper and the making of threats to others. He said Mrs. Saldivar received a "dummy hand grenade," after she made public statements about the list, which he said was supplied to the newspaper by the brothel's alleged madam through a third party.

The restraining order was sought by Pat Maloney, the second attorney to represent Theresa Brown, accused of operating the brothel at her house for the past 16 years. Mrs. Brown allegedly kept the list of men customers, their sexual preferences and who recommended them as patrons.

At first, Mrs. Brown — through her attorney, Rick Woods, pleaded no contest to a charge of aggravated promotion of prostitution in exchange for a three-year prison term with a good chance of probation.

However, she fired Woods and hired Maloney last week, then withdrew her plea. Maloney said he wanted her tried before a jury and threatened to reveal some of the names in open court.

Cabral said although El Pueblo was complying with Onion's order pending the hearing, the latest edition of the newspaper was being put together at an undisclosed location.

ABC Cancels 'Charlie's Angels'

NEW YORK (AP) — "Charlie's Angels," the detective drama that swept the ratings in its early years and turned unknown actresses into superstars, will be canceled by ABC-TV next month, the New York Daily News said in today's editions.

Once a top-ranked show, "Charlie's Angels" ranked 51st in the latest Nielsen report.

An ABC spokesman declined comment on the report that the show, now in its fifth season, will be canceled.

"Charlie's Angels" originally starred Farrah Fawcett, Kate Jackson and Jaclyn Smith.

Miss Fawcett was replaced by Cheryl Ladd, who is still on the show. Miss Jackson was replaced by Shelley Hack, who in turn was replaced by Tanya Roberts this season. Miss Smith is the only remaining member of the original trio.

Pryor Suing Former Attorney

ATLANTA (AP) — Comedian Richard Pryor has filed a $1 million suit against his former attorney, David M. Franklin, contending he mixed in "hundreds of thousands" of dollars belonging to Pryor with other people's money.

The suit, filed Monday in Superior Court in Fulton County, also contends that hundreds of checks were written against the commingled funds without proper accounting safeguards.

Franklin, an Atlanta lawyer, serves as attorney-advisor to several stars, including actress Cicely Tyson and singers Roberta Flack and Gladys Knight. He's also a fund-raising power behind Atlanta Mayor Maynard Jackson and other local politicians.

Franklin was Pryor's attorney and advisor, but it was reported last month that Pryor dropped his relationship with Franklin.

There was no immediate comment from Franklin.

Rosalynn Undergoes 'Eye' Surgery

ATLANTA (AP) — Former first lady Rosalynn Carter is "fine and well" after undergoing cosmetic surgery on her face, a family spokesman says.

Mrs. Carter had "minor eye surgery" to remove some membrane from the lower part of both eyelids and had moles and sun spots removed from her face and shoulders, the spokesman said Tuesday.

Mrs. Carter entered Doctors Memorial Hospital on Thursday afternoon, after visiting the state Capitol with her husband, former President Carter, and returned to her Plains home Monday.

Scramble For Money Continues

BLOOMINGTON, Minn. (AP) — The scramble is on over who gets to keep $22,350 in bills found in a Bloomington motel room.

The Lighter Side Of The News

Kathryn E. Swanson, a maid, said the money was in $10, $20, $50 and $100 bills when she found it in a brown leather briefcase while cleaning a room that had been rented by Michael L. Bunker of St. Cloud.

Miss Swanson filed a claim for the cash. But Bunker, who returned for the money the day after he discovered it missing, told Bloomington police he had found the money five days earlier in a paper bag near a parked car in north Minneapolis.

The situation became even more complicated when police, who had some doubts about Bunker's story, notified the Internal Revenue Service. The IRS now says Bunker owes Uncle Sam $33,963 in back taxes.

So the IRS also is laying claim to the cash. In addition, both the company that owns the land and building of the Excel Inn and the motel operators have filed claim to the money on the theory they may have more legal right to the money than the maid.

The city has custody of the money, but says the courts should resolve the question of ownership and has filed suit to that effect.

No hearing date for the suit has been set.

Murder Victims In Atlanta Lacked Supervision

ATLANTA (AP) — An epidemiologist studying links in the slayings of 17 black children here has concluded the children became victims because they were on the streets unattended.

"It's the old Oliver Twist story. If you're out there and available, trouble will find you," said Fulton County epidemiologist Bob Fenton, who has been working with officials from the national Centers for Disease Control in studying the 17 slayings and one disappearance.

He also said the victims were characterized by a sense of independence and safety.

Those characteristics taken together, Fenton said Tuesday, indicate the children were "loose, alone and isolated" and not closely supervised.

Fenton, the CDC officials and Fulton County Health Commissioner William Elsea have been treating the child deaths as an epidemic, searching the backgrounds and habits of each victim in an effort to find factors that link them all.

Once those common factors are determined, Fenton said a "risk population," or group likely to become slaying victims, can be defined.

Although data still is being gathered and analyzed, Fenton said the early findings should serve as an extra warning to parents to supervise their children and to children to lose the sense of invulnerabil-ity. All 18 of the slain and missing children were black and between the ages of 7 and 15. A special police task force is investigating the cases, which date back to July 1979.

Eight of the victims were asphyxiated, two were stabbed to death, one was shot and the bodies of six were so decomposed when found that the cause of death could not be determined.

Mayor Maynard Jackson called a news conference Tuesday to announce that the city still has not heard from the federal government on its request for financial help in the investigation.

Jackson, contending the investigation is costing the city $4,000 a day more than was budgeted for police operations, said he expects word this week on whether federal funds will be offered and whether an interdepartmental task force will be formed to help prevent more slayings and to deal with widespread fear among children.

The mayor also announced that entertainer Frank Sinatra will join Sammy Davis Jr. in a March 10 benefit performance here to raise money for the investigation.

City officials hope the benefit will raise up to $100,000 to help offset the expenses resulting from the intense investigation.

Hughes Residency Trial Date Nears

AUSTIN (AP) — A long-awaited trial to determine the late Howard Hughes' legal residence — a decision worth many millions of dollars to the state that wins — probably will start in six to eight months, says an assistant to the Texas attorney general.

James Nelson made the statement to the Senate Finance Committee during Tuesday hearings on Attorney General Mark White's budget request for fiscal 1982-83.

White has requested $300,000 a year to cover expenses of pursuing Texas' claim that Hughes was a resident of Texas at the time of his death in 1976.

"It is in federal district court in Austin... and we estimate it will go to trial in six to eight months," Nelson said of the suit.

Administrators of Hughes' estate — at the suggestion of four U.S. Supreme Court Justices — filed an "interpleader" action in 1978 to resolve the residence issue.

Comptroller Bob Bullock has estimated the state would collect $100 million in inheritance taxes if the courts determine that Hughes was a resident of Texas at the time of his death in 1976.

Estimates of the estate's value range from $150 million to $1.1 billion, with administrators of the estate insisting on the lower figure.

California, Nevada and Delaware also claim Hughes as a resident, but Nevada, which has no inheritance tax, "has about given up, so the chances for Texas are a little brighter," Nelson said.

Texas' chief rival is California although administrators of the estate contend Hughes was a resident of Nevada.

U.S. District Judge Jack Roberts of Austin, who has since retired, had said he had no jurisdiction to decide Hughes' residence and dumped the question on state courts in California and Texas.

But the 5th U.S. Circuit Court of Appeals reversed Roberts' order and sent the case back to federal district court here.

Assistant Attorney General Myra McDaniel, who is handling the case, said she expects California to appeal the 5th Circuit's ruling to the U.S. Supreme Court.

"Our feeling is that the Supreme Court will promptly throw it out — how rapidly will determine when the case is tried," she said.

over. But Garwood's trials have not ended.

Col. R.E. Switzer, the presiding judge, lowered the final gavel on the court-martial Tuesday after turning down two defense motions — one asking him to declare a mistrial and another asking him to overturn the guilty verdict returned two weeks ago by a five-man jury of Marine officers.

Garwood, 34, an Indiana native, was convicted on five counts of collaborating with the enemy during two of the 14 years he was a prisoner in Vietnam. He also was convicted of assaulting another American POW.

Though Garwood could have been sentenced to life in prison, the jurors — all Vietnam veterans — voted instead to dishonorably discharge him and ordered him to forfeit all pay from the date of his conviction.

None of this is official until the base commander, Maj. Gen. David Barker, reviews the court-martial record and acts on it.

Barker can affirm the verdict and sentence, overturn them or reduce the sentence. Officials said the review could take weeks.

If Barker affirms the verdict, Garwood's attorneys say they plan to appeal all the way to the U.S. Supreme Court.

There is also the matter of pay. During Garwood's captivity, some $147,000 in back pay piled up. The court-martial jury did not have authority to order him to forfeit that money, but the government has not paid Garwood. Garwood's attorneys have filed suit in the U.S. Court of Claims seeking the money.

Meanwhile, Bill Andrews, the civilian district attorney in nearby Jacksonville, said this week he would decide later this week whether to go to trial in another case. Garwood was charged last fall with sexual molestation of a 7-year-old girl.

If convicted, Garwood could face up to 10 years in prison.

During the court-martial, Garwood's attorneys did not dispute testimony from former POWs who said Garwood served his captors as an interpreter and that he guarded other Americans and informed them.

John Paul II Appeals To China

MANILA, Philippines (AP) — Pope John Paul II made an impassioned appeal to China today to forget the past and reestablish friendly relations with the Roman Catholic Church which were broken off after the communist takeover of the mainland in 1949.

"Whatever difficulties there may have been, they belong to the past, and now it is the future that we have to look to," the pontiff said in an address to representatives of the Chinese community in the Philippines.

The pontiff has made a series of overtures to Peking in the past two years but his statement today was the first open invitation for rapprochement.

"Your country is indeed devoting all its energies to the future," the pope said. "I'm convinced that every Catholic within your frontiers will fully contribute to the building up of China, since a genuine and faithful Christian is also a genuine and good citizen."

John Paul said the Gospel of Christ and his church are not "alien to any people or any nation."

"A good Chinese Catholic works loyally for the progress of the nation, observes the obligations of filial piety toward parents, family and country. Strengthened by the Gospel message, he will cultivate, like all good Chinese, the five main virtues — charity, justice, temperance, prudence and fidelity," the pope said.

He said that ever since his election as pope in October 1978, "I have ardently desired to express my esteem to all my brothers and sisters of the church of China."

He said the church does not seek any privileges in China "but only that all those who follow Christ may be able to express their faith freely and publicly and live according to their consciences."

He added: "As I am traveling so near to your great country, let me send you a message that comes from my heart and from our common faith. At this time of grace and change, I say, open your hearts and minds to God. Out of human suffering and even out of weakness ... the Lord creates new growth."

"It is my sincere and heartfelt hope that someday soon we shall be able to join together, praising the Lord and saying 'behold how good and pleasant it is to dwell in unity as brothers.'"

Two years ago, China lifted restrictions on Christian worship, and Protestant and Catholic churches have reopened in Peking, Shanghai, Canton and some other large cities.

Soviets Quick To Attack Reagan Harshly

MOSCOW (AP) — Official Soviet press attacks on the new Reagan administration have come more quickly and been harsher and more personal than criticism of other recent American presidents.

While the Soviet news media tried to make the best of the early statements of Richard Nixon, Gerald Ford and Jimmy Carter, official commentators have been quick to attack Ronald Reagan from the first moments of his presidency.

The press treatment appears to be a sign that Kremlin leaders apparently see no prospect for early improvement in U.S. ties, which went sour over the crisis in Poland, Soviet intervention in Afghanistan and the stalled Strategic Arms Limitation Talks.

In the first month of Reagan's presidency, Soviet media have accused his administration of "political incompetence," "malicious libel," "playing a dangerous game...with lies and hypocrisy" and "indulging in philosophical discussions from the Middle Ages."

A review of the record shows Kremlin leaders welcomed Nixon's inaugural "expressions concerning peace" in 1969, described Ford as a balanced, calm and confident person in 1974, and described Carter's first presidential utterances in 1977 as "heartening."

Despite their initial courtesy, the Soviet press eventually found reason to criticize all three administrations.

The criticism concentrated on nuclear weapons control, which Soviet propagandists said was hampered by "militaristic circles in the United States." Nearly as sensitive was the issue of human rights in the Soviet Union, a cause championed by Carter early in his administration.

Soviet commentators also attacked U.S. attempts to gain more influence in Western Europe and the developing world, actions the Kremlin called an American drive for world domination.

In 1969, Soviet leaders, eager for détente, let it be known they had adopted a "wait and see attitude" to incoming President Nixon, well remembered in the Kremlin for his tough anti-communist stand from the Cold War era of the 1950s and 1960s.

Report Says Iran Plagued By Chaos

WASHINGTON (UPI) — The hostage crisis pushed Iran into growing diplomatic isolation at a time the oil-rich nation was plagued by economic chaos and religious intolerance in the political arena.

These are the key conclusions of the State Department's annual report on human rights in Iran. The four-page study was released Tuesday — one week after the report on 153 other nations was published.

The report, prepared by Jan. 20 release of the U.S. hostages, charged the American captives suffered "inhumane and degrading" treatment during their 444-day captivity.

"The Iranian government condoned this action and made no efforts to alleviate the hostages' plight," it said. It charged the hostages were totally denied access to outsiders between the failed April rescue raid and late December.

The report made clear Iran's human rights climate deteriorated in 1980 as compared to the first year of the Islamic revolution, although executions and arrests of political prisoners decreased somewhat.

Nevertheless, it refers to arrests and "credible reports" of torture, mistreatment and intimidation of counter-revolutionaries; of executions, public flogging and stoning; and of summary trials in secret without appeal.

It said freedom of press, speech and assembly suffered substantially in 1980; that despite assurance to the contrary religious minorities felt threatened; and that political factions opposed to the Islamic constitution were effectively barred from participating in elections.

"Groups which did not support the concept of an Islamic republic under the ultimate authority of Ayatollah Khomeini were subject to varying degrees of harassment ... and Khomeini remains the dominant political figure and ultimate decision-making authority" in Iran.

Former Official Accuses Government Of Cover-Up

WASHINGTON (UPI) — A former official is accusing the State Department of covering up the fact that U.S. permission was given for the attack that led to the death of U.S. Ambassador Adolf Dubs in Kabul, Afghanistan, in 1979.

Dubs was killed on Feb. 14, 1979, while being held in a hotel room in Kabul by three terrorists. He died in the shootout that erupted when Afghan troops stormed the room.

At the time, the State Department accused on-site Soviet advisers of giving the order for the attack despite pleas from Washington that no force be used because of the risk to Dubs.

Dr. Steve R. Piezenik, a deputy assistant secretary of state for medical services at the time, said in an article he wrote for The Washington Post that he was in the State Department Operations Center on the day of Dubs' death and heard a senior U.S. official give permission for the attack.

His article sought to make the broader point that U.S. policy on terrorism was inconsistent and ineffective, thus contributing to further incidents.

State department spokesman William Dyess said officials involved in the Dubs' kidnapping had been consulted and communication logs reviewed.

"The allegation (by Piezenik) is incorrect," he said. "All concerned stressed the need for restraint as well as avoiding a precipitous assault."

Canadians Begin Final Debate On Rewriting Of Constitution

OTTAWA (AP) — Canada is embarked on the final bitter round of a historic debate over the rewriting of its constitution to sever an old tie to Britain and affirm Canadian "adulthood" as a nation.

As schoolchildren watched from the polished-oak galleries, members of the House of Commons on Tuesday began their climactic discussion of Prime Minister Pierre Elliott Trudeau's constitutional reform plan.

Trudeau wants to end the British Parliament's control of the Canadian constitution, a 114-year-old British statute called the British North America Act of 1867 which only it can amend. But because he cannot get eight of the 10 provincial governments to agree to a bill of rights and an amending procedure similar to that in the United States, he wants the Canadian Parliament to ask the British to incorporate those changes before relinquishing the charter to Canada.

The parliamentary debate here is expected to last about a month, and the Liberal majority is expected to push Trudeau's package through with little trouble. But "patriation" of the constitution to Canada may not occur until late this year.

Some British lawmakers have expressed reservations about "rubber-stamping" Trudeau's proposals when only two provinces support them. He insists, however, that Prime Minister Margaret Thatcher assured him the British House of Commons would adopt his proposals.

The Canadian courts are another potential roadblock. Six provinces are pursuing legal challenges to the plan. The first lower-court decision was in Trudeau's favor, but a conclusive decision by the Supreme Court is not expected until summer at the earliest.

The debate is a painful one because it touches sensitive nerves in Canadian society — the confrontation between English and French Canadians, the colonial past and the conflict between the central administration and the powerful provincial governments.

