

Giant Winter Storm Moves East

Sub-Zero Chill Felt In Area

TORNADO DAMAGE — Wreckage of a mobile home west of Huntsville makes up this scene of destruction after a tornado struck the area Tuesday. One person was found dead in the debris. Two persons were killed and several injured as the deadly storm moved on through East Texas. A tornado also slammed into areas in Alabama Monday and blizzard-like weather and record cold paralyzed much of the U.S., plunging temperatures to below zero in many sections of the nation. (AP Laserphoto)

By The Associated Press DRIVEN BY HIGH WINDS, the biggest storm of the winter swept from the Rockies to the eastern Great Lakes on Tuesday, bringing blinding snow and bone-chilling cold that contributed to at least seven deaths.

Tornadoes struck to the south, meanwhile, killing at least one person in Texas and hitting a grade school in Alabama. Two of the students and a bus driver, and another employee were seriously injured.

Meanwhile in Lubbock, weather officials say the cold front which blasted through the region Tuesday may produce a new record low reading.

The city's coldest temperature ever recorded was 6 degrees on Feb. 11, 1955. Tuesday's high temperature was 47 — but that reading was recorded during the early morning hours and as the Arctic storm system began pushing through the South Plains about 8 a.m. Tuesday, the mercury dropped steadily.

Winds Make Frostier Weather Picture

And the front's northeasterly winds, which at times gusted to near 30 mph, painted an even frostier weather picture.

At 8 p.m. Tuesday, Lubbock thermometers registered only 7 degrees, just one notch shy of the record, and 28 mph hour winds produced a wind chill reading of minus 32 degrees.

And to the north of Lubbock Tuesday, conditions were somewhat worse, with weather officials issuing a travelers' advisory for the Panhandle.

Light snow flurries fell over Lubbock and in the South Plains and Panhandle Tuesday, but generally produced no measurable accumulations. However, icy bridges and overpasses were possible in the Panhandle during the afternoon, officials said.

Additionally, weather officials, warn that the frigid temperatures and brisk winds also increase the danger of frostbite for those out in the wintry weather.

Amarillo's Wind Chill Reading Minus 38

Amarillo residents late Tuesday were shivering through 2-degree readings, which, coupled with 23 mph winds there, resulted in wind chill readings of minus 38. At Dimmitt late Tuesday, the temperature dropped to zero degrees and icy winds of 15 mph buffeted that city.

Tulia recorded 5 degrees at 7:30 p.m., with winds of about 30 mph and a wind chill factor of minus 40 degrees.

Somewhat warmer readings are expected today, however, with forecasters calling for partly cloudy skies and highs today in the mid 30s. The low tonight is expected in the mid 20s.

Winds today also are expected to diminish, with maximum gusts from the south predicted at 10-15 mph.

Snow — and the wind that made it feel like 40 or 50 below zero in many places — stretched from Montana to Ohio, sending shivers through more than a dozen states. Schools were closed and officials pleaded with people to stay home and keep off icy roads where drifting, blowing snow made it hard to see more than a few feet.

The road conditions were blamed for fatal accidents in Iowa, Michigan and Kansas. There was a massive pileup Tuesday on Interstate 80 at Altoona, Iowa, and Policemen Kenneth Kincaide said four people were killed. A 16-year-old girl from Easton Rapids, Mich., was hit by a car as she walked to school Tuesday morning and a Eaton Springs, Kan., woman died Monday night when her car collided with a truck. A snowmobiler who became separated from his party near West Yellowstone, Mont., on Saturday was found frozen to death across the border in Idaho Monday night.

"It's a killer storm moving in," said Al Zimmerman of the sheriff's department in Walworth County in southeastern Wisconsin. Forecasters predicted from 1 to 6 inches of new snow, with winds of up to 35 mph Tuesday night.

Blizzard Warning

The National Weather Service said Tuesday afternoon that a blizzard warning was in effect for eastern Nebraska and added that near-blizzard conditions prevailed across Kansas and Iowa. Winter storm warnings continued in parts of Illinois, Indiana, Ohio, Michigan, Wisconsin and Kentucky.

The snow accumulations, however, were not likely to be big enough to ease the drought in most parts of the country. The weather service says it takes 10 inches of snow to provide the amount of moisture in 1 inch of rain, although the amount varies depending on whether the snow is wet or dry.

Scattered power failures were tied to the cold. Between 400 and 500 homes in Helena, Mont., many of which use electricity for heating, were without power for more than three hours Tuesday morning in temperatures of 27 degrees below zero. The cold in Montana even forced a ski area, Bridger Bowl, to close for the day.

There were warnings that driving would become more dangerous as the day wore on and airports reported delays and, in a few cases, closings. "It is highly recommended that persons cancel all travel plans this afternoon and evening as travel will be near impossible," said

REAGAN AT BALLET

WASHINGTON (AP) — President Reagan and his wife Nancy attended the opening-night performance Tuesday of the Dance Theater of Harlem, which began a six-night run in the nation's capital. The president and first lady, whose 22-year-old son Ron dances with the Joffrey II ballet company, were applauded when they entered the presidential box.

Aged, Needy Escape Cuts

WASHINGTON (AP) — President Reagan, trying to win support for deep cuts in social spending, has decided to leave untouched seven federal programs for the elderly and the poor, the White House announced Tuesday.

The president's budget cutters hope the move may blunt some of the political uproar sure to explode from special interest groups and lobbyists when Reagan sends his "hit list" of spending cuts to Capitol Hill on Feb. 18.

The seven programs, totaling $210 billion, being saved from the budget axe:

— The basic retirement program of the Social Security System, providing benefits to 32 million retired persons, dependents and survivors. No decision has been made on other facets of Social Security, such as whether to eliminate its minimum benefit payment or student benefits.

— Medicare payments, which cover 28.6 million persons. No decision has been made on Medicaid.

— The school lunch and breakfast program for children whose meals are fully paid for by the government. This includes 9.5 million pupils.

— Supplemental Security Income benefits received by 4.2 million persons who are blind, disabled or considered elderly poor.

— Veterans Administration benefits for 2.3 million persons receiving compensation for service-connected disabilities and for 1.8 million persons receiving compensation for non-service-related disabilities.

— The Head Start program for lower income preschool children. This covers 374,000 pupils.

— The summer youth job program, which covers 665,000 youths. The 665,000 figure is less than the approximately 1 million youths who took part last year, but is the same as was proposed by the outgoing Carter administration.

All of the programs will be fully funded in fiscal 1982 at the level envisioned by the Carter administration, said White House press secretary James Brady. He said the programs will not be cut in the remaining months of the 1981 fiscal year.

In remarks made at a closed meeting Monday and released by the White House on Tuesday, Reagan promised state legislators that his spending cuts would be submitted as a package along with tax cuts on Feb. 18.

"And I can assure you by morning I'll be hung in effigy," Reagan said. "The Republican Wins Election Rerun

SAN ANTONIO (AP) — Republican Alan Schoolcraft built a huge lead Tuesday over Democratic State Rep. Al Brown in a precedent-setting special election ordered by the Texas House of Representatives.

With 20 of 27 boxes reporting in District 57-C, Schoolcraft had garnered 9,805 votes to 3,367 ballots cast for Brown.

"The people have spoken," Brown said shortly after the polls closed at 7 p.m. Tuesday. "The idea of a recontest never crossed my mind."

The House threw out results of the first election, in which Schoolcraft defeated Brown, who has served three terms, and ordered balloting to take place again.

Freed American Due In New York Today

DUBAI, United Arab Emirates (AP) — American writer Cynthia Dwyer flew out of Iran to freedom Tuesday after nine months imprisonment and a one-day mix-up in her deportation, leaving one American still captive of the Iranians.

The 49-year-old Mrs. Dwyer, a freelance journalist convicted of espionage and then ordered deported, arrived in Dubai on an Iranian plane loaded with peasants.

Met by U.S. Embassy officials, she was whisked away in a police car without talking to reporters. She was due to fly on to Switzerland and then to New York today for a reunion with her husband and three children.

Her departure left Zia Nassry, an Afghan-born New York businessman arrested March 8, as the last American ensnared in Iran. He was seized shortly after he went there reportedly hoping to make his way into Afghanistan to support rebels fighting the Soviets. Nassry, 34, has been charged with spying.

"Slight Hope"

The Swiss ambassador to Iran, Erik Lang, told The Associated Press in Beirut on Tuesday there was a "slight hope" Nassry would be included in a clemency order on the anniversary of the Iranian revolution today. In any case, Lang said, "we expect to get some answers next week" on his situation. The Swiss handle U.S. affairs in Iran.

Another American, 44-year-old Iranian-born Mohi Sobhani, whose family lives in Southern California, was freed last week on $1 million bond raised by his family. Four Britons also held in Iran are also expected to be freed soon.

A State Department spokeswoman in Washington, Sue Pittman, said there were no government plans to hospitalize Mrs. Dwyer or debrief her as was done with the 52 American hostages freed by Iran Jan. 20.

Met By Envoys

U.S. Ambassador William Woile and the U.S. consul to Dubai, Tom Dowling, met Mrs. Dwyer at the airport.

"Mrs. Dwyer is well and has expressed a desire not to meet the press," a U.S. Embassy spokesman said.

The Swiss Foreign Office in Bern said she would fly to Zurich today, arriving at 8:35 a.m. (1:35 a.m. CST) and then to New York a few hours later.

Her husband, John, 45, a college English professor, said at his home in Amherst, N.Y., a Buffalo suburb, that he felt "terrific" knowing she was finally free. "There have been so many letdowns. It's a new feeling," he said.

Dwyer said his wife probably will need a period of adjustment, but said, "Her letters have always been strong, always good." And, he added, "they were her letters," stressing the her and meaning that nobody else had written them.

Mrs. Dwyer had been scheduled to leave Tehran on Monday, but she was stopped at the airport because, sources said, she lacked a passport. It had been seized when she was arrested. Swiss diplomats helped her straighten out the problem and a Swiss official accompanied her on the flight to Dubai after she spent the night at the Tehran airport.

A sympathizer with the Iranian revolution, Mrs. Dwyer went to Iran last April to do some articles she hoped to sell in the United States. She was arrested May 5, 10 days after the failed commando mission to rescue the U.S. hostages.

She pleaded innocent to espionage charges at her trial last week and a Tehran newspaper said she had been drawn into a fictitious plot to rescue some of the American hostages. Her husband said she had been the victim of a "clear-cut case of entrapment."

Lawyer Hired In Street Dispute

By EVIE DAVIS, Avalanche-Journal Staff

UNIVERSITY Avenue businessmen who say the city's plan to widen that street would mean economic disaster for their businesses decided Tuesday night to hire an attorney to present their case at Thursday's City Council meeting.

Attorney E. Warren Goss, already retained by Varsity Formal Wear owner Phil Sooter, was selected by a group of the businessmen to represent their interests. Sooter said late Tuesday, however, that the method as to how Goss will be paid by the shop owners has not been determined.

And indeed, some of the approximately 50 businessmen and students who oppose the street widening plan and who met at Bromley Hall private dormitory on University Avenue to discuss their concerns, did not favor hiring a single representative for their cause, with some arguing for a bombardment of city officials with emotion-packed pleas.

The businessmen complained that the planned switch to parallel parking from 30-, 45- and 60-degree angle parking would discourage drive-up customers they say constitutes most of their business.

The students complained that the additional lane of traffic would increase volume on the already heavily traveled University Avenue between Fourth and 19th Streets, making pedestrian crossing dangerous and dormitory living noisy.

But Goss waved an inch-thick volume as his proof of the picture he painted: the University Avenue businessmen are merely catalysts in the city's goals of beautification and increased use of public transportation.

"The reason that you're losing your parking is so that this plan can be carried out," Goss said, holding a volume he said was a 1974 Lubbock Comprehensive Plan drawn up by City Planning Director Jim Bertram's office. "We reduce the number of parking places (on University Ave-ue) and the public must rely on public transportation more.

"We widen University Avenue and the city get's to put up its brick median with the shrubbery," he added. "You do not matter. What matters is that this plan goes through."

The street-widening proposal, which is scheduled to go before the city council at 1:30 p.m. Thursday, affects University Avenue from Fourth to 19th streets. City officials argue the widening is needed to accommodate a higher volume of traffic on the one-mile strip adjacent to Texas Tech University.

Tech regents Saturday approved granting additional easement space for the project, which also calls for changing the angle parking in front of businesses located on the east side of the avenue to parallel parking.

However, it was revealed last week that the parking change will not affect the widening process itself, but is being proposed because parallel parking is considered safer — and Bertram believes the city could be barred from using federal funds without the change.

Sooter, however, said three councilmen have conceded to him that some degree of angle parking can be retained. "But I didn't get that in writing," he said. "What we need is legal representation. Thursday (in a meeting with city officials) all we did was blow smoke, and they know it, and they still know it."

Another businessman claimed, however, a packed council chamber with arguments "from the heart" would "surely move the councilmen who are human beings just like the rest of us."

Goss disagreed. "You can't win with statistics. They've got too many statisticians for that. You can't win with emotions," the attorney said.

"You have to fill the place (city council chambers) up with numbers and say a big no," Goss added. "Then the decision is up to the city. They have to decide, do

Hotel Fire Erupts In Las Vegas

LAS VEGAS, Nev. (AP) — A fire erupted and "jumped from floor to floor" at the 30-story Las Vegas Hilton Hotel Tuesday night, shooting flames 100 feet up the side of the building, authorities said. Some injuries were reported.

The blaze, which was reported still burning but under control by about 9:30 p.m., was the second major fire at a Las Vegas hotel in less than three months.

Several ambulances were sent to the hotel, one of the largest resort casinos in the world with 2,783 rooms.

A woman who answered the telephone at a command post at the nearby convention center said some people had been injured and were being brought there for treatment by Red Cross and Civil Defense workers. The woman, who would not give her name, said she did not know the number of injuries.

Witnesses said people were hanging out of windows at the hotel and authorities were telling them to get back inside. Authorities were lifting some people off the roof in helicopters, said Rodney Davis, desk officer at the nearby Royal Americana Hotel.

He said half the building was dark and the flames reached up the side of the building at least 100 feet.

Capt. Ralph Dinsman, a Fire Department spokesman, said the fire started from unknown causes on the sixth or eighth floor and then "jumped from floor to floor."

Polish Shakeup May Foreshadow Resort To Force

WASHINGTON (AP) — The shakeup in the Polish government may foreshadow a crackdown on labor unrest in that country, including the possible use of force, State Department officials said Tuesday.

One official said the choice of Gen. Mieczyslaw Jaruzelski, who had been defense minister, as the new premier Monday is a clear signal that the military supports Communist Party leader Stanislaw Kania in his efforts to defuse the crisis.

A State Department spokesman said, meanwhile, that it is Poland's business if it uses its forces to uphold its laws.

"If Polish authorities use Polish forces to carry out Polish law, we would consider that to be a Polish matter," said William Dyess, the State Department spokesman.

He said he wouldn't want his remarks interpreted to suggest that the United States is predicting or hoping that Polish troops would intervene to halt the labor unrest.

In a statement issued later Tuesday, however, the State Department said Dyess' remarks on use of force by Poland didn't mean the United States would be indifferent if that happened.

"We could not be indifferent to such a development, and in no way, did the department intend to suggest that such a development would not be a matter of very great concern to us given our strong humanitarian interest in the welfare of the Polish people and nation," the statement said.

Another highly placed official, who declined to be identified, said, "Anyone could interpret the picking of the defense minister, a general, (as premier) as perhaps a further step repositioning itself for acting within the context of Polish law and the constitution to solve its problem, which ultimately could eventuate the use of some type of force."

While Dyess said the United States is following events in Poland "with no small amount of concern," he sought to play down reports that the State Department considers Soviet intervention inevitable.

"We do not consider that Soviet military intervention is imminent, or that it is inevitable, or that it is justifiable," Dyess said.

"We see no development with regard to Poland that would cause us to change our assessment that the Poles are perfectly capable of looking after their own affairs without outside interference," Dyess said.

But he said the Reagan administration isn't considering providing any new aid to Poland to ease its economic crisis. Poland asked for $3 billion in aid from all sources last year.

"We don't see any need to pump more money into Poland until they have some reforms," said one official, who spoke on background.

Dyess said the sudden change Poland's leadership was "an internal Polish matter and we look forward to establishing a working relationship" with the new official.

Premier Josef Pinkowski was ousted by the Communist Party Central Committee and replaced by Jaruzelski.

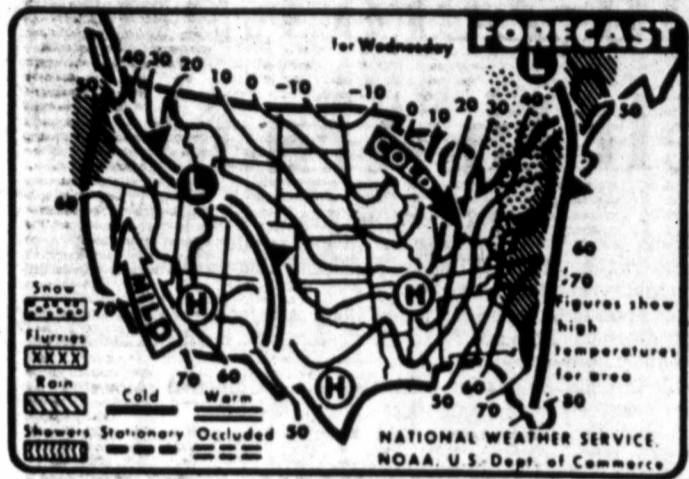

Two State Department officials, who did not want to be identified, said they think the choice of Jaruzelski is a signal to key elements in Poland — the Roman Catholic Church, the labor movement and the bureaucracy — that the military is rallying behind party leader Kania and will support his efforts to quell the labor unrest, including the use of Polish forces.

Dyess said Soviet troops are not in the same advanced state of readiness they were last year, but said "they are in a high state of readiness and if they should decide to invade Poland, logistically, I suppose they could be ready to do so in very short notice."

Dyess said he wouldn't want to discuss the possibility that events could lead Poland to request Russian troops to assist in carrying out Polish law. "I wouldn't want to speculate on an eventuality of that sort," he said.

But other officials said Tuesday they think the Soviets would be very reluctant to intervene under any circumstances.

Nation's Unpaid Installment Debt Up

WASHINGTON (AP) — Americans' outstanding installment debt rose by a seasonally adjusted $1.62 billion in December, the Federal Reserve Board reported Tuesday. It was the fifth straight monthly increase.

The recent increases, coming in tandem with consistently rising interest rates, can be translated into annual growth rates of 6 percent for December and 4 percent for the fourth quarter of 1980, the board's report said.

However, the unadjusted $313.4 billion in debt outstanding at year's end was only a fraction of a percentage point higher than at the end of 1979, the board reported, "owing to the 8 percent contraction in credit during the second quarter of 1980."

That credit contraction was caused by the recession and by federal credit controls. Consumer debt has been rising steadily since the recession ended and the controls were lifted.

Consumers paid off old loans at a faster rate in December than they did in November, but they borrowed at an even faster clip.

An increase in credit-card debt was a major contributing factor, with such "revolving accounts" rising a seasonally adjusted $616 million in December, the board reported. Outstanding debt on auto loans rose just over $300 million.

New installment credit totaled $27.15 billion in December, compared with liquidation of $25.53 billion in old debt, the report said. Outstanding credit had expanded by just over $800 million in November, with $26 billion in new credit surpassing the $25.2 billion in liquidations.

December's 6 percent increase in outstanding debt compares with a rise of about 3 percent in November and October, the Federal Reserve Board reported. The 4 percent quarterly increase was well above the seasonally adjusted annual growth rate of less than 1 percent in the third quarter.

The board's report covered "most short- and intermediate-term credit extended to individuals through regular business channels," officials said. It did not include home mortgages.

High School Raided By Salvadoran Police

SAN SALVADOR (AP)—Police raided a Roman Catholic high school Tuesday and arrested eight deans and 13 other officials of the University of El Salvador as they gathered for a meeting, the government announced.

A university spokesman had reported the directors were kidnapped by about 20 armed men, but junta President Jose Napoleon Duarte told reporters later that security forces made the raid because they believed there was a meeting in progress of the Democratic Revolutionary Front.

The front is an umbrella organization of left-wing, non-guerrilla groups seeking to topple the civilian-military junta. It is the main political opposition to the four-man junta, which is dominated by the centrist Christian Democratic party.

The government has not declared the front illegal, but under the state-of-siege in force since last March the government can arrest anyone without giving reasons.

A government official said those arrested were taken to police headquarters for questioning and "those who have nothing to do with this organization (the front) will be freed." He declined to say what action would be taken against those associated with the front.

The official said that among those detained were the university's acting rector, Miguel Angel Paredes, and Secretary-General Ricardo Calderon, both members of the front leadership. The university spokesman had said the rector, Jose Napoleon Rodriguez Ruiz, was among the 21 detained, but the government said Rodriguez Ruiz is living in exile in Mexico.

There was no indication why the university directors were meeting, but it could have been to prepare for the re-

City Man Charged With Burglaries

A 21-year-old Lubbock man has been charged on three counts of burglary of a building for several city break-ins he allegedly committed during December and January.

Billy Lee Garza is charged with burglaries at a C.R. Anthony Store, Luskey's Western Wear and Town and Country Western Wear. The Criminal District Attorney's Office has recommended his bond be set at $2,500 for each charge.

Garza was taken into custody as a result of an investigation into an apparent burglary ring operating out of Hereford. Lubbock police officers acted on information from the Hereford authorities.

C.R. Anthony officials claim a $700 loss, while Luskey's Western Wear is claiming a $4,200 loss.

opening of the school. It was closed last June by the government, which said the campus was a hiding place for left-wing extremists. The junta announced recently it could open March 6.

Antonio Ulloa, named rector after the university was closed, was assassinated in October by gunmen who shot him down on a street near the university. He also was a member of the front's leadership.

In November, six members of the front directorate were kidnapped and their bodies were found the next day at scattered locations in San Salvador. The killings were similar to hundreds of others carried out by right-wing death squads. The government has not blamed any group for the murders, but denied leftists' claims that government security agents were involved.

Earlier, police reported that terrorists hurled a bomb in a flatbed truck carrying 50 peasants, killing 18 and injuring at least 30. They said the deaths were among a total of 33 over a 24-hour period.

There was no indication who was responsible for the bomb attack Monday in the town of Suchitoto, 25 miles southeast of here.

"Some of us survived but only by a miracle," an 80-year-old man riding in the truck told reporters.

Most of the other victims were shot during the 7 p.m. to 5 a.m. curfew, police said. A government announcement Tuesday night said the curfew had been shortened by one hour and would be from 8 p.m. to 5 a.m.

In the capital, armed youths seized five buses near two main intersections and used them as barricades before setting them afire, police said.

No group claimed responsibility for the attack, which backed up traffic for an hour. Police said the offenders were leftists and "delinquent terrorists."

Political violence claimed an estimated 13,000 lives last year. The junta says 2,000 persons have been killed since January 1 in the ongoing violence.

Leftists are trying to topple the junta while extreme rightists are conducting their own campaign against leftists and suspected leftists.

On Monday, bombs believed to have been planted by leftists destroyed two transformers outside the town of Delgado, nine miles west of the capital. Power to the area was knocked out.

Several areas, including the city of San Miguel 105 miles east of here, remained blacked out Tuesday.

Police in the capital said they found and dismantled bombs attached to electrical transmission towers.

STUDENT LOANS ON LINE?

The ABCs Of Inflation

IF MR. REAGAN and his advisers succeed in cutting federal outlays "across the board," some programs affected may have more impact than at first generally thought.

Thus far, much of the spotlight has been on such programs as Medicaid, food stamps and public service jobs, all of which primarily benefit lower-income Americans and as such have stirred the complaint that such groups will be hurt the most.

But, if the administration's budget analysts have their way, many middle class or higher income groups with students in college will feel the effect of the pruning due on the federal budget.

WE REFER to proposed cutbacks in the Basic Educational Opportunity Grants and student loan programs.

Both are targets, according to new Sec. of Education Terrell H. Bell. At stake is $6.4 billion in federal aid to college students. That, at any rate, is the amount President Carter proposed for such programs in the budget he submitted to Congress before he left office. The request represents a 6 percent increase over the current fiscal year.

The two most costly student aid programs are the Basic Educational Opportunity Grants, popularly known as Pell Grants, and Guaranteed Student Loans. Together, they will cost taxpayers approximately $4.4 billion in the fiscal year ending Sept. 30.

BASIC EDUCATIONAL Opportunity Grants, which go back to 1972, are made to

Manned Bomber Is Mandated

ALTHOUGH FORMER President Carter's decision to cancel production of the B-1 bomber effectively removed the bomber issue from serious political consideration for three years, the new Reagan administration and a more conservative Congress are beginning serious efforts to find a suitable, new "multi-role bomber" to replace the aging B-52 force.

The original B-1 bomber is the best of the multi-role bomber candidates being considered by the Department of Defense and Air Force for deployment, superior to B-1 derivatives and the "stretched" FB-111 B/C, according to Heritage Foundation defense policy analysts writing in the February issue of National Security Record.

OF ALL THE aircraft being considered, they write, "only one...has the versatility to perform high-altitude supersonic penetration (Mach 1.85), carry a weapons load twice that of the B-52, and incorporate state of the art offensive defensive avionics."

Though it would cost approximately $5 bil-

M. STANTON EVANS:

Easy Money For A Few Is Hard On Rest Of Us

WASHINGTON—Rep. Parren Mitchell of Maryland is a well-known liberal Democrat, not usually viewed as a great hero by devotees of market economics.

It so happens, however, that Rep. Mitchell has been presiding over a work that would gladden the heart of Milton Friedman—demonstrating the close connection between the growth of the nation's money supply and the upward progress of consumer prices—hence the responsibility of the Federal Reserve for our recent devastating bout of inflation.

Last month, the staff of the House subcommittee on domestic monetary policy, chaired by Mitchell, produced the second of a series of reports on the recent behavior of the Fed.

This is an excellent, well-documented survey, the best work on the subject to come from an official source in years. And it shows beyond much doubt that the principal cause of our inflationary woes is, quite simply, federal monetary policy.

"THE MAJOR conclusion of this report," Mitchell says, "is that the impelling force underlying the persistent inflation we have experienced since the middle 1960's is an upward drift in the growth of the M1B money supply which began in the early 1960's."

The report also shows that inflation brings no gains either in output or employment. Although it does not reduce measured real growth, there are dead weight losses from the use of resources to cope with it.

Mitchell adds that inflation is "also a cruel tax on institutions we try to exempt from taxation, such as hospitals, colleges and churches, and on the savings and fixed income pensions and annuities of the aged."

"To stop inflation, what must be done is to reduce the growth of M1B, while using fiscal policy to make sure that the burden of the fight is not borne by the poor."

THESE CONCLUSIONS are undergirded by a careful statistical analysis that traces the expansion of the money supply, and the subsequent accelerating pattern of inflation.

What the figures show is that, when the Fed undergraduates whose families have demonstrated financial need.

They are awarded in amounts of from $200 to $1,900 a year, cover up to half the costs of tuition, room, board and books and do not have to be repaid.

Guaranteed Student Loans, first authorized in 1965, have no financial-need requirement. They are given by banks to graduates or undergraduates and are guaranteed by the federal government, which subsidizes their low interest rate, currently 9 percent.

Undergraduates can borrow up to $2,500 a year under the program, to a maximum of $12,500; graduates, up to $5,000 a year, with a ceiling of $25,000. Repayment, over 10 years, begins six months after graduation.

