

Gasohol Loan Guarantees Called Improper

WASHINGTON (AP) — Private investigators told a House subcommittee Friday that the Farmers Home Administration improperly passed out a third of a billion dollars in loan guarantees last fall, partly in response to political pressure.

The loan guarantees, supposedly intended to spur production of gasohol, totaled $341 million and were included in 15 separate actions in the last week of the fiscal year that ended Sept. 30 and the first week after the new fiscal year, the investigators said.

"We are not talking about a single farm loan or an isolated consulting contract," said J. Terrence Brunner, executive director of the Chicago-based Better Government Association. "We are talking about one-third of a billion dollars, including one-fourth of all the money this program was authorized to guarantee last year."

Officials of the Agriculture Department's inspector general office testified that the loan guarantees were improper and that their investigation was continuing. However, they avoided allegations of any criminal intent, and said they couldn't substantiate charges of political motivation.

Officers involved in approving the loan guarantees denied any purposeful wrongdoing and said any improprieties resulted from a rush to take advantage of favorable interest rates and from a misunderstanding of federal law covering the handling of funds at the end of the fiscal year.

Brunner and other BGA representatives testified before the House Energy and Commerce subcommittee on oversight and investigations. They repeated allegations made as a result of an investigation conducted with Bruce Ingersoll, a Washington correspondent for the Chicago Sun-Times.

The Sun-Times published the allegations late last year, and the inspector general's office began its investigation based on the newspaper reports.

Although the allegations concern the previous administration, subcommittee chairman Rep. John Dingell, D-Mich., said practices apparently have not changed.

He cited the recent Washington office approval of a $929,000 loan guarantee for purchase and refurbishing of the Continental Motel in Opelika, Ala. — including Jacuzzis, waterbeds, ceiling mirrors and closed circuit television — despite disapproval by state agency officials and a history of bankruptcy for previous owners.

Robert E. Magee, acting inspector general for the department, told Dingell the motel loan is "under active criminal investigation. ... I cannot get into the details."

On last fall's gasohol loans, Bruce Yellen, an attorney and an investigator for the BGA, said the Washington office of the Farmers Home Administration put out a call for loan guarantee applications last August, with a response deadline of Sept. 5.

"Loan guarantees" are a promise by the federal government to repay a loan if it goes into default. It is a way of encouraging banks to loan money to firms that otherwise would not qualify, in hopes of furthering some public goal — in this case the production of gasohol.

About 50 loan applications were received, and that number was cut to about 20 by Sept. 26. "During this period," Yellen said, "some loans were reviewed in a matter of days, some in a matter of hours."

On Sept. 26, the last Friday before the end of the fiscal year, 13 loan guarantees were authorized although 11 had not been approved by the agency's national review committee, Yellen said.

The 13 authorized, but not approved in September, were subsequently approved

Reagan Hones Budget Ax

Saturday Mail, Amtrak, Urban Plans Eyed

WASHINGTON (AP) — Saturday mail deliveries, Amtrak train service and urban programs — survivors of last year's spending cuts — face a new threat from President Reagan's budget ax, according to internal administration documents obtained Friday.

The documents, listing a wide range of possible spending reductions, were prepared by budget director David Stockman and contain plans for slashing the budget in nearly every major area outside the military.

Social Programs
The documents, some of which were made available to The Associated Press, focus heavily on social programs, including Medicaid, Social Security, food stamps, unemployment insurance, welfare and housing.

But they also target cuts in programs for transportation, energy, rural areas, space exploration and urban economic development.

Republican congressional sources said Stockman was particularly interested in finding cuts in programs that benefit business, so as to avoid the appearance that the poor will bear the brunt of budget reductions.

"Basic Fairness"
"The administration is trying to put together a picture of basic fairness in which everybody's sacred cows are affected," said one GOP budget official, who asked not to be named.

Reagan plans to review Stockman's budget proposals early next week before he sends his spending cut package to Congress Feb. 18. The cuts are expected to total $40 billion to $50 billion for fiscal 1982, which starts Oct. 1.

Speaker Thomas P. O'Neill told reporters Friday he will try to block any Reagan cutbacks that would harm the poor. "They'll have me watching out for them," he said.

O'Neill said he would cooperate in correcting "inequities in government," but would not preside over dismantling of social welfare programs and allow the government to "exploit the many for the profits of a selfish few."

Among the proposed spending cuts that would affect business — as well as the general public — is a recommendation to reduce the proposed postal subsidies in former President Jimmy Carter's 1982 budget from $1 billion to $800 million.

The budget document notes that such a change would almost certainly renew the possibility the U.S. Postal Service would eliminate Saturday mail deliveries.

But it added: "The possible reduction of service to five-day delivery is a symbol of the seriousness of the fiscal austerity being imposed by reductions throughout the federal government."

Stockman also is seeking elimination of Economic Development Administration, which was created to help economically distressed areas by providing grants, loans and loan guarantees to attract private investment and new jobs.

"The Reagan administration will rely on general tax, fiscal and regulatory reduction ... to stimulate economic expansion and job creation," the document said.

Regional development commissions would also be eliminated along with several other urban grant programs for an

Arson Investigative Task Force Formed

By KIM COBB
Avalanche-Journal Staff

AN ARSON suspect was arrested Friday in connection with a Dec. 30 blaze at the New West Club, just minutes after Fire Marshall Robert Stokes and Criminal District Attorney John T. Montford announced the formation of an Arson Task Force to combat deliberately set fires.

Stephen Wesley Fowler, 24, was charged with one count of arson and two counts of burglary for allegedly setting the fire that resulted in an estimated $600,000 damage to the 19th Street nightclub. Montford announced Fowler's arrest during a news conference called to outline a new, centralized approach to investigating arson in Lubbock.

Fowler, a former New West employee, was arraigned before Justice of the Peace Wayne LeCroy Friday afternoon and his bond was set at $100,000.

"We're going to get after these people setting these fires," Stokes said, adding, "we've put up with this long enough."

Montford explained that the task force will be manned by representatives from the Lubbock Police Department; FBI; Bureau of Alcohol, Tobacco and Firearms; and Lubbock County Sheriff's Office as well as representatives from the fire department and district attorney's office.

The district attorney explained that the task force will pool existing resources

Cold Front Forecast For Area Weekend

A FRONTAL system bearing down from the Canadian border is expected to settle over the South Plains late today, dashing any hopes of a pleasant weekend outdoors.

The mercury should climb into the upper 50s this afternoon before the cold air mass hits the area late in the afternoon. Sunday's high will climb only into the middle 30s, forecasters said.

Tonight's low will be in the upper teens.

Mostly cloudy skies and early morning fog put a cap on Friday's high reading at 53. The thick fog slowed traffic in Lubbock and delayed the landing of several flights at Lubbock International Airport.

Cloudy skies covered the eastern half of the state Friday and conditions are expected to be much the same with slightly colder temperatures today, the national weather service said.

between the various agencies. Stokes said the group will follow basic investigative practices, but with the help of more people.

Montford added that the task force will draw upon resources of the various agencies and said that continuing education in arson investigation will be emphasized.

"The developments of the past months have brought home the need for

Tech Sports Medicine Degree Program Pushed By University

By RUTHANNE BROCKWAY
Avalanche-Journal Staff

YOUNG neighborhood soccer enthusiasts may one day benefit from knowledge gained in training athletes for the Olympics if agreements and approvals are worked out for a proposed sports medicine degree at Texas Tech University.

Tech officials have conducted preliminary talks with a representative of the U.S. Olympic Committee regarding that group's possible endorsement of the university's proposed master of science degree in the program. Joining the Olympians in eyeing the progress of what Tech officials say is a unique college program are coaches, trainers, doctors and others concerned with physical fitness.

Martin McIntyre, chairman of Tech's health, physical education and recreation department, says the course means someday physicians and coaches of youth sports may have better training in how to prevent and treat injuries, deal with psychological factors and aid physically active youngsters and adults in other ways.

University officials hope to receive approval for the new degree program at the April meeting of the Coordinating Board, Texas College and University System. Although the board, the state's higher education regulatory body, sometimes is reluctant to approve new programs, Tech officials hope to gain endorsement by pointing out the low cost and the increased efficiency of existing faculty members under the sports medicine proposal.

Tech President Lauro Cavazos last month told regents there will be little cost involved, except for some equipment, because the curriculum will be taught by faculty members already employed in various departments of both the university and Tech's Health Sciences Center.

Dr. Robert Yost, an associate professor of orthopaedic surgery at the medical school, explained that courses will be taught by faculty in eight departments. Those areas in the medical school include family practice, anatomy, internal medicine, orthopaedic surgery, pharmacology and physiology. The food and nutrition department in the College of Home Economics also will be involved, as will the department of health, physical education and recreation in the College of Arts and Sciences.

Dr. Irving Dardick, chairman of the U.S. Olympic Committee's sports medicine council, visited with Tech administrators last fall to discuss the program. Olympic officials note the group is "in the process of identifying universities interested in pursuing research on selected topics in sports medicine."

Several universities already are involved in research in conjunction with

Citizens' Group Charts Far-Reaching Campaign Against X-Rated Movies

By NEAL FARMER
Avalanche-Journal Staff

AN EFFORT TO CLOSE the Circle Drive-In escalated Friday night into a full-scale battle against pornography in Lubbock, with one of the leaders of Citizens Against Pornography suggesting use of picket lines, possible marches and monitoring of movie patrons.

Earlier this week theological student Sam Durden went to city officials with a 50-signature petition asking for closure of the theater. Friday night, Durden's Citizens Against Pornography campaign went public and more than 100 Lubbockites gathered at the Ramada Inn, adjacent to the 58th Street and Avenue Q drive-in theater, to lend their support.

Durden said initial anti-pornography plans include utilization of picket lines around all theaters showing X-rated movies, marches against the businesses and "we'll write down an occasional tag number (of cars at theaters). It won't hurt — it will be interesting to see who goes to these things."

Those at the meeting greeted Durden's suggestions with enthusiasm, often interrupting his speech with applause and comments of "Amen" and "Praise the Lord."

Their support also was exhibited monetarily after Durden told the group attorneys have advised him the best way to battle pornography in Lubbock is to incorporate the organization, which requires a $500 filing fee. After a passing of the hat, organization leaders announced $474 was collected.

And Durden said he wants to make sure city council members respond to the organization's demands. "We will fire up the present city leaders," he told the group, "or the ones we elect next election."

One city leader, Mayor Pro-Tem Alan Henry, already is behind the group's goals. Henry was at Friday's meeting and said persons who live near the theater have rights that are being violated.

"If this is equal protection under the law, then the laws need to be changed," Henry said, also drawing a round of applause.

conservative Republicans who in the past have labeled as big spenders those Democrats who favored raising the limit. But most apparently accepted the argument that since the debt was run up before Reagan took office, the ceiling should be lifted to allow him time to offer his own solutions for the economy's ills.

Sen. Bob Dole, R-Kan., one of Reagan's key supporters, cautioned that unless the president keeps his commitment to make deep cuts in federal spending, "perhaps we all should vote against the next increase" in the debt limit.

Democrats, still smarting from the loss of Senate control to the Republicans, made clear they would vote for the debt bill only after most GOP members had lent their support. Many Democrats held back until the roll call showed solid Republican support. Then, Democratic Leader Robert C. Byrd signaled and the switch began.

"I'm going to hold my nose as hard as possible and vote for this," said Sen. Orrin Hatch, R-Utah.

"I don't think holding your nose" will

Markets Show Little Response To Reagan Speech

NEW YORK (AP) — The nation's financial markets, which reacted with near-euphoria to President Reagan's election last November, showed little response Friday to his first major economic address to the nation.

The stock market, which rose more than 60 points in the first 10 days after Reagan's election but dropped sharply after his inauguration, posted a modest gain Friday, rising 5.54 to 952.30. Wall Street analysts said Reagan's televised plea for support of his economic strategy had little to do with the market's performance.

Although financial markets did not react strongly to Reagan's speech, business and financial leaders cheered the president's efforts to explain the nation's economic woes and his pledge to make spending cuts in "virtually every department of government."

"The principal value of the talk, in my view, was educational," said John D. Wilson, senior vice president and chief economist at Chase Manhattan Bank.

"It was good to see unequivocal recognition that inflation is our greatest economic enemy..." said Harry Kane, chief financial officer at Georgia-Pacific Corp. in Portland, Ore.

Some economists said financial markets attached little importance to Reagan's Oval Office address because most investors were looking ahead to Feb. 18, when Reagan is to present his "economic renewal" package to Congress. In his speech Thursday night, Reagan revealed few specifics of that plan.

"It takes more than words" to bring inflation and the federal budget under control, said Fred Deming, chief economist at Chemical Bank.

Reagan recited a string of statistics to underscore his warning that the nation is "in the worst economic mess since the Great Depression." He produced a dollar bill and then 36 cents in change to show how the dollar has declined in value since 1960. And he used charts to show how he intended to balance the federal budget by slowing the growth of federal spending.

"(Reagan) didn't say anything that wasn't already known... and anyone who expected him to say anything new or different was only being naive, to say the least," said one New York dealer, who asked that his name not be used.

In currency trading abroad, the dollar rose sharply against most other major currencies. But dealers said Reagan's speech had little effect on currency traders.

The dollar has registered steady gains over the last several weeks in international currency markets, amid signs that U.S. interest rates would not soon fall from their current high levels.

In New York trading, the dollar was lower in extremely light trading, dealers said. Gold was up moderately, closing at $504.50 per troy ounce in New York.

Several Refiners Boost Wholesale Fuel Prices

NEW YORK (AP) — Several large refiners boosted wholesale fuel prices 2 to 3.5 cents a gallon Friday as the surge in oil costs following last week's lifting of federal petroleum price controls continued.

Among those raising prices were Gulf Oil Corp., the nation's fifth-largest oil company; ninth-ranked Conoco Inc., and Cities Service Co., 19th-largest in the industry. The wholesale increases could be felt quickly by consumers.

Standard Oil Co. (Ohio), meanwhile, confirmed it had raised wholesale gasoline prices between 2 and 3 cents a gallon

Thursday. It also increased retail prices at company-owned Sohio, BP and Boron stations a penny a gallon.

The company said the retail price of a gallon of leaded regular gasoline at a typical company-operated self-service station in Ohio now is $1.249, up 4 cents since oil-price controls were abolished Jan. 28 and up 9 cents since early December.

Conoco said its gasoline prices rose 3 to 3.5 cents a gallon, depending on region, leaving them about 4 to 5 cents a gallon above where they were just before President Reagan announced the oil price controls were being dropped eight months ahead of schedule.

Conoco also raised wholesale heating oil and diesel fuel prices 3 cents a gallon, while Cities Service increased gasoline, heating and diesel fuel prices 2 cents a gallon.

Others raising fuel prices 1 cent to 3 cents a gallon since Thursday included Tenneco Inc., Ashland Oil Co. and American Petrofina Inc.

The decontrol move came on top of a 10 percent — or $3-a-barrel — rise in imported oil prices and itself increased the cost of domestic crude oil $8 per 42-gallon barrel.

Business Agency Head Named

A Lubbockite was named Tuesday as acting district director of the U.S. Small Business Administration in Lubbock.

Judson F. Simkins, who has worked with the SBA since 1969, succeeds Russell R. Berry, who was transferred to Washington, D.C., to the SBA financial assistance office.

Simkins started his SBA career with the Dallas district office and was instrumental in starting the Surety Bond Guarantee Program there. The purpose of the program is to assist small contractors (with less than $3.5 million in gross receipts) in obtaining bid, payment and performance bonds.

In 1976, the Allen native was promoted to the regional office in Dallas and served as regional finance and investment officer.

Simkins holds a degree in marketing and finance from North Texas State University and a degree from the Graduate School of Banking at Southern Methodist University.

The Lubbock District Office is located in Room 712, Federal Office Building, 1205 Texas Avenue. The office covers 81 West Texas counties.

For additional information, contact the Small Business Administration at 782-7462.

Student Financial Aids Program Set

Information on financial aid for students planning to attend college or technical institutes will be presented Monday at the Monterey High School auditorium.

The program, developed by Monterey High counselors, is scheduled for 7:30 p.m. to 9 p.m. for all city high school students who are interested.

Representatives from Texas Tech University, Lubbock Christian College, South Plains College and LEARN Talent Search will serve as resource people.

Students will learn about securing scholarships and financial through a filmstrip, presentations by the college representatives and group discussions.

For further information, contact Monterey counselors Ann Linguist or Burnis Henderson, 799-3617.

STRIKERS EAT OFF TAXPAYERS

Stamp Out Food Stamp Abuse

ONE OF THE most outrageous rip-offs of the American taxpayer is the one perpetrated by labor union members whose families collect food stamps while they're out on strike.

The National Labor-Management Foundation, among others, is calling upon Congress to end this waste as a part of the effort to bring a bloated budget back into balance.

"The availability of food stamps for strikers is not only costly to taxpayers," S. Rayburn Watkins, president of the Foundation, said in a letter to members of Congress. "It is a serious distortion of the purpose of the Food Stamp Act to improve nutrition among low-income households."

THE FOOD STAMP program has grown from a small beginning of $30.5 million in 1964 to $5.6 billion in 1976 and has doubled in the last five years.

President Reagan has zeroed in on another abuse of the program, by students in college even though they may be supported by their parents. School teachers, too, have on occasion taken advantage of their 9 or 10-month schedules to collect food stamps during the summer.

Overall, the eligibility guidelines for food stamps have set income minimums so high that fulltime workers have applied for the handout even though their pay was well above the minimum wage.

But nothing infuriates taxpayers who know about it more than the free ride strikers take at their expense.

"Big Labor has fought hard to protect this special privilege and has come to rely on government handouts to keep their members happy while out on strike," Watkins reminded congressmen in his letter.

"IN FACT," he alleges, "most union dues no longer go for strike funds but for political purposes, union officials' salaries and other costs unrelated to collective bargaining."

As a result, he points out, the federal government—that is, the taxpayer—is actively supporting the position of labor unions rather than remaining neutral in labor-management disputes.

"The availability of this tax-supported subsidy for strikers pervades every work stoppage and is a factor in prolonged strikes," Watkins adds.

In effect, the taxpayer supports the striker for as long as it takes him to wring out a wage increase that will increase the cost to the taxpayer-consumer of whatever it is the striker produces, be it cars or grapefruits.

"By cutting this abuse out of the food stamp program," Watkins concludes, "Congress can cut the cost and direct the benefits more directly to Americans in real need of assistance," including the elderly and the disabled.

IS BALD BEAUTIFUL?

Hair's Lookin' At You, Kid

SAY YOU are a guy who has invested a lot of money—never mind ego—in trying to maintain your hair in the style and density of its youth.

For some men, that is no small challenge, and one they wouldn't consider taking up without the aid of products said to do things to the head and hair nature never intended.

Then, let's say you have come to trust these products, not so much for what they do but for what they claim to do.

In short, suppose you have faith. Hair-growth gels, lotions and rubs. They may be a laugh to some, but they are a last hope for many a balding man who clings to the promise that a single hair might be saved from extinction or a new strand made to appear in a spot gone conspicuously shiny.

LIFE IS FULL of false hopes. And the Food and Drug Administration knows how vulnerable to such fantasies men can be when their hairline is at stake.

In 1972, the FDA set out to scrutinize all over-the-counter drugs, including so-called miscellaneous external concoctions.

According to a spokeswoman, that takes in "your aphrodisiacs, hair growth products, etc."

Friday was the deadline for comments from the public on whether the agency should drive hair growth companies out of the marketplace or let them stay.

BUT PUTTING the hair restoration industry on trial like this brings to mind all sorts of sad thoughts.

What if these products are found to be worthless? What will their users do? Where will they turn for solace? And what will we be losing?

Almost from the time this country was founded, Americans have believed in remedies that don't do what they are supposed to do.

If hair growers bite the dust, it is fair to wonder what salve will go next?

In a nation that admits the stark reality of a bald head a better place? Or is it a nation that has lost its capacity for faith and hope?

JOSEPH SOBRAN:

Radicalism Is Dying For Lack Of Support

WASHINGTON—An old Dartmouth undergraduate song begins, "Don't send my son to Princeton," the dying mother said. That song should be updated. Mother knew best.

Consider Princeton's chaplains, William Kirby and John Walsh, who visited Iran shortly after the fall of the Shah and returned babbling assurances of forthcoming "freedom and justice through the Islamic revolution."

They had merely paid a social call; to my knowledge, they were neither tortured nor brainwashed. Princeton is apparently staging the Crusades in reverse: its Christians come back from the Middle East extolling the Muslim faith.

Then there is Professor Richard Falk, the most irrepensible of them all, who visited Khomeini himself and came back to tell Princetionians and other infidels that the Ayatollah could be best described as a "moderate."

FALK HAS just reviewed the Iranian situation for The Nation, a left-wing magazine nobody would describe as moderate. Despite what he calls "hostile reporting" over here, in which "the bad has been consistently exaggerated, the good ignored," he finds it pretty peachy.

In this he parts company with the moderate Ayatollah, who recently summed up the country's condition in the word "chaos."

Oh, Professor Falk acknowledges there have been some firing squads, floggings, stonings, and for a while "the Khomeini leadership seemed overly lax about democratic rights." Lax? The Ayatollah sounds not only moderate, but positively laid back.

And—well—it is certainly true that for the first time in decades many women are being made to conform to strict codes of dress, are not expected to play roles in public arenas, and are being denied a place in politics or education."

MANY WOMEN? I thought it was all women. If there are any wearing skirts in the new parliament, I haven't heard about it—perhaps because I'm at the mercy of hostile reporting.

Then too, "the Islamic Republic seems to have moved in a dangerously regressive direction, whether it be in relation to the Marxist ideas of the left"—always the first concern of the Nation's readers—or any others.

And, of course, Professor Falk allows (writing a few weeks ago) some might quibble about the "retention" of 53 Americans ("52," he hastens to point out, "since the release of Richard Queen").

The economy-minded may note that unemployment is high and rising. Construction and production are at a standstill.

And, oh yes, the nation is at war with Iraq. After all of which, Professor Falk concludes brightly, "The Iranian revolution is probably now in a better position to move ahead constructively than at anytime since its victory over the Shah."

GLAD YOU told us, Professor. All that hostile reporting had us thinking the situation over there was pretty bad.

Turns out all it was was a little repression, violence, torture, lawlessness, reaction, intolerance, depression, and war.

Despite the availability of Messrs. Kirby, Walsh, Falk, and others like them, Princeton students seem to have about as much taste for campus radicalism as for goldfish swallowing and panty raids. After David Rockefeller spoke recently, the students actually applauded!

Which led one aging campus radical, who had insulted Rockefeller only to draw hisses from his younger and politer colleagues, to note glumly that "fascism can't be far away."

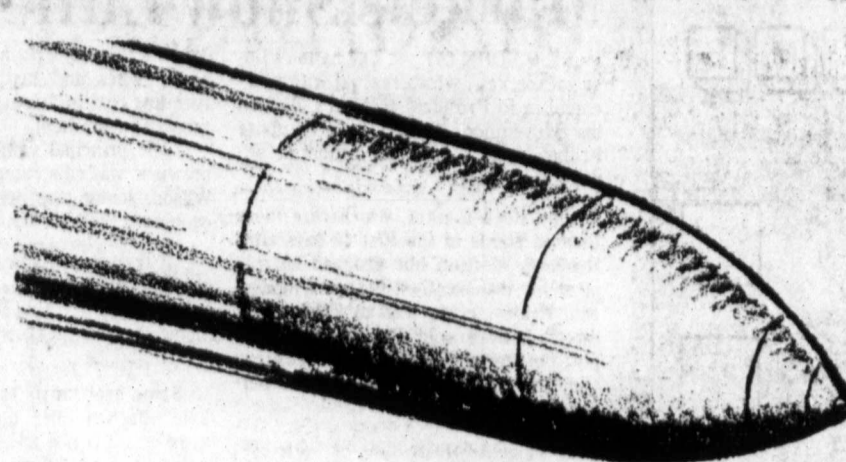

THE NUMBER of radicals, he complains, has fallen to about a fifth of what it was back when he got into the business, many years ago. Students are no longer "politically conscious."

Notice the self-flattering assumption: only he is fully "conscious." If others don't share his views, it isn't because they hold other views, or because he has failed to persuade them, or because (perish the thought!) they may think there's something a little—well—outlandish about an ideology in whose name millions have been killed. No, it's because they are a somewhat lower form of life than he.

The rather obvious fact is that the campus radicals, junior and senior divisions, are guilty of a lot of false advertising for a long series of bloody regimes. The younger students know it. And radicalism is dying.

It may not be long before mothers can safely send their boys to Princeton again.

'Looks Like They've Moved Up The Heavy Stuff'

Synthetic Sentiment

WASHINGTON—The movable feast of celebration about the hostages has abated a bit, so perhaps it will not seem intolerably churlish to ask what, precisely, people have been celebrating.

Clearly, more is involved than just gratification about the hostages' deliverance. At the risk of seeming stone-hearted, I suggest this:

The crisis that began because of weakness, and was prolonged by confusion, and ended in extortion, has been followed by a national hysteria of self-deception symbolized by a sign carried by a celebrator: "America 52, Iran 0."

When calamity is translated into the idiom of

DONALD GRAFF:

Anatomy Of Fear

WASHINGTON—The Stockholm syndrome, it seems, didn't play in Tehran.

Why it did not is one aspect of the prolonged hostage crisis that is likely to continue to be of special interest to psychologists involved in research into a basic question in the complex problem of terrorism: What motivates terrorists and how can they most effectively be dealt with in situations in which the lives of hostages are at stake?

Briefly, the Stockholm syndrome refers to the development of a bond between captives and captors. It gets its name from the attempted robbery of a bank in the Swedish capital some years back that had some bizarre consequences.

During five days of captivity, the attitude of the bank staff toward its captors shifted from fear to sympathy. One declared publicly that the robbers were actually protecting the hostages from the police.

EFFECTS OF the syndrome have been observed in several other incidents. The Symbionese Liberation Army kidnapping of heiress Patty Hearst comes immediately to mind.

Also possibly the terrorist seizure of foreign diplomats in Colombia. In the end, the terrorists had considerable technical assistance from some of their captives in working out details of a deal with Colombian authorities.

That may be explained as sharp application of skills of their trade by the diplomats in their own best interest. But there may have been something more to it.

There apparently wasn't any more to the Tehran situation, however. On the basis of initial reports, the relationship between the 52 Americans and the Iranian militants during their more than 14 months of enforced association was adversarial all the way.

THE HOSTAGES, according to one of their number, Richard H. Morefield, were aware that the Iranians were attempting "to break us" and were determined that it would not happen.

It may be that the militants outsmarted themselves with the abuse visited upon their captives, from physical mistreatment to annoyances such as withholding mail. On the other hand, it may be that this was their intention, that they were aware of the Stockholm syndrome and wanted no part of it.

For it can have a reverse twist in which captors become sympathetically involved with their prisoners. And in revolutionary Iran, that would never do.

ALSO, ONE element of the usual hostage situation was missing in Tehran: Terrorists customarily are themselves besieged, threatened by the forces of authority seeking to bring them to justice and free their captives.

This is a situation the captives themselves can empathize with, the more so since they also may be in peril from any rescue attempt.

It was not present in Tehran. There the captors were not besieged but had the active support of what passed for authority outside the embassy walls. There were no grounds for empathy.

Tehran will provide much material for the continuing study of the psychology of terrorism. It cannot be said, however, that it either disproves the Stockholm syndrome or suggests an antidote. It was too much a special case, too much a rule unto itself.

That is pretty much what can be said about Iran in general these days.

sport and christened a victory, when victims are called heroes and turned into props for telegenic celebrations of triumph, then it is time to recall George Orwell's axiom that the great enemy of clear language is insincerity.

Much of the emotionalism, although not consciously insincere, has been synthetic in the sense that it has been a psychological mechanism to keep unpleasant thoughts at bay.

Beneath the intense, almost fierce focus on the ceremonies of victorious homecoming there was, I suspect, grim determination to have fun rather than face facts.

The hostages were used by Iran, for the humiliation of America and the consolidation of Iran's revolution, and now the former hostages have been used by America in a pageant, the effect of which is to prevent the country from thinking about how it allowed Iran to succeed.

THE CARTER administration's penchant for striking poses and calling them policies matched the public's penchant for yellow ribbons, candlelight vigils, and other gestures that were explained by the gesturers on the grounds that "we just felt we had to do something."

The public supported Carter's policies of "doing something" with the likes of Ramsey Clark and Kurt Waldheim, and the public tied yellow ribbons and called that "doing something."

Such activities were cathartic for the nation, but a nation that confuses catharsis with the defense of its interests is a nation that cannot distinguish between attitudinizing and acting.

Some Americans even say the crisis was "a good thing" because it "brought the country together." But so did Pearl Harbor, which was not a good thing and would have been worse if America's response had been vigils and ribbons.

PERHAPS AMERICANS are so starved for a sense of "togetherness," and so covet the warm feeling of shared emotions, that they care not whether the emotions are ersatz, or disproportionate, or have a suitable occasion.

I cannot erase from my mental retina what I saw at 1 a.m. at the Dakota apartment building on the second day after John Lennon was shot there.

A crowd, bathed in television lights and tears, was keeping a vigil in front of a large gate covered with flowers and photographs. The unintended but striking effect was of an altar. A pent-up yearning for public witness found release in worship of a rock star.

For days, 24 hours a day, news shows, talk shows and radio disc jockey shows were clogged with people having fun explaining how they "loved" John Lennon, and their grief at their "deeply personal loss."

Love confessed to disc jockeys, like grief expressed to Merv Griffin, is, however real the psychic need it nourishes, still synthetic.

EVEN WORSE than the inflation that is debasing the currency is the inflation debasing the language. It is cheapening the words that are the currency of thought.

A nation that was built by muscle and preserved by blood is, increasingly, fueled by hyperbole and sustained by euphemism. (Remember the "incomplete success" at Desert One?)

It has an economy increasingly geared to the manufacture of frivolous appetites (How many Calvin Kleins in your closet, America?), an entertainment industry geared to the manufacture of the lowest moods (using bathos and titillation).