"Canada is a country that must adopt its institutions to today. It is a country that is an adult," Justice Minister Jean Chretien said in an impassioned speech opening the debate for Trudeau's Liberal Party majority.

Will Cows Get The Ax?

WITH BILLIONS of dollars and the health of the economy at stake, the new administration is being advised to put a scalpel to many of the federal spending programs...

To say that it won't be an easy task is an understatement of the first order.

Many of the programs are considered "sacred cows," and any attempt to tamper with their funding, in a serious manner, will ignite all the ill-temperaments...

Take, for example, the National Endowments for the Arts and the Humanities...

YET THE endowment agencies appear to have fallen into the trap of funding artistic circuses—one of the most memorable being the husband-wife team that was commissioned to photograph crepe paper...

While not all of the grants awarded by the arts organization would appear to be as obvious a waste of money, there have been enough, according to those familiar with the program, to justify a serious reappraisal...

Likewise the humanities.

Prof. Charles Moser of George Washington University argues that the new administration should severely cut NEH's funds, an action which would force the agency to "concentrate its resources on the support of research and scholarship in areas which have traditionally been considered part of the humanities in a Western civilization."

He says fashionable social-political studies now appear to dominate much of NEH's work.

NEH, HE SAYS, has moved so far in the wrong direction that it presently gives "substantial preference" to the trendy, while paying short-shrift to the traditional—a priority which should be reversed, he says.

For example, NEH provided $753,000 for a film "dramatizing" the life of the textile-worker community of Roanoke Rapids, N.C., population 10,000. But the production of a 90-minute film on the life and work of American poet Carl Sandburg was deemed worth less than half that amount.

Similar examples involving all varieties of social consciousness-raising, from feminist studies to Eskimo studies abound.

The endowment programs are just two small examples. A similar pattern can be found throughout the bureaucracy, and it presents one of the most difficult problems with which the Reagan administration will have to deal.

Pollution

James J. Kilpatrick:

Seapower Hopes Sinking Fast

WASHINGTON—The power vested in Congress is "to provide and maintain a navy," but over the past decade that power has been miserably exercised. Today's Navy is undermanned and overworked.

If the example of the Guam is at all typical, our ships are sadly maintained. With every month that passes, our seapower falls behind that of the Soviet Union.

In his recent appearance on Capitol Hill, Adm. Thomas B. Hayward did his best to put a good face on things. Hayward is chief of naval operations. Today's Navy, he said, is better than it was three years ago.

Last year saw five new destroyers, one attack submarine, one amphibious assault ship, and one fleet oiler put to sea. Six new frigates were commissioned. But these sunny tidings were swiftly overshadowed.

"I WOULD HAVE to say," Hayward added, "that while we had a very good year in 1980, the Russians had a spectacular one."

The United States produced one attack submarine, the Soviets produced 12. Our first Trident is yet to take to sea; the Soviets introduced the lead ships of two new submarine classes, the Oscar and the Typhoon.

The Typhoon is the largest submarine ever constructed; it carries 20 ballistic missiles with a range greater than 4,000 miles.

"As a companion to their two new underwater colossi, the Soviets last year sent on sea trials their 22,000-ton nuclear-powered missile cruiser Kirov, leaving a second one under construction in Leningrad. We possess nothing comparable to Kirov..."

In total, the Soviets produced about 40 ships last year. We produced 18.

Over the past 10 years, the number of ships in the fleet has dropped by half. In this same period, the Navy has been charged with patrolling more than twice the area it guarded a decade earlier.

FOR THE FIRST time in anyone's recollection, said Hayward, "the U.S. Navy is unable fully to meet its peacetime commitments." Our margin of comfort is totally gone. "We are operating at the ragged edge of adequacy."

A large part of the problem is a manpower problem. During 1980 the carrier Eisenhower was underway for 247 days in the Indian Ocean. "That included periods of 93 and 154 days of continuous operations, without touching port."

The carrier Nimitz was comparably deployed. Such duty takes a toll of men. The Navy is short 22,000 petty officers. As a direct result of these personnel shortages, said Hayward, "the Navy's readiness today is the lowest I have seen it during my naval career."

IF THE SITUATION imposes the greatest sacrifices upon sea-going men and their families, it also imposes great burdens upon the ships. De-

Lightly Speaking

Mary was a devoted housekeeper who catered to every whim of her employers, the professor and his wife. One morning Mary's mistress noticed Mary peeping into the professor's bedroom.

"What do you think the professor would think if he saw you watching him get dressed?" the wife asked.

Mary thought for a moment. "I've been doing it every morning for 15 years," she said. "When he puts his pants on, I put his eggs on."

ONE MAN'S OPINION Kenneth May Get The Message?

THE THEME of President Reagan's budget-cutting and tax-cutting message tonight seems to be "The Bucks Stop Here."

Instead of a "divide and conquer" approach to foes of various budget reductions, the President's strategy seems to be to roll 'em all into one ball of wax and turn on the heat.

Reagan views federal revenue and spending as a supply and demand operation. He doesn't want the demand to exceed the supply much longer.

From the Quote Wrack: "An analysis of figures supplied by the government and the Chamber of Commerce of the U.S. shows that the average federal employee is paid $2,661 more per year in salary and $2,853 more in fringe benefits than the typical private worker."—U.S. News & World Report.

No wonder the budget is out of hand; all of the high-priced talent is on the spending side of the ledger.

THE LEGAL drinking age will rise from 18 to 19 if a bill approved by the Texas Senate becomes law.

A lot of high school principals applaud the move because, they say, drinking beer and other beverages during the lunch hour has become a serious problem among students.

If an 18-year-old can buy an alcoholic drink legally, he and his younger friends are more likely to belly up to the bar, apparently, than if the legal age is a year older.

There aren't so many 19-year-old high schoolers, we suppose.

Raising the age, of course, would nullify the chief reason for giving 18-year-olds the vote; not many of them take the trouble to go to the polls but they sure like to drink and drive.

The biggest rhubarb raised by senators over the drinking age came from Sen. Walter Mondale, R-Houston, who got mad because freshman Sen. Bill Saraulis, D-Herford, sponsored the bill that Mondale had pushed for years.

C'mon, fellows, settle your differences like men. Over a drink.

DISCIPLINE is becoming the hallmark of the nation's New Direction. Besides budget discipline, the movement takes other forms.

For example, on the same day that Education Secretary T.H. Bell said that schools must return to behavioral and academic discipline, it was reported that the Navy is one step ahead.

Dress codes are back in style and the Brass is insisting that sailors salute in proper military fashion.

Critics of the New Navy have believed that the lack of discipline represented a threat to its combat readiness; those who liked the relaxed way of doing things said it improved morale.

Probably there's a middle ground in there somewhere which would let Navy personnel enjoy a measure of at-easiness and yet not be so laid-back that they fail to snap to in a military manner.

A staggering federal debt, says My Neighbor Twice Removed, is the result of the Gov't's drunken spending spree.

THE REAGAN administration is facing its first major domestic crisis. No, not inflation. Regulations. Conflicting regulations.

News stories tell us that the Occupational Safety and Health Administration has a rule requiring lavatories in workplaces to have both hot and cold running water.

But the General Services Administration cut off the water heaters in Washington area government buildings under the Carter Presidency in order to save fuel and an estimated $500,000 out of a $600,000,000 budget.

OSHA wants its regulations enforced. The GSA says it'll pay a fine first if it has to.

Some bureaucrats say hot water is essential to clean government; others say they stay in enough hot water anyway without having to have it on tap.

Clearly, these conflicting bureaucratic rules are muddying the picture in Our Nation's Capital.

The President can't soft soap his way out of this one. He must face up to the problem coldly rather than wash his hands of it.

JOSEPH SOBRAN:

Sexperts Usurping Parental Role

WASHINGTON—The renewed flap over sex education isn't really about sex. It's about parents.

Our new secretary of Health and Human Services, Richard Schweiker, is a deeply decent man who grasps that at this point in history, the greatest human service the government can perform is to leave people alone.

Schweiker has now gone on record as opposing federal involvement in sex education. In fact he frowns on all sex education in public schools, on grounds that the matter is best left to parents.

Parents? His statement has inflamed sex education advocates, including my columnist colleague Ellen Goodman. Miss Goodman argues that parents have failed in sex education.

SHE THINKS GOVERNMENT, spared "foolish accusations" and (yes) "devastating budget slashes," can help parents do better—can make them "partners in caring," along with those eminent carers, the education professionals.

She cites, for instance, a poll that found that "Only one-third of mothers and teenage daughters discuss sex and birth control with any regularity." One obvious solution would be federal guidelines—mandating, say, family sex-raps every Thursday evening. But Miss Goodman doesn't propose that.

No, sensing the growing parental revulsion against "experts," she suggests that the experts let the parents in on sex education so as to "help parents deal with these issues."

Do you sense a bit of condescension, not to say arrogance, in this approach?

I STRONGLY SUSPECT that our much-heralded "openness" has more to do with the problem than with the solution.

But more fundamentally, why blame everything on parents? If the normal weaknesses of flesh are worse than they used to be, it can't be said—not fairly and honestly, anyway—that it's because parents have more authority than they used to have. Quite the contrary.

Do parents fail in their duties? Well, so does government—more spectacularly.

But parents fail less. And their failures in other areas—moral and religious education, which are the foundations of the only true sex education—are no excuse for letting the state usurp their role.

Talk-talk in the classroom is no substitute for a quiet example at home. There is more true sex education in the fidelity and decency of parents than in the volubility of their rulers.

In this age of explicitness, silence is the most underrated of all virtues. State-sponsored sex education may strip away the sense of privacy essential to intimate matters.

But maybe that's the real point. Respect for quiet traditions hasn't exactly been the long suit of the sexperts.

What they call sex education—stripped of the religious and moral values of home and church—may be bad for the sense of individual privacy, but it fits in nicely with the larger goal of the total secularized and expert-ruled society.

We are finished, I hope, with the kind of government in which experts know best—even about caring."

Ronald Reagan promised us a government that won't pretend to know better than the governed what is good for them. He promised also to give power to those who don't lust for power. In Richard Schweiker he is off to a fine start.

And if there is one group that deserves to be spared foolish accusations, it's parents.

Sylvia Porter:

Money Spent To Avoid Loss Isn't Deductible

(Second of nine columns)

NEW YORK—The interest rate you get on any tax refunds or owe on any unpaid taxes was doubled starting Feb. 1, 1980.

Until that date, the IRS paid interest on tax refunds at an annual rate of 6 percent and charged you at the same 6 percent annual rate of interest on unpaid taxes that you owed.

But because of the historic upsurge in the prime rate of interest charged by banks to top corporate borrowers in 1979, the tax law was changed to require an "adjustment" in this annual rate of interest. It was raised to 12 percent, beginning February 1980.

So if you don't pay your 1980 income taxes in full by the April 15, 1981, due date, you will be charged interest at the new 12 percent rate on your unpaid taxes.

IF, THOUGH, THE IRS should owe you interest on a refund, it, too, must pay the interest at 12 percent instead of the old 6 percent rate.

You're among millions of us if you were hit by casualty losses (big or moderate) in 1980—and of course, you can deduct the loss. But ironically, if you spend money in order to prevent a casualty, that expenditure has been held NOT deductible under a Tax Court ruling in 1980.

In order to prevent his pine trees from interfering with power lines to his home, a taxpayer had the branches of the trees removed on the side facing the power lines.

The removal of the branches on one side made the trees subject to breaking or being uprooted in case of an ice storm. Should this happen, his residence could be damaged.

TO PREVENT DAMAGE that would have been a casualty loss, the utility company was requested, and did remove the trees. The homeowner as a result claimed a casualty loss for the decrease in the value of his property. He did not succeed.

Preventive measures, ruled the Tax Court, are not casualties. If cutting trees down to prevent a casualty were deductible, other individuals could claim that a burglar alarm system or a smoke detector came under the category of casualty losses, the court reasoned.

If you have neglected to get the maximum benefit out of an Individual Retirement Account (IRA) for 1980, you still are not too late to retrieve the error—even though 1980 is behind us.

ASSUMING YOU COULD have set up an IRA in 1980 or that you could have made an added contribution to an existing IRA, you can set up an IRA or make an added contribution to an existing one, if you act before the due date of your 1980 return, including extensions.

Thus, if you get an extension until June 15, 1981, you have until that date to set up an IRA and/or make a contribution to an IRA.

If you are self-employed and already have a Keogh Plan to which you did not make the maximum contribution possible in 1980, you can make contributions to the plan by the same due date of your tax return and have the contribution treated as made in 1980. It is too late, however, to set up a Keogh plan for '80 in '81.

If you used your car for charitable purposes or as part of your allowable moving expenses in 1980, you can claim a flat mileage allowance of nine cents a mile for the use of your car, instead of your actual expenses.

This is up a penny from the eight cents a mile allowed in 1979 for similar use of a car. (Still hardly generous!)

This nine cents instead of eight cents a mile allowance also is permitted as a flat mileage deduction for auto travel as a medical expense.

For medical expense tax purposes, you do not have to figure out the actual cost of your automobile travel in 1980 to and from your doctor's office, dentist, hospital, etc. The IRS permits the flat mileage deduction of nine cents.

A 1980 TAX Court ruling on when a "penalty" may be tax deductible as interest may become applicable in many states across the U.S. in the future and thus should be noted with care.

The case so far involves California where if you, a California property owner, lost your property to the state because you were delinquent in your real estate taxes, you must pay the back taxes plus a delinquency penalty plus a redemption penalty to recover the property.

In 1980, the Tax Court held that the flat redemption penalty is not a deductible real estate tax.

However, the delinquency penalty is deductible as interest. The reason is that while it is labeled "penalty," the penalty is 1 percent per month—a characteristic of interest.

The Almanac
TODAY IN HISTORY

By United Press International
Today is Wednesday, Feb. 18, the 49th day of 1981 with 316 to follow.

The moon is full.
The morning stars are Venus, Jupiter, Saturn and Mercury.
The evening star is Mars.
Those born on this date are under the sign of Aquarius.

American philanthropist George Peabody was born Feb. 18, 1795.

On this date in history:
In 1861, Jefferson Davis was sworn in to office as president of the Confederate States of America at Montgomery, Ala.

In 1930, the planet Pluto was discovered by astronomer Clyde Tom Baugh at the Lovell Observatory in Flagstaff, Ariz.

In 1967, nuclear physicist Robert Oppenheimer died at the age of 62. He played a key role in development of the atomic bomb.

In 1980, Pierre Elliot Trudeau and the Liberal Party were returned to power in Canada.

A thought for the day:
Thomas Jefferson said, "I hold... that a little rebellion now and then is a good thing, and as necessary in the political world as storms in the physical."

Friend Gets 'Picture' Of Selected Card

By SHARI LEWIS
Your friends'll think you're stuck on this card trick — until they discover that it's just a joke!
Ask your pal to pick a card (yes, yes — of course, ANY card) and to put it back ON TOP of the deck. Now say, "I have figured out what card you chose, and I'm going to send a mental picture of your card to some other person in the room."
Stand with your back to the buddy who picked the card — so that you are facing someone else. Press the deck to your forehead (saying, "I'm concentrating very hard on sending you the name of this card") and then that person you're facing will be able to name the card that was picked, lickety split!
And I do mean LICKety split! Here's how: The selected card is put on top of the deck. As you turn around, secretly lick your finger and moisten your forehead. When you press the deck against your forehead, the top card will stick to your forehead, face outward. Just take the rest of the deck away from your forehead, and the person you are facing will be able to read the selected card!
Tuesday's Brain Twister: Why was the little raspberry worried?
Answer: Because her mom and pop were in a jam.
Today's Brain Twister: Do you know how to make a COW MOO? (Look for the answer in Thursday's Kids-Only Club column.)
Shari has written four new Kids-Only Club books: "How Kids Can Really Make Money," "Toy Store In-a-Book," "Impossible, Unless You Know How," and "Spooky Stuff." Get all four for the price of three, by sending your name and address, along with $3.85 plus 95 cents for postage, handling and tax, for a total of $6.80 to: Shari, in care of The Lubbock Avalanche-Journal, 6464 Sunset Blvd., Suite 920, Hollywood, Calif. 90028.