THE LOANS have obvious attractions for moderate to well-to-do families.

"Cheap" federal money pays for their children's higher education while they can invest savings of their own at much higher rates in money-market funds or other investments. The loans have been criticized on this point, plus the fact that it is feared many colleges may be too dependent on the loans as a source of income, that students may assume too heavy debts.

It is just another phase of the federal spending, inflation picture of which many are not aware. No doubt the program must assume its share of the sacrifice which will be needed to make any meaningful dent in the nation's fight to eventually balance the budget. And that is as it should be.

lion more than going with the "stretched" FB-111 B/C alternative, the Heritage analysts suggest that the administration opt for the B-1, not only because they consider it a better aircraft, but because in the long run the cost differences would be nullified by the fact that we can expect the B-1 force to be in use for some 30 years, while an updated FB-111 would need to be replaced before that.

THE EARLIEST a totally new bomber could be initially deployed (one using new design and new technology) would be 1992— which clearly meets neither the intent of Congress nor the strategic imperatives of the moment.

Valuable time has been lost because of the B-1 cancellation decision. Action is needed, not another study. And the initiative must come from the executive branch.

Fiscal considerations may influence the mix of forces and number of aircraft selected, but they should not dictate the choice of aircraft to perform the multi-role mission mandated by Congress.

controls the growth of money, inflation is controlled as well.

When the Fed expands the money supply in reckless fashion, inflation, after a lag required to spread the increase through the economy, will follow in its wake.

Thus, the report points out, the rate of monetary growth was relatively low in the period 1973-76. In the fourth quarter ending in the fall of '76, for example, the money supply had grown at an average rate of only 4.4 percent.

As a result of this long-term restraint, the rate of inflation was down to an annual rate of 4.8 percent.

BEGINNING IN the last quarter of '76, in what the committee report describes as a "dreadful mistake," the Fed began reversing course, monetary growth went up to an annualized rate of 7 percent.

For 1977, it averaged 7.5 percent. For 1978 and most of '79, before the change of policy announced by Chairman Paul Volcker, the average rate of growth was 8.2 percent per year.

There was a sharp cutback in late '79 and early '80, but by the latter part of '80 monetary growth had spurred back to double-digit regions—and so had the rate of inflation.

Why has the Fed been behaving in this manner? Again, the Mitchell report provides an answer. For most of this span, the authorities have been trying to influence interest rates, pursuing an "easy money" policy to counter upward movements in the cost of credit.

THE RESULT of this fixation has been a steady over-all expansion of the money supply—with occasional sharp maneuvers in the opposite direction—and, after a certain interval, runaway inflation.

Among the many ironies in this procedure is that such a policy leads to higher interest rates, not lower, since the rate of inflation becomes a floor under the rate of interest.

Which means the policy pursued by the Fed since '76 is self-defeating, as well as devastating to our currency. The solution, as Mitchell accurately puts it, is to get the growth of the money supply under iron-clad control.

GEORGE F. WILL:

Youngest Old-Timer

WASHINGTON—Standing on his patio, looking out and down through bare branches at the gray ice and grayer water of the Potomac about 500 feet away, Ted Kennedy says yes, the view is grand, but in summer the trees block it and Udall made it impossible to cut trees within 500 feet of the river.

Stewart Udall, that is—John Kennedy's secretary of the interior. Such is the cold climate for liberalism, one half expects Kennedy to exclaim: It's time to get the government off the backs, or at least out of the backyards, of Virginia property owners.

Actually, he says he doesn't mind. Ask not what you can do to the trees...

He also is being very brave about Jimmy Cart-

ANDREW TULLY:

He Is Lot Like Abe

WASHINGTON—Gazing at the 52 lasers that formed a cone of light above the Lincoln Memorial the night of the welcome home party for our returned hostages, one seemed to hear a message to Ronald Reagan as he worked at developing a policy to combat international terrorism.

In the Lincoln flavor, the message was simple and to the point: Dare to be pragmatically autocratic in dealing with the protection of Americans everywhere.

Lincoln showed in his most compelling act of the Civil War that he could ignore the legalities in a cause he believed was intrinsically noble.

Seeing those lasers, President Reagan may well have mentally pored over the history books that remind posterity of an act by Lincoln that was almost surely illegal, but politically and morally right.

IT WAS called the Emancipation Proclamation, which became effective on Jan. 1, 1863.

We say now that the proclamation "freed the slaves," and in effect that is true. But the proclamation actually was a military measure, a punitive step, against the South.

It freed the slaves only in those areas not under the military power of the United States.

No slave in the North or in the border states was affected, although Lincoln and Congress acted together in a joint resolution urging that the government cooperate with any state which would adopt gradual abolition of slavery by paying owners for the slaves freed.

THE DEMOCRATS argued that the proclamation had no legal force. But the Supreme Court was never asked to rule on the issue.

No matter, now. The proclamation was Lincoln living up to a pledge—that he meant to save the Union as best he could, by preserving slavery, by destroying it, or by destroying part and preserving part.

Lincoln, Reagan must remember, was never an abolitionist; the proclamation was a necessary act of war.

So, as Reagan has announced, was the seizing of those American hostages by the Iranian barbarians.

In short, Reagan has committed himself to what might be called the Lincoln Doctrine. That commitment leaves him with little room to move around in. He has warned the world that "never again" will the U.S. allow its diplomats to be taken captive with impunity.

THE DOVES don't like that. They tend to see the Reagan attitude as one that could lead to military adventures abroad in defense of our people. So be it.

But the memory of Abraham Lincoln should stiffen the Reagan spine. Lincoln was a republican with a small "r" as well as a capital one.

He dared to be autocratic to protect and preserve our small "r" republican form of government—and the bottom line is that it worked. That is likely to appeal to Ronald Reagan, an idealist with a very practical side.

er's defeat even though today his fate is to sit as ranking minority member on the Labor and Human Resources Committee next to Chairman Orin Hatch, R-Utah.

"My leader," Kennedy says, and explodes with laughter.

Here is a result of Nov. 4: The committee that, more than any other, has custody of legislation urban liberals care about, now has a chairman from a state with a population about one-third that of Boston's metropolitan area, a state 36th in population, 42nd in population density, and 0.6 percent black.

Kennedy yielded the ranking minority position on the Judiciary Committee to be where the action will be in what Kennedy concedes must be a belt-tightening period.

In the late 1960s and early 1970s, he says, there were issues—civil rights, Vietnam—that could be simply posed, which simplified the task of getting the public's attention.

Today's economic issues are different—unless the numbers (inflation, unemployment, interest rates) get garish.

So Kennedy, who would like to exchange his view of the Potomac for Reagan's view of the Washington Monument, has a stake in bad news.

BUT THE numbers involved in the projected expansion of expenses under entitlement programs, as currently drawn, are, he says, "staggering."

Those programs will devour all new revenues, and more, unless rapid economic growth is restored. So Kennedy has a large stake in Reagan succeeding. As he says, "When the economy is wrong, nothing else is right."

Only when economic growth generates revenues faster than entitlement programs consume revenues will new social programs, such as national health insurance, be possible.

Every politician has "concerns," but any politician worth his salt also has an honest passion. Kennedy's is health care. He thinks inflation in health costs may soon make this a—perhaps, the —great issue of the middle class.

POLITICAL LIFE is an exercise in cumulation. Reagan became a huge success by making countless stops at small gatherings, 12 years' worth, gathering credit as he went.

Kennedy says, "I've been over the landscape for a long time." He is just 48, but has lived longer than any of his three brothers did. He has seen about five Washington "eras": Camelot, Great Society, Emerging Republican Majority (1972), Watergate (supposedly, the banishment of Republicans for eons), and now the era of limitless conservative horizons.

He probably knows that even while losing the Senate in 1980, Democrats won 51.8 percent (Republicans, 46.9) of all votes cast for Senate candidates.

Democrats won 49.15 percent (Republicans, 49.48) of the votes for House candidates. Democrats still hold most governorships (27) and state legislative bodies (both houses in 28 states, one house in five others).

FURTHERMORE, ALTHOUGH many Democrats voted Republican in 1980, their partisan identification did not dramatically diminish.

Kennedy, the youngest old-timer in American politics, was in the Senate before Reagan, the oldest newcomer to the White House, was even in politics. The question is whether Kennedy's famous roots nourish him and help him grow, or merely make him immobile.

Fame, it has been said, is but the sum of misunderstandings that accumulate around a well-known name. Kennedy's political portrait is by now sharply drawn.

When next Kennedy seeks the presidency, perhaps for the last time, he will be 52, and most voters will have few memories of when he was not a national figure.

Since he was barely more than a boy his life has been largely, often cruelly, dictated by circumstances, and the elusiveness of maturity.

Today he seems content in a role he has chosen: as the man who shall keep the faith warm in winter, and shall try to call forth a spring.

JAY HARRIS:

Year For Rooster

THIS IS THE Year of the Rooster for one-fourth of the world's population.

And if you will pardon the analogy, it is more important in many respects to those affected than the Year of the Rooster.

While what President Reagan does or does not do no doubt will have a profound effect on much of the world, for hundreds of millions of Chinese around the globe, the symbolism of the Rooster is what counts.

In keeping with ancient Chinese custom, the Year of the Rooster has just been observed, starting last Thursday, with four days of feasts, reunions, weddings and good will. The Rooster, which is the traditional sign of prosperity, follows in the wake of the Year of the Monkey.

And for most, it is good riddance...

WHAT AMOUNTS to the start of the Chinese New Year has been ushered in wherever there are Chinese. Lubbock and Texas Tech are no exception.

Sunday night, the ceremony, color, music and food of centuries past took the spotlight in a program presented by the Chinese Students Assn. at Tech. Guests were the host families for the Chinese students, faculty and friends.

Most of the Chinese students, numbering some 170, are from the Republic of China on Taiwan. In many instances, they are the sons and daughters of those who fled the mainland in 1949 as the Chinese Communists took over.

The hand of friendship and Happy New Year's greetings they shared were typical of those around the world, on Taiwan, the mainland and elsewhere, where the coming of the Year of the Rooster is observed.

THE CHINESE New Year arrives in a period of high hope for much of Asia.

The Year of the Monkey, 1980, has been a troublesome one in that area much as it has been elsewhere. Those in Asia hope to rebound from spiraling oil import costs, double digit inflation, trade deficits and market problems.

The Rooster is known as a perfectionist and tireless worker in the Oriental Zodiac and one who keeps a sharp eye on business opportunities. Those born under its sign are deep thinkers, busy and devoted, often taking on extra work.

The Rooster also is painted as flamboyant, aggressive and boastful. At heart, however, the Rooster is reserved and old-fashioned. According to legend, the Rooster is one of the 12 animals which appeared at the death bed of Buddha to pay homage.

The rat was the first, followed by the ox, tiger, rabbit, dragon, snake, horse, goat, monkey, rooster, dog and pig. A year was named after each to reward them for their piety. As they make their rotated appearances, it is said they influence the lives of those born in a particular year.

THE SHARING of the Chinese New Year with the students, host families and others at Tech is just one of the many bonuses of trips we have made abroad.

We met the students from Taiwan as a result of a trip we made to their island homeland last year. They are among some of the happiest and most industrious people we have met anywhere.

The staging of the program this week was typical. We were the guests of David Hsiao and his wife. David is a senior at Tech, his wife works at Texas Instruments. He, along with Mooney Chyang, the immediate past president of the group, are sharp, friendly young men who should go a long way in their chosen careers.

David's parents now live in San Francisco and run an antique shop. He is studying industrial engineering. Mooney's parents live in Taiwan. He is studying for his doctorate in chemical engineering, wants to teach some day. His wife, Gloria, is known in Taiwan for her drama writing and movie scripts, he says. She currently is studying and teaching at St. John's in New York.

ONE OF THE highlights of the Chinese New Year program, in addition to folk songs, dances and musical numbers by some of the children, was a Chinese fashion show.

Complete with walk-on ramp, lights and Oriental music, it was narrated by Jennifer Chiu, a striking 24-year-old major in fashion design.

Jennifer, whose Chinese first name is Yea Fong, and another Tech coed, Mei-Lan Shih, gave the commentary as several Chinese students modeled ancient, traditional and modern Chinese costumes, giving the audience of 350 persons a quick history of the dress and customs of various periods in China's past.

Jennifer studied secretarial science for three years in Taipei and worked for a U.S. drug firm as a secretary before coming to the U.S. Her father is a retired general in the Nationalist Army.

AS WE WATCHED the program unfold, a thought we had before came back...

The Chinese students here from Taiwan have their counterparts at other schools such as the University of Texas at Austin, Houston and Texas A&M. In fact, Texas ranks only behind New York in this regard.

By the same token, there are students from many other nations at Tech. Many of them are involved in the host family program in which Lubbock and area residents adopt such students for a school year as friends. But, more can be done.

It seems that some group here, the Chamber of Commerce, some group at Tech, or several organizations could help sponsor a Friendship or World Brotherhood Week during which the students from various countries and cultures could present a program or programs for the public, at the Civic Center Theater or Exhibition Hall.

In this way, citizens of the area could share in an unforgettable experience which in a meaningful way could help promote world understanding and peace...

Q. I'VE HEARD that grown men are the big buyers of Valentine cards, right?

A. They're the big spenders, at any rate. But youngsters actually buy more cards. Incidentally, do you know what category of female receives the most Valentines? Mothers. Maybe you figured that. But what category gets the second most? No, not girlfriends. Teachers do. I don't mean teachers can't be girlfriends. The category of girlfriends, as such, winds up with third most.

Afghanistan Situation Brings Wrangling

NEW DELHI, India (AP) — Diplomats at a conference of the non-aligned movement wrangled behind closed doors Tuesday to draft a consensus statement on the Afghanistan conflict and head off new confrontations within the divided movement.

In nearby streets, dozens of Afghan exiles and Indians demonstrated peacefully in protest of the Soviet military intervention in Afghanistan.

The war in the central Asian nation has become a prime issue of the four-day meeting of foreign ministers of nations that profess alignment with neither the West nor the Soviet bloc. Representatives of 90 nations are attending the meeting, which opened Monday.

The committee drafting the final conference declaration formed a subcommittee of delegates from the Palestine Liberation Organization, Tanzania and Argentina to "evolve a formulation ... which will reflect a consensus" on the Afghan issue, one conference source reported.

The compromise is likely to incorporate both Pakistan's call for withdrawal of foreign troops from Afghanistan, and India's appeal for a "peaceful political solution." But it probably will not mention by name the Soviet Union, which has an estimated 85,000 troops in Afghanistan.

A move by the Afghan delegation to drop the reference to their country was brushed aside by the conference, sources said.

At conference sessions open to reporters, the Soviet intervention came under attack by Bangladesh, Indonesia, Ghana and Kenya.

U.N. Secretary-General Kurt Waldheim, scheduled to address the meeting Wednesday, told reporters he hoped to lay the groundwork for talks on the Afghan situation. He said he would meet with the foreign ministers of Pakistan and Afghanistan.

The Soviet-backed Marxist government of Afghanistan contends neighboring Pakistan is supporting the anti-communist Afghan insurgency. Pakistan, for its part, is concerned about the Soviet military presence just across its northern border.

In other developments at the conference:

•The drafting committee reportedly neared consensus on a reference in the declaration to the Indian Ocean region that would mention the U.S. military facility at Diego Garcia and "disapprove" of other such bases in the region. The Soviet Union has access to naval facilities on the Indian Ocean in South Yemen.

•In an hour-long speech, Iraqi Foreign Minister Saoud Hammedi blamed Iran for the two countries' 5-month-old war. The Iranian delegation was not present. Both Iran and Iraq have prepared conference resolutions calling for each other's expulsion from the movement. Iran also was circulating a demand for Afghanistan's suspension.

•Indonesian Foreign Minister Mochtar Kusumaatmadja assailed the 1979 Vietnamese military intervention into Cambodia. Conference sources predicted a compromise statement here on the Cambodian issue that is likely to refer to "foreign troops" but not name Vietnam.

•Cuban Foreign Minister Isidoro Malmierca Peoli, whose country is current chairman of the non-aligned movement, denounced President Reagan for pursuing a policy of "military superiority to negotiate with the socialist countries from positions of force."

Companion Tells Of Last Hours

Spent With Young Death Victim

By KEN COBB
Avalanche-Journal Staff

An admitted prostitute testified Tuesday that the last time she saw homicide victim Miss Jean Lewis alive was when Miss Lewis got into a car with accused murderer Charles Everett Reynolds.

Reynolds is on trial for the Labor Day 1980 murder of Miss Lewis, whose body was found bundled on the back seat of his Cadillac during a routine drivers license inspection. Criminal District Attorney John W. Montford hopes to convince jurors that Reynolds killed the young woman by leaving her in a stifling hot trunk until she died of asphyxiation.

Prostitute Chris Carrington told the 237th District Court jury late Tuesday that she had known Miss Lewis for several years and that she often saw Miss Lewis in the company of Reynolds in east side "spots."

Miss Carrington testified that she and Miss Lewis had been riding around together about 2:30 a.m. the day Miss Lewis died when they saw Reynolds' Cadillac. The young woman told the court that her friend got out of the car and climbed into Reynolds' car. It was the last time Miss Carrington saw Miss Lewis alive, she testified.

Montford sprawled himself across the courtroom floor Tuesday to demonstrate how Miss Lewis might have left fingerprints on the inside of Reynolds' trunk.

After police identification officer J.D. Reimer told the court the prints found in the trunk belonged to the dead woman, Montford dropped to the floor and asked if a woman struggling to free herself from a car trunk would leave marks in the positions found.

"Yes," Reimer answered.

The identification officer had told the court earlier that prints of the dead woman's palms matched prints lifted from the trunk. He was able to pinpoint 19 matches in points between the latent prints and those taken from the trunk.

In earlier testimony, a Department of Public Safety trooper testified how he discovered Miss Lewis' body during a routine drivers license check. He stopped Reynolds, he said, after seeing a motorist make a U-turn in an apparent effort to avoid a routine drivers license check.

Trooper Foy Goldston testified that he noticed a bundled object in the back seat, adding that the woman's forehead was visible under the sheets used to cover her.

A search of the trunk revealed a damp, strong-smelling spot on the trunk carpet which matched the strong body odor of a towel found placed across the dead woman's chest in the car.

Jurors were to continue hearing testimony at 9 a.m. today.

Murder Suspect Charged In Jeep Theft

Murder suspect Vernon Ray Gilmore was charged Tuesday with a felony theft of a Jeep in Dallas.

Gilmore is in custody in the Lubbock County Jail awaiting trial for the murder of Richard Grier Luster. He also already faces charges of luggage theft and an unrelated burglary charge. With the addition of Tuesday's Jeep theft charge, Gilmore faces prosecution on four separate felony offenses.

warrant issued in connection with the Nov. 6 caliche pit slaying of Richard Grier Luster. Investigators termed the murder a "gangland slaying" since Luster was found with bullet wounds in the head and chest from a gun fired at close range.

Panel Advances Short's Bill On Attorney Fees

A-J Austin Bureau
AUSTIN — The Senate Jurisprudence Committee Tuesday approved a bill by Tahoka Sen. E.L. Short that would have the state pay for court-appointed defense attorneys in capital cases.

The committee voted 8-0 to recommend that the full Senate approve Senate Bill 12, sponsored by Short.

Under the bill, counties would continue to pay court-appointed attorneys in other criminal proceedings, but Short said payment by the state for attorneys in capital cases would relieve the heavy financial burden on small rural counties.

A spokesman for the Texas Association of Counties said that Motley County, which has tax revenues of only about $130,000 per year, spent $31,000 last year for attorneys to defend indigents in capital cases.

If approved, the bill will benefit both the counties and the defendants in such cases by relieving the financial burden on the counties and providing better qualified representation, Short said.

The bill now goes to the full Senate for consideration.

Queen Honors Star Of Radio Series

LONDON (AP) — Gwen Berryman, the 75-year-old actress who played Doris Archer in the popular radio series "The Archers" for almost 30 years, made a 200-mile journey by ambulance Tuesday to be honored by the queen.

Crippled by arthritis and the effects of two strokes, Miss Berryman arrived in time to receive her medal as a Member of the Order of the British Empire from Queen Elizabeth II at Buckingham Palace.

Commandos Seeking Rugged Recruits

LONDON (AP) — The Special Air Service, the elite British commando unit whose operations are usually secret, went public Tuesday by advertising for new recruits.

A notice in London's New Standard newspaper appealed for "young men urgently for part-time, secret work of national importance."

It said applicants must be able to run three miles in 30 minutes and stressed that only one potential recruit in 10 will be signed up.

A Ministry of Defense spokesman said the advertisement was only for the part-time SAS Territorial Army drawn from civilian ranks, and not for the regular SAS regiment, whose members are full-time military personnel.

It was the regular SAS that stormed the Iranian embassy in London last May, freeing 19 hostages and killing five of six terrorists who had held the embassy for six days.

Territorial Army members train weekends and go on a two-week exercise once a year.

The ministry spokesman said it was not the first time the SAS had advertised for members. "It is merely a continual process of keeping up to strength. This is difficult to do when you are recruiting from laymen volunteers," he said.

Chamber Banquet Slated At Olton

OLTON (Special) — "Love is Serving" is the theme of the 24th Annual Olton Chamber of Commerce and Agriculture Banquet set for 7 p.m. Saturday in the Olton High School cafeteria.

Ambulance attendants, drivers, telephone crews and their spouses will be the honored guests and will be recognized along with the Woman of the Year, Man of the Year and Outstanding Young Man and Woman of Olton High School.

New officers and directors of Olton Chamber of Commerce and Agriculture will also be recognized at the banquet.

Entertainment will be provided by "Bluegrass Rejects" members Troy Wells and Solon Wilkins, both of Abertown, James Baird of Lubbock, and James Attabury and his cousin Edward Attabury, both of New Deal.

Aviation Routing Gains Flight Agency Approval

WASHINGTON (AP) — Braniff Airlines has been awarded a route to Caracas, Venezuela, from New Orleans, Houston and Dallas-Forth Worth, the Civil Aeronautics Board said Tuesday.

The route was awarded by Delta Airlines about a year ago, a CAB official said.

Republic Airlines and American Airlines also had sought the route.

Gold Slumps; Dollar Gains Then Declines

NEW YORK (AP) — Gold prices slumped Tuesday amid concerns over U.S. interest rates. The dollar gained ground in Europe but slipped back in later New York trading.

Gold for delivery this month closed at the Commodity Exchange Inc. in New York at $509 a troy ounce, a drop of $9.70 from Monday. In later trading, Republic National Bank quoted a price of $510, down $7 on the day.

The precious metal price rose earlier in Europe, but one New York trader said the announcement that Citibank decided not to lower its prime lending rate to 19 percent from 19.5 percent depressed the metal.

"There was a lot of selling when gold couldn't hold at $515," the trader said.

Morgan Guaranty Trust Co. reduced its prime lending rate to 19 percent on Monday, but the decrease has not been matched by any major bank. Citibank announces its prime rate each Tuesday.

The dollar was helped in early trading by news from Poland, but New York dealers said it later fell back and closed with little change on the day.

European traders said the resignation of Jozef Pinkowski late Monday and his replacement as Polish premier by the defense minister, Gen. Wojciech Jaruzelski created a rush for dollars.

The Polish situation had helped push up gold prices on Monday, and it helped in European trading Tuesday. "Because of Poland, nobody's trying to go short," said a gold trader in Geneva.

The previous metal gained $6 in Zurich to close at $518.50 an ounce. In London, gold slipped $1.75 to end the day at $514.25.

Late New York dollar rates, compared with late rates Monday, included: 2.1388 West German marks, down from 2.1390; 4.9263 French francs, down from 4.9300; 1.9423 Swiss francs, up from 1.9412; 203.48 Japanese yen, down from 203.65; and $1.1973 Canadian, down from $1.1980.

The British pound finished in New York at $2.3435, up from $2.3379 on Monday. In London, the pound had slipped to $2.3367 from $2.3426 the previous day.

Political Clout Sought By Rural Areas

WASHINGTON (AP) — Some rural leaders announced Tuesday they were forming a political action committee to try to give Americans living outside urban areas more political clout.

"Rural America has been severely and grossly neglected," said former Rep. Richard Nolan, D-Minn., at a news conference introducing the National Alliance for Rural Action.

Jim Hightower, president of the Texas Consumers Association, said a non-partisan, nationwide movement was needed because the interests and problems of rural citizens and smaller communities have been overlooked during the last four decades.

That has happened, he said, "in large part because we've relied on others to carry our water for us and that hasn't worked."

The group will initially focus on getting sympathetic politicians elected at the local level, said Hightower.

"The hand that we're now playing in Washington has been dealt (at the Nov. 4 elections)..." he said. "We want to go out there where the shuffling takes place for 1982 and be a part of that shuffling so we get a new hand dealt up here (in the future)."

"We're taking the grub hoes and getting back to the grassroots," he said later.

The government estimates about 55 million Americans live outside metropolitan areas.

Who comprises rural America? "We're talking about a multi-colored group," said Richard Margolis, a writer based in Massachusetts.

He ticked off some of the people the alliance hopes to help — "whites, blacks, native Americans, Chicanos, people in Appalachia, farm workers, miners, small farmers, millworkers...."

Among the problems cited in rural areas were poor health, inadequate housing, poverty and unemployment.

The news conference was held on the last day of a three-day meeting of Rural America, a non-profit organization concerned with the problems of rural citizens.

Members of the organization later in the day gathered near the Capitol to display a brightly colored quilt and a gift certificate for the quilt the group plans to present to President Reagan.

The idea is that the president can present the gift certificate at the organization's next meeting and, according to the gift certificate, if the "administration has demonstrated a true commitment to America's rural people," he can pick up the quilt. If not, the quilt will be given to "a rural American who has been victimized by more outhouse politics," said Marie Cirillo of Clairfield, Tenn., and a board member of the organization.

She said "outhouse politics" was "practiced every day" beneath the Capitol dome.

Such politics, she said, "does nothing about shacks... looks the other way when rural children go to bed hungry... raises the prices of energy beyond poor people's ability to pay... (and) strips mountains with bulldozers."

The group had originally planned to dismantle an outhouse on the Capitol grounds but was unable to find an old, used one, said Mrs. Cirillo.

"An outhouse in rural America is no joke," she said. "It is cause for shame — that as many as 10 million rural Americans... must use such a device every day of their lives.

"It is a cause for tears — that in the world's richest country the poor go right on suffering."

Citrus Workers Union Opposes TFWU Boycott

AUSTIN (AP) — An official of the union representing workers at a border citrus plant said Tuesday the Texas Farm Workers Union is "invading our jurisdiction."

TFWU, headed by Antonio Orendain, had called for a national boycott of Texsun citrus products. The union has picketed the company's Rio Grande Valley plant and Austin stores selling Texsun juices.

Lois Johnson, international representative for the United Food and Commercial Workers Union, said her union has a contract covering employees in the Texsun plant.

"Orendain is picketing the plant, but we have a no-strike and no-lockout clause in our contract with Texsun," she said in a telephone interview from the Rio Grande Valley. "He's invading our jurisdiction."

Mrs. Johnson said TFWU pickets are "asking our people for support" but has never contacted union officials.

UFCWU has represented employees in the Texsun plant — about 100 — for at least 10 years, she said. The union does not represent field workers. TFWU wants to be the bargaining agent for field hands.

A Texas AFL-CIO release issued here Tuesday incorrectly stated the workers at Texsun are represented by the United Farm Workers Union, headed by Cesar Chavez. Rebecca Harrington of San Juan, spokeswoman for the UFW, also said she is concerned about the TFWU boycott.

