Faculty Tenure Panel At Tech Resigns

Policy Dispute With Cavazos Cited

ALL FIVE MEMBERS of the Tenure and Privilege Committee at Texas Tech have resigned simultaneously in protest of the administration's contention that the committee has no jurisdiction over a tenure denial case brewing in the College of Home Economics.

Committee members are tight-lipped about the matter, saying only that the issue is expected to be publicly discussed at Wednesday's Faculty Senate meeting.

As The Avalanche-Journal reported Feb. 12, a faculty member in the College of Home Economics has alleged unfair denial of tenure, saying that his academic freedom was violated. After hearing the faculty member's complaint, the Tenure and Privilege Committee advised President Lauro Cavazos and the Faculty Senate it was going to activate a rarely used special hearing panel to investigate the case.

"The special hearing panel operates much like a court," Roland Smith, Faculty Senate president, said.

Faculty handbook policy states that the president of the university shall select two persons to serve on the panel and that the Faculty Senate shall pick two persons. Then those four persons select a fifth panel member.

The Faculty Senate chose its two members Feb. 11. However, Cavazos has chosen none.

When The A-J asked Cavazos on Tuesday — before he left town for legislative committee meetings in Austin — about the status of the special hearing panel, he first said he was unfamiliar with the subject matter. When asked again, he referred the question to Tech's legal counsel Marilyn Phelan.

She declined to comment, saying any discussion of the panel was confidential.

The A-J has obtained a copy of her memo on the matter. That memo is dated the week prior to the date Cavazos and Dr. Phelan were queried by The A-J. The memorandum advises Cavazos not to activate the special hearing panel.

"I shall follow the Counsel's advice," was Cavazos' only comment on the matter in his correspondence with the Tenure and Privilege Committee. That memo was issued Feb. 26, one day after he received Dr. Phelan's memorandum.

The committee received the Cavazos memo on Tuesday and met in an emergency session late Wednesday afternoon.

After about ninety minutes' discussion, the five members agreed to resign their committee membership en masse. Those members are William A. "Bill" Stewart, chairman of the committee, and Jacq Collins, Charles Dale, Dan Benson and Henry Wright.

Dr. Bill Conroy, interim associate vice president for academic affairs, was the administration's representative at that meeting.

He says he tried to persuade the members not to resign but instead to discuss their frustrations with Cavazos when he returns to Lubbock.

The committee already had scheduled a meeting with Cavazos for next Thursday and might have discussed the special hearing panel at that time. But their ire over Cavazos's memo this week prompted the immediate resignations.

Cavazos was out of town Friday and could not be reached for comment.

After The A-J confirmed the committee members had resigned, one member said he still couldn't discuss the matter but that he will after next week's faculty meeting. "They may try to fire me, but I'll talk to you anyway," he said.

Policy for admission to tenure, outlined in the faculty handbook, states that if a non-tenured faculty member "alleges that a decision not to reappoint him is caused by considerations violative of academic freedom, his allegations shall be given preliminary consideration by a faculty committee."

The Tenure and Privilege Committee believes it is the faculty committee referred to in that policy.

However, Dr. Phelan's legal opinion on the matter is that "a faculty committee" is not the Tenure and Privilege Committee because, if it were, the policy would state that specifically. Therefore, she concludes, the Tenure and Privilege Committee "has no jurisdiction over this case."

She advised Cavazos, "If you refer this case to a committee

Rains Pelt Region; Mishap Kills Youth

By DONNA RAND
Avalanche-Journal Staff

HEAVY RAINS pelted portions of the South Plains Friday night and were a contributing factor in the death of a Lubbock youth, killed when he stepped into a live wire in the aftermath of a minor traffic accident.

The thundershowers hit the city about 9 p.m. Friday when a line of storms moved through the region, also dropping pea-size hail in parts of Lubbock, Shallowater and Wolfforth.

Late Friday, a National Weather Service spokesman at Lubbock International Airport said the Hub City had received .47 of an inch of rain. Other cities across the South Plains reported similar amounts as the rain moved quickly across the region.

Earlier Friday, the storm system entered the Panhandle and moved steadily southeast across the South Plains with intermittent rain reported falling over Hockley, Terry and Lubbock Counties.

A minor traffic accident was blamed for the death of 16-year-old Kenneth Denny Martin, who suffered a fatal electrical shock after stepping from his vehicle to determine what damage it had sustained in a collision with a light pole.

Police said that Martin, of 2116 54th St., was driving his late-model Chevrolet Blazer west on 34th Street and hit a vapor light pole in the 2200 block as his vehicle apparently skidded on the rain-slick street.

A witness told police he stopped to help young Martin, who had stepped from his vehicle to check damage, but the teen-ager said there was no problem. However, the witness said, the youth then took a step forward and walked into a live wire, which hit him at chest level. He sustained a 9,000-volt electrical shock.

The witness said Martin "fell hard," over a curb and into the street. When the witness reached to help the youth, he told police, he also felt the electric current.

Justice of the Peace Charles Smith pronounced the teen-ager dead at 9:59 p.m. and ruled the death accidental.

Other passengers in Martin's car, two 16-year-old girls and a 15-year-old boy, were not hurt.

Rain, some of it mixed with snow, is expected over the Panhandle and northern South Plains again this morning and cooler temperatures also are in the forecast as a late winter storm system remains over New Mexico.

The probability of precipitation in the Lubbock area is 20 percent today with the chance for showers continuing through Wednesday.

The high today is expected in the upper 40s, with an overnight low in the middle 20s. The cooler readings are expected to be accentuated by northerly winds gusting up to 25 mph today.

Sunday's high reading is forecast in the middle 50s, and the extended forecast calls for cloudy skies through Wednesday with not much temperature change expected.

While the Panhandle may receive up to four inches of snow by later today, one local weatherman said Lubbock probably will remain on the fringe of the storm and may receive only light snow flurries — "perhaps not enough to turn the ground white.".

A winter storm warning was issued for the northern portion of the Panhandle late Friday and continues through early today as the storm system moves eastward from Arizona.

Water Projects, VA Programs Among New Budget Targets

WASHINGTON (AP) — President Reagan said Friday he intends to slash $1.3 billion from the federal payroll, and other officials said assistance to Vietnam veterans, water projects and tobacco subsidies are among dozens of programs earmarked for a new round of budget cuts to be unveiled next week.

Reagan announced at a news conference that he will seek to cut non-defense federal employment by nearly 63,100 over the next two years from the levels planned by his Democratic predecessor, Jimmy Carter.

The president said his payroll plan would replace the temporary government hiring freeze he imposed on his first day in office. It calls for a permanent ceiling to reduce federal employment by 33,000 in the current fiscal year and by another 30,100 in fiscal 1982, which begins Oct. 1. The personnel reductions would save $1.3 billion over the two years, he said.

Federal Diet Planned

"Millions of Americans today have had to tighten their belts because of the economic conditions, and it's time to put Washington on a diet, too," he said.

Reagan plans to detail more than $10 billion in additional budget cuts next Tuesday. Affected will be a number of programs, such as the Veterans Administration, which were spared in the initial, $35-billion swing of the budget ax last month.

And tobacco farmers are likely to feel the sting, too, despite the protection of a North Carolina senator, Jesse Helms, a longtime Reagan ally.

In addition, the Army Corps of Engineers' $1.8-billion water development program, which was barely touched in the first round of cuts, is headed for more substantial reductions in Reagan's revised budget plan for fiscal 1982, said an aide to Budget Director David A. Stockman.

Reagan previously proposed cutting only $90 million from spending on water projects in 1982. Stockman's aide, who did not want to be identified, declined to reveal the size of the additional cuts.

The administration's plans for delaying construction of water projects would have the most impact in the South and East, where the corps of engineers has its biggest projects.

Hundreds Reported Dead In El Salvador

An army spokesman and the military sources also reported troops had driven anti-government guerrillas out of two provincial cities in fighting that left at least 65 people dead.

Officials had reported guerrilla bands in San Lorenzo, 45 miles northeast of San Salvador, were "wiped out" in a campaign last week, but the sources said there was renewed fighting there Friday and the guerrillas had killed hundreds of peasants for supporting the troops in the earlier operation. They gave no details of the alleged massacre.

The army spokesman reported at least 30 guerrillas slain in a 24-hour battle for Jutiapa, 30 miles east of San Salvador, and he said guerrilla activity appeared to be decreasing around the country.

The military sources reported another battle, however, at San Antonio de Los Ranchos, 50 miles north of the capital, and said 35 people, including an unspecified number of soldiers, were killed in the fight that ended Friday with the army recapturing the city.

Area Lawmen Alert To Renewed Drug Traffic As Spring Nears

By JIM STEIERT
A-J Correspondent

HEREFORD — Spring is approaching, bringing with it those things for which the South Plains and Panhandle seem to have gained a reputation: dust storms, sprouting young cotton plants and, as lawmen are well aware, drug smuggling aircraft dropping out of the sky onto flat and handy rural roads.

Those carriers of illegal drugs aren't uncommon to the area at any time of the year, but spring and summer months seem the most popular for activity.

Investigators and federal officials say it's difficult to measure the volume of smuggling traffic plying the skies over the area. But the number of failed efforts may provide some indication. Consider these incidents during the past five years:

• A vintage B-25 roars out of the night, its bomb bay bulging with bricks of Mexican marijuana. Overtaxed engines streaming oil, the plane descends to a rural airport just outside Vega. As it touches down, a landing gear strikes a culvert alongside the runway. The craft skids wildly, then grinds to a halt. Those who were at its controls abandon the plane and its cargo, leaving a major haul for law enforcement officials who find the crippled craft at dawn the next day.

• Residents in the northwest part of Deaf Smith County report hearing the sounds of a low-flying aircraft during the night, and the next day spot an aircraft sprawled in the middle of a pasture, its fuel tanks empty. There is no trace of the pilot, but the aircraft is packed with bricks of marijuana which are seized by law officers.

• Researchers from Texas Tech's range and wildlife department are working at night near a playa lake in western Castro County, fitting pheasants with radio transmitters as part of a project to study the wildlife of the region. As they go about their work of trapping pheasants with the aid of headlamps, they hear an approaching aircraft. The single-engine plane comes over the lake on a landing approach and the pilot, apparently confused by the lights the researchers are using, noses his craft down into the lake. The startled pilot and researchers come face-to-face and investigators find the aircraft loaded with marijuana.

• Two Hereford businessmen report their single-engine Cessna 210 missing from the Hereford Airport following the 1980 Christmas holidays. Authorities launch a search for the craft which they suspect was stolen by drug smugglers. Several weeks later DPS investigators close in on the plane after it touches down on a rural road in the Permian Basin. It's loaded with 600 pounds of mari-

Two Television Stations Increase Sniper Reward

TWO TELEVISION stations have added to The Lubbock Avalanche-Journal's offer to reward anyone with information leading to the arrest and conviction of the person or persons responsible for a sniping incident at the home of one of the newspaper's executives.

Friday's contribution of $500 by KAMC-TV, Lubbock, and KMCC-TV, Clovis, brings to $2,000 the total reward. Thursday, A-J Vice President and General Manager Robert R. Norris announced that the paper is offering $1,000 and $500 is being offered by Crime Line Inc.

Two A-J employees, Bryce Cockerham and Shannon Kennedy, were wounded in the Feb. 26 sniping incident at the 2901 Bangor Ave. home of advertising director Carl Cannon.

A bullet shattered a living room window and the jacket lodged in an inside corner. Fragments of the bullet struck both victims, who required hospitalization.

Bob Nash, executive vice president of KAMC-KMCC, said the stations "are concerned about the wanton disregard of life and property by some elements of our society. Hopefully, this reward will help find the party or parties responsible" for the shooting.

In announcing the A-J's reward offer Thursday, Norris said, "We feel that incidents such as the sniping are deplorable and cannot be condoned. It is our hope that the reward will assist police in apprehending the person or persons involved.

"We encourage anyone with information concerning the shooting incident to call the detective division of the Lubbock Police Department as soon as possible."

The incident occurred during a quiet dinner party attended by 14 other persons. Shortly before the bullet entered the Cannon home, a passing car was struck by another bullet, believed from the same weapon.

Police thus far have been unable to discover any motive.

City Cites 'Waste' In Rule Compliance

By MARC FLAKE

RENOVATION of Lubbock's softball fields has no adverse effect on the environment. Nor does the cleaning up of the Canyon Lakes nor building a senior citizens center, according to a city study.

But federal regulations governing the release of money to be used for those projects forced the city to spend about $400 in federal funds to reach those conclusions before work on the facilities could proceed.

Lubbock officials plan to use one portion of federal Community Development Funds to improve the ball parks. Another segment of the money will go toward the cleaning up of the Canyon Lakes, installation of restrooms there, the construction of a senior citizens center, the installation of a senior citizens nutrition program and the building of a neighborhood house.

A third portion of the CD program is set aside to pay for the administrative costs of the projects. It is from those funds the $400 was taken so the city staff could comply with regulations instituted by the National Environmental Policy Act of 1969, which requires an environmental assessment study on almost any project utilizing federal funds.

Those guidelines were relaxed somewhat in 1979, lessening the amount of required assessments by about 80 percent.

However, the renovation of softball fields and the parks cleanup didn't make it into the 1979 exceptions list.

The cost of the hours worked by city employees, estimated at about $50 per project; the cost of advertising, estimated at about $150 per project; and the weeks of delay while awaiting government clearance is wasteful, admits Lubbock Community Development Director Vicki Covey.

And although the city staff thought the need for the environmental assessments was marginal, they decided it

Second Major Winter Storm Of Week Pushes Across U.S.

By The Associated Press

More than a foot of snow fell on mountainous parts of Arizona on Friday, and winter storm warnings were in effect for parts of the Southwest and Midwest.

Snow spread eastward across much of Colorado as the second major winter storm in three days pushed into the state and was expected to bring up to a foot of new snow to the mountains.

The National Weather Service issued a winter storm warning for mountain areas, where up to a foot of snow was expected, and for southwest Colorado through Friday night and for eastern Colorado through this morning.

Light rain and snowshowers lingered over the Northeastern states, but skies were sunny over the North-Central states.

The tail end of New Jersey's heaviest snowstorm of the winter gave way to scattered snow flurries on Friday, after dumping up to 10 inches of snow over central and northern portions of the state. Driving conditions were extremely hazardous Friday as temperatures dropped into the 20s and icy roads were blamed for two traffic fatalities Thursday.

The heavy snowfall did little to alleviate New Jersey's drought situation, according to water company officials.

Temperatures around the nation at 1 p.m. CST ranged from 15 at Houghton, Mich., to 82 at Miami, Fla.

For today, thundershowers were forecast over southeastern Texas and southern Louisiana, with rain over the lower Mississippi Valley and part of the southern Plains. Snowshowers were predicted for the southern Rockies, with rain over the Pacific Northwest.

Highs in the 50s and 60s were predicted from the Pacific Northwest to the southern Pacific Coast and across to the southern Atlantic Coast, and in the 40s across the rest of the nation.

•East: Atlanta 51 fair, Boston 36 snow, Buffalo 32 fair, Charleston S.C. 59 fair, Cincinnati 39 windy, Cleveland 32 partly cloudy, Detroit 32 partly cloudy, Miami 80 fair, Nashville 44 fair, New York 39 windy, Philadelphia 38 windy, Pittsburgh 29 snow, Washington 45 windy.

•West: Anchorage 28 partly cloudy, Los Angeles 58 fair, Phoenix 54 partly cloudy, Salt Lake City 47 cloudy, San Diego 58 cloudy, San Francisco 53 fair, Seattle 43 cloudy.

Atlanta Authorities Announce Identity Of 20th Child Victim

ATLANTA (AP) — The body of Curtis Walker, a missing 13-year-old black youth, was found floating in a river Friday in suburban DeKalb County, raising the toll of black children slain in the Atlanta area to 20 over the past 19 months, Public Safety Director Dick Hand announced.

An preliminary autopsy performed on the body Friday evening showed that Walker, who had been missing since Feb. 19, had been asphyxiated, Hand said at a news conference.

Walker's body was found by a fireman who spotted the corpse from a bridge above the South River, said DeKalb County police spokesman Chuck Johnson.

Police officials, including members of a special Atlanta police task force probing the 20 slayings and the disappearance of another boy, rushed to the scene in south DeKalb County.

Reporters saw police handcuff a young man and remove him from the scene in a police car. Authorities later said the man was taken from a store near the site of the slaying because the storekeeper said he "was acting a little spacey."

In another incident Friday, a man was charged with aggravated assault after he shot at two men he believed were trying to lure black children into his car, a police spokesman said. No one was injured.

Police spokesman Benjamin Sims said the gunman, whose identity was not immediately available, had been told by two women that the men in the car had asked "a couple of black children" to get into their car.

Sims said the man fired one shot at the car during the chase. Police joined the chase and cornered the car at the Atlanta-Fulton County Stadium.

"There were no kids and no evidence of wrongdoing in the car," Sims said. The two men were taken into custody for questioning by the special police task force investigating the deaths and disappearances.

The man who fired the shot was charged with aggravated assault and released on his own recognizance, Sims said.

Meanwhile, city council has rejected a measure to prohibit unsupervised children from selling goods in public places, despite the fact that some of Atlanta's 19 slain black children disappeared after going out to sell merchandise.

And city officials Friday awaited word on whether the special police task force would get direct federal aid.

Mayor Maynard Jackson said the city was grateful for the Reagan administration's outlay Thursday of $979,000 for programs to help ease fears and stress among Atlanta children, but he said more help was needed.

Passengers Suffer Minor Injuries In DPS Copter Crash

ABILENE (Special) — Two passengers in a Department of Public Safety helicopter suffered minor injuries when the craft's pilot was forced to abruptly land, causing the vehicle to tip on its side, DPS officials said.

The regional DPS Jet Ranger helicopter had been participating in an assault training maneuver 15 miles southeast of Abilene at the National Guard's Camp Barkley training facility, according to a spokesman for the DPS.

The pilot reported a malfunction in the tail rotor forced him to "set it down hard," but a DPS spokesman said the Federal Aviation Administration would proceed with its own investigation.

Abilene Assistant Police Chief Paul Angleton was in satisfactory condition late Friday at Hendrix Hospital here and Taylor County Sheriff's Capt. Gary Lightfoot was treated at the hospital, then released.

Abilene Police Chief Dwain Pyburn also was a passenger in the helicopter piloted by DPS Investigator Billy Burfeind of Midland.

Collapsing Wall Hurts Hobbs Man

A-J News Services

HOBBS, N.M. — A New Mexico Junior College Official struck by a wall that collapsed under strong winds remained in serious condition late Friday following surgery at Methodist Hospital in Lubbock.

Herbert Bryant, 41, the NMJC personnel director, was jogging inside Casker Gym Wednesday when an 80-foot section of cinderblock wall collapsed under buffeting winds up to 55 mph. He suffered a skull fracture and compound fracture of the ankle, officials said.

Bryant, of Lovington, N.M., underwent surgery late Wednesday to remove a blood clot that had formed due to the skull fracture.

School officials said the wall collapsed just before the gymnastics team was to begin practice.

JOB DISCRIMINATION

Court Plugs Legal Loophole

TWO MAJOR victories for employers and working people in the area of equality and fair play were scored this week.

In the most far-reaching case because of its finality and its nationwide application, the Supreme Court ruled that the Civil Rights Act of 1964 "does not demand that an employer give preferential treatment to minorities or women."

Meanwhile, the Texas House of Representatives was approving a bill to prevent workers who are fired for misconduct or who leave their jobs voluntarily from receiving unemployment compensation until they have worked at least six weeks in another job.

That bill, already passed by the Senate, is aimed at freeloaders who try—often successfully—to pervert the unemployment program into a welfare system.

THE SUPREME COURT ruling also arose from a Texas case and will make it easier for employers to defend themselves against charges of job discrimination.

In essence, the surprisingly unanimous decision means that a business isn't required to hire a woman or a man of a minority race just because he or she is as qualified as a white male seeking the same job.

This strikes another blow at ill-conceived affirmative action programs which made race or sex a preferential basis for hiring personnel.

The radical 5th Circuit Court of Appeals got a much-needed verbal slap from the Supreme Court, in the text of its decision, for finding that employers must prove both the non-discriminatory reasons for their actions and that the person hired was better qualified.

"THE VIEWS OF the court of appeals can be read, we think, as requiring the employer to hire the minority or female applicant whenever that person's objective qualifications were equal to those of a white male applicant," Justice Lewis Powell wrote in overruling the 5th Circuit.

The Civil Rights Act, he continued, "does not require the employer to restructure his employment practices to maximize the number of minorities and women hired."

One Joyce Ann Burdine, who originally filed the sex discrimination lawsuit against the Texas Department of Community Affairs, thus lost the case in the highest court in the land.

THE AGENCY HAD maintained that it hired a man instead of her for a supervisory job because he was better qualified. In such a case, the Supreme Court ruled, "it is sufficient if the defendant's evidence raises a genuine issue of fact as to whether it discriminated against the plaintiff."

A "preponderance of the evidence" is not required, Powell concluded.

The decision should bring a screeching halt to hundreds of lawsuits alleging racial or sex discrimination and restore true equality in the area of job opportunity.

MESSAGE LOUD AND CLEAR

Talking Tough To Terrorists

THE ADMINISTRATION has sent a clear message to the world that it will place a high priority on combatting international terrorism.

It also has made clear that there will be "linkage" between Soviet sponsorship of terrorist organizations and the conduct of U.S.-Soviet relations.

This has led some liberal skeptics to wonder whether the Soviet Union, with its public disavowals of terrorism, is as actively involved as the new administration claims.

The answer is a definite "yes," according to Dr. Samuel Francis, an internationally known expert on terrorism, who has just completed an exhaustive study of the Soviets' role in promoting terrorist activities.

"IT HAS long been known that the Soviets and their surrogates in Libya, Cuba, Syria, South Yemen and other states assist international terrorism," Dr. Francis writes in a report for The Heritage Foundation.

The assistance takes the form of weaponry training, propaganda and disinformation, and operational support, i.e., aid in traveling, the establishment of false identities, provision of financial, medical and legal help.

This is not to say that the Soviets control or plan international terrorism. But it is clear that the perpetrators of terror could not operate as efficiently as they do without Soviet assistance.

The pattern of Soviet support for terrorism shows that it is most common in areas that produce vitally needed materials. The Middle East with its oil is the most obvious example.

However, Soviet involvement with ZANU and ZAPU in Zimbabwe, SWAPO in Namibia, and the African National Congress threatens our access to African mineral resources as well as the Cape route to the Persian Gulf.

IT IS FAIRLY well-known in the West that when the Soviets talk about "peoples' democracies," they mean one-party, totalitarian Communist states.

And when they speak of "zones of peace," they mean areas under the control of the Soviet armed forces or neutralized by them.

This use of language as a weapon has been an important feature of Marxism since the time of Lenin. It is one reason negotiations with the Soviets are so difficult and usually so fruitless.

JOSEPH KRAFT:

Brits Pay High Price For Negative Growth

WASHINGTON—Arguing by analogy is like eating soup with a fork—messy and unnourishing.

Witness the observations occasioned by the visit of Prime Minister Margaret Thatcher about the meaning of Britain's economic experience for the America of Ronald Reagan.

In fact, serious comparison between the two countries reveals mainly the enormity of the differences—in politics, economics, place in the world and national character. Except for professional hawkers of doctrine, Britain offers no model to the U.S.

Mrs. Thatcher and Reagan, to be sure, both come from the right wing of conservative parties. Both speak the same philosophical jargon. Both revel in rhetoric about tight money, smaller government, tax cuts and free enterprise.

SO MUCH as shoe salesmen talk of shoes, those in the business of selling conservative ideology talk of the Thatcher-Reagan connection.

But recent British experience can be arranged to teach any lesson. Mrs. Thatcher has enjoyed a certain success in curbing inflation. She has brought down the annual rise in consumer prices from over 20 percent when she took office in 1979 to under 10 percent today.

The cost of that achievement, however, has been high. With a year of negative growth in 1980 and another shaping up for 1981, Britain has the most stagnant economy among the industrialized countries.

Unemployment has climbed in the past year from 5.5 percent to 9.3 percent—the highest in the developed world. Business and labor are both screaming bloody murder.

THE BIG political difference asserts itself at that point. Mrs. Thatcher governs through a disciplined Tory Party that enjoys a majority in the Parliament.

She is safely in office until 1984. She can afford an economic slump in the hope that a turnaround will see her past the voters on election day.

President Reagan commands neither a disciplined party nor a majority in the Congress. Despite a landslide victory in the election last November, he will have a hard time pushing through the greater part of his economic program.

Differences in economic structure suggest the U.S. will probably not have to take such stiff medicine to cure the disease of inflation. A large part of Britain's economic plant, including the nationalized steel, coal and auto industries, is grossly inefficient.

The American population, as the last census shows, remains mobile beyond all expectations. American labor leaders are keen to participate in economic recovery.