Hotel Rooms Available For Carnival Season

NEW ORLEANS (AP) — Mardi Gras is just two weeks away, but about 10 percent of this city's hotel rooms are still available, says a spokesman for the Hotel-Motel Association.
"We're optimistic that by the four-day Mardi Gras period we'll be in the high 90s on reservations, with most of the rooms filled," Bill Langkopp, executive director of the association, said this week.
New Orleans has more than 22,000 hotel rooms, and Mardi Gras used to be one period the industry could count on for full occupancy.
Because of that tourist business, hotel management discouraged conventions over the Carnival season.
But Langkopp said this year's "softening" of the Mardi Gras hotel market may encourage the hotels to begin seeking convention business over the Carnival season.
Mardi Gras is March 3 this year. The Carnival season, marked by street parades and invitation-only parties, gets going full blast next weekend.
"In the future, you'll probably see changes in the marketing philosophy," he said. "I think you'll probably see an approach that emphasizes mixing business with pleasure."
Hotel management is not panicky over the fact that some rooms are empty, Langkopp said.
"Carnival was always one of our very obvious peak periods. But just as obviously, you don't build a hotel on the basis of four days a year," he said.
There are already about 4,000 more hotel rooms scheduled for construction, including such things as two new buildings and a $35 million, 450-room addition to the 1,200-room Hilton Hotel, he said.
New Orleans is one of three tourist-oriented cities in the United States which has avoided an otherwise general decline in business, he said, listing San Francisco and New York as the other two.
"And our business is almost entirely tourism and conventions. We don't have the industrial base that other cities have. We can't count on filling a big percentage of our rooms with people coming and going on business trips," he said.
Only the port and its related business exceeds tourism as a major industry in New Orleans.
And although the number of Mardi Gras visitors has just about doubled over the past few years — keeping pace with the construction of new hotel rooms so far — he said the hotel industry can no longer count on a seller's market.
"We've actively discouraged conventions over Mardi Gras in the past," he said. "I don't think we'll be able to do that anymore."

CORRECTION
In the Sears National magazine ads for March which contains model #1341 Sewing Machine Hood, an error was made. The copy correctly states 8 stitches, however the diagram of the stitch package incorrectly shows 10 stitches. There are no serging or shell stitches on model 1341. We regret this error.

President Pinning Hopes On Economic Forecasts

By WALTER R. MEARS
WASHINGTON (AP) — It is a sophisticated form of roulette, but a gamble nonetheless — and President Reagan has a lot riding on the dicey business of economic forecasting.

The educated guesses of his economic advisers will be the underpinning of the budget and tax program he will present to Congress Wednesday night. Should those forecasts turn out to be wrong, as they generally did for Jimmy Carter, the results the administration anticipates may be unattainable.

Carter always said factors no administration could control, notably the soaring price of imported oil, fueled inflation and kept him from reaching his goals. That didn't do him any good at the polls.

Reagan hasn't been in office a month yet, and his advisers already have come up with two sets of predictions. At first they forecast a drastic drop in inflation by next year, to 6.5 percent — a little more than half the rate of the year just past.

That has been tempered now, and sources said Reagan would be forecasting an inflation rate of just over 8 percent in 1982. That would be a marked improvement, and a boon to Republicans in the congressional elections that year, but it is not so ambitious a target as the original forecast would have set.

The problem for presidents is that when the forecasts don't pan out, and things get worse or stay the same, it is not the economic seers who get the blame. It is the man who hired them.

Federal budgets and taxes have a marked effect on inflation, employment and the gross national product. But it works the other way around, too. Tax revenues and the cost of federal programs vary with the state of the economy.

Social Security and other government retirement programs are tied to the cost of living; when it goes up, so do benefits. When interest rates soar, so does the cost of covering the national debt. Let unemployment rise and so will the price of unemployment compensation and food stamp programs, while tax revenues dip because there aren't as many people drawing paychecks.

By law, presidents publish their economic assumptions as part of the budgets they send Congress each year. Carter's final budget message forecast an inflation rate of 12.6 percent this year, slightly above the rate for 1980. Of course he was leaving office when he wrote that budget, which may help account for the pessimism.

A year earlier, in a budget written as he began his unsuccessful re-election campaign, Carter had forecast that the inflation rate would decline to 8.6 percent in 1981.

The last Carter budget predicted an inflation rate of 9.6 percent in 1982.

Reagan advisers at first came up with a forecast of sharp economic growth and a plunge in inflation to 6.5 percent next year. Now they have decided that a 1982 rate of slightly more than 8 percent is likely.

There were both advantages and risks in the more optimistic forecast. It was good advertising for the Reagan plan to cut the budget and taxes. But forecasts of a leveling cost of living become political promises, and that one will come due in an election year.

The Republicans never let anyone forget that Carter came to office setting as his goals a reduction in both inflation and unemployment to about 4 percent, and a balanced federal budget by this time. He didn't come close on any of the three.

When he left the White House, inflation was at three times his target, unemployment stood at 7.4 percent, and the budget was at least $56 billion in the red. Reagan said the deficit for the year that ends Sept. 30 actually will be closer to $80 billion.

Given the peril of projections that may not be met, the Republican administration is proceeding more cautiously. Reagan has to promise dividends to have a chance of getting congressional approval for the drastic budget cuts he seeks. The difficult task is to keep the promises within reach.

AFL-CIO, Autoworkers Approaching Unification

BAL HARBOUR, Fla. (AP) — The AFL-CIO and the United Auto Workers, sharing concern about the misfortunes of the American automobile industry, are moving closer to unification after a 14-year separation.

Both Lane Kirkland, president of the federation, and Douglas Fraser, head of the UAW, are calling for new import quotas on Japanese-made cars. They also are voicing opposition to the Reagan administration's plans to reduce special unemployment assistance designed for those who lose their jobs because of competition from imports. The AFL-CIO and the UAW parted company in 1967 over an internal dispute and the auto workers have been operating independently of the 14 million-member federation ever since.

Fraser told reporters Tuesday, "I still favor the idea of reaffiliation," and said the UAW's executive board will meet March 9 to consider the matter. He said some board members have expressed opposition to such a move because they feel the UAW has done well on its own and would suffer a loss in prestige by reaffiliating.

Kirkland invited the UAW and the Teamsters to rejoin the labor federation some time ago. On Tuesday, during the annual meeting of the AFL-CIO executive council, Kirkland, Fraser and other labor leaders concentrated mostly on the automobile industry problem, renewing their call for import quotas and expressing concern about cuts in the Trade Adjustment Assistance program.

High-Rise Infernos Depleting Las Vegas Fire Department

LAS VEGAS, Nev. (UPI) — Should a third high-rise hotel blaze strike, fire officials say they would be hard pressed to come up with enough manpower and supplies to battle the inferno.

"We are depleted," Capt. Ralph Dinsman said Tuesday. "Many of the airpicks are used up. In manpower, we had 132 injured in the MGM fire and 50 at the Hilton."

Dinsman said Clark County fire officials have "already talked to different chiefs at surrounding fire departments" in case another disastrous high-rise blaze struck the gambling mecca.

But Gov. Robert List said the state virtually had no firefighting equipment at the state level to offer as backup.

The 2,780-room Las Vegas Hilton, closed under heavy security since the fire, is scheduled to reopen its casino, showroom and public areas Thursday, with 1,000 rooms put back into service on the same day, a spokesman said Tuesday.

Also Thursday, formal murder and arson complaints probably will be filed against Philip Bruce Cline, who was arrested as a suspect within 24 hours of the Las Vegas Hilton fire Feb. 10 that killed eight people and injured at least 198 others. Other suspects were being sought.

Assistant District Attorney Don Wadsworth said Tuesday the formal complaint was "still in the formulative stages" and that prosecutors were "aiming for arraignment Thursday."

The eight murder counts against the 23-year-old busboy make it the largest homicide case in the history of the gambling mecca.

Cline reportedly told police he accidentally started a single fire on the eighth floor while engaging in a homosexual act with a man known only as "Joe."

Clark County Fire Chief Roy Parrish challenged Cline's account as "science fiction." And the chief of the regional arson task force, Bob Mills, said, "in the greatest stretch of the imagination, it is not conceivable."

Hours after the main blaze erupted on the eighth floor of the 30-story hotel, other fires were deliberately set in three other locations.

Arson investigators, saying more than one person was involved in the blaze, are concentrating their probe into secondary fires on the second, third and ninth floors. There have been no other arrests.

Booklet Tabulates Cost Of Operating Auto

By JOE GULICK
Avalanche-Journal Staff

Gasoline prices recently took a jump and there are predictions that it won't be long before gasoline is $1.50 per gallon.

There is probably nothing car-owners want to hear less than how much they are GOING to be paying. A trip to the gasoline pump has already become a nightmare and thoughts of higher gasoline prices are enough to make serious Cadillac drivers think about buying a moped.

Though gasoline is certainly the most publicized expense of owning and operating a car, the overpriced liquid is actually only a fraction of the total expense involved per mile, according to the U.S. Department of Transportation.

With slightly aged figures, the Transportation Department folks determined it costs 24.6 cents per mile to own and operate a standard sized car, 21.7 cents per mile to run a compact and 18.5 cents per mile to run a subcompact. Not surprisingly, they computed the cost of running a van to be somewhat higher, 36.2 cents per gallon.

These figures were printed in a booklet called "Cost of Owning and Operating Automobiles and Vans," published by the U.S. Department of Transportation last year.

For the purposes of computation, gasoline prices were figured into the costs at the price of a dollar a gallon, so the figures are already low.

But the final computations seem even lower. For example, the estimated gasoline cost per mile for a compact car (and these gasoline prices are excluding taxes) is 4.9 cents per gallon. Taxes raise it a little, but the total can't be more than a little over five cents per gallon.

If the compact car is getting an average of 15 miles per gallon and gasoline costs $1 per gallon, the driver is paying 6.7 cents per gallon.

Similarly, a standard car is computed at 5.5 cents per gallon and tax would bring it up a fraction. At $1 per gallon, a standard car-owner would have to get 16.7 miles per gallon to get 6.0 cents per gallon. Are there many standard car owners that average 16.7 miles? Probably not too many.

Though the figures do appear to be somewhat low for figuring gasoline, the booklet is still a good guide. It separates costs into ownership costs and operating costs and gives a comprehensive view of what is spent on a car.

Ownership costs are figured to be those incurred just because the vehicle is owned. They include depreciation, insurance, finance charges, registration and titling charges, scheduled maintenance, accessory costs and garaging, the Department of Transportation said.

Most of these costs will be there whether the person owning the car drives 200 miles in a year or 20,000 miles. In the extreme case, if the car were kept in the family garage and taken out one day a year and driven for 20 miles, a portion of the costs would still occur.

Depreciation is the greatest single cost of owning and operating most passenger vehicles during a 10-year period, according to the Department of Transportation. Though gasoline costs will probably soon overtake depreciation, they are currently second.

Everyone knows insurance costs are rising yearly and they cost, on the average, over two cents per mile driven and 7.2 cents per mile for vans. Insurance costs are determined by amount of coverage, characteristics of the driver(s), the purpose for which the car is used and locations of the car's operation.

Finance charges must be added if the car is financed, but even if the car is paid for in cash, the owner is forfeiting savings or investment interest on his money. One way or another, tying up large amounts of money in vehicles is going to cost.

Registration and titling fees refer to license tag fees and fees paid when the car is purchased. Scheduled maintenance repairs include items like oil changes and other maintenance suggested at mileage or time intervals.

Nonscheduled repairs of a car are a different matter. These include such delightful items as the starter which goes out on the coldest morning of the winter, the radiator hose that bursts on the hottest day of the summer or the water pump that suddenly begins spewing water and cooling fluid. Such maintenance is a part of owning a car and is reflected in the number of miles the car is driven.

Taxes are paid not only when the car is purchased and for license tag fees, but also for federal and state taxes on gasoline and oil. It adds up pretty quickly.

For a free copy of the booklet "Cost of Owning and Operating Automobiles and Vans," consumers should write Consumer Information Center, Pueblo, Colo., 81009. In addition to tables and detailed information on costs of owning vehicles, the booklet has suggestions on what type car to buy, when to trade in a car and ways to save on costs for car owners.

Temporary Transit Site Recommended

By PAT GRAVES
Avalanche-Journal Staff

The Transit Advisory Board Tuesday sidestepped the question of what to do about a permanent downtown Citibus transfer point, but recommended to the City Council that a temporary site be considered on Broadway between Avenue H and Texas Avenue.

Despite a plea from Transit Coordinator John Wilson, who reminded board members that the council had requested a recommendation as soon as possible, no decision was reached on a long-term solution to the problem.

Of the five sites under consideration, only the half-block on Broadway adjacent to the county courthouse and the federal building received positive comments from Wilson as a temporary location.

He envisions some type of passenger shelters, perhaps three-sided glass structures with heaters, on both sides of Broadway between Avenue H and Texas Avenue. Wilson said he plans to present the board's recommendation to the City Council Feb. 26. He said the shelters could be erected two weeks after they receive approval.

The transit staff, however, favors a permanent building as a transfer point, preferably at Broadway and Avenue K. Such a facility would provide an indoor waiting area for passengers where they could make change and buy refreshments.

Lubbock's bus system transfer point, where all bus routes in the city converge, is Broadway, and merchants in the block between Avenues J and K are upset that bus passengers are loitering inside and in front of their businesses waiting for buses.

The council suggested the transfer point be located at the new transit facility, under construction at 8th Street and Texas Avenue, or in a blocked-off area of Avenue J between Main Street and Broadway. Also being considered is the opposite corner of Broadway and Avenue K.

Wilson termed temporary shelters inadequate and stressed that he needed direction from the board, particularly since groundwork is being laid to make the project eligible for federal funds.

But board member Morris Wilkes seemed to sum up the panel's feelings when he said, "We can't recommend a long-term site to the City Council based on the current information." The board asked the staff to continue their study and report back next month.

Wilson and transit manager Dwight Maddox defended the indoor alternative, saying concession revenues could offset maintenance costs and that a permanent facility would generate more downtown business, enhance its aesthetics and perhaps increase ridership.

Board chairman Bill Dean countered, "We're going to have a tough time getting it done."

Rita Clements Tours Plainview Project

By BUDDY BAKER
A-J Correspondent

PLAINVIEW — After touring a one-square block area of the downtown business district here, the wife of Governor Bill Clements said Tuesday she was "very impressed with the potential" for historic preservation of the area.

Rita Clements made the comment during a reception in her honor following a tour of part of the central business district. Mrs. Clements' one-hour visit here was part of a two-day tour of five Texas cities chosen to participate in the national Main Street project.

The state's first lady told a gathering of about 125 persons that "Texas is indeed a state very deep in history" and the work of restoring downtown buildings to their original appearance is "part of a very exciting project."

Accompanying her on the tour is Michael Ainslie, head of the Washington-based National Trust for Historic Preservation, Truett Latimer and Anice Read of the Texas Historical Commission and Bill Hamilton of the governor's Budget and Planning Office.

The party arrived shortly after noon Tuesday at the Plainview-Hale County Airport and told a group of reporters there that through the Main Street project, "I will hope to see the downtown

Lawyer Says Mrs. Daniel Beaten During Marriage

LIBERTY (UPI) — Richard "Racehorse" Haynes, noted Texas defense attorney now representing Vickie Daniel in the fatal shooting of her husband, says his client was abused by her husband when he was alive, and since then has been abused by the state.

Haynes suggested Tuesday Mrs. Daniel was the victim of beatings by former Texas House Speaker Price Daniel Jr. and that she killed him in self-defense in the family home.

He also said he would not allow any additional abuses of Mrs. Daniel's civil rights by Liberty County authorities.

Haynes, named co-counsel with Mrs. Daniel's original attorney, Andrew Lannie Jr. of Baytown, said he planned first to demand that Liberty County officials release his client's personal property to her.

Haynes said he would not tolerate any more "unprofessional" treatment of Mrs. Daniel by officials. He said items irrelevant to any criminal inquiry such as her driver's license, purse, cosmetics, financial records and her children's birth certificates were taken Feb. 4 by Sheriff C.L. "Buck" Eckols.

Haynes said his client was forced to forfeit her property without a hearing or due process.

"She has been subjected to some very curious circumstances and some very harsh circumstances since the indictment that catapulted her to page one," Haynes said.

Haynes, who successfully defended Fort Worth millionaire T. Cullen Davis against murder charges, says Mrs. Daniel will have a strong defense as a woman abused by her husband. "When the full facts are developed, you'll see that there are those elements involved ... a battered wife," Haynes said.

Eckols, however, denied that being beaten was a legitimate defense.

"Does that give her the right to kill anyone?" he said.

Eckols also said he never received any domestic violence complaints involving the Daniels during the four years they were married.

Haynes was hired Friday by Mrs. Daniel's family. He will join a defense team including Lannie and Harlan Friend of Liberty.