And now the nation may be becoming addicted to manufactured "feelings."

IN THE 1960s, professors noticed the growing tendency of students to answer questions with statements like, "Well, my feeling about Hamlet is..." and "My reaction to the Renaissance is..."

The language of "reaction" and "feeling" was evidence of a culture losing interest in reason, celebrating sentiment, obsessed with "authenticity" and defining it in terms of strong emotions, warm feelings.

Descartes' "cogito, ergo sum"—I think, therefore I am—became "I feel, therefore I am."

In an acute dissection of the nation's recent mood, Thomas Bray of Wall Street Journal notes that "How does it feel?" was the emblematic question of the hostage crisis, asked of everybody, about everything. The celebrating will end when the thinking begins.

VIRGINIA PAYETTE:

A Quote Of Note

DALLAS—President Reagan's inaugural address had a political kicker that surprised a lot of people. He promised to carry out his campaign promises.

As speeches go, it was no "blood, toil, tears and sweat," Winston Churchill's ringing cry to rally the British in World War II, but it got Americans to thinking that maybe Ronald Reagan really means what he's been saying all these years.

This qualifies as something of a switch in presidential elections.

Traditionally, voters view the winning candidate as a man who promises the people whatever he thinks it will take to win their votes and then, once in the oval office, falls all over himself kowtowing to the special interests that put him there.

IT MAY not be a true picture in all cases, but it's the way jaded Americans look at many of their elected leaders.

And they've turned out to be right often enough to give a ring of truth to the saying, "phony as a politician's promise."

Now they're beginning to wonder if maybe Ronald Reagan truly believes that government is the cause, not the solution, of our current economic woes.

And the pundits are working overtime to figure out what he'll do first...whether he has the "will and the skill" to crack the power of the federal bureaucracy...and what "really makes Ronnie tick."

Well, if you can go by what a man says on his way up to the White House, there's a new book out that might provide a clue or two.

IT'S CALLED "The Official Ronald Wilson Reagan Quote Book," and it's a reprint, without editorial comment of any kind, of things Reagan has said in public over the years.

It starts out with a warning he tossed at hecklers three days before his landslide: "A little while ago, they were calling out 'Bonzo.' They'd better be careful: 'Bonzo' grew up to be 'King Kong.'"

On Oct. 26, 1979, he explained why he wanted to get the government off our backs: "I used to fantasize what it would be like if everyone in government would quietly slip away, close the doors and disappear. How long would it take the people of this country to miss them?"

"I think that life would go on, the people would keep right on doing the things they are doing, and we would get along a lot better than we think."

AND, 10 YEARS before that, "Government is like a baby—an alimentary canal with an appetite at one end and no sense of responsibility at the other."

As far back as 1966 he was wrestling with the moral problem of nuclear bombs and Russia's threat to conquer the world: "No one, of course, wants to use these weapons."

"But the enemy should never be told that we won't. He should go to bed every night fearful that we might."

Ten years later: "We know that Russia has quadrupled its espionage and counter-intelligence in the United States in just the last couple of years."

"Yet our own intelligence sources all over the world are drying up because they fear the inevitable leaks from Congressional investigations will cost them their lives."

ON WELFARE: "The food stamps program is a multimillion-dollar administrative nightmare, a staggering financial burden at the federal level, and the newest nesting place for welfare abuse and fraud."

And "The MediCal patient has a credit card. It is unlimited."

On civil rights: "It is the responsibility of the government, at point of bayonet if necessary, to see that every citizen gets his constitutional rights and is not denied them by any group or individuals."

As for women, here's what he's had to say over the years to lady libbers:

"Nancy doesn't need liberating because she doesn't think of herself as being my chattel in any way. She made up her own mind that marriage was a career in itself, and she does darned well at it."

(1976) "I think women should play a much larger role in government. I think they'd tend to be more realistic and candid, that they'd expect people to take care of themselves more. I think there would be fewer elaborate systems for government interference."

(1980) And, just three months ago, "I'm not smart enough to lie." (Gee, do you suppose he realizes that's what Jimmy Carter said, too?)

Haig Moves To Consolidate Position At State

WASHINGTON (AP) — Secretary of State Alexander M. Haig is moving with considerable speed to establish his authority over anything dealing with the nation's foreign policy, short of the president himself.

Just two weeks after taking office, Haig already has made his influence felt in the following ways:

- He fought off attempts by Budget Director David Stockman to initiate deep cuts in foreign aid.

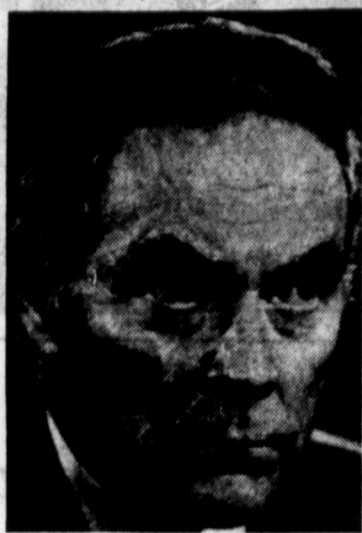

- He persuaded President Reagan to wait a while longer before deciding whether to lift the grain embargo against the Soviets.

- He has reassured the nation's allies that recent remarks favoring the neutron warhead by Defense Secretary Caspar Weinberger did not mean there has been a change in the policy espoused by the Carter administration of opposing the warhead.

In all cases, Haig was swimming against the current of the Reagan administration, which came to office pledging to slash spending and lift the grain embargo. The Republican Party platform, which Reagan endorsed, called for deploying the neutron warhead after consultation with U.S. allies.

Haig said during his confirmation hearings that he wouldn't be bound by everything in the party platform because he didn't have a role in drafting it.

Since Reagan took office on Jan. 20, a great deal of attention has been focused on Stockman's efforts to cut federal spending. There is unquestionably a great deal of support for this among both Republicans and Democrats.

ALEXANDER M. HAIG

But while Stockman surely knew he would run up against opposition from those whose oxen were being gored, he will probably be sorry that the first battle was fought with Haig. Stockman lost that one.

That signals others that Stockman can be beaten and could lead them to greater opposition when he zeroes in on their departments.

But how was Stockman to know? Foreign aid has been an unpopular expense in recent years, especially with those around Reagan. Congress failed even to pass a foreign aid bill during the last two years of the Carter administration.

So it must have seemed like a safe bet to propose cutting former President Jimmy Carter's $8 billion aid proposal for fiscal 1982 by $2.6 billion.

But Haig was quick to signal his opposition. He said at a news conference on Jan. 28 that he was concerned about possible cuts in foreign aid, and disclosed that he was talking with Stockman about it.

"I hope that we are going to be able to get a recognition that both foreign assistance and foreign security assistance is sometimes a very cost-effective vehicle for insuring that the ideals and interests of this country are carried out effectively abroad," he said.

The next day, the OMB plan was leaked to the press. The nation's allies protested, and Haig took these protests and his own views to a Cabinet meeting where the cuts were shelved for the time being.

Some cuts are still likely, the State Department concedes, but nothing like Stockman wanted.

The Cabinet's decision to delay a decision on lifting the grain embargo also reflected Haig's influence. During the campaign, Reagan had said the embargo was ineffective and unfair to farmers and that he would lift it, if elected.

Among those at a Cabinet session who urged Reagan to keep his promise was Agriculture Secretary John Block, who looked decidedly displeased in telling reporters afterward that a decision to lift the embargo had been put off.

Haig said it would be a mistake to lift the embargo while Soviet troops were poised on Poland's border.

Haig's view is that the embargo has damaged the Soviet economy. State Department officials have argued in interviews that the embargo contributed to a 3 percent decline in Soviet meat production last year.

The feeling at the State Department now is that the embargo will be left in place for some time.

Haig also has given every indication that he will hold tight to the reins of foreign policy and keep them out of the hands of National Security Adviser Richard Allen, which was his plan from the beginning. He has Reagan's support on this and apparently Allen hasn't resisted.

Allen had been scheduled to give a background briefing to reporters at the White House on the visit of South Korean President Chun Doo-Hwan. But Allen did not appear. Instead, the briefing was given by a State Department official.

Farm Leaders Urge Patience With Reagan On Embargo

WASHINGTON (AP) — President Reagan was quoted by agricultural leaders as saying Friday he will make sure farmers do not suffer "an unfair burden" if he extends the year-old embargo on grain sales to the Soviet Union.

"He guaranteed fairness to American agriculture, and that was very important to us," said Morgan Williams, president of the Cooperative League of the USA.

Reagan met with representatives of 15 groups at the White House to get their views on the embargo and the budget cuts he will propose later this month.

The farm leaders opened the meeting by presenting the president with a huge birthday cake to celebrate his 70th birthday and came away sounding sympathetic to his deliberations on the embargo.

"I think we need to be patient with the president," Merlyn Carlson, head of the National Cattlemen's Association, said later in a briefing on the meeting.

"Give the man a chance," added Robert Delano, president of the American Farm Bureau Federation. "Give the man a chance to make some decisions relative to foreign policy, of which the embargo is part."

Agriculture Secretary John Block, who stood at the side of the farm leaders as they spoke, would not comment beyond saying Reagan has not reached a decision on the ban, and that it will be the subject of future Cabinet discussions.

The president set an amiable tone for the meeting with an opening story of how he once tried his hand at raising chickens so he could have fresh eggs. He said he enjoyed the eggs but they wound up costing him $1.65 each.

The farmers laughed knowingly. They said Reagan told them that his decision on the embargo could be tied to international events, such as whether the Soviet Union moves troops into Poland.

"It has to do with foreign policy in this nation. It's affected by what's going on in Poland ... and in the rest of the world," said Jim Billington, president of the National Association of Wheat Growers.

Former President Jimmy Carter imposed the embargo Jan. 4, 1980, after the Soviets occupied Afghanistan. His order blocked delivery of 17 million metric tons of U.S. corn and wheat, plus some soybeans and other products, that the Kremlin had been expected to take last year. It exempted 8 million metric tons of grain that were specified under a 1975 agreement calling for regular purchases of U.S. corn and wheat by the Soviets.

Reagan has said the grain embargo was unfair to the nation's farmers because it forced them to carry a burden not shared with other sectors of the economy. On July 3, 1980, he declared that "Jimmy Carter's grain embargo should be ended — now."

However, the president has said more recently that he might consider the embargo proper if it were extended to other economic areas as well.

Williams said Reagan assured them he would help farmers if he extended the embargo.

"He said today that if it became necessary in the long run because of our strategic policy to continue it, that he would develop policies to see that the farmer did not bear an unfair burden of that policy," Williams said. "He was not explicit at that point and we did not expect him to be."

William Mullins, president of the National Corn Growers Association, said the agricultural leaders told Reagan "we would be willing to do our fair share" in absorbing the impact of Reagan's upcoming proposals to slash federal spending.

Billington said they mentioned to Reagan that Congress had adopted programs to help ease the impact of the embargo. "We don't think those are sufficient, and there is some discussion of cutting wheat stock programs. ... But we did bring this to his attention, that Congress put these programs in place, and they're helpful."

Press Gets Blame For Controversy

WASHINGTON (AP) — The State Department contended Friday that the controversy over comments by Secretary of Defense Caspar Weinberger on the neutron warhead has been caused by the press, not Weinberger.

But officials said privately they wished Weinberger hadn't said anything in the first place.

State Department spokesman William

Dyess said the department felt obliged to reassure the nation's European allies that U.S. policy about the neutron weapon hadn't changed because of some press accounts about Weinberger's comments, nor because of what he actually said.

"Sensational press stories on Secretary Weinberger's remarks, which adhered closely to administration policy, caused concern in some press quarters in Europe," Dyess said. He said the State Department wanted "to set the record straight."

Another official, who did not want to be identified, said, however, that he wouldn't discourage a reporter from speculating that State Department officials wished Weinberger hadn't said anything about the nuclear warheads.

"It's a potentially divisive issue with Europe, and we would rather it hadn't been raised at this time," he said. But the official went on to say that "Haig doesn't find any fault with Weinberger. He has every right to answer questions at a news conference."

The Republican party platform, which Ronald Reagan endorsed, calls for deployment of the warheads in Europe after consultation with the nation's allies. But officials said Friday that while there is sentiment in the Reagan administration in favor of the neutron warhead, and that Haig probably basically favors it too, "it's not a priority issue at this time."

Dyess said a newspaper report that Haig had advised U.S. allies to disregard Weinberger's comments was "grossly inaccurate."

President Donald Reagan?

TAMPICO, Ill. (AP) — President Ronald Reagan was legally named Donald Reagan for half his life, according to court records in the town where Reagan was born 70 years ago Friday.

Whiteside County Courthouse records show that "Donald" Reagan was born on Feb. 6, 1911. Thirty-three years later, the county clerk marked out the first name and wrote "Ronald" above it after Reagan's mother, Nelle, discovered the mistake, said Paul Nicely, a resident expert on Reagan lore.

Nicely says it is possible that Dr. H.A. Terry, the attending physician, waited several weeks before traveling to the county seat of Morrison, 20 miles away, to sign the birth certificate and register the birth.

By then, Terry could have forgotten the baby's first name or the clerk could have misunderstood, Nicely said.

Nicely uncovered the bit of Reagan trivia while researching the president's early days in Tampico, a north-central Illinois community of 954.

Reagan was born in a six-room, second-floor flat over the old First National Bank building, which now is a museum and souvenir shop. He spent most of his childhood in Dixon, Ill.

Prince May Get Offer

LONDON (AP) — Prince Edward, youngest son of Queen Elizabeth II, is expected to be offered a place at Cambridge University, press reports speculated Friday.

The prince, who will be 17 next month and finishes his schooling next year, visited the university's St. Catherine's College on Thursday, ate a light meal with students in the college cafeteria and met the deputy president of the students union.

St. Catherine's has one of the highest academic standards among Cambridge colleges and also is well-known for its sporting ability, particularly rugby.

A Buckingham Palace spokesman said there was no special significance to Edward's visit to Cambridge and no decision has yet been made about a university for him. Edward was just "looking around," the spokesman said.

Prince Charles, 32, Edward's oldest brother and Britain's heir to the throne, studied at Trinity college, Cambridge, where he graduated in 1969. The Queen's third son, Prince Andrew, 20, entered Dartmouth Naval College.

Algerians Get Thank-You

CORNING, N.Y. (AP) — A Corning radio station delivered a 25-pound thank-you to the Algerian Embassy in Washington Friday.

WGLI-AM and its sister station, WZKZ-FM, spent the past 10 days gathering signatures for a thank-you book hailing the Algerian's work in securing the release of the 52 American hostages held in Iran.

The operations manager of WZKZ, Dee Alexander, went to Washington Friday along with area Rep. Stanley Lundine, D-N.Y., to present the book to officials at the Algerian Embassy.

The 22-by-28-inch book is held together with red, white and blue ribbon. About 9,000 signatures were gathered by the station and volunteers from area civic and religious organizations.

The introduction, written in English and French, praises the government of Algeria for its aid and for setting a good example for the world.

Bill To Label Catfish

LITTLE ROCK, Ark. (AP) — Arkansas restaurant patrons would be told what type of catfish the restaurant serves — farm-raised, fresh-water, ocean or imported — under a bill approved by the Arkansas Senate.

The bill was drafted by the Catfish Farmers of Arkansas and the Arkansas Hospitality Association, which said Thursday that catfish farmers "just want people to know what they are eating."

The bill now goes to the House of Representatives.

City Hospital Names Officers

New staff officers for 1981 and two personnel appointments have recently been announced at West Texas Hospital.

Named to take over as new chief of staff was Dr. B.S. Misra, who succeeds Dr. E. Paul Stewart.

Other new officers include Dr. Louis Renault, vice chief of staff, and Dr. Baruch Rosen, staff secretary.

Appointed as the hospital's new director of environmental services was Juanita Taylor, and Paul D. Hutchison has been announced as the hospital's materials manager.

Hutchison succeeds Morris Sturdivant, who has been promoted to American Medical International regional offices in Houston.

Mrs. Taylor has lived and worked in the Lubbock area since 1963. She will direct the implementation of a new environmental services program at West Texas.

Hutchison is a Texas Tech University graduate and is experienced in merchandising management.

Milsap Returns To Work

NASHVILLE, Tenn. (AP) — Country music singer Ronnie Milsap has resumed his concert schedule after an eye operation last month in North Carolina.

Milsap, 34, blind since birth, underwent surgery at Duke University to prevent further optic nerve damage. He was back in concert last weekend in Louisiana.

Milsap has a current hit single, "Smoky Mountain Memories." His past hits include "It Was Almost Like a Song," "I'm a Stand by My Woman Man" and "Daydreams about Night Things."

Moore Denied Honor

ANNAPOLIS, Md. (AP) — Clayton Moore, who rode off into many a sunset as a hero during 31 years of portraying the Lone Ranger, has ridden off as a loser at the Maryland General Assembly.

A resolution that would have given Moore official recognition by the State of Maryland as the Lone Ranger was shot down this week on a 9-6 vote of the House Economic Matters Committee.

The decision was a painful one to Del. Raymond Dypski, the Baltimore Democrat who sponsored the resolution and who considers Moore a genuine hero.

Dypski introduced the resolution after learning that the corporation which owns rights to the Lone Ranger had won a court order prohibiting Moore from wearing the mask in personal appearances.

He said Moore had never done anything to tarnish the reputation of the Lone Ranger and that he "was, and is, looked up to with respect by young and old alike."

"Today, any such respect is a scarce commodity. The youth of this country and of this state need more men like Clayton Moore, the Lone Ranger," Dypski said.

Dypski said he does not plan to contest the committee vote.

Chess Champ Gets Award

BARCELONA, Spain (AP) — World chess champion Anatoli Karpov of the Soviet Union has been awarded the 1980 World Chess "oscar" — his seventh — by the International Association of Chess Writers.

The award, announced Thursday, was given through voting by a total of 113 chess journalists, all members of the IACHW and representing 35 countries.

Karpov has won it four of the past five years. Players who play a minimum of 24 matches against grand masters during the year are eligible.

The award, sponsored by a commercial firm, is a silver statuette of a lady with an umbrella, representing the city of Barcelona.

State Agency Sees Light

PROVIDENCE, R.I. (AP) — The Narragansett Electric Co. pulled the plug on the state agency that regulates utilities this week, giving the agency a first-hand look at the kind of billing mixup utility customers often complain about.

The Rhode Island Public Utilities Commission expanded its offices six months ago and took over space occupied by a realty firm. But Narragansett continued to bill the realty firm.

When the realty firm refused to pay, a Narragansett Electric crew shut off power to the agency offices. The situation was ironed out two hours later, a PUC spokesman said Thursday.

Convicted Armed Robber Escapes While Judge Gets Congratulations

SEATTLE (AP) — Judge George T. Mattson impressed the jurors at his first felony trial so much that they read him a letter of praise. But the defendant, who had just been convicted, put a damper on the celebration by slipping out of the courtroom.

"The defendant was directed to sit down and wait for custody officers," Deputy Prosecutor Fred Yeatts said of Thursday's incident in the King County Superior courtroom. "I turned my back. Then he was gone. It took the custody officers no longer than two to three minutes to arrive. But by then it was too late."

Yeatts said a witness overheard defendant Leroy Anthony Pines mutter to his girl friend, "Let's go," and off they went.

Pines, who was convicted of robbing a service station with a deadly weapon Oct. 2 and taking about $800, surrendered late Thursday night and was returned to jail, authorities said. The 19-year-old Seattle man had been free on bail and was not under guard at his trial.

Mattson was a District Court judge in Renton for 10 years before he was appointed to Superior Court on Jan. 1 by former Gov. Dixy Lee Ray. The Pines' case was Mattson's first felony trial on the Superior Court bench.

Jurors finished deliberating Thursday morning, but the verdict could not be read at that time because Pines didn't show up until about 1:30 p.m.

He sat quietly as the verdict was read, and during a reading of the jurors' letter, in which they praised the judge for his performance during the trial and his courtesy toward them.

Mattson then agreed with Yeatts that Pines should be held without bail and told Pines to sit down and wait for officers to arrive. Yeatts went to a telephone near the judge's bench to summon officers.

"When I turned around, he was going out the door with his girlfriend," Yeatts said.

"It really wasn't a laughing matter because this kid is vicious," said Yeatts. "He has a long background of juvenile offenses and institutionalization. When you're a kid institutionalized in Washington state, that means judges have reached the end of their rope."

Protesters Assail Paul Newman Film

NEW YORK (AP) — About 75 protesters demonstrated outside a Manhattan theater Friday as the film "Fort Apache, The Bronx" was premiered in more than a score of New York movie houses.

Members of the Committee Against Fort Apache stood in front of the Orpheum Theater at 86th Street and Third Avenue and distributed leaflets urging moviegoers not to "waste money on racist trash."

The committee, formed while the film was being shot on location in the South Bronx, has consistently opposed the film as racist. It stars Paul Newman as a cop in the 41st Precinct of the South Bronx.

The leaflet said the film was "an insult to Puerto Rican and black people everywhere" and "stereotypes us as savages, criminals and degenerates."

The filmmaker, Time-Life Corps.; the director, Dan Petrie, and Newman himself have all defended the movie, denying it was meant to be racist and calling it a slice-of-life film about two policemen.

They also maintained that it would bring attention to an area of the city that needs help and decried the protesters' efforts to keep people from seeing the movie and making up their own minds.

Earlier, the protesters passed out similar leaflets at the Gemini theater, 23 blocks south. The movie had been tentatively set to open there but its management showed "The Incredible Shrinking Woman" instead and the demonstrators said they considered the change a victory.

Outside the Gemini, they chanted: "Say it loud, say it clear. We have won a victory here."

The manager of the Gemini could not be reached for comment.

The Newman film is set in the 41st Police Precinct, whose stationhouse was called "Fort Apache" by patrolmen assigned to what they considered an outpost in hostile territory.

Hundreds of apartment buildings in the neighborhood were burned out or abandoned over the years.

Some of Friday's demonstrators carried pictures of Newman and said: "I made a racism film, Fort Apache, for $3 million."

Another displayed a sign reading, "Racism disguised as liberalism is still racism."

The movie opened in more than a score of theaters in the metropolitan area. At the one Bronx theater, there were no demonstrators or incidents at the afternoon show.

On Thursday, the Philadelphia City Council unanimously passed a resolution condemning the film and criticizing Time-Life Films and 20th Century Fox for "failing to provide a fair and accurate description of the Hispanic people."

DRAWING THE LINE

The Mason-Dixon Line traditionally dividing the North from the South was in no way connected with the Civil War. The line was drawn much earlier to end a colonial land dispute between the Calverts of Maryland and the Penns. Plotted out in a 1750 compromise in the English Court of Chancery, the line was fixed by two surveyors, Charles Mason and Jeremiah Dixon, between 1763 and 1767.

Federal Help Sought In Atlanta Murders

ATLANTA (AP) — One day after the body of a 15th slain black child was found, the president of the Southern Christian Leadership Conference on Friday asked Vice President George Bush to declare Atlanta eligible for federal disaster funds.

"As surely as if a flood, hurricane or tornado had struck our community, a sick and human volcano has erupted, whose murderous lava is consuming our precious future," Dr. Joseph Lowery said in a telegram to Bush, who has said he would handle personally the federal government's assistance in the cases.

Meanwhile, officers seeking clues returned to a wooded area where the body of 14-year-old Lubie "Chuck" Geter was found Thursday, and medical examiners sought to determine what caused the boy's death.

Fulton County Police Maj. Louis Graham said county police and members of the Atlanta police task force investigating the 15 deaths wanted to search the site, which is in a pine thicket southwest of the city, about 10 miles from where Geter disappeared Jan. 3.

He was reported missing after he failed to return home from a shopping center, where he had gone to sell car deodorizers.

Geter was the 15th black child between the ages of 7 and 15 to be found dead in the Atlanta area since the body of Edward Hope Smith, 14, was found July 28, 1979. All but two of the victims were boys. Two other boys are missing.

Fulton County Medical Examiner

Robert Stivers said he would perform an autopsy on Geter's body Friday afternoon.

"He doesn't have any obvious gunshot wounds or stab wounds," said Stivers. "The one thing I did look at was the neck muscles, and he didn't have any bruises."

Many of the other children died of strangulation or asphyxiation.

Stivers said Geter was wearing only undershorts when found, in contrast to the other children, who were fully clothed.

Geter's body was found by Frank Potts, caretaker of the farmland where it was discovered. Potts said he was looking for illegal rabbit traps and found the body in a clearing about 40 to 60 feet off Vandiver Road near Westwood High School.

Geter's parents identified the body about six hours later at the medical examiner's office.

"My mind's just not together now," the boy's mother, Assie Geter, said after returning home. "I'm holding up the best I can."

Still on the task force's list of missing children are Jeffery Mathis, 11, and Darren Glass, 10, both of whom disappeared last year.

Meanwhile, the half-brother of Lee Manuel Gooch, a 15-year-old missing boy not included on the task force list, has told police he saw Gooch alive at a downtown bus station, police said Friday. Raymond Amey, 27, said he saw Gooch Wednesday, but the youth refused to go home with him.

Toronto Police Arrest Hundreds In Steam Baths

TORONTO (AP) — More than 200 policemen raided four Toronto steam baths and charged several hundred men with the illegal act of being in houses of prostitution. Several men outside one of the baths blamed the raids on a recent television documentary on homosexuals.

Police said the raids Thursday at The Club, the Richmond Street Health Emporium, the Barracks and the Roman Sauna Baths were the result of a six-month undercover investigation into "prostitution and indecent acts."

The police, many armed with hammers and crowbars, smashed in the clubs' locked cubicles, rented by patrons for an evening, and herded the men, many of them clothed in towels, into the lobbies.

Angry homosexuals screamed "Fascist" and "Nazis" at police and gave them the Nazi salute.

Police said they would be unable to provide an exact figure on how many men were charged until paperwork and processing was complete.

All of the men were charged with being "found-ins," a Canadian legal term which means that a person is found in an illegal place or situation at the time a police raid is carried out. The charge is also levied against youths who are found to be drinking when they are not of age.

Those charged at the bath houses were given a summons and sent on their way.

Edward Jackson of the Pink Triangle Press, acquitted last year of using the mails to transmit indecent, immoral or scurrilous material, called the raids the "worst case of police harassment I've ever seen."

Medical Group Opposes Reporting Law

SAN FRANCISCO (AP) — The California Medical Association has filed suit against a new state law that requires doctors to report on the sexual activity of women under 18, and the group's incoming president says the statute "smacks of the suggestion of a police state."

The 28,000-member CMA filed its suit Thursday against the law, which went into effect Jan. 1. The suit in San Francisco Superior Court seeks both preliminary and permanent injunctions. Attorney David Willett, said a hearing would be sought soon.

The law was designed to consolidate various child-abuse statutes. But a provision inserted in a legislative committee makes reporting sexual activity mandatory and carries criminal penalties, including jailing, for noncompliance. It is believed that no doctors have been prosecuted under the provision.

Dr. Brad Cohn of San Francisco, the CMA's president-elect, said doctors are worried the provision will discourage teen-age girls from seeking necessary medical care. He said the doctors do not object to reporting legitimate cases of abuse.

"We already have reporting requirements for child abuse," Cohn said, noting that women may "no longer feel comfortable going to their doctors, especially with sexually related questions involving venereal disease and birth control problems."

Under the new law, he said, doctors will have to choose between breaking the law and "breaching the confidential patient-physician relationship."

The measure was introduced by Sen. Omer Rains, a Democrat from Ventura. He has said he did not intend that the provision be included and that a group of conservative legislators had inserted it in committee.

Miami Jury Finds Three Guilty In Riot Deaths

MIAMI (AP) — A bi-racial jury convicted three young blacks of second- and third-degree murder Friday night in the beating deaths of three whites during Miami race riots. A fourth defendant was acquitted.

All four defendants had been charged with first-degree murder, but the 12-member jury — after four long days of deliberations — convicted Samuel Lightsey, 17, of second-degree murder and brothers Lawrence Capers, 25, and Leonard Capers, 21, of third-degree murder.

Patrick Moore, 17, was acquitted in the May 17 mob attack of Benny Higdon, 21, and Robert Owens and Charles Barreca, both 15.

The three white men were dragged from their car in Liberty City as they drove home from a fishing trip.

At 5:45 p.m. EST, Circuit Judge Mario Goderich had sent the jurors a note asking if they wanted to break at 6 p.m. and reconvene Saturday morning.

The answer came back immediately: "No, thank you."

The marathon deliberations began Tuesday.

The only other communication Goderich had with the jury Friday came at 1 p.m., when the 12-member panel asked for more evidence about the Capers' brothers.

"I'm just worried they're hung up on a racial issue and somebody's going to find somebody guilty or not guilty strictly on the basis of race," said Assistant Attorney General Robert Kaye. "If they come up with a hung jury, I want to know whether they got hung up on race."

Michael Van Zamit, defense attorney for the Capers brothers, had speculated earlier in the day that the jury might have gotten bogged down in debating a verdict on Lawrence Capers, who took the stand in his own defense last week to say he was not part of the mob.

"They haven't said they're hung, but my honest feeling is they're probably hung up on one of the defendants," Van Zamit said. "If they're hung up on anybody, they're hung up on Lawrence."

The rioting, which ultimately resulted in 18 deaths, erupted following the acquittals by an all-white jury of four white ex-policemen charged in connection with the beating death of black Miami businessman Arthur McDuffie.

Exiled Queen Mother Of Greece Dies At 61

MADRID, Spain (AP) — Exiled Queen Mother Frederika of Greece died Friday night of heart failure in a Madrid hospital during an eyelid operation, the Spanish news agency EFE reported. She was 61.

She had come to Madrid to visit her daughter, Queen Sofia of Spain, the agency said. Frederika died about 30 minutes before midnight, EFE reported.

Frederika's son King Constantine of Greece was overthrown in a 1967 military coup and the royal family has lived in exile since.

As the German-born queen of Greece, Frederika was one of the most powerful and controversial figures in her adopted country. Though only 5 feet 3 inches tall, she was a tough, domineering woman with a reputation for being disdainful. She drew both hatred and respect for her intelligence and courage.