"The problem is that they are boycotting the juice that is put out by union labor," she said.

Orendain was a Chavez backer until several years ago. Orendain, claiming Chavez was not putting enough effort into Texas, left to form the TFWU.

UFW is affiliated with the AFL-CIO, but TFWU is not.

TFWU has staged several strikes in Rio Grande Valley produce fields, with varying degrees of success.

Orendain last week called for a boycott of Texsun and Big Tex products. TFWU members poured cans of juice into a garbage can on the Capitol steps to start the boycott.

'Can't Wait To Get Home,' Mrs. Dwyer Tells Husband Over Phone

AMHERST, N.Y. (AP) — Cynthia Dwyer, expelled from Iran after being convicted of espionage, telephoned her husband Tuesday from the Persian Gulf sheikdom of Dubai and told him: "I can't wait to get home."

John F. Dwyer said the couple laughed a lot during the call from Dubai, the first stop after Mrs. Dwyer's 700-mile flight from Tehran.

Swiss Embassy officials, who acted as go-betweens in the release, said Mrs.

Dwyer would fly to Zurich Wednesday, arriving at 8:35 a.m. (2:35 a.m. EST) and would leave for New York a few hours later. Dwyer and his three children planned to fly from Buffalo on Tuesday night to be in New York when she arrives.

Dwyer said his 49-year-old wife, who had been imprisoned in Tehran for nine months, said she was physically well and asked about their children — Ben, 14;

Dan, 12, and Susannah, 9. The children were in school when the call came.

Mrs. Dwyer, who went to Iran last year to gather information for a freelance article, also asked about her mother, Mildred Brown, 77, of Horatio, Ark.

"They're fine. They're fine," Dwyer said he told his wife. "They're all fine. They can't wait to see you."

Dwyer, chairman of the English department at Buffalo State College, said he couldn't remember all of the conversation.

"Can you believe that?" he said. "We just started laughing. I can't remember."

He noted that the excitement had begun to build for his children.

"They've always been confident that she was coming home, so it's not news to them," he said. "They're thinking: 'Whoever thought she wasn't?' It's like telling them that today is Tuesday. But I expect them to get very excited as the time approaches to meet their mother at the airport."

Dwyer said his wife was "totally surprised by the amount of media attention her ordeal has received." He said she asked him to try to keep reporters away after she arrives in the United States.

"I feel good now, terrific," Dwyer said. "I feel relieved. There had been so many letdowns. It's a new feeling."

Dwyer said his wife probably will need a period of adjustment, but said, "Her letters have always been strong, always good."

Mrs. Dwyer was arrested in hotel room in Tehran on May 5, shortly after the failed rescue attempt of the Americans being held at the U.S. Embassy. She was accused of being a spy and imprisoned at Evin Prison in Tehran until last Wednesday, when she received a six-hour trial before an Iranian court.

On Sunday, the court handed down its ruling, finding the woman guilty of spying. It sentenced her to time already served and ordered her expelled from Iran. She was scheduled to leave Monday, but what officials described as trouble with her exit papers delayed the departure for 20 hours.

Dwyer said the State Department told him the Iranians wanted to take her back to Evin Prison during the delay, but the Swiss insisted she not be returned to prison. Dwyer said she spent more 20 hours at the airport in Tehran before boarding the plane for Dubai.

Dwyer expressed mixed feelings about the Iranians.

"I didn't like her being detained, and I didn't like the entrapment, he said. "That made me angry."

But he said all Iranians could not be judged by the actions of a few.

He said his main concern during his wife's imprisonment was "not so much that she was being mistreated, but that the political instability of Iran would delay the release of the hostages and of my wife."

Former Hostages' Luggage Released To Swiss By Iran

GENEVA (UPI) — Iran turned over luggage belonging to the released American hostages to the Swiss Embassy in Tehran Tuesday, Swiss officials said.

The luggage, containing clothing and other personal belongings, was confiscated when the U.S. Embassy in Tehran was seized Nov. 4, 1979.

When the 52 former hostages were released by Iran Jan. 20 after 444 days of captivity, they came out with nothing but the garments they wore.

Iranian authorities insisted at the time they had put the hostages' luggage on one of two Algerian planes that flew the Americans out of Iran.

The luggage remained in Tehran, however, and was not turned over until the release of American freelance writer Cynthia Dwyer, freed after 282 days in jail on charges of being a CIA spy.

Swiss officials said the Iranians turned over the luggage to their embassy in Tehran without explanation.

The officials said the embassy would arrange to have it sent to the United States and returned to the former hostages.

CAREERS

By JOYCE LAIN KENNEDY

Dear Joyce: I am in the personnel department of a social service agency and would like to know if you would suggest workshops to develop my skills?
— J.J.C., Detroit, Mich.

Inquire at such groups as the American Society for Personnel Administration and the Employment Management Association for suggestions; a librarian can supply addresses of these and other professional personnel organizations.

You should know of an important development in the personnel field that significantly could affect your career progress: a formal process to recognize competency.

As accountants may qualify to become a CPA, or certified public accountant, personnel professionals now may seek to become an accredited personnel specialist, APS, or — at a higher level of expertise — an accredited personnel diplomat, APD.

A personnel expert can seek to achieve accreditation by meeting the examination and experience criteria established by the Personnel Accreditation Institute.

The institute had its origins in the early '70s when a group of members of the American Society for Personnel Administration met to discuss ways of raising and maintaining professional standards.

The founders recognized that what one needs to know to be a personnel director — or similar worker — varies widely between companies but that a defined body of knowledge should serve as a foundation for all.

Thus the Personnel Accreditation Institute was established in 1975 as an independent, non-profit organization to oversee the accreditation process.

Already some 3,300 practitioners, academicians, researchers and consultants have been accredited either as a generalist or in one of six functional areas: employment, placement and personnel planning; training and development; compensation and benefits; health, safety and security; employee and labor relations; and personnel research.

Although accreditation is not mandatory to move up the ladder in the human resources field, the status it confers could help convince employers you are indeed a personnel professional of substance.

READER SERVICE: "Career Development in the Personnel Field Through Accreditation" describes material prepared by the Personnel Accreditation Institute. To obtain a copy, send your request on a postcard to Joyce Lain Kennedy at this newspaper. Ask for "Personnel Accreditation." The offer ends April 1, 1981.

Trial Depicts 'St. George Fighting Dragon'

WHITE PLAINS, N.Y. (AP) — Each day the lanky young prosecutor wheels his evidence cart into the 12th floor courtroom, he is faced with the task of making Jean Harris, an elegantly frail, 57-year-old former headmistress, look like a murderer.

The job for Mrs. Harris' defense attorney is to explain why she has no memory of shooting Scarsdale Diet doctor Herman Tarnower anywhere but accidentally in his hand during her botched suicide attempt.

"We don't always see ourselves as others see us," defense lawyer Joel Aurnou told the jury during jury selection. "A little guy, 5 feet-6 inches tall, balding, who looks nice, could be a very nasty aggressive lawyer."

Having thus described himself, the former judge from White Plains furthers his image with a half-chewed cigar, wrinkled suits and a tie emblazoned with the scales of justice.

His adversary, Assistant District Attorney George Bolen, counters with a clean-cut, boy-next-door look, wearing tennis racquet ties with button-down collars.

Aurnou calls him "St. George fighting the dragon." The "dragon" likes to offset damaging prosecution evidence by telling reporters juicy tidbits that then dominate the day's news.

When, for instance, Tarnower's housekeeper was outlining Mrs. Harris' jealousy for the other woman in Tarnower's life — jealousy the prosecution says drove Mrs. Harris to murder — a front page headline screamed "Diet Doc Lovers Meet at Grave."

Aurnou had leaked a story depicting a grief-stricken Mrs. Harris being startled at Tarnower's grave by the other woman in the love triangle, Lynne Tryforos.

And until the prosecutor got Judge Russell Leggett to bar the attorneys from talking with reporters, Aurnou held impromptu news conferences outside the courtroom during the prosecution's case, describing his client as "a wounded bird trying to fly."

Aurnou, 47, is just the sort of adversary who could get on Bolen's nerves.

In fact when the 34-year-old assistant district attorney was picked to try the Harris case, those familiar with his work wondered if he could survive Aurnou's tactics without throwing one of his celebrated temper tantrums.

During the trial, Bolen once caught himself screaming at a juror. At other times, angry with the judge's rulings, Bolen flopped in his chair in stony silence until asked if he cared to resume.

When one of Aurnou's tedious questions had jury members nodding off, Bolen — who likes to adopt an air of the earnest prosecutor seeking swift justice and on the lookout for defense smokescreens — feigned sleep.

Once Aurnou sought to have the jury imagine the defendant, former headmistress of The Madeira School for girls in McLean, Va., down on her hands and knees mopping the floor during a plumbing emergency.

Bolen was apologetic. "Did you ever have an occasion to see Mrs. Harris in times of plumbing emergencies?" Aurnou asked a Madeira School employee.

"Your Honor..." Bolen began, rising to his full 6-foot-3.

"Once in a while I may have a john overflow and she was in there mopping the floor," the witness answered.

"Judge, really!" Bolen objected. The testimony was stricken.

Aurnou stunned court observers when he wept with Mrs. Harris at her recitation of her suicidal depression.

He shocked the audience again when he tried to counter a pathologist's testimony that it was "anatomically possible" Tarnower could have sustained one wound while trying to ward off an attack.

"Isn't it also 'anatomically possible' he could have sustained it while sitting on the toilet?" Aurnou asked.

Spectators groaned and Bolen rolled his eyes.

WOMAN WINS AWARD

OLATHE, Kan. (AP) — A Shawnee woman has been awarded $1.75 million in a lawsuit filed in connection with a 1976 traffic accident that left her disabled.

Today's FOCUS

Bolen paces the courtroom with a deadpan delivery and broadcaster voice that disarms witnesses.

When one witness testified that in the years he had known Mrs. Harris, no one had ever questioned her "peaceability," Bolen looked askance.

"Mrs. Harris' 'peaceability' — just how did that come up in conversation?" Bolen asked, sending the courtroom into titters.

When Mrs. Harris first took the stand in her own defense, Bolen was elaborately and respectfully polite.

"Forgive me my inarticulateness," Bolen said as he bowed to Mrs. Harris after she said she did not understand a question.

He gradually dropped the deferential manner. Four days later, the defendant was pale and drawn at the end of his loud, accusatory finale.

"Isn't it a fact that Dr. Tarnower told you that you had lied, that you cheated, and told you, '... Jean, quit bothering me'?" Bolen demanded. Mrs. Harris denied the accusation.

"Isn't it a fact that on March 10, 1980, you intended to kill Dr. Tarnower and then kill yourself because if you couldn't have him no one could?" Bolen shouted.

"No, it isn't, Mr. Bolen," she said quietly.

Pausing for effect, Bolen announced, "I have no further questions" and sat down. The courtroom erupted in applause.

"Unbelievable," Mrs. Harris said.

White House Tuesday include all but two of the government's basic "entitlement programs," which guarantee people benefits if they meet the requirements set by law and regulation. Because they provide cash payments or direct services to large numbers of people, particularly the elderly, Congress historically has been loathe to trim them in any way.

The two entitlement programs conspicuously absent from the exempt list are Aid to Families with Dependent Children, the federally assisted, state-run welfare program for the poor; and Medicaid, a similar program to provide medical care to those on welfare.

The total of exemptions represents between one-third and one-fourth of the $739.3 billion in spending projected by the Carter administration for 1982.

In all, Budget Director David Stockman and Treasury Secretary Donald Regan, in conjunction with other Cabinet members, have completed more than 90 percent of the cuts that they will give to the president for passing on to the Congress, Brady said.

He said the exemptions were consistent with the instructions the president gave the budget cutters: "Not to cut or reduce any essential services or cut any benefits for the truly needy."

While the president has the option of reversing or changing Stockman and Regan's recommendations, "the likelihood is that he probably won't," said Brady.

Regan will work on the budget cuts each day this week with his advisers, Brady said, and then go into seclusion at Camp David on Friday and work on the plan until Monday. Stockman and Regan may join him over the weekend.

The amounts budgeted for the various exempt programs include: Social Security, $140 billion; VA benefits, $12.7 billion; school lunch and breakfast, $2.1 billion; Medicare, $45.4 billion; Head Start, $950 million; Supplemental Security Income, $7.9 billion; summer jobs, $870 million.

Reagan also announced formation of the President's Economic Policy Advisory Board, composed of 12 economic experts, such as Arthur F. Burns, Milton Friedman, Alan Greenspan, William Simon and others. It will meet every three or four months to advise Reagan.

Separate Meetings
The president talked about the spending cuts in meetings with labor leaders and governors.

Reagan told the governors that "a great many of our problems" stem from efforts by federal officials to make the states "administrative districts of the federal government."

He promised to reverse this trend by giving block grants to states, and later, by returning "taxing sources" to the states.

Gov. James Thompson of Illinois told Reagan that some members of Congress had vowed that power would be returned to the states "only over our dead bodies."

Not 'Bad Idea'

"You're kidding," Reagan said. "They really said that? Well, maybe over their dead bodies isn't a bad idea."

In a briefing later for reporters, Gov. John Dalton, Republican of Virginia, said all of the governors were "supportive of what the president is trying to do."

Dalton said the governors probably will lobby individually for their pet programs, "but on the other hand, we're unanimous in our feeling that he's on the right track."

Meanwhile, Defense Secretary Caspar Weinberger said he expects no backlash against bigger military spending proposals because of Reagan administration cuts in some domestic programs.

'Exploding Spending'

"One of the best things we can do for the poor and disadvantaged of this country is to get hold of inflation," Weinberger said in an interview. He blamed inflation chiefly on what he called "exploding total government spending."

And in other economic news, the chief economist of the New York Stock Exchange cautioned U.S. bankers against making financial plans based on predictions that the Reagan administration can cut inflation in half in the next two years.

"I'd say the likelihood is low" that the new administration can accomplish such a feat, William Freund, an NYSE senior vice president, said at a meeting of the American Bankers Association.

Enact Cuts Together

And Treasury Secretary Regan said in a speech to the National Press Club that the president's economic recovery plan cannot succeed unless his proposed tax and budget cuts are enacted in "the same general time frame."

And in another speech, Budget Director Stockman promised that the truly needy will be protected from sweeping spending cuts and that big business and upper-income people will feel the budget axe.

The administration's economic program is "not tilted toward big business," Stockman said. While the program will cut many social programs such as food stamps, unemployment and Medicaid, it also will slash the budgets for synthetic fuel development and export-import, he emphasized in a speech to the American Business Conference, a new organization of high-growth, medium-sized companies.

Polish Court Rejects Farm Union Demand

WARSAW, Poland (AP) — Poland's highest court rejected private farmers' demands for an independent union Tuesday and recommended they form an association instead. Polish newspapers reported without comment the government shakeup naming Defense Minister Wojciech Jaruzelski, an army general considered a moderate, as Polish premier.

The labor strife facing Jaruzelski eased slightly when Warsaw Radio announced late Tuesday that workers in the southwestern Polish city of Jelenia Gora had agreed to end their two-day strike.

The station had reported in an earlier broadcast that the strike was canceled and then corrected that to say the work stoppage would continue until an agreement was signed by a government commission and leaders of the main independent union, Solidarity.

Its later broadcast, near midnight, said, "Following the signing of an agreement in Jelenia Gora tonight by the government commission and the Solidarity joint strike committee, the protest action has ended and the general strike in the province has been called off."

The announcement said a mixed commission to oversee implementation of the agreement had been set up. It did not elaborate, but the radio previously said the pact provided that a rest home for Communist Party Central Committee members may be used as a local hospital until a new 610-bed facility is built, and the government promised to find jobs for people unemployed by the "reorganization of a children's clinic." There was no word on how the negotiators dealt with the workers' demand for dismissal of Poland's trade union minister.

Parliament To Meet

The Sejm, Poland's Parliament, was expected to meet today to approve the appointment of Jaruzelski, designated to replace Premier Jozef Pinskiwki at a party Central Committee meeting Monday night. It was the fifth government shakeup since August.

Jaruzelski, a 57-year-old four-star general, has a reputation as an effective military commander. According to a story circulated widely in Warsaw, Jaruzelski told hardliners on the Central Committee last August during nationwide strikes that as long as he was defense minister, "Polish troops will not fire on Polish workers."

Jaruzelski is said to be a close ally of Polish party Chief Stanislaw Kania.

No Soviet Comment

There was no comment on the shakeup from the Soviet Union. The Kremlin continues to have thousands of troops massed near Poland's borders, fueling fears in the West that the Soviets may consider intervention to end Poland's ongoing labor crisis.

In Washington, State Department spokesman William Dyess said the shakeup was "an internal Polish matter." Asked about Soviet intentions, Dyess said, "We do not consider that Soviet military intervention is imminent, or that it is inevitable, or that it is justifiable."

A spokesman in Rzeszow, the southeastern city and headquarters of Rural Solidarity, had no immediate comment on the Supreme Court ruling. The group had threatened a food boycott if their demand for registration of an independent farmers' union failed.

Walesa Sees 'Draw'

Lech Walesa, the head of Solidarity which supported the farmers' demands, called the court decision a "draw." He answered "Of course" when asked by some of the 5,000 farmers outside the court whether they should register as an association.

In its complex decision, apparently an attempt at compromise between the farmers and Communist Party leaders who oppose a farmers' union, the high court said it did not have jurisdiction to rule on the demand and sent the case back to a lower court.

Supreme Court Justice Antoni Filcek said the farmers' organization Rural Solidarity was in fact a union since it grouped people of the same profession.

Union Limitation

But he said Polish law stated that a trade union can only legally be formed — and apparently, recognized — when it involves employees of an organization.

Because most Polish farmers own the land they work, he said, they cannot be considered as such.

A legal advisor to Solidarity, which was formed in the wake of last summer's strikes and now claims 10 million members, said a commission drafting a new labor law would attempt to include farmers in the statute.

Poland's 3.5 million private farmers own 75 percent of the nation's land and produce about 80 percent of its food, unlike the socialized agricultural systems in other Soviet bloc countries.

Official Union

Polish farmers are officially represented by the United Peasants' Party, which has 500,000 members. Rural Solidarity claims between 600,000 and 1 million members.

Poland's Ministry of Agriculture has been urging for months that private farmers form an association rather than a union, but the farmers claim that under Polish law, associations lack the status and rights of a union.

TWISTER'S PATH — A tornado slammed into the Bay Minette area near Mobile, Ala., Tuesday, destroying service stations, homes and the Bay Minette Middle School. Review Of Hostage Agreement Delayed

WASHINGTON (AP) — The Reagan administration's review of the agreement that freed the 52 American hostages is being delayed because of concern it may be inconsistent with U.S. or international law, a State Department spokesman said Tuesday.

The spokesman, William Dyess, said there is no plan to intentionally let slip any deadlines set by the agreement and that the U.S. government is taking steps to meet them.

But he said there are some "very thorny" problems that are causing delay in completing the review of the overall agreement which was signed in the final hours of the Carter administration.

"The problem is that in some cases we aren't sure the obligations are consistent with domestic and international law," he said.

Dyess declined to identify the exact nature of the concern pending completion of the review.

He denied reports that the legal review might cause the United States to "intentionally plan" to miss any deadlines set under the agreement.

"I'm denying there was any attempt to let the deadlines slip," Dyess said. "We are taking steps to meet the deadlines."

One such deadline comes Feb. 19 when the United States is obligated to set up an account in the Bank of England to receive $1 billion of now-frozen Iranian assets held in the domestic branches of U.S. banks.

The funds would be used to pay off Americans whose claims against Iran are upheld by the international claims commission to be established under the terms of the agreement.

The spokesman did note that the agreement was completed by the Carter administration "under highly unusual circumstances and under great pressure" and with the primary objective being the humanitarian one of freeing the hostages.

He said the Reagan administration now has the obligation to measure the agreement against the standards set by domestic and international law.

Dyess also denied reports that Haig warned Iran the United States might not carry out its part of the hostage agreement if Iran did not immediately release Mrs. Cynthia Dwyer, who had been held in Iranian jails for the last nine months.

Mrs. Dwyer was released on Monday following her conviction on espionage charges and her sentencing to time already served.

Dyess said that after a medical examination in Dubai in the United Arab Emirates, Mrs. Dwyer was found to be healthy.

He said that at the request of the Dwyer family, the State Department is withholding details of the former prisoner's travel plans as she returns to the United States.

Mrs. Dwyer's experience, Dyess said, reinforces the State Department's warning about travel by American citizens to Iran.

the National Weather Service in Des Moines, Iowa.

"Right now, it's getting worse as the day goes along," said Cliff Schlough, maintenance superintendent for the Dane County Highway Department in Madison, Wis. "We're looking for 40-mile-per-hour winds tonight and then it will be really bad... The roads might not be plugged up, but you won't be able to see."

Temperatures in Denver dropped 13 degrees in one hour as the cold front moved into Colorado. The highway patrol said drifting snow, combined with fog and winds gusting up to 35 mph, made driving conditions hazardous throughout the state.

Near-blizzard conditions were expected by nightfall in most of Illinois, with winds gusting up to 40 mph. Up to 6 inches of snow fell overnight in some parts of the state and the storm continued through the day. Three students suffered minor injuries when the bus taking them to Joliet High School collided with a snowplow.

Schools in more than a dozen Michigan counties were closed Tuesday because of the snow and the state House of Representatives canceled its afternoon session. The National Weather Service forecast up to 6 inches of snow during the day, with an additional 4 inches overnight.

Tornadoes hit Central and East Texas during the night. Billy Linville, Walker County civil defense coordinator, said a teen-age girl died and three people were seriously injured when the twister blew out the sides of their mobile home.

A tornado struck the Bay Minette (Ala.) Middle School where 1,000 children were attending classes Tuesday. In all, about 60 people were hurt, most of them children and most of them not seriously.

Owen Liles, principal of the Bay Minette Middle School, said he heard the tornado coming as it dipped down from a fast-moving storm system about 8:30 a.m., and ran to warn the students on the intercom. But by then the windows were tearing out of the building and the roof was coming off.

The tornado also hit a few small businesses and several homes in the area and some of the injured came from those places.

Nine nearby houses were destroyed by the twister, and 15 were extensively damaged, according to the Red Cross.

A vocational school next door to the middle school escaped damage.

June Vote Scheduled In Israel

JERUSALEM (AP) — The Israeli Parliament decided Tuesday on a June 30 general election that could oust Menachem Begin as prime minister and return the Labor Party to power.

Parliament's decision, approved without opposition, meant Israelis would go to the polls nearly five months ahead of schedule — a change forced upon Begin last month when his finance minister resigned and left him without a majority in Parliament.

Opinion polls continued to predict a setback for Begin and gains for Shimon Peres and his Labor Party. Some soundings have found the gap to be as wide as 34-28 in percentage terms.

But while the polls differ on the size of the vote, they all agree that the number of undecided voters is around 40 percent — a middle terrain that is turning election prophesying into a hazardous pursuit.

One possible contender for that middle ground is Moshe Dayan, the former general and foreign minister who is thinking of coming out of semi-retirement to head an independent list of other popular outsiders.

One recent sounding, by pollster Mina Zernach, saw a possibility of as many as 21 seats for a Davan list in the 120-member Knesset (Parliament).

It is clear that Israelis are not particularly excited about either the Likud or the "Labor" Alignment," says Shevah Weiss, a political scientist and member of the Labor Party leadership.

Street Plan Opposed By Students

we go against the people that put us into office, or don't we?"

Another businessman said he would appeal to the council in a different manner.

"Nobody's talked about revenue, tax revenue to the city," said Leonard Flesher of Oriental Food Store. "Say we lose customers because of reduced parking. Say five shops go out of business. We go out of business, the city doesn't get any tax revenue from that business. I don't think the city can afford that."

Student Stephen Spurgin, however, expressed concern about students who must live near the traffic-congested avenue and those who must cross the street on foot.

Street Dangers Cited

They say they want to make the traffic run smoother and encourage more people to use University Avenue," he said. "Well, as a student, it's dangerous enough out there anyway."

But Jack Davis, whose Western Wear Store would be affected by the widening, told the group that their problem has only one solution.

"I've been here (in business) for 50 years, and whenever you do anything with the city, you let them know you're coming in loaded," Davis said. "You have to let them know you mean business."

Syria, Jordan Tensions Grow After Kidnapping

DAMASCUS, Syria (AP) — Syria and Jordan dismantled a common border post Tuesday as their relations deteriorated under the strain of the kidnapping of a Jordanian diplomat.

Observers in Damascus said the end of common operations at the border post at Ramtha, a Jordanian city about 50 miles north of Amman, could be the first step toward closing the border between Syria and Jordan.

Jordanian officials blame Syria for the abduction of charge d'affaires Hisam Muhaissen, taken with his maid from his Beirut apartment by gunmen on Friday.

A telephone caller claiming to represent a pro-Syrian guerrilla group said Muhaissen was executed on Monday because Jordan and Iraq refused to extradite seven Syrian air force pilots who defected to those countries, the privately owned Voice of Lebanon radio in Beirut reported.

The caller's authenticity could not be confirmed. Both Syrian officials and a spokesman for the guerrilla group, Eagles of the Revolution, say they had nothing to do with kidnapping Muhaissen.

Officials in Amman, the Jordanian capital, vowed Tuesday that Jordan would make no concessions to the kidnapers and that "negotiations with terrorists are out of the question," sources said.

Jordan's acting foreign minister, Hasan Ibrahim, met with ambassadors of France and five Arab nations in Amman on Friday, asking them to work for Muhaissen's release.

Jordanian authorities doubled security checks on the frontier this week, and began requiring visas of Syrians entering the country.

The Syrian Cabinet met and Premier Abdul Raouf al-Kasbi issued a statement saying the government had studied "all the aggressive measures taken unilaterally by the Jordanian government against the Syrian people and decided not to retaliate against the Jordanian people."

It added the Jordanian government would be held responsible "for all its hostile actions against Syria and the subsequent developments."

This referred to new Jordanian regulations requiring advance visas for Syrians entering Jordan and reports in Damascus that several Syrian had been arrested in Amman on espionage charges.

The statement suggested Jordanian agents might have kidnapped Muhaissen "in order to provide motives for those who want to torpedo all the agreements between Syria and Jordan."

The frontier was closed in 1970, when Jordan's King Hussein expelled the guerrilla armies of the Palestine Liberation Organization. There was a brief border clash between Syria and Jordan in 1970, and the borders remained closed until relations thawed in 1972. The joint border facilities were opened in 1978.

Reagan's Son Object Of Financial Investigation

LOS ANGELES (AP) — The eldest son of President Reagan is being investigated for alleged securities violations in raising funds for his own gasohol operation and a company purported to own a gold mine in Arizona, according to court documents.

Documents on file in Municipal Court show the 35-year-old Michael Reagan's Sherman Oaks home has been searched twice — once in connection with each company.

In the gasohol case, investigators are trying to determine how the president's son used $17,500 given to him by four men who, according to court affidavits, claimed they were promised 30 percent interest in his Agricultural Energy Resources venture.

In the gold mining case, the documents show there is an investigation of allegations Reagan raised funds without a securities license for a mining company that was never incorporated.

An affidavit on file with the search warrants say one gasohol investor complained the money was going into Reagan's pocket instead of the company, but Reagan's lawyer, Donald Wager denied that Tuesday.

"Nobody complained," he said. "They are all the best of friends, and nobody has any complaints."

Wager added: "I am confident that when the investigation is complete, Michael Reagan will be exonerated."