Defense lawyers say they are unsure whether they will ask for a change of venue to move the trial to another city.

Lannie said earlier he wanted to move the trial from Liberty, to assure his client a fair jury, but Haynes said he was unsure if moving it would be in Mrs. Daniel's best interest.

Cases where one side opens the bidding only to find that the opponents end up buying the contract in that strain are not commonplace. But it does happen, as this hand from a recent national championship proves.

The bidding started with a normal one heart opening bid, a takeout double and a response. When North's two diamond bid was doubled by West for takeout and converted by East to penalties, South decided, correctly, that diamonds were unlikely to be the best spot. He tried two hearts, and after West doubled, North elected to leave it to his partner to clarify his bid. He was rather surprised to find his side playing two hearts doubled.

West thought Christmas had come rather early that year, and was looking forward to a four-figure penalty when he led the king of clubs—it did not seem to matter what he led. Unfortunately, after that opening salvo, the defenders could only sit back and watch as the declarer, Ron Von der Porten of San Francisco, reeled in the first eight tricks.

Declarer won the ace of clubs and ruffed a club. The ace-king of spades were cashed and another club was ruffed. A spade was ruffed in dummy and the fourth club was ruffed in the closed hand. After leading to the ace of diamonds for his eighth trick, the declarer graciously conceded the last five tricks to the defenders.

Have you spotted the only lead to defeat the contract?

West must cash a high heart at trick one, removing dummy's lone trump, thereby depriving declarer of a spade ruff on the table. No matter what declarer tries, he cannot come to more than seven tricks unless there is a defensive lapse.

At Wit's End...

By ERMA BOMBECK

Only time will tell if it's a laundry breakthrough, but for the moment, a combination bar and laundromat in Lawrence, Kans., has given new meaning to the word suds.

According to a UPI wire story, Suds 'n' Duds laundromat is the brainchild of a couple of men who figured out that laundry is just about the most boring thing in the world. So, while the washer is on fill, so is the washee.

I used to know a woman who occasionally nipped to get through her ironing and she ended up one day pressing her tongue.

Heaven knows I'm for anything that makes running a home an equal opportunity enterprise, but a laundry room doesn't seem to be the place for people who turn ugly when they drink.

My experiences with laundromats has been limited to those I frequent on vacations. (Frequent. If you get a card from me that isn't spotted with bleach, it's a forgery.) I must say they're a strange bunch to deal with when sober. I hate to think what they'd be like if they were picked up on a WWI (Washing While Intoxicated). It's probably my own insecurity with things mechanical, but I am intimidated in laundromats beyond belief.

Somehow, I always follow on the heels of a woman who is camping outside of town with eight children and is lugging in a rain-soaked tent and ten muddy sleeping bags. Washers and dryers are her life. She knows everything. She has a pocketful of change, knows what washers work and what dryers overheat. She has five of them spinning at once with the confidence and organization of a high-roller at Vegas. She usually has a small tattoo of a snake on her wrist.

Somehow, you do not want to hear her answer when you ask what she thinks a dryer will do to your V-neck cashmere.

Maybe the laundry lounge will work. I have a few reservations about it. Would you want to explain to a man who is sloshed what happens to one out of every pair of his socks and where they go when they disappear? Do you want to see the wife who faded her husband's underwear pink... drink enough courage to go home?

There was one man at the Suds 'n' Duds who went to the laundry, drank a little beer, watched a little football on the tube and went home at 11:30. It wasn't until he got into the car that he saw his load of dirty laundry and remembered what he had come for.

On the other hand, a bar would be a nice place to write postcards home.

Let me think about it.

Book By Former Mental Patient Depicts Ordeal Of Hospital Stay

By JACQUE HUTCHINS
Family News Staff

He was given shock treatments, denied the right to be a vegetarian, his mail was read and he was often sedated against his will. At the end of each terror-filled day he was locked in his room.

Doug Cameron never committed a crime, never harmed anyone, but he was treated as a criminal, or worse yet as an animal, as he explains in his book, "How To Survive Being Committed To A Mental Hospital."

The 33-year-old Cameron was in Lubbock recently and spoke of the terrifying circumstances which left him with little memory of his childhood, high school or college days.

The ordeal began about 10 years ago. Cameron had completed his degree in social sciences with a psychology emphasis from Southern Methodist University in Dallas. He was leading a quiet, normal life until one day a bizarre incident occurred. He went into a "catatonic" state, according to doctors, and awoke to find himself in an observation ward. He has gone into these states three times, each time awakening in an observation ward.

He explained the incidents: "Basically I enter into a state of consciousness, sometimes from a dream and sometimes from the waking state into which it seems to me I am more asleep than awake."

"Whoever I happened to be with at the time has usually rushed me off to the nearest relative, who has then taken me to a psychiatrist, who has then placed me in an observation ward."

Cameron explained that the "catatonic states" would only last for two or three days. "The trouble in my case, is that I usually came out of these states in the observation ward, completely coherent and completely logical." He is still unsure of the cause of these episodes. "It could have been psychological, might have been from drugs, or epilepsy," he said. But in all the cases he was completely normal after the episodes, and although he was placed in mental hospitals for the unusual behavior, he received no treatment while incarcerated.

The first hospital was a state hospital. Oddly enough, Cameron had worked for a very short time in that hospital before becoming disgusted with its system.

He described the state hospital as being less severe than the others. He didn't want to take tranquilizers or other medication during his three-month stay, therefore he was not forced to.

But a private hospital in Houston was a different story. Here he refused to be voluntarily committed. After two weeks in an observation ward he was given a trial, with a jury to decide whether he was to be committed or not. He spoke in his own behalf — he lost. He was to remain in the hospital for six months.

Although it was a private hospital, he describes it as a prison. "The doors were locked; our mail was read; we were forced to take medication in lieu of being held down and needled, and to make a long story short, we were in jail," he said.

As bad as that hospital was, Cameron was yet to face the nightmare of still another. He was placed in an observation ward in solitary confinement for two weeks before being committed to this institution. He was strapped on his back, and forced to stare at a bright light bulb. The reason given was that he would not sign the "voluntary" commitment papers.

He finally gave in and signed, with the stipulation that he would receive no shock treatments. His lawyer assured him he would not receive any. He received 18 during his three-month stay at the hospital. "Everyone who receives shock treatments receives 15, no more, no less. But I got 18, because of my refusal to eat meat," he said.

"It was hard to believe that educated men would knowingly abuse anybody. But no matter how educated they are, it is pretty hard to find the self discipline not to do the easiest thing. It is simply easier to tranquilize people in masses rather than treat them."

But Cameron knows first hand that the system is not working. "The treatment I received was not commensurate with the type of illness I had," he said.

Over a five-year time period his stay in the three mental hospitals amounted to about one year. His marriage failed; he was ignored by his family during these years. It took eight more years to recover from the shock treatments he received, against his will.

Today Cameron stays busy fighting for better treatment in mental hospitals. He is involved with mental health associations and is trying to instigate bills that will protect patient's rights.

SQUASH SOUFFLE

Butter
Sugar
1/3 cup butter
1/4 cup chopped onion
1/3 cup all-purpose flour
1/2 tsp. salt
1/4 tsp. ground nutmeg
1 cup milk
2 tbsps. firmly packed brown sugar
2 1/2 cup mashed, cooked acorn or Hubbard squash or 2 pkgs. (12 oz. each) frozen cooked squash, thawed
1/4 cup apple or orange juice
6 eggs, separated
3/4 tsp. cream of tartar

Butter bottom and sides of 12x7x2-inch baking dish. Sprinkle with sugar. In medium saucepan cook onion in 1/3 cup butter over medium heat until tender but not brown, about 2 minutes. Blend in flour, salt and nutmeg. Cook, stirring constantly, until mixture boils and thickens. Remove from heat. Blend in squash and apple juice.

In large mixing bowl, beat egg whites and cream of tartar at high speed until stiff but not dry, just until whites no longer slip when bowl is tilted.

In small bowl beat egg yolks slightly. Blend small amount of hot squash mixture into yolks. Stir yolk mixture into squash mixture. Gently but thoroughly fold yolk mixture into whites. Pour into prepared dish and gently smooth surface.

Bake in preheated 350 degree oven until puffy, delicately browned and soufflé shakes slightly when oven rack is gently moved back and forth, 40-45 minutes. Serve immediately.

DEAR ABBY Home For Unwed Moms Lauded

DEAR READERS: In my mail this morning was a picture of a beautiful newborn baby boy. I'm very sorry I can't share it with you, but I can share the letter that accompanied it:

DEAR ABBY: I'm 18 years old and want to tell you about a place that is to many a godsend. It's Booth-Memorial Residence, a home for unwed mothers-to-be. It's run by the Salvation Army people, and the atmosphere is one of love, caring and understanding. In the five months I lived there, not one girl was turned away. There are no age, race or financial barriers. It provides a friendly family atmosphere for pregnant girls as well as health care, prenatal courses, assistance in schooling and career goals and personal counseling. No girl is ever pressured to give up her baby or keep it.

The residence I lived in is in Omaha, Neb., but there are others throughout the country. I will never forget these wonderful people. I hope one day to return to Omaha to live and work, and when I do, I plan to volunteer at Booth to help other girls who come there for help as I did.

In today's society, with so much emphasis placed on women's independence and doing their own thing, I totally disagreed with this rule. How do you feel about restricting attendance to only those women who bring an escort?

PERPLEXED IN N.Y.

DEAR ABBY: If a girl wears a NO button upside down, does that mean she is turned ON??

DIRTY OLD MAN IN YORK, PA.

DEAR PERPLEXED: I think it's discriminatory and therefore unfair. However, the majority rules in most clubs, so you may be in the wrong club.

Do you wish you had more friends? Get Abby's booklet, "How to Be Popular; You're Never Too Young or Too Old." Send $1 with a long, self-addressed, stamped (28 cents) envelope to: Abby, Popularity, 132 Lasky Drive, Beverly Hills, Calif. 90212.

(c) 1981 Universal Press Syndicate

DEAR ABBY: Would you please inform your readers that the armed forces are not the place for social misfits, or hard-to-handle characters who lack direction and motivation in their lives?

I can't tell you how many times I've heard people say, "A couple of years in the service, would straighten out that young man!"

Edit this letter any way you want, Abby, but please let your readers know that the Army, Navy, Marine Corps or Air Force is not an alternative to a reform school!

Psychiatrist Speculates About Atlanta Killer

A black person may be killing the black children in Atlanta, according to a one-time consultant on the case, who noted it would be easier for a black to move freely in the black community and gain the children's trust.

Dr. Alvin Poussaint, an associate professor of psychiatry at Harvard University and author of "Why Blacks Kill Blacks," also said Tuesday at a Lubbock news conference that President Ronald Reagan's proposed budget cuts in social programs will aggravate the already-high unemployment rates for blacks, which may in turn lead to a higher crime rate.

And the economic crunch may have the overall effect of curbing the "me decade" attitude for all races because financial circumstances may force families into more unity to survive, he said.

Dr. Poussaint was in Lubbock to speak Tuesday night at Texas Tech University as part of Black Awareness Month. His lecture, "Unity versus Me-ism," was sponsored by the Student Organization for Black Unity and the University Center Activities Committee.

He served as a consultant to the Atlanta Police Department late last year and noted for long time there was an assumption the purportator was white. But, Dr. Poussaint said, "A black person would be able to move in the black community freely and gain the trust of the children."

Although there are no clues as to the race of the murderer, he said many black parents in Atlanta "wonder if it is a white person, how could that individual go in and out of the community without being spotted?"

Dr. Poussaint also said society condones crime in subtle ways. "We can teach children to be more non-violent," he said, charging parents and churches with much of that task and suggesting adults channel the energy of youth into constructive activities including recreation.

"Me-ism is looking out for yourself," he said, "and with that individualistic spirit, more violence prevails. It's easier to steal and murder because there are no community restraints."

He said it's also easier for blacks to kill blacks because of their own attitudes and the attitudes of society at large.

"Most crime is intra-racial," he said, explaining that some blacks project their internalized feelings of racism and self-hate on other blacks. "They don't value a black's life."

Whether in the white or black community, Dr. Poussaint said, "A lot of killings deal with self-esteem and saving face. That's why people kill over something like a $3 bet."

He also blamed law enforcement officials for some of the blacks-against-blacks crimes, saying that sometimes the attitude of white police officers may be lax in tracking down clues on black homicide victim cases because of the thought, "They're just killing each other."

He said police departments become more concerned when blacks attack whites and that therefore blacks "feel safer killing and burglarizing other blacks. But if they commit crimes in the white community, they know they will be more actively pursued."

The solution, he said, is higher self-esteem among blacks as well as a change in attitude in law enforcement officials.

As for the Reagan administration's budget plans, Dr. Poussaint said, "I have a pessimistic view at this point."

"It would be very helpful if the private sector could provide jobs, but apparently it can't," he said. "I don't see Reagan creating jobs. He talks about increased productivity and in a highly-technological society that doesn't always mean more jobs."

He also said he fears Reagan may cut existing programs such as food stamps and job training programs, yet not create new employment opportunities and thereby aggravate the already high unemployment rate among blacks.

"I'm worried," he said. "I wonder if the economy can change high unemployment, particularly among teen-agers and minority teen-agers."

Although he hopes blacks will form closer kinship bonds during the economic bad times, Dr. Poussaint said, "I don't see that blacks have much control over economy and inflation...it's hard to counter the deteriorating effects of the environment."

Because of the economy, he said it will become more and more difficult for young people to move out of their parent's homes and out onto their own. That, in turn, may increase stress on the family.

"While some parents have the empty nest syndrome (after children move out), others look forward to it and may want their privacy," he said.

And that's why the "me spirit" makes all of the economic pressures more difficult to cope with, he said. Under hard times, more than ever, he said, "We need extended family situations and closer kinship bonds."

Transit Board Recommends Temporary Transfer Site

The council to spend tax dollars on this."

During a federally required public planning meeting, the board heard a request from Mr. and Mrs. Glenn Bildeback for Citibus routes in the area south of Loop 289 between University Avenue and Slide Road. The couple claimed there are more than 200 elementary and junior high students there who need transportation to school.

The Lubbock Independent School District does not provide transportation for these children, they said, because they live less than two miles from the schools. State law requires school districts to provide transportation for students who live more than 2 miles away.

"We live 1.99 miles from (Murfee Elementary) School," Bildeback said with a laugh. His wife added there is no prospect of a school being built in the area or of students getting any means of transportation.

In other action, the board okayed a new policy for the handicapped demand-response van service regarding cancellations of ride appointments. Effective immediately, persons or groups who reserve a van but cancel without notifying the transit department will be charged as if the ride took place.

Wilson reported bids have been issued in conjunction with a federal grant providing for 16 new advanced design buses, which will replace 16 Grumman buses. He said he hopes to award the contract in early April, adding no expansion of service is anticipated as a result.

During the monthly reports, Dean noted revenue is below the projected level. Wilson attributed that to rising gas prices. Architect Bob Goyette said construction on the new transit facility is 66 percent complete and on target.

Transit planner Clyde Shannon said Econocard sales are progressing well, but noted, in a comment relevant to the Bildeback's request, that Lubbock school policy disallowing sales at schools makes it difficult to sell the cards to students.

The board also rejected a request by The Avalanche-Journal to put newspaper racks in Citibuses.

Rita Clements Impressed By Preservation Project

areas revitalized." She cited the restored downtown area of Granbury as an example of what could be done.

Mrs. Clements, who made the restoration of the governor's mansion her personal project, said Texas has taken the lead in historical preservation with projects in San Antonio and Galveston and more recently in Dallas and Austin.

"The particular significance (of the Main Street project) is that some of the small cities in Texas are getting in on historical preservation," she said.

The success of the project would pave the way for similar work in other small communities, she added.

Money for the restoration will come from low-interest loans, from private sources and from six federal agencies, but Mrs. Clements emphasized the project would "have to put more stress on local funding."

The economic aspect of the restoration also was stressed by Anstie. Main Street also was designed for "economic preservation" of the downtown area, he said, to "make your economic basis more viable."

He cautioned, however, that selection as a Main Street city is not "a pipeline to the federal treasury." Progress of the work, he said, would come from "building on the strength and enthusiasm you have here."

During the reception, Mrs. Clements was named an honorary citizen of Plainview and was presented a key to the city by Mayor Bob Wayland. She in turn gave the mayor a poster-sized drawing of a downtown clothing store as it now appears and an artist's conception of how it could look after restoration.

Plainview was the second stop of the day for Mrs. Clements, who began the tour in Hillsboro. She was to end Tuesday's portion of the tour in Eagle Pass. Today she was scheduled to visit Navasota and Seguin.