One of her actions was a link in the events that led to the 1967 coup, an attempted countercoup by King Constantine and the royal family's flight into exile.

In 1963 during a visit to London, Frederika was chased into an alley and pushed around by demonstrators demanding clemency for Communists imprisoned in Greece. Greek Premier Constantine Caramanlis advised the late King Paul to cancel a state visit to London later that year, fearing more demonstrations.

But Frederika prevailed upon her husband to go ahead with the trip and Caramanlis resigned. As he had predicted, there were demonstrations, and his resignations opened the way to a leftist resurgence that finally brought about the military coup by right-wing army officers.

King Paul died in March 1964 and the throne passed to Constantine, with Frederika becoming queen mother. She saw her son daily for a long period after that and continued to wield considerable political influence.

Frederika was born Princess Frederika Luise, daughter of the duke of Braunschweig-Luneburg, in the medieval castle of Blankenburg in the Harz Mountains on April 18, 1917. She was a granddaughter of the German kaiser and a great granddaughter of Queen Victoria of England.

In later years, reports circulated that she once belonged to a Nazi youth organization. She said she was a lonely child who could play only with the children of the servants. When she noticed those children wearing uniforms, she asked to have one and after receiving it attending meetings of the youth group once a week for six or eight months, she said.

Men Charged In Feedlot Scam

Theft charges were filed Friday against two men in connection with an apparent attempt in January to bilk Lubbock Feed Lots through a scheme in which the two allegedly attempted to receive credit for more feed grain than they delivered to the company.

Freddie Burle Cummings, 51, was charged with five counts of theft from July 1980 to Jan. 1981 and Samuel McHugh Webb, 47, with five counts of theft from Dec. 15, 1980 to Jan. 7, 1981.

The Criminal District Attorney's office recommended bond be set at $15,000 for each charge for each man.

The charges stem from what state and county authorities called a "badger" — a scale tampering device able to add to the weight recorded for feed trucks when keyed by a citizens band radio microphone. Trucks at large feed lots such as the Lubbock Feed Lots are weighed, grain and all, and the weight of the truck is subtracted from the total weight to arrive at the amount charged to the feed lots for the grain.

Authorities believe the Lubbock lot could have been overcharged by as much as $380,000 in the plan which was discovered Jan. 7.

PLAINS AGRICULTURE

By DUANE HOWELL

PLAGUED BY RISING COSTS OF GAS and chemical insecticides, herbicide restriction, freight service transitions, and market prices described as below the costs of production, Texas wheat producers are mapping plans to attack on all fronts.

The plans, spokesmen reported this week, are to "make 1981 not only a year of a 'new beginning' but the year to reverse the cheap commodity syndrome that has hampered farm income in recent years."

Leo Witkowski of Hereford, chairman of the Texas Wheat Producers Board, and Wiley Tabor of Quanah, president of the Texas Wheat Producers Association, made the joint declarations at a combined quarterly meeting this week in Amarillo.

Witkowski and Tabor attended recent national meetings in Houston and Minneapolis of their counterpart organizations for legislative liaison and for market development.

The expanded efforts in Texas are in keeping with those of wheat producer organizations nationwide and policies adopted by the state membership meeting and convention in November, officials said.

ROSS WILSON, A TEXAS TECH UNIVERSITY graduate in agricultural economics and finance, has joined the staff of the Texas wheat grower organizations as executive assistant for producer and trade service, Bill Nelson, executive vice president, announced.

Nelson said Wilson was a four-term honor student at Tech and is an experienced commodity chartist and commodity broker. Wilson succeeds Jim Allison, now a farm and ranch representative in the trust department of the Amarillo-based American National Bank.

A native of the Canyon-Claude area, Wilson was reared on a 2,500-acre dryland wheat-sorghum-cattle operation. He worked his way through West Texas State University and Texas Tech by operating his own wheat pasture cattle and custom-haying enterprise.

In other actions, the board adopted a 1981-82 budget and developed plans for expanding market development activities and for closer producer-member grain-trade information and service programs.

The TWPA is financed by voluntary membership dues acceptable from any producer or allied industry throughout the state. The TWPB, supported for research and market development by a self-assessment of one-half cent per bushel from farmer deliveries of wheat at local elevators, has been active since 1971, when Texas wheat was a $7 million crop, and has led programs designed to make the state's golden grain an estimated $700 million crop in 1981.

GROWERS WHO HAVE CORN IN ANY OF THE three farmer-owned reserves will have at least 30 additional days to repay those loans, the U. S. Department of Agriculture announced this week.

The loan extension was needed, the USDA said, to assure orderly marketing, currently jeopardized by transportation problems.

The extended repayment period will take effect after the last settlement dates for reserve corn loans. These settlement dates are Monday for Reserve I and April 15 for Reserves II and III.

During the 30-day extension, farmers will have to pay 15.25 percent interest on their loans. There is no interest charge on reserve loans during the normal repayment period.

Edward Hews, acting administrator of the USDA's Agricultural Stabilization and Conservation Service, said interest will be charged on loans past their original date of maturity to reflect the department's cost of borrowing money from the U. S. Treasury and to provide an incentive to settle matured or called reserve loans quickly.

AFTER THE FINAL DATE OF SETTLEMENT, delivery notices and warehouse takeover of corn in reserve or under regular price support loans will be delayed at least 30 days, based on current available storage space and transportation conditions, the USDA said.

Interest will begin on loans covering 10 million to 15 million bushels of corn in Reserve I on Tuesday and producers with corn in Reserves II and III will pay from April 15 until the called loans are settled, the USDA said.

As of Jan. 28, the USDA said, there were about 994.2 million bushels of corn in the three reserves, all of which are in call status.

Interest on regular, nine-month government price support loans will be increased from 11.5 to 15.25 percent beginning the day after the maturity date, Hews said. Holders of the loans also will have at least 30 additional days following the maturity date to redeem the corn or forfeit the grain to the USDA.

COTTON FUTURES REVERSED EARLY GAINS to close near the day's lows Friday, down 117 to 184 points in current marketing year months.

Spot March lost 117 points at $9.65 cents and May — down the limit along with July at one point — was the biggest loser on the board at $9.83 cents. New-crop December dropped 65 points at 83 cents.

The market attempted an early rally in response to a big export sales report released after the close Thursday.

However, despite the apparently bullish implications of the report, there was little followthrough interest and disappointment quickly led to selling, dealers said.

Buyers earlier in the week, possibly in anticipation of the large export figures, turned increasingly nervous at the market reaction and became sellers, providing the week undertone, dealers added.

ON THE WEEK, SPOT MARCH HELD A GAIN of 30 points, May was down 107 points and July was off 150 points. October lost 101 points and December dropped 127 points.

Open interest going into Friday's session totaled 31,082 lots, down 736 from a week earlier, with spot March at 8,944 contracts, off 1,360.

Certificated stocks as of Thursday totaled 48,511 bales, down 3,434 bales from a week earlier, with 179 bales awaiting review and one bale awaiting de-certification.

One analyst said the market action Friday "reflected a lack of buying interest at these levels regardless of the news — or so it seemed."

A major merchant turned into a good seller, the analyst said, adding that this caused the break in the market late in the day.

"SPECULATION WOULD HAVE IT THAT he was long the spots and had not hedged by selling the futures," the analyst commented.

When the merchant saw there didn't appear to be any followthrough after the export report, the analyst added, he supposedly proceeded to do some late hedging.

One of the major mills, the analyst said, reportedly bought 50,000 bales of Memphis territory cotton or in conjunction with Texas and California growths.

Trading on Telcel totaled 11,254 bales on an average price of 71.20 cents, an average of 3,074 points over the loan, with the market difference ending even after having been up 50 points.

A large merchant was an aggressive bidder on the higher qualities early, after which the tone quietened.

Well Measurement Completed

The High Plains Underground Water Conservation District has completed its annual program of measuring depth to water levels in the 119 wells in Lubbock County. These wells are part of a larger network of more than 900 observation wells scattered throughout the district's 15-county service area.

Butch Bates was able to complete 109 measurements of "static" water levels in irrigation wells and tag them with the district's red identification sticker for owner information.

"I visited with several irrigators who wanted to know what their water is doing," said Bates. "We have the initial results for the county, but (tabulated data on the entire observation network recording is not expected to be complete until mid-year."

Lubbock County's 1980-81 depth-to-water table below surface minimum reading was at 12.87 feet, and the maximum level read at 219.77 feet. This year's average change in decline in the county was 1.86 feet, which compares with a 1979-80 county reading of plus 1.49 feet. Comparing the rate of change calculated this year for these wells shows a minimum decline change of plus 3.01 feet and a maximum decline change of 6.89 feet.

The Water District keeps a record of annual decline and rate of change going back to 1962. The data is used for making projections of decline rate, for determining the amount of water left in storage, and as a basis for the income-tax depletion allowance claims on landowner's tax returns.

Hance Requests End To Grain Embargo

U. S. Rep. Kent Hance of Lubbock has sent a formal request to President Reagan that the year-old grain embargo against the Soviet Union be lifted.

"I urge you to lift the grain embargo as soon as possible and allow free trade to strengthen the price of our agriculture commodities," Hance said to the President in a letter.

"If for any reason the embargo is left in place, then crop loan rates must be raised to a level of 65 percent of parity in order to protect our farmers."

The High Plains congressman also announced he is co-sponsor of legislation by Rep. Tom Daschle, D-S. D., which would end the embargo.

"At no other time in recent history have farmers experienced such a difficult financial situation," Hance said in the message to Reagan.

"The prices for the goods and services farmers must purchase are skyrocketing. Interest rates are extremely high. Moreover, commodity prices are at depressed levels due in part to the Soviet embargo.

"Even though the U. S. government spent about $3 billion in an effort to offset the effect of the grain embargo, farm income declined 40 percent in the second quarter of 1980 and the embargo was a major factor in that decline."

Hance pointed out that the Soviets had a poor harvest this crop year.

But they "cannot blame the embargo to any large extent for their problems," the congressman said, "because they were able to import 31 million of the 34 million metric tons of grain they had planned to import."

American farmers were made to bear the brunt of the embargo, Hance said.

Houston Livestock, Rodeo Association Gives Grant To Tech

The Houston Livestock Show and Rodeo Association has contributed $9,600 to Texas Tech University to develop training materials for high school vocational agriculture students.

The grant supports an ongoing project directed by Dr. Marvin J. Cepica, associate professor of agricultural education at Texas Tech. The project has produced training materials annually since 1969.

The project encompasses developing contest materials for the annual fall Future Farmers of America leadership contests and producing workbooks to help high school vocational agriculture students understand the FFA manual and the rules on parliamentary procedure.

Funding from the Houston Livestock Show and Rodeo Association pays for the development and printing of the original workbooks and contest materials. The workbooks are marketed through the Instructional Materials Center, Texas Education Agency.

"Last year 29,000 copies of the workbooks were sold, with copies going to all 50 states," Cepica said.

Cepica and graduate assistant James D. Thiebaud of Idalou are developing materials for FFA leadership contests in FFA areas covering about half of Texas.

The goliath beetle, around five inches long, is one of the world's largest insects. It is used as food by some Africans, says National Geographic World magazine.

Lay Worker, Nuns Remembered In Service

By PATRICIA MCCORMACK

WESTPORT, Conn. (UPI) — Triumphant sounds from a brass choir, hymns and candlelight blended with meditations on a snowy day at a Westport, Conn., ecumenical memorial service for three nuns and a religious lay worker killed in El Salvador.

The religious lay worker, Jean Marie Donovan, 27, grew up in Westport and was remembered as idealistic, independent, vivacious, out-going and a horsewoman of note.

Her brother Michael Donovan, from Danbury, Conn., said she knew there was danger in El Salvador.

She was behind the wheel of a bus in which she and the nuns were riding. Then, they were captured and killed.

The nuns with her were Sister Uta Ford and Sister Maura Clarke of the Maryknoll Order in Ossining, N.Y., and Sister Dorothy Kazel of the Ursuline Order, Cleveland.

"Their deaths pricked the social conscience of America," said Sister Clare Fitzgerald, president of the Leadership Conference of Women Religious, the organization based in Washington, D.C., and composed of superiors of most orders for nuns in America.

Sister Fitzgerald, tiny-featured, curly-haired and ramrod straight, fitz almost in a whisper after she took her place behind the lectern. Her black polished pumps were together in an almost perfect military "attention."

She tugged at her white turtleneck, adjusted one sleeve of her light grey coat before more soft words came out slowly.

"El Salvador was the place and it took four women — United States religious women — to finally prick the social conscience of this country," she said.

Bishop Walter Curtis of the Greater Bridgeport diocese looked at his clasped hands. Some of the clerics shuffled their feet. A few coughs were heard from those in the pews. Sister Fitzgerald went into a long pause after saying the words that set the tone for her meditation. The silence reached inside hearts.

In her office Sister Fitzgerald is successor to Sister Mary Theresa Kane, the peppery middle-aged nun who spoke out to Pope John Paul II in 1979, asking for a wider role for women in the church — including ordination.

At the memorial, Sister Fitzgerald showed she, too, has some flint and tempered steel inside.

"This afternoon," she said, "I was driving and I heard the United States government has renewed its military aid to El Salvador. You reflect and you reflect. You wonder — was it all in vain, the lives of these martyred women?"

"It is not simple, it is not easy."

Sister Fitzgerald, who also is head of the School Sisters of Notre Dame based in Wilton, Conn., earlier had urged American bishops to object to resumption of military aid to El Salvador. But she said she did not get any satisfaction.

She promised at the memorial that "women religious would object and object and object."

"...we may have to be reckless," she said.

"We do not just celebrate four women today but thousands. The women religious of this country are determined that the four deaths were not in vain. Our mission, as theirs, is a mission of peace and justice."

"The four went to the poor and tried to alleviate human misery."

Words on the cover of the program set the tone for the memorial. They were credited to Matthew 5:1-12: "Blessed are the poor mourners, meek, righteous, merciful, pure peace makers persecuted."

Came the time for general meditation. "Jean Marie Donovan, Dorothy Kazel, Maura Clarke, Ita Ford... are dead. They are martyrs. Many others have died. Let us reflect."

The "reflection" was on the words of the late Archbishop Oscar Romero of El Salvador, who also was killed last year while celebrating mass in his cathedral.

Romero said at various times:

"In El Salvador we all run the risk of death. I have to fulfill my duty of speaking up and saying the truth. Afraid? No, it's not exactly fear. But fearing or not, I have my duty."

"I often stop to think the first cause of death in El Salvador is diarrhea from parasites and poor nutrition. And the second cause of death is violence, homicide."

"Our poor nuns are suffering because they are collaborating with those who are under the yoke of this institutional violence. To get rid of this violence is to get rid of the institutional violence which is the root of all violence."

Donovan said his slain sister, Jean Marie, who had visited him six weeks before she was killed, "would tell me when she visited here that there were a lot of things going on that you just wouldn't believe."

He claims his sister had several close calls before she was killed.

Once, she told him, she was riding in a jeep with another nun. She decided to stay in a village and the other nun moved out, he recalls. The next day the nun was found dead, her neck broken.

Another time, Donovan said, she was talking to a priest on a street. She left to use a restroom. When she returned, the priest was dead, shot in the head.

Miss Donovan was a "contract" missionary. She took vows promising to serve two years — unlike a nun who is fully professed, that is, has made a life commitment.

Her work was that of bookkeeper for the Parish of Immaculate Conception in La Libertad. The mission aimed to set up a nutritional program.

Her first missionary post was in Guatemala where she served six months before going to El Salvador.

"She was very into religion and she thought she was doing God's work," he says of his sister.

Susan T. DePalmer who taught Miss Donovan horseback riding when she was at Westport's Staples High in the early '70s, recalls:

"Jeannie was never afraid. She was always willing to try something new and she could handle situations."

At a demonstration in Washington, D.C., in January, protesting the killings and aid to El Salvador, Donovan told some more about his sister.

"She was not a child of the Vietnam war or any other war," he said.

"She was a child of peace."

"She loved the ordinary pleasures and had left a promising accounting career... to join a mission to the poor and to teach the children baseball. No one would think that would constitute subversive activity but the junta our government supports — they thought it was."

"So she was threatened, and one of those threats was carried out."

Another speaker at that rally was Maryknoll Sister Peggy Healy.

She claimed the United States is guilty of both "blindness and unwillingness to understand that the aid leads to more death and more suffering."

Panama Missionary Works In Abernathy

By PAT GRAVES
A-J Religion Writer

When most people, especially Americans, think of foreign missions, scenes of white missionaries traveling to deep, dark Africa or some other distant land of unfamiliar cultures come to mind.

But Lester Anderson, 25, has reversed that typical pattern. He is a foreign missionary to Abernathy, by way of Panama.

Anderson pastors Spanish Church of the Nazarene (membership: 39) and ministers to the Spanish-speaking residents of Abernathy, as well as some migrants. He said he had always thought about missions, in Central America or some other Spanish-speaking region, but never in the U.S. until he learned there are many Spanish-speaking people in America.

Anderson recounted how during a two-month vacation in New Jersey, he contacted the district Nazarene superintendent while visiting relatives in December 1979.

"I felt the spirit of God was leading me in another direction," the former pastor of Jordan Memorial Nazarene Church in Panama City, Panama, explained. "I knew He wanted me in the U.S. to be useful and I'd heard there were lots of Mexican-Americans in Texas, but I didn't know where."

He found out when he was referred to H.O. Espinoza, the district superintendent in San Antonio. Anderson said the door opened for him to work in Abernathy, and he began immigration processing and his ministry that month. His wife and two children joined him in August 1980.

Anderson has been granted permanent resident status but is free to return to Panama anytime and work in the Nazarene district there. He agreed his story is somewhat reminiscent of the Hebrew patriarch Abraham, who left Ur of the Chaldees for "a land God would show him," namely Palestine.

"When the Lord leads me somewhere else, I'm ready to go," the young minister stated. That's not surprising since, in talking with Anderson, his favorite expression seems to be an elongated "Oh, yeah."

Saying he would remain in Abernathy as long as the Spirit led him to stay. An-

Bible Class Moves To New Location

The Downtown Bible Class has moved from its longtime meeting place at the Lindsey Center to the Scottish Rite Temple on Avenue Q.

Interim teacher Rev. Doyle Holmes, director of the Lubbock Baptist Association, said he and attorney George McCleskey will continue conducting the 9-45 a.m. Sunday Bible study sessions until a permanent teacher is secured.

The class, which was begun in 1928 and still is sponsored by First Baptist Church, averages 140 in attendance each week, Holmes said. The one-hour session is designed to attract motel guests, visitors to Lubbock and persons not enrolled in Sunday School.

Radio station KSEL-AM broadcasts the class each Sunday. Officers are Art Cook, president; Cliff Cummings, first vice president; Homer Hunt, evangelism chairman; and Rex Webster and Imogene Harris, music directors.

EARLY BIRDS

The distant ancestor of today's birds was a certain type of dinosaur, some scientists believe. Both birds and dinosaurs may have developed from early reptiles that crawled on the earth more than 200 million years ago, says National Geographic World magazine.

Church News

Anderson said he was developing a good ministry in the small agricultural community. His church had been without a pastor for about five months when he arrived, and attendance had dwindled to six or seven. Now, 75 are enrolled in Sunday School and an average of 27 attend weekly services in the old, 100-seat chapel, that is, when the weather's good.

Anderson said he has been accepted well and his bilingual capacity has helped considerably. "To my surprise, it's worked just fine," he noted. "Spanish here and in Panama is almost the same. A few words are different and some are offensive, so you must watch."

In order to build his congregation, Anderson is concentrating on Abernathy residents, but is also ministering to migrant workers when they are in the area. He is assisted by three teachers, and had a joint baptismal service with the other Abernathy Nazarene church, comprised mainly of Anglos. He also has worked with the Neighborhood Center.

Speaking of his goals, Anderson said, "I wish we could get people to pray for one another and our Christian country. I pray we might reach as many people as we can."

Because he lived in what was formerly the Canal Zone, Anderson said he had little trouble adjusting to West Texas, except for the weather, particularly the dust, dryness and cold winters.

When asked if the weather was a problem he replied, "Oh, yeah, but it's not as much of a bother now." He said the vast West Texas cotton fields attracted his attention, because he had never had the chance to see farmers plant or harvest on such a large scale.

He characterized them as being, for the most part, very devoted to their churches, and was impressed with their manner of speech.

"That Texas accent, that's another thing," Anderson commented. "I'd never heard people speak that way before, except on TV."

He said the credit business was difficult for him to adjust to because he knew so little about it, since it does not exist in Panama. There, he said you only have to have some means of income and someone responsible to back you if you can't pay your bills.

To supplement his income, Anderson works at Monterey High School as a full-time custodian. He had praise for most of the young people he has come in contact with, especially those involved in the Fellowship of Christian Athletes.

"There are a lot of good, really fine Christians there," he said. "If the rest of the kids would open up and listen to them, a lot could be done there. Most of them are fine kids but some need a little bit more settling down."

Anderson said he has contact with some of the students, whose time is limited because they are so active. But he added, "Anytime I can give my testimony, especially to my fellow workers, I ask God to help me to do it."

On a totally unrelated subject, Anderson gave his opinion as to why Panamanian boxer Roberto Duran quit during his rematch with Sugar Ray Leonard. The Nazarene preacher said Duran knew he had lost so "why go ahead?"

"There's always a chance for a third fight," Anderson speculated. "He could have a chance if he takes care of himself."

Missionaries never say die. Once a Panamanian, always a Panamanian, even in Abernathy, Texas.

THE MURK FAMILY

Murk Family Musicales Concerts Set Sunday

The internationally known Murk Family Musicales will present two concerts Sunday at 8:15 and 11 a.m. at Trinity Baptist Church, 34th Street and Boston Avenue, and another at 7 p.m. at First Baptist Church, 220 Broadway.

Mr. and Mrs. Jim Murk and their five children have done more than 4,000 concerts in 49 states and several foreign countries during the past 17 years. They all are solo vocalists and each of the young people play piano and stringed instrument.

Their program is a blend of voices and strings in a variety of ensembles. Bill Murk is a concert violinist, winner of several performance contests and has soloed with one of the Chicago symphonies.

The Chicago Tribune called the Murk family the equivalent of the Von Trapp singers on whom the film "The Sound of Music" was based. They are said to appeal to a diverse audience and emphasize the themes of love and family cooperation.

The Murks have performed before members of the U.S. Senate, in the Pentagon and before numerous conventions, civic groups, clubs, hospitals, churches, schools, colleges and summer conferences. They have appeared on network television in the U.S. and abroad, and have recorded 18 albums.

The ministry began after Jim Murk, a lyric tenor and former anthropology and history professor, won the Ted Mack Original Amateur Hour national championship on CBS-TV. He worked his family into the act when he was invited to a resort hotel in Miami Beach to present Christmas concerts after winning the Ted Mack competition.

The Murk Family perform a variety of music, from classical to contemporary, and communicate the values of love, joy and the Christian home. In the January, 1979, issue of "Worldwide Chalenge" magazine, Jim Murk was quoted as saying, "I believe that a man's greatest career is his family." The story describes Murk's unique way of dealing with life as a traveling ministry unit.

Each of their children has a responsibility in the group's operation, in addition to working toward college degrees. Mrs. Murk said internal harmony has been achieved by training them under God's authority to apply Biblical principles to everyday family conflicts.

"Some say that fighting and arguing between brothers and sisters are normal," Murk said. "But it is not normal for the Christian... we never allowed (our children) to develop animosities or bitterness."

Although they dedicated their children to God at birth, Murk said he and his wife never had any idea they would be having an impact for Jesus Christ together as a family.

The Murks do some 250 concerts a year and have not spent a Christmas at their home in Wheaton, Ill., in the last 15 years.

Church College Head To Speak

Dr. H.A. Brummett, president of Southwestern Assemblies of God College in Waxahachie, will be the special guest speaker Sunday at First Assembly of God, 34th Street and Avenue S.

Brummett, a former pastor of churches in Oklahoma, Arkansas and Minnesota, serves on the Board of Education for the Assemblies of God General Council in Springfield, Mo.

He will speak to high school and college students at 9:45 a.m., and during the 10:45 a.m. and 6:30 p.m. worship services. Pastor Jerry Roberts invites the public to attend.

Ethnic Consciousness Called Positive Sign

By GEORGE W. CORNELL

NEW YORK (AP) — America is a potpourri, not a "melting pot," says current sociology, a miscellany, not a homogeneous mass. And a new church assessment of this rainbow U.S. variety says "viva" the differences.

Increased emphasis on them is "welcome wholeheartedly," says a study report approved by the U.S. Catholic Conference, action arm of the nation's Roman Catholic bishops.

In a time when mass communications media tend to produce a blanket think-alike, act-alike image of America, the report says the rise of the "new ethnicity" among various groups is a healthy manifestation.

Their greater regard for their distinctive cultural, racial and historic backgrounds is not "a sign of division," but recognition of the "richness of the American heritage," the report says, adding:

"We urge all Americans to accept the fact of religious and cultural pluralism not as an historic oddity or sentimental journey into the past, but as a vital, fruitful and challenging phenomenon of our society."

"Americanization does not call for the abandonment of cultural differences but for their wider appreciation."

The 4,500-word document, drawn up by a subcommittee headed by Bishop Stanislaus J. Brzana of Ogdensburg, N.Y., was issued by the social-development committee of the Catholic conference after approval by its administrative board.

Responding to a plea of a national 1976 "Call to Action" meeting of Catholic representatives in Detroit, the report urges wider acceptance and appreciation of the manifold diversity of the nation's peoples.

For a long time, the nation was considered a "melting pot," implying that the mingling of differences would eventually produce a nearly homogeneous, single pattern of the "American way," the report says.

But this was not to be and "indeed should not be the future for America," the report adds, saying that history shows that "total homogenization of peoples within a nation" deprives and weakens it.

Any move to "suppress or even to neglect" the enriching resource of varied American traditions and backgrounds "would make our total nation poorer," the report says and adds:

"All ethnic groups are part of the mainstream of American life, and any attempt to discourage or reject their presence, subtly or overtly, is an unacceptable return to 'nativism' and ethno-centrism."

Many groups, because of religion, language, origin, customs, color or economic status, have suffered discrimination and even ridicule, particularly in the past, the report says.

It cites a "long litany of popular derision" against immigrants—the Irish, the Germans, ITALIANS, Poles, Swedes, Jews, and "harsh oppression" of American Indians, blacks and Hispanics.

While much of the overt discrimination has passed, it often takes on "more subtle and less visible forms and continues to erode the good society that should be the common patrimony of all," the report says.

"We solicit the help of all thoughtful citizens of this republic in an effort to blot out of public and private life the stains of ethnic prejudice and discrimination..."

The report condemns the practice of "stereotyping ethnic groups in a negative and often offensive manner," even for humor and entertainment.

Media Preachers Called Divisive By Churchman

AUSTIN (AP) — A national leader of the Baptist Church today told state officials and delegates to the Texas Conference of Churches that "electronic churchmen" aid divisiveness.

"We can't jump on the black and white bandwagon of the electronic churchmen who have belatedly taken up an involvement in politics which they, until recently, denounced," said the Rev. James M. Dunn, national director of the Baptist joint committee on public affairs.

Dunn addressed the traditional legislative breakfast — attended by church delegates, legislators and state officials — at the annual assembly of representatives of the Texas Conference of Churches.

"Religion at best doesn't offer a prescription for every ailment," Dunn said. "Religion functions best when it is teaching, persuading, setting an example, holding up ideals. We are agents of reconciliation."

Legislators as well as churches "share the blame for deadly dualism," Dunn said, citing Texas' low payments to welfare recipients as an example.

"The votes of the Texas Legislature for years now regarding Aid to Families with Dependent Children have been brutally inhumane, a national scandal," he said.

The conference supports doubling average AFDC payments, allowing farm workers to organize unions, and the removal of restrictions in the education code banning illegal alien children from free public schools.

The group is an ecumenical agency representing Roman Catholic, Greek Orthodox and 13 Protestant denominations in Texas.

FIND STRENGTH FOR YOUR LIFE — ATTEND CHURCH

MAN or STATUE ?

Today we see Lincoln in heroic size. He appears almost more of a statue than a man — a great figure cast in bronze, with a furrowed brow and solemn countenance.

Yet Lincoln was a man. He walked the earth, and felt love and joy, but he knew tremendous frustration and almost insurmountable sorrow. He prayed, earnestly and effectively.

Throughout each crisis in his life, and there were many, he was sustained by faith. God seemed close to him, and he turned to Him often. He didn't pause to think about whether he'd go to church or not. He went.

Do you?

Leftists, Fundamentalists Clash In Growing Iranian Tension

BEIRUT, Lebanon (AP) — Thousands of Iranian leftists, conducting an illegal anti-government demonstration, clashed with Islamic fundamentalists in a Tehran street battle with guns and knives Friday and Iranian sources said 30 to 40 people were injured.

Iranian police and journalists reached by telephone from Beirut said 7,000 to 10,000 Marxists took to the streets to protest the Iranian-U.S. agreement to release the 52 American hostages and rising unemployment in Iran.

Up To 40 Injured

Police spoke of "many" casualties in the three-hour battle and said some suffered bullet wounds. A Tehran newspaper put the number of casualties at 30, but other sources said 40 were injured in the melee.

The clash came at a time of increasing political tension in Iran between secular-moderate forces that tend to cluster around President Abolhassan Bani-Sadr and clergy-led Moslem fundamentalists who control the Iranian Parliament.

Revolutionary leader Ayatollah Ruhollah Khomeini has pleaded with Iranian politicians to stop "biting one another like scorpions."

Marxists Defy Ban

According to various Tehran sources, the thousands of members of the Marxist Fedayeen organization defied a government ban on demonstrations and massed at Freedom Square in the western part of the Iranian capital.

Some sources said they had rallied to mark the 11th anniversary of a bloody clash by the Fedayeen with troops of the late shah of Iran near the Caspian Sea.

But according to a spokesman for the paramilitary Revolutionary Guards, the leftists tried to march to Tehran University to disrupt Friday prayers on the Moslem sabbath and a speech by Prime Minister Mohamad Ali Rajai, who has the backing of hard-liners.