White House press secretary James S. Brady, asked about the report, said, "It would just not be appropriate for us to have a comment from here."

He said he did not know the president's reaction to the report and did not think Reagan had spoken with his son about it.

"It is something that's being looked into," Brady said, but he said that did not involve White House lawyers.

The younger Reagan could not be reached immediately for comment. Investors told investigators for the district attorney's office and the state Department of Corporations that Reagan had offered to include them in the gasohol company, which was to sell equipment to farmers to turn excess or spoiled crops into fuel, according to the documents.

Reagan later told the investigators that the company, which he operates from his home, also serves as a broker to procure gasohol, the mixture of alcohol and gasoline.

Reagan's home was searched last Friday in connection with that investigation, according to the documents. It also was searched last Oct. 10 in connection with the other investigation, which centers on the activities of a man identified as Richard Francis Carey.

A Security Pacific National Bank branch in Hollywood also was searched Friday. The warrants called for "all documents, checks, correspondence and literature pertaining" to the company.

Documents attached to the October search warrant allege that Reagan helped Carey find investors for Sawyer Adecor International Inc.

According to Alan Weinger, corporations counsel for the district attorney's office, Reagan is not licensed as a securities agent and therefore, if he did receive compensation for helping Carey sell securities, he could be in violation of the law.

A Securities and Exchange Commission investigation was requested by investor Randall Lynch of Beverly Hills, documents show. Lynch told investigators he met Reagan when he purchased a boat from a Van Nuys company where Reagan was a salesman.

Lynch said Reagan subsequently spoke to him about Sawyer, and Lynch said he bought 2,000 shares of stock for $2 per share, which he paid for by check in June 1979. He said he gave his check to Carey through Reagan.

In a letter dated Oct. 24, 1979, asking for an investigation of Carey, Lynch told the Securities and Exchange Commission: "Mike Reagan explained the stock had great potential, since the company owned a gold mine in Arizona, which had been mined out years ago, but had a large amount of tailings, or the residue from mining operations."

Records show that the company abandoned its attempts at incorporation in California on May 30, 1980.

In fall of 1979, Lynch said Carey told him the Sawyer stock deal had fallen through and persuaded Lynch to invest the $4,000 and additional $10,000 into another firm, Polyanalyst Corp.

But Lynch said he never saw any of that stock, either.

Investigators also were looking into possible state corporate securities law violations by both Reagan and Century City lawyer Sheldon H. Lytton involving the offer and sale of stock in the gasohol company, according to affidavits on file in court with the search warrant.

Lytton was not available for comment, but Wager said he thinks Lytton also will be exonerated.

Police Investigate Burglary

A loss of $2,200 in stolen equipment and damages resulted from the Monday night burglary of Boswell & Crafton Inc., 3105 Slaton Highway, according to Lubbock police.

Reports indicate someone drove a vehicle through the wire-mesh gate at the business and entered the building by breaking the glass panes in two front doors.

The offices were ransacked and four desks were damaged, police said. In addition, a cutting torch, two wrench sockets and a small television were stolen.

The break-in occurred between 5:30 p.m. Monday and 7:30 a.m. Tuesday, reports show.

In other activity, the 30-year-old woman attendant at a Lubbock convenience store told police a man exposed himself to her in the store Tuesday morning.

The woman told officers the man entered the store with his pants unzipped about 10 a.m. and that he continually exposed himself by holding his fly open.

Police were notified and the man was stopped as he was driving away from the store. Officers obtained the suspect's name, address and other pertinent information, but he was released pending the possible filing of charges.

Juvenile officers said they have referred seven Atkins Junior High School students, ranging in age from 14 to 16, to the Lubbock County Juvenile Probation Office in connection with a series of thefts which occurred at the school over the past few months.

Officers Larry Manley and Tom Mann said six tape players, an unknown amount of money and about 20 coats from lockers and classrooms in the school have been reported stolen.

The thefts began last October and continued through last week, the officers said, and they credited school principal Wayne Carroll and vice principal C.W. Edwards for their help in the investigation.

Several of the stolen items have been recovered, police said.

Lubbock recorded its seventh business robbery of the year and the second one this week when a pistol-wielding man entered Ted's Drive-In, 2406 34th St., shortly before midnight Monday and made off with between $700 and $800 cash and $150 in checks, according to police.

Reports state the bandit encountered Melinda Rodriguez, a 15-year-old employee, as she stepped out a back door of the business just before closing.

The man, brandishing a small blue-steel revolver, reportedly pushed the girl back inside and led her into the kitchen where he confronted the manager, Ted Logou, 35, who was counting the day's receipts.

Police were told the bandit pointed the pistol at Logou and, claiming he was broke, demanded the money. Logou said he handed almost $1,000 to the gunman.

The manager told police the robber fled out a back door after taking the money and checks. He said he looked outside and saw the gunman jump into a faded red pickup, with another person behind the steering wheel. The vehicle sped east down the alley and turned north on Avenue X.

The armed man was described as black, between 40 and 45 years old, 6 feet tall, with a medium build.

Execution Date Set For Killer Of Indiana Family

MARTINSVILLE, Ind. (AP) — A judge on Tuesday set March 9 for the execution of Steven T. Judy, who said he wants to die in the electric chair rather than spend the rest of his life in prison for killing a young mother and her three children.

Circuit Judge Jeffery Boles scheduled the execution for sunrise on the second Monday in March at the Indiana State Prison in Michigan City.

Boles ruled after Judy, who appeared in court, said he would oppose any efforts to halt the execution. His court-appointed lawyer, Steve Harris, said there was nothing he could do unless Judy changes his mind and asks for help.

"He could go to the U.S. Supreme Court, but he said he didn't want to," said Harris. "He could also ask the governor for commutation of the sentence, but he said in court he didn't want anyone intervening on his behalf."

"He says he wants to die, and I'm not in a position to file any appeals on his behalf without his permission. I feel like he has certain mental problems, and he doesn't think the same as other people do. Knowing him as I do, I personally don't want him to be executed."

Judy, 24, was convicted last Feb. 25 for the April 1979 slayings of a 21-year-old Indianapolis woman and her three young children. The Indianapolis man has said since his conviction that he would rather be executed than imprisoned for life.

Harris said the American Civil Liberties Union and the National Association for the Advancement of Colored People have expressed interest in the case. But he said Judy, who is white, has said it would "be without his permission" if the two organizations intervene on his behalf.

In fact, Harris said, Judy indicated he would "write to the ACLU and the governor and ask that no effort be made to stop the execution."

The Judy case was sent back to Boles in late January after the Indiana Supreme Court upheld the constitutionality of the state's death penalty in a 4-1 decision and said Judy could waive his right to an automatic appeal.

Harris said the case was similar to that of Gary Gilmore, who was executed in Utah in 1977 after he asked that appeals in his behalf be stopped.

The first convicted murderer to be executed against his will after the U.S. Supreme Court upheld capital punishment was John Spenklink, who died in Florida's electric chair in May 1979.

Precinct Road Equipment Claimed In Bad Shape

By MARY ALICE ROBBINS
Avalanche-Journal Staff

Precinct 1 Commissioner Boyd Roberts says that road maintenance operations in his precinct have almost ground to a halt within the past month because of worn-out or inoperable equipment.

And, according to Roberts, commissioners probably will have to spend around $250,000 to buy sufficient equipment to properly maintain the county roads in that precinct, which covers the southwest portion of the county.

Other county officials, however, estimated the equipment will cost more than $310,000.

Roberts claimed that he has faced serious equipment problems since he took office Jan. 1. "We can't even operate," he noted.

A Republican, Roberts defeated former Commissioner Edgar Chance in November. Throughout his election campaign, Roberts criticized the incumbent for inadequate road maintenance in the precinct.

Much of the road equipment left at the Precinct 1 maintenance shop in Wolf-orth either was not repaired or is too old to be of much use, Roberts maintained.

For example, Roberts said, all of the other road and bridge precincts operate with six motor graders. He noted that Precinct 1 has seven motor graders, but only four of them are working.

Lubbock Avalanche-Journal Wednesday Morning, February 11, 1981

The precinct also does not have an operable bulldozer, the commissioner said. In addition, he claimed that riding some of the existing road equipment could be "a health hazard" to the precinct's employees.

To correct the equipment problems,

Roberts has proposed to buy one bulldozer, a half-ton pickup truck, one front-end loader and two motor graders. He stressed that the county either will have to purchase the equipment or will have to lease some.

In action Monday, other members of the commissioners court authorized bids to be taken for all the road equipment Roberts has requested. Purchasing that equipment is expected to put a sizeable dent in the Precinct 1 reserves.

County financial records indicate the Precinct 1 road and bridge fund totals about $641,000, the highest unreserved balance of any of the county's precincts.

But approximately $137,000 of that amount is in a dedicated right-of-way fund that cannot be dipped into without permission from the commissioners court.

According to Roberts, the purchase of the new vehicles should be offset somewhat through the sale of the precinct's older equipment.

At Roberts' suggestion, the commissioners court will conduct a countywide equipment sale March 28 at the Precinct 1 shop.

Road equipment from all four of the precincts as well as office machines and equipment from other county departments will be auctioned off during that sale.

Roberts said he expects to receive about $100,000 from the sale of his precinct's used equipment. He explained that the money will go back into the Precinct 1 road and bridge fund and should prevent a serious money crunch for the precinct this year.

Executive Resigning Tech Post

By RUTHANNE BROCKWAY
Avalanche-Journal Staff

The resignation of an interim vice president at Texas Tech University puts pressure on the development job search committee to "move expeditiously," a spokesman said Tuesday in the wake of George M. Fielding's announcement he is leaving March 1.

Fielding, 38, was named interim vice president for development and university relations last Oct. 15 after former development vice president Dr. Clyde Kelsey Jr. was asked to step down by President Lauro Cavazos.

Fielding has been named vice president of Petrophysics Inc., a geophysical exploration computing service in Houston.

He said there was no animosity involved in his decision to leave Tech after serving eight years in the development office, but rather that a former college classmate simply made him an attractive business offer he couldn't refuse.

"I feel this opportunity is one I couldn't afford to turn down," Fielding said, explaining that it was a natural direction to get back into the private sector because "All of my education was in business administration and related subjects."

Cavazos named a search committee last November to screen applications and nominations for the development post and chose Dr. John R. Bradford, dean of the College of Engineering, as chairman of that committee.

"I think Mr. Fielding's resignation will force greater urgency upon the actions of the committee," Bradford said, adding that "If we have someone by mid-summer we will be fortunate."

When asked whether he was a candidate for the post, as some have speculated, Bradford said, "Yes I know it has been mentioned but as head of the search committee I didn't think it was right and I withdrew my name. I am not a candidate."

Although an advertisement for the development post, placed in The Chronicle of Higher Education, stated a Jan. 31 deadline for applications, Bradford said that would not rule out consideration of persons discovered after that date.

Names of about 25 nominees and applicants are being considered by the search committee. The group is awaiting replies to letters of inquiry about those persons before scheduling its next search committee meeting.

"We probably will meet within the next 10 days to two weeks," Bradford said, explaining that a February meeting was planned anyway and had no relation to Fielding's resignation.

City Hires Official For Utilities Staff

David Bell has been selected as new superintendent of water and sewer operations and will assume duties March 23, according to Sam Wahl, director of Water Utilities.

Bell joins the Lubbock municipal staff after a four year tenure as director of public works for the city of Sherman. He will fill the post left vacant when Wheeler Mount retired in May.

Bell's duties in Sherman included full responsibility for the areas of water, sewer, sanitation, streets grounds, buildings, equipment and traffic.

Here his responsibilities will include water production and distribution, wastewater collection and treatment and water metering and customer service. He also will oversee water and sewer construction and maintenance.

Bell also served as assistant director of public works in Wichita Falls, assisting that city following its recent devastating tornado. He also performed engineering consultation and served four years as a U.S. Navy officer.

He graduated from Purdue University and received a master's degree from Texas Tech. He and his wife have two children.

Area Health Care Planners Eyeing Proposed Federal Budget Cutbacks

By DEBBI STALTER
Avalanche-Journal Staff

Area health care planners are carefully eyeing President Reagan's proposed federal budget changes, which a local official says will entirely cut out health systems agency funding if passed.

Dr. John Selby, chairman of South Plains Health Systems Inc., said the organization faces a loss of half its fiscal 1981 funding and possibly its total funding for 1982, although the legislation setting it up will stay on the books until October 1982.

South Plains Health Systems serves as a review group for federally funded health care programs and works to develop an overall coordinated health care system within this area through resource development.

Although an official announcement of future funding will not come until Reagan makes his proposed budget cuts public next week, Selby said health officials with whom he has spoken throughout the state have indicated health systems agencies are dead.

Selby said several special interest groups have attacked the agencies' existence and the American Medical Association has gone on record opposing future support of the organizations.

And Selby himself takes a dim view of the actual purpose of the groups. For instance, he noted, through federal planning guidelines the agencies follow, communities are limited to four hospital beds per 1,000 population. However, he said, hospitals have in the past month had to turn away patients after an influenza epidemic hit and packed to the limit several hospitals here.

Selby said the AMA considers the organizations "a waste of time and money that don't save any lives."

And, he added, if cutting out costs is the only factor considered, health plan coordinating groups will be the first to go.

He said he feels a return to the basic supply and demand approach would bring about the best control on inflated health care costs. Rather than leave an outside organization to decide how much expansion a hospital can undertake, Selby said the public's demand should make the final decision.

Unused space in the health facilities would eventually close out of necessity, he believes.

Health systems executive director Ron Warner said the local agency has funding until May of this year, but after that time, federal backing will depend on what Reagan proposes and Congress approves.

He said he has not been formally notified of any cuts, although he has heard that some type of revenue-sharing plan may be carried out instead.

Under this approach, he said, states would receive bloc grants for health care planning, leaving the shift of emphasis at the statewide level rather than federal.

Warner said he hopes Congress will look at the importance of health care management before making a decision.

The longest river in the United States is the combined Mississippi-Missouri system, 3,710 miles.

noting his organization has focused on planning and resource development in the past rather than acting as a regulatory agency.

Also to be seen in Reagan's proposals is the effect on the federally backed South Plains Emergency Medical Services Inc. A non-profit corporation which grew out of the health systems realm, SPEMS is charged with setting up improved quality and availability of emergency services within the Lubbock area.

The organization most recently has focused on training of emergency medical personnel, an improved communications network between hospitals and emergency vehicles and a future trauma center set-up that so far has been delayed by the exact designation of which hospital in Lubbock would serve as the center.

Although not directly funded by South Plains Health Systems, SPEMS serves as a planning mechanism similar to those

Vast Blood Drive To Open Today On Tech Campus

The largest blood drive ever attempted in West Texas will take place from 9 a.m. to 4 p.m. today through Friday on the Texas Tech campus.

Judy Costello, student coordinator of the event, said all of South Plains Blood Services' mobile units will be at the drive all three days.

"We think of the Texas Tech Blood Drive as a gift to West Texas at Valentine's," Miss Costello said. "Sometimes love just isn't enough to help out someone in need, and this drive is one way someone can give of himself to help others."

Miss Costello, a member of Alpha Phi Omega, a coed service fraternity at Tech which is cosponsoring the drive, said all blood donated would in turn be redonated to a needy recipient, meaning no profit will be made off donated blood.

"The $31 a person pays for a pint of blood from the blood center represents only the costs of South Plains Blood Services to process each pint," Miss Costello said. "That's a 7 1/2 percent increase over the last four years in blood costs," the coordinator said. "That's an incredible figure when you compare it to other medical costs."

Miss Costello said the blood drive is open to all Lubbockites. No monetary gain would come from donating a pint of blood, she said, but "the understanding your blood has gone to help another human being without asking anything in return. To me that's a West Texas concept — helping out a needy neighbor."

Persons giving blood must weigh 110 pounds and be between the ages of 17 and 66, Miss Costello said. Prospective donors must not have had hepatitis or jaundice, she added.

coming under review by Reagan's staff. The extent of its inclusion in health care planning reviews hasn't been clarified.

Local officials are awaiting Reagan's announcement next Wednesday for a clue to how much the local services will be affected.

History lessons that once focused on the brilliance of Einstein and the moving poetry of Emily Dickinson now have been infused as well with information about scientist Charles Drew and poet Nikki Giovanni — both leading black figures in their fields.

Those revamped history lessons are the signs of a growing movement in the Lubbock public schools toward "multi-cultural" education, said elementary consultant Eva Samples.

The trend is getting a boost for the second year from the local chapter of the national black sorority Alpha Kappa Alpha, which has donated to the district posters depicting famous black scientists.

The posters are second in a series that portray leading black Americans in different fields. Last year the group donated posters showing black writers.

The posters are aimed at promoting black history among all children and also show role models for young blacks, said Joan Crawford, a sorority member who teaches at Parkway Elementary School. The donations coincide with Black History Week this week and Black History Month that lasts throughout February.

"I think the emphasis of Black History Week is to show that for so long blacks were left out of history. Now we like to think of all of us together," Mrs. Crawford said.

"I want children to see positive role models" through studies about black Americans, she said. "I try to focus studies on current figures too because children at this age need to see somebody they can identify with."

She noted that several years ago encyclopedias did not even cover black historical figures. "But everything's changing now. We have newer sets that do."

Mrs. Samples said that black history and history about other cultures now is being included throughout the Lubbock public school curriculum. "It's a multi-cultural approach." She and Mrs. Crawford said that information about other cultures is brought into such areas as political science, literature, language arts and science. In addition, the secondary schools in the district offer an American Cultures Studies course that covers the study of the American Indian, Mexican-American and black American cultures.

Mrs. Crawford said the study of black history also allows youngsters to learn the education and work that famous black figures had to pursue to achieve in their fields.

"I teach them to think, 'I've got to work to do this. Those people didn't just get this way,'" she said.

And black history is applicable to children of all races, she said. "It's not just tunneled. It includes everybody."

"The history of everybody is important for all," Mrs. Samples said, adding that even schools throughout the system that have predominantly Anglo enrollment are observing Black History Week. "It seems as if the whole community is involved in this."

Mrs. Samples, also a member of the sorority, said feedback from school officials on the posters has been positive. "I know they're widely used" even beyond Black History Month, she said.

MISTRIAL DECLARED

SAN FRANCISCO (AP) — A mistrial has been declared in a negligence suit against the Golden Dragon Restaurant, where five persons died in a 1977 Chinatown gang shooting spree. Judge John Dearman declined to say why he declared the mistrial and attorneys involved in the suit filed by several survivors and relatives of victims were also ordered not to discuss the matter. Dearman said a new trial will not be scheduled for at least three months. The suit claims the restaurant was negligent in allowing gang members to gather on the premises and did not take adequate safety precautions.

At Wit's End...

By ERMA BOMBECK

If the American Family is becoming an endangered species, you can bet one of the things that killed it is the dinner hour.

When it was conceived, the dinner hour was to be a gathering of every member of the family who would sit around and exchange pleasantries and news of what each had done that day.

I know that's the way it's supposed to be because I saw it once on the Donna Reed Show.

We have never had a family dinner that did not sound like we were hosting a lynching. It was inevitable to touch upon who did what to whom, who did it first, and who would get a room to themselves after they were sentenced.

The criticism of family meals is that this is not a fit topic to discuss at dinner-time. As I see it, no one seems to know what is a fit subject to talk about at the dinner table. There are few things that the entire family can get into.

Children tend to talk about things that take away your interest in food — and living. At one meal alone, I heard a description of the underside of the tongue, a rumor of what popular food contained rat's nostrils, what puered peas remind you of when you look at them from a distance, and what happens to the dog's stool when he eats leftover chicken.

Men prefer to talk about money. Within minutes they can make you feel guilty for asking for seconds on the salt. They also take the opportunity to lay on the family their famous lectures: "An 'E' on the Gas Gauge Does Not Mean Evacuate," "Why Do We Heat the Front Porch by Gas in the Winter?" "Don't Reach Out and Touch Somebody Unless It's Collect," and the all-time favorite, "When I Go to the Poorhouse, I'll Have to Call a Cab to Get There."

Mothers use the togetherness of the meal to discuss their doormat status (Why don't you just put a key under my tongue and stand on me?) and to tell their children that no one ever amounted to anything who smoothed a lumpy bed with a coat hanger.

I have come to the conclusion there are no safe topic areas at the family dinner table. No matter what you hit upon, every member of the family will react in character.

The other night, a guest said at our table, "I read where the Snail Darter is still on the endangered species list."

There was a moment of silence before one child said, "Aren't they the ones that bled through the eyes when they die?" My husband said, "When they go up to $10 a pound, knowing our kids, they'll develop a Snail Darter deficiency."

I said, "They aren't the only ones who have become endangered. So are women who pick up towels after a 16-year-old."

The family that eats together shouldn't.

HINTS FROM HELOISE

Nylon Net Solves Defrosting Problem

DEAR HELOISE: I have another success story for your wonderful nylon net.

The defrost drain tube on my refrigerator used to stop up every few months, causing the water to back up when the refrigerator self-defrosted.

About a year ago, in desperation, I placed a square of nylon net, folded a few times, over the drain cup at the top of the hose.

Would you believe, no more stopped up hose! Every few weeks I remove the nylon net, wash it good and replace it. No more watery mess to clean up in the bottom of the fridge, either.

Just a quick rinse with hot water through the drain tube and the replacement of the clean nylon net has resulted in the solving of a frustrating problem of many years. — Barbara Foster

An ounce of prevention... any way to make daily chores fewer and less of a hassle is worth passing on. Thanks. — Heloise

LETTER OF THOUGHT

DEAR HELOISE: I read with interest the column about the lady who gave her automatic dishwasher away and started washing dishes by hand so that she and her daughters could spend time together.

Reminded me of a few years ago when my father was living with us and loved to dry the dishes for me.

Enter the new automatic dishwasher, and the first thing he said was, "Now what are we going to do in the evening?" He is older and no longer living with us, but if he were, you can be certain I would have dishpan hands again!

I'm sure there must be a valuable lesson here. — V.M.S.

There sure is, hon! Make memories while you can! — Heloise

VALENTINE CAKE

DEAR HELOISE:

I've baked a Valentine cake for my family each year for about 20 years, but when I reached for the red food coloring the last time, it had dried up.

By adding a little water to the coloring, I was able to tint the cake batter, but there wasn't enough for the icing.

A valentine cake that isn't pink just won't do, so I found a package of red granulated soft drink mix (the unsweetened kind) in among my kitchen goodies.

A few shakes turned the frosting into just the right shade of pink and saved the day. — Mary Frances Davis

BANDAGE BOON

DEAR HELOISE:

Clipping the adhesive ends of bandage strips lengthwise, leaving the sterilized pad intact, makes the bandage easier to apply to hard-to-fit places, like the end of the finger or a knuckle. — Dixie Haase

Cutting the bandage strip all the way in half lengthwise, making two bandages, can make a better fit for tiny fingers and hurts.

— Heloise

ENERGY SAVER

DEAR HELOISE:

Trying to conserve energy and my gas bill, I turn the furnace way down at night. Being very cold, I sleep under an electric blanket. So, when I get into bed, I tuck my robe and bedroom slippers under the electric blanket on the opposite side of the bed.

When I get up in the morning, I just slip into them, turn the furnace up, and I stay toasty warm until the blower comes on. — Betty Jean Osurn

All excited about a super work-saver you've just discovered? Send that dandy hint to Heloise care of 235 E. 45th St., New York, N.Y. 10017. She can't answer your letter personally but, sure as corn pops, she'll share the best hints received with her readers.

Singer Enjoys Cooking Chili

CHICAGO (Special) — Johnny Cash is a man of many talents. Known by most as a country music superstar, Johnny also has motion picture, television and authorship credits. In addition to his professional life, his talents stretch to the outdoors with his favorite recreations: hunting, fishing, gardening and water skiing. Back inside on the homefront, Johnny enjoys researching folklore and cooking — especially a piping hot pot of spicy chili.

"With all of the traveling I do, I don't have a lot of opportunity to cook. But when I do, I enjoy it. I like chili — especially after spending an active day outdoors," says Cash.

Johnny, however, has been spending most of his time these days filming a dramatic television special, "The Pride of Jesse Hallam," which can be seen Tuesday, March 3, from 8 until 10 p.m., on CBS. Sponsored in part by Kraft, this poignant drama addresses the sensitive problem of illiteracy through the character of Jesse Hallam, played by Johnny Cash. The program is recommended by the National Education Association.

His role in this special dealt with a tough subject matter. Johnny has always displayed a perceptive awareness of the human condition, good and bad, through his artistic endeavors. He draws heavily upon his own life experiences as witnessed in his concert repertoire of hits such as "A Ring of Fire," "A Boy Named Sue," "Folsom Prison Blues," "One Piece at a Time," and "I Walk the Line."

By using his great personal strength and innate musical ability, Johnny Cash has come a long way through the years, paying his dues as he went. He was the son of an Arkansas cotton farmer who suffered greatly during the depression. When Johnny was only ten years old, he was helping with family finances as best he could hauling water for a road gang. But he somehow saved time for music, listening to popular country singers such as Ernest Tubb, Hank Williams, and the Carter Family. At twelve years old he was writing songs, poems and stories. Johnny knew then that his future would be music.

Today, he has already sold more than 50 million records in his illustrious career. By his own count, he has composed more than 1,000 songs. Johnny has been awarded four Grammys and four Country Music Awards including the prestigious CMA Entertainer of the Year honor. In 1980, he was inducted into the Country Music Hall of Fame, the highest honor in the industry.