Bond Market Rally Boosts Stock Prices

NEW YORK (AP) - Stock prices edged up today as investors waited for Ronald Reagan to formally unveil his economic program. The government reported that personal income rose in January.

The Dow Jones average of 30 industrial issues rose .98 to 940.61 in the first two hours of trading, with advances outnumbering declines by a 6-5 margin.

Analysts said the stock market gained some strength from a rally in the bond market, where investors have been encouraged by moderate money supply growth. The dollar slipped against major currencies, hurt by lower interest rates.

Reagan's program, to be announced in a speech tonight, has been largely disclosed, but its congressional prospects are hazy. It calls for sharp tax cuts and for spending cuts everywhere but the Pentagon, with a balanced budget delayed until 1984.

The Commerce Department said personal income rose a seasonally adjusted .8 percent in January, while personal consumption expenditures were up 1.4 percent. In December, the increases were 0.9 percent and 0.8 percent, respectively.

Eastman Kodak was up 1 1/2 to 7 3/4 as it continued to benefit from higher earnings announced Monday. Oil issues were strong, with Standard Oil up 1/4 to 57 1/2 and Atlantic Richfield rising 3/8 to 58.

American Telephone & Telegraph was down 1/8 to 62 1/4 when trading was halted to permit dissemination of the AT&T decision to raise its dividend by 8 percent.

DETROIT (AP) - General Motors Corp. and Ford Motor Co. have joined the price war started by struggling Chrysler Corp., and some analysts say Chrysler could get caught in the crossfire.

Chrysler has been giving its credit buyers rebates tied to interest rates. Those rebates, begun early in December and now amounting to 7 percent of the total sticker price, have gained desperately needed ground for Chrysler.

Americans' Personal Income Up 1 Percent

WASHINGTON (AP) - Americans' personal income rose nearly 1 percent in January, but their spending climbed even faster as savings dipped sharply, the government said today.

Total personal income increased to a seasonally adjusted annual rate of $2.3 trillion last month, a gain of $21.3 billion, or 0.9 percent, over December, the Commerce Department reported.

Water Project Reductions Eyed

WASHINGTON (AP) — President Reagan, trying to save money where Jimmy Carter failed, will propose trimming millions of dollars from the budget for construction of politically popular water projects, congressional sources say.

The sources, who asked not to be identified, said Tuesday that Reagan's economic message to Congress tonight would include a call for cutting about $90 million from the budget for building water projects.

As many as 70 of the roughly 300 projects already authorized by Congress could be affected, sources said.

Former President Carter became embroiled in his first big fight with Congress in 1977 when he singled out the water projects for budget cuts and proposed saving $4 billion by trying to kill 15 projects and reduce funding for five others.

The House and Senate later rejected nearly all the cuts Carter recommended, and the battle soured relations between the White House and Congress for months.

As outlined by congressional aides, Reagan is taking a different approach to the projects. He is not proposing cuts on anything close to the scale Carter recommended, and his proposals are part of a much bigger package of spending cuts that affect dozens of other programs.

But based on the reaction four years ago, members of Congress from dry

Southern and Western states may object as strongly to proposed water project cuts as liberal Democrats do to reductions in social programs.

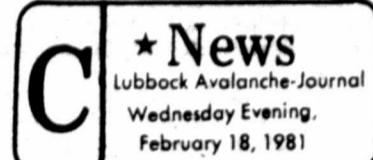

Sources said they were not certain whether Reagan would propose cancellation of any project already under construction, although they said he recommended against starting any new ones.

"What they're doing is slowing things down a little bit," said one source, indicating that funding would be deferred for numerous projects already approved by Congress.

In addition to a cut of $90 million for 1982, Reagan has decided to recommend budget savings in the program of $337 million in 1983 and $544 million in the following year, sources said.

The budget that Carter sent to Congress before leaving office contained $2.8 billion in budget authority for construction of water projects by the Army Corps of Engineers, Water and Power Resources Service of the Interior Department, and the Soil and Conservation Service of the Agriculture Department. Sources said the Office of Management and Budget has developed a system for evaluating which projects have priority for funding, based on whether they provide industrial or commercial water supplies, aid navigation, develop hydroelectric power or provide flood control.

Some Economists Say President Exaggerating Nation's Problems

WASHINGTON (AP) — As President Reagan prepares to sell his strong budget and tax-cut medicine to the nation, several leading economists are challenging his assertion that the economy is critically ill.

Recent government statistics pointing toward an improving economy also call into question Reagan's assessment two weeks ago that the nation is in "the worst economic mess since the Great Depression" and that it is threatened with "an economic calamity of tremendous proportions." A number of conservative and liberal economists contacted Tuesday said they believe the president exaggerated the country's economic difficulties in his last nationwide address to attract the public's attention and mobilize support for the economic remedies he is unveiling tonight.

"It seems to me he painted a picture just as black as he could to serve his political purposes and in the process went beyond the bounds of underlying facts," said Walter W. Heller, chairman of the White House Council of Economic Advisers during the Kennedy and Johnson administrations.

"I think it's fine to point out the country's problems, but I don't think one should overdo it with scare talk," said Heller, now a professor at the University of Minnesota.

Michael Evans, a Washington economic forecaster who endorses Reagan's call for reduced tax rates and budget cuts, agreed the president's Feb. 5 economic assessment was exaggerated, but defended its purpose.

"The man has to say things like that to get the attention of the public," said Evans, who agreed with Reagan's contention that swift and strong action is required to keep the economy from becoming incurably sick.

"This is our last real chance to turn the economy around," Evans said. "Otherwise, we go the way of Britain. And it wouldn't be exaggerating to say that inflation and unemployment are the worst there since the Great Depression."

Otto Eckstein, head of Data Resources Inc. in Boston, said the economy "has some very, very profound problems, but 'calamity' and 'mess' are not the right words. ... The economy is not going to be swept over a cliff by summer."

"I think 1974 was scarier when unemployment reached 9 percent and the economy seemed to be sinking into a depression. That year looked more like a calamity," Eckstein said.

Herbert Stein, chairman of the Council of Economic Advisers in the Nixon administration and now a Reagan adviser, said current economic conditions "aren't as miserable" as during the depression of the 1930s, but high inflation and declining productivity could lead to very hard times if not dealt with over the next several years.

"I think the future outlook is worse than it was in 1974," Stein said. "So if you state the problem more in terms of prospective difficulties rather than current conditions, I think it is correct to say that you have to look back to the 1930s to find a period as worrisome."

Barry Bosworth, director of the Council of Wage and Price Stability in the Carter administration, said Reagan correctly stated that the government faces its biggest economic challenge since the 1930s but used "misleading" statistics to portray the state of the economy.

"This is not the type of economic situation that ends up as a crisis. Rather things just deteriorate a little more each year," he said.

Proposal Would Decrease Amount Of Taxes

WASHINGTON (AP) — A typical family of four with an income of $20,000 a year would save $1,456 in federal income taxes over the next 3½ years under the tax cut President Reagan will propose tonight — a 28.7 percent reduction.

If approved by Congress, the cut would take effect next July 1 and save the typical family $114 on the tax return that will be filed next year for 1981. The Treasury Department estimates the savings for the same family would total $300 in 1982, $464 in 1983 and $578 in 1984.

At the other end of the income scale, a four-member family with $200,000 a year in salaries and wages would save $23,513 over the four-year period under the Reagan bill. That would be 16.2 percent less than the same family would pay without the tax reduction.

The tax package is part of the economic revitalization program Reagan planned to spell out in a nationally broadcast address tonight.

The president will propose that taxes be cut $6.4 billion in the current budget year, which ends Sept. 30, and by $4.2 billion in the following year. The figures include a sizeable business tax cut retroactive to Jan. 1. Officials in Congress and in the Reagan administration say the president is likely to propose a second tax bill later this year that, in effect, would freeze the lower tax rates to protect against future inflation.

This "indexing" would raise the standard deduction and personal exemption and widen tax brackets to offset inflation.

Rep. Dan Rostenkowski, D-Ill., chairman of the tax-writing House Ways and Means Committee, indicated Tuesday the bill his panel will approve may contain smaller tax cuts than Reagan is proposing tonight.

In a speech to the Economic Club of Chicago, Rostenkowski expressed skepticism about a 10 percent cut in individual tax cuts over the next three years, saying such a cut could reduce tax collections by $261 billion in 1986.

"These figures are staggering and call into serious question the effect such massive reductions would have on inflation, economic growth, the deficit, interest rates — and the long-range benefit to working Americans," he said. Rostenkowski also reiterated his position that tax cuts must be accompanied by spending cuts. "The first (tax cuts) we can do with ease and speed," he said. "The second (spending cuts) promises neither ease nor speed."

Even if the full tax cut Reagan will propose tonight takes effect, most taxpayers would find themselves paying more taxes than they did last year. That is because the proposed tax reductions are not large enough to offset higher Social Security taxes.

Congress Must Still Vote On Pay Raise For Government Workers

WASHINGTON (AP) — President Reagan's decision to oppose a 16.8 percent pay raise for congressmen and top-level government workers probably has killed the proposal but it is likely to be around a few more weeks.

The president, who once advocated higher government salaries to attract top talent, informed Congress Tuesday he now opposes the pay raise proposed by former President Carter with Reagan's concurrence.

A White House spokesman said the government would save $91.5 million this fiscal year by not implementing the proposed raises.

The announcement came as a House task force opened hearings on the proposal, which would have given members of Congress, cabinet officers and about 37,500 top level bureaucrats a 16.8 percent pay hike.

Despite the opposition, the task force — made up of ranking members of the House Post Office and Civil Service Committee, plans to continue hearings. A spokesman for the committee said Tuesday that committee lawyers say the House and Senate must vote on the proposal despite Reagan's new opposition.

"Under the law, there must be an up or down vote," the spokesman, Tom Joyce, said. "Our legal people tell me that if they (Congress) vote in the affirmative for it, then the president cannot veto it," he added.

An affirmative vote on the pay raise would be unlikely. Pay raises traditionally are political hot potatoes because no congressman wants to tell his constituents he voted to raise his own salary. And passing a pay hike over the president's objection would be even more difficult.

Rep. Edward J. Derwinski, R-Ill., ranking minority member on the task force, said the decision makes the hearings moot.

Liberals Organize To Stop Conservatives

WASHINGTON (AP) — Using political techniques perfected by the New Right, liberal members of Congress are organizing efforts to head off a conservative takeover in the House in 1982.

Starting next week, a new political action committee called Independent Action will seek contributions from about 50,000 people who have previously supported liberal presidential candidates or causes.

"We must act before the right wing takes control of the House of Representatives," says a letter signed by Rep. Morris Udall, of Arizona, a former presidential candidate and a major figure within the Democratic Party.

Potential liberal contributors will be told: "It's obvious you and I were simply not paying enough attention. How else can we explain that the Senate of the United States is now in control of the radical right?"

Among the other organizers are Sen. Paul Tsongas, D-Mass., and Democratic Reps. Patricia Schroeder of Colorado and Paul Simon of Illinois.

Although it is starting with a definite Democratic flavor, Udall says Independent Action "is not part of any political party ... and has been designed to move swiftly ... free of institutional incumbencies and internal politics — to win elections for those who oppose the nostalgic simplistic and dangerous beliefs and nostrums of the New Right."

Those initially contacted will be asked to contribute to insure the re-election of 21 liberal Democratic House members, Udall among them, who are considered vulnerable to defeat by conservative opponents in two years.

Ed Coyle, who is running Independent Action from the top floor of a Capitol Hill townhouse, says the organization will back some moderate Republicans whose election or re-election would prevent the House from sliding ideologically to the right. It also will target for defeat some conservative Democrats.

By 1984, Independent Action may also work to elect liberals in an effort to return the Senate to Democratic control, Coyle said.

Coyle, who has previously worked in the presidential campaigns of Udall, Edmund Muskie, George McGovern and independent John Anderson, believes there is a common thread among liberal voters of both major political parties.

"We find the same people raising money, and working on liberal campaigns in congressional district after district," he said in an interview.

Among those people, Coyle says, are those backing women's rights, legal abortions, strong environmental laws and civil rights causes.

The immediate goal is to raise $240,000.

HY GARDNER HAS THE ANSWER:

Glad You Asked That!

Q: Producer-director Roman Polanski is now being touted for an Oscar for the movie "Tess" at the next Academy ceremonies. After fleeing the U.S. in the face of being sentenced for admitted sex offenses against a 13-year-old girl, will he be allowed to attend that annual event? — P.B., Burbank, Calif.

A: The way the law is being bent these days, it could work out that way. The talented Polanski has the backing of quite a few influential members of the Academy. He recently sneaked into the LA airport to board a plane en route to Tahiti — thus facing the possibility of being handed a warrant for his arrest. Fortunately for him, however, he was not served.

Q: Whatever happened to Ariene DeMarco, youngest of the staging DeMarco sisters who starred on the old Fred Allen shows when she was only five years old? Once married to actor Keefer Braselle, she wrote two books on her life which sold rather well, but got her into hot water.

A: Ariene recently revealed she had attempted suicide three different times, unsuccessfully, and has given up giving up.

Q: New York is north of Miami. True or False? — Max W., a Miamian.

A: False. So Parke Cummings claims in a feature he wrote ("From the Bedside") in Esquire magazine vintage 1933-40. His reasoning: "Medieval map makers unaware that the world is round, started drawing their maps upside down and all map makers followed suit. The terms, 'North' and 'South' were first invented by Askaran, an Egyptian philosopher, and careful reading of his treatise, 'Boundaries of the Earth,' will convince anybody that he intended North to be what we now consider South, and vice versa. Hence, in the only true sense New York is South of Miami." (P.S. If you can make any true sense of this information, please explain it to us!)

Q: Is it a fact that our U.S. presidents have a shorter life span than citizens in more mundane occupations? — L.M. Smith, Phoenix.

A: Yes, according to the Metropolitan Life Insurance Co., and the U.S. Department of Health and Human Services agrees.

Send your questions to Hy Gardner, "Glad You Asked That," care of The Lubbock Avalanche-Journal, P.O. Box 19620, Irvine, Calif. 92714. Marilyn and Hy Gardner will answer as many questions as they can in their column, but the volume of mail makes personal replies impossible.

Game-Show Host Airs Objections To Column

By PETER J. BOYER
LOS ANGELES (AP) — Letters...
This one, elegantly enveloped, bears in flowing script the name "Winston C. Martindale" above the return address. Hm. Winston C. Martindale.?

Oh, it's Wink (he'll excuse the familiarity, now that we're pen-pals) Martindale, a veteran of the game-show circuit and current host of NBC's "Las Vegas Gambit." His epistle is a passionate objection to a column in which his new show was unfavorably compared to the late, much-lamented "Jeopardy."

While watching others win money had some appeal, I wrote, the answering of such questions as those above was not compelling entertainment.

Wink complains of not having a platform from which to address the indignities. I'll share this platform:

"People happen to enjoy watching other people win... The viewer at home relates to the game player; the viewer becomes involved, putting himself in the player's place. The moment that involvement takes place, that show, for better or worse, has hooked that viewer. Multiply that premise by several million, and you have a hit show..."

"True, it takes less than a mental giant to answer some of the questions 'posed' by the 'vacant headed posers' of the type shows 'you wouldn't be watching if you had brains in the first place.' (Those are Wink's quotation marks, by the way, signifying his own words, not mine.)

"However, I submit that there are millions of viewers out there in television land who, thankfully, appreciate the fact that the game show hosts of this world have grown accustomed to three squares a day, a comfortable home and bank account, and two cars in the garage."

"And thankfully, those same game show lovers, those 'brainless wonders' as you condemn them, know what they enjoy and fail to be blinded and sidetracked by television 'journalists,' the likes of you, who have the gall to relegate fellow human beings to the depths of idiocy simply because you happen to deplore their God-given democratic right to watch what they please."

I was about to respond to Wink, thanking him for his letter and to assure him that I've never used the term, "brainless wonders" in my life. I also meant to tell him that I consider the right to watch what one pleases right up there with other inalienable sanctions of democracy, like the seventh-inning stretch.

But on the wings of the U.S. Postal Service comes another letter, this from Mrs. Margaret O'Brien, of Demarest, N.J.

"As soon as the word 'Jeopardy' caught my eye I had to read your column. I, along with the rest of my family, have missed that particular TV show. "When my daughter was in grammar school she came home for lunch and I always had her sandwich etc. ready as she would sit right down and enjoy 'Jeopardy' with lunch... Whatever happened to it? Possibly a little too intellectual for all those who enjoy the scantily clad girls, or the off-color remarks made on so many quiz shows today.