"One person who is a clean Moslem leaked the plan to authorities," said the Revolutionary Guard. He said members of the Islamic group "Hezbollah," or "God's Party," confronted the leftists and fighting broke out. He said the leftists were "carrying guns and knives" and "the Fedayeen started shooting."

But other sources said many of those wounded by bullets were leftists. Police reported that "those who have been shot are now hospitalized." Hezbollah was described as a social organization whose leaders include fundamentalist Islamic clergy.

The fighting was finally stopped by Iranian security forces, the sources said.

Tehran Radio reported a march by the Fedayeen in defiance of a ban on demonstrations and said it "created tension." But the broadcast made no mention of injuries or violence.

The official radio station quoted a security official as saying the demonstrators were trying to "divert the thoughts of the Moslem people of Iran from the issue of the war and to render some assistance in this way to their American masters and the enemy's fifth column."

He referred to the Persian Gulf war between Iran and Iraq that broke out Sept. 22.

Authorities apparently had advance warning of the demonstration. On Thursday Tehran Radio issued a warning from the government that no one would be allowed to disobey the ban on demonstrations.

The warning said security forces would be on guard and "should they notice any disorder or tension they will deal with the culprits in accordance with regulations governing wartime conditions."

Iranian Official Vows No Truce Until Iraqi Forces Driven Out

BEIRUT, Lebanon (AP) — Iran's Prime Minister Mohammad Ali Rajai said Friday his nation will not negotiate a truce with Iraq until Iraqi forces are driven out from all occupied Iranian territory.

"Only then we will say what the value of the our martyrs' blood will be," Rajai said in a Moslem sabbath sermon delivered at Tehran's university.

"The invading mercenaries should be expelled and the aggression of (Iraqi President) Saddam (Hussein) condemned before any negotiations are possible."

Excerpts Broadcast

Excerpts of Rajai's sermon were broadcast by official Tehran Radio and monitored in Beirut.

The prime minister said all members of Iran's Supreme Defense Council, the nine-man body directing Iranian military strategy under President Abolhassan Bani-Sadr, shared his view on the question of negotiations.

Ayatollah Hussein Ali Montazeri, Iran's second most powerful religious leader, backed Rajai with a similar sermon in the holy city of Qom, according to Tehran Radio.

"War Will Continue"

"Any kind of negotiation with the traitor Saddam is out of the question," Montazeri said. "The war will continue."

The statements dashed hopes of success for an Islamic mediation group that wants to shuttle between Iran and Iraq soon. Iraq has agreed to receive and cooperate with the group but Iran has yet to respond formally.

The group was formed last month by the summit meeting in Taif, Saudi Arabia, of 37 Moslem nations and the Palestine Liberation Organization. It includes Islamic conference Secretary General Habib Chatti of Tunisia and representatives of Bangladesh, Senegal, Pakistan and Turkey and the PLO.

Both Iraq and Iran are Moslem nations, but Iraq is Arab and Iran is Persian. Iran refused to attend the Islamic summit because the Iraqi president attended.

Rajai also joined Bani-Sadr in condemning France's delivery last week of four Mirage F-1 jet fighters to Iraq as an "aggressive act against Iran," according to the Tehran broadcast.

"You have been hearing every day that France is a civilized nation. But the delivery of the Mirages has shattered France's civilized veneers and shown the world its barbarian nature."

Rajai also said Iran was now in a stronger economic and industrial position than Iraq despite the severe losses sustained in the war on the northern flank of the Persian Gulf, now in its fifth month.

Military communiques from Iraq and Iran reported hit-and-run assaults and long-range artillery bombardment in Iran's western highlands and the southwestern oil province of Khuzistan. But neither side claimed territorial gains to break the standoff at the two major theaters of the war.

A late night communique from the Iraqi command claimed 174 Iranians were killed in operations at the besieged Kurdish-populated district of Nowsud in the northwest. It conceded 18 Iraqi deaths.

Also, Iran said its ground forces thwarted an Iraqi air attack on the giant Kharg Island oil terminal in the Persian Gulf.

Iran said 30 residents of the oil city of Abadan were injured and several homes destroyed in an Iraqi artillery attack.

Two Iraqi aircraft were forced away from Kharg and Qeys islands by Iranian ground fire, Tehran said.

Iran's largest oil terminal, which recently reopened after being damaged during the start of the war, is located on Kharg Island.

Reagan's Budget Ax To Include Most Major Areas But Military

overall saving of $1.6 billion, the documents show.

Spending on Amtrak and mass transit programs would be sharply reduced.

Stockman recommends cutting Amtrak's subsidy by about one-third in 1982 and more in later years, with expected major reductions in train service and dramatically higher fares.

"To sharply reduce federal subsidies, routes and trains should be dropped if they don't meet a stringent threshold test" of profitability, the documents said.

The new tests, which would require trains to cover 50 percent of their costs in 1982 and 80 percent by 1985, would eliminate more than half of Amtrak's routes outside the Northeast.

To meet the 50 percent test, for instance, Chicago-to-Milwaukee trains would be forced to raise ticket prices 193 percent with no loss of ridership.

Stockman projects savings from the tighter Amtrak requirements of $380 million in fiscal 1982 and up to $900 million by fiscal 1985.

Urban mass transportation programs, particularly subway lines, would also be cut under the Stockman plan.

Carter's proposed spending on mass transit would be reduced from $2.8 billion to $2.4 billion in 1982 and from $3.3 billion to $2.2 billion in 1983.

"While there is some federal interest in promoting mass transit, it's primarily a state-local responsibility," the documents said. "Energy savings that can be attributed to mass transit capacity expansion are extremely low."

In contrast, only modest cuts are proposed in the federal highway program, which would be trimmed from $8.5 to $8.1 billion in 1982 and from $10.1 billion to $9.6 billion in 1983.

Deep cuts are also proposed for the Rural Electrification Administration, which provides low-interest loans for telephone and electrical construction in rural areas, and for the Farmers Home Administration, which provides financial help to rural businesses and farms.

A five-year, $5.7 billion cut is proposed in the Environmental Protection

Agency's waste-water treatment grants to local communities. The budget documents concede that "less pollution control will result."

Meantime, the White House said Friday that Reagan is mindful of the congressional cooperation he needs to pass his economic program but will not retreat on its major features.

Deputy White House press secretary Larry Speakes was asked if Reagan might settle for something less from Congress than his three-year, 10 percent per year reduction in personal income taxes.

"Certainly, we will seek the 10 percent cut we are pledged to seek," Speakes said. "The president has re-emphasized that in every opportunity he's had to meet with members of Congress."

"While we know the legislative process is a process of negotiation," Speakes said, "our goal and what we think the people voted on in November, among other things, is a 10 percent tax cut over a period of three years."

"We're going to stick by that," he said, and while the program "has not been finished... we don't plan to retreat from what the president has said."

As the president celebrated his 70th birthday, his advisers were assessing the reaction from Capitol Hill and the country to the televised address Thursday night in which Reagan warned the nation that an "economic calamity" is in the offing unless quick tax relief and spending reductions are made.

Reviews from the man on the street were positive, according to a tally of telephone calls received by the White House switchboard Thursday night and Friday morning.

Hundreds of calls were logged and the overwhelming number included praise — often "highly spirited" — for Reagan's 20-minute Oval Office performance, aides said.

The speech won praise from both sides in Congress but Democrats, not surprisingly, were asking for specifics, which Reagan has promised to provide in his Feb. 18 speech to a joint session of Congress.

Reagan's closest Senate ally, Paul Laxalt, R-Nev., said the president had given the country a realistic picture of the economy and kicked off the campaign to win legislative support.

Senate Democratic leader Robert Byrd of West Virginia said the speech was "very good" and "convincing in many ways."

But Byrd said he was "concerned about the use of the term 'economic calamity' because we've heard these words before — 'economic darkirk,' 'economic disaster' — these words could very well become a self-fulfilling prophecy."

Olympic Panel's Approval Sought For Tech Sports Medicine Degree

the Olympics, but none have endorsement from the Olympic Committee for a sports medicine certification program for coaches, trainers and others.

And that's where Texas Tech hopes to fill the gap.

"We hope to help them disseminate that information to the grassroots level," Ed Burkhardt, a health, physical education and recreation faculty member, said, explaining Tech could take advantage of Olympic research by passing on that knowledge to future coaches, trainers, doctors and others.

"In a world of increasing sport participation there is a similar increased need for qualified personnel, both medical and non-medical, in order to facilitate safe participation, to prescribe appropriate treatment of injuries and foster more efficient rehabilitation," says the proposal, which is expected to be presented to the Coordinating Board.

Dr. Yost said medical students at Texas Tech will have the opportunity to learn more about sports medicine than students at most other medical schools. The Tech school also is geared toward producing family practice and primary care physicians and Dr. Yost said those students can take sports medicine courses as electives or complete the formal degree program.

That information will come in handy even if those future physicians don't become team doctors for athletic groups, university officials say, noting that "thousands of youth and young adults seek the services of the family physician every week as a result of sport-related injuries."

Iranians Pleading Innocent In Court

MANILA, Philippines (AP) — Two hundred Iranian students arrested and jailed at a suburban Manila army camp pleaded innocent at a deportation hearing Friday to charges they attacked the Iranian Embassy in a protest earlier this week.

The students, who took over the embassy for nine hours on Tuesday, said they believed the Iranian charge d'affaires had reported to Tehran that the education at universities here was substandard. The diplomat confirmed there had been such reports in Iranian newspapers but said he did not know where they came from.

already has provided knowledge to help the average American. They point to new surgery techniques which were developed to get athletes back into action sooner but which also enable workers to return to the office or factory sooner. Research in fluid replacement, dehydration and heat tolerance was first applied to athletes, officials note, but they also can be applied to military people and foundry workers.

And eventually, the family physicians of those budding athletes in neighborhood parks and playgrounds may be much better trained in how to handle the psychological and physical traumas involved.

McIntyre notes that professional athletes already benefit from professional treatment, but adds, "It's those 7-year-olds I'm really concerned about."

Gambling Raid At Clovis Nets Eight Men, $23,000

A-J Correspondent

CLOVIS — Seven Clovis men and a Muleshoe man were arrested early Friday in a raid on an alleged gambling establishment during which lawmen say they confiscated more than $23,000 in cash and checks.

Clovis Assistant District Attorney Charles Plath said 30 officers from the city police, Curry County sheriff's office and New Mexico State Police intelligence division made the arrests at a small frame house near a shopping center here at 12:50 a.m. Friday.

In addition to the money — $21,818 in cash and $1,523 in checks — lawmen also recovered five weapons, Plath said.

this kind of thing," Montford said, referring to the statistical increase in arson noted in the Lubbock area. The New West fire was one of several major fires last year that may produce higher fire insurance rates for Lubbock property owners.

He credited the city fire marshal's office with the investigation leading to Fowler's arrest, adding that Fowler is the only suspect at this time.

Arson investigators spent 2,483 man hours last year looking into 154 deliberately set fires.

Charged with Commercial Gambling, a Fourth-Degree Felony Under New Mexico Law, are Clovis Residents Robert Stanley Inman, 44; Aubry Winford Johnson, 51; Eddie Paul Watson, 62; A.H. Preston, 56; Wendel Osborne, 42; Felton Edward Brewer, 71; and Bennett Williams, 42. Facing the same charge is 50-year-old Hector Jesus Leal of Muleshoe.

Brewer and Johnson also face the additional charge of carrying a concealed deadly weapon.

The men were released from jail here Friday afternoon after posting bonds of $2,500 each. Williams and Johnson also posted additional $200 each bonds in connection with the weapons charges.

The group is expected to be arraigned in magistrate's court here next week.

Plath said Clovis intelligence officers had been watching the house for "some time," and that Friday's raid might lead to other gambling arrests in the community.

GOP Senators Join Debt Hike Passage

make the vote any easier to explain to voters, replied Sen. Dale Bumpers, D-Ark. "There isn't a person in this body who hasn't sipped at the trough of fiscal irresponsibility."

Current law limits the government's credit to $935.1 billion, a figure that is expected to be exceeded within a few days. Unless the ceiling were raised, the government conceivably would be without authority to sell bonds and pay its bills.

The debt ceiling has been raised 20 times over the past eight years and most of those times a majority of Republicans voted no. That left Democrats with the task of rounding up enough votes to extend the government's credit.

"What could be more irresponsible than for the government to refuse to pay its debts?" asked Sen. Gary Hart, D-Colo., who had to answer in the election last November for supporting an increased debt.

The Senate, on a 52-41 vote, rejected an effort by Democrats to increase the debt limit to only $963 billion, which would suffice through April 30, rather than the $985 billion through Sept. 30 asked by Reagan and passed by the House on Thursday.

Byrd noted the higher figure was based on the assumption that Congress would stick to the current-year budget submitted by the Carter administration. Reagan has vowed to cut that budget, Byrd said, "and before we extend the debt limit beyond May we ought to have details of the economic package the president intends to reveal."

Sen. James McClure, R-Idaho, said the debt ceiling should be pushed immediately beyond the $1 trillion mark so the Carter administration would get the blame.

Jobless Rate Holds Steady In January

ly reluctant request for an increase in the government debt ceiling. Under consideration was a House-passed bill increasing the government's borrowing authority from $935 billion to $985 billion.

January's unchanged unemployment rate occurred even as the work force was expanding by 475,000 persons, the first sizable increase since last July. The work force includes those who have jobs and those who do not but are actively seeking work. It does not include so-called "discouraged workers," those who have given up efforts to find jobs. The government said some 1.1 million people were in this category in 1980.

The "discouraged worker" statistic is compiled only on a quarterly basis so no figure was available for January.

Most of last month's gain in the labor force occurred among women. Among all adult women, 51.8 percent participated in the labor force, the department said. Among adult men, 79.4 percent were counted in the work force.

Virtually Unchanged
Employment among adult men and teen-agers was virtually unchanged in January and still was 150,000 and 500,000, respectively, below the levels of one year ago.

Industrial employment, hard hit by last spring's recession, jumped by nearly 400,000 in January and over the past three months has advanced at a monthly average of about 250,000. "Between December and January, large employment reductions usually occur," the Labor Department noted.

The factory work week average was up 0.3 percent of an hour during the month, continuing a steady rise that began last July as the economy started its climb out of the recession.

Earnings Climb
Average weekly earnings, after seasonal adjustment, rose 1.4 percent from December, a larger than usual increase that reflects the 25-cent increase in the minimum wage to $3.35 an hour.

The department reported these unemployment rates in January among key sectors of the economy:
—Adult men fell from 6.2 percent to 6 percent.
—Adult women declined 0.1 percent to 6.7 percent.
—Teen-agers increased 1.2 percent to 19 percent.
—Blacks and other minorities declined from 14 percent to 12.9 percent.

Two Stores Burglarized

A furniture store owner told police he lost several thousand dollars in property and damage to his business as a result of a Thursday night burglary at his store.

Jack Britton Kyle of Cagle Brothers' Furniture, 2202 Ave. Q, told police burglars broke the front east window of his store with a board to gain entry.

Taken were a grandfather clock valued at $4,335 and two ceramic white ducks worth $185 each, Kyle said. Including damage to a table and two sofa cushions, Kyle estimated his loss at $5,650.

Another business was entered by burglars in much the same manner, police said. Rufus Crafton Hay told police the front plate glass window to General Tire

Co. was broken between 6 p.m. Thursday and 7:40 a.m. Friday.

The store's alarm was not sounded by the break-in, and five television sets valued at $1,064 were stolen, reports show. Hay estimated the broken window would cost $190 to repair.

In other activity, a 25-year-old Lubbock woman reported someone fatally shot her pet.

Elddia Flores of 2003 E. Eighth St. said she looked into her backyard Thursday and saw her black and white poodle had been shot. She said that although the dog runs loose at times, she had a suspect in mind, adding that other pets in the neighborhood had also been shot.

She said the offense occurred sometime between 1 a.m. Wednesday and 2 p.m. Thursday.

Lubbock police Friday were looking for a motorist who drove away after reportedly causing a three-car traffic accident in the 6400-block of 19th Street which seriously injured a 33-year-old Levelland man.

William Keith Bell, a passenger in one of the cars, was listed in critical condition late Friday at Methodist Hospital.

Police were told the cars collided about 7:40 p.m. Thursday when the hit-and-run motorist swerved in front of them. Witnesses said the driver was traveling east at a high rate of speed on 19th Street when he or she apparently lost control of the car.

The only lead officers were given at the scene was that the vehicle was possibly a Ford Torino.

The only other person injured in the accident, Harvey Gerald Robinson, 18, of Smyer, was treated at Methodist Hospital, and later released.

In other activity, an 18-year-old Lubbock waitress said she was raped outside the city about 1:30 a.m. Friday by a man with whom she had gone on a date.

The teen-ager told Lubbock County deputies she and the man had left a restaurant and were driving around when the man stopped on East 19th Street, about a mile east of FM 1779, and began kissing her.

When the woman told him to stop, the man allegedly threatened her if she did not submit to his advances. She said she tried to get out of the man's late-model Grand Prix, but could not because the vehicle had power door locks.

The woman said after she was raped, the man drove her to her sister's house. She was then taken to Lubbock General Hospital where she met with Rape Crisis Center representatives.

The woman described the suspect and said he frequently drank coffee at the restaurant where she works.

Five Lubbock Residents Suspects In Burglaries

At least 12 burglaries have been cleared and $8,000 worth of stolen silverware recovered with the arrests of five Lubbock residents, according to Lubbock and Deaf Smith County lawmen.

Lubbock deputy sheriffs continued Friday to search for an additional two men; identified only by their first names, believed to be involved in the two-month-old ring.

Sheriff's Capt. Dean Bohannon said the silverware was located at a Lubbock gold and silver buying operation about 5:30 p.m. Thursday. A 21-year-old man arrested that afternoon is believed to be one of two men who sold the loot officers said was taken in several burglaries near Hereford.

Charged Friday by Deaf Smith County officials in connection with the Jan. 25 burglary of a residence north of Hereford were Rosa Romero, 30, and Jesse Carmona Jr. Additionally, Mario Garza, 31, and Sally Garza, 24, were arrested Thursday in Lubbock and charged in connection with the Feb. 1 burglary of a Hereford residence.

The 21-year-old man was expected to be charged Monday.

Lubbock County Sheriff D.L. "Sonny" Keese said he expects more burglaries to be cleared and more stolen property confiscated as the results of Thursday's arrests. Authorities also are looking for two men who reportedly worked with the unidentified suspect in pulling the break-ins.

The man told deputies he received thousands of dollars from the two men for stealing clothing from numerous businesses in Lubbock, hitting more than once at Anthony's Department Store in the Town & Country Shopping Center, Fourth Street and University Avenue, and Luskey's Western Store, 2431 34th St.

The suspect reportedly told officers he began dealing with the other two men in December 1980, and received between $1,500 and $8,500 for each burglary. His method, lawmen said, was to throw a heavy object through a plate glass window, enter the business, grab expensive clothing and then flee.

After each of the break-ins, all of them late at night, he would meet with the two men and hand over the goods, according to officials. The suspect's pay-off reportedly was made before or after every burglary.

Lawmen said the man told them he then would leave the city for several days, traveling to New Mexico, Amarillo and Houston before returning.

Deputies also were told the other men, who remained at large late Friday, have been directly responsible for a half dozen burglaries in the city, break-ins of businesses on the Clovis Highway and have been stealing tires off parked cars at a Slaton dealer's lot.

Survivors include the parents; a brother, Albert III of the home; the grandparents, Mr. and Mrs. Albert Miraval Sr. and Mr. and Mrs. Jose A. Medel-Lin, all of Littlefield; and great-grandparents, P. Leos of Seguin and Mr. and Mrs. H. Suarez of Laredo.

Leaders Prepare Farewell

HARTFORD, Conn. (AP) — The nation's leaders paid tribute to Ella Grasso on Friday, as the state announced the former governor's body would lie in state Sunday and Monday at the state Capitol. It is the first time that honor has been accorded since Gov. George L. Lilley died in 1909.

A state funeral is planned Monday for Mrs. Grasso, who died Thursday evening at Hartford Hospital after a long battle with cancer. She was 61.

Gov. Bill O'Neill asked that Monday be set aside as a day of mourning.

President Reagan released a statement in Washington saying Mrs. Grasso, Connecticut's governor for six years, "was a determined and spirited public servant who brought to her life the energies of the committed."

"She worked hard to make state government work and her service to the people of Connecticut was unstinting."

Workers roped off a first-floor alcove in the Capitol where the public which will be allowed to file past the coffin from noon Sunday to 11 a.m. Monday.

The governor's family — husband Thomas and children Susane and James — will spend the hour between 11 a.m. and noon Sunday alone in the Capitol with the casket.

Philip Daigneault, proprietor of "American History in Flags," was setting up 200 flags of historical significance to America that will line the walkways leading to and from the catafalque.

A High Mass will follow at St. Joseph's Cathedral in Hartford at noon with subsequent military burial in Mrs. Grasso's hometown of Windsor Locks.

Two eulogies will be delivered at the church: one by O'Neill and the other by Lt. Gov. Joseph Fasullo.

A spokesman for O'Neill's office said Monday's burial services will include a fly-over by military aircraft and the presentation of a state flag to the family.

"Our thoughts and prayers will be our silent tribute to a great and gallant leader," the governor said.

Schools Seeking Help In Equipment Drive

TULIA (Special) — East Ward and Highland Schools' Parent Advisory Councils have started a collection drive aimed at acquiring new athletic equipment to be provided through the national Post "Fun and Fitness" program, according to project director Bertha Klein.

The program offers schools free athletic equipment in exchange for proof-of-purchase seals from Post Cereals, Wonder Bread, Log Cabin Syrup, Log Cabin Pancake and Waffle Mix and tear strips from Birds Eye Awake and Orange Plus breakfast beverages, she said.

Bob Griesse, all-pro quarterback for the Miami Dolphins and a strong supporter of good athletic programs, is the national program director.

The Parent Advisory Councils urge everyone in the community to help the councils reach their goal by saving and turning in the special proof-of-purchase seals from "Fun and Fitness" brands. The seals may be turned over to East Ward or Highland Elementary students or delivered to either school.

French Composer Loses Tax Lawsuit
WASHINGTON (AP) — Music conductor and composer Pierre Boulez has lost a court battle over more than $40,000 in U.S. income taxes the Internal Revenue Service has been trying to collect.

The government charged that Boulez owed $25,247.68 in taxes for 1971 and $19,212 for 1972, but the actual amount he will have to pay was not known because some issues are still subject to compromise.

Boulez, a French citizen, performed with the New York Philharmonic and the Cleveland Orchestra from 1971 to 1975. He ran into tax problems in 1976.

His attorneys then negotiated with Joseph McGowan, director of international services of the IRS, reaching what they said was an oral agreement for Boulez to make payments.

Reagan Friends Throw Surprise Birthday Party

WASHINGTON (UPI) — President Reagan's California chums, including Frank Sinatra, George Murphy and Jimmy Stewart, flew into Washington for a "surprise" 70th birthday party for Reagan at the White House Friday night.

Instead of candles, Reagan's birthday cake was topped with the initials RWR and a decorative jumping white horse. The president ate vanilla sponge cake while the Army Strolling Strings performed in the main entrance.

Reagan will have to wait for his present from wife Nancy until he returns to his Santa Barbara ranch for a four-day rest Feb. 19.

She is giving him a tree for Rancho del Cielo, apparently a popular gift in the Reagan household since Reagan gave her an olive tree for their Pacific Palisades home when daughter Patti was born 28 years ago.

Mrs. Reagan and several of the Reagans' friends hosted the private "surprise birthday party" for 120 guests. It featured cocktails and a U.S. Marine combo on the State Floor, dinner in the East Room of lobster en belle-vue, roulade of veal farcie, vegetable printaniere, cake and sherbet, three California wines, and dancing to the Billy Wilson Orchestra in the foyer.

Other guests included Vice President George Bush; columnist William Buckley; top White House aides Edwin Meese, James Baker and Michael Deaver; Sen. John Warner and wife Elizabeth Taylor; Sen. Paul Laxalt of Nevada; Reagan's daughter Maureen; his brother Neil; Deputy Secretary of State William Clark; Cabinet members William Casey, Caspar Weinberger, William French Smith and Richard Schweiker, and California "kitchen cabinet" members Justin Dart, Holmes Tuttle, Armand Dutsch, and Earle Jorgensen.

The septuagenarian chief executive, only the second president besides Dwight Eisenhower to reach age 70 in the White House, had a full day of birthday tributes.

Congressional leaders from both parties joined Mrs. Reagan in the Oval Office for a morning celebration that included a spirited rendition of "Happy Birthday to You."

Democratic House Speaker Thomas O'Neill presented Reagan with the official flag that flew over the Capitol during Reagan's inauguration, and House Democratic leader Jim Wright of Texas gave Reagan a gold tie clasp in the shape of a cowboy boot with spur.

Reagan asked whether he should blow out the one candle on the four-tiered cake decorated with pictures of three elephants, the White House and the Capitol. The tall cake, sitting on a table, rose above his head. "No, that's just for effect," replied Mrs. Reagan. "I remember South Carolina."

She referred to a campaign incident last year in which Reagan accidentally got his jacket covered with white icing.

As Mrs. Reagan searched for a knife to cut the cake, Reagan quipped: "How can you bear to (cut it). I think we ought to bronze it."

Staffers erected an easel comparing his schedule of four years ago — a day at his Santa Barbara ranch and dinner at Chasen's restaurant in Beverly Hills with friends — to Friday's full day of meetings.

"Ask yourself. Are you better off today than you were four years ago?" read one paper, spoofing Reagan's debate phrase about former President Carter's presidency. "You may not be, but the country is," said another paper.

Tulia Council Votes To Give Workers Cost Of Living Raise

A-J Correspondent

TULIA — Tulia City Council recently voted to give city employees, grades 1 through 11, a 4 percent cost of living increase and a longevity pay program for all employees who have a minimum of five years continuous service to the city.

The longevity program will pay $4 per year of service per month up to a maximum of 25 years and $100 per month.

And effective April 1, because of the formation of the Swisher County Tax Appraisal District, the tax department will be reduced to one tax clerk position. This tax clerk will be moved into the main part of Tulia City Hall, occupying the now-empty office. The tax clerk will continue to maintain all tax records as required.

In addition, the clerk will assist the Utility/Accounting Department. Some tasks that will be required will be to make all deposits, wait on utility customers as well as tax customers, answer the telephone, handle work orders, issue all permits and be responsible for credit bureau collections.

The clerk also will carry out any other office tasks as required by the supervisor and will be placed under the supervision of the finance director.

This action has come about as a result of the establishment of the Swisher County Tax Appraisal District, of which Tulia is a member as required by law. A certified appraiser (assessor) also is required to run the local appraisal district. Therefore, with the city's present tax department set-up, a duplication of the assessment of value for taxes exists.

The Council, in an effort to reduce duplication of this assessment, has authorized the reduction of the duties of the tax department to one tax clerk.

The Council also appointed Bob Goodwin, Faye Tidwell, Bill Daniel, Urban Klemm and Lindol Dyer to the Board of Adjustments (Planning and Zoning) for two-year terms.

Dennis Love, chairman of the board of the Tulia Housing Authority, presented the City Council with the authority's annual report. Discussion centered on the operation and recent improvements of the 20-unit housing facility. Love, with the help of Dr. Murray Travis, vice chairman, explained the financial operation of the housing and future projects.

The Council appointed Rusty Love and Victor Basuldua to the electrical board for two-year terms. Other members are Richard Hale, Urban Klemm and C.W. Reeves.

In a previous meeting, Tulia City Council approved a 15-year franchise agreement with Continental Telephone Co. of Texas to serve Tulia's telephone service needs.

City Manager Jim Madewell requested Continental Telephone Co. to make a survey of Tulia in the near future concerning touchtone system availability and other modern conveniences.

In other business, the Council appointed Richard Hale to succeed the late Elwood Ramsey on the Housing Authority board and transferred $40,000 from the water and sewer fund and $30,000 from the electric fund to the general fund for operating expenses.

Local Vietnam Veterans Stage Hostage Protest

By NEAL FARMER
Avalanche-Journal Staff

Ten persons representing a 75-member Lubbock chapter of the Vietnam Veterans of America staged a protest in front of the federal building Thursday over the attention paid the freed American hostages.

The short-lived demonstration broke up in about half an hour when security personnel at the federal building asked the protesters to move out of the door. The group, apparently thinking they had been ordered to leave, ended the protest and left.

Frank Gutierrez, 32, of 101 Ave. M., a spokesman for the group, said, in a prepared statement, "On the occasion of nationwide celebration for the return of the hostages we, the survivors of the Vietnam War, are very glad to see the crisis has ended and that it was done without bloodshed."

"We join our brothers in protest across the country for the overwhelming response to the plight of the hostages. They accomplished no more than what was expected of them as members of our country's foreign service or military service. We feel betrayed as we continue to see nationwide coverage of the hostages' return because of the lack of welcome as we returned from Southeast Asia in the '60s and '70s."

Gutierrez also said combat veterans in Vietnam had a different experience altogether than the hostages. However, he noted that not all of the Lubbock chapter supported the protest.

Gutierrez said, "In 1968 there were 500,000 troops in Vietnam but only 50,000 were in actual combat. If you were sitting back at the base camp as a support staff drinking cold beer then Vietnam was just another tour of duty for them."

Asked why he was protesting, Raymond Montoya, 30, of 4619 Kemper St., said, "The thing that's going on with the hostages — plus what I read in the papers. I read in the paper where a Vietnam ex was killed in a shootout with police because he was arguing about the hostages."

"We're glad they're back but we see the credit they're getting and know we didn't get anything when we came back."

Fred Ramirez, 34, of 2404 31st St., echoed the others' sentiments, saying, "I think they (the American people) did a little too much for the hostages. They just got caught, that's all. It was part of the job."

Gutierrez said the reason Chicano flags also were flown during the protest was the majority of Chicanos in Vietnam ended up in the infantry ranks.

"Twenty-five to 30 percent of the Vietnam casualties were Spanish surnamed," said Gutierrez.