Despite areas of weakness (particularly in autos and steel), the American economy is basically buoyant. Indeed, it is hard to get a good recession going.

Because of that buoyancy, the American economy remains by far the largest in the world. If it has pockets (around the Great Lakes) that resemble Wales, it also has pockets (around Boston and Dallas and San Francisco) that out-Japan Japan.

IN ONE way or another—as a market for goods; or as a storehouse for wealth; or as a purveyor of high technology, including defense; or as a source of capital—the rest of the world depends upon the American economy.

More important still, the people of this country—unlike those in Britain—throb with restless impatience. The national creed is that America does it better.

Americans are not going to sit still, in a benign and civil way, for years of double-digit inflation and high unemployment. Before that happens they'll do something—anything.

No doubt the U.S. has something to learn from Britain. And from Japan and Germany, France and Singapore and other countries. But when it comes to finding solutions to basic problems, America, in the future as in the past, will have to find its own ways.

GEORGE F. WILL:

An Extremist View

WASHINGTON—Extremists go to extremes. That is one of Nature's mechanisms for protecting the truth from extremists.

William Shawcross' extremism was displayed in his book's title, "Sideshow: Kissinger, Nixon and the Destruction of Cambodia." Cambodian Communists killed perhaps three million of the seven million Cambodians, and guess who "really" was to blame?

Now Peter Rodman, formerly of the National Security Council staff and currently assistant to Henry Kissinger, has given Nature an assist with the defense of the truth.

He has demonstrated, in an article in the American Spectator, Shawcross' extraordinary, but explicable, misrepresentations.

Shawcross boasted of basing his book on "thousands of pages" of classified documents.

Rodman has examined a duplicate set of documents and has concluded that Shawcross' "research" produced "a compendium of errors, sleight of hand, and egregious selectivity; he has suppressed a mountain of evidence in his possession that contradicted his principal points."

Shawcross' points were that American attacks on Communist sanctuaries near Cambodia's border with South Vietnam "destabilized" Cambodia by violating its neutrality, drove the Communists deeper into Cambodia, and then into genocidal derangement.

RODMAN DEMONSTRATES that Shawcross ignored conclusive evidence that Cambodia's government sanctioned U.S. bombing.

When the assistant dean of the Harvard Law School heard Prince Sihanouk say in a 1980 lecture what was known when Shawcross wrote—that Cambodia approved U.S. actions—the assistant dean said, "It means that, in the debate that has riven our country for 10 years, Henry Kissinger is right and William Shawcross is all wrong."

Among the many Shawcross errors that Rodman notes is one regarding U.S. bombing targets. It is an error that should have been easily avoided, given the documents Shawcross had.

It also is an error convenient to Shawcross' purpose of charging American callousness.

AND RODMAN shows how Shawcross, for all his supposed attention to detail, mislaid the month of April, 1970. In March, 1970, Sihanouk told North Vietnam to leave the sanctuaries.

North Vietnam's response was to invade the rest of Cambodia. On April 18, the New York Times published a map showing the Communists already in control of one-third of the country.

Shawcross virtually ignores April—the month that ended with the U.S.-South Vietnam invasion of the border sanctuaries—because it inconveniences his thesis that the invasion provoked the Communists to conquer Cambodia. Such Shawcross maneuvers served the thesis in this repugnant passage:

"All wars are designed to arouse anger, and almost all soldiers are taught to hate and to dehumanize their enemy. Veterans of the combat zone are often possessed of a mad rage to destroy, and to avenge their fallen comrades.

"IT DOES not always happen, however, that victorious armies have endured such punishment as was inflicted upon the Khmer Rouge. Nor does it always happen that such an immature and tiny force comes to power after its country's social order has been obliterated, and the nation faces the danger of a takeover by a former ally, its ancient enemy.

"In Cambodia that did take place. In the last eight years, degree, law, moderation had been foresworn. The war and the causes for which it was fought had brought desolation while nurturing and then giving power to a little group of zealots sustained by Manichean fear."

As Rodman says, acidly, most soldiers have "endured...punishment" but none before have murdered a third of their countrymen after the war was over.

Furthermore, American bombing ended 20 months before the Communists started building their mountains of skulls, ripping infants to bits, burying people up to their necks for slow deaths.

The Communists' sin, evidently, was to be "immature." Those who resisted the conquest are to blame for the conqueror's savagery.

SHAWCROSS' THESIS is intellectually and morally akin to the thesis that the Versailles Treaty, and hence Lloyd George and Clemenceau, deranged Germany, and hence they, not Hitler, were to blame for the Holocaust.

"Sideshow" was seized by anti-Americans, here and abroad, as passionately as life preservers are seized by drowning swimmers. It was supposed to save their sense of moral superiority.

They had ridiculed the "domino theory" and the warnings that a bloodbath would follow the fall of the dominoes. The dominoes (South Vietnam, Laos, Cambodia) fell, and the bloodbath far exceeded even the nightmares of those who had predicted it.

"Sideshow" was as warmly welcomed as alibis usually are by people much in need of them. And it is not really more disreputable than the political reasoning and activities that led to that need.

ANDREW TULLY:

China In The Red

WASHINGTON—In the pursuit of friendly diplomatic relations with Communist China, we have no other choice. The Peking regime is a fact of life.

Therefore it is in our interest to communicate with its ruling junta just as we do with the Soviet Union.

But I get a little sick to my stomach at the gushing of those mini-hordes of Americans who return from visits to Red China singing the praises of its political way of life.

These innocents—and some not so innocent—would have us believe that the Chinese are perfectly content to live in a highly regulated society so long as it gives them enough to eat.

Isn't that a form of racism? It is saying that dictatorships exist because the people they enslave are different—that they don't mind being pushed around.

IT IS saying that the mainland Chinese are not quite as human as, say, Americans or Englishmen or Swedes. It is not only patronizing, it is an insensitive rejection of mankind's inherent spirit.

I am up to here in amateur Freuds of both sexes who for lecturing dollars or publicity come home from Red China bursting with admiration for the people who run that big country.

They rave about the regime's efficiency and even morality, and about how "happy" the masses are.

Happy? Your father's mustache! Docile, maybe. But because I believe the average Chinese is just as human as I am, I do not buy the proposition that he happily does what he is told from the moment he wakes up to the moment he falls asleep.

THE AVERAGE Chinese has no real freedom to worship; no freedom to read anything he chooses; no freedom to choose the broadcasts he listens to; no freedom to travel or to own a plot of land or to join a labor union without permission.

Of course, people will put up with a great deal provided they don't realize that anything better is possible. The Chinese are told hourly that they are happy, that the people of no other country have it so good.

I can't believe they buy all this hogwash because I never met a dumb Chinese, but I accept their acquiescence because their rulers own all the guns and run all the jails.

Nevertheless, I hope President Reagan will proceed with efforts to pal-up to Peking. Red China exists; we can't wish it away as some wild men on the right seem to demand.

BESIDES, WE may need the Chinese some day in our negotiations with the Russians. Anyway, the concept behind diplomatic relations is, or should be, to create goodwill between the people of two nations.

Franklin Roosevelt recognized the Soviet Union almost 50 years ago, but it's a long haul.

We're still trying to break through the Russian bureaucratic barrier to persuade the folks in Minsk and Pinsk, and Omsk and Tomsk, that Americans don't eat babies.

Maybe Red China will be easier to persuade of our national morality. Meanwhile, though, I wish we could cut out the cackle about how a dictatorship has created an Eden on earth.

VIRGINIA PAYETTE:

The New Live-Ins

DALLAS—The voice on the radio was pitching condominiums, and the most desirable selling point was: "You're home from the office in 15 minutes, and your girlfriend is only 10 minutes away from her downtown job. How's that for real living?"

Well, how it is may be a point for some discussion in church sewing circles, but there's not much doubt that nowadays that's the way it is.

The traditional American neighborhood of row upon row of family residences maintained by husbands and wives is changing fast. Chances are that nice married couple who just moved in next door aren't. Married, that is.

What's more, they don't mind you knowing. They'll probably tell you themselves the first time they dash over to borrow your last egg.

IT'S THE new, laid-back lifestyle, folks. Young people, even some who are not so young, think nothing of living together in an unmarried state.

Some of us older fuds may not think much of it, either, but we're learning to keep our opinions to ourselves.

Who hasn't, in the past few years, had a college student who moved in with a "friend" because said scholar had suddenly discovered a new dimension to "homework"?

What's a parent to do—yank the kid home in moral outrage...or try to pretend that what's going on really isn't?

And how many times have you pinned on a tolerant smile and offered up false comfort to a friend who confesses that no, her daughter isn't really engaged; she's just living with this young man, see, and where, oh where did the family go wrong?

YOU TELL yourself it's a whole new ballgame out there now, that one has to keep up with the times and accept the fact that "single co-habitation" (as the Census bureau puts it) is definitely where it's at.

The evidence is all around us, and it's pretty specific.

According to the Journal of Marriage and the Family, the most dramatic change in developments relating to married and family life is "the rapid increase in unmarried cohabitation," which, in their terms, means sharing the same habitat.

That's not what the cohabitors call it. They prefer "love"...or "romantic companionship"...or that distressing "meaningful relationship" bit. (What parents call it, of course, is something else again.)

But statisticians take no moral stand on these living arrangements; all they care about is how many and what kind there are. And it turns out there are a lot.

Would you believe 1.3 million?

THAT'S MORE than twice as many as the 523,000 turned up in the 1970 census, although the nose-counters are willing to concede that maybe the new total has something to do with the fact that couples in today's more relaxed society don't mind admitting that they're not married.

Most of them are young (in their '20s and early '30s) and most of them have never been married. But not all of them are under 35.

A surprising 32 percent of today's love-mates are 55 or older, proving, I guess, that there's hope for everyone, even single seniors.

Here's something that's even more surprising: Hardly any of the young couples ever decide to make it legal, as we say. They may get married eventually, but they usually pick somebody else to walk down the aisle with.

Most of them live in big cities like New York, Chicago, San Francisco or Houston, where neighbors aren't nosy enough to care what your living arrangements are.

ONLY ONE unmarried couple out of five risks it in a rural area or a small town.

And the more education they have, the more willing they are to skip the marriage ceremony and move in together. Apparently a lot of them flunked Economics, though, because the picture they paint of their finances is pretty shaky.

In an age group where only 8 percent of married men are unemployed, 29 percent of cohabiting non-husbands are. And 15 percent of them are being supported by the young ladies they're living with.

Also, despite the fact that more than 60 percent of all unmarried couples have jobs, their combined incomes are lower than that of married couples, even with the tax break they get for being single.

One thing's for sure: They may think they're living on love, but if you can believe the hard, cold statistics, the sexual revolution isn't hatching up too many birds in gilded cages

L.M. BOYD:

Pass It On...

IN THE Civil War, Southerners and Northerners differed in the way they identified battle sites. The Southerners named them after nearby towns. Northerners named them after nearby streams. Thus, what the Southerners called the battle of Manassas was referred to by the Northerners as the Battle of Bull Run.

Berry's World

"Where have you been, man? We DON'T WANT people to look to the federal government to solve all their problems any more."

Reagan Discounts Use Of Troops In El Salvador

WASHINGTON (AP) — President Reagan said Friday he has no thought of sending U.S. troops to fight in El Salvador despite his resolve to "to halt infiltration into the Americas by terrorists."

And he declared anew that American military advisers there will remain in garrison and won't accompany Salvadoran forces into combat. But "we can't, I'm sorry to say, make it risk free" for the 54 U.S. advisers committed to help the military-civilian junta.

Reagan characterized the U.S. role as helping a neighbor turn away Soviet and Cuban-backed "terrorists ... who aren't just aiming at El Salvador but I think are aiming at the whole of Central and possibly later South America and I'm sure eventually North America."

Rejecting comparisons between U.S. involvement in Vietnam and El Salvador, Reagan said, "The situation here is, you might say, our front yard."

But he said American advisers will remain in garrison and won't accompany Salvadoran government forces on missions.

"We shall do our utmost to provide for their safety," Reagan told his second presidential news conference, but sending American security forces to El Salvador "is not in our reckoning at all."

In keeping with his policy of refusing to discuss U.S. policy options, however, the president refused to rule out a naval blockade to prevent Soviet or Cuban-supplied arms from reaching the embattled island nation.

When asked if he would cut off military or economic aid to El Salvador if right-wing forces there succeed in ousting the present government, Reagan said such a coup "would be of the gravest concern to us." But he said he could not answer the question about future aid.

The president selected his questioners by lot, or "Reagan roulette" as he put it. But he started with a prepared announcement that he would include in his package of budget cuts a permanent ceiling on the size of the federal government's civilian work force.

The proposed extension of the hiring freeze he imposed on Inauguration Day would reduce non-defense employment by 33,000 people in the fiscal year ending Sept. 30 and another 30,100 in fiscal 1982. Reagan originally said the payroll reduction would total 96,100 jobs, but officials later corrected that statement. The move would save taxpayers $1.3 billion during those two years, Reagan said.

"Millions of Americans today have had to tighten their belts because of the economic conditions, and it's time to put Washington on a diet, too," the president said.

In response to other questions, Reagan:

•Said his economic program doesn't promise an "instant cure" but that he expects to see the first signs of recovery by the end of 1982.

•Suggested a constitutional amendment banning abortion would not be necessary if a legal determination is made that human life begins at conception.

•Compared efforts to halt drug smuggling to "carrying water in a sieve" and said he plans a White House drug abuse policy that will stress the importance of taking customers away from drug peddlers.

One reporter suggested that Reagan had axed the appointment of Patricia Bailey to head the Federal Trade Commission because she had spoken out against his budget cuts, and he wanted to signal "other Republicans that if they don't conform that off will go their heads."

"How can you say that about a sweet fellow like me?" the president replied. Then he denied the allegation, confirming only that Mrs. Bailey had been among several people considered for the post.

In a half-hour session dominated by questions about the Salvadoran civil strife, Reagan reminded his audience that he inherited the crisis there and has sought to continue the Carter administration's policies.

"I didn't start the El Salvador thing," he said in answer to a reporter who suggested he was the presidential candidate voters considered most likely to lead the United States into war. "I've been here six weeks now and haven't fired a shot," he quipped.

Asked what the United States is doing to promote human rights, Reagan said, "One of the reasons for our support of this government is we believe they hold out the best hope for improving the conditions of the people of El Salvador."

Asked how the nation's poor could survive his budget cuts, Reagan said that because of bureaucratic expansion of well-intentioned programs, "We find that we are giving the benefits of the program to people who do not have real need and for which the program was not originally intended."

When, as governor of California, he overhauled the state's welfare system, Reagan said, 350,000 people disappeared from the welfare roles, but "we never had a single case of anyone suddenly appearing and saying, 'I am destitute. I have been cut off welfare.'"

"I am quite sure there will be attempts by those in the bureaucracy who are involved in some of these programs to suggest that there is great distress being caused," Reagan added. In California, he claimed, some bureaucrats attempted "to penalize the truly needy ... simply to create cases of that kind. We will be on guard for that."

Asked if he would veto tax-cut legislation if it is changed substantially from the three-year, 30-percent reduction he has proposed, Reagan said he has never been reluctant to use his veto power but never talks about whether he will veto a bill before it arrives on his desk.

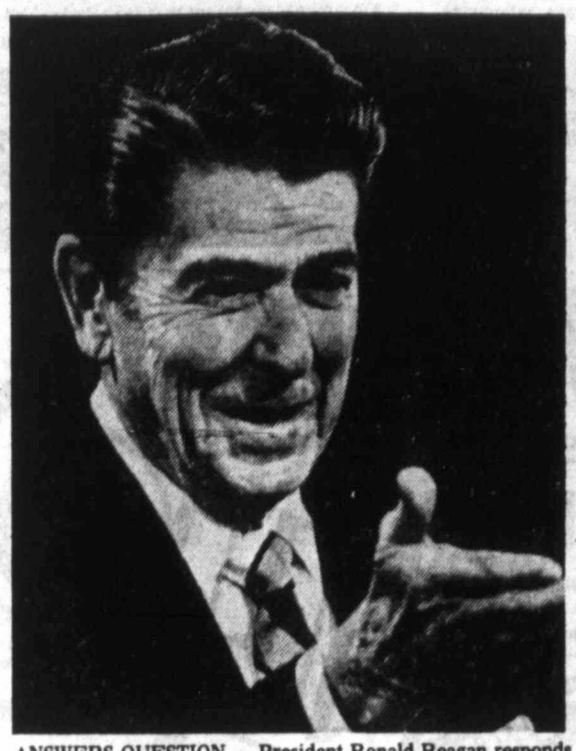
He added he is "reasonably optimistic" about the tax measure.

"I'm not looking for a confrontation with the Congress," Reagan said, "...I'm going to keep trying to work with them so that we won't face that particular problem."

In reply to a question about how parents or election boards can determine "a person's date of conception for purposes of registration and eligibility for running for public office," Reagan repeated his oft-stated belief that abortion is "taking of human life."

"What is necessary in this whole problem and has been the least talked of in the whole question about abortion is determining when and what is a human being," Reagan said. "If this is once determined, then there isn't really any need for an amendment because once you have determined this, the Constitution already protects the right of human life."

Shortly after the news conference concluded, the president and Mrs. Reagan left the White House by helicopter to spend the weekend at Camp David, their retreat in the Catoctin mountains north of Washington.



ANSWERS QUESTION — President Ronald Reagan responds to a reporter's question during his news conference Friday in Washington. A lottery was used to select reporters that would be chosen by Reagan for questions, on this conference, but will be discontinued in the future. (AP Laserphoto)

Lottery Questioning Draws Mixed Reviews

WASHINGTON (AP) — The first time, it was "Please be seated" for the White House press corps. For Round Two, the questioners — not the questions — arose by chance. Those without a lucky number were left to serve as mute props for the occasion.

President Reagan's first — and probably last — press conference by lottery drew decidedly mixed reviews from the media's participants — and especially the nonparticipants whose numbers weren't drawn from the chief executive's jellybean bowl. But only a few boycotted the event.

Reagan obviously was aware of the unhappiness in some corners of the Fourth Estate. At the opening of the 30-minute, nationally broadcast session, he referred to the format as "Reagan roulette."

In the middle, Reagan stumbled. The president called on James Gerstenzang of the Associated Press, but he had already asked a question. Quickly realizing his error, Reagan exclaimed, "Oh, wait a minute. I'm sorry, Jim. I looked at No. 1 instead of No. 3."

At another point, Reagan apparently forgot for a second that it was up to him to identify the next questioner. "I keep waiting for someone else just to wave their hand," he said.

Assistant White House press secretary Mark Weinberg said afterward that Reagan "feels the arrangement was fine." Indeed, the system gave Reagan greater control. When he had said as much as he cared to on one topic, he simply looked down at his list and called the next name.

But press secretary James Brady said the experiment would be repeated "only upon the overwhelming recommendation of this body" — which hardly seemed the case Friday.

The president himself initiated the lottery on Thursday, by drawing several cards out of the jellybean jar. Each card contained the name and news organization of a reporter.

A second drawing for certain reserved questions — Nos. 6, 9, 12, and 15 — was held just minutes before the news conference began. That gave those who had not been selected on Thursday a second chance — and an incentive to attend. Once there, most of them remained, even though they knew there was no chance to be recognized. But a few left, including Sam Donaldson of ABC.

Weinberg said 105 reporters entered the lottery. Forty names were selected, in case there was time for that many questions. But only 19 questions were asked, 13 by regular White House reporters and six by those who don't normally cover the chief executive.

The big losers were the correspondents from the three major television networks, many of whom normally are called upon. Only Susan King of ABC was chosen in the lottery.

The Associated Press and United Press International, the two news organizations that together serve practically all daily newspapers, radio and television stations in the country, asked the first two questions, as is traditional.

Tom DeFrank of Newsweek, the first name drawn from the jar, was No. 3. Afterward, DeFrank said he believed the idea had been worth trying and "ought to be used occasionally again."

Referring to the fact that only one network reporter was chosen, DeFrank added, "I think the whole thing shows God must have been a print reporter at some point."

Ms. King said the session was stilted and lacked spontaneity. "The president seemed to be totally in control because he was able to call the next name," she said.

Ted Knapp of Scripps-Howard said, "It stinks. It's terrible and awkward." Walter Rodgers of Associated Press Radio, who left when his name was not selected, said he opposed the system because "it denied regular White House reporters a chance to ask a question of the man they are assigned to cover every day."

Lesley Stahl of CBS, who was not selected, joked that she tried to stuff the lottery jar "but they wouldn't let me." Pat Sloyan of Newsday, who drew No. 23 but wasn't called on, called it "a silly exercise."

Gilbert Lewthwaite of the Baltimore Sun said it seemed "an unnecessarily complex mechanism," but favored any format over the old stand-up-and-shout tradition under former presidents.

The lottery was Reagan's second attempt to reform the news conference format. At the president's first news conference Jan. 29, reporters were told to remain seated and simply raise their hands for his attention.

Administration To Press For End To Control On Gas Prices

WASHINGTON (AP) — The Reagan administration will press for a quick end to federal controls on natural gas prices to make that fuel as valuable as oil, a White House spokesman said Friday. The move would cost consumers billions of dollars.

Fifty-five percent of American homes are heated by gas.

Edwin Dale, spokesman for David A. Stockman, director of the Office of Management and Budget, said the administration will move for accelerated phase-out of natural gas pricing regulations, which would let prices seek their own level.

But, he added, no time has been set for taking such action and no decision has been made on how quickly controls should end.

No firm estimates of the cost to consumers have been made. A consumer group opposed to decontrol recently estimated that immediate removal of gas price controls — which the administration apparently is not contemplating — would cost $626 billion over the next five years and raise the average homeowner's heating bill by $667 annually.

The administration, acting through the Federal Energy Regulatory Commission, could boost prices of a portion of the nation's gas supplies without action by Congress. But it would be up to Congress to decide whether controls on most gas should be removed, and even some supporters of deregulation say now is not the time for such action.

Under a 1978 law, controls on most natural gas prices are to expire anyway by 1985. Accelerating the phase-out of price controls is part of President Reagan's oft-stated plan to minimize federal regulation and let the free market set prices.

Stockman mentioned the administration's decision in an interview in Friday's Los Angeles Times.

Dale quoted Stockman as saying that when the 1978 law was written, it was intended to raise gradually the price of a unit of natural gas to the price of oil. In other words, heating a typical home with oil should cost no more than heating it with gas.

"But that schedule was before the Iranian revolution and the new explosion of oil prices," Dale explained. "Therefore, the deregulation track is now unrealistic because gas would remain indefinitely below the price of oil."

The Department of Energy estimated last October that the average nationwide price of natural gas in the field was $1.55 per 1,000 cubic feet.

Energy Action, a citizens' group that opposes deregulation, says that if price controls were removed, that $1.55 price would soar to $7.50.

The field price makes up about 40 percent of the price paid by homeowners.

Stockman's statement that the administration has decided to advocate faster decontrol appears to conflict with one made a week earlier by Energy Secretary James B. Edwards.

Judge: Victim Probably Better Off Dead

TAMPA, Fla. (AP) — A 64-year-old man who pleaded no contest to killing his 77-year-old stepfather has been freed on probation by a judge who said the victim probably was "better off dead."

Defendant Wilburn A. Byrd had seen "his mother get beaten up on numerous occasions," and "it appeared that this just got to him," said Hillsborough County Circuit Judge Fred Woods Jr.

"There was input in this case that the victim was better off dead," the judge added in sentencing Byrd to 15 years probation after a hearing Tuesday.

"I'm thankful the way it worked," Byrd said Thursday. "All my neighbors backed me, stayed behind me, prayed for me."

He originally had been charged with second-degree murder in the August slaying of Walter Robert Kyle, who had been married to Byrd's 84-year-old mother, Sarah, for 18 months.

The charge later was reduced to manslaughter because of Byrd's age and the fact that he had never been arrested before, said assistant Hillsborough State Attorney Ty Trayner.

Byrd spent five days in jail last summer but was released on a $5,000 surety bond after the charge was reduced. He is now home with his wife and mother.

Byrd simply "got tired of this man beating up his mother, and shot him," Trayner said.

"He'd probably die in prison regardless of what the sentence was. So my offer was to let him plead to manslaughter," he added.

Iran Rejects Peace Plan; Iraq Accepts Proposal

BEIRUT, Lebanon (AP) — Iran's supreme defense council on Friday rejected a peace plan proposed by an Islamic goodwill commission and demanded again that the Iraqi invaders be condemned as aggressors, Tehran sources reported.

Iraqi deputy premier and member of the Revolutionary Council, Taha Yassin Ramadan, said in Saudi Arabia that Iraq welcomed the goodwill mission and its proposals, according to a Saudi broadcast.

The Tehran sources — reached by telephone — said the council, at an extraordinary session under President Abolhassan Bani-Sadr, voted unanimously to turn down the proposal and a formal announcement was being prepared.

They said Hojatoleslam Ali Khamenei, one of the nine council members, declared at Tehran's Friday prayers that the cease-fire plan was rejected because it would treat the "aggressor, Iraq," the same as the victim, Iran.