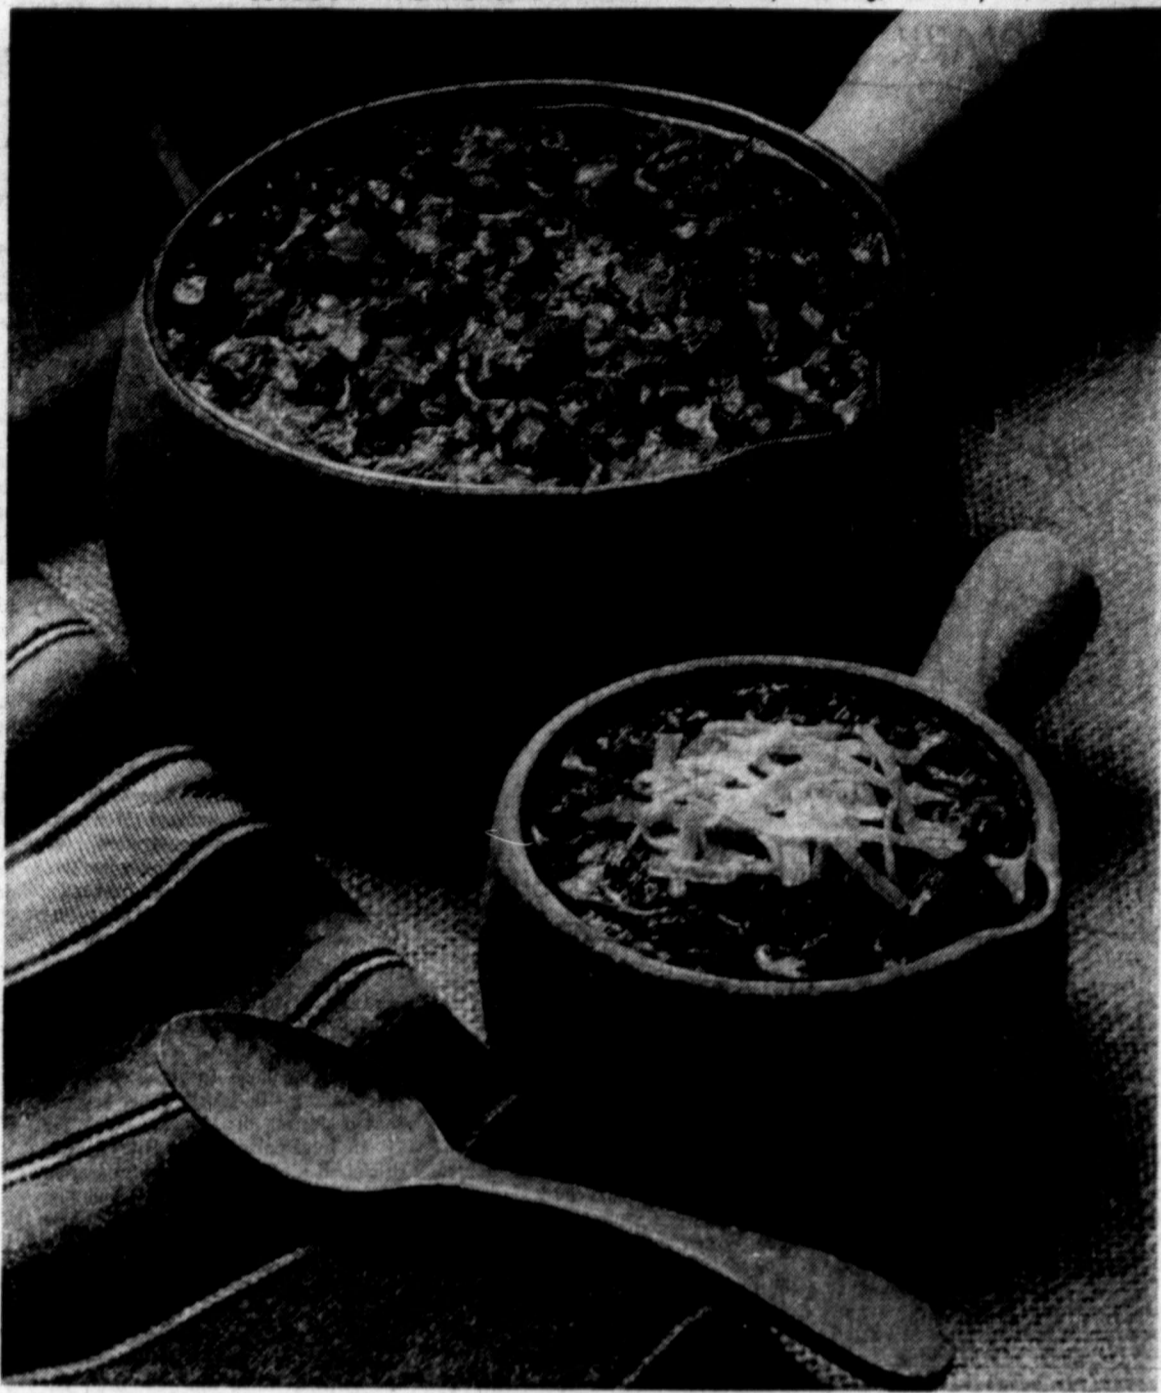

In between television and concert commitments, when they can take time away from their busy schedules, there is nothing Johnny and June Carter Cash enjoy more than "complete freedom." "That means getting away to somewhere no one knows us," says Johnny. "And taking our son, John, with us to be sure we know our little boy as well as we should and that we're bringing him up right."

"One of our favorite things is hiding out at our place in the woods," Johnny says with a smile. "And that's when I'll make that good ole chili."

Johnny's taste is for hot, spicy chili. Here is just such a recipe.

CHILI CON QUESO

1 lb. ground beef
 1/2 cup chopped onion
 1 16-oz. can kidney beans, undrained
 1 16-oz. can tomatoes, undrained
 1 8-oz. can tomato sauce
 1 tsp. chili powder
 1 tsp. salt
 Sharp natural cheddar cheese, shredded
 Brown meat; drain. Add onion; cook until tender. Stir in remaining ingredients except cheese. Cover; simmer 30 minutes, stirring occasionally. Top with cheese. Sprinkle with additional chopped onion, if desired. Makes 4 servings.

Minimizing Bed Wetting Situation Prevents Psychological Damage

By PAUL DONOHUE, M.D.

Dear Dr. Donohue: I have two boys, ages 7 and 5, who wet the bed almost every night. My pediatrician examined them and recommends the alarm blanket, which wakes them with an alarm when it becomes wet. What is your opinion of this method? I am a little concerned about the possible emotional side effects. Any other suggestions you might have concerning this problem would be most appreciated by myself and several friends who also have boys in this same age bracket who wet their beds. — C.S.R.

take a bit more time with my answer. The most popular explanation is a delay in the natural development of normal nerve-muscle control of the urinary bladder. That corrects itself in time. However, since there may be a true physical abnormality beyond this delay factor, the best approach is the one you took: you had the children examined. With no physical problems found, there are many approaches you can take now.

The alarm blanket is not new. It is wired to detect moisture and set off an awakening sound. Claims for effectiveness range from 65 percent to 100 percent, depending on which study you believe. The devices are safe, so long as they are ones approved for use. In some cases, doctors recommend simultaneous approaches, such as having the child attempt to hold his urine a little longer during the hours of dryness (daytime). This may increase the size of the bladder just enough to allow it to hold more urine during the night.

For this problem, parents should have the proper perspective, realizing that spontaneous "cures" are the rule. All attempts at control should be undertaken with a minimum of fuss. Most children quickly adapt to the sensible view that an alarm blanket, or whatever technique is tried, is only a way to try to get rid of an undesired but temporary problem. With this approach, no psychological damage need result.

Dear Dr. Donohue: I am 12 years old. I would like to know why girls come on their menstruation. My mother could not answer this, so I thought maybe you can answer. — A.M.

When a girl begins to menstruate, that signals the fact that she is finally making female hormones. These are the substances that bring about changes in the uterus — changes that make it possible for an egg to develop there when she becomes pregnant (conceives). If no egg is going to develop then the lining of the uterus is shed, because it is of no further use. That causes the slight bleeding, the menstruation.

Each month thereafter, the same thing happens until the girl does become pregnant. Then, the uterus does not shed its lining, but remains to protect the developing egg (the future baby). There will be no menstruation until after the baby is born. After that the same process (including menstruation) begins anew.

Dear Dr. Donohue: I am 49 and my husband is 54. We have not had sex for several years because he has had difficulty maintaining an erection. He has high blood pressure that comes and goes. He takes pills for it off and on when it gets high. It is Aldomet. I can tell you, this is really getting to me. Can you tell me anything about it? — Mrs. A.S.

A potential side effect of Aldomet (methyldopa) is impotence. If that is the cause, then simply changing medication should take care of the problem. You have to appreciate that medicine is only one possibility, so your husband has to discuss this with his doctor.

I wonder how your husband determines when his blood pressure status permits him to stop taking medicine. Such medicine schedules are not usually an on-again-off-again proposition. I think he needs a discussion with his doctor about this also. He is one of the millions of high blood pressure patients who deceive themselves about a presumed lack of need for their medicine.

Dr. Donohue welcomes reader mail but regrets that, due to the tremendous volume received daily, he is unable to answer individual letters. Readers' questions are incorporated in his column whenever possible.

Copyright 1981 Field Enterprises, Inc.

The fact at you have several friends whose children have this problem should be informative to you. Bedwetting does, in fact, occur in as many as 20 percent of children at age five, and in 5 percent of children at 10. My mail indicates it is a major concern of many parents, so I'll

Victory Poster On Exhibition

DALLAS (Special) — "Posters For Victory," an exhibition of seventy-three World War II posters, is on display at the Dallas Historical Society, Hall of State, Fair Park, now through March 21.

"Posters For Victory" was organized by the West Point Museum, United States Military Academy, and is being circulated by the Smithsonian Institution Exhibition Service (SITES).

From 1941 to 1945 the United States undertook a major public relations campaign to gain support for its war effort. As part of this campaign thousands of colorful posters were produced by government agencies and private companies to encourage the saving of fuel and scrap metal, to stress the need for security and self-sacrifice and to promote the sale of war bonds.

"Posters For Victory" focuses on the American home front and the overall mood of the country during the war years. Placed in restaurants, taxicabs, museum foyers, theaters and shops these large easily-displayed posters were an inexpensive medium for mass communication.

Another display includes the war effort in Dallas, with samples of rationing books and coupons, job pamphlets, posters and Dallas Community War Chest documents.

"Posters For Victory" can be seen at the Hall of State, Fair Park, during regular museum hours, 9 a.m.-5 p.m. Monday through Saturday, 1-5 p.m. on Sunday. Free admission. For more information, interested persons should contact Cossy McLemore, director of public affairs Dallas Historical Society, 817/421-5136.

NEW MADRAS BLAZER — Preppy goes pretty in new spring shades and fresh plaids. This blazer does the trick in ice cream colored linen. Pair it with classic pants, cable pullover, and a string blouse for a winning pants look.

DEMAND A PRETTY SUIT — A flattering and feminine suit can be a great softened business look. The easy flare dirndl skirt gets buttoned up with a relaxed blazer, with both pieces out of line. A feminine, ruffled blouse is the final touch.

Pants, Skirts Work Well For Business Women

The war between pants and skirts has been on for several seasons now... for a business woman, which works best?

This season, the answer is: both. It's your choice this spring. The preppy image and investment-classic clothing have conceded to a new softening, making changes in shape, silhouette, fabric and color.

Not that this takes away from your business look, it just lets you show your feminine side at the same time.

The drab navy gabardine suits of last year have been replaced by a new suit-chic. Soft, figure-flattering, shorter jackets and easy dirndl or wrap skirts in pastel colors emphasize the new femininity.

Fabrics, such as linens and cotton twills are relaxed and lightweight. Some old favorite influences are getting bright new revivals. The classic nauticals, with riddy blouses and front-button trousers, look fresh and fun. And in the pants category, there are different lengths (from shorts to jumpsuits), different widths (from bloomers to jodhpurs), and different shapes (from pantaloons to trousers).

If the choice between pants and skirts poses a dilemma, go for the compromise candidate: the culotte. They're practical, wearable, and also come in several different designs.

Fashion for spring need not send us to our closets for a total overhaul... even last year's leftovers will still look fashion-right paired with the many choices in this season's clothes.

ANN LANDERS

Husband Avoids Using Wife's Name

Dear Ann Landers: I wonder if you have an explanation for this? We have been married for 20 years and my husband never addresses me by name.

When he introduces me to someone, he says, "This is Delores." But when the phone rings and I am upstairs he shouts, "It's for YOU."

I have told him how much it annoys me, and still he persists in this habit of avoidance. When I ask for an explanation, he has none. Once I had a sign made and wore it around my neck. It read, "I AM DELORES." He thought it was funny, but it didn't change anything.

Do you have an explanation for this unusual behavior? If I understood it, perhaps I could be more tolerant. Thanks for your thoughts. — Lock Haven, Pa.

conscious or subconscious defiance. The rationale expressed here is not out of my own head. My consultant is a California analyst who wishes to remain anonymous.

Dear Ann Landers: Please transform this mess into a decent letter and print it. Commuters across the world will bless you. If you doubt its merit, I ask only that you sit next to a person on a train or bus who was in such a great hurry to rush out the door that she took her coffee along.

To begin with, there is no justification for this gross behavior. No matter how frenetic the schedule, it is inexcusable. Instant coffee can be spooned into the cup the night before and the water boiled while you brush your teeth. An electric percolator can be set to go, and all you have to do in the morning is plug it in. It is no fun to keep glancing nervously at a cup just a few inches from your lap whenever the bus or train lurches or stops. Try to imagine how YOU would feel if you had to show up at work in a dress (or a pair of trousers) with an ugly coffee stain down the front.

Thanks, Ann. Now will you please do a number on these idiots? — A Face In the Crowd

Dear Face: I wonder how many people are reading this column on their way to work. If you happen to be seated next to a person with a cup of coffee this very minute, do me a favor and show it to the slob — and if you get spilled on I don't want to hear about it.

Dear Ann Landers: I wish you would say something in your column about grandparents who don't get to see their grandchildren because their mother had a fight with the old folks. I am not long in this country and my English is poor, so please fix up my language so you can print it in the newspaper.

We love the little ones and don't think it is right that we are deprived of this pleasure because of problems the children have nothing to do with. I know I am not saying this very well. Please help me. — Lonesome In The West

Dear Lonesome: You said it just fine. Parents who keep their children away from grandparents because of adult misunderstandings hurt not only the old folks but the young ones, too.

Grandparents can add a dimension to the lives of young people that they cannot get anywhere else. It's sad when death denies them this. To lose it because of vindictiveness is unspeakable.

Is pot a drug? Can LSD and pills open new worlds for you? Stop guessing. Get the facts in Ann Landers' new booklet, "Straight Dope on Drugs." Our British cousins have a bid they call the comic notrump. It is a non-vulnerable notrump overall to show 13 cards with a long suit to run to, if doubled.

In this hand from the 1966 Olympiad, we found a French player using this bid with conspicuous lack of success.

Their opponents were a Spanish pair who just weren't going to be bamboozled by this comic relief. Thus, North doubled the comic notrump. East jumped to five clubs. He could count on eight tricks there and South was strong enough to bid five hearts.

West passed and North (possibly a member of a family of bullfighters) just bid seven hearts to close the bidding. The opening lead was not ruffed and South wrapped up the grand slam.

It was just about a top score. One North-South pair found their way to seven notrump where there were also 13 tricks, but very few got beyond six.

Bad North-South scores came when East bid seven clubs and got doubled for just 900 points minus.

The North-South bottom came when North responded one spade-East bid just four clubs and South tried a Blackwood four notrump and went to seven spades when North showed three aces. East opened a club and West ruffed.

Favorite Family Recipe Wins National Beef Cook-Off

CHICAGO (Special) — When Lucille Roach of Florissant, Missouri was looking for a recipe to enter in the National Beef Cook-Off, she reached into her recipe file for an old family favorite and came up with a winner. Mrs. Roach's "Baked Beef Brisket" took the top prize of $1500 at the seventh annual Cook-Off held recently in Scottsdale, Ariz.

The easy and tasty brisket recipe has been a favorite in Mrs. Roach's family since World War II when meat was rationed by points. The brisket was only one point per pound so points were stretched by buying brisket for the meat-centered meals the family enjoyed.

Winning the second prize of $750 was Aline Ballentine of Ellenville, N.Y., with her entry "Chick-Chuck." This unique economical recipe pairs chuck steaks and chickpeas in a rhubarb-tomato sauce that's spiced with chili powder. Edna King of Hobbs, N.M., received the $5.00 third place award for "Chili-Beef Rellenos Won-Ton" while features green chilies stuffed with a ground beef filling, wrapped in egg roll skins and fried.

Honorable mention and $100 were awarded to Wilene Thornton of Talladega, Ala., for "Beef with Caper Sauce"; Sharon Jarrett of Minden, Nev., for "Palm 'Beef Salad'; Mary Rita Rishe of Bristol, R.I., for "Old World Bavarian Beef Pie"; Agnes Wise of Columbia, S.C., for "Pie in the Sky"; Lois Dowling of Tacoma, Wash., for "Little Charles Wellingtons."

The National Beef Cook-Off is sponsored by the American National Cow-Belles and the Beef Industry Council of the National Live Stock and Meat Board. The contest, which this year drew entrants from 48 states and the District of Columbia, demonstrates the appetite appeal and versatility of economical beef cuts from the chuck, round, rump or fresh brisket in any form.

Next year the Cook-Off, which is open to all non-professional cooks, will be held in Sioux Falls, S.D.

The eight winning recipes are available in a folder and can be obtained by sending a large stamped self-addressed envelope to "Best of Beef," Dept. MFS, Beef Industry Council, 4444 North Michigan, Chicago, IL 60611.

BAKED BEEF BRISKET

Ancient Chinese Pipa Had Great Musical Capabilities

By EDITH M. LEDERER
HONG KONG (AP) — When Feng Teming plays the Chinese pipa, the sound of galloping horses and exploding artillery shells can shift in moments to the lyrical music of "White Snow in Warm Spring."

Hong Kong-born Feng said the four-stringed Chinese lute had greater technical possibilities than any other instrument in the world, including its Western relative, the guitar.

Feng, who claims to be one of the world's two living masters of the traditional Chinese pipa, has been hailed in Europe and many Asian capitals for his brilliant playing. Ironically, he has never been to China, but dreams of playing there one day.

The pipa was introduced to China from Persia via the silk route about the 4th or 5th century and its technical mastery was considered the mark of an intellectual.

But Helga Burger, a West German expert on Chinese opera and music who lives here, explained that when the Communists came to power in 1949, they did away with the traditional pipe following the late chairman Mao Tse-tung's dictum of "bringing in the new and driving out the old."

The new pipa is larger. Its strings are metal instead of nylon and silk. Its tones have been harmonized to a more Westernized sound. As a result, Burger said, "a lot of traditional subtleties cannot be brought out any more."

Feng, nearing 40, said he had first heard the pipa being played on the radio by one of China's great masters, Wei Zhong-lo, when he was 11 years old. Wei, now in his 80s, lives in Shanghai.

"When the sound touched my skin, I had a certain feeling, a physical reaction, not just a feeling inside," he said. "and I thought I would like very much to study it."

Hong Kong didn't have a teacher of the traditional pipa in the early 1950s so Feng started learning another style of pipa. In 1957, however, Lui Tsun-yuan, who was one of China's most famous pipa players, came to Hong Kong to avoid the anti-rightist campaign. He took Feng on as his only student.

Feng said the only other living master of the traditional pipa was his old teacher, Lui, who is currently a professor in the department of Chinese and East Asian music at the University of California at Los Angeles.

"In China, a few students were trained on the traditional pipa but, unfortunately, these students were retrained in the cultural revolution and now they play the modern version of the pipa, which is simplified," Burger said. "The Chinese say it's a luxury to train on the traditional pipa for so many years."

Feng's training lasted about 20 years, including 18 months in Japan in the early 1970s, studying the satsuma biwa, which is an early Japanese-style pipa. His teacher, Seigo Tsuji, is one of Japan's master biwa players.

Since his first solo performance in Hong Kong in 1972, Feng has been traveling in Asia and Europe giving concerts. In the next few years, he is hoping to tour the United States.

Unlike the guitar and violin, which are held horizontally, the pipa is held vertically, which Burger says greatly enhances its technical possibilities. There are more than 40 rules for plucking the

Newspaper Logs Burn Long, Bright

LAS CRUCES — Rolled newspaper logs are a good way to make the wood pile behind the house last longer, according to JoAnn Less, extension housing specialist at New Mexico State University.

Such logs, whether rolled by hand or with a hand-cranked machine, will burn as long and give off about the same amount of heat as a wood log of the same size.

When paper logs are rolled with one of the hand-cranked, log-making devices, the paper is often moistened with water to make a tightly packed log. A tablespoon of liquid detergent added to a small tub of water will make a mixture that helps the paper stick together which, in turn, reduces the fly ash when the log is burned. A log made this way has to dry thoroughly before it is used.

Hand rolling usually is the fastest and easiest method to create a paper log. It's a good idea to stagger the newspaper sheets so pages are interlocking. This helps the log hold its shape better, and it strings of the pipa, compared to about a dozen for the classical guitar.

Playing the pipa also requires enormous strength, especially the military pieces like "Ambush From All Sides" where fingers twirl, strings are pushed backward and forward and under each other and strumming is so fast that the fingers look blurred.

results in an even density that aids thorough burning.

Newspaper logs sometimes need a little help to get started properly. A waxed milk carton can be split and used as the final outside wrap to aid starting and burning. The finished log can also be brushed with melted paraffin, or the ends can be dipped in paraffin.

Handmade logs can be made by wrapping the newspaper sheets around a broomstick, and tying the finished log in at least two places with string. When the broomstick is removed, the resulting center hole helps the log burn better.

If the broomstick method is used with dampened sheets of newspaper, the log should be tilted slightly when drying to make sure the center hole is fully dried.

Newspaper logs burn at a lower temperature than wood, so the fire is often not hot enough to consume the entire paper log. This can be overcome by burning wood and newspaper logs together in the fireplace.

Incredible Shrinking Script Belittles Tomlin

SOAPBOX STATEMENT — Lily Tomlin, having shrunk drastically in size, delivers a monologue while literally standing on a soapbox, surrounded by eggshells, in this scene from "The Incredible Shrinking Woman." The PG-rated comedy is now at the South Plains Cinema.

"The Incredible Shrinking Woman." Screenplay by Jane Wagner. Photographed by Bruce Logan. Edited by Jeff Gourson and Anthony Radman. Costumes designed by Roberta Weiner. Music by Suzanne Cianci. Directed by Joel Schumacher. Stars Lily Tomlin, Charles Grodin, Ned Beatty, Henry Gibson and Richard A. Baker. Rated PG. At the South Plains Cinema.

By WILLIAM D. KERNS
A-J Entertainment Editor

Lily Tomlin's thespic talents have never been suspect, but the same can't be said for the judgment she's displayed in choosing movie scripts. Indeed, lately she's shown more loyalty than intelligence, choosing to work twice with good friend Jane Wagner and bombing on both occasions.

Miss Wagner, of course, both wrote and directed the execrable "Moment By Moment," a film so laughably boring it actually managed to erase from our memories Miss Tomlin's prior fine work in "Nashville" and "The Late Show." Then, just as the actress managed to reaffirm her worth via "Nine To Five," along comes a new release called "The Incredible Shrinking Woman."

Written and executive produced by, you guessed it, Jane Wagner, the picture is short on laughs and long on stupidity. Indeed, every February it seems there emerges one picture so boring, so bad, so ridiculous that one doubts any other film in the next 10 months could possibly be worse. This year, that film is "The Incredible Shrinking Woman."

It would be bad enough if the film was simply a comedy which didn't click, but instead it's a pretentious work trying to shoot off messages about American consumerism. While the title is ripped off from Richard Matheson's novel "The Shrinking Man" and Jack Arnold's 1957 sci-fi thriller "The Incredible Shrinking Man," there is precious little common material. Instead, Lily Tomlin begins to physically shrink in size as a result of her many encounters with chemical additives, with detergents and deodorants, with perfumes and polishes and any number of items found on the grocery shelves.

No one involved with this film could possibly know the meaning of the word subtlety. In fact, Miss Wagner and director Joel Schumacher have purposely painted the picture in the wildest of pastels. The walls and even the clothes are all the color of M&Ms, Life Savers and Fruit Loops. The setting is an exaggerated suburb called Tasty Meadows, where Miss Tomlin plays the ever-domestic housewife with her two kids, one dog, adoring husband and an Hispanic maid.

It's obvious Schumacher is trying to satirize television's sit-coms and wholesome families and, more importantly, the plasticity of TV commercials — but instead he only succeeds in making his movie look like one. Indeed, "The Incredible Shrinking Woman" is but another consumer product worthy of BBB investigation and subsequent warnings.

It's bad enough when Miss Tomlin starts to shrink, still believing in consumerism to the point of mouthing words like "thank heaven for polyester." But then Schumacher simply loses control. He allows her an extended, meaningless visit on The Mike Douglas Show — complete with Douglas' singing and casual interview. There is obvious parody in his commercial breaks, but one still wonders who's satirizing whom in this scene.

But the film really falls apart when Miss Tomlin is kidnapped by scientist Henry Gibson and others associated with the Institute For The Study Of Unexplained Phenomena.

Satire gives way to out and out slapstick when the Bad Guys express plans to use Miss Tomlin's blood to poison foreign water supplies, to control the world by miniaturizing it. She's held captive in a hamster cage, rescued by a gorilla who communicates via sign language and a lab assistant who thinks he's on "Saturday Night Live" — and before you know it, the movie is reduced to chase scenes reminiscent of nothing more intelligent or meaty than Three Stooges routines.

And believe me, it's hard to enjoy your popcorn, much less the movie, when you're always yawning.

Lily Tomlin makes a valiant effort in three roles — the shrinking housewife and two revivals: nosy neighbor Judith Beasley and snorting telephone operator Ernestine — but trying to get laughs with this material is like trying to eat chicken broth with a fork. Charles Grodin muddles through his usual thankless supporting role, the same one he played opposite Goldie Hawn in "Seems Like Old Times" and Jill Clayburgh in "It's My Turn" just last year. ("Heaven Can Wait" is the only movie in the past three years to adeptly utilize Grodin's talents.)

Ned Beatty is as effective here as he was in "Superman," which is to say not at all, and Henry Gibson supplies enough ham to service the largest buffet imaginable.

The only thespian who comes off well is Richard A. (Rick) Baker inside the gorilla costume. Baker has played many gorillas during his film career — he was even the monkey Dino DeLaurentis tried to pass off as mechanical in the "King Kong" remake — and it's hard to fault him here. Still, at the screening I attended the biggest laugh arrived when the gorilla made an obscene gesture — and that has to tell you something about the movie as a whole.

Much has been written of the special effects, but any construction engineer with a budget can make oversized chairs and props. The use of rear screen projection is adequate, and I'll admit there is a small tidbit of suspense when Miss Tomlin is momentarily trapped inside a garbage disposal. But the sad fact remains that "The Incredible Shrinking Woman" offers neither dramatic nor comedic consistency.

Small thinkers put this movie together, a film much too long and all too ineffective, a picture which will no doubt play to an incredible shrinking audience as weeks pass and the word spreads.

Peter Sellers stars in "The Mouse That Roared" at 8 p.m. today at the Texas Tech University Center theater, another Cinematheque feature. The film is open to the public, with a $1.50 admission charge in effect.

REMINDERS FOR FILM BUFFS: Jonathan Demme's "Melvin And Howard" opens Friday at the South Plains Cinema and, surprise, Roman Polanski's highly acclaimed "Tess" opens a limited one-week run Friday at the Mann Fourplex. The controversial, action-packed police drama "Fort Apache, The Bronx," once booked at the Winchester Twin, will instead open Friday at the South Plains Cinema. Also sparking controversy during its filming stage, "Charlie Chan & The Curse Of The Dragon Queen" is also ready for release, opening Friday at the Mann Fourplex. And Showplace Six will bring in both "The Competition" and "The Devil And Max Devlin" the same day.

Showplace officials also state that "Gone With The Wind" will depart after tomorrow night's performance, but that "The Idolmaker" will be held over yet another week due to building business.

AND A SNEAK: "Tribute," starring Jack Lemmon and Lee Remick, will be screened Saturday night as a sneak preview at the Winchester Twin. Those paying to see "Tribute" can stay and see the evening's final showing of "Nine To Five" free of charge.

Friends Say Haley Was Considering Comeback, Working On Book

HARLINGEN (AP) — Former rock 'n' roll star Bill Haley spent the last years of his life fleeing the limelight, yet he talked of a comeback and hoped Hollywood would do a movie about his life, friends said.

Haley died Monday in his two-story, wood-frame home in this Rio Grande Valley city near the Mexican border.

He had denied to local reporters that he was the man who recorded the multi-million-selling 1950s hit "Rock Around The Clock," but he was writing his autobiography in hopes that his role in the birth of rock 'n' roll music would not be forgotten.

"Like a lot of us, he had his ups and downs," said Haley's close friend, Eason "J.E." Tarr, vice president of Harlingen National Bank. "He could be extremely happy, or the Irish in him could come out and he could become very, very mad."

"But the next minute he would turn around and be all kindness and very apologetic. He was a kind, generous man who was sometimes moody."