"Traditionally we've always been patriotic Americans. At the end of the Vietnam War when Ford initiated amnesty, we did not have one Mexican-American that presented himself to the state board," Gutierrez explained that most all Chicanos chose to fight the war instead of going to prison or to Canada.

Out of the protesters, Gutierrez explained, four are 100 percent disabled and five are presently unemployed. He said with 25 percent of the casualties in Vietnam having Spanish surnames, he did not see why 25 percent of the jobs available for Vietnam veterans did not go to the Spanish surnamed veterans.

"Unemployment, suicide, mental anguish, Agent Orange, divorce and inadequate response from the powers that be still complicate the lives of the survivors of America's greatest tragedy," Gutierrez said.

He added, "How much longer will America continue to punish us for our part in defending this great land of ours? We were only doing our duty. Now we want and demand jobs and understanding, for Vietnam is now history and its veterans must not be forgotten."

'Rock and Roll Day' To Benefit Group

HOBBS (Special) — Hobbs Mayor Buddy Westbrook has proclaimed next Saturday as "Rock and Roll Day" in honor of the senior citizens annual Rock and Roll Jamboree for the benefit of the Lea County Heart Association, according to Glenda Hansen, activities coordinator for the village.

The Jamboree, which will begin at 1 p.m. and continue through 5 p.m. at the Good Samaritan Village, is sponsored by the American Health Association. The event will feature 50 men and women rocking in rocking chairs and rolling in wheelchairs, Hansen said.

Westbrook will kick-off the event and crown the Valentine King and Queen.

The American Red Cross will sponsor a community-wide blood drive at the Good Samaritan Village in conjunction with the Jamboree, Miss Hansen said.

Proceeds from the Jamboree will be donated to the Lea County Heart fund to further research, education and community service in the fight against heart and blood vessel disease.

Tech President To Speak In Levelland

LEVELLAND (Special) — Dr. Lauro Cavazos, president of Texas Tech University and Health Sciences Center, will speak at South Plains College at 1:30 p.m. March 9 during Tejano Day at the college.

Dr. Cavazos will address high school students from the South Plains area in SPC's Theater for the Performing Arts.

Registration for the annual Tejano Day, featuring talent, oratory and queen competition for the high school students, begins at 9 a.m. in the lobby of the SPC Fine Arts Building.

Campus tours will be conducted by SPC presidential hostesses from 10:30-11:15 a.m.

The general session and afternoon competition will begin after lunch and a dance will take place from 8 p.m. to midnight in the Sub.

Tejano Day is sponsored by Los Tejanos, a SPC service organization.

Tulia To Receive State Funds For City Park Improvements

TULIA (Special) — The city of Tulia has received a commitment from the State Land and Water Conservation Fund and Texas Parks and Wildlife Department for $44,176 to be used for park improvements in Tulia, according to Jim Madewell, city manager.

Madewell said he recently learned from Austin officials that Tulia, along with 33 other towns in the state, had received commitments. Forty-three towns made applications for the funds.

Madewell said initial plans call for the construction of two tennis courts with lighting, a full-size soccer field and two access bridges across Middle Tule Creek in Mackenzie Park. The tennis courts will be located east of the playground area and the soccer field will be across from the creek south of the ball parks.

Work on the project is scheduled to begin immediately, Madewell said, adding that he has appointed a citizens committee to assist him with the project.

The city of Tulia must match the $44,176 and, according to Madewell, will do so with "payment in kind" — city furnishing materials, labor and equipment.

Madewell said money was not committed for two other plans for park improvements which call for more trees, covered picnic facilities and walking and jogging trails.

Supper Set To Aid Special Olympics

SLATON (Special) — The SELCO special education cooperative will sponsor a taco supper for the support of Special Olympics from 5:30 p.m. to 8:30 p.m. Feb. 13 in the Slaton High School cafeteria.

Tickets are $3.50, $2.50 and $1.50 for three, two and one taco respectively and an order of beans, salad, homemade pie and a drink.

Slaton's final home basketball game, against Tahoka, will be played following the dinner.

The SELCO Cooperative serves the Cooper, Slaton, Southland and Roosevelt school districts.

New Mexico Cryogenics Plant Near Completion

A-J Correspondent

HOBBS, N.M. — A $12.5 million Lea Cryogenics Plant is under construction by Phillips Petroleum Co. at Buckeye near here and completion is expected sometime in March, company officials said.

A company spokesman said about 100 employees are working on the project and the new facility is being built around the current installation by Dresser Engineers of Tulsa, Okla., and Orloff Corporation of Midland.

The new 35-million-cubic-foot-per-day inlet capacity cryogenics plant will replace the current facility, a company official said. In addition, a 60-million-cubic-foot-per-day treater sulphur extraction unit and a 100-foot demethanizer column also is being built.

Company officials say that with the new facility, the company will be able to extract considerably more hydrocarbons with the use of the low-temperature cryogenic method rather than the more conventional oil absorption processes now being used by older plants to extract gas liquids.

With the new facility in use, atmospheric pollution is expected to be cut down and will permit more efficient use of all residues, the spokesman said.

The new facility will be able to recover 100 percent of the butane, 99.8 percent of the propane and 89.1 percent of the ethane from the gas processed, according to company officials.

Bob Lindsay, superintendent and operator of the current plant, will operate the new unit along with Holly Steward, maintenance foreman, and 19 employees.

The new plant is expected to produce 268,000 gallons of liquids a day which then will be shipped to the Phillips Refinery at Sweeny near Houston, officials said.

SPC Financial Aid Deadline March 1

LEVELLAND (Special) — March 1 is the deadline to return financial aid applications to South Plains College for the 1981 summer terms, according to Glenn Pounds, SPC financial aid officer.

The deadline to return completed applications for the 1981 fall term and the spring and summer terms of 1982 is June 1, Pounds said.

Financial aid programs at SPC include college work-study, which provides job opportunities on campus for eligible students; the Pell Grant, formerly known as the Basic Educational Opportunity Grant; the Supplemental Educational Opportunity Grant; the Texas Public Education Grant; and two new programs, the Texas Guaranteed Student Loan Corporation and PLUS (Parents Loan Program for Undergraduate Students).

The TGSLOC allows students living on their own to borrow as much as $3,000 a year, while dependent students can borrow up to $2,500 annually. Parents of dependent students can borrow a maximum of $3,000 yearly through the PLUS program. Loans for these programs are made through banks, while SPC channels applications and handles the paperwork, according to Vicki Mixon, loan officer for these two programs.

Application forms include the 1981-1982 Institutional Application, current ACT Family Financial Statement and a copy of the 1980 income tax return from both parents and students if they are employed.

Play Cast Sets Benefit Performance

BROWNFIELD (Special) — Cast members of the Brownfield High School production of "Godspell" will have a benefit performance at 8 p.m. Friday at Brownfield High School, according to Lou Lindsey, speech and drama instructor.

The performance will benefit the Noyce Burleson Scholarship Fund at Meadow High School, Lindsey said.

Mrs. Burleson taught English and directed the speech and drama program at Meadow 24 years, he said.

Tickets, priced at $10, may be purchased through Odell Wilkes of the Meadow Public Schools at 539-2246 or

Mrs. Chriss Addison at 637-3052.

Regular performances will be at 7:30 p.m. today through Tuesday and on Thursday. Tickets for the regular performances are $3 and may be reserved at the BHS office, 637-4523.

Body Needs To Adjust To Running In Cold

By PAUL DONOHUE, M.D.
Dear Dr. Donohue: I have started a running program. But I read that a person should discontinue outside activities whenever cold weather comes. Is cold air a shock for your heart? How about if I wear a scarf or bandana around my nose and mouth so the air wouldn't be as cold? Does coldness freeze the lungs? — C.M.K.

Cold temperatures stress the heart by causing the blood vessels of the skin to narrow. This narrowing is the body's way of conserving heat. The heart has to pump harder, however, to serve the skin.

You can get accustomed to the cold, just as you can to the heat, but you have to cut back on your running until your body gets used to the new situation. You must dress warmly, or course. Layers of lighter clothing, instead of one heavy, bulky jacket, will keep your body warmer. All exposed parts should be covered, including your head and face. A ski mask and a good hat are very helpful. As much as 40 percent of body heat can be lost via an exposed head.

Breathing in cold air does not freeze your lungs. If it is zero out, for example, breathed air is quickly warmed in your nose, mouth and throat to about 55 degrees. The dryness of cold air makes it unpleasant, however. A scarf in front of the mouth does make breathing in of cold air more comfortable, but a regular ski mask should be more practical.

With these precautions, you can continue your outdoor activities. But beware of snow and ice. More injuries result from falls on icy paths than from coldness. Dress warmly. NOTE: Anyone with a heart circulation problem (angina) must be especially careful in cold weather because of the factors (extra heart work) I have mentioned.

taking a quinine medicine. — F.K.
Night cramps more often than don't indicate either a circulation or nerve problem. Cramps that occur with walking, for example, often do point to such problems. In either case, the possibility of circulatory or nerve impairment should be investigated by your physician.

Night cramps seem to come on partly because of the position of the feet when we sleep. If you lie on your back, the foot tends to drop down. That stretches the calf muscles, and you are on your way to a full-blown cramp. To prevent this, keep your bed covers loose, so they will not weigh down on the foot. Try wedging a pillow against the soles of your feet to keep them pointing up.

Before you go to sleep, stretch your calf muscles. Stand two feet away from the wall. Then with your feet flat, lean forward, bracing yourself with your hands against the wall. Hold that position for 10 seconds, then return to the starting position. Wait five seconds, then repeat. When you get your cramps, flex your foot upward immediately. That should relieve the cramps in a few seconds.

At times, quinine medicine is given a trial. It decreases the excitability of muscle fibers in ways we do not understand. The booklet "How to Stop Leg Cramps and Foot Pains" discusses such conditions at greater length. For a copy write Dr. Donohue, P.O. Box 11210, Chicago, Ill. 60611, enclosing a stamped, self-addressed envelope and 50 cents.

Dear Dr. Donohue: Is there any way to build up glycogen reserves to prevent muscle strain? — J.G.

You don't need to build up glycogen

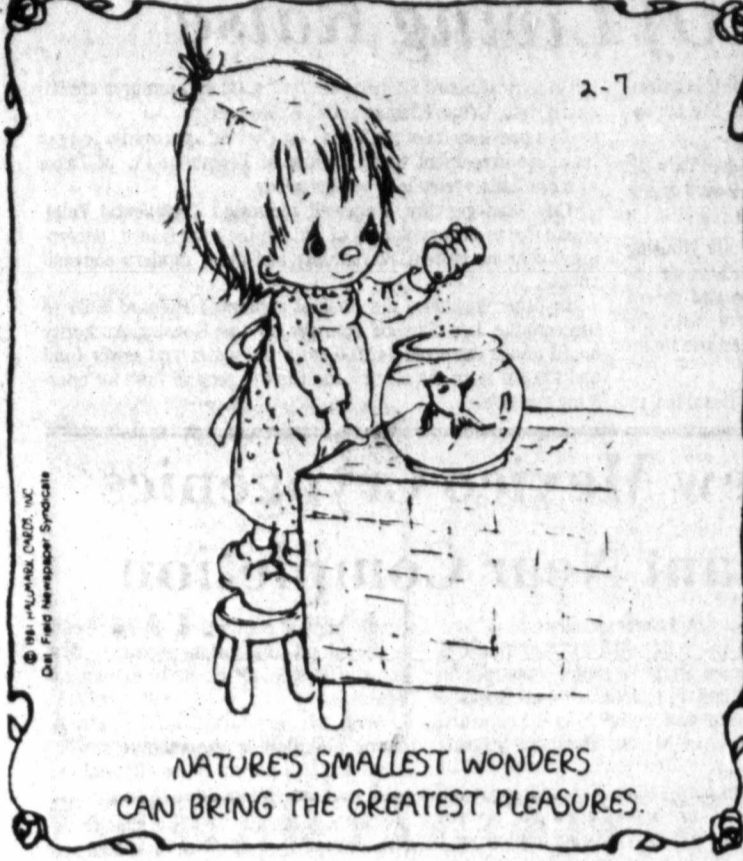

(storage sugar) reserves to prevent strains. Rather, you should do warm-up and stretching exercises before you plunge into any rigorous activity. Tight, non-stretched muscles and tendons are prone to sprains and strains, the more so as we get older.

What can vitamins really do for you — and what can't they do? In his new booklet, Dr. Paul Donohue separates the common sense from the nonsense about this

Bridge

By Oswald Jacoby and Alan Sontag

If partner has led a low card and second hand has played low also, the general rule of third hand high applies. There are a few exceptions here. We will show some examples.

1. Dummy: Q 10 9 8 7 You: K J 6 5 4 3 Lead: 2. Obviously declarer has singleton ace. Why waste one of your honors? If you want to signal, play the six to tell your partner you have strength here.

2. Dummy: K 8 7 You: A J 10 Lead: 2. An obvious fourth best. Play 10. It will win if partner holds queen. If it loses, you will be likely to get two tricks in suit later and be very unlikely to lose your ace.

3. Dummy: 10 4 You: A K 9 8 6 2, and you have bid the suit. Lead: 7 Contract is notrump. Even if 10 is played from dummy, you should play the nine to show strength. You want to give partner a chance to lead suit again.

If partner has led low and second hand has played a card you can't beat, the play of your lowest card tends to say you hope partner will shift the next time he gets in; the play of a higher low card expresses a desire for him to continue the suit later.

Note that we have not discussed giving count or suit preference here. There are times for such signals. This is not that time and you will just be confusing your partner if you get involved here.

The Play from Equals Suppose you hold: K Q J, Q J 10, Q 10 9, Q 10 9, etc. Partner plays a card you can't beat, follow with the highest of your equals. This gives your partner the maximum help.

Thus, if dummy plays ace and you drop the queen, he knows you like the suit, but lack the king. If you play the jack you don't have the queen, etc. This applies at all stages of play. When you want to show strength, play the highest card you can spare.

We will carry on next Saturday. (NEWSPAPER ENTERPRISE ASSN.)

Dear Dr. Donohue: At age 75 I am in good health, but have one problem I hope you can help me with. It is not serious, but a robber of my sleep. I get awful cramps in my calves during the night. They are so bad they awaken me. Does this mean I have a circulation or nerve problem? Is there anything for it? I am

Breakfast Important For Dieters

NEW YORK (Special) — Now, more than ever, Americans are encouraged to be slim, trim and physically fit. Never before have exercise and diet been stressed to such an extent as necessary for a healthy lifestyle, thousands of Americans are jogging, swimming, playing tennis or raquetball, and trying to cut calories.

While the trend is an encouraging one, many people tend to overexert themselves or adopt unhealthy eating habits in order to maintain a slim appearance.

The advice of health experts should be heeded. Strenuous exercise should not be undertaken without first consulting a physician, and weight watching should not involve skipping meals or completely eliminating any one of the four food groups from the diet.

Despite such warnings, many people continue to take drastic measures to lose weight. One of the most common tendencies among dieters is to skip meals. And the most frequently neglected meal happens to be the most important — breakfast.

As children, we were taught that a good breakfast was necessary for a good start to the day. The same is true today: a balanced breakfast improves our thinking, our attitudes and the level of activity we are able to undertake.

There is also evidence indicating that calories consumed early in the day are most quickly burned off. In fact, a recent study has shown that consuming 2,000 calories at breakfast rather than at dinner can result in weight loss as great as 2½ pounds in one week.

One reason that dieters may skip breakfast, or omit some items from their breakfast menu, is the idea that breakfast foods are high in calories.

Although many traditional breakfast foods are fattening, they give you energy to get through the day, and it is better to eat them in the morning than before you go to bed.

If you are counting calories, never cut back on breakfast, which gives you the energy you need to get through the day — better to cut back on snacks and a heavy dinner than this important meal.

ANN LANDERS:

Too Cleanly Mom Upsets Untidy Neighbor

Dear Ann Landers: Please come to the rescue. I am letting this problem make me sick. I know it's crazy, but I don't know what to do about it.

Judy, my best friend, is a spotless housekeeper. She waxes the toilet seats and refrigerator doors. The minute someone runs water in a sink in her house she dashes in with a towel and wipes up the faucets so there won't be any water spots. I have never seen a single article out of place in her home. You couldn't find a speck of dirt with a search warrant. Judy has a five-year-old, but I have never seen any child playing over there.

I have three kids, ranging from 10 to 17. Our house is usually full of their friends, and I confess it's always a mess.

Last night the kids had a gang over and they were frying hot dogs in the kitchen. I was ironing in the dining room. Judy walked in and was horrified. She asked me why I wasn't fixing the kids their snacks instead of letting them tear my kitchen apart. I told her they'd rather do it themselves, and besides, I was too busy!

She rolled her eyes upward and said, "What a mother!" and I felt like two cents. Although I try to rise above it, she makes me feel lazy, inefficient and inferior. How can I overcome these feelings? — Cowed In Raleigh

Dear Cowed: If I had a magic wand that could wave away your feelings of insecurity, I'd use it. But alas, only you can do something about the problem.

Your friend Judy is probably a compulsive, crazy-clean nut who is compensating for things in her life that are lacking. While you sound like a bit of a slob, your kids are undoubtedly happier than Judy's — and your home is filled with laughter and fun. So, you win the brass ring, Kiddo, while Judy's waxed toilet seats net her the booby prize.

Dear Ann Landers: I fell in love for the very first time when I was 20. It seemed like I had been waiting forever for this guy to come along. That was two years ago. Everything was beautiful until he hit me. I didn't know what to do so I let it go.

Now we fight like cats and dogs and he hits me quite often. He is so jealous of everything and everybody it makes me sick. He can't hold a job because he has such a rotten temper.

He smokes a lot of pot and gets mad when I tell him the stuff doesn't agree with me. He gets very high and I get depressed.

I have broken up with this guy three times but I always take him back because I'm afraid I'll never find another boyfriend. Please give me some advice. — Blue In Astoria, Ore.

Dear Blue: You know you should throw the bum out but you haven't the strength to do it. I wish I could give it to you but I can't.

Please look under mental health in the phone book (here I go again) and get some counseling. "Pot-head" needs it desperately, but he didn't write. You did. So, I'm telling you to get some help so you can extricate yourself from this punishing relationship. Good luck.

Dear Ann Landers: Is there no limit to how lowdown and rotten people can be? While my mother was dying in the hospital, someone entered her room and took her Master Charge from her wallet. She died four days later.

The person who stole the charge plate bought $618 worth of merchandise. We didn't discover it until the following month when the bill arrived.

Please warn others who may be in similar circumstances. It is a shame there is such scum in the world. — Bereaved In Upstate

Dear B.: Hospital patients should never keep charge plates, jewelry or more than $4 in their rooms. Yes: it is a shame that someone would steal from the terminally ill, but thieves don't care who their victims are.

CONFIDENTIAL to Goofed It Up Again In York, Pa.: Thomas Watson, Sr. (of IBM) said something you should memorize: "It is a common mistake to think of failure as an enemy of success. Failure is a teacher — a harsh one, but the best. Pull your failures to pieces looking for the reason, then put them to work for you."

Don't get burned by a "line" that's too hot to handle. Play it cool with Ann Landers' guide to "Necking and Petting — What Are the Limits?" Send your request to Ann Landers, P.O. Box 11995, Chicago, Illinois 60611, enclosing 50 cents and a long, stamped, self-addressed envelope.

HINTS FROM HELOISE:

Dimmer Switch Works Best For Night Light

DEAR HELOISE:
When our children were little and preferred a night light to a darkened room, we put a dimmer switch on their bedroom wall switch.

These can be turned very low and use less electricity.

Other mothers of young children might like to try this idea. The light in the room is more uniform and eliminates dark areas that sometimes occur with a plug-in night light. — J.J.

Great! In fact, I have done the same thing in my bathroom, turning the dimmer control to very low. It's so nice to walk in half asleep in the middle of the night and be able to see without being blinded by a sudden bright light.
A word of caution, though...

Have a competent person who knows what he is doing install these dimmer switches, or have an electrician do it. Don't take foolish chances where electricity is concerned. You might not be the winner. Love you for writing. — Hugs, Heloise

HICCUP REMEDY

DEAR HELOISE:
This may sound funny enough to be put in as a "Letter of Laughter" but actually it's a very good hint.

The next time you have the hiccups, have someone cup their hands over your ears firmly while you drink three or four swallows of water.

It really works — hasn't failed me yet. — Barbara Howard

Nor me! When I first heard of this I did laugh but tried it anyway and couldn't believe my hiccups disappeared almost like magic. Just don't ask me why this works... I haven't the foggiest notion! — Heloise

THREAD PICK-UP

DEAR HELOISE:
When sewing, I use masking tape to pick up the threads off the carpet. Much faster than trying to use your fingers. — Ione Schaefer

SHOWER-DOOR GOOK

DEAR HELOISE:
My water-stained glass shower doors were so bad they looked frosted. I tried everything to get the film off, but finally tried using a single edged razor blade.

The gook came off after a hard day's work but now, at least, I have see-through glass! — Mrs. Ronald Ayers

Now that you have the film OFF after all your efforts, let me pass on a little tip...

After drying yourself off, use your towel to give those doors a quick but thorough swipe. (Or, use an old towel if the idea of using your good one offends you).

I promise you, you won't ever have to scrape again. Same goes for those shower walls, too. — Heloise

SOAP SCRAPS

DEAR HELOISE:
I save scraps of hand soap. When I have enough to make a bar, I put them in a piece of an old nylon stocking and tie at each end.

I use this in the basement or outside in the summertime to wash my hands.

The soap slivers are always used up with none being wasted. — Phebe Shuffelt

Have a great money-saving hint? Send it to Heloise in care of 235 45th Street, New York, N.Y. 10017. She can't answer your letter personally but, sure as everyone loves a bargain, she'll share the thriftiest ideas received with her readers.

City To Require Chemical Disclosure
PHILADELPHIA (AP)—The city of Philadelphia is requiring industries to disclose the names of toxic chemicals they use, make, store or emit under two unprecedented city laws.
 The laws were signed Thursday by Mayor William J. Green.
 Five states have passed "right-to-know" laws requiring disclosure of toxic chemical information to workers, but the Philadelphia bills are the first to grant the general public access to such information.

Heidi, where are you?

The search continues for a pre-teen girl to personify Heidi in the forthcoming film release, "Heidi's Song." Hanna-Barbera Productions is looking for a young girl to play Heidi in the studio's fully animated movie, due for release later this year, and has extended the search to April 1. The film has involved more than 300 animators and technicians in a four-year effort and will have an original score of 16 new songs written by Burton Lane and Sammy Cahn. Release of "Heidi's Song" will coincide with the 100th anniversary of publication of the original "Heidi" novel by Johanna Spyri. Those who wish to enter the contest must write a one-paragraph letter in English explaining their qualifications, and enclose a photograph that cannot be returned to "Heidiwood," 3400 Cahenga West, Hollywood, CA 90068. "TOM," A 4-YEAR-OLD turkey, is one bird that doesn't worry about Thanksgiving or Christmas. Tom is the pet of Dick McClellan of Salinas, Calif. It almost looks as if Tom is all set to join Dick in the backyard swimming pool recently, but when it comes to swimming, Tom is a "turkey," you might say. He just likes sitting on the diving board. ## Who watches what

What do the very rich watch when they cozy up to the old tube for some private entertainment? Society author Stephen Birmingham ("Our Crowd," "The Right People") writes in the February issue of Panorama magazine that the late Nelson Rockefeller closed his office door at 2 p.m. every weekday and declined telephone calls while he watched his favorite soap, "As the World Turns." Gloria Vanderbilt is addicted to "The Dick Cavett Show," Paul Mellon watches every important racing event — placing imaginary bets and totaling up his paper wins and losses — and Henry Ford II spends many of his weekends watching football. ## The art of the valentine

Are you an intrepid writer of love letters, or do you approach Valentine's Day quaking in your boots? Susan Polis Schutz has probably written more Valentine's Day cards than anyone alive. She's sold more than 70 million greeting cards with her love poetry (and her husband's illustrations) and three million copies of her books of poetry. "The most important rules in love-letter writing," advises Mrs. Schutz, "are: Think before you write, so you'll have something meaningful to say; be honest; or you'll end up hurting yourself and probably others; be yourself and write in a style you are comfortable with. Your first step should be to buy the card onto which you are going to copy the love letter. Let's face it, cards are more appealing than typing paper. Just the experience of choosing the most appropriate card will bring a flood of memories. If you purchased the right card, merely glancing at it should be inspirational. To create the right atmosphere put a feminine flower like a rose or a masculine flower like a mother-in-law tongue on your desk. Certainly your favorite music should be on, except if it's disco or loud rock — that could be distracting. Take your phone off the hook. Mrs. Schutz suggests looking over old love poems, verses from the Bible or visualizing something the couple enjoyed looking at, feeling or tasting together. "If you can't think of anything pleasurable that you've shared," she says, "maybe you shouldn't be writing a love letter." Finally, be careful writing about emotions; the result is often mush. But, she admits, even the hardest hearts like a little mush sometimes. (NEWSPAPER ENTERPRISE ASSN.)

Study Says Working Women Do More Housework Than Men

By LOUISE COOK, Associated Press Writer
A new study confirms what many married women have claimed — and complained about — for years: They don't get enough help from their husbands with the housework. The study, by two Cornell University researchers, shows that the value of chores like cooking, cleaning and mending adds up to a lot of money — more than $10,000 for a family of four. And the researchers say that women do most of the work — even if they are employed outside the home. "While one social convention — that against mothers working — has broken down, another social convention — one that labels most household tasks 'women's work' — leaves her with a disproportionate share of the household tasks," said William H. Gauger and Kathryn Walker. Gauger and Miss Walker studied the amount of time spent by different members of the family on housework and calculated what it was worth. They also tried to find out whether people are spending more or less time on household chores than they used to. Their study was based on a random sample of almost 1,400 families. They used May 1979 wage rates from the U.S. Bureau of Labor Statistics and New York employment agencies for a variety of jobs. "What is most clearly seen," the pair concluded, is that the wife "contributes the giant share of household work, both in time and dollars ... This is true whether or not she is employed." The study showed that "in no type of family did the average time contributed by husband, teenager or younger child go over three hours a day. On the other hand, in no instance did the wife's average time drop below four hours a day." Gauger and Miss Walker also concluded that the amount of time devoted to household chores has not changed substantially in recent years. One type of work has simply been replaced by another. "If industry provides prepared foods, someone in the family must use time to choose from the ever-changing array," Gauger and Miss Walker said. "Many labor-saving devices ... lighten the work load, but they require time for service, maintenance and repair." Here are some specifics of how families divide housework: Take a family with one child aged 6 to 11. In families where the wife had an outside job, she generally spent the equivalent of about six hours a day or 42 hours a week on household chores. Her husband spent only an hour a day or 7 hours a week. The dollar value of their joint contribution was about $185 a week or about $9,600 a year. In the same type of family, the wife who did not work outside the home spent seven hours a day or 49 hours a week on household chores. Her husband actually spent more time on household chores — 9½ hours a week — than did the man who was married to the wife with a job. The dollar value of their contribution to household chores was about $220 a week or about $11,400 a year. Gauger and Miss Walker said that wives who work outside the home generally spend about two hours less a day on household chores than their non-working counterparts. But the researchers said that, in general, the figures "do not show that husbands increase their work contribution if their wives are employed." Gauger and Miss Walker found that in a family of four with two children, the youngest of whom was between 12 and 17, a non-employed wife contributed $10,000 worth of household work a year. Her husband contributed $2,300 worth and each teen-ager contributed $1,100. The total value of contributions was $14,400. In a similar family where the wife held an outside job, she contributed only $6,300 worth of household work a year — almost 40 percent less than her non-employed counterpart. The contributions of her husband and children, however, were about the same as in the family where the wife worked. The Cornell study, "The Dollar Value of Household Work," includes charts and worksheets to help families figure out their own housework patterns. Copies, at $1 each, including postage, are available from: Cornell Distribution Center — AP, 7 Research Park, Ithaca, N.Y., 14850. Ask for publication ID60.

CHORES ADD UP — Researchers at Cornell University have calculated the dollar value of housework to be in the thousands per year, and have found that women still bear most of burden of housework, whether or not she works outside the home. (AP Laserphoto)

Soldiers Form Dracula Cult

KITZINGEN, West Germany (UPI) — Although officials discount it as superstition, some GIs in West Germany are convinced they have found the tomb of Count Dracula on German soil, 700 miles from Transylvania. A U.S. military spokeswoman acknowledged that something between a cult and a fad had emerged among the GIs over an obscure grave decorated with paintings of bats, skulls and biblical scenes. She said the GIs often hold midnight vigils at the grave located in a small cemetery in the wine producing town of Kitzingen — some for fun but others because they have come to believe they have really found the grave of Count Dracula, the vampire of Bram Stoker's 19th Century novel. The real-life model of Stoker's Dracula, Vlad III, lived in Transylvania from 1430 to 1476. Better known as Vlad the Impaler, he was an early fighter for Romanian nationalism who, it is said, killed his enemies by impaling them upon stakes. What is believed to be his grave is located in Transylvania — although historians have conceded there is no proof he is buried in it. The Dracula cult in Kitzingen has caught on despite historical facts and the weary denials of the town's mayor, Rudolf Schardt. "Before the city restored the tomb a couple of years ago, the bats and skulls were very faint, and it had an eerie atmosphere. That is probably how it (the Dracula cult) got started," Schardt said. "When asked, I tell people the historic facts, but you can't stop these young fellows from believing what they want," he added. The vampire cult among GIs started a few years ago, said Annelise Fnk, spokesman for the 3rd Infantry Division in Kitzingen. "It is the first thing soldiers ask about when they get here. I have worked here for many years, and the Dracula tomb has always been there. "It is kind of scary, a little old and a little mysterious, painted and with a fence — like a shrine," she said. "Lots of guys sit there waiting to see him get out at night," said Sgt. Robert Richard, 23, of Lafayette, La. "I don't know if they really think they'll see him, but when somebody is convinced, perhaps they can make it happen." ORTHOPEDIC MATTRESS & FOUNDATION

Court Rules Youngster Can Sue Mom

COLUMBIA, S.C. (AP) — A 7-year-old boy whose mother accidentally drove the family car over his leg can proceed with his suit against his mother, the South Carolina Supreme Court says. The high court Thursday upheld a state circuit judge's refusal to dismiss a $60,000 lawsuit filed against Geraldine Mitchell of Walterboro on behalf of her son, Timmy. The suit was filed by William B. Mitchell, the boy's father, who is acting as the youngster's legal guardian. The family still lives together. The boy's lawyer, Charles E. Houston Jr., said the case "is unusual" but not the first instance of a child suing a parent. The suit contends Mrs. Mitchell acted in a "reckless, wanton and careless" manner during the Oct. 17, 1978 mishap that injured Timmy, who was then four years old. Mrs. Mitchell failed to buckle her son's seat belt and didn't check to be sure the door was closed before she began driving off, according to the suit. Timmy tumbled from the car and Mrs. Mitchell ran over his leg while "blindly" backing the automobile to look for the child, the suit said. Mrs. Mitchell's attorney asked that the suit be dismissed on the grounds that a child cannot sue a parent. Circuit Judge Francis B. Nicholson refused the request. In a one-paragraph ruling Thursday, the Supreme Court said Nicholson's ruling was not an issue that could be appealed in South Carolina before the lawsuit had run its course in the lower court. State law says a person cannot be barred from collecting insurance in automobile accidents simply because the accident involved members of the injured's family. One of Mrs. Mitchell's defenses is that Timmy was guilty of "contributory negligence" for failing and refusing to keep a proper lookout and failing to take steps to protect his own safety. Houston said he will ask the lower court to dismiss that defense on the grounds that it cannot legally apply to a child younger than seven. The lawyer said the youngster continues to have problems with his injured leg, but did not specify how seriously the boy had been hurt.