A nine-member commission of the Islamic Conference offered the plan following shuttle diplomacy between the capitals of Tehran and Baghdad. It called for a cease-fire to go into effect at midnight March 12 with Iraqi troops to begin withdrawing from captured Iranian territory one week later and to complete the pullout in four weeks.

It would provide for the establishment of an Islamic peacekeeping force to oversee the standdown and withdrawal and the force then would assure free nevigation in the disputed Shatt al-Arab estuary at the northern tip of the Persian Gulf.

Iraq, after months of border clashes, sents its troops into western and southwestern Iran last September, demanding sovereignty over the Shatt al-Arab.

Bani-Sadr said Thursday Iran would never compromise and demanded a simultaneous cease-fire and Iraqi withdrawal. He also told a mass rally in Tehran that Iran would not accept a solution of the war that did not "punish the aggressor."

Dissidents Target Of Crackdown

WARSAW, Poland (AP) — Polish authorities cracked down sharply on dissidents Friday in a move apparently aimed at demonstrating Poland's will to crush the "anti-socialist forces" often attacked by its Soviet-bloc allies.

In the United States, fears of Soviet intervention in Poland resurfaced with Western reports of Polish troop movement over the past two days, movements that coincided with the Kremlin's harshest declaration yet on Poland's problems.

Western observers in Warsaw said they detected troop movements that suggested joint Polish-Soviet maneuvers could begin soon. Observers here say such maneuvers are normal at this time of year, but the action raised concern at the State Department.

Workers in the central industrial city of Lodz, on strike alert since Wednesday over the firing of union members, said they would make no further decision until after a Saturday leadership meeting of the independent labor movement "Solidarity."

Before the latest spate of anti-dissident actions, the leaders set the meeting to map out a reaction to the five-hour detention Thursday of dissident leader Jacek Kuron on charges he slandered the state.

Business Club Readies For Rodeo

Countdown for the 39th annual ABC Rodeo began Friday as members of the sponsoring American Business Club kicked off rodeo season and rodeo month in Lubbock.

Four nights of big-time professional rodeo blasts off in the Lubbock Municipal Coliseum March 25-28 with "King of the Road" Roger Miller in control of the entertainment spot.

Proceeds of the event, sanctioned by the Professional Rodeo Cowboy Association, benefits the capital improvement fund of the Lubbock Boys' Clubs.

New for the 39th event will be a Cowboy Camp Meeting on the eve of the first performance.

Wilbur Plaugher, the "Clown Prince of Pro Rodeo" and a founder of the Cowboy Chapter of the Fellowship of Christian Athletes, will head up the March 24 camp meeting in the coliseum.

Lubbock's favorite clown from the beginning of ABC events will be back in the arena for some more crowd-pleasing acts with animals he has trained.

Then he'll stand by to help if rodeo clown Bob Romer, the Bull Dancer from Canyon, needs assistance keeping the bucking bulls off downed cowboys.

Alos back on the scene will be the popular moustache and beard contest plus Owens Country Sausage six-pony hitch, always a crowd favorite with ABC fans.

ABC queen Shelley Harris of Silverton, who copped third place and Miss Congeniality at the Miss Teen-age Texas Rodeo last year, will be on hand to lead the grand entry and to present trophies.

Heading the traditional rodeo parade at 3:30 p.m. March 25 will be Texas Tech President Lauro Cavazos.

Racket Probe Participant Shot To Death

NORTH CALDWELL, N.J. (AP) — George Franconero, brother of pop singer Connie Francis and former law partner of Gov. Brendan T. Byrne, was shot to death Friday in front of his home, authorities said.

Essex County Prosecutor Donald Coburn said Franconero was dead, but would disclose no details of the shooting.

Franconero was an unindicted co-conspirator in a racketeering case against several leaders of Teamsters Local 945 of West Paterson, U.S. Attorney Michael Himmel said.

Franconero, 40, had received a two-year suspended sentence and three years probation in exchange for his cooperation in a federal probe of mob infiltration of the state's banking industry, said Himmel.

He was suspended from practicing law in February 1979 after pleading guilty to federal charges that he submitted a bogus loan application for $13,000 from the now-defunct Bank of Chatham.

District Grand Jury Indicts Shootings Suspect

By BOB CAMPBELL
Avalanche-Journal Staff

A 36-year-old Lubbock man accused of several random shootings on city streets was indicted on various related charges Friday as a 137th District Court grand jury returned 114 indictments.

Teddy Glyn Floyd of Route 2, Lubbock, was indicted on three counts of attempted murder and one of unlawfully carrying a weapon.

He is accused of two counts of attempted murder in a Feb. 12 Clovis Road shooting in which 4-year-old Corey Menton and his mother, Vanessa Menton, of Shallowater were wounded when shots were fired into their car.

The third attempted murder indictment comes in connection with a Feb. 24 incident in which Floyd allegedly shot at Kay Hutchison of Lubbock as she was traveling east on the Clovis Highway. She was not injured in the shooting.

The grand jury also indicted Clyde Ross, 29, and JoAnn Ross, 27, for attempted capital murder in the Feb. 24 near-fatal shooting of Police Det. Cpl. George Parramore at an Avenue Q motel.

The couple also was indicted for aggravated robbery in a Feb. 22 robbery of a Fina service station at Quaker Avenue and the Brownfield Highway.

Additionally, Ross was indicted on three counts of aggravated robbery and one of attempted capital murder. Those indictments were returned in connection with a Feb. 20 hold-up at the Roadrunner Lounge at 416 Idalou Road in which a club employee was wounded and Feb. 21 robberies of three persons at a city residence.

A 26-year-old Lubbock woman, Lynda Anne Head of 5428 42nd St., was indicted for aggravated robbery, criminal solicitation and theft in an alleged robbery-for-hire scheme in which an elderly Lubbock woman was robbed Sunday night at her 19th Street home.

Joyce Ann Allen, 26, address unavailable, was indicted for murder in the Feb. 26 stabbing death of 33-year-old Herbert Taylor, who was stabbed outside the eastside Parkway Motel.

Robert Lee Washington, 55, address unavailable, was indicted for murder in the Feb. 19 stabbing death of Joseph McNeal of Slaton, who was stabbed outside a Slaton nightclub.

A night admitting clerk at Lubbock General Hospital, Lynda K. McBrewer of 4601 52nd St., No. 19-B, was indicted for official misconduct in what law enforcement officials allege to have been a scheme to steal money from hospital patients. Miss McBrewer is accused of taking $174 from a patient's personal belongings file Feb. 14.

Arthur Flores, 31, and Odus G. Rogers Jr., 28, who have been incarcerated since last fall in the Oct. 27 shooting death of 29-year-old Brenda Diane Igo at her Southwest Lubbock home, was re-indicted for capital murder in the case. The re-indictment was required by a legal technicality pertaining to ownership of the home, attorneys said.

The grand jury no-billed or refused to indict four persons. They are Ronnie Wayne Talley, who had been accused of burglary of a habitation with intent to commit rape; Mamie Williams, who had been accused of voluntary manslaughter; and Ricky Patrick Miller and Michael Ray Crawford, who had been accused of theft.

Cronkite Bids Farewell To Evening Audience

NEW YORK (AP) — Walter Cronkite, assuring "Old anchormen, you see, don't fade away, they just keep coming back for more," bid farewell Friday after 19 years as anchorman of CBS' "Evening News."

Cronkite, his voice steady, advised his audience — about 18.5 million people on a normal evening — that the broadcast was his last as anchorman, that Dan Rather would be in his familiar place Monday night.

Cronkite acknowledged a sadness in the occassion, but said, "This is but a transition, a passing of the baton."

The broadcast was routine, delivered in the steady Cronkite manner, until the last two minutes or so, when the anchorman reflected on nearly two decades in the job and said, "I'll miss that."

Cronkite said he will continue as a familiar presence on CBS, in frequent reporting assignments and with his new science magazine program, "Universe."

The rival networks took note of Cronkite's departure, with John Chancellor, an adversary for nearly a decade NBC "Nightly News" anchorman observing, "He brought such distinction to his work as a network anchorman that he made the rest of us look a bit better."

The broadcast was the highlight of a day that brought Cronkite an outpouring of tribute and affection normally reserved for a national hero.

"He had more publicity and attention leaving the job than Carter got leaving the presidency. That is extraordinary," observed Eric Sevareid, Cronkite's longtime CBS News colleague, who was a guest on ABC's "Good Morning America" — itself commentary on the significance of the day.

CBS planned to provided the competing networks, ABC and NBC, with Cronkite's brief farewell, 30 seconds at the conclusion of the "Evening News," a time Cronkite himself used to assure Americans, "And that's the way it is."

Workmen were ready to move onto the "Evening News" set Saturday to alter the decor a bit for Rather. They planned to replace Cronkite's beige backdrop with a blue-gray set deemed more suitable to Rather.

CBS' research department would not predict an audience for Cronkite's final broadcast as anchorman. The "Evening News," No. 1 in the field for 13 years, has attracted an average of 18.5 million viewers each night since mid-September.

In Houston, where Cronkite grew up and where he began his career as a newsman, Friday was "Walter Cronkite Day."

New York City honored Cronkite with its LaGuardia Medal and a commendation from the City Council. Colleagues from CBS, including Rather and Morley Safer, packed the City Council chamber at City Hall, for the ceremony.

Denying false modesty, Cronkite told the audience, "I really do not feel that I deserve this in any comparative way."

Cronkite was invited to countless receptions at locations as various as Zionsville, Ind., Martinsville, Va., Cincinnati and the universities of Dayton, Michigan and Missouri. He could not, of course, attend any but the small post-broadcast parties in his honor staged by his "Evening News" staff and CBS colleagues.

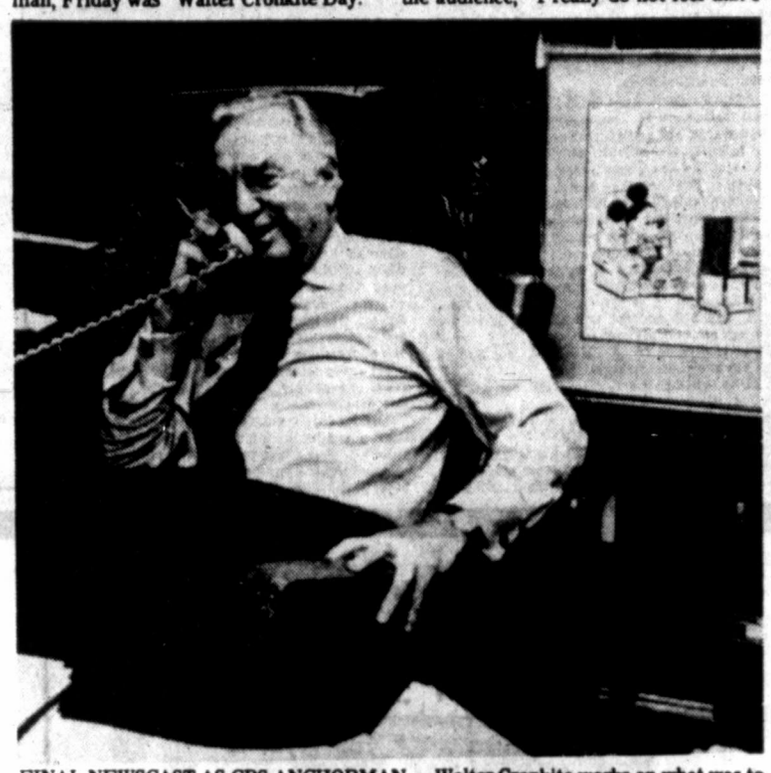
Stacks of mail from viewers grown attached to Cronkite's assuring and avuncular manner poured into the anchorman's office at the CBS Broadcast Center in Manhattan.

"A year's advance notice isn't sufficient," wrote one viewer, referring to the fact that Cronkite's decision to leave the "Evening News" was announced at about this time last year. "Make it 15 or 20 years, and maybe your fans will forgive you."

"It is with a sense of resignation that we must accept yours," another fan wrote.

CBS, mindful of the anticipation with which the competition was awaiting Cronkite's departure, took full-page ads in several newspapers, "Introducing our newest correspondent."

News executives at ABC and NBC have said they do not expect any immediate, significant change in audience for the three evening newscasts.



FINAL NEWSCAST AS CBS ANCHORMAN — Walter Cronkite works on what was to be his final newscast as CBS-TV anchorman Friday afternoon in his office at CBS in New York City. Behind the veteran newsman is a Mickey Mouse cartoon, sent to him by Walt Disney Productions. It shows the cartoon character watching a TV set from which comes the famous: "...And that's the way it is," sign off used by Cronkite. Cronkite's Emmy is just behind his left shoulder. Water Officials Remain Hopeful Despite Rebuff

By JOE GULICK
Avalanche-Journal Staff

Despite Arkansas Gov. Frank White's statements this week that he opposes exporting water to Texas because the state of Arkansas has no surplus, local and area water officials remain optimistic about the possibility of future water imports.

Duncan Ellison, executive director of Water Inc., said White's statements didn't surprise him at all. Wayne Wyatt, manager of the High Plains Underground Water Conservation District No. 1, said the situation could very well have positive effects.

White made his statements to the Arkansas House of Representatives Wednesday in response to remarks made by Texas Gov. Bill Clements last week, in which Clements reportedly said he has discussed water importation with White and other Arkansas state officials and found no opposition to importation.

Clements said Thursday at a news conference in Austin he had not discussed the matter with White, and Clements' press secretary said earlier the governor had been misquoted. However, the Arkansas Gazette said Thursday Clements' remarks are on a television video tape at the Iowa Public Broadcasting Network.

Ellison said White is the fifth Arkansas governor since Ellison became involved in water in 1970. Most of the governors were convinced of the advantages of water importation, he said.

"The people of Arkansas have to realize that it doesn't matter if a portion of water flows west for irrigation rather than out the Mississippi River into the Gulf of Mexico," Ellison said.

Clements' statements caused some strong emotion among Arkansas people. When White told the Arkansas House he was opposed to exporting, he was cheered and applauded.

"I don't think it was ever our intent to just go over and take their water without them getting the benefit of it," Wayne Wyatt said.

Wyatt thinks the drought last summer and the interest of Texas in Arkansas water will ultimately lead Arkansas to study just how much water they have and how much they need.

That could very well have a positive effect on water importation, Wyatt said.

"Once they really examine what they have, and if they find they have an excess, I think they would be willing to negotiate with the state of Texas for it," he said.

Another local water expert, who asked not to be named, said he thought the attitude in West Texas and the rest of the state should be that the water is the property of the state of Arkansas.

"You can't make a trade without showing them some advantages," he said, "One of the advantages would be flood protection. They do have a flood problem some years."

One of the anxieties of Arkansans is that a drought could be crippling if they are committed to give a certain amount of water to Texas, the local expert said.

That worry is unnecessary because if an arrangement were reached, there would be a clause giving Arkansas first claim to any water at any time, he said.

An exportation arrangement would even be protective to Arkansas in the event of a drought because the facilities built to store and pump water could be used for getting the water to drought-ridden Arkansas farmland, he said.

Ellison said he sees the problem of water importation as being more of a "people" problem than an engineering problem or a problem of finding the excess water.

RABIES CASES

ATLANTA (AP) — No cases of rabies in humans were reported in 1980, only the second year that has happened since record keeping began in 1938, the national Centers for Disease Control said Friday. The last known human case occurred in a 45-year-old Kentucky man who died Nov. 30, 1979, the CDC said in its Morbidity and Mortality Weekly Report. The disease is almost always fatal if not treated soon after exposure to a rabid animal.

Judge Ruling Favors Evolution Teaching

SACRAMENTO, Calif. (AP) — A Superior Court judge ruled Friday that California's policy on the teaching of evolution does not violate the rights of fundamentalists who believe in the biblical version of creation.

However, in a concession to the fundamentalists, Judge Irving Perluss ordered the state to distribute to local schools its official policy forbidding dogmatism in the treatment of the origins of life.

Earlier in th day, Perluss had narrowed questioning in the trial when he refused to allow testimony about a teacher who allegedly told one of the plaintiffs that humans evolved from apes.

The teacher, Jeanette Lisiak, was quoted in the San Diego Union earlier this week as saying she presented evolution "as a theory" and told dubious students that "You need to believe what your parents tell you." She also said she was teaching anthropology, not science.

But 13-year-old Kasey Segraves had testified Tuesday that when he was in sixth grade, Miss Lisiak described evolution of humans from apes as a fact that the class was required to accept.

Segraves is the son of the director of the Creation-Science Research Center, which filed the lawsuit contending the state is presenting evolution dogmatically, violating the religious rights of children who believe in the biblical account of creation.

The state's official guidelines for science textbooks and classes are the target of the suit.

Deputy Attorney General Robert Tyler tried to ask center director Kelly Segraves, Kasey's father, about Miss Lisiak, hoping to establish he knew she was not a science teacher.

But Perluss refused to allow the questioning, citing a state law banning evidence that would prejudice the case to a greater degree than the value of the evidence. He also said the questioning was not relevant. He has ordered lawyers in the case not to discuss it with reporters and no further explanation of his move was available.

Tyler said he tried to call Miss Lisiak as a witness, but she was not available Friday.

The trial, in its fifth day, has not developed into a clash between prominent scientists and "scientific creationists," as expected.

In the course of the trial, Perluss refused to allow evidence on either the validity or the scientific acceptance of either theory. He said the U.S. Supreme Court already has decided that a court cannot restrict the teaching of evolution.

The judge said the only issue in the trial is whether the state's guidelines for most of the textbooks bought with state funds have violated the plaintiffs' rights to exercise their religion freely.

Atheist's Son Scheduled To Appear Here

William J. Murray, son of atheist Madalyn Murray O'Hair, will speak Sunday at two Lubbock churches on his faith in God found despite a background of atheism.

Murray will preach at the 9:30 student worship service and will speak briefly during the 10:50 a.m. worship service at First Baptist Church, 2201 Broadway. He also will speak at the 6 p.m. service at Highland Baptist Church, 4316 34th St.

The 35-year-old former magazine publisher is expected to discuss his much publicized conversion to Christ, what it was like being raised in an atheist home and his involvement as a principal in the 1963 U.S. Supreme Court school prayer case.

Murray gained attention last year when he announced his new-found faith in God, denounced atheism and his mother's organization and apologized for his participation in having prayer removed from schools. He stated his sorrow over the issue in an April, 1980, letter to the editor of the Austin American-Statesman.

Since then Murray has established a foundation dedicated to bringing America back to a course of faith "...in themselves, in their country and in God." His brother John assisted him in starting the organization July 19, 1980, in Houston, with plans to open a second office in Washington, D.C.

Murray's mother used him as a plaintiff at age 14 in the 1960 case banning public school prayer. During the three years of litigation, Murray said he basically understood what was happening but only knew what Mrs. O'Hair wanted him to about the issue.

According to biographical material, while living in Baltimore, Md., Murray's family's beliefs led to his being hospitalized several times. After the 1963 decision, Murray reportedly immersed himself in business pursuits, forgot about atheism or any other beliefs and had no contact with his mother for 10 years.

In 1975, in response to his mother's request for help, Murray reportedly became executive director of her atheist organization and spent two years rebuilding the troubled Society of Separationists.

While publishing Mrs. O'Hair's newsletter, "The American Atheist," Murray said he became disillusioned with the constant conflict and power struggles he witnessed. Claiming atheism damages lives by encouraging people to think they are the center of the universe, Murray moved from Austin to Houston in 1977. He discontinued contact with his mother and began searching the Bible to rebuild his life.

After the publishing of his 1980 letter to the Austin American-Statesman, U.S. Rep. Philip Crane contacted Murray seeking his support for a senate bill reinstating school prayer. Murray met with Crane, an unsuccessful Republican presidential candidate, and Sen. Jesse Helms, and helped generate signatures for Crane's petition on the issue in May.

Murray and his brother began the Faith Foundation two months later to aid him in his efforts to reach people who have lost faith in God, especially those raised in an atheistic or humanistic home.

FROM AN ATHEIST TO A THEIST — That's a capsule description of the reversal that has occurred in the life of William Murray, son of noted atheist Madalyn Murray O'Hair. Murray, who said he is trying to point America back to faith in God, will address two Lubbock churches Sunday. He is pictured in front of a rendering of II Chronicles 7:14, the Old Testament verse which states, "If my people, which are called by my name, shall humble themselves, and pray, and seek my face, and turn from their wicked ways, then will I hear from Heaven, and will forgive their sin, and will heal their land."

Catholic Needs Target Of Scheduled Survey

By PAT GRAVES
A-J Religion Writer

Area Catholics will be putting feet to their prayers en masse Sunday as they participate in a "needs survey" conducted by the Diocese of Amarillo.

Each of the diocese's three regions will be involved. Some 2,000 volunteers in the southern region, which stretches from New Deal to Lamesa and from Spur to New Mexico, will be going door-to-door in Lubbock and 33 area towns, attempting to contact 7,823 Catholic homes in 21 parishes and 13 missions.

Their purpose is to gather information on needs and goals of the parishioners, to be used to determine how diocesan funds will be spent. Previously, that process was handled by parish councils and their representatives. But Diocese Chairman Leroy Behnke, of St. John Neumann's Catholic Church in Lubbock, said Bishop L.T. Mathiessen had other ideas.

"This is the first time we've tried this," Behnke explained, adding with a laugh, "Someone said he (Mathiessen) was nuts but he wants everybody's input. Many thought it would be a lot easier to get a representative sample, but we're going for 100 percent."

Behnke estimated there are close to 100,000 Catholics and more than 19,000 households in the diocese. He happily acknowledged the challenge of surveying them all in one day.

"Yeah," he joked, "we may corner the market on foot ointment."

What they really hope to do, according to southern region representative Lorenzo Sedeno, is to give Bishop Mathiessen and the Diocesan Pastoral Council enough grass roots information to identify and direct attention to the most urgent needs in the diocese.

Behnke said the survey was prepared in December when each parish council was asked to project itself into 1985. From this preliminary information, Sedeno said an 80-item questionnaire was prepared. Using membership rolls, surveyors will contact each Catholic home and ask the resident to fill out the form.

Those who are unable to do so, such as the handicapped, will have their answers recorded for them. Persons who are missed will be contacted later during the week.

The questionnaire covers such concerns as chur ch leadership and services, education and Catholic schools, community programs, social services, justice, ecumenism, worship, spiritual renewal, resources, evangelization, fellowship, communication and services for the handicapped, hospitalized and shut-ins.

"We're trying to get ministry in touch with God's Spirit through the people, not just the staff," Behnke noted. "The questions came from the people's representatives. Now we're returning to the people for their ideas."

STEVENS' REPLY TO "LUBBOCK LAWYERS"

The Lubbock Criminal Defense Lawyers Association made two objections in the Avalanche-Journal, Feb. 28 to the remarks that I made in an impromptu telephone interview which were published in this newspaper on Feb. 14, 1981. First, I freely confess to being somewhat awkward in my remarks, and if they seemed unnecessarily sharp or offensive, I apologize for that, but not for the position that I took. The two objections raised by the lawyers are: (1) that my "views would lead to the abolition of the U.S. justice system and several basic constitutional rights ... would effectively eradicate the right to due process of law, to representation by an attorney, to the presumption of innocence and to trial by jury .. eliminates the need for the jury system", and (2) that the lawyer may also be guilty — "Clearly, to state that the lawyer is as guilty as the defendant, or the minister is guilty of the sins of his parishioners, is preposterous".

ABOLISH U.S. JUSTICE SYSTEM

First, let's consider #1. This is the same charge that Mr. Holder made in his remarks on Feb. 14, saying, "he cannot imagine entering a trial with capital punishment as a foregone conclusion. 'Why have a trial. It's a charade.'" No statement of mine is cited that either says or implies any such thing. This is a trumped up charge to divert attention away from what I said and the position that I take regarding what the Bible teaches on this subject. I therefore deny the allegation and charge the allegator(s)!

POSITION OF STATE OF TEXAS

The State of Texas takes the position that either "death" or "life imprisonment" is the mandatory punishment (foregone conclusion) in the case of capital murder. What is the difference in having a trial where "capital punishment" is the pre-determined penalty, and in having one where "life imprisonment" is the pre-determined penalty?? One or the the other of these penalties is the "foregone conclusion", "position" and "view" of the State of Texas is every capital murder trial. Why have a trial? Let the "LCD lawyers" answer. I answer: A trial is held to determine the guilt or innocence of the defendant. It is my contention that GOD, HIMSELF, who ordained civil government and their power to punish evil doers (Rom. 13:1-7), has set the penalty for the person who has been found guilty of capital murder, and that penalty is DEATH. Please read: Gen. 9:5, 6; Exo. 21:12; Num. 35:30-34; Deut. 19:11-13; John 19:10-11; Rom. 13:1-7; Acts 12:2; 1 Pet. 2:13-14; Acts 25:11, etc.