Funeral arrangements were incomplete Tuesday. Funeral directors said they were told by Haley's widow, Martha, that she was coordinating final plans with out-of-state friends and relatives.

Haley succeeded, for the most part, in finding seclusion in the Rio Grande Valley, living with his Mexican-born wife and their three children — a daughter, 18, and two sons, ages 10 and 6.

He once denied to a local television station reporter that he was the famous singer. Another reporter who knocked on his door was told that no one by the name Haley lived in the house.

Tarr said Haley chose Harlingen because "it is a relatively obscure, quiet place where he could live a normal life away from the limelight." Tarr said Haley also had traveled extensively in Mexico, and liked living close to the border.

Tarr said Haley and his wife had "several financial holdings in Mexico."

He had several friends on the Harlingen Police Department. He reportedly met several officers when they found him walking alone, late at night, through city streets far from home.

The last person known to have talked to Haley was Police Captain Buddy Laramore, chief of patrol.

Laramore said he called Haley at 6:15 a.m. Monday to wake him up.

"He called me the day before and asked for a wake-up call," Laramore said. "I've done it before, and he's done it for me."

"He called me quite often just to talk," Laramore said. "I didn't know him as well as I could have, but I knew him pretty well."

Justice of the Peace Tommy Thompson ruled that Haley died from natural causes. Thompson said he assumes Haley suffered a heart attack shortly after Laramore's wake-up call. Haley's body was discovered when a friend who had gone by to visit Haley became concerned when he did not answer the door, Thompson said.

Laramore described Haley as "a decent man, a quiet man with not too much to say." Laramore said Haley told him of his singing past, "but I already knew who he was."

The former rock star was 56 according to a July 6, 1925, birthdate on his Texas driver's license. Musicians reference books listed his birthdate as March 1927, making him 53.

Tarr said Haley was "progressing well" on his autobiography. "He thought it might make a good movie, too," said Tarr.

Tarr said he was encouraging Haley to go back to performing, and he (Haley) was seriously considering going back out on tour.

"He wanted privacy, and he wanted to live his life like you or me, but sometimes he missed the limelight," Tarr added.

Tarr said he had heard Haley sing recently, and "his voice sounded as good as ever to me."

Tarr noted that Haley had sung in South Africa and Europe and before Britain's Queen Elizabeth II within the last three years.

"He told me that after he sang for the queen, she came down to him and shook his hand and said 'you make me feel young again.'"

Senate Sessions Telecasts Considered

WASHINGTON (AP) — A lone television monitor set showed sharp, bright pictures of the U.S. Senate chamber Tuesday, and Senate Majority Leader Howard Baker wants them on your set at home later this year.

The Senate chamber was televised to the lone camera in a test conducted by the Senate Rules Committee. The committee is considering whether to recommend public televising of regular Senate sessions.

Baker, R-Tenn., has said he thinks he has the votes for starting the television coverage later this year.

But there is opposition and Sen. John Warner, R-Va., one of the senators conducting the test, said "I'm leaning slightly against it, but I'm keeping an open mind."

"I'm fearful it might degrade the intangible qualities of the Senate," said Warner, a member of the Rules Committee. "It's the old adage: if it works don't tinker with it."

"That has to be balanced with enhancement of this chamber through real time reporting of what happens here," Warner said.

One intangible quality bothering Warner was heat from the lights lined up above the Senate chamber for the test.

"I'm sweating already," he told a technician.

Warner said light intensity in the Senate chamber must be doubled to 40 candlepower or more for television.

He was asked whether television could slow down Senate proceedings with long speeches from senators playing to the cameras.

"Well, I don't want to comment on that," Warner said. "But a judge once told me that nobody but nobody knows how he will feel when he puts the black robe on. And we probably won't know how we'll respond here until we put the black robe on."

He said the Senate would be harder to televise than the House because senators can walk around the floor as they speak while House members must go to one of six microphones.

House proceedings have been televised for more than a year.

Baker introduced a resolution at the start of the current session for the Senate to do the same.

He told reporters that although some Republican and Democratic senators alike oppose the idea, he believes he has the votes to begin the coverage later this year.

Television coverage, Baker said, is "simply an electronic extension of the public galleries."

Senate Democratic Leader Robert C. Byrd of West Virginia has been cool to the idea, and veteran Sen. Russell Long, D-La., is among those opposing it.

'Jane Doe' Callers Multiply

PEMBROKE PINES, Fla. (AP) — Police and hospital officials received dozens of new telephone tips Tuesday after a woman suffering amnesia appeared on national television in hopes that someone would recognize her.

The woman, known only as "Jane Doe" since she was found near death in a South Florida park last Sept. 19, described her search for an identity in broken, barely audible phrases on ABC's "Good Morning, America."

Fort Lauderdale police received 50 calls in the first few hours after the interview, said a department spokeswoman.

"Some of the leads appear to be pretty good," said police aide Lola Hardister. "They're from people who think she looks like someone they know or someone they've seen."

Callers also were reaching South Florida State Hospital, a psychiatric facility in this Fort Lauderdale suburb where Miss Doe is a patient.

The hospital had already received hundreds of calls and about 60 cards and letters from people who read a story distributed nationally by The Associated Press after The Fort Lauderdale News and Sun-Sentinel first reported the woman's plight.

"I think this effort is going to be worthwhile," hospital spokesman Dean Smith said of the TV interview and calls. "Everybody's goal is to find out who she is and reunite her with her family if she does have one..."

A park ranger found the woman, believed to be about 30, naked and suffering from exposure in dense underbrush at Hugh Taylor Birch State Park in Fort Lauderdale.

Dr. Jesse Kaye, the psychiatrist who has been treating Miss Doe, appeared with her on the program. He said she was found "particularly ill physically, which suggests she was not well cared for, not well nourished, for a long period of time."

"She was truly near death."

She has recovered physically but suffers from "total amnesia," Kaye said.

"I try to remember and I can't," the woman said in the interview. "I don't form a pattern of having parents, a family who was responsible for me. I just feel left alone in the world... just trying to go about my life the best I can."

She said her condition at the time she was found makes her "kind of frightened."

"I try to focus on that and I can't," she said. "I can't say how I got into the park... what the park looks like. I just don't have any thought patterns at all."

The woman has brown hair and brown eyes, and no distinguishing scars or marks other than a large mole on the left side of her neck.

Fort Lauderdale Police Chief Leo Callahan, who also was on the program, said no records of her fingerprints have been found.

Eccentric Graffiti Painter Sentenced

ZURICH, Switzerland (AP) — Harald Naegeli, the Swiss eccentric who intrigued some art critics as the elusive painter of some 1,500 graffiti on Zurich walls, has been sentenced to a suspended term of six months in jail on charges of damaging property.

In a written verdict mailed 10 days after Naegeli's trial, the Zurich district court refused to accept the 40-year-old defendant's claim that his works had artistic value and were intended to create a contrast to what he felt was a proliferation of reinforced concrete in the city.

Naegeli was ordered to pay $53,000, which the city said would pay about half the cost of cleaning his works from the walls. He said he would appeal.

Symphony Performance Inspired, Ambitious

Backed by inspired, if brief, performances by soprano Emilia Simone and pianist William Westney, the Lubbock Symphony Orchestra gave an inspired and rather ambitious performance Monday night at the Civic Center exhibition hall.

Actually, the guest performances may have only seemed brief based on the fact the audience wanted more. Miss Simone sang three arias and managed to put genuine feeling into each, the smaller nuances of her vocal control just as exciting as her more noticeably held notes.

She used both Meyerbeer's "Nobles Seigneurs, Salute" and Gounod's jewel song from "Faust" as bookends, but earned the most enthusiastic audience response with her second aria: Donizetti's "Il Faut Partir" from La Fille Du Regiment.

Westney, currently Browning Artist In Residence at Texas Tech University, played Liszt's "Concerto For Piano And Orchestra No. 1 In E Flat" with authority and, at times, ferocity. Keeping theatrics to a minimum (unlike some other concert pianists who have guested with the orchestra), Westney concentrated on bringing the music to life, and did so with such exploding energy during the concerto's final moments as to inspire cries of "bravo."

The orchestra itself, under the direction of founding conductor William A. Harrod, took no easy roads Monday, choosing to play more ambitious works in Starvinisky's "Suite From The Firebird" and Tchaikovsky's "Capriccio Italien." The former was the most enthralling piece the orchestra played, introducing a tone as ominous as a camera lingering too long on a lighted match near leaves and developing into a flurry of reeds and strings.

It harbored a wide range of emotions, hindered only by seeing orchestra members nonchalantly whispering to one another when not playing.

The Tchaikovsky and Rossini's opening overture to "La Gazza Ladra" were both more brisk and served to keep the mood light and cheerful.

Bayer Firm Admonished For Its Ads

WASHINGTON (AP) — The maker of Bayer Aspirin has deceived consumers about the product's effectiveness and safety, a Federal Trade Commission judge found Tuesday.

Judge Montgomery K. Hyun said Sterling Drug Inc. had "no reasonable basis" for a series of advertising claims for Bayer Aspirin, Bayer Children's Aspirin, Vanquish, Cope and Midol.

He ordered the drug company not to make such claims unless it can back them with scientific evidence.

Sterling announced immediately that the decision will be appealed to the five-member commission. It maintained that its ads "appropriately and accurately reflected the scientific data."

Hyun said his order is necessary because "consumers will continue to be misled by (Sterling's) advertising representations regarding efficacy or safety or quality" of the non-prescription drugs taken as pain relievers.

Hyun's order did not go as far as FTC staffers wanted. They wanted an order requiring Sterling to buy new ads to correct the old ones. The judge said the evidence was not enough to show the ads "played a significant role in creating or reinforcing a mistaken product image."

Hyun ordered that future Sterling ads say when aspirin is an ingredient and not refer to commonly known ingredients such as aspirin and caffeine by unfamiliar names. Many people do not know that Vanquish, Cope and Midol contain aspirin, which is important because some cannot tolerate aspirin, the judge said.

Hyun also said Sterling did not have a reasonable basis for claiming that Cope is superior for relieving headache pain caused by nervous tension. He said the ingredients in Bayer, Cope and Midol do not relieve tension, nor do those in Midol relieve depression, as claimed in ads.

"If advertisers were allowed to claim superior drug quality for their products without adequate medical-scientific substantiation... consumers will be hopelessly confused and misled by claims of differences which are, in reality, illusory or meaningless," Hyun said.

The order in the case, which the FTC began in 1973, also applies to Lois Holland Callaway Inc., the advertising agency for Vanquish. Charges against the ad agency that handled the other four products were settled last year.

Heartline

Heartline is a service for senior citizens. Its purpose is to answer questions and solve problems. If you have a question or a problem not answered in these columns, write to Heartline, 111 East Dayton St., West Alexandria, Ohio 45381. You will receive a prompt reply, but you must include a self-addressed, stamped envelope. The most useful replies will be printed in this column.

HEARTLINE: Last summer, I moved from a large city to a small town in another state. I had always read your columns in the newspaper, but the little weekly paper here does not have it. I had a letter from a friend last week saying that he noticed in your columns that you have written another book, this one larger than your other three. I have your guides to Medicare, Social Security and Medicare Supplements, and would like to know more about your new book. There have been several times during the past few years that I couldn't have made it without the information and advice in your other books. W.H.

ANSWER: Our 1981 Heartline's Almanac for Older Americans is a very basic and easy-to-understand handbook for retirement. It is a good source of information for the person who is retired, retiring soon, or assisting a retired person. The Almanac contains condensed versions of our Guide to Medicare, Guide to Social Security and Guide to Health Insurance and Medicare Supplements. Such topics as various government benefits, wills, estate planning, trusts, funeral planning and expense, crime prevention, and budgeting are discussed. This book, like all our publications, will be revised and reprinted each year so that you will be assured that all up-to-date information is contained in it. The Almanac normally sells for $9.95 per copy, but for a limited time, you may purchase a copy for $7.95. To order, send your check or money order to Heartline's Almanac, 111 East Dayton St., West Alexandria, Ohio 45381. Please allow six weeks for delivery.

HEARTLINE: I received Railroad unemployment benefits last year and I understand that they are taxable. Is there any booklet which will help me to compute my income taxes? G.L.

ANSWER: Yes. Internal Revenue Service publication 905 Income Tax Information on Unemployment Compensation describes tax calculations for individuals who received unemployment benefits. Copies are available from the Internal Revenue Service or from any Railroad Retirement Board district office.

HEARTLINE: Will Medicare cover a podiatrist's services? (foot doctor) T.R.

ANSWER: Medicare Medical Insurance (Part B) can help pay for any covered services of a podiatrist, except for routine foot care. However, if you have a medical condition, such as diabetes, which requires that such routine care be performed, then Medicare would cover the services of a licensed podiatrist.

Two Gunmen Shoot Military Official

ISTANBUL, Turkey (AP) — Two gunmen shot and wounded a military security chief Tuesday morning as he was leaving a crowded Istanbul subway station, police said.

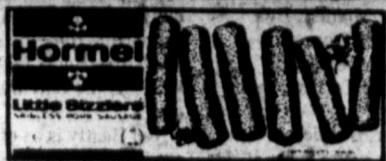

Col. Cezmi Olcay was hit in the shoulder and the arm, but hospital officials said he was in good condition. The attackers, believed to be leftists, were not captured.

White House Restoration Plans Aired

WASHINGTON (AP) — Nancy Reagan intends to undertake a restoration of the White House and two government guest homes across the street to correct "little things that have gone neglected for a number of years."

Peter McCoy, Mrs. Reagan's chief of staff, said in a recent interview that Mrs. Reagan "feels quite strongly that these are national treasures" and should be kept in proper condition.

He said that "there hasn't been anything done to the White House for over 12 years," and that Blair House, where visiting foreign dignitaries stay, "needs works."

White House curator Clement Conger echoed those sentiments in a separate interview. He said the draperies, rugs and upholstery in the White House living quarters "are indeed very worn out."

Blair House, where the Reagans stayed before the inauguration, "has gone down hill over the last several years and has never had proper care," Conger said.

He said the small house used by former presidents on Jackson Place, facing Lafayette Park, "is maintained by the General Services Administration, which is not notable for its care in furnishings, regrettably."

For that reason, Conger said, no fine furniture is kept at the house. Some is brought in when a dignitary stays there "but it's taken out the minute the house is empty because we feel it isn't safe."

McCoy said he didn't know how Mrs. Reagan would go about her project, but he didn't think she would ask Congress for money. Conger said the money will have to be raised privately.

"I think she feels quite strongly that these are national treasures and that when foreign dignitaries come to stay—in this case it would be Blair House—that it should to a certain extent be a home away from home. And it should be in good repair," McCoy said.

Conger said "so many things need redoing in the private rooms," where Mrs. Reagan and her Los Angeles decorator already are at work.

As for Blair House, which is owned by the State Department, Conger said he plans to have all of the furnishings catalogued and then begin on the renovation.

McCoy, interviewed in his office on the second floor of the East Wing, pointed out the water stains on the wallpaper and said there was plaster falling from the ceiling in the hall.

After two weeks on the job, the former Los Angeles president of Sotbby Parke Bernet, who traveled with Mrs. Reagan as her aide during the election campaign, had yet to formally arrange his office. The telephones were on the floor and he bent over from the waist to answer a call.

Unlike Rosalynn Carter, who kept an office on the same floor for herself, McCoy said Mrs. Reagan has not set one up. "When she wants to come over, there will always be room," he added.

McCoy also said that the Reagans will reduce the number of guests at state dinners to fewer than 100 "to make them memorable."

The Carter administration invited "140 and, in a couple of cases, 150 people," McCoy said. "The problem with that is the help couldn't serve properly. It was very difficult to get in between tables and the tables didn't look as attractive."

State dinners, which are given for visiting foreign dignitaries, "become another dinner almost" when too many guests are invited. "And it should be something special."

Texas May Convert Other Institutions Into State Prisons

AUSTIN (AP) — Gov. Bill Clements said Tuesday the state might try to solve prison overcrowding by turning military bases and hospitals into "quasi-penal institutions."

"We have a very serious overpopulation problem, and it's going to be very tough to solve," Clements told an informal news conference. "Dozens of different options are being looked at."

Clements repeated that he had reservations about Texas Department of Corrections Director W.J. Estelle's proposed work-release program, in which about 2,500 inmates would be allowed to live and work outside the prisons.

"Before any such plan comes anywhere close to being implemented, it will be discussed with me, and it hasn't been," Clements said. "It's very premature to run off on any tangent of that kind."

Estelle said Monday he already has begun implementing the program and would start releasing the first inmates in April.

"Turning prisoners loose is no solution to the population problem," Clements said.

But he said reactivating unused military bases and hospitals could help.

"We're investigating the possibility of turning these into quasi-penal institutions, but I don't know yet what we will do," Clements said.

He added that he supported putting a contingency fund for the prison system in the budget, because "there is no way to tell" how much reforms ordered by U.S. District Judge William Wayne Justice will cost.

Justice ruled in a civil rights case brought by TDC inmates that conditions in Texas prisons violate prisoners' constitutional rights.

Census Bureau Book Probes Changes In America

WASHINGTON (AP) — The Census Bureau is celebrating an in-house anniversary with "Reflections of America," a look at U.S. history and culture that explores the emergence of the Upper American, the changing role of women and the national character — described as sound, pragmatic and down-to-earth.

The volume was published to celebrate the 100th anniversary of the bureau's Statistical Abstract, an annual compendium of thousands of statistics about the United States.

"Reflections" is a sweeping volume touching, like the abstract itself, on many aspects of American life, how they have changed and how those changes have been reflected in statistics over the last century.

Princeton professor Eric S. Goldman reports on the Upper American, a new force in U.S. life and politics that has taken hold in the last few decades and is now firmly entrenched.

The former presidential consultant estimates that Upper Americans make up at least 15 percent of the adult population. They are the latest group in a nation formed by Frontier Americans, developed by Urban Americans and largely populated by Middle Americans, writes Goldman.

Their influence goes far beyond their "sheer numbers," he says, "because of their heavy presence in fields that have to do with the projection of ideas and attitudes — radio and television, the powerhouse newspapers, magazine and book publishing, the leading universities and a far-flung array of service organizations that have talent and money."

Easier to name than define, he reports, Upper Americans have emerged since World War II, mainly in metropolitan areas. They work in service occupations or business, and are rarely poor.

They have not only gone to college, he says, but "to the kind of institution where the dominant climate of opinion was impatience with, if not contempt for, the values of Middle America."

Indeed, he says, the fundamental credo of Upper Americans might be "let's not be Middle American."

"They deplore food that smacks of meat and potatoes, brush aside beer or bourbon for vodka or wine. They shudder at movie heroes, advice columnists and TV evangelists, unabashed patriotism, fussy clothes or jewelry, the woman who thinks family is everything and the man who is a straight arrow," Goldman says of the Upper American.

Upper Americans are avidly on the make, economically and socially, "but avoid the appearance of sheer money-making or sheer caste," Goldman says.

They have brought much to the country, including increased knowledgeability about public policy, receptivity to change, a more humane attitude toward the disadvantaged and a heightening of taste in literature and the arts, he says.

But with their avoidance of things Middle American, Upper Americans run the risk of simple snobbery. They tend to forget that they are just one more special interest group, Goldman says, because they believe they are basing their opinions on superior comprehension.

He quotes a man described as a Denver Middle American as saying that "those people (Upper Americans) make you feel like some kind of clod. They not only usually have more money; they say your ideas are dumb, going to a hockey game is low class, and your wife has a frowzy hairdo."

Goldman concludes that Upper Americans are here and will flourish, but refuses to speculate on whether their presence will help or hurt the republic.

"Reflections" also includes:

•A chapter on "Attitudes," in which writers Ben J. Wattenberg and David Gergen make a case for the good sense of Americans, "a sound, pragmatic, down-to-earth people, struggling — with mixed success — to adapt to the realities of contemporary life."

•An essay by United Nations Ambassador Jeane J. Kirkpatrick, who discusses the changing role of women and concludes, "I see no grounds to expect a brave new unisex world just over the horizon but good reason for thinking that by the beginning of the next century, young women will have more choices, more freedom and problems quite different from the ones confronting those who came of age at the beginning of this century."

•A section by Ben H. Bagdikian that

IRS Eyes Unreported Casino Dealers' Tips

LAS VEGAS (AP) — The Internal Revenue Service estimates that Nevada casino dealers have failed to report more than $1 billion in tips since 1973, costing the federal government an estimated $300 million in income taxes.

The figures were released Monday in the first day of a special U.S. Tax Court hearing in which a dozen MGM Grand Hotel dealers claim the IRS has taxed them unfairly.

A report submitted as evidence by IRS attorneys said employees of major Las Vegas resorts have concealed the majority of their tips.

Between 1973 and 1979, the report said, nearly $992 million in tips went unreported. In 1979, said state IRS chief Gerald Swanson, casino workers failed to report $194.8 million in tips and the figure for 1980 is expected to be more than $200 million.

The report said estimates of unreported tips were compiled from income records obtained at 70 percent of Nevada's casinos, as well as from audits and surveillance by undercover IRS agents.

Between 1973 and 1979, it said, Nevada casino workers reported $2.9 billion in income including $93 million in tips.

The tax court session came after the MGM Grand dealers petitioned for a review of IRS assessments on tips earned in 1975 and 1976. Similar hearings may be held for dealers at other Las Vegas resorts.

MASSACHUSETTS RATES UP
BOSTON (AP) — Electric rates are going up 50 to 70 percent across Massachusetts this year because of price increases for the fuel oil needed to generate electricity, company officials say. Boston Edison predicted the average monthly bill for a family of four will increase from $36.50 to $62.50 this year.

Church Accepts Uneasy Peace In Philippines

MANILA, Philippines (AP) — The Roman Catholic Church and the government of Ferdinand E. Marcos have reached an uneasy truce with the ending of martial law and the visit next week of Pope John Paul II.

The Archbishop of Manila, Cardinal Jaime Sin, said the church will help the state further the common good, but "reserves the right to criticize any state policies which are contrary to human rights and inimical to the public interest."

Pope John Paul is to arrive here for a six-day, nine-city visit Feb. 17, a month after the date Marcos proclaimed martial law lifted. Marcos still retains nearly all the powers he assumed in the eight years of martial law and reserves the right to reimpose it.

During the eight years of martial rule, several priests were jailed or deported and the government accused both Catholic and Protestant churchmen of backing rebels.

Sin has said that he himself might have been an arrest target, had he been a young priest in an area where parishioners suffered.

While he has not endorsed Marcos' policies, the cardinal says he is willing to negotiate a "truce" between Marcos and his political rivals, including those in self-imposed exile in the United States.

He has asked Filipinos to forgive what he called past violations of their human rights and give Marcos a "chance to show his sincerity."

Marcos has released hundreds of political prisoners and said he would tolerate lawful strikes and demonstrations, lift censorship of the news media and hold presidential elections in May.

Ironically, the visit of the pope to this country which is nearly 85 percent Roman Catholic has underscored that the "truce" between Marcos and the church activists is uneasy.

In announcing the papal trip, the cardinal stressed it was not an endorsement of Marcos and said the pope would spend only two hours with the first family.

There was even a flap over whose invitation to come to the Philippines had been accepted by the pope. A year ago, the presidential palace said it was first lady Imelda Marcos' Sin produced documents to show the pope had responded to the invitation from the Catholic Bishops' Conference.

Rumors circulated that a lavish government guest house was being rushed to completion for the pope's visit. Asked about it, Sin said the pope's itinerary had been carefully planned so that John Paul would not even see the building.

While the itinerary was being put together, high church sources said Mrs. Marcos objected to proposals that John Paul visit slum dwellers, lepers and prisoners because she believed they emphasized the negative aspects of life in the Philippines.

Sin said the pope was a pastor, not a tourist. His itinerary, which Sin said John Paul selected from three proposed, includes an address to slum dwellers in a Manila suburb, a meeting with lepers and a visit to poor sugar workers.

The chasm between the church and the state has also involved finances.

In 1978, the church lost its majority interest in the Philippine Trust Co., when the bank was taken over by businessmen close to Marcos. Sin complained to Marcos, saying "only by the church selling out completely (will) this bank no longer be persecuted and harassed."

In 1979, Sin refused to support construction of a 10-story basilica planned by the first lady on a scenic hilltop east of Manila and the project was scrapped after excavation had started.

"To put up a basilica while people are starving is not very Christian," said the cardinal. "God would not be pleased," he was quoted by the Asian Wall Street Journal as saying.

The cardinal disputes Marcos' claim that the gap between rich and poor had narrowed during martial law.

"The poor are poorer, and very many people are richer," he said. "I wouldn't say who they are."

Some church leaders support Marcos, or steer clear of politics.

"Our role is to unite people," says one of them, Cardinal Julio Rosales, the archbishop of Cebu, the second-largest city in the Philippines. "Once you enter politics, you divide the people and that is not our role as priests."

Cardinal Sin says he does not think the lifting of martial law — which the harshest of Marcos' critics say was an effort to avoid papal criticism of human rights violations — will make any difference on what the pope says on his visit.

"The pope knows the situation here," the cardinal said.

Groups Against Cuts In Education Aid

WASHINGTON (AP) — Some House Democrats and education lobby groups began a campaign Tuesday aimed at preventing cuts by the Reagan administration in student aid programs.

The education organizations also urged immediate passage of a supplemental appropriation of approximately $1 billion to protect students making plans this spring to enter college next September.

At a news conference, Rep. Peter Peyser, D-N.Y., a member of the House Education and Labor Committee, said: "There is no program more important than the student loan programs because they are the future of our country."

"This is a non-negotiable item," said Peyser. "If students do not get aid over the next three or four years, we have lost a whole generation."

Rep. Carl Perkins, D-Ky., chairman of the House Education and Labor Committee, said, "I would hate to see these programs chopped up at this time. Hundreds of thousands of students will not be able to go to college (if the Reagan administration cuts are executed). In the long run, these programs pay for themselves. I hope we will be able to keep these programs intact."

Rep. Paul Simon, D-Ill., chairman of the postsecondary education subcommittee, said his panel will hold hearings of the proposed cuts, when they are received from the Reagan administration.

"It is not in the long range interest of this country to make cuts in student loan programs," he said.

The Reagan administration has not officially made its proposal but a working paper from David Stockman, director of the Office of Management and Budget, which has been circulated, proposes sharply limiting education programs. Further cuts are still to be proposed.

There are approximately 12 million to 14 million students in the nation's universities and colleges, with some 60 percent of them receiving some form of aid. The federal government provides approximately 75 percent of the financial aid, or about $14 billion.

Simon predicted that 15 percent to 20 percent of the students who would be eligible for one of the education aid programs would not go to college if the Reagan administration cuts are enacted.

Peyser said if President Reagan reduced his call for a 10 percent tax cut to 8 percent, "the entire cost of this education program would be taken care of. We must convince his administration and the Congress that our future depends on it."

Suspect Eliminated In Robbery Of State Savings Branch Office

Lubbock police have eliminated one possible suspect in the Monday morning robbery of State Savings Medical Branch, but detectives hope today to question a second man about the heist.

The first suspect, a 28-year-old Lubbock man who previously attempted to withdraw money from savings accounts other than his own, is not believed to have been the masked bandit who struck the 3519 21st St. establishment, said Det. Ronnie Goolsby.

That man, the detective said, sports a heavy beard, and tellers at the firm told police the robber, who was wearing a stocking mask, had no facial hair.

Police plan today to question the second suspect, who was implicated by an anonymous informant, Goolsby said. The informant telephoned a local law officer and said the man may have been in the area of the savings and loan at the time of the robbery.