"Jeopardy" was intelligent, educational entertainment and one has to really dig into the TV listings to find anything of that caliber.

"Thanks for the column; I'm sending it on to my daughter who is now a sophomore in college..."

Mrs. O'Brien's daughter will no doubt put to good use the many facts she gathered in her lunchtime "Jeopardy" sessions. Let's just hope that none of her instructors asks what term the English use for "backside."

Another Whale Found Beached

RANCHO PALOS VERDES, Calif. (UPI) — Another rare pygmy sperm whale — possibly diseased or suffering from internal parasites — beached itself along the Southern California coast. "The trouble is," says Scott Rutherford, assistant curator at the Marineland aquatic park, "we just don't know why he beached in the first place." "It could be internal parasites, massive infection, any one of several other things. But it's the second one in two weeks, and we've got to hope it isn't an epidemic." The age of the 5-foot, 250-pound baby pygmy sperm whale is uncertain. He is the second pygmy sperm whale brought to Marineland for rehabilitation in two weeks.

A nine-foot whale that beached itself along the El Segundo shoreline died of kidney failure Feb. 4 at Marineland despite a two-day effort to save it. The second pygmy sperm whale, cut and bruised, beached itself this week in Long Beach. The whale was carried to Marineland on a foam-insulated stretcher in the back of a pickup truck and put into a waist-deep training pool where attendants "walked" it in an effort to revive it. "He swims and the attendants guide him," said Marineland spokeswoman Lisa Noah.

Tony Randall Stars In Television Movie

By KENNETH R. CLARK
NEW YORK (UPI) — The Nielsen family won't have Tony Randall to kick around any more, and the Moral Majority had better not try.
 The gentle Felix Unger of "The Odd Couple" says he's through with series television, but he's ready to fight those who would censor it by boycott.
 "I'll never do another series because they cancel you," said the man who has seen two series assassinated by the ratings system. "They won't let you be good. They don't care if you're good... these days they cancel you after 13 weeks or less... so you never have a chance to build your team."
 What Randall will do is make films for television, since the ratings pose no threat for the single-shot feature, and he said his latest one is "the best movie I've ever done."

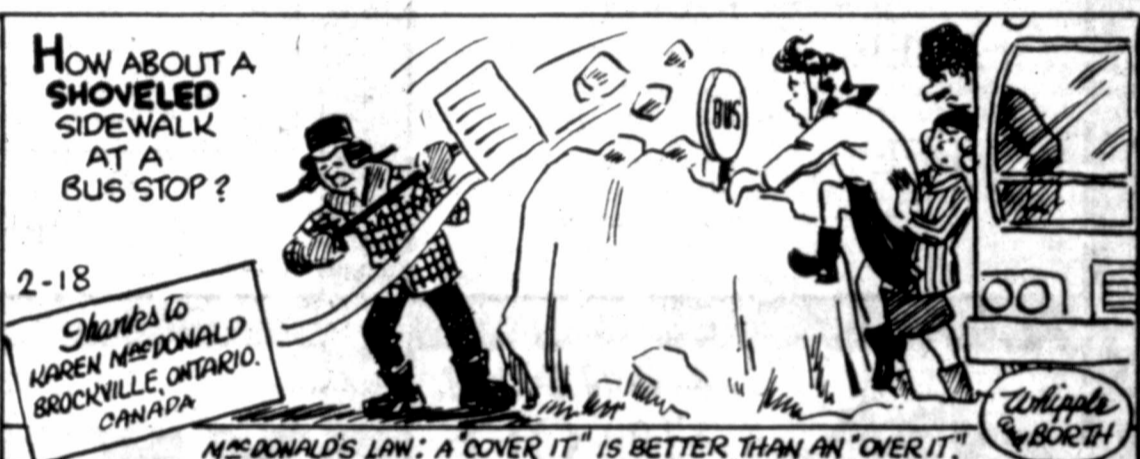

when the child is six years old, she marries and takes the youngster away.
 Homosexuality, promiscuity, abortion — isn't Randall afraid he will run afoul of the Moral Majority by dealing with such topics on prime-time television?
 The question vaporized the cool, civilized urbanity that is Randall's trademark.
 "Screw 'em!" he snapped.
 "Did you read what a member of the Moral Majority said yesterday? They're targeting San Francisco, which he calls the homosexual center of the United States, and he said he believes in capital punishment and the Bible says homosexuals should be put to death."
 "They say there are 675,000 homosexuals in San Francisco, so he wants to put that many people to death in one town."

And this is called 'moral ...'
 Randall referred to a statement made last week on a San Francisco television program by Dean Wycoff of the Moral Majority of Santa Clara Inc. Wycoff later retracted his suggestion that homosexuals should be executed, but the outrage remained.
 "The only thing to do is fight them, of course," Randall said. "And to really fight them — not the way we fought the (McCarthy era) blacklist which Ronald Reagan says never existed. We just knuckled under to the blacklist... we didn't really fight them, but we must fight to expose these people."
 But if Randall is appalled at potential excesses from the religious right, he is equally contemptuous of the obsession for ratings displayed by the three major networks — all of which first rejected "Sidney Shorr" before Randall personally persuaded NBC's Fred Silverman to intervene and buy it.
 "You'd think they would look instead (of ratings) at the show and say, 'this is good... this could turn into a classic.' I don't care what the ratings are. I'd be ashamed to have 'Three's Company' on my network. But they won't look at it that way. They won't look at quality. That's why I'll never do another series."
 A return to the subject of "Sidney Shorr" soon set the juices of enthusiasm bubbling again.
 "It's not about homosexuality — that's just a given in the man's circumstances," he said. "It's not about abortion. It's about love — the need of people for people."

The Moral Majority, one of several fundamentalist religious groups threatening a boycott of sponsors who back television shows that do not pass their "decency" muster, might disagree.
 Randall's latest effort is "Sidney Shorr," to be aired next month by NBC. It is the story of a middle-aged homosexual, "seedy and self-neglectful," who meets a young girl who subsequently moves in with him.
 He becomes terribly possessive of her — "a Jewish mother" — and burns with jealousy when she starts dating. But when she becomes pregnant by a married man and proposes an abortion, Shorr is outraged. He volunteers to raise the child himself if she will have it, but

THERE OUGHTA BE A LAW®

By Whipple and Borth

DR. LAMB Fainting Called Symptom

By LAWRENCE LAMB, M.D.
DEAR DR. LAMB — Last week when I went to church I fainted. I had gone without anything to eat because I was going to take Communion. We had been kneeling and when I stood up I began to feel dizzy. Things began to blur and I had trouble steadying myself. The next thing I knew I was stretched out on the bench.
 My doctor gave me a good examination the next day. He said I had fainted. He didn't say why, only that I had not been able to get enough blood to my brain. That has me worried. I always thought I was in good health. I'm 19 and play on the basketball team and have never had any trouble. Does this mean I have some disease in the arteries to my brain?
DEAR READER — Probably not. It is important for anyone who has an unexplained faint to have a complete medical examination. Fainting is a symptom, not a diagnosis. It can be caused by blood accumulating in your legs and not leaving enough blood to be pumped to your brain. That is probably what your doctor was telling you.

 The mechanisms involved in fainting are discussed in greater detail in The Health Letter number 9-2. Fainting: Loss of Consciousness or Syncope, which I am sending you. Others who want this issue and send 75 cents with a long, stamped, self-addressed envelope for it to me, in care of The Lubbock Avalanche-Journal, P.O. Box 1551, Radio City Station, New York, N.Y. 10019.
DEAR DR. LAMB — Could you tell me at what age a female should have a Pap test? I am 22. I read that it was suggested for once every three years instead of once a year.

DEAR READER — The guidelines from the American Cancer Society were that a woman age 20 and over, or under 20 and sexually active, should have an annual Pap test for two negative tests. Thereafter every three years was often enough, until age 65.
 I don't entirely agree with that and your question points up the reason. Depend upon your doctor, who is familiar with your family history and your findings. If you are healthy and there are no significant findings, and the family history and other pertinent information is good, then the recommendations might be fine. But not everyone is so fortunate. It is another example where it is important to individualize, not generalize, when you are talking about one person and his or her medical problems.

Deed Restrictions To Be Disregarded

ATLANTIC CITY, N.J. (AP) — Ramada Inns Inc. may be pouring $250 million into its new casino hotel, but the fine print in a 90-year-old deed says the company cannot offer casino gambling or sell drinks on its Boardwalk site.
 The $23-room Tropicana Hotel and Casino also may not open Sundays or house a slaughterhouse, a "piggery" or a bone-boiling establishment.
 Ramada Inn is building the hotel on a section of Boardwalk property covered by 1891 deeds which restrict what future owners may do on the site. Hotel officials say they will politely ignore the deed restrictions in the interest of modern-day free enterprise.

White Ponders Campaign Plans

By GARTH JONES
AUSTIN (AP) — Texans apparently will get their first hint of the makeup of the 1982 governor's race about the end of February.

John C. White, the exiting Democratic National Committee chairman and former Texas agriculture commissioner, indicated last week he will know what he is going to do after his term ends when the DNC meets Feb. 26.

Until President Jimmy Carter's downfall in November, White had been considered a prime Democratic candidate for Texas governor along with former Attorney General John Hill. Since then, both figures who were top leaders in the Texas Carter campaign have been doing some soul searching about future political plans.

White says now he has been discussing the formation of a Washington-based consulting firm on energy, food and environment with two former Carter cabinet members — Agriculture Secretary Bob Bergland and Interior Secretary Cecil Andrus.

White went to Washington in 1977 as an under secretary to Bergland.

Even at the height of political speculation, White has said he would not reveal future campaign plans, if any, until after leaving the DNC.

Hill, who lost a heartbreaker to Republican Gov. Bill Clements in 1978, has always said he will not announce his 1982 political plans until the end of this regular legislative session.

Hill is still smarting over the failure of former Rep. Luther Jones, D-E Paso, to win the influential job as chairman of the Texas Democratic Party. Jones was personally pushed by White with the apparent hope Jones could help him later in a statewide race in 1982.

Clements also has said over and over that now is not the time for him to make any re-election announcements, but suggested the question be put again after the legislature ends.

Recently, without any apparent cause, the old rumor that Clements might not seek re-election is circulating in Austin. Some point out that he is a big corporation executive and already tired of the country boy "gimme this and I'll give you that" methods used by Texas legislators. They point out how much time he spends in Washington. He spends almost every weekend in Dallas instead of Austin and has taken frequent vacations to Colorado and Virginia.

And there are more recent rumors that Lt. Gov. Bill Hobby might not be serious about another term. Hobby also has numerous and valuable business interests outside the Capitol, including the presidency of the Houston Post. Could his announcement for re-election have been a ploy to keep his leadership power during the legislation with plans to renounce the plans later?

There's little doubt the governor's race will be the biggie in 1982, no matter who runs.

Sen. Lloyd Bentsen, D-Texas, indicates he will be seeking his third term but the best the Republicans have come up with so far is vague threats of opposition from former Cowboys quarterback Roger Staubach. A recent poll showed that Bentsen was favored by 45 percent of the Republicans questioned, along with 58 percent of the Democrats and 43 percent of the independents.

But there is a long line of eager would-be candidates waiting to see if Clements and Hobby run again.

Land Commissioner Bob Armstrong has said he will be seeking a new job but is undecided which one. He favors lieutenant governor but probably would not run against Hobby. If Clements does not seek re-election, Armstrong might join the throng that undoubtedly would announce.

Attorney General Mark White looks set for a re-election race, but could switch to governor if Clements is out.

Other possible candidates for governor under the right circumstances could be Sen. Peyton McKnight, D-Tyler; Dallas businessman Jess Hay, longtime Democratic fund raiser, and maybe even former Gov. Dolph Briscoe.

Tomorrow's Horoscope

By Bernice Bode Osal

AQUARIUS (Jan. 20-Feb. 19) If your budget has been bent a bit out of shape lately, it's time to seek ways to trim the fat. Unfortunately, you may do just the opposite tomorrow.

PISCES (Feb. 20-March 20) Usually you are very considerate and cooperative. Tomorrow, you may let your self-interests reign supreme and cause others to respond similarly.

ARIES (March 21-April 20) Coworkers could be a trifle more difficult to get along with tomorrow than usual. Be careful not to do things to arouse their ire rather than their cooperation.

TAURUS (April 20-May 20) You could experience some pressure from your peer group tomorrow and, if you yield, it may cause you to do something which doesn't serve your best interests.

GEMINI (May 21-June 20) Those in your charge may rebel tomorrow if you try to rule the roost with too heavy a hand. Be tolerant with those who look to you for guidance.

CANCER (June 21-July 22) Your sensitivity is showing tomorrow. You may behave a bit too temperamentally. Be especially careful in situations with authority figures.

LEO (July 23-Aug. 22) You're basically very generous, a fact which is well known by a free-loading associate. He'll be looking for a hand-out tomorrow.

VIRGO (Aug. 23-Sept. 22) In making judgments tomorrow don't permit anger over a past experience to color your outlook. Decisions made out of spite could be harmful.

LIBRA (Sept. 23-Oct. 23) Chores left till the last minute aren't likely to be performed to your best abilities tomorrow. Keep everything on schedule, to avoid frustrations.

SCORPIO (Oct. 24-Nov. 22) Your friends will resent it tomorrow if you take it upon yourself to run the show. Let everyone put in his or her two cents' worth and there'll be no hard feelings.

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 23-Dec. 21) To fulfill your ambitions tomorrow you may be tempted to use methods which others might find offensive. Behave like the good guy you are.

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22-Jan. 19) Don't use your knowledge tomorrow to embarrass or put others down. Instead of appearing superior, use what you know to be helpful and constructive.

Your Birthday

DURING THE LAST MONTH, new Lubbock Christian College football coach Don Carthel has appeared in more West Texas homes than Johnny Carson. He has wasted no time acquainting the area's high school seniors with himself and his plans for an LCC program that showed few signs of life prior to the forced resignation of Jerry Don Sanders in November.

Of course, Carthel's appeal hinges purely on sales technique. It is based less on sideline-to-sideline football than on football, door-to-door.

The Chaparral program is two years old, with a losing tradition as its only tradition, and is directed by a man who has never before been a head coach.

But, through sheer force of personality and the ability to turn heads (which is 90 percent of any recruiting effort), Carthel has made the Chap program his own. It already has a Carthel tone: assertive and positive-thinking.

There is no substitute for image, particularly in the infant stage of production. Carthel scores straight A's in this capacity. During the last four weeks, or ever since Carthel enrolled 42 transfer student-athletes at LCC in early January, the campus has been visited daily by five to 10 different high school prospects. Those introduced to the media at weekly Chaparral Club luncheons include Monterey High School's Steve David, Estacado's Alvin Davis and Coronado's Mike Ahlenius.

There have been others and there will be more.

If nothing else, Carthel deserves an honorary degree in marketing.

NEW YORKER FILM CRITIC Pauline Kael has a pet description for the truly preposterous, the obviously errant. And Dan Spika, color commentator for the Texas Tech-Texas A&M game Feb. 7 (and all Saturday Southwest Conference network telecasts), was guilty of one such "real howler" (thanks, Pauline) when he predicted that the SWC would be the nation's best-balanced college basketball league as early as next season.

Spika began by listing the Big Ten as the best example of the single most competitively balanced conference of recent years, and then happily concluded that the SWC, with its wealth of underclassmen, would ascend to the throne one year hence.

To anyone with even superficial knowledge of college basketball, this assertion represents, at best, common shilling for a league that has contractual approval over the network's choice of announcers and, at worst, blatant exaggeration in the face of the truth.

If Spika's observation proves correct, then it may be less a compliment for the SWC than an admission of the league's uniform mediocrity.

The balance of power in the SWC indeed has shifted this year, and in favor of perennial mudmats Baylor, Rice and TCU.

No longer are Arkansas, Houston, Texas Tech, Texas and Texas A&M able to bully the second-division clubs. No longer are the league's "elite" able to take for granted the "other half's" dormancy.

IF THESE REJUVENATED PATSIES have, in fact, caught up with the SWC's rich kids and on a permanent basis, then it must be noted that the disparity was erased in a very short time. This indicates that teams like Texas, Texas Tech and Texas A&M never really had that far to fall in the first place.

Equalization has occurred too quickly. Only Arkansas, and perhaps Houston, have managed to avoid the immediate effects of the leveling process.

Given the poor quality of Texas high school basketball (it is easily the weakest state in the country, per-population), and the league's generally failed efforts to recruit top out-of-state prospects, the SWC may indeed continue to blur class distinctions next year.