Just how this "position" or "view" "would lead to the abolition of the justice system ... eradicate the right to due process of law ... representation ... presumption of innocence ... trial by jury" the "LCD Lawyers" do not tell us; they merely assert that it does. I wonder if it is us poor dumb "citizens" that are now supposed to "roll over" and play dead, (their expression, see bottom line, column 4, lawyers write up). And, if this position leads to such a conclusion, then what about the position the State of Texas has taken?? Does the pre-determined penalty of "life imprisonment" lead to the "abolition of the justice system ... etc., etc."? If not, why not?? And if not, then my position does not either; the lawyers to the contrary not withstanding!

ARE LAWYERS GUILTY?

And now I invite you to consider with me their 2nd objection — regarding the guilt of the lawyer. In the first place I do not claim that every defense lawyer is guilty, but only those who use nit-picking legal maneuvers and technicalities to obstruct or evade the court's and/or jury's ascertainment of truth in the case. Lawyers whose interest lies in getting the criminal off without any, or little, punishment, without regard to his guilt or innocence, then I affirm that the lawyer is a partaker of his evil deeds, at least in the sight of God, and I dare say, society. He is not interested in the welfare of society or in upholding the law, but simply in getting his client off. Along this line let me quote from an excellent editorial by Kenneth May in the Evening A.J., on March 2, 1981: "We must let the trial courts and the appellate courts know that we tire of the nit-picking game-playing they tolerate and encourage among criminal lawyers. Our judicial system must be redirected toward separating the guilty from the innocent, rather than be so preoccupied with dotting i's and crossing t's that have nothing to do with the defendant's guilt or innocence or with protecting his rights to know the essence of the charges against him". I suggest that you read this excellent editorial in it's entirety.

ARE MINISTERS GUILTY OF PARISHIONERS SINS?

I am thankful for the illustration that the "LCD Lawyers" provide regarding the "minister (being) as guilty of the sins of his parishioners", and definitely affirm that any minister who seeks to cover-up, hide, or protect by contrivance (like some lawyers do their clients) the sins of any one becomes a "partaker of his evil deeds" (2 John 9-11)

STATEMENT FROM CHIEF JUSTICE BURGER

Here are a few other quotations along this line. Chief Justice Warren E. Burger issued a clear message to attorneys involved in criminal cases in his recent speech before the American Bar Association in Houston. He said lower court judges should start cutting back on the rights of criminals and criminal defendants, and that the American justice system suffers from too many protections for the accused and too few protections for the victims and potential victims. He also said more restrictions should be placed on the rights of convicted criminals to seek judicial reviews.

Also an excellent editorial by ANDREW TULLY in the A.J., Sun. Feb. 22, 1981: "Chief Justice Warren Burger, who made a speech in Houston the other day attacking the nation's criminal justice system, saying it provides too much protection for the accused and too little for the victims of crime ... Anyway, after years of equivocating behind the pious assertion that I didn't want to play God, I now favor capital punishment for certain crimes ... LIFE IMPRISONMENT? ...dodges the certainty that a murderer will spend the rest of his life behind bars ... SO CAPITAL PUNISHMENT seems to me the preferable penalty for taking a human life. After all, a murderer really has no right, constitutional or otherwise, to go on living. He (the murderer) played the judge, jury and the executioner. His victim had no right of appeal, no smart lawyer, no opportunity to plead insanity; he is gone forever and forever is a particularly long time for the victim ... To me, capital punishment is just that — punishment. It is society punishing one of its members for breaking society's gravest rule, the rule which says a human life is sacred. Spare me those teary, long-winded charges that society is to blame every time somebody plays illegal executioner. We may indeed live in an imperfect union, but en masse we are not quite as imperfect as the merchant who peddles MURDER." And to that I simply add my "amen".

Let me urge every citizen of our country to speak up for God in every facet of life where He has spoken. Use your influence to re-instate capital punishment in the United States of America. We have been a great nation and God has blessed us. But, if we reject God's purposes for civil government, and default on God's stated punishments, we ourselves will have to face the consequences of disobedience. Grover Stevens.

I invite you to write or call the Caprock Church of Christ for a FREE BOOKLET on the subject of Capital Punishment.

The winter of '79 chalked up new records for sub-zero temperatures and unbelievable snow storms. Just ask anyone who lived through it all in Chicago.

Old man winter also left many a frayed temper in its pathway. Snow-heavy roofs caved in, buses and trains were hours late and people's nerves were stretched tight.

Winter's chill is only a memory now, though many of us are a bit tougher for the experience. Life has its ways of testing us and making us develop muscles we never knew we had.

Yet the sun always comes out. And the clouds of modern day living eventually turn into clear blue skies.

Our Lord has overcome the world and the trouble in it. And we have His promise to be with us always — through all the passing seasons.

Draw fresh strength from that promise this week. Worship in the church or synagogue of your choice.

CHEAPER BY THE LITER — Traffic congestion on the Peace Bridge between Buffalo, N.Y., and Fort Erie, Ont., dramatizes the rush of Americans to the Canadian side to purchase gasoline for less than $1 a gallon. Traffic volume is about double what is normal for this time of year. (AP Laserphoto)

Energy Leads Price Hikes

Unemployment Rate Drops To 7.3 Percent

WASHINGTON (AP) — Spurting energy costs pushed wholesale prices up by 0.8 percent in February — an annual rate of about 10 percent — while unemployment declined slightly in Ronald Reagan's first full month in the White House.

The seasonally adjusted Producer Price Index for wholesale items actually abated somewhat from January's 0.9 percent hike. The index, which measures the "finished goods" prices of products ready for sale to consumers, rose 11.7 percent in 1980, the Labor Department said.

Before seasonal adjustment, the Producer Price Index rose 1 percent in February, to 262.4. That means goods and services which cost $100 in the 1967 base year would cost $262.40 today.

The national unemployment rate dropped to 7.3 percent last month, a scant improvement over the 7.4 percent rate of January. But it was still the lowest figure since the 6.9 percent of April 1980, and broke the 10-month period in which the rate hovered between 7.4 and 7.6 percent.

Mixed Signals Given

The figures released Friday by the Bureau of Labor Statistics gave mixed signals on the nation's economic health as the Reagan administration continued to push for large-scale budget and tax cuts.

The administration argues that the package will spur investment, improve productivity and generally put Americans on firmer economic footing. If that happens, officials contend, there will be an easing of the "inflation psychology" which drives people to buy more and more goods because they believe prices will be much higher if they wait very long.

Administration officials predict that if the president's program is approved by summer, results should show up late this year.

The biggest rise in producer prices, which usually foreshadow cost-of-living increases at the consumer level, was in energy costs, the Labor Department report said.

Natural Gas Stays Even

The 3.6 percent rise in energy costs included a 6.5 percent jump in fuel oil prices and a 4.7 percent increase in gasoline costs at the wholesale level. However, prices for natural gas remained even after rising steadily for 10 months. It was learned Friday, meanwhile, that Reagan wants to speed up the phaseout of natural gas controls, a move which, if approved by Congress, would doubtlessly lead to higher prices there, too.

At a nationally broadcast news conference, Reagan was asked if he had any second thoughts about lifting controls on oil prices in view of the rise in energy costs at the wholesale level.

"No, ... because we only advanced decontrol. It was supposed to take place in a few months anyway," he replied.

It was the fourth consecutive month that energy costs at the wholesale level rose substantially. That trend is expected to continue, since Reagan already has lifted controls on most remaining U.S. oil prices.

Increases Not Surprising

John Ortego, an analyst with Chase Econometrics, a business forecasting firm, said the soaring energy prices come as no surprise.

"Essentially, we're getting it now rather than later," he said. "It's probably advantageous to take it now because supplies are ample and demand isn't particularly strong."

He noted that controls on oil prices were to expire by the end of September anyway.

The consumer foods index declined 0.6 percent in February after showing no change in January, but government and private economists expect food prices to rise substantially later this year.

Prices for finished consumer goods other than food or energy rose 0.7 percent in February, compared with 0.8 percent in January, the report said.

Increases occurred for a broad range of items, including alcoholic beverages, cosmetics, drugs, tires and tubes, health products and newspaper publishing.

The Labor Department refers to its wholesale prices report as the Producer Price Index for finished goods, which surveys items ready for retail sale, such as an assembled car. The department also measures prices for goods at an intermediate stage, such as rolled steel, and at a crude stage, such as iron ore.

The department said the number of Americans out of work was 7.8 million last month, essentially the same as in January.

It said the number of people unemployed for 15 weeks or more dropped by about 100,000 — from 2.2 percent to 2.1 percent of the workforce in February, the second monthly decline in the measure of longterm unemployment.

In testimony before the congressional Joint Economic Committee, Janet Norwood, commissioner of labor statistics, said, "This suggests that the steady rise in average duration, which began early last year, may be leveling off."

Of all adult women, the number holding fulltime jobs reached 51.9 percent in February, an alltime high, the department said. The participation by adult males in the ranks of the employed, meantime, fell to 78.7 percent.

Tech Faculty Tenure Committee Quits In Dispute With Cavazos

without jurisdiction, you also are violating written procedures of the University."

The Tech legal counsel also expressed displeasure at public awareness of the fact that a special hearing panel had been requested.

"The Tenure and Privilege Committee already has caused two newspapers to publish the fact that the committee intends to refer this issue to a special hearing panel," her memo said. "The University never should publish information relating to individual personnel matters, including the fact that such a hearing panel is being established, regardless of whether or not the faculty member's name is disclosed."

Although all faculty members involved in the issue express concern for keeping confidential the name of the Home Economics faculty member, they do not necessarily agree with the Tech legal counsel that any mention of a hearing panel is off the public record.

One member of the committee, who asked not to be named, noted there is still time for Cavazos to resolve the matter before Wednesday's Faculty Senate meeting. He said that may be the wiser course because he doesn't want to jeopardize the legal recourses of the Home Economics teacher.

But another committee member said the administration already has caused a stalemate on the issue and unless Cavazos changes his mind about having a special hearing panel the faculty member has now exhausted all channels at the university and is free to take the matter to a court of law.

Hijackers Murder Pakistani Diplomat

ISLAMABAD, Pakistan (AP) — Hijackers shot and mortally wounded a Pakistani hostage-diplomat Friday and set a new one-day deadline for Pakistan to meet demands for the release of 115 hostages still aboard a Pakistani jetliner commandeered to Kabul last Monday, Radio Afghanistan said.

Pakistan promptly accused Afghanistan of permitting the slaying. "This cold-blooded murder was allowed by Kabul authorities in total disregard of international law," an official Pakistani spokesman said here.

The Afghan broadcast said the new deadline was 3 p.m. today (4:30 a.m. CST).

The Afghan radio also reported that an American hostage aboard the plane said some of the passengers were becoming ill and urged a speedy settlement of the five-day-old crisis. Six Americans were reported among hostages held by three hijackers, who are demanding release of political prisoners in Pakistan.

The Kabul broadcast monitored here gave no details of events leading up to the fatal shooting except to say that it occurred while one of the hijackers was speaking on the cockpit radio with the chief Pakistani negotiator at the airport control tower.

A United Nations spokesman in New York said one of the hostages sent a message to Secretary-General Kurt Waldheim appealing for U.N. intervention to help save the hostages aboard the hijacked plane.

He said the appeal by Geoffrey Balkind, a World Bank official, was relayed through the control tower at Kabul airport.

Waldheim, "acting on humanitarian grounds," has established contact with Pakistani authorities and has also received a message from Afghanistan's foreign minister, Shah Mohammad Dost, the spokesman said. Further details were not disclosed.

Execution List Reported

According to freed hostages evacuated to Pakistan Thursday, the hijackers had a list of four hostages to be executed one at a time if their demands were not met. They also threatened to blow up the plane.

The slaying and Pakistani accusation of Afghanistan complicity further clouded negotiations already difficult because of strained relations caused by the presence of Soviet troops in the country. The Soviets moved in force into Afghanistan in December 1979 and have been helping fight Moslem rebels.

The shooting victim, identified as Tariq Rahim assigned to the Pakistani Embassy in Tehran, Iran, was taken to a nearby hospital after a hijacker on the plane notified Afghan authorities by cockpit radio to remove a body, the broadcast said. He died there 2½ hours later, it added.

Victim Ex-Military Aide

Rahim was an army officer who transferred to Pakistan's foreign service after holding the post of military aide-de-camp to executed former Prime Minister Zulfikar Ali Bhutto at the time he was toppled by President Gen. Mohammed Zia ul-Haq, a reliable source said. Bhutto was hanged in 1979.

Educated at Sandhurst, Britain's military academy, Rahim had been on leave from Tehran to attend the funeral in Pakistan of his father, a retired army major general, the source said.

The hijackers, who seized the Pakistan International Airlines Boeing 720 while on a domestic flight betweeen Karachi and Peshewar, are believed to be pro-Bhutto extremists who are claiming to be members of a hitherto unknown group called "al-Zulfikar."

Federal Rules Met By City would be better to be safe than sorry, Mrs. Covey added.

"If you don't do one and you need to do one, you're in trouble," she said.

The staff had to collect data for a three-to four-page document, which essentially states the overall effects of the projects are beneficial, that adverse effects would be caused by construction and would be short-term in nature, that no historical or enviromentally critical areas would be affected and that no viable alternatives exist.

A "Notice of Finding No Significant Impact" also had to be published for each of the two projects.

The city must wait 15 days for any response before sending the request to the Department of Housing and Urban Development for the release of the funds on the projects. HUD then will wait an additional 15 days before taking final action.

The total cost of the two projects is $446,300.

Tobacco Subsidies Expected To Feel Budget-Cutting Sting

ing program in the West would not be affected by the cuts, and Stockman confirmed in an interview in the Los Angeles Times on Friday that water projects on the West Coast would be spared.

Stockman also acknowledged in the interview that one of the biggest and most controversial water projects, the $1.4 billion Tennessee-Tombigbee Waterway in Alabama and Mississippi, would escape major cuts because of support from Senate Majority Leader Howard Baker, R-Tenn., and other key members of Congress.

Elimination of the Vietnam veteran counseling program, which serves several thousand veterans a year, would save nearly $30 million in 1982.

Stockman's assistant said the budget director is proposing a shutdown of the program because "he doesn't think it's effective."

However, Mack Fleming, the Democratic counsel to the House Veterans' Affairs Committee, defended the program, saying, "On balance, it is my personal view that they have served a useful purpose."

Other VA cutbacks being proposed by the administration include eliminating or delaying planned hospital construction projects, reducing agency personnel and placing tighter restrictions on the ability of GIs to borrow on their life insurance policies at low interest rates, said Stockman's aide.

Rep. Robert Edgar, D-Pa., has said that the administration also proposes to eliminate a $63-million education and job training program for disadvantaged Vietnam veterans, prevent expansion of a vocational rehabilitation program and limit salary increases for doctors and dentists.

On the subject of farm price supports, Stockman said subsidies for tobacco growers would "be cut a little."

The only farm subsidy program cut in last month's budget proposals involved dairy price supports, but Stockman later promised that other programs also would be in line for reductions.

Tobacco supports have been viewed by some critics of Reagan budget proposals as a "sacred cow," because the subsidy program has the firm support of Helms, a leading conservative Republican in the Senate.

Meanwhile, the administration came under attack Friday over Reagan's proposal to cut off more than $300 million in federal money that provides free legal assistance to the nation's poor people.

"This administration is proposing to put a price tag on justice, just like a Cadillac or a yacht. If you can pay for it, you can have it," said F. William McCalpin, chairman of the Legal Services Corp., the agency that Reagan wants abolished.

Reagan's call for elimination of the agency and a cutoff of its funds "is unsound, unwise and not in the nation's best interest," charged William Reece Smith Jr., president of the American Bar Association.

At his news conference, Reagan again defended his program of social program cuts, which has been assailed by organized labor, civil rights groups and liberal organizations, such as the Americans for Democratic Action.

Murderers' Identities Known, Says Senator

scribed U.S. goals in aiding the civilian-military junta as "an attempt to try to halt infiltration into the Americas by terrorists." He told a news conference that none of the 54 advisers being sent to El Salvador would be going into combat but acknowledged that "we can't, I'm sorry to say, make it risk free."

In Moscow, the Soviet news agency Tass on Friday accused Washington of making "malicious inventions" about Soviet and Cuban involvement in El Salvador to mask its own interference in the Central American country.

Tass charged that the U.S. government was trying to suppress El Salvador's national liberation movement "by force of arms" while simultaneously trying to turn it "into a subject of East-West confrontation."

In another development, Sen. Edward Zorinsky, D-Neb., claimed in an interview with the Omaha World-Herald that the FBI and the Salvador government know the identities of those who last December killed four Americans in El Salvador — three nuns and a lay religious worker.

Zorinsky, the ranking Democrat on the Senate's Western Hemisphere subcommittee, indicated that Salvadoran security forces were responsible and said he got his information from sources in positions to know. He said he would ask President Reagan why the identities of the killers were being withheld.

There was no immediate reaction from FBI or other U.S. government officials.

An army communique Thursday on the situation at Jutiapa said troops repulsed an assault on a national guard post, killing 10 of the attackers. It also reported fighting in the nearby town of Cinquera, where the government said leftists set fire to the city hall and kidnapped two people.

The communique issued Friday said that in addition to the 30 killed in Jutiapa, the bodies of five other people, the apparent victims of political violence, were found around the nation.

An army spokesman said the only other guerrilla action in recent days had been limited to brief ambushes of security force convoys, bank robberies and the bombing of two banks.

Rightist Sought

Meanwhile, the government said it was still seeking rightist spokesman Roberto d'Aubuisson, whose arrest was ordered this week after he called for a military coup to topple the U.S.-backed civilian-military junta formed by the Christian Democrats.

There was no official elaboration on the Foreign Ministry's announcement Thursday night that El Salvador's ambassador to Washington, Francisco Aquino Herrera, had resigned for "personal reasons." No replacement was named.

In another development, Foreign Minister Fidel Chavez Mena said a team of envoys sent to Europe last week to drum up support for Salvador's U.S.-backed civilian-military junta had returned with their mission "completed satisfactorily."

Envoys End Tour

"We have demonstrated to our friends in the world that the situation in our country is different than what the communists and their allies say it is," he said, adding that the team met with representatives of a number of European governments but did not say what nations were visited.

The Reagan administration, which has charged the Soviet Union and Cuba with masterminding the shipment of arms from Soviet allies to the Salvador leftists, last month sent State Department officials on a similar tour of European as well as Latin American capitals.

The bloody opposition drive to topple the Salvador government has claimed 16,000 lives since the junta was formed by leaders of the Oct. 15, 1979 coup that ousted rightist President Carlos Humberto Romero from power. The government is challenged by extreme rightists and by guerrillas dominated by a leftist leadership.

Thursday in Washington, Rep. Michael D. Barnes, D-Md., told reporters that Duarte had told him El Salvador did not need more U.S. advisers to help in its fight against guerrillas. Some of an envisioned total of 54 U.S. military advisers are already in this tiny Central American nation.

Court Refuses To Block Judy Execution

WASHINGTON (AP) — The Supreme Court refused Friday to block the scheduled Monday execution of convicted Indiana murderer Steven Judy, who refuses to continue his legal case.

By a 7-2 vote, the justices turned down the emergency request of another Indiana death row inmate who sought to save Judy's life.

Justices William J. Brennan Jr. and Thurgood Marshall, who oppose capital punishment under all circumstances, dissented.

The court's brief order said, "The application for stay of the execution of Steven T. Judy ... is denied."

Lawyers representing death row inmate Larry Williams tried to prevent Judy's death in the electric chair by arguing that Williams, also a convicted murderer, first should have a chance in court to challenge Indiana's death penalty law.

Judy's execution "will have an inhibiting effect on the Indiana Supreme Court's acceptance of Williams' arguments against the constitutionality of that statute," the lawyers said.

The state Supreme Court ruled for a second time Thursday that Williams has no legal standing to appeal on behalf of Judy.

Williams then sought emergency help from Justice John Paul Stevens, who referred the request to the full court.

A 24-year-old Indianapolis resident, Judy was convicted and sentenced to death for raping and strangling Terry Chasteen, 21, and drowning her three young children in April 1979.

Judy has steadfastly refused to appeal.

Surge In Drug Traffic Forecast

juana. As they approach, the lawmen become involved in a shootout with suspects armed with automatic weapons. The pilot is killed when he runs into a turning propeller as he tries to escape.

• Deaf Smith County deputies hurry to the western portion of the county when they are called about a suspicious aircraft. As they arrive, they see a single-engine plane taking off without running lights. An approaching Air Force B-52 bomber, on a low-level practice bombing run, narrowly misses colliding with the light plane, which the officers suspect was involved in drug smuggling.

"They come in all over the state, not just in this area," says Sgt. Joe Williams with the narcotics division of the DPS. "Smugglers may load in Colombia and it's a long way back to the Panhandle. The Panhandle is a good area for them, though, because it's flat and they can land easily."

Deaf Smith County Sheriff Travis McPherson, who has seen his share of failed drug running missions, agrees that smugglers are hard to keep tabs on and that those who run a virtual air-freight service in narcotics are experts when it comes to flying and avoiding detection.

"I feel like they land in this area because anybody smuggling a large amount of marijuana is going north with it. They want to get fairly far from the Mexican border and be able to transfer their loads to trucks fairly close to a sizeable town. Yet, they want a fairly desolate area to land in," McPherson said.

The sheriff explained that many of the rangeland and rural farm areas in the western part of his county fill the bill for what the drug-runners want when they search for a fast stopover area.

"We have numerous reports of suspicious airplane sightings out in the west and northwest part of the county. Some of the farm roads out there don't have any power lines along them or any fences and it would be easy for a pilot to set a plane down on a caliche road at night guided by headlights," McPherson said.

McPherson added that abandoned airstrips and even pastures also offer waiting landing strips.

The Deaf Smith County sheriff feels that smugglers work out their own logistics, operating with leased or stolen planes.

"Smugglers probably could carry about 500 pounds of marijuana, valued at up to $350,000, in a single trip in a Cessna 210. Usually they will carry their own fuel tanks with them, filling the plane before leaving and carrying extra fuel for refueling in Mexico.

"On the ground in Mexico, they refuel, load the plane and take off again, all within about 20 minutes, because they fear the police down there. Not knowing if there will be fuel there, they carry enough with them to get back inland in the U.S.," McPherson said.

Williams emphasized the difficulty of the job facing narcotics officers and other law enforcement officials in their attempts to curtail drug smuggling by air.

"The DPS doesn't have a special task force for air trafficking, but that is one of our priorities. Most of our breaks come only after a plane has crashed," he said.

"There's a lot of Mexico traffic and the smugglers have a wide border to fly over. They also can fly under the radar screens, or fake a landing or use other evasive tactics," Williams said.

If a smuggler is spotted on radar, U.S. Customs agents often come into the picture, attempting to track the aircraft and close in on it.

"From Florida or Mexico, a lot of smugglers come in on radar, but there are so many flights it's impossible to spot them all," Williams said.

The DPS narcotics officer said he couldn't venture a guess as to the amount of drugs moved through this region, bound for points north and east.

While marijuana is the most common illicit item carried by aircraft traversing South Plains skies, Williams said that Quaaludes are entering the drug traffic and cocaine may be carried on some runs.

"Summer is probably one of the best times for smugglers to come through. Big stockpiles of drugs build up in Mexico and they really start coming through then," said Williams.

McPherson said some of the best leads on drug cases come from anonymous tips or from residents reporting suspicious activities.

"Narcotics agencies try to keep us up to date on expected drug movement," McPherson said.

McPherson and Williams agreed that law enforcement personnel must exercise "extreme caution" in approaching drug suspects, because of situations like the stolen aircraft found in the Permian Basin.

"At times our officers have gotten close to suspected smugglers just as they were taking off. They've had instances where they could hear the plane taking off but not see it. They are aware that the situation is extremely dangerous and that they will have to do whatever is necessary to stop the plane and keep from getting killed," McPherson said.

"It really doesn't matter if we actually catch these smugglers in the act or make an arrest by following up. I get the same satisfaction just helping cut the traffic down," Williams said.

Trio Found Guilty In Grocery Scam

WACO (AP) — Jurors took just over an hour Friday to convict three men, accused of trying to extort $60,000 by saying they poisoned food in three grocery stores, of interfering with interstate commerce.

Daniel Glenn, Stephen Howard and David Howard, all of Elm Mott, stood silently as the verdict was read by U.S. District Judge Fred Shannon, who will sentence the trio on April 6.

The three men, who still face state attempted theft charges in connection with the extortion attempt, could be sentenced to a maximum of 20 years in a federal prison.

Lubbock Police Seeking Rape Suspect

Lubbock police Friday were looking for a rape suspect who was almost apprehended early this morning after several persons reportedly pulled him off a screaming woman inside her apartment near Texas Tech University.

But after scuffling with one of the victim's neighbors, the man, described as a 25-year-old Mexican-American, managed to escape. Investigators said the 21-year-old victim was hysterical following the 1:15 a.m. attack and was taken to Lubbock General Hospital where Rape Crisis representatives attempted to calm her.