Shortly before 10 a.m. Monday, the bandit entered the branch office, tied up the two female tellers and made off with $2,115 cash.

A man fitting the robber's description was seen leaving the area at a high speed in a red car, but police have no other description of the vehicle.

The masked man, who did not display a weapon, was described as white, in his 20s, 5-foot-7, with a heavy build. He was wearing a denim jacket and baggy blue jeans, the tellers said.

CLOVIS CONNECTION PLUCKS OWLS

Franse, Tech Trim Rice

By RAY GLASS
Avalanche-Journal Sports Staff
The Clovis, N.M., connection came through for Texas Tech again Tuesday, but it was the not-so-highly regarded sophomore member of the pair that keyed the Red Raiders' 61-55 Southwest Conference basketball victory over Rice at the Municipal Coliseum.

While freshman Bubba Jennings, Tech's third-leading scorer this season, was isolated by a zone-and-chaser Owl defense and barely sniffed the ball all night long, 6-foot-2 Nelson Franse came off the bench and provided the Raiders with sorely needed outside shooting.

Franse, who had played a total of 71 minutes in the previous 11 conference games, was in the game for all but two minutes against Rice and responded with 12 points on six of nine long-range jumpers.

"There's the difference in the game right there," Tech's Jeff Taylor said, pointing to Franse. "He came off the bench and did the kind of job we had to have."

The Rice defense — one player shadowing Jennings and keeping him from the ball while the other four played a 1-3 zone defense — was effective in stopping Jennings. He got one shot off in 40 minutes of playing time, spent running endless wind sprints along the baseline or standing face-to-face with a defender in the corner, watching the four-on-four contest.

Franse, meanwhile, took up the outside shooting slack and, when the Owls put pressure on him and Taylor at the top of the key, worked the ball into postmen Ben Hill and Clarence Swannegan.

"We have had some games where we have had the lead at the end of the game and were in our delay and wound up losing," said Franse. "Tonight we took our time, worked it and hit the shots."

"We just didn't hit our open shots in the first half," Franse added. "In the second half, they tried to put more pressure outside on Jeff and I, so we were able to get the ball inside a little more."

"Franse is a good shooter. Anytime you do something like that (the special defense on Jennings), you're taking a chance," Rice coach Mike Schuler said. "Sometimes it works and sometimes it hurts you."

The Owls' game plan worked for a half and Tech found itself on the bottom end of a 34-27 halftime score. But with Franse and Taylor zeroing in from the top of the key at the outset of the second half, the Raiders made their move.

Ricky Pierce hit a layin with 12 seconds gone in the half to up Rice's margin to 36-27 before the Raiders found the Frogs Make Recruiting Scoop

By NORVAL POLLARD
Executive Sports Editor
Texas Christian University, which up until Monday had not made a noticeable dent in the Southwest Conference recruiting struggle, made up for lost time in a big way Tuesday by getting verbal commitments from blue-chip linebacker Gary Spann and South Oak Cliff teammate Anthony Gulley, one of the state's most highly sought quarterback prospects.

The Horned Frogs also took some of the wind out of Texas Tech's recruiting sails by persuading Temple running back Kenneth Davis, who made a verbal commitment to the Red Raiders Monday night, to sign a Southwest Conference letter of intent today.

The 5-10, 185-pound Davis, regarded as one of the top prep running backs in the state by SWC coaches, reportedly changed his mind Tuesday afternoon and will ink with the Frogs today.

TCU also landed Brazoswood offensive tackle Steve Page and Decatur wide receiver James Maness. The Frogs were also believed to be ahead in the fight to sign Dallas Madison tight end Ronzell Brewer, a 6-2 220-pound member of Texas Football's elite Top 30 list.

TCU's sudden recruiting surge, if it holds up through SWC letter-signing day today and national letter-signing date next Wednesday, will put a damper on what appeared to be a better-than-average recruiting yield for new Red Raider head coach Jerry Moore.

Tech was certain Davis was in the Tech fold. The Raiders were also strong contenders for the services of Spann, a 6-1, 210-pounder. Monday night, TCU entered the picture in the race to sign Borger quarterback Shawn Harrington, who had been leaning toward Tech for several weeks.

While the Raiders were losing Davis Tuesday, Houston Yates speedster Gerald Bean eased the pain somewhat by announcing he will sign with Tech today. Bean, a 6-0, 185-pounder who has been clocked at 9.7 seconds in the 100, was one of five prep gridders to commit to the Raiders Tuesday. The other four include: 6-0, 190-pound Wayne Dawson, a running back-linebacker from Temple; 6-3, 210-pound Scott Davis, a defensive tackle from Plano; Stafford Dulles defensive lineman Mark McAuley, a 6-3, 220-pounder; and 6-0, 215-pound running back Chuck Easley of Conroe McCullough.

Tech has now received verbal promises from 17 recruits. Joining Bean, Dawson, Davis, McAuley and Easley in the Tech camp are Burk Burnett defensive tackle Sid Chambers, Round Rock tight end Mark Gold, Richardson tight end Buzz Tatom, the Houston Lamar passing duo of quarterback Kevyn Williams and wide receiver Rodney Clay, Amarillo Palo Duro wide receiver Troy Smith, San Antonio Jay running back Ansel Cole, Monahans quarterback Rusty Roark, Jayton running back-linebacker Joe McMeans, defensive lineman Tim Crawford and linebacker Adrian McDowell of Houston Kashmere and Stafford Dulles linebacker William Harris.

Moore, like most of his SWC counterparts, decided last week not to release the names of recruits who sign SWC letters with Tech today. The official list of Red Raider recruits will be released next

New Events Enter Complicated Bank Fraud Maze

LOS ANGELES (AP) — The maze that is the Wells Fargo embezzlement case against Muhammad Ali Professional Sports Inc. took another turn Tuesday when the bank announced that Gene Kawakami, manager of its Miracle Mile branch, had been relieved of his duties.

Meantime, the Long Beach Independent, Press-Telegram in a late edition Tuesday quoted an unnamed source as saying that L. Ben Lewis — missing operations officer from the bank's Beverly Drive branch and also a MAPS director — has been "in the hands" of the FBI since Thursday.

In addition, Wells Fargo spokesman George Caulfield confirmed that its suit alleging that MAPS officials embezzled $21.3 million seeks not only that money, but $25 million in punitive damages as well.

A spokesman for the Independent, Press-Telegram said its source was reliable and was the same person who had accurately alerted the paper more than a week ago that the embezzlement scandal was about to break.

Time Magazine, in its Feb. 16 issue, said it "learned" that Lewis secretly turned himself into the FBI here last Wednesday.

FBI spokesman John Hoos said, "I can't comment on that. All I can say is that the investigation is continuing. There have been no warrants issued."

Caulfield said he could not elaborate on why Kawakami was relieved.

"We're not suspending him — he's still in our employ," he added.

Kawakami has retained an attorney who advised him to say nothing to the press, Caulfield said, adding that Wells Fargo preferred not to release the attorney's name.

Asked if Kawakami was relieved because of allegations on tape cassettes delivered to sportscasters from Harold J. Smith — the other missing man named in the bank's $21.3 million suit — Caulfield said, "I'd better not comment on that. All you can say is that the action relates to our continuing investigation of facts around the case."

Caulfield said he had no reports from the FBI that Lewis had turned himself in, but he acknowledged that the bank's suit points at Lewis as the key to the embezzlement.

"From 1978 to Jan. 23, 1981," the suit reads, "defendant L. Ben Lewis in his capacity as operations officer of Wells Fargo Bank caused fraudulent transactions to occur by manipulation of ... internal operation procedures."

The suit goes on to contend that "L. Ben Lewis knowingly violated his obligations to act with loyalty and in good faith by doing the following acts ... causing fraudulent and fictitious credits to be made to the defendants accounts; issuing cashier's checks to the defendants against uncollectable funds or against no deposit; authorizing withdrawals from the defendants' account when the funds credited therein were uncollectible ..."

Caulfield said emphatically that Wells Fargo does not regard the embezzlement as computer fraud, despite some stories calling it that.

"That kind of crime involves secret or false codes and a certain level of sophistication, and you just can't categorize this as computer fraud," he said.

But Caulfield added no information on how the crime was committed, reiterating that it involved "internal manipulation" of funds.

Cavs Take Solid Lead In Poll

By The Associated Press

Dale Brown may have been sick of coaching a year ago, but this year's Louisiana State University team has done a lot in providing a cure.

"I debated getting out of coaching about a year ago," said Brown, whose Tigers were ranked fourth in Tuesday's Associated Press college basketball poll, behind Virginia, Oregon State and DePaul, respectively.

"I was sick of the prima-donna syndrome that was taking over college basketball," Brown added. "Everybody was interested only in themselves."

A 20-game winning streak, a 21-1 record and a three-game lead in the Southeastern Conference have contributed to Brown's well-being. But the team he claims is the key.

"They are a breath of fresh air," Brown said. "These kids say thank you, please, and your welcome. We've stiffened our recruiting standards to get players like this, but this is the kind of team I wanted."

Brown, who claims he has no superstars, admits he would like to be ranked No. 1, "on March 30, after the NCAA championships."

Virginia, which rallied from a 16-point deficit to a 80-79 overtime victory over North Carolina, retained the No. 1 position, increasing its lead over Oregon State from 10 to 28 points.

The Cavaliers collected 43 of 62 first-place votes and 1,221 of a possible 1,240 points in the balloting by a nationwide panel of sports writers and broadcasters. The Beavers, 19-0, received 18 first-place votes and 1,193 points.

Last week, Virginia, 20-0, collected 35 first-place votes, while Oregon State was tabbed No. 1 on 26 ballots.

DePaul, 21-1, Louisiana State, which got the other first-place vote, and Arizona State, 18-2, held the third, fourth and fifth positions. The Blue Demons got 1,096 points — 25 more than LSU. The Sun Devils had 945 points.

Utah, 20-1, edged Wake Forest, 19-2, for the No. 6 spot by one point, 882-881, while UCLA, which got 692 points, jumped four places and took over the Tennessee, 16-4, and North Carolina, 18-5, rounded out the Top 10. The Tar Heels, who beat Furman and St. Joseph's, Pa. following the loss to Virginia, were another six points back.

Kentucky slipped five positions and headed the Second 10. Notre Dame, No. 9 last week, was 12th this time, followed by Michigan, Iowa, Brigham Young, Wichita State, Illinois, South Alabama, Maryland and Indiana.

Brown Rebuilding UCLA Basketball Dynasty

By The Associated Press
The powder blue jerseys with the letters UCLA across the front have come to mean much the same to fans of college basketball as Yankee pinstripes mean to baseball fans.

They are symbols of power, of a dynasty, of a dominating force. They draw perhaps even more attention on the road than they do at home. When the men bearing those symbols stride onto the field of play — be it basketball or baseball — they inspire confidence in their allies and fear or hatred in the opposition.

UCLA won 10 National Collegiate Athletic Association championships in 12 years, beginning with the 1963-64 season, John Wooden's 16th as coach of the Bruins.

There were many long, frustrating seasons for the "Wizard of Westwood" before he finally began doing what he is best known for, winning NCAA basketball titles. His 1963-64 squad consisted of men like Gail Goodrich, Fred Slaughter, Walt Hazzard, Jack Hirsch and Keith Erickson.

In the ensuing years, there were players of such stature as Lew Alcindor, Lucius Allen, Lynn Shackelford, Curtis Rowe, Sidney Wicks, Henry Bibby, Keith Wilkes, Bill Walton, Swen Nater, Marques Johnson, Richard Washington, Pete Trgovich and Andre McCarter.

Some of the names are familiar to fans of the National Basketball Association, some are not. Although they made it to the NCAA final against eventual national champion Louisville last season, the Bruins have not won it all since the 1974-75 season. In his second year as coach of the Bruins, Larry Brown has made significant strides toward returning UCLA to the top of college basketball.

With men like Darren Daye, Rod Foster, Michael Holton, Cliff Pruitt and Mike Sanders, Brown has assembled a very young but quickly maturing squad. His roster lists four juniors, five sophomores and two freshmen — with not a single senior among them.

In their most recent outing, the 12th-ranked Bruins upset ninth-ranked Notre Dame, 51-50, on national television at the Athletic and Convocation Center in South Bend, Ind., last Sunday afternoon.

"Our kids really grew up a lot today," Brown said after the game. "I think we were fortunate to play in a game like this."

On paper, his team looks not only too young but also too small to play with the bigger, more experienced teams. Although he has a 7-foot-2 center in junior Mark Eaton on his roster, Eaton plays seldom. The tallest members of his starting five are Daye and Pruitt, both 6-7. Sanders is 6-6, and the guards are Foster, 6-1, and Holton, 6-3.

Despite this, UCLA outbounded Notre Dame 24-17 last Sunday.

"We didn't give them many rebounding opportunities," says Sanders, a good leaper who can play well above the rim.

"We have had success against other big teams off the boards, and we just did it again."

What UCLA does, as well or better than any of the other nationally ranked teams, is run a controlled fast break. Foster is one of the better ball handling guards in the nation, and all three frontmen are effective within 15 feet.

Though it is impossible to avoid youth on this team, Brown also has made great use of his bench this season. Seven players have appeared in each of UCLA's 18 games, and three others all have appeared in 12 games or more.

First off the bench usually are the two freshmen, 6-2 guard Ralph Jackson and 6-7 forward Kenny Fields. Jackson doesn't score many points, but he more than adequately fills in for Foster. Jackson leads the team with 71 assists. Fields, meanwhile, scores at a pace of 11.8 points per game off the bench and second only to Sanders in rebounding.

UCLA's victory last Sunday gave the Bruins a sweep of their two games with the Fighting Irish this season after losing both meetings last season in this traditional rivalry.

Kush Aide Testifies At Trial

PHOENIX, Ariz. (AP) — Former Arizona State football assistant coach Bob Owens testified Tuesday that ex-Sun Devil assistant coach Bill Maskill told him punter Kevin Rutledge "would probably be red-shirted" before the start of the 1978 season.

Owens said the comment came during a conversation that included himself, Maskill and other Arizona State coaches, and that then-head coach Frank Kush "was going to take it (Rutledge's red-shirting) under advisement and consider it."

Kush previously testified that "we never considered red-shirting Rutledge" because "he was our No. 1 punter."

Rutledge is suing Kush, Maskill, the university and other parties for $2.2 million — claiming Kush punched him during a 1978 game against Washington. Kush repeatedly has denied the allegation.

Rutledge also contends Kush and Maskill harassed him into quitting the team in 1979 and forfeiting his athletic scholarship.

In previous testimony, Rutledge told the court that he was not 100 percent healthy before the 1978 season because of injuries suffered in an automobile accident that January. Kush has said neither he nor the team's doctors knew about the accident because "Rutledge never said anything to anyone."

But Owens said Tuesday that he "was aware Kevin had some kind of accident" after Rutledge "came into my office and told me about it one day."

Owens said he noticed Rutledge "had lost weight and didn't look physically strong" during 1978 spring practice and that Rutledge "was not performing to the satisfaction of Maskill" at training camp that fall.

Rutledge claimed in the suit filed in October 1979 that Kush split his lower lip with a "knuckle-punch" after a 27-yard punt late in the game as the University of Washington was routing the 1978 Sun Devils 41-7.

Kush has denied the allegation, saying "to the best of my recollection, I can't recall ever touching Rutledge. I would've remembered doing it to him."

However, Kush has said that slapping one of his players' helmets and/or grabbing his face mask "was not unusual."

SWC BASKETBALL ROUNDUP

Smith, Aggies Drop SMU

By The Associated Press
DALLAS — Senior forward Vernon Smith poured in 21 points Tuesday night as the suddenly-revived Texas Aggies captured their fourth consecutive Southwest Conference basketball victory 61-56 over the Southern Methodist Mustangs.

The defending-champion Aggies, who got off to an atrocious start in the SWC regular season, upped their record to 4-7 while SMU tumbled deeper into the cellar with 3-9 ledger. A&M is now 11-9 for the season and SMU dropped to 7-15.

The Aggies fell behind early in the game 4-0 but caught up to tie the game at 8-8 on a bucket by freshman guard Reggie Roberts.

Smith then connected on a three-point play and the Aggies never trailed from that point on.

The Aggies built 31-25 halftime lead and stretched it to eight points midway through the final period behind Smith, Roberts, who finished the night with 13 points, and Claude Riley, who also had 13.

But the Mustangs rallied behind sophomore guard Dave Piehler and pulled to within three points with 5:44 to play, as Piehler hit a layup and then made a free throw after he was fouled.

The Aggies went into a delay game in the final 3:10 and paraded to the free throw line as the desperate Mustangs fouled. Piehler was high for SMU with 19 points, followed by Johnnie James with 13, Gordon Welch with 12 and Dave Gaddis, who scored 10 points.

TEXAS 88, TCU 84
AUSTIN — Ken Montgomery, held scoreless in two recent Southwest Conference basketball games, tossed in 28 points Tuesday night as Texas shaded Texas Christian 88-84 to break a 6th-place tie in the SWC.

The rankings in the nine-school conference are important because a team must finish at least as high as sixth to gain the home-court advantage in the first round of the SWC playoffs.

The victory, which averaged a 66-64 Texas loss to TCU at Fort Worth earlier this year, raised the Longhorns' SWC mark to 5-7. TCU fell to 4-8 in conference play.

For the season, Texas is 10-12 and TCU is 7-15.

Montgomery, a junior, had 18 points at the end of the first half including an 18-footer at the buzzer as Texas rolled to a 53-28 lead.

Scoring star Darrell Browder, who had a 20-point a game average for TCU, was held to 2 points in the first half, making only one field goal in 12 tries.

In the second half, TCU outscored Texas 15-2 in the opening minutes and pulled within 2 points with just under a minute remaining in the game.

Montgomery hit four straight free throws and Virdeil Howland dropped in two to clinch the narrow victory.

LaSalle Thompson pitched in 19 points for Texas and had 18 rebounds, which will keep him among the nation's leaders in that category.

Deckery Johnson scored 20 points for the Horned Frogs, but was whistled late in the game for the two fouls on Montgomery that gave Texas the win. Browder finished with 7 points.

FAYETTEVILLE, Ark. — Darrell

Walker came off the bench to score 16 points and ignite Arkansas as the Razorbacks defeated Baylor 67-50 in a Southwest Conference game here Tuesday night.

Arkansas' suffocating man-to-man defense held Baylor to just eight points during a 16-minute period as the Razorbacks claimed sole possession of second place in the SWC.

Scott Hastings worked inside for 22 points to lead all scorers, but it was Walker who changed the momentum.

Plainsmen Stumble, But Hold Off Mustangs 43-37

By RUSS PARSONS
Avalanche-Journal Sports Staff
 It was almost like stepping into a time warp. Monterey, which trailed 22-10 at halftime of its first game with Coronado, led 23-10 at the half Tuesday night.

And then, like the Mustangs in the opener, they proceeded to dribble the lead away, refusing to take the easy win.

But unlike the Coronado bunch, the Plainsmen stopped short of an outright giveaway, making just enough free throws at the end to come out with a 43-37 win.

In the original, Coronado coughed up a 42-40 double-overtime loss.

Not that Monterey didn't try. Playing some of its best basketball of the year, the Plainsmen jumped to a 23-10 lead going into the locker room.

Then, playing just as badly as it had played well, Monterey turned the ball over 11 times in the second half (compared to two in the first) to make the contest a little more exciting.

Suitably, it was some mediocre foul shooting at the end that saved the Plainsmen's bacon. Leading only 37-33 with 1:23 remaining in the game, Monterey hit only six of 10 free throw attempts down the stretch. They were just enough, primarily because Coronado only scored four points.

Included in that shoddy shooting was the missing of the front ends of back-to-back one-and-one attempts in the last half-minute.

"In the fourth quarter we just shut down, we didn't do anything," said Monterey coach Joe Michalka. "I knew we'd play better to start the game; we were more relaxed.

"But this group has had more fourth quarter problems than any other I've coached. We had I don't know how there wasn't any reason for them."

Coronado coach Barry Arnwine saw things from a slightly different angle.

"I was real proud of the way we came back in the second half and changed," he said. "But I really think — and this is not a copout — that the thing about losing close ball games caught up with us.

"We've just won two of the last nine games and the rest of them have been close, mostly," Arnwine continued. "After so many close games when things don't go right, you get a little scared when it turns into another close game."

But back to those Monterey turnovers: they were the things that really made the game close. The Plainsmen made six in the third period that saw their 13-point lead drop to nine and then they turned it over five times in the fourth period, despite running a stall for the last four minutes of the contest.

"I think we were just trying to do too much when we trapped us in the second half," Michalka said. "We tried to score and pass at the same time instead of just moving the ball quickly."

Three Monterey players scored in double figures with game-high scorer Gary Hodges leading the way with 14. Ian Hyslop and Jerrell Key each contributed 10 more.

Coronado's pair of high-scoring wings (Robby Garner and Cody Love), who are each averaging over 12 points a game, combined for 12 in Tuesday night's game. Junior big man Mark Sobosie was the only Pony to break double figures, dumping in 10 before fouling out.

The Mustangs' entire front line — Sobosie, Mike Ahlenius and John Lord — fouled out. All three also played the second half with three fouls.

Monterey Girls Blitz Coronado

The Monterey girls, playing their by-now traditional three quarters of good basketball, proved once again that it was enough Tuesday night, blitzing Coronado 83-47.

It was the Plainsmen's third straight win over the Mustangs this year. With it, they move to 25-1 on the season and an imposing 2-0 in the second half of District 4-5A play. Coronado, on the other hand, falls to 12-14 and 1-1.

"We really played pretty well in the first quarter. But in the second we got rattled and got in a running game with them. We really can't do that," said Coronado boss Miles Johnson, singing what is becoming a constant refrain for Monterey foes.

Indeed, Coronado did trail by only three, 14-11, at the end of the first period, certainly within striking distance.

But the only thing the Mustangs struck in the second period were the canvas as Monterey outscored them 27-13 in plowing to a 41-24 advantage.

"We had a real slow start," said Monterey coach Tim Tasker, viewing the first period from a slightly different vantage point.

"We shot a real low percent in the first quarter. I think in the first four or five minutes of the game we only had six points.

"We warmed up in the second quarter and got back into our game. I don't know what our early problems are, whether we're trying to hard or what."

Kamie Ethridge, who has been throwing in everything but the kitchen sink recently, led all scorers with 24 points. Only two other Plainsmen scored in double figures (Alayna Gilmore had 16 and Kriss Ethridge had 10 in a little over three quarters of play) but a total of 11 Monterey girls chipped in points.

"We played good team basketball," said Tasker. "Alayna Gilmore scored well tonight and she did real well playing in a team offense."

In the first two meetings between Monterey and Coronado, the Plainsmen took wins of 85-45 and 66-47.

Borger Avenges Loss, Trips Estacado 59-58

BORGER (Special) — Borger turned the tables on Estacado Tuesday, avenging an earlier loss to the Mats with a 59-58 victory here in the first game of the second-half of the District 1-4A race for both teams.

Plainview Streaks Past LHS Girls

The Lubbock High Westerners held Gray Hemphill to 18 points — six under her average — Tuesday night and should be commended for a job well done. But the Westerners also allowed three more Plainview players to score in double figures to fall 77-34 in Lubbock Tuesday night.

Donna Jackson and Cindy Black stepped in 14 apiece and Jami Shores added 10 as the Bulldogs upped their record to 6-1 in District 4-5A play while the Westerners remained winless.

LHS had only one player to score over 10 points as Olivia Vasquez canned 12. With the loss, the Westerners' record falls to 5-22.

The Angry Red led from the outset, outscoring LHS 24-7 in the opening quarter and adding enough in the second period — 22 — to coast to victory.

The Bulldogs, now 1-0 in league action and 25-3 overall, got some revenge for a 72-69 loss in Lubbock by overcoming an early Estacado lead and winning the game in the final quarter.

The Mats, 0-1 and 13-14, led 14-10 after the first quarter and 23-17 at halftime. But, true to their recent form, the Matadors lost the lead in the third period, being outscored 25-19.

The Bulldogs then outscored their guests 17-16 in the pivotal final eight minutes.

James Barnett scored 17 points before fouling out for Estacado. Kenneth Cade added 13 and Jerry Gray had 10.

Scoring guard Scott Hunt tossed in 17 for the winners. Gregg Belton added another 16 and Quinton Sheppard, who was reinstated after being suspended from the team last week, contributed 12.

Plainview Mauls Lubbock 91-54

The Plainview boys' basketball team opened the second half of its District 4-5A schedule Tuesday night by breaking Lubbock High's two-game winning streak with a 91-54 whipping in the Westerner gym.

The victory gave the Bulldogs a 14-14 record while the Westerners dropped below the 500 mark to 13-14.

Gil Wright, who poured in 21 points for high-point honors, led three teammates who also scored in double figures. Jerry Walker pumped in 18, Lee Carter scored 17 and Alton Jackson added 12.

For the Westerners, John Frankhouser was the leader with while Andy Marquez and Kirk Cole each chipped in 10.

Plainview outscored the Westerners in every quarter but the last, but even outscoring the visitors 23-17 could not make the game close.

The Bulldogs outshot LHS from both the field and the free throw line, hitting 36 field goals and 19 charity shots to 23 two-pointers and eight single-pointers for the Westerners.

Plainview (Special) — The Wayland Baptist Flying Queens continued their season-long dominance over Texas Tech Tuesday night by whipping the Red Raiders 98-69 here in Hutcherson Center.

It was the third straight time the Queens have defeated the Raiders this season, dropping Tech's record to 10-16 for the year.

The Raiders kept the game close in the early going, but after a 14-14 tie with five minutes remaining in the opening half, it was all Wayland Baptist.

The Queens flew to a 41-33 halftime lead and outscored the Raiders 57-36 in the second half.

Both teams had three players scoring in double figures and Kelly Briasher nabbed high-point honors with 29 points. Kathy Booth added 14 and Chris Kennedy had 10 for the Queens. For Tech, Car-

SWC Schools Set For Signing

Wednesday after the binding national letters of intent are signed. Arkansas coach Lou Holtz and Texas A&M mentor Tom Wilson are the only SWC coaches who will release lists of signees today.

While the loss of Davis throws a curve into Tech's recruiting effort, the Raiders remained in the running for several other outstanding players Tuesday night.

Although TCU held the upper hand in the fight for Brewer, 6-2, 220-pounder did not rule out the possibility of attending either Tech, Baylor or Houston.

Greenville running back Robert Lewis, a 6-0, 180-pounder desperately wanted by Oklahoma and Nebraska, said he will not sign a conference letter today, but might sign with Tech Monday. Lewis will visit Oklahoma this weekend.

Harrington, 6-5 and 210 pounds, said he will choose between Tech and TCU later this week. Lubbock Estacado defensive back Jerry Gray (6-1, 170) will visit Oklahoma this weekend, but still lists Tech or Texas as his likely choice.

Tech's hopes of signing San Antonio Jay running back-defensive back Anthony Beverly were dashed when the 6-1, 200-pounder made a pledge to SMU, but Tech — along with SMU, Texas and Oklahoma — remained in the running to sign 6-2, 215-pound running back Ronnie Robinson of Dallas Adams. Adams made it clear Tuesday that he will attend a school where he has an immediate opportunity to play.

The Raiders' efforts to lure several blue-chip prospects from the state of Oklahoma also fell through Tuesday. The Raiders, contending for the services of Oklahoma City Millwood wide receiver Paul Clewis, Lawton offensive lineman Terry Babbitt, Altus quarterback Todd Tims and Norman offensive lineman Ted Million and Rick Uhles, struck out completely. Clewis, Tims and Uhles will attend Oklahoma; Million is on his way to Duke and Babbitt is headed to Colorado.