Boycott Threatened Because Of TV Violence

LOS ANGELES (AP) — The California chapter of Moral Majority, the politically active evangelical group, is threatening to boycott products of firms that advertise on television shows containing sex and violence. "The only thing the consumer has to fight with today is how he spends his dollar," California Moral Majority Executive Director Lou Barnes Jr. said Wednesday. Barnes said his group will monitor prime-time TV shows during a three-month period, noting every incidence of profanity, sex and violence. When the tally is concluded in May, he said, lists of sponsors of shows the Moral Majority finds objectionable "will be distributed en masse to the people of the coalition." Barnes said "fundamentally millions" of members may boycott the products. "We'd stand and fight for the right of the network to produce whatever programming it would like to produce and for the right of the sponsor to sponsor whatever programming it would like," he said. "But we also stand by the right of consumers to support sponsors who support wholesome, enriching entertainment." Barnes said his group has complained repeatedly to network executives about prime-time sex and violence, to no avail. "Pro-moral people have been writing (NBC President) Fred Silverman and the network moguls, but they're dedicated to providing immoral, amoral and humanistic programming," Barnes said. "Programming and television has hit an all-time low."

Definition Of Death Expected In May

WASHINGTON (AP) — A presidential commission studying medical ethics expects to make public in May its definition of death. Morris B. Abram, chairman of the President's Commission for the Study of Ethical Problems in Medicine and Biomedical and Behavioral Research, told a House subcommittee Friday that a uniform statute has been drafted and will be circulated for comment. "We expect to be able to act on a final report by our May meeting, one year after we began consideration of this issue," Abram told the House appropriations subcommittee hearing the commission's request for $2 million for fiscal 1982. He said extensive hearings have been held on the definition of death, an issue that arises from medicine's ability to maintain heart and lung function in bodies that sustain total brain damage.

Foundation Aids Tech Medical School

By RUTHANNE BROCKWAY
Avalanche-Journal Staff

What's the difference between a plain microscope and an electron microscope? "About $150,000," says W.B. "Dub" Harris Jr., director of development at Texas Tech University's Health Sciences Center, explaining how the Medical School Foundation works to raise money for specific items when state legislative appropriations don't cover all the needs.

The foundation, created in 1970, is a non-profit corporation responsible for accepting donations, gifts and grants of money and property for charitable, educational and scientific purposes on behalf of the school.

Harris cited several examples of how the money is used, noting that donors may specify what they want to fund or put the money into a general fund.

One man, who had no immediate relatives as survivors, left his entire estate to the foundation and — because of his interest in a particular disease — willed all the proceeds for heart research.

Students also benefit from money raised by the foundation, Harris said, explaining that the group has established a general scholarship fund as well as administering 13 individual scholarships provided by various individuals and groups.

Short and long-term loans for medical school students also are funded in part by foundation money. Harris noted that the medical school has students at three campus locations, Lubbock, Amarillo and El Paso.

"When the kids have to move from here to El Paso or Amarillo, we can't use state money for student travel," Harris said.

Funding priorities for the foundation are established by Dr. George Tynes, dean of the medical school; Dr. Lauro Cavazos, president of Texas Tech; and Dr. Teddy Langford, dean of the nursing school. Harris explained that although the foundation originally covered only the medical school, now it also covers the nursing school, which is a part of the Health Sciences Center.

A van is one of the current funding priorities, Harris said, noting that the department of obstetrics and gynecology has portable diagnostic equipment but wants a vehicle to place it in so that the department can have a roving clinic — available to visit various small towns in the South Plains where such medical care may not be available.

Officials say it is safer for mother and child's health and more economical to provide pre-natal care than to deal with an emergency delivery that may have been complicated from lack of pre-natal care.

Harris' inventory of priority needs covers almost as many areas as people's interests: $48,000 for radiology research equipment, $24,000 for a computer image analysis system in the ophthalmology department, a $500,000 transmission scanning electron microscope, $500,000 for each endowed professorship; and money to furnish a pulmonary functions lab.

"People are just now waking up to the fact that this area has a high incidence of respiratory disease," Harris said. "I don't know why, whether it's the dust or the cotton gins or what, but we do have pulmonary faculty in the department of internal medicine and we need equipment for this lab."

It also takes bucks to get faculty members.

"Faculty recruitment is a big need," Harris said, explaining that when the medical school interviews top-notch specialists for the faculty the school picks up the tab for flying the candidate to Lubbock and other expenses involved in the process.

All gifts to the foundation are tax-deductible and may be made in the form of cash, securities such as stocks and bonds, real estate or percentages of royalties from oil wells. Inquiries may be made through Harris whose telephone number at the Health Sciences Center development office is 743-2727.

The foundation is comprised of about 100 members of the board of directors and led by an executive committee which includes the officers. They are William R. "Bill" Moss, Lubbock attorney, president; Harry Jung Jr., Crosbyton attorney, vice president; and Giles McCrary, mayor of Post, secretary.

Members are appointed to the foundation by the Texas Tech board of regents. At their most recent meeting, regents named 14 new members and reappointed seven directors.

Those reappointed were Marshall

Fornby, Jesse K. Mattox Jr., Craig McDonald, Robert McKeivy, W.G. McMillan, Pat McNamara and Robert J. Salem, M.D.

The 14 new appointments are W.K. "Bill" Barnett, Levelland; T. Coe Branch, M.D., Plainview; Mrs. Giles (Nelda) Dalby, Post; Gerald Ford, Dallas; Raymond Hampton, M.D., Pampa; L.J. Richardson, Brownfield; and from Lubbock, Jan Friederich, Helen Lanotte, B.C. "Peck" McMinn, Gene Murrell, Mrs. Robert (Nita) Norris, Gordon Rose, James Robert Suter and Mrs. J. T. (Margaret) Talkington.

Great Action, Bizarre Touches Mark Film

NEW RELEASES

DOGS OF WAR, THE (R) — Christopher Walken, Colin Blakely. (Action adventure) A first-rate version of Frederick Forsyth's thriller about the mercenaries who try to take over a corrupt Idi Amin-like African country. Great action sequences and some fine touches of the bizarre, but it's all marred by the fact that Walken, a fine actor, is much too young to play the supposedly veteran mercenary who commands the operation. GRADE: B

FORT APACHE, THE BRONX (R) — Paul Newman, Ken Wahl, Edward Asner. (Police Drama) This is certainly one of the finest about New York's finest, or any police force for that matter. Based on truth, it is a look at the workings of the police in a Bronx precinct so wild it's nicknamed Fort Apache. And one cop — Newman — is faced with a terrible decision. This is first-rate filmmaking all the way. GRADE: A

GENERAL RELEASE

BREAKER MORANT (PG) — Edward Woodward, Jack Thompson. (Drama) Filmed in Australia, this is the story of three Australian carabineers in the Boer War who are tried by a British military court for murdering seven Boers and a German missionary. A taut film adaption of a play which explores man's heart as well as an empire's psyche. Brilliantly acted, it truly excites, in the best meaning of the word. GRADE: A

IDOLMAKER, THE (PG) — Ray Sharkey, Peter Gallagher, Paul Land, Tovah Feldshuh. (Drama with music) Loosely based on the career of Bob Marucci, who created Frankie Avalon and Fabian, this is the story of ambition — how a man found and forged two kids into teen-age singing idols in the '50s and '60s. Overlong, but often very strong. A great vehicle for Sharkey and Gallagher, two coming stars. GRADE: B

MELVIN AND HOWARD (PG) — Paul LeMat, Mary Steenburgen, Jason Robards. (Drama) The improbable, perhaps even impossible, but maybe true story of the loser and the billionaire. This is how Howard Hughes and Melvin Dummar got together, and what the "Mormon will" meant to poor Melvin and his family. It's more about Melvin's life before the will, however, and that pretty dreary, although touching. The whole thing is strangely touching, and very well done. GRADE: B-plus

POPEYE (PG) — Robin Williams, Shelley Duvall, Paul L. Smith, Paul Dooley. (Comedy with music) The comic strip hero is reborn, in a stylized version by Robert Altman that grows on you. The film's story is the weakest thing, but the acting (especially Shelley Duvall as Olive Oyl) is fine, the effects are fun and the music fits neatly. It's a pleasant romp. GRADE: B

RAGING BULL (R) — Robert DeNiro. (Drama) This is a film by Martin Scorsese that depicts the rise and fall of prize fighter Jake LaMotta. It is powerful, but always very self-conscious of its artistry; you never for a moment forget you are watching a movie (and a performance by DeNiro) that is designed to be art. Thus, it loses its punch. It is bloody and raucous, but never for a moment real. GRADE: B

'Scanners' Considered Intelligent, Artful

HOLLYWOOD (AP) — With his horn-rimmed glasses and mop of brown hair, David Cronenberg gives the appearance of a bookish collegiate. But he really makes his living by scaring people half to death.

The Canadian filmmaker's latest journey into the macabre is "Scanners," which Avco Embassy is releasing this month. Yes, I know that the marketplace is crowded with scare movies. But according to some critics, this one is different.

Sheila Benson in the Los Angeles Times: "For those who like their horror dark, intelligent, artful yet truly horrifying in its effects, 'Scanners' is first-class in its field."

What are scanners? They are a small band of gifted (bedeviled?) individuals whose drug-strained minds can carry ESP to superhuman heights, even destroying less potent brains explosively. Patrick McGoohan, Jennifer O'Neill and Canadian actor Stephen Lack are the principals caught in the power play of international agencies seeking to profit from scanning.

David Cronenberg, 37, who wrote and directed "Scanners," was in Los Angeles at the end of a busy tour to promote the film's opening. He had been here before.

"I came in 1972 because I couldn't get my first project going in Canada," said the Toronto native. "I came in and despair because I had a producer and a distributor but I couldn't get backing from the Film Development Commission. 'They Came from Within' was a horror film, and there was no history of the horror film in Canada."

He encountered a warm reception in Hollywood but decided to return to Canada, where he badgered the commission into supplying part of the $185,000 to make his film. "They Came from Within" earned $5 million, said Cronenberg, making it the first profitable film for the agency.

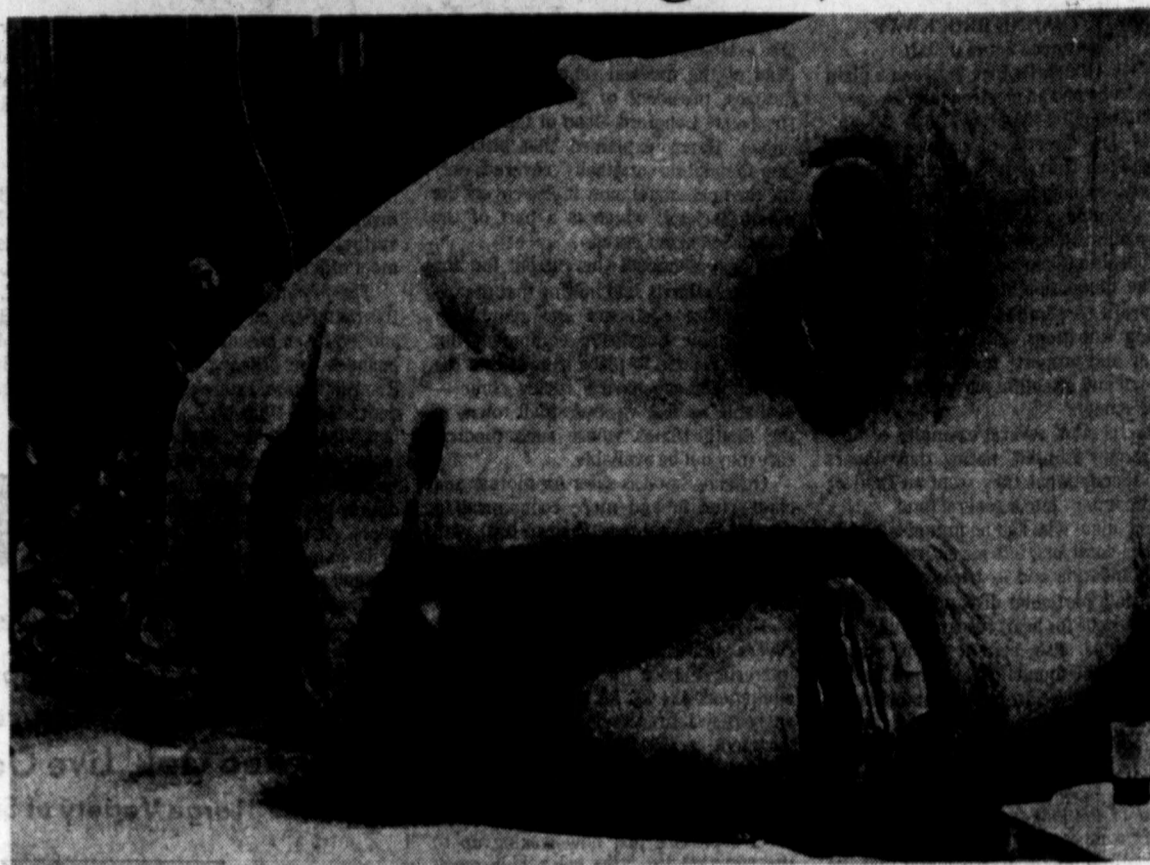

Money isn't everything. Cronenberg found that out when a well-known critic denounced his film as obscene, perverse, repugnant, etc., suggesting that the young man's license as a filmmaker should be revoked.

"The Film Development Commission wanted to secretly finance my next film, especially when they learned it would be a horror movie and I wanted to hire (porn queen) Marilyn Chambers," said Cronenberg.

He continued in the same vein with "Rabid" and "The Brood," plus a drag-strip movie, "Fast Company," which reflected his hobby of collecting speedy Italian cars.

Mostly Cronenberg has inclined toward the horrific, reflecting a youthful interest in films in general and science fiction-horror in particular.

"I saw everything as a kid, not just horror pictures," he recalled. "I liked them all, but I could feel the creative juices flowing when I saw the pictures of Alfred Hitchcock. I was not aware of directors at that time, but I did know Hitchcock because of his television shows.

"I was very impressed with 'Psycho.' But I also liked films like 'Forbidden Planet,' 'The Day the Earth Ended,' 'Destination Moon' and 'This Planet Earth.'"

He is not surprised by the current craze for horror movies — "every year there has been a big one like 'Rosemary's Baby' or 'The Exorcist.'" The audience, he agreed, was mostly young. His reasoning:

"Young people have a compulsion to confront danger in a safe way. They also have an obsession with death. They ask, 'Why did the puppy die? Will I die? Will my mother and father die?' They go to confront death in the movies; it's all part of the make-believe.

"Older audiences like comfortable things, like Neil Simon comedies. But the younger people enjoy films of confrontation, which take them someplace they have never been before."

Cronenberg said he hopes to continue working in Canada, where he is "happy with the people I work with." He added ruefully that the Canadian press and public tend to savage their home-grown achievers — "they don't accept stars, unless they are hockey players."

Actor Wrongly Reported Held By Rome Police

ROME (AP) — A United Artists spokesman said Friday that American movie actor Harvey Keitel — not actor Keith Carradine — was held at a police station for more than an hour in what police described as a "bad joke" played by two photographers.

Police had wrongly identified Keitel as Carradine in reporting a Wednesday night incident in which actor Robert De Niro was also picked up, a spokesman for United Artists said.

Police said that because no charges were filed they kept no records of the incident. Police did not explain the reason for the confusion.

De Niro, in Rome for the premiere of his film "Raging Bull," and Keitel were riding in a taxi that was closely followed by a car occupied by the two photographers, police said. The taxi driver stopped a police car and reported a suspicious car was following his taxi.

The police questioned the photographers who claimed they were following the taxi because two terrorists were riding in it. According to police account, the police then stopped the taxi at gunpoint and took Keitel and De Niro to a police station. After questioning the actors and the photographers, police released them.

In Shreveport, La. where Carradine is making a film, the film company said the actor "just simply wants it reported that he is here. He was not near Rome."

Beauty Bandit Nabbed; Hairdressers Relieved

MUSKEGON, Mich. (AP) — A police reservist has confessed to being the "Beauty Bandit" who had his hair done at 17 beauty salons over the past 2½ months and left without paying while his hair was still in rollers, police said.

Michael A. Tracy, 22, of Shelby, faces an appearance Monday in 58th District Court on charges of obtaining goods and services under false pretenses.

He was arrested Wednesday after two beauty shop operators became suspicious. Shelby Police Chief Bob Wilson said Tracy, a reservist in his department, admitted he is the man who has plagued western Michigan hairdressers since November.

The chief said Tracy, who "never even had a traffic ticket," apologized for his behavior, wanted to make restitution and requested counseling for a mental problem. Police refused to discuss a motive.

Police said Tracy went to the French Room in a neighboring community Wednesday and asked for a shampoo, scalp massage and set. The beauty operator became suspicious and told the man she was too busy.

When he left, the hairdresser telephoned another shop in town to warn the proprietress to be on the lookout. Police said the man already was at the Ladybug Boutique, but left after the operator there told him his hair was too short to curl.

A statewide police alert went out and Tracy was arrested on a street in Grand Haven.

Second-Generation Performers Appear In CBS Presentation

By BOB THOMAS
Associated Press Writer
HOLLYWOOD (AP) — Says Miguel Ferrer: "The question we get asked all the time is: 'Does being the child of a famous parent help or hinder your career?' My favorite answer is my friend Carrie Fisher's: 'Yes.'"

Recent times have brought a flood of second-generation performers, including multiples like the Fondas, Bridges and Carradines. Two more can be seen on CBS television Feb. 12 — Anne Lockhart and Miguel Ferrer.

They play 1941 lovers in "Magnum, P.I." — he a navy ensign, she a Hotel Street hooker who agrees to marry him. He believes she has died in the war; a U.S. Supreme Court nominee 40 years later, he receives a blackmail note from her. Magnum (Tom Selleck) to the rescue.

What makes the "Magnum" drama unique is that the onetime lovers are portrayed 40 years later by June Lockhart and Jose Ferrer.

The resemblance should be startling. Anne Lockhart has her mother's eyes but her own brand of brown-haired beauty. She is 27.

In interviews both Anne and Miguel seemed bright, ambitious, confident. They had similar reactions to the inevitable question about the help or hindrance of a famous name.

"Sure, your parent's name can get you the first job and maybe the second," said Anne. "But then you have to prove yourself. You can't fall on your face quietly; you do it in front of everybody. And there are a lot of people out there waiting for you to fall on your face. So you have to work twice as hard."

"You have to be certain of yourself as an individual," added Miguel. "You have to be confident, a money player. My biggest problem is overcoming the fact that my father was — is — such a terrific actor. If I dwell on that, I might feel like giving up."

Miguel was the eldest of five children of Jose Ferrer and Rosemary Clooney.

"I was never treated like a kid," he recalled. "My parents allowed me to attend their cocktail parties and dinners, and they never spoke to me like a child." The family spent some time in New York and a year in London, but mostly on Roxbury Drive in mid-Beverly Hills.

When Miguel was 11, his parents divorced. "I didn't learn until two years ago that they were divorced two years before that," he said. "Nobody told me at the time."

A drummer from age 8, Miguel played in the band and also conducted for Rosemary's singing tours. "Then in 1968 she had a complete nervous breakdown and spent months in the hospital trying to get herself together," he said. "So from the age of 13-14, I was doing pretty much what I wanted to."

That included the drug scene. Miguel said he enjoyed marijuana for a year until he decided "it was taking my intelligence away." He tried LSD "but it frightened me to death."

He added: "What pulled me through was I knew I was loved on a basic level and I knew what was right. Between my parents and my grandmother, I had a good grounding. Besides, I found a new diversion: girls."

Anne Lockhart is actually a fourth-generation performer; her grandfather was a concert signer, her grandfather was character actor Gene Lockhart. She was born in New York, her parents divorced when she was two, June then married architect John Lindsey.

"My sister and I grew up here but we didn't know the other stars' kids," said Anne. "We were in Hollywood but not of Hollywood."

Anne toured with her mother in "40 Carats" and "Butterflies Are Free," spent a year on "Battlestar Galactica" and is a semi-regular on "BJ and the Bear." She has appeared in 100 commercials — "that's where I had my technical training; it's ideal for paring down your work and learning camera angles."

Surviving Beatles Reunion Reported

LONDON (AP) — The Sun newspaper reported Friday that the three surviving members of the Beatles rock group were planning to record together again. Singer Paul McCartney's manager said he knew of no such plan.

In a dispatch from New York, a late edition of the newspaper said the three — McCartney, George Harrison and Ringo Starr — would make a record in tribute to John Lennon, who died after being shot down outside his New York City apartment Dec. 8.

The Beatles split up in 1971. The paper said the reunion was being organized by the group's long-time producer, George Martin.

It said Martin hoped to record an album featuring the three musicians at his $2.4 million studio on the Caribbean island of Montserrat. McCartney is already on the island making a new record for his own group, Wings.

No spokesman at EMI, the Beatles' long-time record company, was immediately available for comment.

But Tony Brinsby, McCartney's manager, told The Associated Press: "I know of no such plan for a recording by Paul, Ringo and George... I don't even know where Ringo and George are."

Pardon Given Folksinger By Carter

WASHINGTON (AP) — Folksinger and song writer Peter Yarrow of the "Peter, Paul and Mary" group was granted a full pardon by President Jimmy Carter for a 10-year-old moral charge.

The day before Carter left office, he issued a "full and unconditional pardon" to Yarrow, 42, who was arrested here in 1970 on charges of "taking indecent liberties" with a 14-year-old girl in late 1969.

Yarrow was sentenced on Sept. 14, 1970, to 90 days in jail and three years probation but the court modified his sentence to time already served on Nov. 25, 1970.

Yarrow, who has often appeared with the folk group at benefit concerts for liberal politicians and causes, applied for the pardon last October. Carter granted it on Jan. 19.

In his pardon request, Yarrow said his 8 and 9-year-old children would soon have to be told about their father's conviction and that a pardon would help him explain to them that society had forgiven him for the offense.

Applications for presidential pardons are reviewed by the Justice Department before being sent to the president for a decision.

Yarrow's application for a pardon was supported by letters from former New York City Mayor John V. Lindsay, former Sen. George McGovern of South Dakota, the Democratic presidential nominee in 1972, and Sam Brown, the one-time anti-Vietnam war leader who was director of ACTION during the Carter administration. Mary King, deputy director of ACTION in the Carter administration, also wrote a letter on behalf of Yarrow.

Bulgarian Siamese Twins Share One Body, Set Of Limbs

SOFIA, Bulgaria (AP) — Siamese twins with two heads but one body and one set of arms and legs, have been born in Bulgaria, the government news agency said.

The agency BTA said the body of the twins, who were named Ana and Maria, had two spinal columns and two nervous systems but one heart, one bladder and one set of kidneys.

"The left head belongs to Ana and the right to Maria," said a BTA reporter who viewed the twins in special facilities set up for them in a Sofia hospital.

"When the nurse tickled the left foot, Ana opened her eyes and cried," he said. "Maria continued to sleep."

"In a little while they tickled the right foot, Maria started making faces and Ana had already fallen asleep."

According to the report, doctors said Ana-Maria resulted from the interrupted fetal development of what would have been identical twin girls. The twins weighed about eight pounds at birth.

They were born in a provincial hospital to a 23-year-old woman who already had one normal child by the same father, BTA said. Neither the hospital nor the mother was identified.

BTA did not give the date of the twins' birth or their condition.

COMPLETE STOCK MARKET INDEX

Mart Climbs In Trading

NEW YORK (AP) — Stock prices rose for the fourth straight day Friday, paced by broad gains among blue-chip issues on the heels of President Reagan's appeal for tax and spending cuts and a warning that failure to enact his program would lead to an "economic calamity."

The Dow Jones average of 30 industrials rose 5.54 points to 952.30. For the week, which included a 15.02 point plunge Monday, the average gained 5.03 points.

Advances outnumbered declines by an almost 2:1 margin on the New York Stock Exchange. Big Board volume totaled 45.82 million shares, against 45.32 million Thursday.

Analysts said Reagan's nationally televised address on the economy Thursday night, while offering no new programs, was viewed as encouraging.

Newton Zinder said that the stock market has often lost ground following a presidential address, but that the financial community was "pleased by the tone of the address, which was kind of inspirational," he added, however.

Larry Wachtel of Bache Halsey Stuart Shields said, "Maybe the Reagan speech turned on some money managers."

Continental Airlines topped the active list as of the 4 p.m. close of the NYSE, up 1/4 at 11 1/4, including a block of 455,000 shares changing hands at 10 1/4 and a block of 380,000 shares trading at 11 1/4.

An administrative law judge had earlier urged the Civil Aeronautics Board to approve the proposed merger of Continental and Western Airlines. Western was up 1/4 at 9 1/4.

The Dow Jones industrial average had been up as much as 9.30 points earlier Friday, but lost ground in what Zinder characterized as cautious trading that often precedes a weekend and the late-Friday release of money supply data by the Federal Reserve. After the market closed, the Fed reported a $2.6 billion decline in M1B, a measure of the nation's money supply that includes cash in circulation and checking-type accounts in financial institutions. The Fed also said that in December, its policy-making set a lower growth target for M1B for the first three months of this year, indicating further credit tightening. At the time of that meeting, interest rates were heading toward record-high levels.

In other economic developments, the Labor Department said the nation's unemployment rate remained unchanged at 7.4 percent in January. Murray Weidenbaum, the president's designee to head the Council of Economic Advisers, said the figure is "further evidence our economy appears to be stuck on a plateau."

While the prime lending rate remained unchanged at 19 1/2 percent, several New York banks cut their broker loan rates — the interest charged for loans in security transactions — to 18 1/2 percent from 19 percent.

Standard & Poor's index of 400 industrial stocks picked up 1.21 to 148.13, and S&P's 500-stock composite index rose 0.97 to 130.60.

Among other active airline industry issues, American Airlines rose 1/4 to 11 1/4, but UAL, the parent of United Airlines, fell 1/4 to 23; and Boeing dropped 1/4 to 37.

General Motors was up 1/4 at 48 1/4; International Business Machines gained 1/4 to 64 1/4; American Telephone & Telegraph rose 1/4 to 52 1/4; Standard Oil of California was up 1/4 to 90 1/4; and U.S. Steel advanced 1/4 to 27 1/4.

The NYSE's composite index for all of its listed common stocks rose 0.52 to 74.83.

At the American Stock Exchange, the market value index gained 5.25 at 347.43. The NASDAQ composite index for the over-the-counter market rose 1.58 to 197.87.

Study On Unusual Names Conducted

By the Editors of Psychology Today

If you are named after your Aunt Sophronia, are a "boy named Sue," or have a Roman numeral after your name, you may think your parents cursed you for life.

Indeed, various studies have shown that most people dislike unusual names, and that people with unusual names are more likely than conventionally named people to be unpopular, flunk out of Harvard, or show signs of psychosis.

But hold! A new study shows that unusually named people seem to reveal the same kinds of personalities as people with garden-variety names, at least on written personality tests.

The researcher has a fairly unusual name himself, Richard L. Zweigenhaft. He is a psychologist at Guilford College in North Carolina. He and two colleagues obtained a test group of people with unusual first names by picking out all the names that appeared only once on a computer listing of the 2,319 men and 284 women who entered Wesleyan University between 1966 and 1973. All "foreign" names and any familiar ones that happened by chance to turn up only once, such as Jason or Lorraine, were weeded out by a panel of 20 Guilford College undergraduates.

That left 82 males with first names like Wales and Elbridge, and 34 females with names like Eugenie and Lizette.

The researchers randomly selected a control group of students with more common names from the same enrollment list, and compared the score the two groups achieved on the California Psychological Inventory (CPI), a standard measure of personality characteristics which all the Wesleyan students had taken.

The scores of unusually named males did not differ significantly from those of their commonly named peers. The unusually named women scored slightly higher than the control group on 6 of the CPI's 18 traits, including "sociability," "social presence" or poise and self-confidence, "achievement via conformance" or the ability to take directions when it is positive to do so, and "psychological mindedness," or sensitivity to and interest in other people's needs.

Turning to sexually misleading names, such as that of a male named Lynn, and sexually ambiguous names such as Jean and Ronnie, the researchers once again set up two comparison groups from the Wesleyan lists. Again, the men and women with the sexually confusing names scored no differently on the CPI than their commonly named counterparts.