Three neighbors came to the victim's aid after hearing her screams for help. They said they entered her residence and found the man atop her in the bedroom. Reports state the man ran down a flight of stairs after his discovery and was confronted by the man who attempted to detain him.

The woman, who was found by police lying on the floor and covered with a blanket, later said she met the assailant at a Clovis Road club and that he asked her for a ride home. She said she was told the man lived near her apartment and agreed to take him as far as her residence.

Police said the woman let him out in front of her apartment complex and that she went upstairs and undressed for bed. The man moments later entered the apartment, pushed her down on the bed and was raping her when the witnesses ran in, police said.

After the suspect made his escape, the woman walked naked out of her apartment and was screaming for police, reports state. Her neighbors said they wrapped the victim in a blanket and made her go back inside.

An officer said that when he arrived on the scene the woman was hysterical and repeatedly yelled for the man to stay away from her.

The suspect was described as about 5 feet 5 inches tall, weighing 190 pounds and dressed in a beige hat, shirt and pants and brown coat.

A 45-year-old Lubbock man told police four suits valued at $854 were stolen from his car sometime Friday.

Wylanza Nell Pierce of 2808 67th St. said he parked his 1973 blue Cheverolet in a lot at 1324 35th St. and, locking his door, went to work at noon. He returned to the car at 5 p.m., he said, and noticed the door was unlocked and the men's suits gone.

Police said there was no sign of forced entry into the vehicle, but the man told officers he saw a tall, thin man, age 18 to 25, "hanging around the area" earlier.

In other activity, a 31-year-old Lubbock man said he was robbed by a pistol-wielding man about 3 a.m. Friday, but the bandit had made off with a mere $1.25.

Gilbert Franco of 1806 48th St. told police he was stopped at 34th Street and Avenue Q when the suspect, traveling in an orange Volkswagen Beetle, pulled next to him and asked directions to Hobbs, N.M. Franco said the man asked him to stop and point out the route on a map.

The victim said he agreed and was about to show the man the way when the traveler displayed a pistol and demanded money. To the disappointment of the gunman, however, Franco was carrying only a $1 bill, which was wrapped around a quarter, and he handed that over with little resistance.

The bandit accepted the small take and drove off, according to police. The suspect was described as white, about 24, under 6 feet tall, weighing about 190 pounds with blond hair.

Authorities were investigating the possibility of child abuse in connection with a 7-month-old boy, who Thursday was found to have suffered a fractured skull. The fracture was detected at Methodist Hospital and the boy was transferred to Lubbock General Hospital, where he was in satisfactory condition Friday.

Police were told the boy had received medical attention in the past for vomitting, diarrhea, high fever and a tendency to fall out of his crib, and one official said the infant's problems may be the result of child abuse.

A 33-year-old Lubbock woman told police her ex-husband grabbed her by the neck and began choking her, then asked repeatedly, "Are you going to kill me?"

The woman said the man, with his arm still around her neck, then began begging her to shoot him. The victim said of the Wednesday night incident that she lost consciousness momentarily, and then awoke to find she was on the floor with her mouth bleeding. Her former spouse, reports state, ordered her to go to the bathroom and wash out her mouth.

The woman said the man left when a friend arrived. The woman, who was being treated at Methodist Hospital, told police of the attack Thursday.

Judith Lynn Fisher, a 37-year-old Tech professor, told police she discovered Thursday afternoon that three windows had been shot out at her south Lubbock residence. Reports state a bullet pierced a lamp shade and an empty round was found lodged in a fence east of the house.

The woman said the room in which the windows are located is seldom used and that the damage could have occurred in the past two weeks.

Soviet Dancer Reveals Propaganda Role

MOSCOW (AP) — A Soviet ballet dancer who defected to the United States last year and then decided to come back said that on his return he was used in an anti-American campaign organized by the KGB security police.

Dancer Yuri Stepanov, who returned here last April, told western reporters that he was thrown out of the Communist Party and denied work when he refused to comply with a KGB request that he tell other dancers that life in America was a "nightmare."

"I was supposed to say that it was impossible to live there ... that it was a sad lesson for me," Stepanov told correspondents here.

Stepanov, 33, defected in January 1980 while in Italy on tour with the Moscow classical ballet company, and then went to the United States where he danced with a ballet company in Montclair, N.J.

"It was everything I could ever dream of," he said of his life in the United States. He told Western reporters that he returned to Russia because he worried about possible reprisals against his wife, a dancer with Moscow's Bolshoi ballet troup, and his parents.

Stepanov told reporters here he was approached by security agents on his return, questioned, instructed to give an interview to the government newspaper Izvestia, and coached on what to say.

He said one agent told him to tell Izvestia reporters, "when you went (to Italy) on trips as a dancer, you saw all those things in the windows and you wanted to have them."

"Then when you got to America and started to work, you saw it was an illusion and everything was very bad," Stepanov said he was told to say.

BILINGUAL PROGRAM

AUSTIN (AP) — A special task force on bilingual education in the Texas public school system has been set up to find the best way to achieve quality programs, Gov. Bill Clements says. Clements issued an executive order Friday establishing the task force. Clements, Lt. Gov. Bill Hobby and House Speaker Bill Clayton said in a joint statement they were "committed and dedicated" to the goal of high quality bilingual education.

Saudis To Get U.S. Aviation Equipment

WASHINGTON (AP) — The Reagan administration, despite Israeli objections, announced Friday the sale of sophisticated military equipment for Saudi Arabian jet fighters to counter a "serious deterioration" of U.S. security interests in the Middle East.

State Department spokesman William Dyess said the administration will sell the Saudis extra-large fuel tanks and Sidewinder air-to-air missiles that will increase the range and the firepower of the 62 F-15 interceptor aircraft which the Saudis have ordered from the United States.

Dyess also said the United States will provide the F-15s with a refueling capability and that bomb racks may be supplied for defense against an invasion of Saudi territory.

In addition, aerial surveillance aircraft will be sold to the Saudis, subject to a study of their requirements.

The announcement touched off vocal opposition from both Israeli officials and pro-Israeli members of Congress.

Israeli ambassador Ephraim Evron, in a conversation Friday with Undersecretary of State James Buckley, expressed "great concern and disappointment" over the proposed sale, Israeli sources said.

Sen. Joseph Biden, D-Del., said he would introduce a resolution aimed at blocking the sale and that there is a 50-50 chance Congress will approve it. Both houses of Congress would have to vote against the sale to block it.

The Carter administration won approval of the F-15 sale to Saudi Arabia in 1978 as part of a package deal under which Israel and Egypt also received sophisticated jet fighters.

At the time, some congressmen expressed concern the sale could invite a pre-emptive military strike by Saudi Arabia against Israel.

The sale was approved after the Carter administration offered assurances that the Saudis would not receive the additional accessories. But Dyess said Friday that since 1978, there has been a "serious deterioration in security conditions in the Middle East-Persian Gulf region.

"The critical fact today is that circumstances in the region have changed dramatically," he said.

"The Soviet invasion of Afghanistan, the turmoil of the Iranian revolution, the Iran-Iraq war and the Soviet presence in South Yemen and Ethiopia underscore the instability in the region and the dangers of Soviet penetration and exploitation."

But Israeli Embassy officials said in a statement that the sale to Saudi Arabia and arms deals with other Arab countries "increase the arms race in the region to a dimension which could endanger the strategic balance in the Middle East."

The statement said Middle East problems can be solved only by participation of all states of the region in the Camp David peace process.

The Israelis said Saudi Arabia is not a "moderate state" in the Arab-Israeli dispute. The Saudis support the Palestine Liberation Organization as well as Arab states that are actively hostile to Israel, the statement said.

Israel Criticizes Saudi Deal For Jet Fighter Equipment

JERUSALEM (AP) — Israel on Friday called a new deal between the United States and Saudi Arabia for additional equipment for F-15 jet fighters a most worrisome development that would heighten danger to Israel.

A foreign ministry communique said the deal would upset the delicate military balance in the region and fuel an arms race.

The United States said the deal was justified becase of "serious deterioration in security conditions in the Middle East."

Israel lobbied emphatically against the sale of additional equipment for the F-15 aircraft by arguing that the sale of supplementary fuel tanks and missiles would turn the interceptor jets into full-fledged offensive planes that the Saudis could turn anytime against the Jewish state.

The deal was protested most recently last week when Foreign Minister Yitzhak Shamir met President Reagan in Washington.

In a statement made before the sale was confirmed Friday, Director General David Kimche of the Foreign ministry said Israel must also consider the negative aspects of its lobbying efforts with the new American administration.

Israel Radio quoted Kimche as saying that an early confrontation would not be advantageous to Israel, and could endanger Israel's influence in the future over equally important issues.

Rattlesnake Book To Premier In Nolan County

By GERRY BURTON
Avalanche-Journal Staff

SWEETWATER — From childhood, Bill Ransberger was terrified of snakes, any snakes. He "broke into a cold sweat" at the mere thought of a rattlesnake.

So it took all his nerve, and then some, as a board member of the Sweetwater Jaycees to help with the first rattlesnake roundup.

Twenty-one roundups later things have changed. Ransberger, who performed early duties as far from snakes as possible, now entertains as a snake handler with an international reputation.

And he is the biggest booster of a venom research institute moved from Maryland to Sweetwater in 1980 which utilyzes three gallons of rattlesnake venom a year, about 700ccs of it from the roundup.

Some of his observations as a handler have been translated into research projects and knowledge gleaned over the years is part of a new book, "Rattlesnakes in America."

The book, which premieres Sunday at an autograph party in the Nolan County Courthouse, has "a biology of the rattlesnakes and their impact on human society" segment by institute director Jack Kilmon and a colorful treatment of the rattlesnake roundup by Hooper Shelton, retired newspaper editor of Rotan with 10 books already to his credit.

Safety first is Ransberger's main subject — whether at a Boy Scout or club lecture, with the venomous varieties at the American Institute for Toxin Research housed in the International Biological Extracts or in the show ring.

More than 1,000 rattles sound a warning as Ransberger steps into a 16-by-16-foot snake pit. The ominous sound reaches every niche of the Sweetwater coliseum.

"I move and the snakes strike up a din; I stand still and they stop. I tell everybody that's how to treat a rattler out in the country. Be still and it will go away."

It is the first lesson visitors (there were 25,000 at the 1980 roundup) learn at the World's Largest Rattlesnake Roundup the second weekend in March. Before Ransberger leaves the pit a lot of pet myths about rattlesnakes will be dispelled and a healthy respect for rattlers instilled in thousands.

Ransberger, "bitten 36 times with six serious and not a scar on the entire body," always includes lessons in proper handling of snake bites, with cutting the wound an absolute no-no.

Seriousness of a bite, always a very real medical emergency, depends on the amount of venom expelled, with about 25 per cent "dry" bites.

Widely known as the "best snake handler in the Southwest," Ransberger credits his safety show lessons in Sweetwater and around the nation with the drop in rattlesnake-oriented deaths. He gets word from victims.

A locomotive engineer for the Santa Fe Railway Co., Ransberger takes vacation time each year to spread the word — about what rattlesnakes will and won't do — to visitors at three other roundups.

Mrs. Ransberger, chief rattlesnake steak cook at Sweetwater for years, presides at the cooking pots of the other roundups, too.

While Ransberger picks snakes live from the local hunt to demonstrate his snakeology lesson, Mrs. Ransberger deepfries snake meat — in electric pans at Sweetwater and in washpot and washtub at another.

They teamed up for an appearance, in 1975, on "To Tell the Truth" and broadened their lecture-demonstration area.

Their connection with the new research center is very personal. Kilmon, who founded the American Venom Labs in Maryland in 1965, met and married their daughter, Joni, while attending Sweetwater roundups. Kilmon children are about the age Mrs. Kilmon was when roundups began and enjoy them just as much.

"I've been looking for something like this 20 years," Ransberger said of the venom research center. International Biological Extracts supplies venom from animals, insects and marine organisms to research institutes throughout the world and the American Institute for Toxin Research is initiating studies in rattlesnake

Apartment Construction Planned By Developer

By JOHN OTIS MEEKINS
A-J Correspondent

HOBBS, N.M. — Mary Rich Adams, president of Boardwalk Properties in Carrizozo, N.M., is planning to construct 170 apartment units in Hobbs, with 50 of the units to be subsidized housing for low income families at an estimated cost of more than $3.8 million.

Mrs. Adams says she has been a visitor in Hobbs on numerous occasions and "am always impressed with this vibrant growing community." She added that every time she comes to Hobbs, "it's almost impossible to find a motel that isn't filled to capacity."

A former newspaper woman who still operates a news service from Carrizozo, Mrs. Adams describes herself as a "realtor and developer." Mrs. Adams formerly was editor and publisher of The Lincoln County, N.M., News.

The apartments her company plans to construct would be located at four different sites in the city and cost of the land would be in addition to the construction costs.

Plans call for the apartments to consist of 40 one-bedroom, 40 two-bedroom, 35 three-bedroom and five four-bedroom units with rents ranging from a low of $160 to a high of $481. Tenants will be expected to pay their own utility bills.

Funds for construction of the units will be raised by the sale of tax-exempt bonds to private investors. Mrs. Adams said the Region 6 Housing Authority in Roswell can authorize the issuance of the bonds, providing the U.S. Department of Housing and Urban Development approves her plan for construction of the units.

Mrs. Adams said her plans for construction of the apartment units through private enterprise should "be a refreshing change from the usual construction of government-sponsored housing."

She added that she had investigated various cities with a view to constructing similar housing, "but Hobbs is in a non-competitive status" with a housing shortage even recognized by HUD."

Although Alamogordo is a city with U.S. defense installations, she said the rental of housing units there is on a competitive basis, with no actual housing shortage.

Eighty percent of the rent on the 50 subsidized housing units is guaranteed by HUD, according to the developer. She stressed "there is no way we can go into a depressed area to build."

TAYLOR TYE

Lubbock Has Own Famed Chef

By JEANNE LIVELY
Family News Staff

There are the well-known chefs of France who prepare all the delicacies for which French cooks are known.

And you may have sampled the rich and many-layered desserts for which Austrian chefs have reason to be proud.

Of course, there are also the main dishes that German chefs spend so much time and care on.

But look out all you famous European chefs, because Lubbock has its own up and coming young chef, Taylor Tye, whose name is destined to be right up there with the best of you!

When Tye was a youngster he loved to watch his mother, Mrs. Keith Tye, prepare the family's meals. Also, when he was attending Monterey High School, he worked part-time in one of the city's restaurants.

"On weekends, I cooked steaks for the football crowd," Tye recalls, "and can you imagine cooking steaks for perhaps 150 people on a single night?"

Otherwise, Tye had little exposure to cooking to portend of what he is doing now.

"Despite the realities of food service I'd already experienced," he emphasizes, "I merely went along on the assumption — as most people do — that it was a dirty, unpleasant business. So working in food service didn't figure in my future career plans."

After graduation from high school, Tye worked at many different kinds of jobs while traveling throughout the U.S., though none in food service.

However, on one occasion Tye accepted a job in a noted Polish restaurant in San Francisco and while there received what he says was the best tip of his life.

"What the chef told me was, 'The quality of food served depends on just how clean the kitchen is'. I've always remembered his advice and tried to keep the cleanest kitchen possible."

When Tye returned to Lubbock, he still had no real inclination to enter the food service field. "But I needed a job and took what was available. As it turned out, I received the finest training as a cook, from the finest chef, that anyone could possibly have gotten. I'll be eternally grateful."

Tye admits that after working with this chef he was "hooked" on becoming a chef himself.

"So after learning all I could, I began looking around for more challenge. Luckily, I found a job as night broiler man at the Hilton

One of Tye's duties is to plan banquets held at the hotel. "Without Mike Neal — the food and beverage manager — my job would be much harder. His expertise makes all the difference, and I've learned a lot from him.

"When we know we're going to have a banquet, we coordinate what is to be served, what foods will need to be purchased and so on."

Tye says that a client can have the familiar smothered chicken on rice — usual banquet fare — if he prefers. "But catering to West Texas tastes," he comments, "we enjoy serving such things as heavy beef steaks, roast prime rib and so on. Almost anything that a client wants to serve at a banquet, we can provide."

When asked whether or not he knows how to prepare every item on the Hilton's lengthy bill of fare, he asserts he does. "Most recipes I recall by memory," he says breezily, "though I am beginning to write some down in order to train new employees."

Training new cooks and other employees in the kitchen are also a part of Tye's duties.

"One of the things I always stress is that when I prepare something especially tasty, it is the same as my signature. And when they take pride in preparing something well, then it is the same as their signature or an extension of what they can do."

Finally, Tye emphasizes his belief that all cooking need not be of the gourmet variety. "Chicken-fried steak prepared carefully can rival a dish of expensive veal prepared by a renown French chef," he says.

Tye hopes to increase his knowledge of the culinary arts and in the future to travel abroad — particularly in France — to pick up more tips. "But every day here," he says, "I learn something new."

Bridge

By Oswald Jacoby and Alan Sontag

The standard lead from a long suit is the fourth best. Sixty years ago, the auction bridge writer would show how declarer could count the whole hand when a deuce was opened against his notrump contract.

Today, there are many players who open eight from 10 8 7 2 and reserve the deuce or other very small card opening lead to guarantee that they hold at least one of the four top honors. This is known as "Attitude."

We don't particularly like this — in fact we don't like it at all, although we have been known to lead deuce from A Q 9 7 2 to conceal the fact that we were leading a five-card suit against no trump.

There is one time when attitude leads become important. You are in back of dummy and in front of declarer. Dummy holds: 9 4 3 and you hold 8 6 5 2. You are going to lead the suit through declarer and definitely should not lead the deuce. If your partner holds K J 7 and declarer A Q 10, you want your partner to know that you can't stand a return of the suit. So lead the six or maybe the eight.

Where count becomes really important is in following suit. There is the standard notrump situation where dummy shows K Q J x x and you hold 7 5 or 7 5 2. In following suit, play the seven from 7 5, but the deuce from 7 5 2. If partner holds A 10 8, he will hold off twice if you play the seven first; if you play the deuce, he will know you have an odd number and will grab the second lead.

When your partner has led the suit and you can't win the trick, or deliberately don't want to win the trick, the strength signal (high for strength, low for weakness) takes precedence. But you also may want to give count. In other words, you may want to give count and should do so. Also just to show how easy it is there are also those rare occasions when you may want to give suit preference. Defense is not easy. In fact it is the toughest part of bridge.

ANN LANDERS

Christmas Clods Not Forgotten

Dear Ann Landers: How I hope you will publish this letter! I have not been able to calm down since Christmas. I will try to be brief and come to the point.

I worked like a dog to prepare the traditional holiday dinner for my sisters and brothers and their respective spouses, as well as my own immediate family. Everything was made with special care. I prepared two desserts.

What I want to know is this, Ann Landers: How can a whole bunch of relatives sit down at a table and eat a delicious holiday meal and not one of the guests say a single word about anything that is served?

Also, what is the matter with these people that not one of them got off their rumps to help me clear the dinner dishes for the dessert and coffee? And, how can people show up for a holiday feast and not bring a bottle of wine or a little box of candy?

I do not want to separate myself from my family, although I think they are a bunch of clods. If I tell them how I feel it would certainly cause hard feelings. Yet I would like them to know how their slob-like behavior affects a hostess. So I am asking you to print my letter and I hope they will see themselves. — Can't Get Over This Crowd

Dear Can't Get Over: Part of the problem is you, my dear. If you want help in clearing the table, you can and SHOULD suggest that someone — ANYONE — give you a hand.

As for bringing a small gift or making some comment about the food — it's pathetic that they are so ignorant. You shouldn't be angry. They don't know any better. And that's sad.

Dear Ann Landers: I'm writing about my only child — a charming, red-headed, freckle-faced, 10-year-old boy. His father travels a great deal, so I must do all the disciplining. I could manage quite well if it weren't for my mother, who lives two blocks away. She adores this child, and whenever I punish him he telephones Granny and she calls me back and pleads his case.

Yesterday Rickey did not change into his play clothes when he came home from school. Instead he joined his neighborhood pals in some sort of game which must have involved rolling in the mud. He came home at five o'clock, his clothes filthy and torn. I asked him why he didn't change into his play clothes. He answered, "Because I didn't feel like it."

I gave him a good wallop on the seat of his pants. He went screaming to the telephone and called his grandmother. I heard him yell, "Mom is beating me."

Within five minutes my mother was over here cradling the little scamp in her arms and lecturing me about "child abuse." Any suggestions? — Outnumbered In Missouri

Dear Out: First, make it plain to your mother that she undermines your authority and does the child no good when she intervenes on his behalf.

Then make sure the punishment fits the crime. For that last bit of mischief, Rickey should be confined to his room for five days with no TV, no playmates and no toys. For a 10-year-old, isolation is the most effective punishment of all. Let him sit there alone until his freckles fall off.

SAME OLE SANDWICH?

Tired of the same old peanut butter and jelly sandwich? Try mixing one cup peanut butter with one cup chopped raisins and one-half cup shredded carrots, says Cass Ryan-Crowe, a foods and nutrition specialist with the Texas Agricultural Extension Service, Texas A&M System. This will make enough spread for six sandwiches, she adds.

HINTS FROM HELOISE:

Insulated Ice Bucket Has Dual Personality

DEAR HELOISE:

My attractive, insulated ice bucket has a dual personality. It isn't used for ice at all anymore!

Lined with a bread wrapper, it sits next to my kitchen sink and is the catch-all for fruit and vegetable peelings, egg shells, coffee grounds, tea leaves, etc.

But, that's not all! It's a money-saver too!

The garbage goes into the garden compost pile which fertilizes our garden patch, thus saving the cost of running an electric disposal and the cost of commercial fertilizer as well.

So, get yourself a fancy insulated ice bucket. Watch for one at garage sales or use the old one that is just taking up room on a shelf.

Then, recycle those bread wrappers and all that good garbage! — Lilian Briggs

Good idea! Besides the savings you mentioned, you have no smelly garbage around, and think what that does for the environment! Hugs for writing! — Heloise

ROCK-HARD SUGAR

DEAR HELOISE:

I have found a quick answer to a most baffling problem — softening rock-hard brown sugar.

Just put the sugar into a glass baking dish, cover with plastic wrap or wax paper and put it into a microwave oven.

After a minute or so, break up what you can with a knife o spoon and repeat the process until it's completely soft.

After softening the sugar, place it in a plastic bag and seal with a twistie. — Mrs. Lendell Hollingsworth

TUB CLEANER

DEAR HELOISE:

Frustrated with soap and water build-up on our new bathtub, I tried several foamy tub and tile cleaners but they wouldn't remove the film.

I finally tried vinegar and a small brush. (Nylon net could also be used to rub the areas).

My tub is sparkling now at very little expense or energy. — Charlene Butcher

PROTECTIVE COVERING

DEAR HELOISE:

To protect the top of the washer and dryer, place a bath towel over them. One in a matching color looks best.

The towel will save wear and tear on the appliances, plus it's easily kept clean. — Mrs. R.W. Yoder

BAKING SODA TIP

DEAR HELOISE:

Commercial carpet fresheners (rug and room deodorizers) may work very well in large, open rooms. But in ver close, small apartments, they leave a too-pungent, sweet lingering odor.

Freshening the rug regularly with baking soda was too blah. But, mix the two (baking soda and carpet freshener) in equal portions, sprinkle it over the carpet, then vacuum.

Now, you have a very mild, clean fragrance in your small apartment. — Barbara Porter

FOR PARENTS

DEAR HELOISE:

Here's a tip for parents with young children. An ordinary kitchen timer can be your best friend.

When bedtime approaches, set the timer and say, "When you hear the ding, it will be time to go to bed." It can be use the same way to end playtime.

With more than one child, it's a real nerve-saver. When both want to play with the same toy at the same time, then set the timer for five minute turns.

Children learn to respect the time and you will love it. — Mrs. A.F. Wrigh

HINTS FROM HIM

DEAR HELOISE:

Onions are difficult to maintain. My hint:

Peel two or three onions but do NOT wash. Put them into a jar with a lid and close tightly. You will be amazed how long they last, as related to ordinary methods.

Cutting out a portion and replacing in the jar seems not t have any effect on the retention rate — as long as you don't use water in the process.

Exercise Permissable While Taking Drug

By PAUL DONOHUE, M.D.

Dear Dr. Donohue: What are the effects from taking propranolol (Inderal)? Are we receiving the full benefit of the blood in our veins, considering the slower heart beat the drug causes? Are we being hurt because with this drug our heart is not getting the stress it needs? I guess my question should be, what does Inderal do and how does it work? What about exercise? — V.J.B.

There are a great many patients taking this drug for a variety of illnesses.

When you exercise, your heart rate speeds up and your arteries narrow. They do this because of the influence of the body's own adrenalin-like drugs that are released during exercise. These drugs are keys that run up the heart and clamp down on the arteries.