Colorado is also expected to sign Coronado all-district lineman Felipe Elizondo today. Estacado running back Kelvin White will sign with Oklahoma. White's EHS teammate, 5-10, 160-pound wide receiver Kenneth Cade, is expected to sign with Oklahoma State.

Class 4A all-state running back Van Percy of Andrews ended weeks of speculation Tuesday when he committed to SMU. Percy, one of the state's top track and field performers, will play football and run track for the Mustangs.

Midland Lee offensive lineman Keith Brown Tuesday announced he will attend Oklahoma State, while Midland running back Jerry Zachery cast his lot with Texas A&M.

Mart Mixed In Trading

NEW YORK (AP) — Stock prices turned mixed Tuesday as traders continued to be preoccupied with President Reagan's economic plans and the prospects for his success.

The Dow Jones average of 30 industrials, down as much as 3.49 earlier in the day, rose 1.45 to 948.63 at the close.

But losers outnumbered gainers by almost 4-3 on the New York Stock Exchange.

Big Board volume totaled 40.82 million shares, against 38.33 million Monday.

"I think we're in the throes of a kind of paralysis here," said Larry Wachtel of Bache Halsey Stuart Shields.

"There are too many uncertainties," said Monte Gordon of Dreyfus Corp. "The market is like a spring beginning to coil."

But with Thursday a bank holiday, a three-day weekend ahead and the president not scheduled to unveil his plans for cutting taxes and federal spending for another week, "there is all kinds of incentive to do nothing," Wachtel said.

In addition, no major bank has matched Morgan Guaranty Trust Co., which on Monday cut its prime lending rate to 19 percent from 19.5 percent. "As long as no one follows Morgan Guaranty down, the market is going to be wary," said Gordon.

NEW YORK (AP) — Tuesday's national average of New York Stock Exchange issues as of NYSE close. Prices and volume considered for securities also traded on other markets.

A WIDELY KNOWN CATTLEMAN FROM LUBBOCK has been elected vice president of the influential National Cattlemen's Association.

W. J. "Dub" Waldrip, manager of the Spade Ranches, was elected to the national post at the "biggest-ever" NCA convention last week in Phoenix.

More than 5,000 cattlemen attended, including 200 members of the Texas Cattle Feeders Association. J. W. "Bill" Swan of Idaho was elected NCA president and Sam Washburn of Indiana was named president-elect.

Lean beef was described as the "theme song" of the convention. A number of speakers talked about consumer insistence on leaner beef, the economics of producing it, and changes in the grading system that would make it possible and profitable.

"Cattlemen must listen to consumers — their attitudes about prices, fat and cholesterol," Dr. W. T. Berry, executive vice president of the NCA, told his members.

"We must adjust our breeding and grading. Then we must adjust our thoughts to the anti-beef propaganda... This will take real money."

"WE CAN'T DEPEND ON PRICE ALONE for profits," said Merlyn Carlson in his final address as NCA president.

"We simply must get more competitive. This will require better individual management, sharper marketing skills, optimum use of available technology and management tools.

"The bottom line has to be profits and prosperity for cattlemen." A checkoff of 25 cents per head, each time an animal is sold, was said to have been given serious consideration at the convention.

Seven speakers suggested that as the best way to finance research, education and promotion and to counter anti-beef propaganda while also meeting competition from other meats.

The NCA went on record as favoring the addition of western delivery points to the Chicago Mercantile Exchange's live and feeder cattle contracts. One of four new live cattle delivery points would be at Hereford.

While the livestock industry is nationwide, the NCA resolution said, the five CME live cattle contract delivery points are in the middle United States, within a 500-mile radius.

CATTLE FUTURES TRADING COULD BE improved for the livestock industry if greater commercial use were possible for western cattlemen, the NCA said.

In addition to Hereford, the resolution called for live cattle delivery points at locations such as Los Angeles, Caldwell, Idaho; and Dodge City, Kan.

The NCA also went on record in support of maintaining the Commodity Futures Trading Commission as an independent and autonomous agency. The association opposes attempts to merge the CFTC with any other agency, including the Securities and Exchange Commission.

This policy plank calls for stepped-up educational programs to familiarize more cattlemen with the mechanics of futures trading.

In other actions, the NCA resolved to work for "modernization" of government beef grading standards, including a back-fat specification, to encourage production of leaner beef.

Citing consumer demand for leaner beef and the need for actual incentives for cattlemen to produce such a product, the resolution called for the U. S. Department of Agriculture to revise its standards.

UNDER SPECIFIC RECOMMENDATIONS, leaner beef would be allowed to grade Choice, the Standard grade would be changed to Good, and a color rating would be used to protect the identity and quality of grain-fed beef.

Other NCA resolutions called for:

— Abolishment of the Occupational Safety and Health Administration.

— Working toward a uniform checkoff for market development, with the NCA assuming leadership in expansion of such funding.

— Requesting that the Environmental Protection Agency grant the beef cattle industry an exemption from regulations on the use and disposal of toxaphene.

— Seeking medicated feed regulations for mixer-feeders that are different from regulations for commercial feedmills.

— Repeal of the so-called "windfall profits tax."

— Support of a constitutional amendment for a balanced federal budget, except in times of national emergency.

— Opposing a mandatory national individual animal identification system.

COTTON FUTURES CLOSED A MODERATELY active session mostly lower Tuesday, especially in nearby contracts, as speculators were reported continuing to unload long positions.

Prices finished down 130 points in near March, which broke the technically important 87 cents and settled at 86.35 cents, unchanged in December at 81.65 cents. Volume was estimated at 9,500 lots.

There were no fundamental developments to account for the decline, analysts said. But they added that some selling was prompted by expectations of a ginnings report today which could indicate production may exceed the January estimate and concern that a new estimate on the Chinese crop will be above the last projection.

Commission houses took bear spreads on the March-May straddle but losses were limited by light mill pricing, analysts said.

Some analysts continued to blame the declines on a lack of enthusiasm or interest on the part of speculators. Nothing seems to whet the appetite of speculators to buy cotton, they said.

Speculators and hedgers who wanted to buy cotton because of large exports already had done so before the rumors were confirmed late last week, one analyst said. When prices failed to rise, he said, traders with long positions began to sell wherever they could.

A NEW TRADER COMMITMENTS REPORT confirmed the exodus of speculators — from both the short and long sides.

Speculators held 54 percent of the longs at the end of last week, down 2.7 percent from a week earlier, and 51.6 percent of the shorts, down 2.6 percent, leaving them only 2.4 percent net long.

One analyst said the speculative long percentage was the lowest since Oct. 30, 1979.

Hedgers held 35.2 percent of the longs, up 2.1 percent, and 37.7 percent of the shorts, up 2 percent. Straddles or spreads accounted for 10.6 percent, up 0.6 percent.

It was reported that the Japanese spinning industry plans to apply to the government's Fair Trade Commission in Tokyo for approval of an anti-depression cartel in view of slumping sales of cotton yarn.

A DECISION TO THAT EFFECT IS EXPECTED to be made next week at a meeting of the presidents of spinning firms affiliated with the Japan Spinners Association. If approved, it would be the first anti-depression cartel in three years.

The Japanese industry has been making a voluntary production cutback of some 10 percent on the average for more than six months.

But cheap cotton yarn from South Korea still is reported to be flooding Japan and most of the makers are said to be suffering from deficits due to slumping domestic demand as a result of the cool summer last year and a rise in raw cotton prices.

Trading on Telcel was slow Tuesday on a turnover of 2,561 bales, which brought an average price of 65.64 cents, an average of 2,658 points over the loan.

The market difference was down 100 points and activity still was sloppy, with lower quantities comprising the bulk of the light turnover.

Wind Damage In Great Plains Less Than Year Ago

WASHINGTON (AP) — Wind damages to soil in the Great Plains so far this season has been slightly less than it was a year ago, the Agriculture Department has announced.

Norman Berg, chief of the Soil Conservation Service, said reports from the 10-state region show wind damage on 1,143,245 acres, compared to 1,390,901 acres a year ago.

Berg said Montana was hardest hit and, overall, the northern Great Plains suffered the most severe damage.

Severe drought in the first half of 1980 "resulted in many crops being abandoned, with no residue left to prevent erosion," the report said.

The agency annually keeps track of wind erosion on the plains during a seven-month period beginning on Nov. 1 and ending the following May 31. The report

Commodity Firm Designates Credit Guarantees

WASHINGTON (Reuters) — The Commodity Credit Corp. has designated up to $1.3 billion in credit guarantees to U. S. exporters for sales of U. S. feed concentrates, containing at least 70 percent protein meal, to Poland, the U. S. Department of Agriculture said.

The latest credit guarantees are part of the original $670 million granted to Poland, of which all but $64.7 million has been designated.

Commodity designations for the remaining credit guarantees will be announced later, the USDA said.

Exports of the protein feed must be completed by Sept. 30.

Soviet Grain Sales Pact Renewal Urged

By Reuters
WASHINGTON — The 1975 U. S.-Soviet grain agreement should be extended for one to two years when it expires in September and a new one should then be negotiated, Richard Bell, executive vice president of Riceland Foods, said.

Speaking at the U. S. Farm Export Education Project Conference, Bell said the U. S. embargo on grain shipments to the U.S.S.R. was shaped from a domestic political perspective.

"We have more to gain by developing trade with all countries, despite their political beliefs," Bell, a former assistant secretary of agriculture, said.

Bell said he generally opposes bilateral trade agreements, except with the U.S.S.R. and China. He said the United States needs an agreement with the U.S.S.R. so the Soviets do not disrupt the U. S. market and added that one with China is needed to protect a market share.

If U. S. grain trade with the Soviet Union is terminated when the grain agreement ends in September, Bell said, it could have a substantial effect on farm income, depending on the economy and weather patterns.

"In both cases, I am not optimistic," he said. Bell said based on recent weather forecasts he does not believe weather patterns will be much more favorable this year than in 1980.

In the long term, though, loss of the Soviet market would have a larger impact on American agriculture than weather conditions, Bell said. He called trade with the U.S.S.R. "one of the most critical problems of U. S. agricultural trade in the early 1980s."

Bell said he hopes President Reagan will make his policy on agricultural exports known in the next several weeks.

"I think the U. S. citizens have a right to know the Reagan administration's view on Soviet trade," he said.

Agricultural export policy has been "muddled" since the 1973 soybean embargo, he said.

If future trade policy with the Soviet Union is outlined, the rest of the policy will fall into place, he said.

Bell said he disagrees with David Stockman, director of the White House Office of Management and Budget, that farm price supports are not needed.

The risks of variable weather patterns and foreign trade barriers justify moderate farm price supports, he said.

Strong Demand Expected For Farming Credit

WASHINGTON (Reuters) — Prospects for improved 1981 farm income will produce more farm capital expenditures and a strong demand for credit this year, the Farm Credit Administration (FCA) said in a report to Congress.

The FCA said spending for land and machinery should rise in areas where higher crop and livestock prices are received, leading to a stronger level of operating expenditures.

Demand for credit in these areas will be high, but lending from the Farm Credit System will grow more slowly relative to commercial lenders because of improved liquidity this year in the commercial sector, the report said.

In other regions many farmers will face severe financial problems and will require credit for re-financing 1980 debts, the FCA said. However, the FCA said, capital expenditures in these regions are likely to be weak.

Higher commodity prices in the fall of 1980 spurred demand for land near the end of the year, the FCA said. Land prices are expected to continue rising at a faster rate in 1981, it said.

For the 1980 year, land price gains slowed temporarily to 9 percent, compared with the average annual gain of 13 percent in the 1970s, the FCA said.

The greatest price gains will be in rangelands unaffected by the drought. Areas depending heavily on fertilizer and energy for crop production will register lower gains in land prices.

High interest rates also will have an impact on land values and may dampen demand for land purchases.

The Farm Credit System loans outstanding rose to $68 billion in the year ended Oct. 31, up 19.4 percent from the prior year. Most of the loan demand was during the first half of the year when other lenders were having difficulty meeting credit needs.

The system's share of outstanding farm debt rose to a record 32.1 percent at the end of 1980, with much of the increase in real estate debt.

The system's Federal Land Banks held 38 percent of all outstanding farm real estate debt, the largest single share since commercial lenders, life insurance firms and individuals have gradually lost market share.

SBA Disaster Loan Deadline Extended

The filing deadline for obtaining disaster loan assistance from the Small Business Administration has been extended for 60 days.

Officials said the deadline affects those who experienced drought damages to farms, ranches and related enterprises in Texas.

The new deadline is April 13 for physical drought losses — crop losses, pasture damages, loss of livestock and so on, officials said. For economic injury losses, the new deadline will be July 13.

"This extension will allow farmers more time to calculate losses due to a late harvest season," the SBA said.

Interest rates on SBA physical loss disaster loans are either 5 percent or 8 1/4 percent, depending upon the borrower's financial ability.

The lower rate will apply to those who could not borrow from commercial, private or non-federal sources.

Economic injury loans have an interest rate of 8 1/4 percent.

Loan maturities are established by SBA loan officers in accordance with the applicant's ability to repay, the agency said.

Farmers, ranchers and other businesses may inquire about the farm disaster loan program at the Lubbock SBA Farm Disaster Branch Office at 720 Texas Avenue or by calling (806) 762-7481.

The SBA also maintains a toll-free number: (800) 252-9726.

was for the first two months of the current season.

Officials consider land damaged by wind "if enough soil has been removed or deposited on it to subject the land to further erosion hazard, or to impair its productive capacity."

Damage, compared to a year earlier, included:

Northern Great Plains
Montana, 327,082 acres in November-December and 352,065 a year earlier; Nebraska, 86,275 and 5,985; North Dakota, 275,845 and 98,080; South Dakota, 314,281 and 141,628; and Wyoming, 17,235 and 11,7465.

Southern Great Plains
Colorado, 16,920 and 8,660; Kansas, 14,150 and 284,230; New Mexico, 9,655 and 20,500; Oklahoma, 22,220 and 139,100; and Texas, 59,582 and 328,917.

Bob Hope's Popularity Still At Peak

NEW YORK (AP) — Bob Hope may be TV's biggest star — as popular today with millions around the world as he was more than 30 years ago, when he first took his act to the then-fledgling medium. And yet, for all of his success, you're not likely to see Bob Hope in that most common TV mode — the rerun.

"With my stuff, there's not much residual value," the comedian says. "This is my 31st year on television, and the monologues have always been so topical, if you go back and look at shows we've done before, you really can't use most of them a second time."

That's good news for Hope's fans — something new every few weeks, it seems. And the man himself doesn't mind the condition, either.

"It's a new challenge every time you go on," he says. "It's a great mental challenge to me, and I love it."

Hope's next appearance — he's done well over 300 television shows for NBC since Easter Sunday, 1950 — comes today at 8 p.m. (CST) in a pre-Valentine's Day special.

Three stars — Barbara Mandrell from "Barbara Mandrell and the Mandrell Sisters" on NBC, Charlene Tilton from CBS's "Dallas" and Cathy Lee Crosby from ABC's "That's Incredible" — join Phyllis Diller as Hope's guests for the hour-long "Valentine Special."

"The date we got from NBC was right around Valentine's," Hope says, "and that's a pretty good springboard. We've got a good cast and some entertaining material, and I think it's a pretty good show."

Hope, who will be 78 in May, spends countless hours on each show he does, reworking sketches and honing his monologue, often right up to taping. The primary objective, he says, is to keep the material fresh.

"One of the secrets of my longevity," he says, "is that we do different things all the time. That's why I would never do a series. You get stuck doing the same thing over and over."

For his "Valentine Special" the innovation is "Dear Bobby," an advice to the lovelorn column. "Bobby" Hope, with help from Dr. Joyce Brothers, the psychologist who writes an advice column of her own, answers letters from his guest stars.

"The 'Valentine Special,' like most of Hope's television shows, was taped before an audience. The entertainer says he wouldn't have it any other way."

"It helps with the timing," he says. "No matter how hard you try, you can't do a show without missing a beat or two. And the audience at home knows that the guy on stage is doing his thing live. You can't fake that chemistry."

Hope appears several times a year on NBC, generally to high ratings. His "Bob Hope Christmas Show," broadcast annually in January or February during the war in Vietnam, was the year's highest-rated program on several occasions, and his specials normally rival the Super Bowl and the Academy Awards show in the audience sweepstakes.

His tradition of performing for the troops began during World War II.

He was host of the "Colgate Comedy Hour" in the 1952-53 season, and starred in "The Bob Hope Show" beginning Oct. 12, 1953.

That program continued monthly through May of 1956, and his appearances on NBC have been irregular although frequent since then.

Gun Control Controversy At Center Of TV Film

LOS ANGELES (AP) — "A Gun in the House" on CBS explores the issue of handgun control, but does not take a clear-cut stand. And neither does Sally Struthers, who stars as a housewife who is attacked by two men and kills one of them.

Before taking the part in the two-hour made-for-TV movie, to be broadcast Wednesday night, Miss Struthers said she was not familiar with guns at all. "Girls are taught to repress violence," she said. "They just learn to fight with their mouths."

"So I didn't grow up with guns. I don't like them. I don't like what they're for. So when I had to go to the El Monte police station to learn to shoot, I didn't like it."

She learned at El Monte, a community east of Los Angeles, because the original plan was to use the indoor range at the police station in the filming. Later, arrangements were made to use an indoor range in Los Angeles.

"I won't say if I keep a gun," said Miss Struthers. "If I say I do, it might excite some weirdo, or it might offend some sponsor of the Christian Children's Fund. (She does their public service announcements and is an active supporter.)"

"I would hate to see some child go hungry because I might have a gun in the house."

"And I won't say I don't keep a gun. It would make me an easy target. I'm just as fearful as anyone else."

She said she is planning to take a course in the use of tear gas as a personal defense.

In the film, Miss Struthers, as Emily Cates, is prosecuted by a district attorney who wants to make an example of her case as a handgun murder. The second assailant cannot be found, and there is no witness to back up her story that her life was in danger.

The production got its start about a year ago when the producers, David Debin and Peter Locke, decided to do a handgun story. The two were themselves split over the issue, and CBS would not let them take a stand one way or the other.

"I seem to do a lot of issue-oriented films that break just as the issue suddenly flares up," said the diminutive Miss Struthers as she sat in her office at Mothers Struthers Productions at CBS Television City.

"I was in a wife-beating film with Dennis Weaver. ('Intimate Strangers') just as many centers for battered wives were being opened. I did a film on deaf children ('And Your Name Is Jonah') just as the controversy over whether deaf children should be taught to speak or taught to sign began to boil."

"Now the issue is handgun control. We did the film and someone lovely and kind, John Lennon, gets killed and it becomes a big issue again."

She said she does not pick her films because of the issues, adding, however, that eight years as Gloria Stivic on "All in the Family" turned her toward stories of substance.

"On 'All in the Family' we dealt with issues and we did it with a lot of humor," said Miss Struthers. "It was better for me than college. It taught me to incorporate teaching with acting. I get annoyed if I watch television and end up the evening with nothing that has stirred me to think."

In the spring, Miss Struthers, who is married to psychiatrist William Rader, said she plans to pack up their 20-month-old daughter, Samantha, and a dog named do a show on Broadway.

"We open in April in Boston," she said. "Here's a person who hates to leave town for even two days, and I'm committed to three months on Broadway."

The play is called "Wally's Cafe" and also stars Rita Moreno and James Coco. "That's not an exciting title," the actress said. "Maybe we could call it 'Same Time Next Decade.' Each act is 20 years later."

Her company also is preparing a new series for her. After many months discussing ideas and reading scripts, the field has been narrowed to two or three possibilities. It's now up to CBS to agree with her on the final choice.

CBS Tops Ratings With Boost From 'Hooper'

NEW YORK (AP) — The TV week came to a crashing climax Sunday night, with Burt Reynolds' 1978 motion picture, "Hooper," the runaway winner in its television debut on CBS, opposite Part I of ABC's "East of Eden" miniseries and "Kent State" on NBC.

"Hooper" finished the week ending Feb. 8 in third place, behind CBS' "Dallas" — No. 1 in prime time for the 11th time in 14 weeks — and another CBS show, "Dukes of Hazzard."

CBS won the network's ratings competition for the ninth straight week, with six of the 10 highest-rated programs, figures from the A.C. Nielsen Co. showed.

CBS' rating for the period was 20.8 to 19.5 for ABC and 16.9 for NBC. The networks say that means in an average prime-time minute during the period, 20.8 percent of the nation's TV-equipped homes were tuned to CBS.

The rating for "Dallas" was 31.6. Nielsen says that means of all the homes in the country with television, 31.6 percent saw at least part of the CBS show.

The race for the week was close until Sunday night, when all three networks scheduled blockbuster programs. Nielsen's February "sweeps," during which national spot advertising rates are determined, began the previous Thursday night — an explanation for the Sunday night collision.

ABC set aside three hours for the first chapter of "East of Eden," a new adaptation of John Steinbeck's novel, which finished No. 15.

NBC's dramatization of events at Kent State University in May 1970, in which four students were shot to death by National Guardsmen, was a disappointing 61st.

Part II of "East of Eden" was broadcast Monday night, with the concluding installment scheduled for Wednesday evening, and ratings were not included in the most recent Nielsen survey.

The poor showing for "Kent State" was only a part of NBC's problem for the week. The network, runnerup in the ratings' competition four times in the last six weeks, listed four of the five lowest-rated shows: "Hill Street Blues" was No. 60, followed by "Kent State" and another NBC program, "Nero Wolfe." "Ladies' Man" on CBS was 63rd, with "NBC Reports: Who Will Fight for America?" 64th.

CBS, on the other hand, scored with a rare TV appearance by comedian Lily Tomlin. "Lily: Sold Out," No. 8 for the week.

"The Brady Girls Get Married," the premiere program in a new NBC series, was 25th for the week, with another NBC special, "Love Letter to Jack Benny," 35th. The premiere edition of CBS' "That's My Line" was No. 38.

CBS' "Concrete Cowboys" got off to a stumbling start, No. 47 for the week, with the premiere program in NBC's Project Peacock series for family audiences faring even less well — 57th.

Here are the week's 10 highest-rated shows:

"Dallas," with a rating of 31.6 representing 24.6 million homes, "Dukes of Hazzard," 29.7 or 23.1 million, "Movie," "Hooper," 29.2 or 22.7 million, "M-A-S-H," 28.7 or 22.3 million, and "60 Minutes," 28.3 or 22 million, all CBS; "Diff'rent Strokes" and "Real People," both 25.7 or 20 million, both NBC; "Lily: Sold Out," 24.9 or 19.4 million, CBS, and "Love Boat," 24.8 or 19.3 million, and "Three's Company," 24.3 or 18.9 million, both ABC.

The next 10 programs: "Facts of Life," NBC; "Too Close for Comfort," ABC; "Little House on the Prairie," NBC, and "House Calls," CBS, tie; "East of Eden," Part I, and "Hart to Hart," both ABC; "Happy Days" and "That's Incredible," both ABC, tie; "The Waltons," CBS, and "Quincy, M.E.," NBC.

Film Executive Pleads Guilty To Transporting Stolen Funds

NEW YORK (AP) — A top executive of Warner Communications Inc. pleaded guilty Tuesday in a plea-bargaining deal that allowed him to avoid trial on federal racketeering charges and other counts involving bribe-taking and diversion of corporate funds.

Jay Emmett, 52, a senior executive of the company for the past 10 years and a member of Warner's three-man office of the president, interrupted the jury selection process to plead guilty in U.S. District Court to two counts dealing with interstate transportation of $23,000 in stolen funds.

All other charges in a 17-count indictment were scheduled to be dropped. The indictment stemmed from an ongoing probe of illegal stock sales and frauds involving the establishment and operation of the now-defunct Westchester Premiere Theatre.

A similar plea-bargaining deal was made by Leonard Horwitz, a co-defendant and a Warner consultant previously convicted of frauds involving the sale of stock in the theater.

Horwitz, 56, of Redding, Conn., pleaded guilty to charges of filing a false tax return for 1976 and omitting almost $31,000 in income.

In accepting the pleas, Chief Judge Lloyd F. MacMahon set sentencing for April 6. Emmett faces up to 10 years imprisonment.

Freeloading Ways Finally Lead To Jail

TUCSON, Ariz. (AP) — John Joseph Kane, a real-life Freddie the Freeloader, is in the slammer — because of too many free eats, authorities say.

"He finally did it once too often, and we put him in jail," police spokesman Michael Walsh said Monday.

In the past few weeks, Kane, 45, a casually dressed, unemployed laborer, has sampled the cuisine at several Tucson restaurants, police say. He ordered and ate meals averaging about $8 apiece, though at one place he gorged himself on two dinners, and then refused to pay, they said.

At seven restaurants, police issued Kane arrest citations charging theft of less than $100 and ordering him to appear in court. But each time he was released under a department policy aimed at complying with a federal court order against jail overcrowding.

Finally, after a meal at the Imperial Restaurant last Friday, Kane was arrested and booked at the Pima County Jail, unable to post $90 bond. He faces trial Wednesday on a food theft charge.

Freddie the Freeloader was one of comedian Red Skelton's favorite characters. A light-hearted ne'er-do-well, Freddie dined in fine restaurants on the (non-existent) cuff. He'd devour a scrumptious dinner, deliver a complimentary burp, then calmly announce he could not pay. Inevitably, he'd get an escort to the hoosegow — and a warm bed.

But Freddie was make-believe. The one in Tucson is real.

Sal Zagona, owner of Caruso's, an Italian restaurant where Kane ate, says, "It's frustrating. He not only refused to pay but he was hostile. He was kind of pushy, overtly defiant, sticking his finger in my chest."

That was after Kane had run up an $18.07 tab, availing himself of Caruso's shrimp Mediterranean followed by spaghetti, meatballs and ravioli with mushroom sauce, topped off with a half-bottle of burgundy, dessert, cappuccino and cigarettes.

"He was completely arrogant, as though I had a lot of nerve" expecting payment, said Zagona.

If Kane is convicted and sentenced to jail, he'll still be eating for free — at the expense of the taxpayer to the tune of $34.50 a day.

"He'll wind up getting free meals either way," said George Corneveaux, director of the county's correctional volunteer center, a pre-jailing screening agency.

AP Executive Given Journalism Award

L...RENCE, Kan. (AP) — There is no greater guardian of freedom than a free press. Keith Fuller, president and general manager of The Associated Press, told a group of editors and others Tuesday.

"Our freedom is in large measure a result of our free press — far more than any other freedom," Fuller said at a University of Kansas luncheon where he received the 1981 William Allen White Foundation Award for Journalistic Merit.

"The right to vote" it can be usurped and stolen. Right to trial by jury? Clever adversaries and corrupt jurists can circumvent it. In the end, truth, whether printed or spoken, widely disseminated is our best defense against despotism," the AP executive said.

Fuller was the 32nd recipient of the award, presented annually to a journalist who exemplifies the ideals of the late editor of the Emporia (Kan.) Gazette. Previous winners include James B. Reston of The New York Times, Wes Gallagher, former general manager of The Associated Press, CBS anchorman Walter Cronkite, columnist Sylvia Porter, and the late Roy A. Roberts, long-time Kansas City Star editor.

Fuller recalled the honesty and trust that marked American society during his boyhood in Arlington, Kan., where his family could go on vacation for weeks and leave the house unlocked without fear of having anything stolen. Today, he said, "I walk in fear and restrict my movements to conform to the will of the lawless."