At Wesleyan, at least, Zweigenhaft and his colleagues conclude, "neither men nor women appear to be at a disadvantage as a result of having an unusual or sexually ambiguous first name."

But men with "Jr." attached to their names seem to be an exception. They scored significantly lower than men whose names ended with the Roman numerals III or IV.

Why? The researchers speculate that Oliver Barrett IV's see themselves as valuable links in a long chain of tradition, while males trailing "Jr." have to deal with a particularly insistent reminder of the days when they were not only younger but also smaller and lower in status than the original.

Birth-Control Device May Help Catholics

LONDON (AP) — Four scientists here have reported the development of an electronic computer that signals a woman's period of fertility — an advance that could help Roman Catholics practicing non-artificial birth control.

A sensitive thermometer that reads minute variations in a woman's temperature determines when she is infertile.

For Roman Catholics obedient to the church's strictures against artificial birth control, the only acceptable form of contraception is the rhythm method, which also is based on determining the period of infertility.

Father Anton Mowat, a spokesman for the Roman Catholic Church in England and Wales, said the new device "would be perfectly acceptable for use by Catholic couples as it does not interfere with the process of the transmission of life."

"It is not essentially different from any of the other methods which are acceptable to the church, and in fact it is obviously easier and sounds more accurate."

A Vatican spokesman, the Rev. Romeo Panciroli, said the Vatican would not comment until it had seen the details of the plan.

The inventors — a World Health Organization team of three Britons and an American — call the device an "intelligence thermometer," and say it has proved 100 percent reliable in recording the fertility cycles of 500 women who took part in tests.

Dr. Heinz Wolff, 52-year-old head of the bio-engineering unit of the Medical Research Council here, described the "intelligence thermometer" Thursday.

The woman places the thermometer in her mouth for three minutes. A lead connects the thermometer to a bedside clock containing a micro-chip computer which gives a green "go ahead" light when her temperature indicates she is infertile.

The researchers said that besides helping Catholics obedient to the church's dictates, the invention would be useful to couples who do not want to use mechanical methods and to women worried about the effects of the pill.

"This method can never be as safe as the pill or a mechanical contraceptive," Wolff said. "It depends on voluntary abstinence for the fertile period which is about half the month."

"We will be able to get the packaging down much smaller," said Wolff in a telephone interview. It could be contained in, say, a necklace which the woman wears on her person.

The thermometer and clock will cost between $120 and $240 initially but only about $24 when mass produced, said Wolff.

Robert Abrams of the University of Florida Medical College, Gainesville, Fla., worked on the project during a one-year sabbatical at the center in Harrow, northeast London. The four worked on the device part-time for two years.

About 100 of the thermometers will be supplied to British family planning clinics within the next six months and more substantial numbers are to go on sale by the end of the year. The WHO also plans to distribute them in Third World Countries.

"As far as we know, we are the first people to develop the device," Wolff said.

"But I've had letters from several organizations, particularly in the United States, who are clearly working along similar lines. So if we wanted to market it in the United States, we would have to reach some agreement on patents."

"We haven't, of course, found a new contraceptive method. We've computerized something that people have been doing using paper and pencil charts for years. Like when calculators were invented it didn't change the seven times table."

Admitted Killer Goes Free On Technicality

BALTIMORE (AP) — A man who admitted killing his girlfriend's infant son by throwing him down an 11-story trash chute was freed by a court Friday on the grounds that his confession came 12 minutes too late.

State's Attorney William A. Swisher called the release of James McClain, 25, "a travesty of justice" and called him "a very dangerous man."

McClain was convicted and sentenced to life in prison in connection with the Sept. 11, 1976, death of 10-month-old Phil Muffin Thomas. His conviction and sentence were later upheld by the Maryland Court of Special Appeals.

However, in a later case, the Court of Appeals ruled that a defendant had to be taken before a court commissioner within 24 hours of arrest or the state could not use subsequent confessions. That ruling was found to be retroactive in McClain's case.

McClain admitted killing the child because he thought his girlfriend, 18-year-old Debora Thomas was seeing another man.

"I cuddled Muffin up in my arms. He was still sleeping . . . the confession read 'I walked him . . . to the garbage opening. I laid him in the opening and just let him go,'" McClain said in his confession.

But McClain's confession ended 24 hours and 12 minutes after his arrest, according to H. Gary Bass, an assistant state's attorney.

Swisher blasted the court's ruling allowing McClain to go free and predicted the man "will most likely cause us problems in the future."

"This is the type of thing that confuses the public and makes us look foolish in the eyes of the public," Swisher told Judge Martin B. Greenfield.

Friday's Criminal Court proceedings here marked the first time in which photographers were allowed in that court under a new experimental state law.

DOLPHIN PROJECT

KARACHI, Pakistan (AP) — The Pakistan government has set up a wildlife program to preserve some 350 dolphins living in a 100-mile-long stretch of the Indus river, government wildlife authorities said Friday. They said the number of dolphins had more than doubled in the past seven years and that the government may invite foreign dolphin specialists to guide them on increasing the population. The dolphins live in the river between the Giddu and Sukker dams in Pakistan's Sind province, the officials said.

Painting Could Provide Medical Clues

CHICAGO (AP) — A study of portraits painted by Peter Paul Rubens has led medical experts to speculate that his subjects — and perhaps the Flemish master himself — suffered from rheumatoid arthritis long before the disease was known to exist.

If true, Rubens' ailment would amount to the oldest case history of the disease on record — about 200 years earlier than some think — and could help medical sleuths shed some light on why the disease appears.

The cause of the painful inflammation of joints has eluded physicians to this day. But it has been associated with modern life since no evidence of the disease had been reported earlier than the last century.

The implication is that "if something came on less than 200 years ago its cause is something having to do with the Industrial Revolution — that environment has something to do with it," said Dr. George Ehrlich, a specialist at the Albert Einstein Medical Center in Philadelphia. "The idea that rheumatoid arthritis occurred earlier would take some of the more recent environmental factors out of possibility as a cause."

In a study published by Ehrlich and three Belgian physicians in the Feb. 6 edition of the Journal of the American Medical Association, arthritis specialists surveyed later paintings by Rubens, who lived 1577-1640.

They found in works he did during the last 30 years of his life evidence of same lesions, swollen hand and wrist joints familiar to the millions who suffer the disease today.

"The paintings seem to portray changes in Rubens' paintings that rarely occur in other diseases and the changes occur chronologically," Ehrlich said.

"As artists often pose an individual to paint the face but fill in other features later, it's possible they filled in the hands with changing appearance of one of artists," he said, adding that often master painters were aided by a number of assistants.

"It's possible that one of the artists — perhaps even Rubens himself — had progressive rheumatoid arthritis. Not only does that help us learn more about the artists, but it will help gain understanding of the disease itself," he said.

Experts have known that artists in recent times suffered the disease — most notably the French impressionist Renoir. He painted the hands of his subjects more shapeless as his own disease progressed.

The physicians who conducted the survey also noted a change in the way Rubens painted the hands of subjects in paintings. For example in 1609, he depicted the familiar swelling of knuckle joints in the hands of his "St. Matthew."

By the time Rubens painted "Holy

AILMENT'S BRUSH WITH HISTORY — Detail of St. Anne's hand, right, shows swollen joints and wrist which has medical experts to speculate that subjects of Peter Paul Rubens, and perhaps the Flemish master himself, suffered from rheumatoid arthritis long before the disease was known to exist. "The Holy Family with St. Anne," now hanging in the North Carolina Museum of Art at Raleigh, was painted by Rubens between 1633 and 1635. (AP Laserphoto)

Family With St. Anne" between 1633 and 1635, he depicted the saint with what the study called "major deformities" — swelling joints and the clearly swollen wrists typical of the disease.

In later self-portraits Rubens either omits his hands or hid them in the folds of clothing — a trick also later used by Renoir.

Letters and documents of the time which refer to Rubens' painful attacks of "gout," and occasional paralysis of his hands led researchers to inquire further about evidence, Ehrlich said.

Thai Navy Ready To Chase Pirates

SONGKHLA, Thailand (AP) — The Thai navy, with U.S. aid, began a program of air and sea operations here Friday in efforts to seize Thai pirates said to be robbing and raping large numbers of Vietnamese boat people in the Gulf of Thailand.

According to a U.S. Embassy official attending opening ceremonies at the anti-piracy center here, the U.S. government provided $2 million for the program by underwriting it for six months, donating two aircraft and refurbishing an armed Coast Guard cutter.

The Thai navy had been virtually powerless to intervene with its small number of vessels deployed on patrols near the Cambodian and Malaysian borders.

Raiders, Aggies Seek Respectability

By CHUCK McDONALD
Assistant Sports Editor
COLLEGE STATION — Call it A Tale of Two Teams.

Two teams seeking to regain respectability, Texas Tech would desperately like to win its second straight road game of the season (after gaining its first road victory Tuesday in Fort Worth) while Texas A&M would just like to win its second in a row — something the Aggies haven't managed to do since December.

Adding flames to the fire is the fact that today's 2:40 p.m. matchup between Tech and A&M here at G. Rollie White Coliseum will be televised regionally by NBC-TV.

Ironically, the last time these two teams met it was also a TV special. The Raiders won that one by a 72-70 count, but it was Tech's only victory in four television appearances this season.

The Raiders, winners of two in a row, will bring a 5-5 Southwest Conference mark into today's game (11-9 overall) while the Aggies are a disappointing 2-7 in defense of their league crown and 9-9 on the season.

But, points out Tech coach Gerald Myers, just take a look at what the Aggies did the last time out.

In A&M's last outing, the Aggies throttled previously powerful Baylor by a lopsided 84-59 margin. In that game Rynn Wright scored 24 points and had 17 rebounds while Vernon Smith tossed in 20 points and had 12 boards.

"The way Rynn and Vernon go," said coach Shelby Metcalf, "is the way the Aggies go. I thought Rynn was fantastic against Baylor."

"If they (A&M) played like that all the time," said losing Baylor coach Jim Haller, "they'd be undefeated and ranked in the top ten."

But the Aggies aren't undefeated, in the top ten or even the top half of the SWC race. They remain an enigma. With 6-9 Smith, 6-6 Wright and 6-9 Claude Riley, A&M boasts three excellent inside players — probably three of the best in the conference.

But the backcourt has troubled Metcalf all year. But senior Tryron Ladson has finally been benched in favor of junior college transfer Milton Woodley, who'll start against Tech today, and freshman Reggie Roberts has played decently all year.

With Rudy Woods and Ladson completely out of the picture, this will be a different team than the Raiders defeated early in January. Last Saturday's game against Baylor was testimony of that.

"I didn't see any films of that game," said Tech's Myers, "but the information I got was that A&M just really dominated them inside with their big guys. The important thing for them was that Rynn Wright had a great game."

"All three of those guys," added Myers, "Rynn, Vernon and Riley, are all playing good right now."

And even when the Aggies are playing poorly, the trip to noisy little G' Rollie White is never pleasant.

"A&M's got a good team; I don't care what their record is," Myers said flatly. "And they're always hard to beat down here. With these crowds in here, they're tough to beat even when they don't have a good team."

Smith, who became the all-time scorer in A&M history against Baylor, leads the Aggies in both scoring (12.8) and rebounding (8.3). In the previous meeting with Tech, Smith was red-hot from the outside and scored 28 points. Wright (12.7 ppg and 7.3 rpg) and Riley (11.0 ppg and 6.3 rpg) are also averaging in double figures.

Tech will go with its new lineup of 6-8 senior Ralph Brewster, 6-6 senior Ben Hill and 6-6 junior Clarence Swannegan inside along with 6-4 Jeff Taylor and 5-10 Bubba Jennings outside. Swannegan and Taylor are each scoring at a 13.0 per game clip and lead the team although freshman Jennings is close behind with a 12.0 average.

The Raiders, who lost five straight before reeling off back-to-back wins, would desperately like to stretch their win streak to three games. Prior to Tuesday's win over TCU in Fort Worth, the Raiders had lost 10 straight road games.

A key in the Raiders' recent resurgence has been the inside scoring, primarily from Swannegan. Earlier in the season Tech had relied almost exclusively on outside shooting.

"We've got to be able to get the ball inside against A&M," admitted Myers. "You've got to have balance in any game — that's what we're looking for."

"We want to shoot from outside and get some inside baskets as well. A&M's strength is inside where they've got the big guys and we'll have to hit from outside to keep them loosened up."

Around the rest of the SWC tonight the league-leading Houston Cougars host Texas. SMU will visit Baylor and Arkansas will be at TCU. Rice plays Southwestern in a non-conference tilt.

Tech's next game will be on Tuesday when the Raiders host Rice in the Municipal Coliseum.

RAIDER CAGE NOTES: Tech owns a one-game series lead against A&M after the earlier victory this season gave the Raiders a 28-27 margin. But the Raiders are only 11-19 in College Station. Senior Ralph Brewster has hauled in an impressive 27 rebounds in Tech's last three contests. Brewster had 12 against TCU on Tuesday and that moved him into the number seven spot on the all-time rebounding list at Tech. Brewster owns 602 boards in his career, still way short of the school record of 1,330 set by Jim Reed. After 20 games, Swannegan and Taylor have each scored exactly 259 points...

Source Says Insider Keyed Scam

LOS ANGELES (AP) — False entries and transfers of funds — not the sophisticated use of computers — siphoned away $21.3 million in an embezzlement scheme Wells Fargo Bank blames on a bank official and Muhammad Ali Professional Sports Inc., it was disclosed Friday.

"This was not something where people pressed a button and had a big computer scheme that all of a sudden yielded money," a bank source told The Associated Press. "It's just people falsifying accounts — transferring money manually.

It was not sophisticated in the sense that computers were used."

The source, who spoke only with the assurance his name would not be used, also said FBI agents began interviewing Wells Fargo Bank officials on Friday after seizing records from MAPS' Santa Monica offices last week.

So far, only a civil suit seeking restitution of the allegedly embezzled $21.3 million has been filed by Wells Fargo. No criminal charges have been filed in the case.

However, Los Angeles attorney Paul Caruso said Friday he was prepared to handle any action arising out of the scandal, criminal or civil, on behalf of missing MAPS chairman Harold J. Smith. Caruso said a "representative friend" of Smith had contacted him and that Caruso was waiting to hear from Smith.

"We may be suing some people for slander and libel. If I am retained, we may cause the catastrophic collapse of the Wells Fargo empire," said Caruso, who has a reputation for a flamboyant courtroom style.

He declined to identify Smith's intermediary by name but said he was the missing promoter's "best friend."

Smith, 37, who resurfaced this week for telephone interviews with various sportswriters, said he fled to Switzerland with his family after receiving death threats because he knew too much about a banking swindle. He alleged the scheme was perpetrated by several Wells Fargo officials who took $200 million to $300 million over several years. Bank officials called the story "preposterous."

The bank and experts in the banking security field have kept silent on how the embezzlement might have been brought off. Wells Fargo vice president George Caulfield said "I can't comment on that" Friday when asked again what method was used for the embezzlement.

Responding to Wells Fargo chairman Richard Cooley's earlier comment implying computers may have been used in the fraud, Caulfield carefully declined to characterize the embezzlement as such.

"Obviously everything you do in a bank these days involves a computer but you would not consider this a computer fraud," he said.

Raider Track Squad To Run In OU Meet

OKLAHOMA CITY (Special) — James Mays and Greg Lautenslager will be after NCAA championship qualifying times today when a handful of Texas Tech's indoor men's track team members compete in the Oklahoma City Indoor Invitational.

Mays and Lautenslager each set school records last weekend in their specialties — the 800-yard and two-mile runs, respectively — and will be out to qualify for the NCAA championships in today's meet which begins at 9 a.m. and continues all day.

The 10 Raiders who competed in the Dallas meet will compete in Oklahoma City and will be joined by pole vaulter Craig Wilson, sprinter Leonard Jarvis and distance runner Bert Torres.

Edwin Newsome is entered in the 440-yard run, Kenneth Storey will compete in the high jump and Thomas Selmon will see action in the long jump and triple jump.

Other Raider entries will be Dean Crowell in the 60-yard high hurdles, Howard Loftis in the pole vault, Mitchum Burris in the 440, Greg Rolie in the 600-yard run, Norman Hill in the 60 and the mile-relay team of Mays, Newsome, Rolie and Crowell.

Raider Offensive Line Looks For Consistency

Today's third part of a four-part series taking a close look at what type of personnel new Texas Tech football coach Jerry Moore has to build a team with in 1981 deals with the offensive line.

By NORVAL POLLARD
Executive Sports Editor

On given Saturdays in 1980, the Texas Tech Red Raiders could seemingly move the football at will. But there were other Saturdays when the Raiders couldn't get past the line of scrimmage, much less mount any type of offensive control.

That offensive inconsistency, on the field and on the sidelines, played a major role in Tech's up-and-down 5-6 campaign and saddled former head coach Rex Dockery with a heavy load of criticism. Why could the Raiders roll for 302 yards against North Carolina and two weeks later against Baylor barely crack the 100-yard mark? How could Tech managed only 130 yards offense at home against Houston and then exploded for 343 yards against Arkansas on the road a week later?

These questions weighed heavily with Red Raider followers. They never knew which offense, the good one or the bad one, would take the field from one week to the next. Dockery, too, could never find the answers during the course of the season.

New Tech coach Jerry Moore has already announced plans to salvage Dockery's veer offense and make the transition to the I formation. That change begins in six weeks when spring training begins.

A change appears to be in order because the Raiders and the veer never really hit it off on the right foot. The players Dockery had at his disposal never seemed properly suited for the veer. Eight wins in two years backs that claim.

But the change will do little good unless Moore and his offensive staff can also teach confidence and consistency. Those lessons loom as the most important for the Raiders' offense because the mental errors, missed assignments and general inconsistent play never allowed Tech to be nothing more than a so-so college football team in 1980.

The most obvious inconsistencies in 1980 occurred on the offensive line. Mental mistakes, such as penalties at crucial times, and blown assignments have a way of being very obvious when they occur on the offensive front and the Raiders proved that at times.

But 1980's miscues are history. What Moore and his staff have to do is build confidence in the offensive trenches. And the Raiders have plenty of veteran talent manning the front five positions.

The shift to the I formation will bring about many changes in the Raiders' offensive blocking scheme. On many plays, the linemen will have to sustain their blocks a second longer because the running backs are two to three yarders deeper in the I backfield. There will be more trap blocking and more plays that involve pulling guards.

In 1981, the Raiders return starters in four of the five line spots. They includes strong tackle Robert Caughlin, quick tackle Vic White, strong guard Matt Harlien and center Jeff Crombie.

At many times, Tech's offensive front operated at less than 100 percent last fall. Caughlin was constantly bothered by a bad back. Harlien suffered a hip pointer and a deep thigh bruise. Crombie played extremely well with a pinched nerve in his shoulder. If those four can remain relatively well this fall, it could do wonders for Tech's offensive attack.

Crombie, a 6-3, 225-pound senior, was moved from line-backer to guard during spring training last March. During the fall, Crombie was moved to center behind Denny Harris. When Harris injured a knee during the final of practice before the season-opener against UTEP, Crombie was thrust into a starting role.

Even though he lacked experience, Crombie was one of Tech's most consistent performers a year ago. He is quick, strong and picks up blitzes well.

Crombie does not have a starting berth sewed up, though. Harris, a 6-2, 255-pound senior, also returns. Harris started at guard in 1979 before being switched to center. He is exceptionally strong, drives off the ball well and does a good job pass blocking.

Westerners Ease By Mustangs

By RUSS PARSONS
Avalanche-Journal Sports Staff
It took Lubbock High a decade of trying to finally win back-to-back district games, so predictably it didn't come easily.

The Westerners struggled with Coronado all night before they could finally gain five straight free throws to ice a 54-47 victory. Combined with Tuesday night's 57-54 win over Hereford, it makes Lubbock High 13-13 on the year and in a tie for second place in the conference.

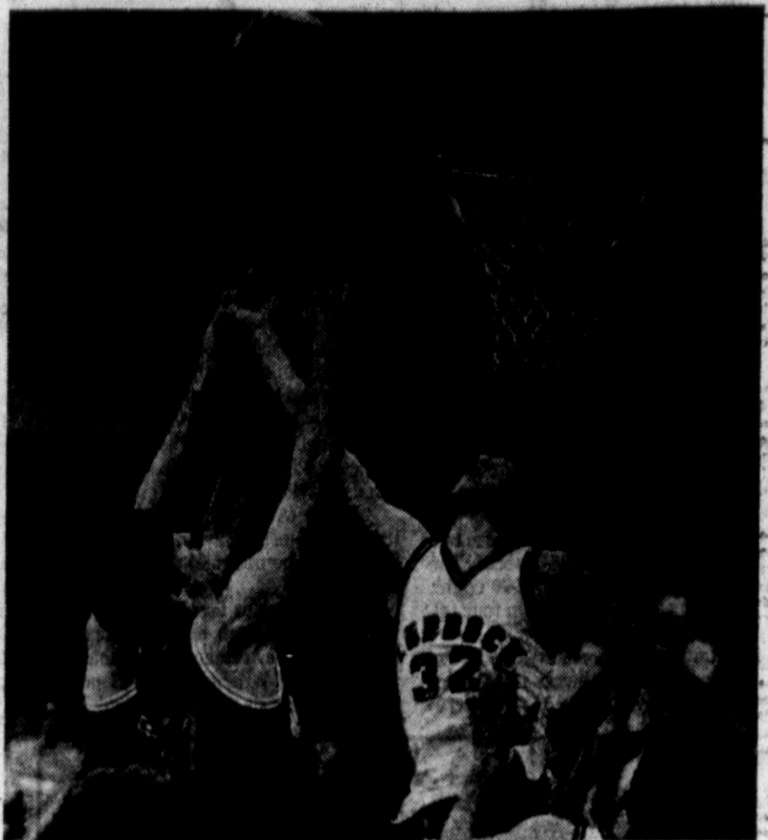

But things almost didn't work out that way. Big John Lord hit back-to-back buckets at 4:02 to put Coronado ahead 43-42 late in the game. It was only the second Mustang lead of the second half and it was to be the last. John Frankhouser and Brad Ruff combined for a LHS run of four points to give the Westerners a 46-43 advantage with 2:45 left in the game. Then, after Kevin Wilcox hit a free throw at 2:43, Kirk Cole knocked in a reverse layup and Charlie Quade made the front end of a one-and-one at the 1:40 mark to take a 49-44 lead. Cody Love cut the advantage back to 49-45 with a free throw but then LHS ran off five points, all at the charity line, to cinch the victory. Kirk Cole led Lubbock High's scorers with 13 points but the Westerners placed three others in double figures. John Frankhouser scored 12, Charlie Quade 11 and Brad Ruff 10. Lord and Love combined for 34 points to account for the majority of Coronado's total. Each tallied 17. Although the Mustangs outshot Lubbock High 23-17 from the field, they fell way short in the foul-shooting department. Coronado was whistled for 26 fouls, sending Lubbock High to the line 35 times. The Westerners made 20. On the other hand, LHS was called for only 15 fouls and Coronado shot only eight free throws, making a three.

Lubbock High took a 24-21 advantage into the lockerroom at halftime, but Coronado scored eight straight points out of the bucket to go up 29-24 and the teams played chase down to the wire.

MHS Girls Sneak Past Hereford

They ought to put a plaque about 15 feet from the basket in the floor of Monterey's gym. It should say "Kamie Ethridge spent the night here, Feb. 6, 1981." The remarkable Miss Ethridge clicked on an amazing 18 of 20 foul shots Friday night, including the last seven points her team scored, to take a 75-70 victory over Hereford.

The win gives the Plainsmen a clean sweep of the Herd this year and keeps them atop the District 4-5A standings with a 25-1 overall mark. The first time the teams met, in Hereford, Monterey barely survived for a 54-49 victory. Not much changed the second time around.

In fact, the Herd held a 64-62 advantage with almost half of the fourth quarter.

er gone. But that's when things began to slip away from the Whitefaces.

Tracy Muehlbrad and Miss Ethridge hit back-to-back baskets and Andrea Moore sank a pair of free throws at 3:17 to put MHS up by four. Terri Harkins and Lori Albracht countered to tie the game at 66-66 with 2:30 left.

But that's when Miss Ethridge started the last part of her long stay at the foul line. She hit a pair at 2:28, two more at 1:42, another at 1:13 and finally two more with 10 seconds left to make the final.

That finish really doesn't do credit to a game as exciting as Friday night's. The score was tied 12 times and the lead changed hands 16.

In a contest that matched up two of the best presses in the state, there was a total of 65 turnovers. Predictably, they played a large part in the outcome of the game. Hereford committed 33 and Monterey scored on 13 of them and the Plainsmen committed 32 with the Herd tallying at the end of 12.

But perhaps the greatest single factor in the game were the fouls. Hereford was whistled for 27, including five on both Lori Albracht and Joyce High, while Monterey was tagged with only 12.

As a result, Monterey swished an impressive 29 of 37 free throw attempts while Hereford made good on only a third of their six attempts.

Miss Ethridge led all scorers with 32 points but two other Plainsmen joined her in double figures. Alayna Gilmore scored 11 points while Kamie's elder sister Kriss scored 10.

Kriss and Miss Muehlbrad were both reported to be suffering from mononucleosis. Two of Monterey's top scorers, they totaled 18 points.

Louise Mays led Hereford with 18 points. Miss Albracht scored 14 before fouling out with 2:28 left in the game and Debora Rogers tallied 13.

Estacado Boys Gun Down Dumas 67-48

By RAY GLASS
Avalanche-Journal Sports Staff
About the only thing that went wrong for Estacado Friday night was junior pivot man Rodney Guyton watched the final 12 minutes of a 67-48 Matador thrashing of Dumas from the blue plastic seats in the EHS gym.

The 6-foot-2 starter, Estacado's third-leading scorer had three fouls at halftime, his fourth just 13 seconds into the second half and put his warmup jacket on for good with 4:08 to play in the third quarter. Guyton finished the night with one rebound and no points but had a ringside view of a vintage Mat game — press the opponent into frustration and shoot, shoot, shoot.

The District 1-4A game was the final league contest of the first-half of the loop race for both teams, and Estacado, which once was 2-0 in 1-4A competition, finished the half at 3-3 and 13-13 overall. The Demons slipped to 1-5 and 13-11.

The Mats turned a close contest (it was tied four times and saw five lead changes in the first half) into a runaway after intermission behind a full-court pressure defense.

Dumas turned the ball over 11 times in the third period, eight times in the final eight minutes and 27 times for the game. But it was in the third period, after Dumas battled back from a 40-33 deficit to only a three-point deficit at 40-37, that the Mats put on a vintage Estacado show.

Three steals in the final 43 seconds of the quarter resulted in a pair of Kenneth Cade face-eraser jumpers and a James Barnett layin which, sandwiched around Randy Herron's 15-foot jump shot, gave the Mats a 46-39 advantage heading into the fun period.

Two more steals at the beginning of the final quarter meant buckets from Cade and Barnett, a 50-39 bulge and time for the Mats to stop their stuff. Dumas sliced the lead to 56-44 but failed to score for three minutes and the Mats went on a 9-0 tear to put the game away.

Barnett, as usual, led the Mats in scoring, tossing in a variety of jumpers, layins and behind-the-backboard prayers good for 28 points. Cade added 18. Mark Kehoe scored 15 for the Demons and Mark Payne had 11, 10 in the first quarter.

Estacado held a commanding 45-30 edge in rebounds as Jerry Gray smothered 16 misses and 6-4 Danny Boyd had nine boards to go with his nine points.

Monterey Boys Dismantle Hereford

Gary Hodges and Ian Hyslop combined for 33 points as the Monterey Plainsmen breezed past Hereford 66-42 Friday night.

The decision gives Monterey a victory over every other District 4-5A team. The Plainsmen now stand 22-6 while Hereford, which has lost to every conference team, falls to 3-22.

Hyslop scored 17 points before fouling out. Hodges chipped in 16 and substitute Mark Lambert added another 11 for Monterey. Allen Wartes was the only Hereford player to break into double figures, scoring 11.

The Plainsmen jumped to a 15-10 first-period advantage, then steadily built up the margin. MHS led 30-22 at halftime and 51-31 by the end of three.

Eagle Boys Roll To Win

MIDLAND (Special) — With the regional tournament coming up next week, the Lubbock Christian High boys' basketball team knew it was high time it started playing impressive ball.

The Eagles couldn't have impressed coach Don Walker more Friday night as they ripped Midland Christian 98-45.

"We tried a lot of different looks because we knew we had to get ready for the TAPS regionals," Walker said. "We were confident going into the game and played as well as we have all season long."

"I'm real pleased with the way this team has come along. Early in the year I thought we'd only go .500, but we've come a long way. Now we know we have a chance at winning the TAPS championship.

LCHS, which had five players to score in double figures, was led by Pat Phelan's 19 points. All but two of those points came during a third-quarter surge that netted 36 points. Scott Phelan hit for 14 points. Barry Sikes, Robert Hinds and Mike Self added 10 points apiece.

Canyon Surges Past Panther Boys 88-70

CANYON (Special) — The Canyon Eagles used a 55-31 explosion during the second and third quarters to swamp Dunbar 88-70 here Friday night and win the first half of the District 1-4A boys' basketball race with a perfect 6-0 mark.

The Eagles, 18-8 for the season, led 18-14 after eight minutes against the Panthers, who were battling the affects of the flu which had sidelined four players during the weeks.

Canyon then outscored Dunbar 27-17 in the second period to assume a 45-31 halftime edge and kept the pressure on in the third quarter, ripping their guests 28-14 for an overwhelming 73-45 margin entering the final eight minutes.

The Panthers rallied briefly with a 25-15 final period but the effort was too little and they slipped to 1-5 for the first-half of the district race and 6-19 overall.

Senior point guard Kendall Walling, the Eagles' leading scorer, paced the club with 26 points while forward David Harbin chipped in 23.

Walling's Dunbar counterpart, junior Roland Comacho, led a three-player double-figures scoring effort with 18 points on seven field goals and four of six free throws. Tyrone Young and Kirk Coats each flipped in 10 for the Panthers.