Propranolol (Inderal) blocks this adrenalin action. With it, therefore, the heart does not beat so fast and the arteries don't narrow so much. The result is that blood pressure is lowered — a chief use for propranolol.

You are correct: With propranolol the heart does not have to work so hard so that a person with angina pectoris, for example, will not have the chest pain he may otherwise get with activity. That's the second illness for which propranolol is used — angina pectoris.

Yes, you can exercise while taking propranolol, even though your heart rate and blood pressure will remain lower than they would without the drug. The limits to exercise would depend on the reason you are taking the propranolol. Even with angina, you can arrange a careful program of exercise while taking it. The idea behind the drug is to reduce the work of the heart for a given level of exercise.

Your own physician should advise on this. Your heart will get all the stress it needs and there will be plenty of oxygen pumped out for the body. But, such an exercise program should be done only with professional guidance.

Dear Dr. Donohue: I am 71 and very concerned about a problem. About a month ago I started playing racquetball. I play often and vigorously. What I worried about is that I sweat very bad only on my face. It becomes drenched. None of my friends has this problem. I don't sweat half as bad anywhere else. I wouldn't say I'm out of shape or overweight. I don't breathe heavily or get tired when I play. I only sweat tremendously on my face. Please help me. — S.B.

There are 2.5 million sweat glands in the body. Some of us have more than others. You notice more sweat on your face, either because you have more sweat glands there or because your gym clothes are absorbing sweat from your body so it is not as evident here as it is on your face. You are not abnormal. Just be sure to keep yourself well hydrated.

Sweating is the body's air-conditioning system. Marathoners' temperatures can climb to 102 during a run. To lose this heat, the sweat glands pour out water. As this evaporates on the skin, cooling takes place. In humid environments or with very strenuous exercise, evaporation may not keep pace with sweat production, and we begin to drip. All this is normal.

Dear Dr. Donohue: Is there a remedy to make hair grow faster than nature intends it to? Any advice would be deeply appreciated. I enclose some ads for hair growing medicines. — Mrs. E.M.

Hair may grow while taking anything, but there is a very important "if" involved. You hit on it in your letter with the phrase "faster than nature intends it to grow." Since much hair loss is of a temporary nature, regrowth is to be expected. Once the cause of the loss, an illness, for example, is eliminated, the hair grows back normally — as nature intended.

But if one happens to be taking a hair restorer product during the thin stage, it is difficult to argue that it had no effect on the expected thickening stage. This situation may account for many of the sincere testimonials for this or that hair restorer product. For confirmed baldies, neither restorers nor nature itself offers any help.

Dear Dr. Donohue: I hope you will help me with my problem. I used to play football at school, but no longer. The problem is my knee. It hurts a lot, and when I do consistent sprinting, it tends to swell and become weak, especially on the outside. Is there anything I can do to strengthen the knees? I want to try to further my football career. — H.J.

I would like to help you further your football career, too, so the first thing I'm going to tell you is that strengthening exercises are not the answer for you now.

Popping and swelling, and weakness on the outside of your knee, can indicate a derangement of the lateral meniscus, the small cushion of cartilage in the outer side of the knee joint. The ligaments there are another possible source of your problem. Strengthening the muscles will protect the knee, but what you need now is to be diagnosed and get treatment for your knee. The strengthening can come later. Sprinting is the worst thing you could be doing at this point.

In response to reader requests, Dr. Donohue's publisher now has a complete listing of all the booklets on various medical problems. Readers wishing this list can write Dr. Donohue, P.O. Box 11210, Chicago, Ill. 60611, enclosing a stamped, self-addressed envelope for return mailing.

Dr. Donohue welcomes reader mail but regrets that, due to the tremendous volume received daily, he is unable to answer individual letters. Readers' questions are incorporated in his column whenever possible.

City Serves Thundering Ovation To Bus Boys

By WILLIAM D. KERNS
A-J Entertainment Editor

Yet another one of those rare Events — and yes, the capital E is intentional — took place Thursday night at Rox as The Bus Boys made their second concert appearance at the rock and roll club in the span of four months.

It was a night during which talent was king and irony ruled as queen. After all, co-founder and keyboardist Brian O'Neal was in terrible voice (he was battling a cold), many vocals were unintelligible and the new material seemed even more new wavish than expected — and yet the spirit, the overall musicianship and all-out effort inspired a thundering response.

Indeed, that response just cannot be overlooked, as even the band appeared surprised at the adulation aimed its way. The dance floor was packed all night long and, by the end of the set, there was no open space left between the tables and stage. A wall of bodies crowded the stage, fans reaching out to band members, wanting to touch them, to shake their hands, simply to make contact. More stood on chairs and tables. The ovation was deafening.

A-J CLUB REVIEW

The Bus Boys were called back for an unprecedented four encores. Most of the crowd stuck around begging for a fifth, but the band declined, probably due to fatigue. (Brian O'Neal's throat was hurting so much that he asked his brother Kevin to fill in for a scheduled post-concert interview.)

The Bus Boys have earned an amazing amount of glowing press in the past three months — Time, The Wall Street Journal, Billboard, Playboy and a wheelbarrow full of newspapers have all applauded the band — and it's surprising the group hasn't let it affect their heads or their performances. With illness and self-confidence to fall back on, The Bus Boys could very well have given less than 100 per cent Thursday night in Lubbock, but instead all six played with the conviction and enthusiasm of a new group striving for recognition.

The familiar self-deprecatory humor was there, as well as the wild choreography and the satirical messages. In just 80 minutes, the band played every song off its excellent debut album, "Minimum Wage Rock And Roll," and quite a few off its next album, which bassist Kevin O'Neal later revealed will be released in mid-June.

Mind you, there were a few changes Thursday. Much more precedence was given to lead guitarist Victor Johnson, for one. Sure, there's little doubt some have been won over by the band's unique look and humor — five blacks and one Mexican-American making fun of race relations and social barriers — without really stopping to consider the musical talent which makes it work. But Johnson's playing couldn't be ignored Thursday, as it was both clean and insightful.

It was nice to see him granted more solo work.

Steve Felix (the lone Mexican-American in the band) was as solid as ever on percussion, Michael Jones' synthesizers often served as mood music for the strangely animated choreography, Brian O'Neal was a flurry of motion and tongue-wagging images (his voice problems may have ruined "Tell The Coach," but he proved he could still play with a soft keyboard solo later), and Kevin O'Neal actually made bass guitar seem like a lead, rather than rhythm, instrument at times.

As for Gus Loudermon, the small black Groucho Marx with the oversized suit and rubber limbs, his voice was in perfect form all night. He was everywhere on stage, too. Indeed, there are few rock performers I'd stand on a chair to see, but I wouldn't have missed Loudermon's dancing during "Johnny Soul'd Out" for anything.

The Bus Boys are an enigma of sorts just in achieving critical success as a rock and roll band. (Try naming black rock stars after Hendrix, and I guarantee you'll run into trouble.) But more evident Thursday was their new wave influence. Kevin O'Neal calls the group "definitely an '80s band," and by that he meant the musicians did not feel inclined to look backwards for influences. The Bus Boys are probably influenced as much by The Talking Heads as, say, The Coasters.

Mind you, Kevin's compositions — songs like "KKK" and "Respect" — are more evident of this fact, but Brian's "D-Day" and "We Stand United" strive for the same unorthodox, refreshing form.

Still, one is happy to see the potentially dangerous images used as a means of uniting audiences and erasing racial barriers. A new tune called "Monkey Mash" actually opened with the black band walking ape-like across the stage, and included lyrics like, "You can't look down on me/'cause we all used to swing from trees." Also present were the familiar strains of "Did You See Me" (with opening lyrics "Can I shine your shoes?"), "KKK" ("Wanna join the Ku Klux Klan/Play in a rock and roll band") and "There Goes The Neighborhood" ("The whites are moving in/They'll bring their next of kin")

The songs ridiculed, rather than promoted, prejudice, — and indeed, more blacks were in attendance, and joining in, at this show than the one given last November.

If one had to pick a highlight from the entire evening, though, it would undoubtedly be the band's version of The Rolling Stones' "Brown Sugar," played as the first encore. The play on the word "brown" is obvious of course, but more impressive was the fact The Bus Boys made it a totally rocking number which started people clapping and even singing along on the choruses.

Two encores later, the band played "Did You See Me," the autobiographical tune which included the lyrics, "You think it was hot in the shade?/I bet you never heard music like this by spades."

Maybe not. But it remains the undeniable fact that this sort of solid rock music, this sort of good time, is supplied all too infrequently by any band — black, white, green or polka-dotted — which makes The Bus Boys so popular. Gimmicks and humor may succeed for awhile (many swallowed The Knack, after all), but it takes real talent to make it to the top. The Bus Boys possess that kind of talent.

As long as they keep providing their unique minimum wage rock and roll, they'll be hard to stop.

'Boat Refugee' Relates Story Of Escape To U.S.

ODESSA (Special) — The months of terror that had gripped an 18-year-old Vietnamese "boat refugee" were no longer visible this week as Tan Pham chatted freely with teachers and students in his class at Odessa College.

Two years ago, he was a 16-year-old student in a Roman Catholic school in Saigon and was making plans to study for the priesthood.

Shortly after the Communists overran his school, Tan Pham made the painful decision to flee his country and his family.

He began saving his money for the chance — a chance with no guarantees — to hop a boat and escape to the United States.

Two years past his initial boat ride to freedom, Tan can relax and reflect on his motives for escape, and his need to return to Vietnam someday.

Tan, a student in Odessa College's adult basic education program, has found he's not alone in Odessa. Not only does he have a brother and an aunt and uncle here, but he has made other Vietnamese friends, An Tang and Hung Tang, brothers also enrolled at OC.

Stories of their freedom flights are similar. All involve large amounts of money — $1,000 to $2,000 — paid to Communist "boat owners" for the privilege of riding with more than 60 persons on a boat only 13 yards long. And there were days without food and water, existing on the hope that a West German boat or a ship from another friendly nation would rescue them.

Tan says he did not fear the boat ride because "most (of us) knew when we left there would be boats coming by."

The biggest fear faced daily by Tan and the Tang brothers was robbery by fishermen from Thailand. All three had heard tales concerning the escapades of the Thailanders, who were known to take the women and valuables from the tiny boats and leave the men to drown.

The weeklong boat ride was only the first phase in what turned out to be an endurance test for the freedom the Vietnamese people longed for so badly. Tan spent months in Singapore and Indonesia, while An and Hung lived in Malasia for a time, before they caught plane flights to America. Each man lived very meagerly during the interim between Vietnam and America, supported only by United Nations refugee commissions.

Tan, An, and Hung, don't view their adventures as extraordinary. Instead, each feels that reaching the United States is just a part of the long-term goals he has set.

All hope to return to their native country.

Tan plans to continue in the "English as a Second Language" classes at Odessa College until he masters the language enough to go into one of the college's high school equivalency programs. Later he hopes to enroll in regular classes here.

He has set his sights on an engineering degree. With that in hand, Tan still hopes to return to Vietnam as a priest and use his engineering knowledge to help his countrymen.

An and Hung plan to continue the English classes and also have enrolled in the college's machine shop program to learn skills they also hope to take back to Vietnam.

All say they're enjoying living in Odessa. Their food habits have altered slightly and Hung confesses he likes to go eat at McDonald's occasionally.

In Odessa, they've experienced their first sight of snow and a land of men and women who are much taller than they are.

While they are appreciative of the help and support they are receiving in America, all have a love of their homeland. All three still have many family members in Vietnam, including Hung's wife, who often has to wait three months for a letter from him.

They can't forget or desert Vietnam because the country holds too many memories, relatives and friends.

Reminiscing, Hung says sadly, but proudly, "It's still my country."

Redford Signs For Movie

TORONTO (AP) — Robert Redford has signed for the lead in a movie to be based loosely on the experiences of the man who will produce it — Canadian Robert Cooper.

REDFORD

Tentatively titled "Off the Record," it will deal with television's power and the life of a broadcaster, said Cooper, who for five years starred in the Canadian Broadcasting Corp. television series "Ombudsman."

Sherry Lansing, president of Twentieth Century-Fox, said Thursday that Cooper will produce and Steve Tesich, of the financially successful U.S. film "Breaking Away," will write the screenplay.

No filming date was set. Twentieth Century-Fox will finance it because no Canadian companies were interested, Cooper said.

He said the film will depict "the Dan Rathers of the world — our gunfighters and saviors of mankind today."

Owl Ruffles Troopers

SAN FRANCISCO (AP) — Two California Highway Patrolmen learned one thing the night they had to call for help to repossess their car — don't make an owl miss its dinner.

Officers Fred Metcalfe and Arthur Aqualino were driving their beat at midnight in Marin County north of San Francisco recently when a large owl hit their windshield and dropped the mouse it had planned to make a meal of.

That was when Metcalfe made his mistake — he stopped the car. The owl alighted on the hood, facing the officers.

Both officers got out of the cruiser and tried to shoo the bird away. They even retrieved the mouse, but the owl would not be moved.

"We have an owl on the hood," Metcalfe radioed a surprised dispatcher. "And boy is he mad! Please call the SPCA."

Soon an man from the Society for the Prevention of Cruelty to Animals came and gathered in the owl. He also took the dead mouse, in case the owl still wanted a snack later on.

Publisher Buys Reagan Check

NEW YORK (AP) — A $50 personal check dated Sept. 14, 1948 and made out to "Americans for Dem. Action" has brought $3,800 at auction.

FORBES

The donation to the liberal political group was from a liberal 33-year-old who turned conservative and became the nation's top Republican.

Publisher Malcolm Forbes purchased the check signed by Ronald Reagan.

The check was in good shape except for holes touching three letters of the signature "and other cancellation markings," said the auction program at Charles Hamilton Galleries of New York. "A controversial payee, and an interesting association item. This is the first Reagan check to appear at auction," it said.

Aardvark Queen Crowned

PHILADELPHIA (AP) — To the victor belonged an aardvark T-shirt, an aardvark pendant, and a calendar of aardvark holidays — and June Bell, who swept past her only opponent in the third annual Miss American Aardvark contest Friday, was thrilled.

"Oh, they're gorgeous," exclaimed Miss Bell, a sophomore honor student at Haverford High School.

Miss Bell, 15, pretended she was an 8-year-old reading an aardvark poem in the talent part of the competition, then humiliated her opponent in the art of aardvark calling.

Amy, a long-tailed, long-nosed specimen of the breed, found Miss Bell's summons irresistible, coming her way in 30 seconds.

Denise LaMar, 26, took 59 seconds to attract a blase Amy, which perked up only after the arrival of lunch, a pink mish-mash that was sucked up like a vacuum cleaner.

Miss Bell, a card-carrying member of the American Association of Aardvark Aficionadas, which sponsored the event, was crowned with a wreath of fresh daisies. The event marked the culmination of National Aardvark Week, celebrated every year by aardvark lovers during the first week of March.

Libel Suit Trial Delayed

LOS ANGELES (AP) — A jury trial for entertainer Carol Burnett's $5 million libel suit against the National Enquirer was delayed Friday because of clogged court calendars.

Attorneys for Miss Burnett and the Enquirer appeared in Los Angeles County Superior Court for assignment of a judge, but were told no one was immediately available to hear the case.

Superior Court Judge Harry Peetris told the lawyers they would be notified when a judge is available — probably Monday or Tuesday.

Miss Burnett's case would be the first in a growing number of legal actions against the Enquirer by celebrities who claim the publication libeled them.

The litigants include Phil Silvers, Paul Lynde, Shirley Jones and Marty Ingels, Ed McMahon and Rudy Vallee.

Peetris indicated Miss Burnett's case would be given priority because it already has waited five years to come to trial.

Attorney Barry Langberg, representing Miss Burnett, said the entertainer is determined to go ahead with her libel suit.

"She was defamed by an article they printed, and she felt very bad about it," said Langburg. "I think the article was libelous. She felt it was untrue, and she decided to bring suit."

Miss Burnett did not appear, but her attorney said she probably will be in court once the proceedings begin.

Banana Split Record Set

McMINNVILLE, Ore. (AP) — It took 200 bananas, 30 quarts of topping, 24 gallons of ice cream, seven cases of whipped cream and an unknown amount of chopped nuts, but 200 high school students staked a claim to the state banana split record Friday with a 101-foot creation.

The students, members of a McMinnville High School religious fellowship, used material donated by local businesses to claim the unofficial state mark.

The split was laid out in the school gymnasium and topped with a gallon of maraschino cherries.

Town's To Seek Foreign Aid

PRAIRIE DU CHIEN, Wis. (AP) — Mayor James Bittner says this village of 5,500 people will turn to foreign aid to ease the economic impact of the closing of its main artery — the U.S. 18 bridge over the Mississippi River.

The state of Wisconsin and the federal government cannot spare money to bail out the town, Bittner said.

"I picked Japan and West Germany because these are two fine countries. They're aggressive and seem to be working hard to keep things going," he announced Thursday.

"After World War II, we helped them a little bit. They're built back up now. Maybe they'll feel a little bit of compassion."

Pope Telegrams Cancer Victim

VANCOUVER, British Columbia (AP) — Pope John Paul II, in a telegram to the Roman Catholic Archdiocese of Vancouver, said he will add his prayers for the recovery of cancer victim Terry Fox, who took part in a cross-Canada cancer benefit run despite having just one leg.

TERRY FOX

"His Holiness ... wishes you to know of his prayer for Terry Fox during his present suffering," the telegram said. The pontiff learned of Fox's plight from Vanouver Archbishop James Carney during the recent papal visit to Anchorage, Alaska.

Fox was released Monday from Royal Columbian Hospital after a life-saving operation to drain fluid from his heart sac. Cancer tumors had surrounded his aorta, the main artery from the heart.

The 22-year-old, who lost the leg to cancer four years ago, was readmitted Feb. 20 suffering an adverse reaction to the experimental anti-cancer agent interferon.

Fox abandoned the east-to-west run Sept. 2 near Thunder Bay, Ontario when cancer reappeared in his lungs. More than $22 million has been pledged and donated to cancer research in Fox's name.

Tech Professor Given Texas Historical Society Honors

By GERRY BURTON
Avalanche-Journal Staff

Dr. Ernest Wallace, who inspired many students to research the past to benefit the future, Friday received the Leadership Award from the Texas State Historical Association.

The TSHA's highest honor was presented during the joint meeting of the association with the Historical Society of New Mexico in El Paso. It includes $1,000.

Funds for the award, which honors outstanding leadership in promoting understanding of the American way of life, are provided by the Texas Education Association of Fort Worth.

Leadership extending to a significant audience was a criterion of the award, which is not a writing or teaching honor. Current and continuing leadership was a major factor.

The award was the latest in a long line coming to Wallace, Horn Professor of History emeritus from Texas Tech whose main goal in life has been to turn young minds on to the lessons of history.

A first national honor came with his second of a dozen books, "The Comanches, Lords of the South Plains," which changed historians' approach to history and earned Wallace an international reputation.

A Ford Foundation Fellowship for post-doctorate study at Harvard University resulted for the book, which was named one of the "50 Books for '52" selected by the American Institute of Graphic Arts.

The same book, first to mix ethnology with fact, was named by the Southern Education Board as the most significant book-length university research study in the field of social sciences in the South.

From the Comanches, Wallace gained worldwide recognition again as the authority on the man who defeated the Comanche, Ranald S. Mackenzie of the U.S. Cavalry — subject of three Wallace books with another still in preparation.

Wallace, who ended his more than half a century of teaching with four decades at Tech, was named outstanding teacher of history by Phi Alpha Theta's Tech chapter in 1975, the year the history fraternity established the Ernest Wallace Scholarship in History.

In 1971, the West Texas Museum Association gave him the Action Award "four outstanding contributions to the enrichment and culture of the Great South Plains."

A significant research project never put into public print was a manuscript completed for the U.S. Justice Department in 1959 — "The Habitat and Range of the Kiowa, Comanche, and the Apache Indians Before 1867."

While at Tech, he also directed 40 theses and dissertations with three completed during retirement.

In 1979, he was called out of retirement (mandatory in 1976 when he reached age 70) to teach a 100-member class in history at Tech.

The textbook for that and other classes was "Texas: The Lone Star State" which Wallace wrote with R.N. Richardson and Adrian Anderson and has just revised for a third edition.

In addition to teaching duties at Tech, Wallace was director of summer school, 1945-49, and assistant dean of the School of Arts and Sciences, 1945-55.

He served as president of the West Texas Historical Association, 1951-52, and was co-editor of its yearbook, 1957-79, and in 1977-78 was president of the TSHA.

During retirement, he completed "The Howling of the Coyotes," the story of the boistrous Reconstruction attempt to divide Texas, and served as editor-consultant for two Time-Life books, "The Great Chiefs" and "The Texans."

DR. ERNEST WALLACE

Wallace also served as editor for 20 family short history books in the Founders Series at the Ranching Heritage Center at The Museum of Texas Tech University from 1977 to 1980.

He participated in many historical symposiums, from the International Symposium on Arid and Semi-Arid Lands at Tech to the Conference on Indain-White Relations in Washington, D.C., sponsored by the National Archives.

Wallace continues to receive plaudits for honors coming to the students he led into the paths of research in half a century, and more, as a pedagogue.

Cancer Society Provides Assistance To Patients

Interferon, chemotherapy, radiation — all are watchwords in the field of cancer prevention and treatment.

These terms may fall from the doctor's lips with ease, but often the cancer patient needs assistance in understanding the terms, understanding treatment and many times in dealing with the most basic questions in living with the disease.

The Service and Rehabilitation Committee of the American Cancer Society, Lubbock County Unit, is prepared to assist the cancer patient in all aspects of living with cancer, getting cured and helping others to achieve peace of mind.

According to Dr. Robert Bloom, Service and Rehabilitation Committee chairman, the purpose lies in "meeting every needs that the cancer patient has. In doing that, we serve them in providing emotional support, aid, free materials, advice and counseling and rehabilitation of the patient themselves." No matter what type of cancer they have or what their problem is, the cancer society can help rehabilitate them after treatment, the Lubbock dermatologist said.

The committee offers many services to the cancer patient, Bloom said, in all treatment. And the treatment is offered to all cancer patients.

"Almost all the money we raise in the crusade stays in Lubbock and the committee gets a large share of money to provide materials such as used hospital beds, wound dressings and to provide services so volunteers can provide for the cancer patient and families all the things they need in Lubbock," he said.

Bloom outlined the varied services provided in Lubbock by American Cancer Soviety volunteer.

• "I Can Cope," a new program, Bloom said, for helping patients and their families, to teach them how they can literally cope with problems they are having. "We teach them some basic information about cancer, about cancer treatments, therapy, the problems they can expect — family problems, friends, business. We teach from what other persons experiences are," he said.

• Reach to Recovery. After a cancer victim has a mastectomy, or even before, volunteers who have had mastectomies visit the patient give them materials and they are a little bit different than "I Can Cope," he said. "A Reach to Recovery volunteer is actually someone who has had cancer of the breast and can visit on a one-to-one basis with the patient," Bloom said.

• Can Surmount. Like Reach to Recovery, a volunteer is matched to a newly diagnosed patient with cancer and the local American Cancer Society tries to match the age, sex and type of cancer closely so the volunteer can relate to the new cancer patient. They can visit on a one-to-one basis and provide support to the new patient.

• Ostomey Visitation. The victim of bladder or colon cancers are visited, again, on a one-to-one support basis with ACS volunteer who has similar cancer and can relate to the new patient and help with the mechanics of some of the problem which arise.

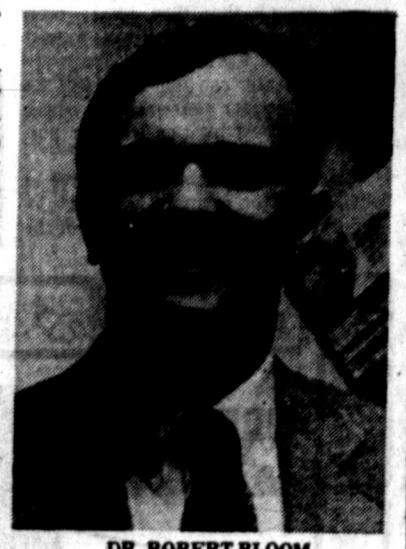
• Transportation. This program provides transportation for persons who are undergoing radiation therapy or chemotherapy if no one is available to take them back and forth to their treatment, Bloom said.

• Information Officers. Six volunteers act as Information Officers who answer questions phoned in and will refer the caller to the appropriate ACS committee or to various agencies in Lubbock who can provide services needed.

• Larengectomy Visitation. A larengectomy volunteer visits a newly diagnosed or a patient of recent surgery and discusses problems related to the speech with the patient.

"One of the big points in the larengectomy program," Bloom said, "is it an example to the patient of how well the volunteer could speak after having the larynx removed. That, of course, is the fear of larengectomy patients. The volunteers also can teach esophogeal speech to the patient at no cost."

Bloom said the committee has done a variety of expansion during the past year, including "I Can Cope," which will begin in April; Can Surmount, which is less than a year old; and the Osptomy Visitation started up again this year.