The Southwest Conference will contain a bunch of lookalikes. I can almost guarantee that the SWC will fail to have any of its teams ranked in either wire service poll next preseason. The league's national reputation does not inspire awe as evidenced by the fact that since A&M's departure from the polls six weeks ago, the SWC could not manage to get any of its conference leaders ranked: Houston's overall record (18-5), as of Monday, was better than five of this week's AP Top 20.

Perhaps Spika's observation will start a trend. LCC coach John Copeland may wish to call the Texas Intercollegiate Athletic Association the best-balanced league in the country by 1982, or Hardin-Simmons' Jim Schuler could make a similar claim for the Trans America Conference.

It would mean nothing or next to nothing. Spika, you see, has confused balance with quality.

Arkansas Takes SWC Lead

By The Associated Press
A "really disappointed" Shelby Metcalf says his Texas A&M Aggies were the victims, not the assailants, in the embattled 65-61 victory won by Arkansas Tuesday night in noisy G. Rolie White Coliseum.

"They say the mark of a good player is retaliating without getting caught. We must not be very good because every time we retaliated, we got caught," Metcalf said after the game.

Two fights, and almost a third, delayed play in the televised Southwest Conference basketball game.

The Arkansas victory, coupled with TCU's 78-77 upset of Houston in four overtimes, left the Razorbacks all alone atop the league standings.

In the two other SWC games Tuesday night, Baylor edged Texas 84-82 to slip into third place and Rice pushed SMU further into the cellar, 70-62.

The Aggies picked up two more field goals than Arkansas, but the Razorbacks took 23 free throws to only 10 for A&M. The 15-7 edge in charity shots gave the Hogs their winning margin.

A&M freshman Reggie Roberts shoved Arkansas sophomore Darrell Walker, and they exchanged blows on Arkansas' end of the court with 7:06 left in the first half, as both benches emptied.

Officials warned an ejection would accompany any further shenanigans, and A&M's 6-foot-9 sophomore Claude Riley got the heave-ho with 11:47 left in the game after getting into a skirmish with Arkansas' 6-10 junior Scott Hastings.

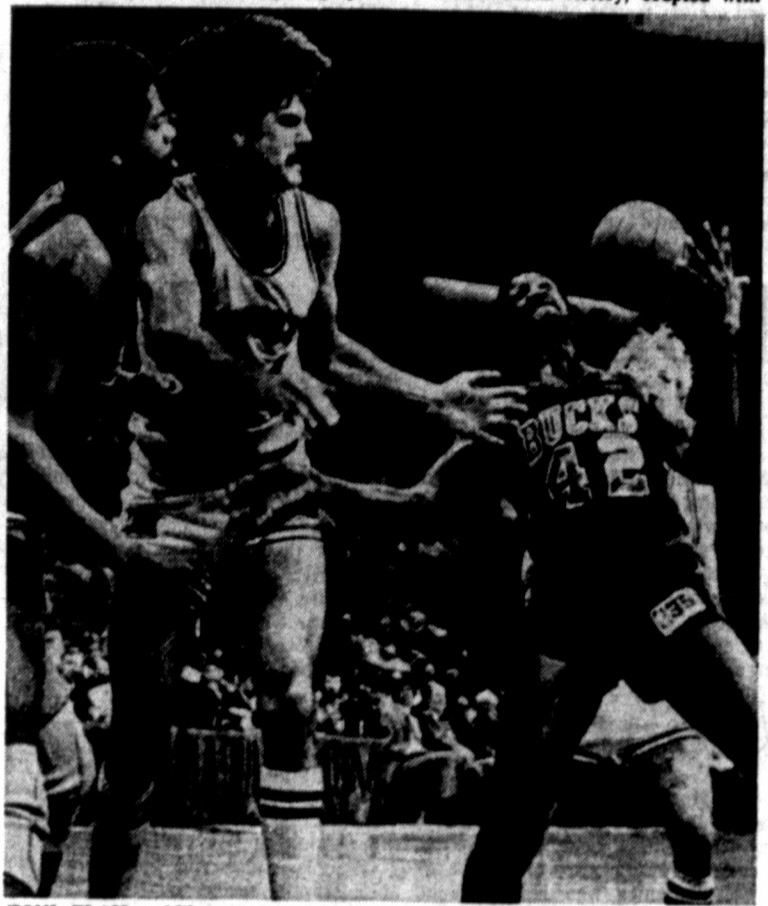

Roberts and two other A&M starters, Rynn Wright and Milton Woodley, fouled out in the second half.

"I thought we were the victims. Rynn said Hastings took a cheap shot at him. I'm anxious to see the film. There were just a lot of things going on away from the ball," Metcalf said.

"I don't want this to sound like sour grapes, but we played some people tonight that wouldn't even play in the Rice game that we won by 15 or 20. When you look at it that way, you've got to be proud of the job our players did."

Arkansas coach Eddie Sutton said he didn't see what happened in an exchange between Roberts and Walker.

"It was about as rugged a game as we've seen in a long time. I'm very proud of the way our team played. We had to keep our poise throughout the game," he said.

Although Sutton was shaking his head over Arkansas' mediocre 15-of-23 performance from the free-throw line, he praised Keith Peterson, whose two successful free throws with 12 seconds left put the Porkers into a 63-59 lead that A&M couldn't overcome.

Houston led TCU 77-72 with only two minutes left in the fourth overtime before what Cougar coach Guy Lewis called "a silly turnover, just a silly turnover" triggered a Horned Frog rally.

"They scored after that, and then that blocking foul on (Clyde) Drexler gave them two more points," Lewis said.

Deekery Johnson's two free throws cut the lead to 77-74 and Warren Bridges' 18-footer made it 77-76 to set up the winning 18-foot jumper by TCU's Jeff Baker with two seconds to play.

It was TCU's third victory over Houston in Fort Worth in as many years.

Testimony Of Ex-Sun Devil Aide Charges Kush With Harassment

PHOENIX, Ariz. (UPI) — Frank Kush deliberately scared off players he didn't want on his team through systematic verbal and physical abuse, a former aide to the Arizona State University football coach has testified in a closed hearing.

Bob Owens, who worked on Kush's staff for more than 11 years, estimated some 15 to 20 players left ASU after being subjected to abuse by Kush.

Kush was advised by ASU athletic director Fred Miller at one point in the late 1970s to "evaluate your techniques so we don't lose as many players," Owens said.

The testimony came Feb. 10 in the chambers of Maricopa County Superior Court Judge Thomas Kleinschmidt, who is presiding over the trial of a $2.2 million suit filed against Kush by a former player.

Former Sun Devil punter Kevin Rutledge claims he was punched by Kush following a poor punt in a 1978 game and maintains he was harassed by Kush and assistant coach Bill Maskill into quitting the team and forsaking his athletic scholarship.

The trial has since been recessed at the request of attorneys for both sides who filed special actions with the state Supreme Court.

Westerners Lose Touch, Plainsmen Find Victory

By RUSS PARSONS
Avalanche-Journal Sports Staff
 Tuesday night's game between Monterey and Lubbock High isn't at all hard to describe. All you need to know is that the Westerners scored one field goal in the first nine and one-half minutes of play.

The inferences you can draw from that are numerous, but they're sure to include the fact that the Plainsmen bounced back from Friday night's loss to Plainview with a 55-42 decision.

The Westerners jumped (or is that hurtled?) to an early 2-0 lead on a nice spin move by Kirk Cole with 7:34 remaining in the first period. A solid nine minutes passed before another Lubbock High field goal passed through the nets.

By then, Monterey had jumped to a 15-6 lead, capitalizing on the Westerners' almost non-existent offense. The Plainsmen ran off that string despite committing six turnovers and five fouls in that nine-minute span.

From that point, it was fated that nothing could disrupt the Plainsmen, who coasted to the win, improving on that lead by only four points.

"You just can't shoot 30 percent from the floor and 44 percent from the free throw line and expect to win," said Lubbock coach Craig Wells.

"It's our preparation that hurts us most, not the game itself. We've had so many injuries and sicknesses, we haven't had a full workout with everybody on the floor since Jan. 18. That's what hurts us with our preparation.

"But those are excuses. We don't need excuses tonight; we got beat by a better team. That's all there is to it."

Even Monterey coach Joe Michalka isn't going to argue with that assessment. Not this time.

"I knew the kids would play with intensity," he said. "We had a good workout Saturday (after the loss) and Monday. We wanted to play."

"I thought in spots we looked pretty good out there tonight. I was really pleased with the way we moved the ball around there."

The closest Lubbock High could come to making a run was a 10-2 run at the midway point of the third period that pulled the Westerners to within 38-30.

The clincher on the streak (and maybe on the game) came when Michalka apparently said something not to the official's liking after an offensive foul call on Billy Breedlove.

He was slapped with a technical, giving Lubbock High two free shots and the ball in — a potential four-point swing that would pull the Westerners to within 38-34.

But Brad Ruff could only make one of the charity shots and John Frankhouser was called for a foul on the inbound play. Net result: one point.

Ian Hyslop converted a three-point play with 2:00 left in the quarter to stretch the lead to 41-30 but still Lubbock had opportunities.

And still the Westerners couldn't convert them. Monterey turned the ball over three times in 20 seconds and Lubbock got exactly zero points out of them.

"We're starting to head up the hill now," said Michalka, whose team advances to 24-7 on the year and remains ted for first in the conference race with a 6-1 mark. "We're starting up the hill. We kind of coasted for a while and it caught up with us. You know we won a lot of close games there."

Fields' Father To Appeal Brown's Removal Of Son

LOS ANGELES (AP) — Apparently, Kenny Fields won't be returning to the UCLA basketball team this season. And as far as coach Larry Brown is concerned, that situation won't change as long as he is in charge of the Bruins.

Fields, a talented freshman from nearby Verbum Dei High School, was dropped from the UCLA squad by Brown on Monday. Asked Tuesday if there was a chance Fields could return to the squad, Brown replied: "Not as long as I'm the coach here. I'm not going to coach him."

Brown said that the action was taken "...not for one specific thing. The situation had reached a point where I felt things wouldn't get any better for Kenny or for the team."

Fields, a 6-foot-7, 215-pounder, had averaged 10.3 points and 5.2 rebounds per game for the sixth-ranked Bruins this season. He started the first 16 games of the campaign but was used in a reserve role in UCLA's last four games.

In the Bruins' most recent outing, a 64-61 victory over seventh-ranked Arizona State last Saturday, Fields played just nine minutes and was held scoreless.

Meanwhile, Fields' father appealed to athletic director Bob Fischer to override Brown's decision to drop the center-forward from the squad.

The athletic department press office said Fischer has the authority to override Brown, but the staff could find no previous instance where such powers were actually applied. A meeting between Fields' parents and Fischer was tentatively scheduled for late Tuesday or sometime today.

But Fischer said Tuesday, "I'll certainly meet with them, but I've made it clear that Larry Brown is the coach." Asked if he would overrule Brown, Fischer said emphatically, "no."

Cliff Pruitt, a sophomore who like Fields came out of Verbum Dei High, has started the last four games in place of Fields for the Bruins, who have a 16-4 record. Pruitt has averaged 8.7 points and 4.1 rebounds per game this season.

Lobos Steal Impetus From DHS

By RAY GLASS
Avalanche-Journal Sports Staff
 The Dunbar strategy worked for eight minutes Tuesday night, when it unraveled, everything fell apart as Levelland roared back for a critical 68-57 District 1-4A win in the Panthers' gym.

Dunbar moved to a 14-6 lead after the first quarter by running the ball right at the Lobos' 6-foot-8 center Dwight Phillips, dominating the rebounding and taking advantage of three-for-18 Lobo shooting.

But, with Phillips riding the bench with a pair of fouls, the Lobos' outside shooters got hot and shredded the Panthers' zone defense for 30 second-period points and a 36-26 halftime lead.

After that, the teams finished the game evenly. The win keeps Levelland on the fringe of the district's second-half title chase. The Lobos are 2-1 in district and 15-9 overall, trailing 3-0 Borger and 2-0 Canyon. The Panthers slipped to 0-3 and 6-22.

"We stopped getting on the boards and allowed them to rebound," Dunbar coach Joe McWilliams said of the second-period letdown. "And that allowed them to run and we got caught between the boards and the basket on the other end and weren't able to make the transition. I thought we played well except for that second period."

Levelland led 6-2 with 5:47 to play in the opening period before Dunbar scored the next 12 points for a 14-6 lead by the end of the quarter. In the process Phillips picked up two fouls and went to the bench with 1:21 to go in the period.

"Going right at them was our strategy," said McWilliams, whose team held a 17-8 margin in rebounding in the first eight minutes. "But we got away from it. We let Dwight get away with playing offense in the second half when we should have made him play some defense. He got three fouls but we couldn't give him a fourth foul."

Turon Patterson scored 14 for Dunbar, Roland Comacho added 13 and Danny Douglas contributed 13 points and 10 rebounds.

Yanks Add Hurler To Enhance Trade Possibilities

By The Associated Press
The New York Yankees, whose major need is a right-handed starting pitcher, have picked up a right-handed reliever. The Yankees dipped into the free-agent market again Tuesday, but this time with a soft plop rather than a loud splash. They signed 27-year-old Bill Castro, a six-year veteran of the Milwaukee Brewers' bullpen, to a two-year contract estimated at $325,000. The move may indirectly uncover a right-handed starter to join lefties Ron Guidry, Tommy John, Rudy May and Tom Underwood in the rotation. The Yankees can bring right-handers Ron Davis or Doug Bird out of the bullpen or make a trade. "Now we have another right-handed arm, which we needed," manager Gene

Michael said at the team's Fort Lauderdale, Fla., training camp. "We have a lot of options to look at now. It gives us a chance to do some other things. There's always a possibility of Davis being a starter, but that's not necessarily the way we're going. They could all stay in the bullpen or we could make a trade." The Yankees are known to covet Rick Reuschel of the Chicago Cubs, Montreal's Steve Rogers and one of several Oakland right-handers. Castro's overall record is 25-23 with 44 saves. Last year, he was 2-4 with eight saves and a 2.79 earned run average. In other developments involving free agents, the Seattle Mariners signed Lenny Randle, a 32-year-old infielder who played for the Chicago Cubs in 1980, to a three-year contract and the Cubs signed free-agent outfielder Jerry Morales and assigned him to their Iowa farm club in the American Association.

Randle batted .276 and stole 19 bases for the Cubs and had a 21-game hitting streak, longest in the National League. He spent spring training last year with the Mariners before being dealt to Chicago. Morales, who played with the Cubs from 1974-77, batted .254 in 94 games for the New York Mets last season. Meanwhile, outfielders Tony Armas of Oakland and Mike Vail of Cincinnati lost salary arbitration cases while Minnesota infielder John Castino came out a winner.

Armas' bid for $500,000 was turned down in favor of the A's offer of $210,000. Armas, 27, batted .277 last season with 35 home runs and 109 RBIs. Vail, 29, who was traded from the Cubs to the Reds over the winter and is expected to fill a reserve role, had sought $225,000. Cincinnati offered $175,000, a figure the arbitrator ruled was fair. Castino, who led the Twins in batting homers and RBI, was awarded $210,000. The Twins had offered $150,000, a raise of $100,000.

Vanderbilt Coach Demands Discipline

NASHVILLE, Tenn. (AP) — Vanderbilt basketball coach Richard Schmidt, who suspended two players for criticizing his decision to bench them, says his team will have discipline, even if it means losing every game. Schmidt said Tuesday that the team's leading scorer, senior Charles Davis, and sophomore Jimmy Gray would miss tonight's home game against Mississippi and Saturday's game with the University of Kentucky at Lexington. He considered dropping Davis from the team, Schmidt said, but decided to suspend him instead. "He's had a good career here," Schmidt said. "He has only five or six games left and I wouldn't want him to end his time here on a bad note. "We're going to have discipline even if it means we lose every basketball game ... until we finally get all our people going in the same direction. "We're putting team first and self second," Schmidt told a reporter. The coach benched Davis and Gray for last Saturday's game at Tennessee after the Commodores had lost four straight games and seven of their last eight — including a 69-55 defeat at the hands of Auburn, which is tied with Mississippi State at the bottom of the Southeastern Conference. Davis, who had not been benched for an entire game during his career before Vanderbilt's 79-72 loss to Tennessee at Knoxville, said he will return on Monday. "Monday I'll be back, and there will be no gripes between me and the coaches," he said. "I have nothing against the team or the coaches. I don't think I'll be a starter when I come back. I'll probably have to work my way up from the 13th or 14th player. "I expected what I got. He's the coach, and he runs the team." Gray said he expected worse treatment. "I thought he'd kick me off the team because I've been in the doghouse so much," he said. "I had expected more than what I got. I'm going to come back and do what I'm supposed to do. I don't want to go out a quitter." Davis, averaging 14.9 points a game, has 1,638 points, or 53 shy of tying Clyde Lee's career scoring record at Vanderbilt. Gray is averaging 8.9 points a game. Vanderbilt, 11-11 overall, is 5-9 in the SEC.