South Plains Trips McMurry Women

LEVELL (Special) — Lynett Joiner hit 17 points, Jan Elliott canned 16 and Rebecca Melton scored 14 Friday night to guide the South Plains College women to a 71-63 college basketball victory over McMurry.

The victory makes SPC 8-12 on the season.

McMurry, paced by Traci Klasek's 20 points, is now 10-14.

Santa Fe Sleepwalks Past Slumbering Chaparrals

By ERIC GALE

Avalanche-Journal Sports Staff
It was a little like being married to the boss's daughter: you don't have to work very hard in order to succeed.

The College of Santa Fe Knights sleepwalked to a 64-58 victory over Lubbock Christian College Friday night in the LCC fieldhouse.

This was not a fair fight. The rangy Raider Women Battle Aggies

COLLEGE STATION (Special) — The Texas Tech women's basketball team will try to continue its dominance over Texas A&M when it takes on the Aggies today at 12:15 p.m.

The Red Raiders have defeated the Aggies twice this season, by scores of 63-60 and 62-51, and are coming off an impressive victory over Oklahoma University, which they defeated 69-56 Monday night at home.

Coach Donna Wick is expected to start the identical lineup she used in Monday night's game. Reina Cherry, averaging 2.6 points per game, will be the lone guard; Gwen McCray, averaging 12.7 points per game, and Tammy Anderson, who is scoring at a 5.5 clip, will be the forwards while the posts positions will be handled by Cathy Freberg, who is averaging 7.9 points and 7.7 rebounds per outing, and Carolyn Thompson, the team's leading scorer with a 20.7 average. Miss Thompson was selected second-team all-Southwest Conference after the Southwest Conference Women's Basketball Tournament last weekend.

It has also been announced that the Raiders will host the first round of the state AIAW tournament next weekend and will play the Aggies one more time.

Pioneers Outlast Dallas Baptist 68-56

PLAINVIEW (Special) — The Wayland Baptist men's basketball team placed three players in double figures as it rolled past Dallas Baptist 68-56 Friday night.

Kelly Kitchens tossed in 21 points to lead Wayland and all scorers while teammates Dennis Johnson and Rick Cooper contributed 11 and 10 points, respectively.

Wayland, now 15-14 for the season, led 31-26 at halftime and outscored the Dallas cager, now 18-11, 37-30 over the final 20 minutes.

Knights did not have to stand up straight in order to stand tall in comparison to the undersized Chaparrals, who fell to 7-19 with the loss.

And, the Knights did not have to play particularly well in order to win. Quality basketball was not a prerequisite to beating LCC on this occasion.

The opening tipoff was delayed 20 minutes because Santa Fe's team bus had taken a wrong turn en route to Lubbock but, in the first half especially, it was the Chaps who seemed uncertain of time and place.

They hit only 16 percent of their first-half field-goal tries, five of 31. The Knights, who dragged their feet for the game's final 15 minutes after building a 39-23 lead, hit a mere 32 percent overall, a figure matched by LCC after improved second-half shooting.

"That was the lowest I've ever had a team shoot," LCC coach John Copeland said, of the opening-half. "I don't know what caused that, if it was waiting around for them to get here or what, but we weren't prepared to play. There wasn't much intensity in the first half."

LCC could not stop the Knights' 6-foot-8 center Harold Goodson, who scored 19 points in only 19 minutes of playing time. He was in foul trouble much of the game.

The Chaps fell behind early — they had only one field goal after the game's first 11 minutes — and trailed 34-21 at halftime.

The Knights, after moving ahead by 16 early in the second half, then began to go through the motions as Goodson left with his fourth foul at 17:36.

LCC charged back and, on baskets by Brian Fortner and reserve Vic Sell, moved to within three, 50-47. The comeback continued and, with 3:57 remaining, two Fortner free throws mowed the Knights' lead to one point, 53-51.

Goodson then hit five unanswered points, and a steal and two free throws by Javier Marquez made the score 59-51 with 2:36 left. The Chaps had run out of comeback.

"Boy, they were big ... and Goodson was as good an athlete as we've played,"

Copeland said, "but I was proud of the way we came back in the second half. And I was proud of my reserves, too."

LCC returns to Texas Intercollegiate Athletic Association action when it hosts Tarleton State at 2 p.m. today in the fieldhouse. LCC is 3-4 in the TIAA. TSU is 2-5. The Lady Chaps, 4-3 and 9-13 overall, play the Tarleton women at 4 p.m.

Why we love February 14

The Valentine's Story

The Cupid

Cupid is a little winged child. The legend is that you will fall in love if you are hit by one of his arrows. Thousands of years ago, people in Greece and Rome made up stories or myths to explain the things about life they didn't understand. They worshipped many gods. Cupid was the god of love.

St. Valentine

The story of St. Valentine is a legend, or story coming from the past. According to this legend, there were two St. Valentines. Both lived in Rome about 200 years after Christ. Both were put to death because of their religious beliefs.

Some say St. Valentine was a priest who married couples against the wishes of the Roman emperor. Others say that he was a priest who was sent to prison. While there, he made a blind girl see.

Before he died, he sent a farewell message to the little girl signed, "From your Valentine."

People have been sending valentines for a very long time. This one was sent over 80 years ago.

The cards

The valentine probably was the first greeting card ever sent. Some people say that Charles, Duke of Orleans, probably sent the first valentine in 1415. He wrote love poems to his wife when he was a prisoner in the Tower of London.

Many years later, in the 1700s, sending valentines became popular in England. The English settlers brought the custom to this country. These valentines were beautiful hand-made cards.

Then came the machine-printed cards in 1840. Prices charged for valentines dropped. So did the rate charged for mail. So valentines became even more popular. Today, Valentine's Day is the second most important day for sending greeting cards. Christmas is first.

Roses

For thousands of years, lovers have sent roses to say "I love you."

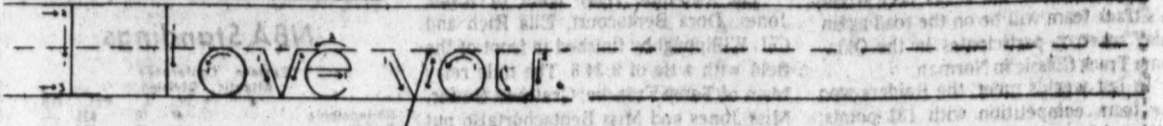

Another Roman myth is that roses sprang up when Cupid spilled a drink that he was carrying to the gods.

Violets

Another Roman myth is that Cupid's mother, Venus, the goddess of love and beauty, turned lovely young girls into violets because she was jealous of them.

Make Your Own Valentines

How to write "I love you" for our littlest readers, with a place to practice.

This is how to draw a dove.

Here's how to draw a rose.

The Paper Box

Look through your paper for other signs that Valentine's Day is on its way.

Lace
When knights of old used to go off to the wars, they often carried their sweetheart's scarf as a symbol of love and romance. This is the reason you see so much lace on Valentine's Day.

Here's how you can make some yourself. Make a fold in a sheet of paper. The paper must be at least 2 inches wide and as long as you need to trim one side of your card. Cut out half-hearts on the folded side.

Cut out scallops on the other edge. Fold it again and cut out half-hearts on the new fold.

I LOVE YOU

Words about love are hidden in the block below. See if you can find: love, helping, giving, sharing, smile, candy, flowers, gifts, cards, ribbons, diamond, kiss, hug, doves, hearts, roses, violets, Cupid, valentines, arrow, red and friend.

ALPHA BETTY

Words that we use often and should know right away are called "sight words." There are eight words in the block below. Can you draw a line from the boxed words to the matching words in the picture? Make flash cards of the words and save them each week.

Meet Carrie Fisher of "The Empire Strikes Back"

At 5 feet, 2 inches tall, and weighing only 90 pounds, tiny Carrie Fisher won herself a big part. She played Princess Leia in "Star Wars" and "The Empire Strikes Back."

Carrie is the daughter of film star Debbie Reynolds and singer Eddie Fisher. She first appeared on stage with her mother. At 16, she had her first real part in a Broadway play.

Next, Carrie appeared in a movie, "Shampoo." She then went to London to study acting for 18 months. When she returned to Hollywood, she was asked to try out for the role of Princess Leia. She won the part over many other young actresses.

"The Empire Strikes Back" takes Princess Leia through many adventures in the fight against the Empire. She falls in love with Han Solo but is separated from him by Darth Vader. We will have to wait until the next "Star Wars" movie to find out what happens.

Between making the two "Star Wars" movies, Carrie was busy working in TV, films and New York plays.

MINI SPY

GOLLY G. BEE FACTS

Girls, do you want to know who your sweetheart will be? Here's what young ladies many years ago used to believe. You could visit a graveyard on Valentine's Day Eve and be able to see a vision of your true love. You could pin five bay leaves on a pillow — four on the corners and one in the center. Then you would dream of your husband-to-be. Look out for the first single male you see on Valentine's Day. He will be your sweetheart. In the past, gloves were often sent as valentine gifts. This was the custom because when a man asked a lady to marry him, he was asking "for her hand." Paper gloves were popular valentine cards, too.

Teacher's Guide
For use by teachers and parents at home and at school.
For use with issue: The Valentine's Story.
Main idea: To familiarize the children with Valentine's Day customs.
Words to present: festival, Lupercalia, Orleans.
Pre-reader and reader:
1. Read the story to the children.
2. Point to the word "valentine." Ask the children to circle the word each time they see it. Note that it starts with the letter "V." Ask them to think of as many "V" words as they can.
3. Discuss the use of the "s" to show possession.
Reader:
1. Ask the children to circle the three countries mentioned in the story. Find them on a world map.
2. Discuss the use of the hyphen to clarify certain words when two words join to form a compound modifier.
To check comprehension, ask the following questions of all ability groups:
1. How did St. Valentine's Day start?
2. Who was St. Valentine?
3. Who sent the first valentine?
4. Who is Cupid?
Page 4: The Mini Page does not wish to encourage children to copy. However, the skills they learn by looking at other art and following step-by-step instructions, will inspire them to be more creative in other art projects. Let them design their own cards this year.

MATH MAZE

Here is a different kind of maze. Start at the center block. Go block to block, up, down or across, through all of the blocks that equal 5 until you reach a corner block equaling 5.

COOKIE RECIPE

Cheese-Toast Heart
What you'll need:
• 2 slices of bread per serving
• butter or margarine
• Several slices of American cheese
What to do:
1. Preheat oven to 400 degrees.
2. Cut a square out of a slice of bread.
3. Using a glass as wide as the bread square, cut a circle out of another slice of bread.
4. Cut circle in half and arrange in heart as shown. Spread with butter.
5. Put hearts on baking sheet and cover with slices of American cheese. Put in oven to melt cheese.
Use a spatula to serve.

Baseball Negotiations Enter Crucial Stage

NEW YORK (AP) — Major League baseball's negotiations move into the critical period next week toward forestalling a player strike that could jeopardize the opening of the season April 8.

"We gave them the gun, we gave them the trigger, it's all up to them," insisted wily Marvin Miller, executive director of the Major League Baseball Players Association, in an interview this week.

"The pistol is in their hands, not ours," countered Ray Grebey, tough negotiating director for baseball's Player Relations Committee. "They (the players) could have pulled the pistol last May if they wanted nothing to happen."

The rival negotiators, two of the best in the business, talk like gunslingers of the Old West as they seek to resolve the knotty compensation issue which was left hanging when the Players Agreement was signed last spring.

It's another showdown at the OK Corral.

The outlook is grim. It looks as if somebody is going to get hurt — mainly, the game itself. Both sides are obstinate. Both sides show little signs of compromise. Pride and perhaps even egos are on the line.

"Frankly, I am not optimistic," said Grebey, once negotiator for General Electric in a labor dispute that resulted in a 101-day strike. "They (the players) want us to cave in. We have been giving away for years now and have little left to give."

Miller sees no brighter prospect on the horizon.

"We are making no progress," he said. "Every time we put a proposal on the table they knock it down. They say, 'Hey, what the hell is this? What are you giving us?'"

"If we offer an idea, they shoot it down. They don't want to explore it."

"Sure," countered Grebey, "but some of the things offered are worthless. Like the plan to set up a cash pool, or kiddy, and parcel out money to the needy clubs at the end of the year. I don't think even the players want that."

In signing a new Players Agreement last May 23 that provided improved salary structures, pensions and ancillary benefits, the negotiators left unresolved the dispute over compensation due those teams losing valuable property through fire agency.

Floyd, Sanudo Tie For San Diego Tourney Lead

SAN DIEGO (AP) — Ray Floyd, a former Masters and PGA champion who says he's playing the best golf of his life, fired a 6-under-par 66 and moved into a tie for the lead Friday after the second round of the $250,000 Wickes-Andy Williams San Diego Open.

"This is the best I've ever played, tee to green, for an extended period of time," Floyd said after his no-bogey mastery of the tough, 7,000-yard South course at the Torrey Pines Golf Club.

Floyd, with a 138 total after playing both the North and South courses, shared the 36-hole lead with Cesar Sanudo, a Mexican native but a long-time resident of San Diego.

Sanudo birdied his final hole with what he called "a very shaky, downhill, five-footer" to finish off a second round 69, also at the South course, which will be the site of the final two rounds Saturday and Sunday.

A single shot off the lead at 137 were Johnny Miller, Jim Simons, Wayne Levi, Tom Jenkins and Ron Streck.

Miller, winner of the Tucson Open earlier this year, shot a 70 in windy, occasionally drizzly weather on the South course. Levi had a 71 at the South. Jenkins and Streck, who shared the first-round lead, each matched par 72 on the South. Simons toured the 6,667-yard North course in 4-under-par 68.

Keith Fergus and Bob Eastwood were next at 138. Fergus matched par 72 on the South and Eastwood shot 66 on the North.

Lubbock's Jeff Mitchell came back from an opening-round 73 to fire a 67 Friday for a 140 total, four strokes off the pace.

Tom Watson, the defending champion and four-time PGA Player of the Year, shot a par 72 on the North course that left him 7 strokes back at 143.

Floyd, winner of 12 tournaments in an 18-year tour career, missed only two greens in his superlative effort over the South course, and played those holes one under par, chipping in for a birdie on the 17th hole.

He birdied three of the par-3 holes, didn't make a bogey and played the back side in 4-under-par 32.

"I'm hitting the ball extremely well, the best ever over a long stretch, particularly on the West Coast," Floyd said. "U-usually, the West Coast is a training session for me, but I worked hard in the off-season to get my game where it is now. It makes the game a lot easier."

Sanudo, a one-time winner in 14 years on and off the tour, was considerably less spectacular, and admitted he was "jittery playing in my hometown. But 69 on the South, I'll take it. I'll take it any day."

Playing well behind Floyd, he got to within a single shot of the lead with a 15-footer on his 13th hole, had a chance to tie but three-putted after reaching a par-5 in two, then gained a share of the top spot with the birdie on his final hole.

JoAnne Carner Tops LPGA Tournament

NORTH MIAMI BEACH, Fla. (AP) — JoAnne Carner carded an eagle 3 on the sixth hole Friday to slip into a 1-stroke lead after 36 holes in the $125,000 Ladies Professional Golf Association's Elizabeth Arden Classic at Turnberry Isle.

Mrs. Carner's 6-under-par 138 total

Tech Tankers

To Host A&M

The Texas Tech women's swimming and diving team will host Texas A&M in the Aquatic Center in a meet which begins at 10 a.m. today.

The Raiders, now 5-4, jetted past the University of Northern Colorado 89-51 and New Mexico State 87-53 last weekend in Las Cruces by winning 12 of 16 events.

Top finishers in last week's action included the 200-yard medley relay team of Janie James, Dara Hembree, Debbie Kaufmann and Dorinda Jung, who came up with a record time of 1:55.20.

Individual honors in the one-meter diving event went to Renee Cox, who qualified for the national pre-qualifying diving meet in March.

was one shot up on Pat Bradley and Pat Meyers.

She hit a two-iron out of the rough and a 12-foot putt for the eagle on the 481-yard sixth hole, then said it woke her up.

"I kind of surprised myself," Mrs. Carner said. "I looked at the leader board and (Mrs.) Bradley was 5-under-par and I had just five holes to play."

"I was out there, just kind of plugging along. I guess it really surprised me because I've played this course so bad for so many years."

Mrs. Carner, who had her best season on the tour last year, winning five events and $186,000, finished 34th here last year.

Jammed in fourth place at 1-under-par 143 were Sally Little, Jan Stephenson, Judy Rankin and 1980 LPGA Player of the Year Beth Daniel.

First-round leader Sandra Post struggled in the rough all day, soaring to a 78 after posting a 3-under 69 on the first 18 holes.

Debbie Massey had the best round Friday, bettering the tournament record 66 set last year with a 7-under-par 65. Miss Massey, who started her round on the back nine, birdied eight of her first 12 holes. She was even par 144 for the tournament.

"After those first 12 holes, I just kept my arms open and said, 'Come to me,'" Miss Massey said. "I had felt terrible after my opening round, so I just went home and slept. When I got up in the morning, I felt great and it never stopped."

The cut was at 151, seven over par. Among the players who didn't make it was Amy Alcott, who shot 152.

Tech Coach Seeks Offensive Line Consistency

Another strong candidate at center is sophomore-to-be Joel Dumas, a 6-4, 220-pounder who saw only junior varsity action in 1980.

Harlien, 6-4 and 270 pounds, is the strongest player on the Tech squad. The junior from Harlingen can bench upwards of 550 pounds. Harlien was making rapid strides before injuries slowed him down. He is favored to retain a starting guard spot, but several obstacles stand in his way.

The first is sophomore Kelly Grammer, a 6-3, 255-pounder from Monterey who improved enough during the course of the season to earn a starting berth ahead of Harlien in the season finale against Arkansas. Grammer's biggest asset is his ability to get off the ball.

Listed behind Grammer and Harlien on the Tech post-season depth chart is junior Blake Feldt, a 6-4, 235-pounder who Dockery thought would be an excellent linemen with a couple years experience. Feldt has that experience now.

The Raiders lost starting quick and offensive captain Mark Gesch to graduation, and are faced with replacing him with one of two inexperienced players.

Junior David Joeckel, a 6-5, 245-pounder who was moved from center to guard because of Crombie's quick development, is listed as the No. 1 quick guard at this time. Behind him is 6-2, 230-pound sophomore Tim Hendrix. Joeckel saw enough action in 1980 to earn a varsity letter. Hendrix started for the JV.

There are a couple other outstanding guard candidates.

One is 6-2, 245-pound George Smitherman. Smitherman started at quick guard for Tech in 1979 and did a more-than-adequate job. He left school following the '79 season and did not play last season. He's back now and will be eligible in the fall.

The other is Herb Pearce, 6-2, 230-pound junior, who was red-shirted last

Caughlin was a post-season favorite for all-conference honors, but that was before his back, which was operated on the year before, started acting up. Despite the pain, Caughlin played in all 11 of Tech's games. The 6-2, 260-pound senior is strong, quick and vital to Tech's success in 1981.

Mike Wells spelled Caughlin last season, but will graduate in May. That leaves 6-4, 255-pound sophomore Danny Buzzard battling Caughlin for starting honors at strong tackle.

The final installment of the four-part series examining Texas Tech's 1981 football outlook will appear in Sunday's Avalanche-Journal and will take a close look at the offensive skill positions and what Moore has in store for the Raiders' offense in 1981.

Nehemiah Continues Indoor Mastery

NEW YORK (AP) — Invincible Renaldo Nehemiah, the world record holder indoors and outdoors and the world's top-ranked high hurdler, scored his fifth consecutive victory Friday night at the 74th Wanamaker Millrose Games at Madison Square Garden.

Nehemiah, a winner at Philadelphia, Dallas and in two races at Los Angeles this season, failed to break his indoor mark of 6:89 seconds for the 60-yard high hurdles, but he did win handily in 6:98.

His archrival, 1980 Millrose winner Greg Foster, finished second in 7.05 and 1972 Olympic champion Rod Milburn was third in 7.15.

"I got out very well," said Nehemiah, who attends the University of Maryland but has chosen not to compete for the school. "After the first two hurdles, I had a comfortable lead and then I drove at the end to secure the victory. Speed-wise, I didn't feel that fast."

Nehemiah said he would compete only once more indoors, at Toronto next week, before getting ready for the outdoor season.

While Nehemiah was continuing his dominance of the high hurdles, Stanley Floyd of the University of Houston, ranked No. 1 in the world in the 100-meter dash, maintained his superiority over the sprinters.

Floyd, who set an indoor mark of 6.04 seconds last week for the 60-yard dash, won the Millrose sprint in 6.15.

His Houston teammate, Carl Lewis, was second in 6:21, followed closely by Ermit King in 6.23, and Olympians Mel Lattany and Harvey Glance, in 6.24 and 6.25, respectively.

All-America football star Herschel Walker of Georgia wound up last in the six-man final in 6.29, but was not disappointed.

"I am quite satisfied with my performance," said Walker. "I've just been training in track for three weeks and am just getting rid of my football tightness. I feel I am getting better."

The women's 60-yard dash and 60-yard high hurdles produced upsets.

In the dash, Chandra Cheeseborough of Tennessee State University nipped indoor record holder Alice Brown and 1979 and 1980 Millrose winner Brenda Morehead. All three were hand-timed in 6.6 seconds.

Jenkins Vows To Help Drug Education Programs

NEW YORK (AP) — Pitcher Ferguson Jenkins, convicted but not punished by the Canadian court that found him guilty of cocaine possession, has agreed to support several drug education and prevention programs and will not be suspended from major league baseball, commissioner Bowie Kuhn announced Friday.

After a meeting between Kuhn and Jenkins Thursday, the Texas Rangers' right-hander agreed to the following actions:

—He will contribute $10,000 to a suitable drug education and prevention program in Texas specifically aimed at young people. He will also make public appearances in support of that program.

—He will appear in a drug education and prevention film to be produced by major league baseball.

—He will appear in a drug educational institutional to be produced by baseball and seen on network television.

—He will cooperate fully with the Rangers in their own drug education and prevention program.

Jenkins, 38, was arrested and charged last Aug. 25 with possession of cocaine after four grams of cocaine were found in his luggage at the Toronto International Airport. He also was charged with possession of marijuana and hashish, but those charges were dropped.

Kuhn tried to suspend Jenkins with pay a few days after the drug charges were lodged. The commissioner was irritated that Jenkins, on the advice of counsel, declined to answer Kuhn's questions on the matter. But the suspension was quickly lifted when the players association intervened on Jenkins' behalf and an arbitrator ruled in its favor.

Jenkins was convicted in a Brampton, Ontario, provincial court Dec. 18, but drew an absolute discharge, which meant no fine, no jail term and no record of the conviction was recorded.

In the release from Kuhn's office,

Jenkins made the following statement:

"I very much care about the fans and especially about youngsters who follow baseball. I want them to know how deeply sorry I am for the mistake that led to my involvement in the drug charges which were recently disposed of in Canada.

"I know that the youth of North America looks up to sports stars and we therefore have a very special responsibility to set a good example. Drug use is not consistent with that standard. It's stupid and no one should do it.

"Drugs are harmful and especially harmful to youngsters and athletes. I ask the fans to forgive me. I pledge that I will never again use illegal drugs and I will join with baseball and the Rangers to help combat the drug problem."

In his statement, Kuhn also said any player who asks for treatment in a drug rehabilitation program — like St. Louis catcher Darrell Porter did last year — will not be subject to disciplinary action. But, Kuhn warned, "any player involved in the trafficking of drugs of any sort or who may be detected to be involved with dangerous narcotics such as cocaine will be subject to severe discipline which may very well mean long-term suspension."

Kuhn said Jenkins' genuine regret and the disposition of the case in the Canadian court were factors in the way the commissioner resolved the matter.

When Judge Gerald Young ordered the discharge last December, he said he was acting "without condoning what had been done." Several character witnesses praised Jenkins' work in Canada with children.

Jenkins had been named Canadian Athlete of the Year four times. He won 259 games over 15 major league seasons with Philadelphia, the Chicago Cubs, Boston and Texas. Jenkins won at least 20 games for six consecutive seasons, from 1967-72, with the Cubs.

Mazza Named In Complaint

PHILADELPHIA (AP) — A complaint filed with the state physician's licensing board accuses a Reading, Pa., doctor of misuse of drugs and improper conduct involving prescriptions of pep pills to members of the world champion Philadelphia Phillies, the board chairman said Friday.

Dr. Philip E. Ingaglio, a local physician who chairs the state Board of Medical Education and Licensure, said a complaint was filed Thursday accusing Dr. Patrick Mazza of misuse of drugs, failure to keep adequate records and improper conduct.

Ingaglio refused to say who filed the complaint.

The Associated Press incorrectly reported the state agency that licenses physicians had brought the disciplinary action.

Mazza was cleared of criminal charges in the case at a preliminary hearing Wednesday.

In a related development, the federal Drug Enforcement Administration will review the case to determine whether the doctor should be prosecuted on federal charges, said John Wilder, special agent in charge of the DEA's office here.

District Justice Albert Gaspari of Reading dismissed all state charges against Mazza, 56, the team doctor for the minor league Reading Phillies, who was accused of improperly prescribing 2,600 tablets.

Gaspari also dismissed charges against Robert L. Masley, 54, and his son, Robert M. Masley, 24, accused of delivering the drugs.

Before the charges against the Reading men were dropped Wednesday, defense lawyer Emmanuel Dimitriou charged that Mazza was being used as a scapegoat to protect the big league players.

Mazza testified that he "in good faith" prescribed pep pills to seven members of the Phillies after they asked for the drugs.

Mazza testified that between 1978 and 1980, he prescribed pills for pitchers Steve Carlton, Larry Christenson and Randy Lerch; first baseman Pete Rose; outfielder Greg Luzinski; shortstop Larry Bowa or former catcher Tim McCarver. He admitted to keeping no medical files on the players.

Carlton did not testify at the hearing. Lerch testified he received about 75 tablets. The other players have all denied involvement with the prescriptions.

Defense lawyer Emmanuel Dimitriou accused the players of lying to protect their reputations.

The medical board's Ingaglio said Mazza violated state and federal laws on the prescribing of amphetamines and state rules governing physicians. No doctor should prescribe amphetamines without conducting a physical examination, and records must be kept, he said.

Mazza's lawyer has claimed the physician had examined the players in the past, knew them personally and knew they were in good physical condition.

Braves Reach Terms With Dale Murphy

ATLANTA (AP) — Slugger Dale Murphy, who was third in the National League with 33 home runs last season, signed a contract reportedly worth $400,000 with the Atlanta Braves on Friday.

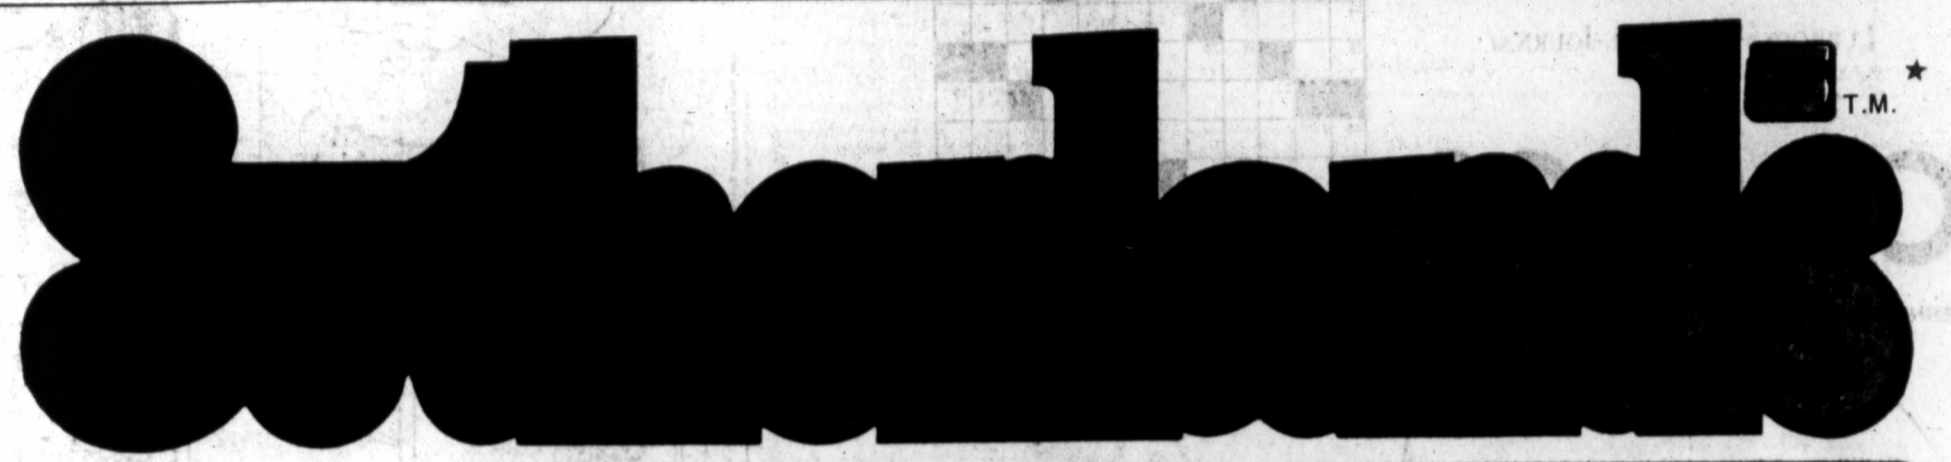

The reported amount would make it the largest single-season contract in the club's history.

Braves spokesman Bob Korch announced that Murphy had signed the contract, but would not disclose the amount. The Atlanta Journal quoted sources Thursday as saying Murphy is guaranteed $400,000.

Murphy's agent, Bruce Church, said his client agreed to a one-year contract with the Braves after unsuccessfully negotiating a multi-year deal. Church also would not say how much the contract was worth.

Murphy, 24, batted .281 and drove in 89 runs last season. The centerfielder tied slugger Bob Horner for the club lead in RBI.

The Braves also signed minor league pitcher Dan Morogiello to a contract Friday, Korch said. Morogiello, a left-hander from Brooklyn, N.Y., had an 11-12 record last year with the Class AAA Richmond Braves.