DR. ROBERT BLOOM
Cancer Society committee chairman

"In the last year we have expanded a lot. Right now we are going out to get the new programs firmly established and once we have those working smoothly, we will expand our realm of services, trying to reach more people," he said.

In addition, Bloom said, to help this expansion, a new system was developed. "The American Cancer Society is the only number you have to know. All you have to do is call up and ask whatever you want to know or ask for whatever you need and they will refer you to the person who is respoinsible for that area.

"It will make it easier because the caller will not have to know who he wants, like Reach to Recovery, before she calls. Anything related to cancer, all they have to do is call the cancer society and they will refer them to the right person," he said.

For further information about cancer or the Service and Rehabilitation Committee call the ACS Area one office at 794-5808.

Pat Boone to host telethon

PAT BOONE with Colleen Finn, this year's Easter Seal child

The 20-hour telethon, to air March 28 and 29 on more than 130 stations across the country, is expected to reach a record viewing audience of more than 40 million people. Since it began in 1972, the telethon has raised more than $52 million to fund Easter Seal services for the disabled.

"It's a thrill for me to do the Easter Seal telethon," Boone said, "because I've admired the work of this organization for many years. We have some exciting plans for making this show truly unique in the history of telethons."

Boone's popularity stands out in the entertainment industry, which is noted for the short tenure of many of its stars. He has remained among the top three of the recording stars whose careers stretch back to the the rock 'n' roll era. He has sold more than 45 million records and starred in 15 movies.

In the mid-1950s Boone hosted "The Pat Boone Chevy Showroom" and was the youngest performer on TV with his own network show. Since then, the whole Boone clan has been featured in several family television specials. Papa Boone has been instrumental in his daughter Debby's show-biz education.

In 1979 Boone was honored with the Israel Cultural Award, Israel's highest award given to a non-native in recognition of artistry and humanitarianism.

Hardy boy races in Africa

Parker Stevenson

KENYA - Actor Parker Stevenson, who starred for three years in "The Hardy Boys" TV series, will be the first celebrity ever to compete in the 3,200-mile Safari Rallye in Kenya, Africa, April 3 to 7.

Stevenson has been practicing in Los Angeles and will arrive in Africa to run the course before the actual race. He will navigate and co-drive a Mercedes 450 SLC with Joginder Singh, chief driver and a past winner of the event.

Stevenson, who holds both IMSA (United States) and FIA (international) competitive racing licenses, has also attended a professional race-driving school. He has entered several road races; the Safari will be his first rally.

The Safari Rallye, with approximately 75 entries, runs 3,200 grueling miles through the Kenyan back country and is considered one of the most difficult contests of its kind.

Stevenson's participation will be filmed by ABC for future airing as an "American Sportsman" special.

Hedge Plants Often Provide Help To Homeowners

Whether you want to hide an unsightly telephone pole, define your property boundary, keep out unwanted visitors, or control the wind currents around your home, there is a hedge to meet the need.

To many people the term "hedge" brings to m ind a neat, formal mass of green requiring constant pruning to keep in shape. Acutally, hedges can have a soft, feathery, informal appearance as well. Some grow into a dense thicket, barely penetrable; others remain open to allow light and air through. Many are distinguished by brightly colored fruit or flowers, or changing colors with the seasons.

According to the American Association of Nurserymen, the best choice for year-round screening and climate control is an evergreen hedge. On the other hand, deciduous hedges (those that lose their leaves in winter) are generally less expensive, grow faster and are often hardier than their evergreen cousins.

Fall berries are provided by such varieties as American cranberry, Japanese barberry and cotoneaster. For flowers you might select forsythia, rose of Sharon, hydrangea, flowering quince or spirea. Among plants that have such think, twiggy growth that they screen even without leaves are Amur privet, winged euonymus and lilacs. Your local nursery or garden center can help you select the proper variety for your area and advise you on the best location for your purpose.

Evergreen trees that are to serve as windbreaks, for example, should be located on the north or west sides of the house at a distance from the house of four to six times the height of the windbreak. Tests have shown that such windbreak plantings can provide a 10-30 percent savings in winter fuel consumption.

ENMU Students Win National Video Competition

PORTALES (Special) — Four Eastern New Mexico University students have won national honors in the First Annual JVC National Video Competition in New York City.

The nationwide competition involved undergraduate, graduate and art school students of video and film. Eastern won two of nine awards among 300 nationl entries.

Albuquerque junior Rick Murray, Santa Fe senior Barb Maier, Clovis senior Jana Stanfield and Roswell senior Christy Murphy will be flown, all-expenses paid, to New York City March 26 to receive their awards. All are communication majors at ENMU.

Murray, Miss Stanfield and Miss Murphy produced a 20-minute docdocumentary, "PM New Mexico," featuring three aspects of life in the Southwest. Miss Stanfield produced a segment called "Neighboring," which focused on a branding operation on the John Clemmon's ranch south of Elida.

"Mike," a segment produced by Murray, told the courageous story of Portales High School football star Mike Gonzales, who lost both of his hands in a farming accident last summer. Miss Murphy produced a segment called "Jimmy's Cafe," a profile of a local restaurant owned by Jimmy Perkins which is being torn down to be replaced by a supermarket.

All three "PM New Mexico" features won first place in the television documentary division.

Miss Maier's feature described Farwell snakehunter Gerald Curtis as he set out to round-up rattlesnakes on a ranch west of Elida. "Snakeman" won second place in the news feature category.

In addition to the national awards, the JVC Corporation has announced it is donating $10,000 worth of video equipment to Eastern in order to allow other students to compete in future competition.

Outdoor Theater Plans Afoot

A-J Correspondent

CLOVIS, N.M — Hopes of the New Mexico Outdoor Drama Association to establish an amphitheatre south of San Jon may soon become a reality.

A bill seeking appropriations for the construction will come before the New Mexico Legislature soon. The $2.5 million of funding already has been set aside for development of a state park but needs legislative approval to be directed to this particualr project.

At a recent meeting of the association in Clovis, N.M., Dr. Elwyn Crume showed slides of what has been accomplished and explained the amphitheatre project's purpose.

The land for the theater was given to the association some time ago and plans have been drawn for the theater which will be located on the canyon rim. It will seat ,200 spectators.

The site is located on State Highway 39 with a breath-taking 40-mile view of the Canadian River Valley.

The theater will bring to life the story of the rich dramatic heritage to be found in New Mexico. It will provide a tremendous cultural opportunity for area residents and visitors from out of state.

Plans call for the Drama Deprtment of Eastern New Mexico University to stage and direct the plays there.

The theater will have a 60-day run during the summer and would be used year round for special occasions.

Area residents are being asked to underwrite $125,000 in funds to pay for the first year of production.

New Rattlesnake Book Premiers Just Ahead Of Annual Roundup

venom.

The non-profit institute, Kilmon explained, is cooperating with other institutes on the Western diamondback rattlesnake venom. It is nearing the point where it can publish findings in its own research project.

Venom, Kilmon noted, mimics a number of diseases for which there is no known cure. Studying a controllable situation induced by venom could bring the answer for these as it has in instances in the past.

Cobra venom, for instance, is being used in research concerning the human body's rejection of organ transplants. Venom, particularly plant venom, has figured in a number of cures discovered in the past, Kilmon stressed.

And he added that while plant venom is a single poison, snake venom is a more complex combination of 100 poisons, each with a special role in what normally will be an attack on the body.

Current research is concerned with separating the poisons and determining the effect of each on the body cells. "Without snake venoms as tools to understand how nerve cells work, study would be 20 years behind what it is now."

Included in the Sweetwater program is a 24-hour venom information and consultation service which receives calls from as far away as South America seeking information as to treatment in specific cases.

Individual makeup of each person determines of treatment, Kilmon said, explaining two persons can be bitten by the same snake and have different symptoms, need different approaches in dealing with the poisons.

The institute supplies hospitals with information, according to compiled research, on what is apt to happen to a person of a certain weight, age, physical condition, sex and other consideratios when that person is bitten by a particular venomous animal. It forwards the treatment information recommended by experts for the individual set of circumstances.

While other venomous animals and insects are kept in the institute for venom harvesting, there are between 500 and 1,000 snakes, mostly rattlesnakes, on hand at any given time.

Harvesting of rattlesnake venom at the Sweetwater roundup is termed "milking" for the crowd with all snakes brought in, from local hunts or from other sections of the state, "milked" during the roundup.

Begun and continued as a way to control the rattlesnake population, the roundup has evolved into a matter of total use of the rattlesnake — venom for research, snakeskin for belts and buckles and other things, rattles and heads for trophies and the meat for cooking.

For a number of years the entrails were wasted, but now a group of Oriental researchers are paying $5 a pound for that portion.

Venom from the March 13-15 roundup will be frozen almost immediately, like all institute venom, at 100 degrees below zero, then freeze dried for shipment to research laboratories in many parts of the globe.

While the roundup is conducted as a crowd-pleasing happening during for the thousands of visitors to Sweetwater, safety lessons from Ransberger last long after the thrill of the snake show is gone.

City Nurserymen Get Certification

Two Lubbock nurserymen have earned the title Texas Certified Nurseryman, the Texas Association of Nurserymen has announced.

Certification requires passing a four-part exam covering identification of plants, plant pathology, use of chemicals, landscaping and marketing techniques.

The Texas Association of Nurserymen initiated the certification program in 1976 to provide a well-trained nucleus of professional nursery employees, to provide a means of policing their own ranks and to improve service to nursery customers. In the past five years, 1,046 nurserymen have been certified.

Legislator Opposed Proposed State College Tuition Hike

By MARY ALICE ROBBINS
Avalanche-Journal Staff

State Rep. Froy Salinas Friday voiced strong opposition to a proposed 100 percent hike in tuition for state colleges and universities, saying the increase would hurt low-and middle-income students and would create "unfair competition" among state-supported schools.

However, Salinas predicted that legislators will pass at least a minimal increase in college tuition during this session.

A proposal to double tuition at state colleges and to raise it 400 percent at medical schools has drawn the support of Gov. Bill Clements.

At a news conference Thursday, Clements noted that tuition to Texas colleges and universities has not been increased in a decade. And he claimed the hike would not prevent any student with a high school diploma from getting a college education.

Salinas, who represents voters in the eastern half of Lubbock, disagreed with the governor's assessment.

"The increase would virtually eliminate the middle-income and lower-income people from our universities eventually," he said.

The proposed 400 percent hike in med school tuition would definitely keep students from lower income families from obtaining a medical education, the local legislator said.

Salinas also criticized the tuition hike proposal because it would not affect students attending either the University of Texas or Texas A&M University.

"That's why I come unglued," he said.

Both UT and A&M are guaranteed sufficient operating monies through the Permanent University Fund that was established in the Texas Constitution, Salinas noted. He said the two universities claim they don't need a tuition increase because they have the PUF money.

According to Salinas, the proposed tuition increase would be discriminating against those students who want to go to other state-supported institutions, such as Texas Tech University, the University of Houston or any other.

Raising the costs of education at all the other schools also would give UT and A&M an unfair advantage in the competition for students, he said.

Salinas said other legislators he has talked with have indicated they would favor a 10-12 percent hike in tuition. That much of an increase probably would help tremendously to offset the state's costs for higher education, he added.

"If we have to do it as a last resort," Salinas said, "I might go along with as much as a 15 percent increase."

Salinas also cited his opposition to a proposed 5-cent increase in the state's gasoline tax.

"Gasoline is going up enough without adding 5 cents to the tax," he said. "I think we should look for ways of cutting spending rather than trying to impose a new tax on the people of the state."

The Lubbock lawmaker said he recently introduced a bill that would exempt cities, counties and school districts from payment of the gas tax.

Under the current system, Salinas said, school districts must pay the state the 5-cent gasoline tax. Then the state turns around and sends the school districts money to pay for the tax, he said.

Salinas estimated that his proposal could provide around $10 million in tax relief to Texas residents. Locally, he said, that would mean about $100,000 that the city, county and school system would not have to spend on the gas tax.

The amount of relief may not sound like a whole lot, Salinas said. But, he added, it would mean about $100,000 less that the local jurisdictions would have to raise from local taxpayers.

Tanzanians Facing Death From Famine

DAR ES SALAAM, Tanzania (AP) — Western diplomats Friday confirmed Tanzanian President Julius Nyerere's warning that thousands of Tanzanians face death from famine and that the country has no foreign exchange with which to import food.

In a nationwide address Thursday Nyerere said that because of drought, 6 million to 8 million Tanzanians are facing famine this season and "if the situation continues like this next year, many Tanzanians will die."

Nyerere who is on an emergency fact-finding tour of the country's hardest-hit regions around Lake Victoria, appealed to Tanzanians to plant quickly drought-resistant crops.

"Nyerere was speaking of famine for the first time ever," one Western diplomat said.

"There is not famine now, but there will be in two or three months, after the next harvest has failed," one agricultural expert said.

Squatters Ransack Nuremberg Streets

NUREMBERG, West Germany (AP) – More than 170 squatters ransacked stores and vandalized cars along Nuremberg city streets, then occupied an empty building Friday before police took them into custody, authorities said.

After hours of negotiations, the squatters agreed to leave the building and police said they would be accused of disturbing the peace.

In Nuremberg, a in other parts of West Germany, squatters have occupied empty buildings in recent weeks to protest a shortage of affordable apartments.

Murder Defense To Enter Deposition

By KIM COBB
Avalanche-Journal Staff

Defense attorneys for capital murder defendant Odus Rogers Friday said they will attempt to prove in his trial that the shooting death of Southwest Lubbock housewife Brenda Diane Igo was not a capital murder because Mrs. Igo's husband had given Rogers and co-defendant Arthur Flores permission to be in Igo's home where the shooting occurred.

District Judge John McFall Friday granted a motion by Rogers' attorneys to take the deposition of John Igo for use in the trial of the men accused of murdering his wife.

Attorney Mike Brown argued in 237th District Court Friday morning that Igo has information relevant to the guilt or innocence of Rogers which is necessary for him and defense attorney David Bass to use in future pre-trial hearings and for cross-examination purposes.

Rogers, 28, and Flores, 31, are charged with the Oct. 27 shooting death of Mrs. Igo, who was killed when she apparently surprised intruders who were burglarizing her home at 5519 75th St. Police say the intruders fled without finding what they had expected would total about $35,000, leaving Mrs. Igo — shot three times — to die in a neighbor's driveway.

Under Texas law, Mrs. Igo's death would constitute a capital murder only if her death resulted in the course of a burglary. If the defense can prove that Rogers and Flores had permission to be in the Igo home, the issue of capital murder may be stricken.

McFall denied a motion to disqualify Criminal District Attorney John T. Montford and his entire staff from prosecuting the case, since Montford was a potential witness in the case. Montford, however, disqualified himself from acting as prosecutor.

It was during Brown's questioning of Montford on the witness stand about his involvement in the case that he further addressed Igo's alleged dealings with Rogers and Flores.

In asking Montford about his investigation of the murder, Brown questioned the district attorney about whether he had studied possible connections between Igo and the crime. Assistant District Attorney Mary Ann Wiley objected to the question and her objection was sustained by McFall.

McFall denied the defense's motion to disqualify Montford and his staff from prosecuting the case after Montford, first assistant District Attorney Jim Bob Darnell and assistant district attorney David Hazlewood testified as to their participation in the investigation.

Montford told the court he had already agreed not to prosecute the case personally because, even though he did not anticipate being called as a witness, he wanted to avoid the appearance of impropriety.

Montford was present when Rogers was arrested, he testified, and was also present when a shoe matching one found at the scene of the shooting was discovered.

McFall told the attorneys participating in Friday morning's hearing that he was satisfied with Montford's self-imposed personal disqualification and that disqualification of his entire staff was not necessary.

NEW YORK (AP) — The stock market finished with little change Friday as the government reported small improvements in inflation and unemployment but President Reagan warned there is no "instant cure" for the economy and his labor secretary said more Americans will lose their jobs.

The Dow Jones average of 30 industrial stocks, down slightly for most of the day, recovered and closed unchanged at 964.62, leaving the average down 9.96 for the week.

Reagan, at an afternoon news conference, announced plans for a ceiling on federal employment that he said will save $1.3 billion. He repeated his assertion that proposed tax cuts will not cause inflation.

The Labor Department reported that producer prices rose 0.8 percent in February, down from an 0.9 percent hike in January, and said rapidly rising energy costs were partly offset by declining food prices.

Unemployment dropped from 7.4 percent in January to 7.3 percent, the lowest rate since last April. But Labor Secretary Raymond Donovan said he expects the average rate for the year to be 7.8 percent, reflecting planned cutbacks in public service jobs.

Reagan said he did not expect to see any more than the beginning signs of economic recovery in the next year, but that progess should be apparent by the fall of 1982.

After the market closed, the Federal Reserve reported the nation's money supply declined in the latest week. Interest rates were lower in the bond markets, reflecting the money supply and prodcer price reports.

In the stock market, Amax was the big winner, up 19¾ to 58 after Standard Oil of California said it wants to buy Amax for $78.50 or more. Socal was down 2⅞ to 85¼.

With Socal offering a large premium for one metal producer, other metal companies were also marked up. Asarco rose 1⅛ to 36, Kennecott climbed ⅜ to 25⅝ and Phelps Dodge rose 1⅜ to 35⅝.

Oil issues were active and generally lower after suffering sharp drops the prior day. Mobil fell 1⅞ to 63⅝ as the most active stock on the Big Board. Texaco lost ⅜ to 37½, Atlantic Richfield was down 1⅝ to 53, Gulf lost 1 to 36⅛ and Exxon was down ⅝ to 69.

At the American Stock Exchange, Gulf Canada was the most active stock, down ⅜ to 20⅜.

Consolidated Freightways, which agreed to sell its manufacturing assets to Daimler-Benz, was up 2¾ to 38½. Schering Plough, which earlier said it expects "modest" growth this year, fell 1⅜ to 35¼.

Forecasts of lower earnings hurt Cone Mills, down 2⅝ to 34⅜, and Allis-Chalmers, off ¾ to 30½. Houston Natural Gas fell 1¾ to 47⅛ despite a dividend boost and higher profits.

Thompson Medical, which agreed to be acquired by Revlon, rose 4¼ to 24⅜. Revlon dipped ⅝ to 43½.

Volume on the Big Board totaled 43.94 million shares, down from 45.38 million shares the prior day.

The NYSE's composite average of common stocks fell .05 to 74.46. Standard & Poor's average of 400 industrials was down .10 to 147.32 and S&P's composite average of 500 stocks was down .08 to 129.85.

At the Amex, the market value index was up .09 to 336.66.

Dollar Turns In Mixed Showing On World Markets

NEW YORK (AP) — The dollar turned in a mixed showing in late New York foreign exchange trading Friday after recording modest gains against most currencies earlier in the day in Europe and Japan.

Gold prices were higher overseas and virtually unchanged in the United States. A dealer said the precious metal's price "went higher for practically no reason" early in the day in New York but then "collapsd in the last half-hour" of trading on profit-taking before the weekend.

Gold for current delivery closed unchanged at $464 an ounce on New York's Commodity Exchange Inc. and was quoted up $1 at $466 an ounce at Republic National Bank of New York. The precious metal's value also rose $1 in Zurich, to $464.50, and gained $7.50 in London to $470.75.

Silver rose 3 cents to $11.73 an ounce on the Comex and gained 20 cents to $11.85 in London.

On currency markets, dealers said the dollar lost some ground on news that the U.S. producer price index rose 0.8 percent in February following an 0.9 percent gain in January. Dealers said the gain might indicate inflation was not accelerating and that interest rates may fall.

A $1.3 billion drop in the broadly measured U.S. money supply also caused some weakness late in the session due to speculation that the recent interest-rate decline would continue.

Dealers said European currency markets were uneasy over the possible outcome of a central bankers' conference scheduled for Basel, Switzerland, next week, and the announcement of the British budget next Tuesday.

The British pound, meanwhile, lost ground after the government anounced it was lowering its estimates of North Sea oil production for 1981 through 1984.

The pound fell to $2.1863 from Thursday's $2.2008 in New York, and dropped to $2.1930 from $2.20375 in London.

The dollar was quoted in New York at 2.1308 West German marks, down from 2.1385 Thursday; 5.0250 French francs, down from 5.0395; 1.9550 Swiss francs, up from 1.9495; 209.04 Japanese yen, down from 209.43; and 1.1997 Canadian dollars, down from 1.2009.

Late European dollar rates included 2.1410 marks, up from 2.1330; 1.9620 Swiss francs, up from 1.94525; 5.0275 French francs, down from 5.0350; 2.37125 Dutch guilders, up from 2.36125; and 1,036.875 Italian lire, up from 1,031.50.

More Purolator Money Found

PHILADELPHIA (AP) — Police have recovered another $272,100 of the $1.2 million that fell from a Purolator Armored Services Inc. truck in south Philadelphia last week, officials said.

The latest batch of recovered cash — in $100 bills — was discovered about dawn Thursday in a brown paper bag in the rear of Old Swedes' Church, where it had been dropped off, officials said.

Detectives had received an anonymous tip on the money's location.

Authorities now have recovered $988,000, and are continuing to search for the balance.

Meanwhile, Joseph Coyle, 28, the longshoreman accused of scooping up the money when it fell out of the armored truck in two canvas bags last Thursday, faced an extradition hearing in New York Friday.

He has been charged by federal authorities with unlawful flight to avoid prosecution.

He was arrested at Kennedy International Airport in New York on Wednesday as he prepared to board a plane to Mexico.

FBI agents said he had $105,000 in $100 bills stuffed in his boots. Philadelphia authorities have charged him with theft, receiving stolen property and conspiracy.

Also taken into custody was Francis Santos, 26, of Sicklerville, N.J.

Lubbock Businessman, Owner Of Club Charged In Bribery

By EVIE DAVIS
Avalanche-Journal Staff

An east Lubbock businessman and the owner of what authorities say is a "known after-hours club" each were charged with bribery Friday afternoon after they allegedly offered a Lubbock County sheriff's investigator $100 a month in exchange for advance raid information.

Authorities said investigator Alton Hobbs first refused the alleged bribe and then accepted it at a staged secret meeting. Hobbs predictied "there will be a reaction" on Lubbock's eastside to the arrests.

Dillard Harris of 1506 E. Second St. and T.V. Biscoe, 64, of 2708 E. 10th St. were arrested at 3:30 p.m. Friday after a surveillance team of sheriff's deputies, state narcotics agents and the Texas Rangers recorded audibly and visually an 11:30 a.m. transaction with Hobbs at the amusement section of MacKenzie Park.

Hobbs said he received a telephone call several weeks ago from a man who offered to pay him $100 a month if the sheriff's investigator would notify the owner of a nightclub of impending raids. Hobbs added he believes the caller and his friend "would have gone up (in payment amount) if I had insisted."

"I told him I wasn't interested and I hung up (the telephone)," Hobbs said. "Then I got to thinking about it and I decided I'd see how far they'd go (to make an arrest possible)."

Hobbs said he visited the eastside business of one of the suspects, The White Stallion, about once a week begining three weeks ago, "negotiating" with the telephone caller. An appointment for the first payment was made for Friday morning after Hobbs met with Sheriff D.L. "Sonny" Keesee and Criminal District Attorney John Montford.

State agents ran wires underneath Hobbs' clothing in order to plant a transmitter on him to gather evidence that he was bribed. In addition, agents were stationed at strategic locations to photograph the transaction.

Warrants for the arrests of the two suspects were issued at 2:50 p.m. Friday, and the men, arrested shortly thereafter, were arraigned at 3:50 p.m. in Justice of the Peace Wayne LeCroy's court. The suspects were booked at the Lubbock County Jail on suspicion of bribery and both were released on $10,000 bonds each Friday night.

Hobbs said he believes the owner of the east county nightclub, who lost approximately $3,000 in legal fees and bonds after a raid on his business last November, possibly asked the other suspect, the owner-operator of an East Lubbock convenience store, to offer the deputy the bribe.

"I used to go in there (the convenience store) all the time to buy cigarettes, Cokes and things, and we'd always make small talk," Hobbs said, adding that probably prompted the man to trust Hobbs in the bribery deal.

"I've been with this office for 15 years and this is the first time I've ever been offered a bribe," Hobbs said.

STOPPED COLD — Two Lubbock men accused of offering Sheriff's Investigator Alton HObbs, right, monthly payments in return for advance raid information approach the bench of Justice of the Peace Wayne LeCroy Friday during their arraignments. T.V. Biscoe and Dillard Harris both were charged with bribery and LeCroy set their bonds at $10,000 each. They were released from jail Friday night after posting the bonds. FREEDOM IS SWEET — Aaron Owens, wrongfully convicted of a double murder for which he served more than eight years in California's San Quentin prison, holds hands with his daughters, Evangela, 14, left, and Latonya, 13, as he leaves an Alameda Count court Friday — a free man. (AP Laserphoto)

Wrongfully Convicted Prisoner Released

OAKLAND, Calif. (AP) — Aaron Lee Owens walked to freedom Friday, aided by the man who had prosecuted him, after a case of mistaken identity put him in a prison cell for almost nine years for two murders he didn't commit.