Clippers Firm Up, Rout Bulls

By The Associated Press
For a change, the San Diego Clippers didn't miss Bill Walton. With Joe Bryant scoring 10 of his 22 points in the first quarter, the Clippers grabbed a big early lead and went on to rout the Chicago Bulls 128-95 Tuesday night. The Clippers not only snapped a four-game losing streak, but the 128 points was their largest output of the season and the 33-point victory margin was the biggest since the team moved west from Buffalo prior to the 1978-79 campaign. "We don't get too many like this. They're kind of nice to have," said coach Paul Silas. San Diego led Chicago all the way, scoring the first eight points and taking a 30-10 advantage after just 10½ minutes. Phil Smith also scored 22 points for the Clippers. "We came out fired up to play offense and defense," Silas said. "We worked hard in practice. It takes a collective effort to win with our talent. Tonight we kept rolling. Usually we let up and let them back in the game." "They were wiping us out just about everywhere," Chicago coach Jerry Sloan conceded. "We just could not get ourselves going. This was the worst defeat I can remember." Celtics 128, Spurs 116 Robert Parish scored a season-high 40 points and Boston staved off a fourth-quarter San Antonio rally. Larry Bird added 25 points for the Celtics, including a three-pointer with 36 seconds remaining after the Spurs had erased most of a 16-point deficit. Boston's fast-breaking offensive show offset a season-high 49-point spree by San Antonio's George Gervin. Lakers 96, Knicks 87 Kareem Abdul-Jabbar scored 28 points and Jamaal Wilkes added 25 as Los Angeles won for the 15th time in its last 18 games. Michael Ray Richardson paced the Knicks with 27 points. Suns 118, Warriors 109 Dennis Johnson scored 10 points in the final 4½ minutes and Alvan Adams added four in the final minute to help Phoenix hold off Golden State. Bucks 114, Mavericks 106 Marques Johnson scored 20 points to lead seven Milwaukee players in double figures. SuperSonics 181, Jazz 98 James Bailey scored 27 points for Seattle and Jack Sikma added 21, including the last seven of the game. Fred Brown came off the bench to score 14 points in the final quarter. Adrian Dantley led the losers with 33 and Darrell Griffith added 24. Trail Blazers 124, Bullets 104 Guards Kelvin Ransey and Jim Paxson combined for 30 second-half points as Portland overcame a 14-point deficit. Cavaliers 109, Pistons 108 Cleveland's Mike Mitchell scored 41 points, connecting on 19 of 23 shots.

Smyer Erupts To Beat LCHS

SMYER (Special) — The Lubbock Christian High boys' basketball team, having already clinched a berth in the Texas Association of Private Schools state tournament, played Smyer in a road warmup game Tuesday night and came out on the short end of a 67-66 score.

The Eagles, 22-10, fell behind 22-15 in the opening quarter and had to play catch-up ball the rest of the game. The Eagles narrowed the gap to two points — 49-47 — with a quarter to play, but could not overtake Smyer, now 23-2 on the season.

Pat Phelan, the game's high scorer with 21 points, led LCHS, which had two other players in double figures. Barry Sikes poured in 18.

For Smyer, four players scored more than 10 points. Bruce Fowler led the way with 18, Choyr Gilbert had 15 while William Mosley and Mac Taylor chipped in 12 each.

Although LCHS outshot Smyer from the field 26-25, the difference came at the free-throw line where the hosts hit 17 of 25 to 14 of 20 for the Eagles.

LCHS will return to the court Friday in Dallas when it begins play in the TAPS state tournament.

Canyon Ends Mats' Slim Hopes

CANYON (Special) — Canyon kept its unblemished District 1-4A record intact Tuesday with an 84-80 victory over Estacado that keeps the Eagles in the driver's seat of the league race.

The Eagles, who won the first-half district title with a 6-0 record, moved to 2-0 in the second half and 21-8 overall with the win and remained one of two undefeated league teams. Borger is 3-0 after an easy win over Dumas Tuesday.

The loss virtually eliminates the Mats from a shot at the league crown. EHS is 1-2 in the second half, 14-15 overall, and the front-runners would have to lose at least two games apiece for the Matadors to have a chance.

The Eagles jumped out to a 20-16 lead after the first period and stretched their advantage to 45-35 by halftime. But Estacado cut the lead to 59-55 with eight minutes to play before the two squads battled to a 25-25 standoff in the final period.

Canyon won the game at the foul stripe as both teams connected on 34 field goals. The Eagles converted 16 of 23 foul shots while the Mats were good on 12 of their 16 charity attempts.

Forward David Harbin poured in 29 points to lead a three-player attack that accounted for 74 of the Eagles' 84 points. Butch Bearden, the Eagles' 6-foot-8 post-tossed in 23 and Steve Beck, the other starting forward, contributed 22.

Estacado swingman James Barnett led all scorers, canning 14 field goals and four of six free throws for 32 points. Kenneth Cade hit for 19 points, his 22nd consecutive game scoring in double figures, while Jerry Gray added 15.

Canyon Girls Thrash EHS

CANYON (Special) — The Canyon Eagles left little doubt they are District 1-4A's premier girls' team with a 74-41 stomping of Estacado here Tuesday in the final regular-season game for both squads.

The Eagles, who had already clinched the overall district title, raced off to a 29-8 first-quarter lead and had the game locked up with a 51-13 halftime lead.

"We got off to a real good start," said Canyon coach Lyndon Hardin, whose team moved to 6-0 in the second half of the district race and 23-7 overall. "The first half was probably the best first half we've had all year. We got quite a few of those first-half points at the free-throw line."

Canyon hit 42 free throws during the game as the Mats, 0-6 and 12-17, committed 29 fouls.

Canyon, which will meet 2-4A titlist Monahans on Feb. 23 in Brownfield for the bi-district title, was led by Terri Mayfield's 19 points. Penny Christopher tossed in 13 and Teresa Stone added 10. Maxine Walker had 13 for the Mats.

Dunbar Girls Dominate LHS

The smile on Dunbar coach Jim Washburn's face told the whole story Tuesday night.

After a rocky, up and down season, the Panther girls' team finished all smiles and laughter, racing past Levelland 63-55 on the DHS court in the final regular-season game for both teams.

But the final victory was anything but easy for Dunbar as it had to ride out a rough first period and a hectic final two minutes for the win. The Lobos jumped out to an 18-11 first-period lead behind the scoring of Karen Kinnison and clawed back in the closing minutes.

JETLINER FUSELAGE BROKEN — An Air California 737 jetliner lies with its fuselage broken and one right side engine separated from the wing following its crash landing at John Wayne Airport in Orange County, Calif., Tuesday. At least 34 passengers of 109 aboard were injured, fire officials said. (AP Laserphoto)

Instructions Mix-Up Blamed For Jetliner's Crash Landing

SANTA ANA, Calif. (AP) — An apparent mix-up in runway instructions may have caused the crash landing that injured 34 people aboard a twin-engine Air California jetliner, officials say.

The accident at John Wayne Airport occurred late Tuesday as the pilot of the Boeing 737 tried to avert a collision with another Air California jet that was rolling toward takeoff, officials said.

The pilot of Flight 336, which was carrying 104 passengers and a crew of five from San Jose, tried to pull the craft up in an effort to avert a crash, witnesses said.

But the plane was unable to climb and slammed onto the runway. Its front landing gear collapsed, and the craft skidded off the runway on its side, snapped in half and came to rest in a nearby field.

"It was like a movie. It was outrageous," said passenger, Doug Lawrence, 32, of Huntington Beach, Calif.

"We were almost skidding sideways. I was afraid we were going to turn over," said Allyson Nolte, of Del Mar.

Passengers reported "a lot of sliding and banging," with magazines and seat cushions "flying all over the place."

Passengers slid down emergency chutes while airport firefighters sprayed the plane with foam to keep flames away from the cabin.

Most of the injuries were minor, said Air California spokesman Thomas Kaminski.

A Federal Aviation Administration spokesman, who asked not to be identified, said the inbound pilot "was issued a go-around order (to keep circling). But we're not sure if he heard it."

Said airline spokeswoman Barbara Mowry: "Although we do not know the sequence of events, Air California Flight 336 was cleared to land, then told not to land but to execute a go-around. It was unable to climb and that is when the incident occurred."

The jet on the ground, Flight 931 bound for San Jose and Portland, Ore., already was rolling on the runway when it was ordered to abort its takeoff, she said. But she could not confirm whether the plane did stop its takeoff.

The FAA spokesman said the ill-fated plane "made a hard landing and then bounced and went into the dirt to the right of the runway. Apparently the landing gear was down. It was torn off when the plane went into the dirt."

After the landing gear collapsed, the plane toppled onto its side, dragging its right wing along the runway as it skidded, an Air California spokesman said.

Fire broke out in the right wing, wheel well and fuselage, but was quickly extinguished, officials said.

Son Says Atheist Madalyn O'Hair Harbors Strong Love For Money

HOUSTON (AP) — Atheist leader Madalyn Murray O'Hair claims she is poverty-stricken but is actually in love with money, said her son, William Murray.

Mrs. O'Hair has a new $300,000 home in Austin but does not want her supporters or media representatives to see it, said Murray. He also said she recently wrote that she is an anarchist but accepted funds last year from the Travis County Republican Party for processing GOP material at her American Atheist Center.

"Madalyn Murray does not believe in atheism," he said Tuesday. "She does not believe in anything whatsoever other than money."

Murray said Mrs. O'Hair simply cannot accept his 1979 conversion to Christianity. He now leads the Houston-based Murray Faith Foundation.

An objective of the foundation, he said, is to correct things he and his mother instituted through the American Atheist Association. He says he wants to convince Americans that atheism is a misguided, ill-founded religion.

On Tuesday, Murray distributed a prepared statement he said was prompted by Austin news stories quoting Mrs. O'Hair as saying recently she had moved from her home of 15 years because "We had busloads of choir singers singing hymns on our lawn."

"The news conference was called to explain to her employees and supporters why she would not invite anyone to her new home in Austin," Murray said. "She will not even have those at her home who helped to pay for it with contributions to her tax exempt corporation."

She does not want her supporters or the press to see her home, he said, "because of its size and cost."

"The house located in northwest Austin cost over $300,000," he said. "It is one of the largest homes in the most affluent section of Austin. Madalyn Murray O'Hair continues to swear she is in poverty. The home mentioned above has two Cadillacs parked in front of it."

Murray said Mrs. O'Hair has sworn she cannot pay legal fees in a pending criminal case but has received Social Security and Veterans Administration benefits.

On his mother's claim that harassment drove her into seclusion, Murray says she "has had no problems in Austin other than those she has caused herself such as physical attacks on the PTA."

Accused Smugglers To Assist U.S.

SAN ANTONIO (AP) — Two high officials of the Nicaraguan Air Force have agreed to cooperate with U.S. Customs smuggling investigations after pleading no contest to charges they tried to sneak two helicopters out of the country.

Chief U.S. District Judge William Sessions heard the surprise pleas Tuesday, then convicted Modesto Rojas-Berrios, director general of the Nicaraguan Air Force, and Sidney Muller-Schroeder, its chief procurement officer.

Sentencing was set for March 19. The men could receive two years in prison and $100,000 fines each on the conviction for trying to export the two UH-1B Bell helicopters, also known as "Hueys," to Nicaragua without an export permit from the U.S. State Department.

Sessions let each man remain free on $100,000 bond but ordered them to stay within the continental United States pending sentencing. The pair entered the no contest pleas about four hours before they had been scheduled for formal arraignment on the charges.

The government agreed not to prosecute them for conspiracy or in any other case now under investigation. The two Nicaraguans, in turn, agreed to cooperate in an ongoing investigation of reports that as many as 12 helicopters were taken to Nicaragua over the past year.

U.S. Customs officials said they were aware of rumors the smuggled helicopters were destined aid leftist insurgents in El Salvador.

The two helicopters seized by Customs agents at a nearby Bulverde heliport on Jan. 18 were included on the U.S. Munitions Control List, forbidding arms exports to Nicaragua. The United States has cut off shipments of arms to Nicaragua since the overthrow of former President Anastasio Somoza in January 1980.

Assistant U.S. Attorney Daniel Maeso read a 10-page description of the alleged offense into the court record and said the government could prove that the Nicaraguans knowingly were violating the law in taking the two helicopters out of the country.

Maeso said the helicopters, under surveillance of Customs agents, took off once from Bulverde, but foul weather forced them to land again. The prosecutor said federal agents moved in and arrested six persons.

Test-Firing Of Columbia Shuttle May Be Delayed

CAPE CANAVERAL, Fla. (AP) — A delay in the preparations for testing the main engines of the space shuttle Columbia raises the possibility the rocket might be test-fired after dark, providing a spectacular sight for observers.

Project officials were meeting today to decide whether to attempt the firing late Thursday or delay it until Friday morning. The decision may hinge on how much film documentation would be lost if the three engines are ignited in darkness.

Launch crews fell more than six hours behind schedule late Tuesday in the 21-day countdown, which is a rehearsal for Columbia's scheduled maiden launch.

The test is intended to determine whether the shuttle is ready to carry two astronauts into space for 54 hours on April 7 after being delayed more than two years by technical difficulties.

The countdown wasn't halted Tuesday. Instead, the National Aeronautics and Space Administration planned for an eight-hour hold in the countdown later to allow for catch-up work and to give the control team some rest before the final hours of the test.

That hold will begin when the count reaches five hours before ignition.

The hold pushed the planned firing of the engines at least eight hours beyond Thursday's originally planned 7:40 a.m. EST and raised the possibility of a nighttime ignition.

Turkey Walking Fine Line In Relations With U.S., Arab Nations

ANKARA, Turkey (AP) — Turkey's military government is straddling a fine diplomatic line that seeks to maintain links with the West but at the same time with Islamic nations calling for harsher action against Israel.

On one side Turkey is totally dependent on the Western alliance for arms and economic aid to prop up its ailing economy. On the other, Turkey can't survive without Arab oil and Turks are also seeking to develop export markets in the Middle East.

Realizing their new importance to Turkey, the Arabs have successfully pressured the military leadership here into drastically reducing diplomatic ties with Israel.

Turkey, a secular state that is 98 percent Moslem, also backed a resolution adopted by a recent conference of Islamic nations in Saudi Arabia, calling for a "holy war" to retake Arab lands captured by Israel.

Nevertheless, Turkey is slated to receive a record $400 million worth of U.S. military aid in the 1982 U.S. fiscal year, up from $250 million in fiscal 1981.

Both high-level Turkish government sources and top Western diplomats here say they doubt Turkey can continue indefinitely in what is described as a high-wire act.

"I don't think they will fall off the wire and land solidly in either camp," said one of the diplomats. "I think they will decide for themselves that the policy is too precarious and they will carefully walk back to the start and climb down."

There is a consensus among Turks and Western diplomats in Ankara that the Turkish leadership, especially since the military took control in a coup Sept. 12, finds its courtship of the Arabs distasteful.

"We're not fond of this role (courting the Arabs), but frankly we have no other choice right now," said one top Turkish official, who asked not to be identified.

While Turkey presses for even better relations with the Arabs it is showing signs of new strains in its ties with the North Atlantic Treaty Organization and the United States.

Despite the record amount of military aid expected from the United States, Turkey is complaining about the linkage of the aid to the amount given to old enemy Greece.

The Turks contend and the figures prove that the United States policy has been to give Greece 70 percent of what the Turks get.

Turkish officials argue that their country is more important to NATO than Greece, is more strategic geographically and maintains a superior army.

American diplomats in Ankara say the Turkish argument has logic and express sympathy for it.

"Frankly, we're getting mixed signals from Washington on this (the linkage of aid)," one of them said.

Turkey's conservative military leaders have expressed hope they will get a better deal from the defense-minded Reagan administration and Secretary of State Alexander M. Haig Jr.

But that hope soon will fade and the shift toward the Arab world may be accentuated if the new U.S. administration doesn't drop, in practice at least, the military-funding ratio between Turkey and Greece.

The generals contend they have done their part for NATO and have shown good faith by dropping some of their objections and agreeing to the re-entry of Greece into the military arm of the alliance.