Owens, appearing stunned but happy at his hard-won freedom, was embraced by his family as he walked from Alameda County Superior Court Judge Alan Lindsay's jammed courtroom.

"I'm not going to spend much time with you people," he told a group of reporters. "I'm free!"

Owens said his bitterness at spending almost nine years behind bars didn't extend "to the point of hostility."

"I'm not mad at anybody," he said.

However, he said that during his prison years he repeatedly had been reminded of the murders.

"That hurt me deeply," he said. "That's something I'll never forget."

Owens added, "All I ever wanted was for someone to listen to me but no one did until a year ago."

Lindsay, before freeing Owens, told him, "If you were wrongly convicted, we cannot repay your loss. But human institutions, like human beings, fall far short of perfection."

Owens went to former Assistant Alameda County District Attorney John Taylor — the man whose prosecution sent him to prison — last November to plead his case after he was denied parole. He convinced Taylor that the state had convicted an innocent man, and Taylor set out to reverse the conviction.

With the help of a district attorney's investigator, Taylor, now in private practice, pieced together the series of unhappy coincidences that led to Owens' wrongful conviction.

Owens, 37, had insisted he was buying Mother's Day flowers on May 13, 1972, when Marie Collins and Stanley Bryant were gunned down, but his only witnesses were family members and a florist who couldn't remember him. The trial jury found Owens and Glenn Bailey guilty of first-degree murder. Authorities said they believed the case was drug-related and that the two men were known associates in drug deals.

Owens had been previously convicted on gun possession charges.

In 1979, however, Bailey said Owens was not involved in the murders. Last November, he identified the man who actually was with him. That man, authorities say, bears a striking resemblance to Owens. Police are searching for the third man, whose identity was not immediately available.

"I hoped and prayed this day would come," said Owen's wife, Barbara, 33, prior to his release. "Thank God it's over."

Aerospace Scientist Charged With Air Piracy

LOS ANGELES (AP) — A 44-year-old aerospace scientist was charged with one count of air piracy Friday following an 11-hour standoff at Los Angeles International Airport in which a gunman demanded money and threatened to blow up a Continental Airlines jet.

No bail was set for Victor Malasauskas, and no plea was entered during his arraignment before U.S. Magistrate John R. Kronenberg.

But Malasauskas's lawyer Daye Shinn said his client will plead innocent by reason of diminished capacity.

"He recalls getting on the plane, but he doesn't remember anything after that," said Shinn. "He just blacked out."

A preliminary hearing was set for March 16, and Malasauskas, who Shinn said holds a doctorate in physics from the University of Rochester, N.Y., was remanded to the custody of the U.S. marshal.

In arguing for bail, Shinn said, "No one was injured. The defendant did cooperate fully with the FBI."

But Assistant U.S. Attorney Robert Brewer countered that "Eleven hours of negotiation and threats to detonate a bomb are not cooperation. The potential for disaster was very great."

Malasauskas, a naturalized American, allegedly got a 9mm pistol through a "loophole" in airport security Thursday morning to board a Continental Airlines jet bound for Phoenix.

"We know the loophole but for obvious reasons we cannot disclose it," said FBI agent John Hoos. "We will notify the appropriate authorities so that they may take whatever measures are necessary."

Malasauskas, apparently despondent after losing his job a day earlier, allegedly took over the Boeing 727 at the airport for 11 hours, demanding $3 million before surrendering at 8:20 p.m. after his last hostage escaped, FBI agents said.

"He indicated he needed money and threatened to blow up the aircraft and himself" almost immediately after taking it over, said FBI agent Edgar Best.

No shots were fired and no one was injured during the incident, which ended with the burly hijacker walking off the plane with his hands in the air. No explosives were found.

Best said Malasauskas, 44, of Marina del Rey, Calif., was a naturalized U.S. citizen of Lithuanian descent.

Malasauskas told agents that he had just lost his job Wednesday, Best said. He may have been employed by an airline, but agents were uncertain of details. He was not an employee of Continental, said spokesman John Clayton.

Until late January, Malasauskas had been employed at Jet Propulsion Laboratory, a sprawling research facility with 5,000 employees in the foothills of Pasadena, above Los Angeles.

Elementary School Holds Circus Dress-Up Event

By LISA PAIKOWSKI
Avalanche-Journal Staff

The circus came to town Friday at Wheelock Elementary School, where student had class under the big top and dressed in costumes Barnum and Bailey would envy.

Led by Wheelock principal Charles Johnson in full ringmaster regalia, teachers and students were transformed into clowns, bears, sideshow performers and highwire daredevils clad in spangled leotards and capes. Friday was circus dress-up day, the culmination of the "Under the Big Top Theme" selected for Texas Public Schools Week.

But the biggest attractions were the three "big tops" — three parachutes attached to the ceiling and walls of the school's multi-purpose room. There, when the excitement was not too much to handle, students exhibited an unusual enthusiasm in their class activities, teachers reported.

"We found the children are much more involved in their lessons," said Title I reading teacher Betty Anderson, who helped spearhead the circus day project. The circus atmosphere "really enhances their attitude; they participate more and feel freer."

The students pursued their regular lessons in math, reading and music under the big top, but teachers also "really wanted the kids to enjoy it," said Mickey Gowler, co-chairperson for the activity.

The youngsters seemed to be fulfilling their teachers' hopes.

LONGHORNS STUN RAZORBACKS

Coogs End Frogs' Dreams

By The Associated Press

SAN ANTONIO — Center Larry Micheaux scored 24 points and guard Rob Williams added 17 Friday night to propel the Houston Cougars into the Southwest Conference post-season tournament championship game with a 73-53 victory over Cinderella Texas Christian.

The Texas Longhorns earlier pulled off the biggest shock of the tournament by upsetting No. 15 ranked Arkansas 76-73 behind freshman guard Ray Harper's career high 22 points.

TCU, which finished the year 11-18, had advanced to the semifinals by upsetting Texas A&M and Baylor University.

However, the Horned Frogs were no match for the inside muscle of the 6-foot, 9-inch Micheaux and the Cougars' Williams, who was held 8 points below his season average.

Houston led only 33-30 at halftime as the Horned Frogs displayed a tenacious zone defense. Backup guard Jeff Baker came off the bench to keep TCU in the game until midway through the second half and finished with 14 points.

With Houston leading 45-42 with 11:25 in the game, Cougars coach Guy Lewis ordered a four-corner spread offense and it quickly paid off with numerous layups as the trailing Horned Frogs were caught trying to make steals.

Houston outscored TCU 26-6 after they went into the spread offense, with Micheaux getting three slam dunks during the spree.

The Cougars will carry a 20-8 record into the championship finals at 8:10 p.m. Saturday night, against the Longhorns, who beat Arkansas for the first time in this 6th annual tournament.

Houston did a good job of holding down high-scoring guard Darrell Browder, who only made one bucket in the second half and finished with just 11 points.

Harper, who was the most heavily-recruited guard in Kentucky last year out of tiny Breman High School, scored a career high 22 points as the Longhorns overcame early jitters to shock the Razorbacks, who had won 11 consecutive games.

Texas overcame an early 10-point deficit to grab a 50-39 lead at halftime over the regular season SWC champion Razorbacks, who are now 22-7 and hoping for an NCAA at-large berth.

Texas shot 73 percent from the field in the first half, but the Razorbacks came out blazing in the second half, scoring 10 straight points behind center Scott Hastings and guard U.S. Reed.

Arkansas took the lead 63-62 on back-to-back stuff shots by reserve guard Darrell Walker.

Hastings replied with a baket, but Harper made his two clutch free throws and Carson sneaked behind the Arkansas press for the killing layup.

Texas, now 15-14, was led in scoring by center LaSalle Thompson, who had 23 points, 21 of those coming in the first half when he was virtually unstoppable.

Reed scored 18 for the Razorbacks and Hastings added 17.

A crowd of 13,214 fans witnessed Texas' first ever victory over the Razorbacks in SWC post season play.

Texas shot 64 percent from the field to outgun the Razorbacks, who shot a creditable 59 percent.

"I wish I hadn't sold my tickets for tomorrow night's final game," quipped Texas coach Abe Lemons after the victory over Arkansas, favored by five points.

Turning serious, Lemons said, "We almost played ourselves out in the first half, but all of a sudden, we just got revved up."

"I gave up a couple of times, and then it looked like they did. . . it's about time we beat Arkansas in this tournament."

Harper, who stands only 5 feet, 10 inches, but gives the Longhorns tremendous quickness, said "I was real tired in the first half, but coach Lemons gave me some rest and I got my game together. This is one of the great wins for us, to beat Arkansas."

Arkansas was victimized by its own stall, which the Razorbacks tried with a 1-point lead late in the game. Texas converted two steals into four points off the stall.

"I think the stall may have hurt Arkansas some," said Longhorns center LaSalle Thompson. "We just kept our poise."

Arkansas coach Eddie Sutton said, "the last seven minutes of the first half was the worst we've played since I've been at Arkansas. We came out sizzling, but it was too fast a tempo. We should have slowed it down a little sooner."

FIVE AREA TEAMS REACH STATE CAGE FINALS

Monterey, New Deal Girls Charge To Victories

By RUSS PARSONS
Avalanche-Journal Sports Staff

AUSTIN — It wasn't exactly a work of art, but there is no doubt in Tim Tasker's mind that he'll take Friday afternoon's 76-49 victory over San Antonio Lee.

His Monterey team had just run wild, throwing away 34 turnovers and at times playing with all the teamwork of an elementary school playground gang. But the win came in the first round of the Class 5A girls' state basketball tournament and put the Plainsmen in the finals for the second straight year.

And there was no way Tasker was going to complain about any of that.

The Plainsmen became the fifth of five West Texas girls' squads — all within a 100-mile radius of Lubbock — to earn a spot in the championships. Earlier Friday, New Deal rallied to turn back Sanger 65-58 in Class 2A action.

Thursday, three area teams won semifinal outings. In Class 1A, Nazareth buried La Poynor 70-35. Abernathy took a 56-52 overtime victory from Brownsboro in Class 3A action. Canyon made it 11 trips to the final in the last 13 years with 64-39 rout of Magnolia in Class 4A play.

Today, all five girls' state titles will be decided. Nazareth goes after an unprecedented fifth straight state crown at 9:30 this morning against Colmesneil. New Deal and Hardin face off at 2 p.m. in the 2A final. Abernathy will go for its first state championship since 1959 when it takes the floor against Sweeny at 11 a.m. in the 3A decider. The 4A title tussle pits Canyon and Bay City at 3:30 p.m. Monterey and Duncanville, a 57-49 winner over Clear Creek, at 5 p.m.

"We did play sloppy in spots, but you beat a team by 20 points in the first game of the state tournament and that's OK," said Tasker. "Hey, I'm tickled."

It was obvious from the outset that Lee was not prepared for a team of either the caliber or style of the Plainsmen. The Volunteers had made their 30-3 record by playing a tight, methodical offense. The most points they scored in a single game all year was 63.

That unfamiliarity with the running, harrying style of play the frenzied Plainsmen threw at the Vols took its effect quickly and fatally. Monterey forced Lee into 16 turnovers in the first quarter and allowed them only two field goals, jumping to a 19-4 lead.

"I think they came out a little tight in the first quarter," said Tasker. "They really just weren't ready for us. And, remember, they've never been here before. That has an effect."

But from that point on, Monterey never really seemed to have its heart in the game. After turning the ball over only four times in that decisive first period, Monterey threw it away 30 times in the next three quarters.

"Yes it was sloppy in spots, the girls just lost concentration," Tasker said. "But they're not NBA players, yet. .they're high school girls and that's going to happen."

Monterey was led in scoring by sharpshooting Kamie Ethridge. Kamie connected on 10 of 16 field-goal attempts and eight of 11 free throws to total 28 points, bringing her three-game total over the regional and state tournaments to 88.

"I thought Kamie and Kriss both did pretty good jobs," acknowledged Tasker. "They had lots of assists and lots of steals."

The Plainsmen shot well, despite the sloppy style of play, sinking 55.6 percent of their second-half field goals and winding up with a 48.3 mark for the game.

Trailing Miss Ethridge in the points-scored department were senior forward Tracy Muehlbrad with 11 and Kriss Ethridge and Andrea Moore with nine apiece.

But beyond a doubt, the real difference in the game was Monterey's full-court press, which forced 46 Lee turnovers that led directly to 35 Monterey points — almost half of the Plainsmen's total.

For example, there was the first two and one half minutes of the game. Lee turned the ball over on its first possession and Molly Hasie put in a short jumper off a Kamie Ethridge feed. Lee turned the ball over on its second possession and Alayna Gilmore put in another chip shot courtesy of the younger Eth-

Plainview Knocks Off LHS 53-48

By RAY GLASS
Avalanche-Journal Sports Staff

PLAINVIEW — For a change, Plainview High School's "Iron Five" didn't last the entire game against Lubbock High here Friday night.

But the Bulldog starters — Alton Jackson, Jerry Walker, Lee Carter, Richie Norell and Gilbert Wright — nevertheless led Plainview to the District 4-5A title with a 53-48 victory over the Westerners in the championship game of the first-ever post season district tourney.

That kept the starters from playing the entire game but Washington more then kept his own. He scored one point, hitting a single free throw in five tries in the final minute, but sparkled in keeping the ball from the Westerners.

The Bulldogs, 18-15, will meet Pampa next week in a bi-district playoff game. LHS, after narrowly missing a second upset of the day, finished the season 17-16.

The Westerners knocked off Monterey 42-30 Friday morning in the tournament's semifinal game, but ran out of steam in the final period against Plainview.

Jackson hit four of five long-range jumpers but Lubbock High's James Johnson scored eight points in the second period and the Westerners led 26-23 at halftime.

Plainview moved back in front 32-31 at the end of the third period as Jackson hit three of four cannons before Wright took charge in the final quarter.

Wright, who finished the night with 20 points, scored nine consecutive Bulldog points in the final quarter. But the Westerners matched them bucket for bucket and the two teams were tied 45-45 with 1:54 to play.

Johnson missed a four-foot jumper that would have put Lubbock ahead. Walker then hit a three-point play and Jackson hit a pair of free throws for a 50-45 lead with 41 seconds to play in the game.

Wright had nine rebounds to go with his 20 points. Jackson finished the evening with 16 and Walker added 10. Johnson, Lubbock's sixth man, scored 15 points and Kirk Cole had nine points and seven rebounds.

Ruff scored 19 points while the Lubbock defense and screaming fans made an abrupt second-half turnaround possible as the Westerners humilated Monterey 42-30 in the semifinal game Friday morning.

Monterey, which finished the season at 25-9, led 8-4 at the end of a sluggish first period and 25-17 at halftime and seemed destined for the expected clash with the Bulldogs in the championship game.

But the Plainsmen didn't recon with the Westerners and their avid followers. Close to 200 LHS students made the hour-long trip and spent much of the third period and all of the fourth screaming and stomping their feet on the wooden bleachers. They easily drowned out the MHS cheerleaders and fans and, seated directly behind the MHS bench, verbally assaulted the Plainsmen.

"They (the fans) were the difference, no doubt about it," said Wells. "They gave us a big lift. We knew our bread and butter was a man-to-man defense and we played it the entire second half. Basketball wise, the defense was the difference. Other than that, the difference was up in the stands."

Ziegler Assumes Two-Shot Lead

LAUDERHILL, Fla. (AP) — Larry Ziegler pulled away from suddenly struggling Jack Nicklaus with a 4-under-par 68 and moved into a two-stroke lead Friday in the second round of the $300,000 American Motors Inverrary Golf Classic.

Ziegler, a 15-year veteran who scored the last of his three PGA Tour victories five years ago, made only one bogey in compiling a 133 total, 11 strokes under par on the 7,129-yard Inverrary Golf Club course.

Nicklaus, who shared the first round lead with Ziegler, dropped five shots back with a frustrating 1-over-par 73 in near-ideal playing conditions. That's eight shots higher than his opening effort in extremely difficult winds and gave him a 138 total.

Curtis Strange, a two-time winner last year, birdied all the par-5 holes and moved into second with a 67 and a 135 total.

"My game started coming around last week," Strange said. "I'd been playing pretty well, but it takes me a while to get warmed up and start scoring."

Tom Kite, who played the par-5's three-under for the second day in a row, and Tom Purtzer were next at 137. The steady Kite hit 17 greens in a no-bogey 68 and Purtzer closed up with a 66.

The group at 139 included veteran Charles Coody, former champion Bob Murphy and Dr. Gil Morgan, a non-practicing optometrist who played in the same group with Nicklaus. Morgan had a second-round 67, Murphy 68 and Coody matched par 72.

Johnny Miller, already the winner of two titles this season, remained in contention with another 70 that left him at 140. Miller won this event last year when it was the Jackie Gleason Inverrary Classic. Gleason no longer is associated with the tournament.

Ziegler, 41, hasn't had exempt status since 1977 and last year failed to make expenses with only $19,000 in winnings.

But, he said, things have turned around in the last few weeks. He's finished eighth or better in two of his last three starts.

"I've been playing very consistent," he said. "If I can keep on driving it well and putting well, I'll do fine."

He bogeyed his first hole, missing the green, made par-5 on the second, then holed a 30-footer on his third.

He had a tap-in birdie off a sand wedge shot on the eighth, hit it close and birdied the 11th and 13th, then dropped a 20-footer on the 16th.

Nicklaus three-putted twice, missed three other putts from eight feet or less and used a total of 35 strokes on the green.

"It was a day on which I gave up a very good opportunity," said Nicklaus, winner of the U.S. Open and PGA last season.

"I had a chance to finish the tournament off. Then to do what I did, well, it's not very good. I'm very disappointed."

Mrs. Lopez-Melton Holds Edge In LPGA Tourney

TUCSON, Ariz. (AP) — Nancy Lopez-Melton sank a birdie putt on the 18th hole Friday to take a one-stroke lead over Pat Bradley in the $125,000 Arizona Copper Classic Ladies Professional Golf Association tournament.

Mrs. Lopez-Melton's one-under-par round of 72 gave her a 142 total after the first two days' play. Her 70 Thursday had placed her one stroke ahead of Cindy Hill.

Tied for third place after the first round, Mrs. Bradley made up ground Friday with birdies on the third and fourth — holes where Mrs. Lopez-Melton had bogies.

Patty Hayes and Myra Van Hoose are tied for third place at 144. Janet Alex is a stroke back in fifth while Amy Alcott is another shot behind in sixth.

Mrs. Lopez-Melton and Mrs. Bradley were paired together Friday — a fact that didn't spark the competitive edge of either golfer.

"It's too early to aim to beat a player," said Mrs. Bradley. "You concentrate on beating the course right now."

Third round play is scheduled for today with the cutoff score expected to be at 154, according to LPGA officials.

Tucson's weather Thursday was as sporadic as second-round play — going from drizzle to a downpour to sunshine late in the afternoon.

For Mrs. Lopez-Melton, the only time things heated up Friday was when she three-putted.

"My temperature must have gone up 150 degrees. I know I wasn't cold anymore," she said. "I was mad in a bad way. But I knew I just had to concentrate harder on what I was doing and not in being mad."

McEnroe Nabs Davis Cup Win

CARLSBAD, Calif. (AP) — John McEnroe took advantage of 17-year-old Jorge Lozano's inexperience to give the United States a 1-0 lead Friday over Mexico in first-round, non-zonal Davis Cup competition.

McEnroe, the world's No. 2-ranked player, overcame a slow start to defeat Lozano 6-3, 6-1, 6-3 in a match marked by mistakes. The winning point came when Lozano hit a backhand into the net.

Roscoe Tanner met Mexican veteran Raul Ramirez later in the only other match of the opening day at the La Costa Hotel and Spa courts.

Lozano, a high school student at Palos Verdes, Calif., won two of the first three games in the first set, but quickly found himself in trouble from unforced errors.

After a lackadaisical first set, McEnroe caught fire in the second, rushing to a 5-0 lead.

"I'm not thrilled about my game," said the 22-year-old defending U.S. Open champion. "I got lazy a couple of times and he came up with a couple of good shots. It's hard to play a guy you've never played before. You just try to get it over with."

He blamed repeated double-faults on a rhythm problem he's developed.

But, despite his lackluster start, McEnroe said: "There's no excuse for us losing to Mexico. They are a one-man team, not really even that because Ramirez hasn't been playing that well."

Asked how he plans to attack Ramirez Sunday, McEnroe, who has now won 12 of his 14 Davis Cup matches, said matter of factly: "The match could be over by then."

give Monterey a 27-19 lead with 5:56 to play before the roof caved in on the Plainsmen. They did not score another point until a Hyslop free throw at the 6:19 mark of the final period and their only other field goal of the second half came with 1:46 to play in the contest.

They hit only two of 17 field goals and one of five free throws in the final 16 minutes while committing 16 turnovers and 16 fouls.

Ruff led the LHS comeback at the end of the third period. After Cole's jumper cut the Monterey lead to 27-21, Ruff accounted for the final six points of the period. He stole a pass and hit a layup and then nailed a pair of 18-footers, tying the score at 27-27 entering the final period.

Hyslop's free throw put Monterey up 28-27 with 6:19 to play before Lubbock scored the next 10 points, six of them at the foul stripe. During that run,MHS five consecutive turnovers and missed a barrage of shots, including three layups.

With the score tied at 27-27, Monterey had a chance to take command of the game early in the final period as Quade and Cole picked up their fourth personal fouls at the 6:30 and 6:19 marks, respectively. But the Plainsmen got only one point from the fouls and, while Cole spent most of the remainder of the game on the bench, Quade played the rest of the way.

"We were in trouble then," Wells admitted. "But we were able to do what we wanted. Charlie is one of the smartest players with four fouls, and we were able to pick up the tempo and that was in our favor."

Mark Lambert and Gary Hodges keyed a second-period surge that gave the Plainsmen their eight-point halftime margin. Hodges scored five points and Lambert added six as MHS twice opened 10-point leads in the quarter.

Ruff was the lone player from either team in double figures. Cole added nine points, James Johnson had six points and nine rebounds and Quade added four points and eight boards. Hyslop paced Monterey with nine points before fouling out. Gary Hodges had seven points and eight boards.

Plainsmen, Lions Reach Finals

ridge. Lee turned the ball over on its third possession and Miss Gilmore was fouled while taking a shot, but missed both free throws. Lee turned the ball over on its fourth possession and Kamie popped in a neat 15-footer to give Monterey a 6-0 with 5:50 remaining.

And so it went.

"We had some good runs," said Tasker. "I thought we really played well in spurts. We had several runs of six or eight points.

"I don't have any complaints. Maybe the crowd was bored, but I don't have any complaints."

The Sanger Indians' motto during the 1980-81 season was "Eight Is Enough." Friday afternoon it almost was.

The Indians, who had won 27 games despite only carrying eight players on the varsity roster, came within a hair of upsetting New Deal before falling 65-58 in the Class 1A semifinal-round of the state girls' basketball tournament.

Sanger played extremely well in the early going and piled up a 23-12 lead in the first nine minutes of the game. But that is when disaster struck. Big Lee Ann Galbreath, a 5-11 post, picked up two quick fouls within a minute of each other and had to sit the rest of the half out with four personals.

The Indians still led 32-23 with 2:30 to play in the half, but that's when things started catching up with them.

Renay Looney made both ends of a one and one at 1:59, then stole the inbounds pass and rifled it to Juanita Abercrombie for a layup. Vicki Teal, New Deal's all-everything post, stole the next inbounds pass and breezed in herself for a layup and — in half a minute — New Deal was right back in the fight, 32-29.

The next Lion run came after Sanger, with Miss Galbreath back in the game, pulled out to a 38-34 advantage. Miss Teal hit back-to-back, turn-around jumpers from the top of the key to tie the game at 38-38 with 5:22 left in the third quarter.

After Miss Galbreath followed in an errant shot to give the Indians back the lead, Miss Teal made a free throw and Lori Bigham hit consecutive short jumpers to give the Lions their first lead of the game at 43-40 with 4:20 to play in the third quarter.

Sanger struggled back within a point, 45-44, but New Deal put together yet another string, scoring nine unanswered points in two minutes to go up 54-44 with 1:35 left in the third. Miss Teal scored five of those points: two field goals and a free throw.

That 10-point margin was short lived as Sanger scored six straight points to pull within four, 54-50, with only 10 seconds gone in the fourth quarter. But that is when the lack of bench strength really came home to roost. New Deal turned the ball over on five straight trips downcourt but Sanger could only net two points as the Indians, obviously exhausted, had trouble maintaining their motion offense.

Sanger did manage to pull within a single point with 3:40 remaining in the game but at that point New Deal simply pulled away, outscoring Sanger 9-3 down the stretch.

The Indians, in the fourth quarter, quickly went from "Eight Is Enough" to "The Incredible Shrinking Women." Sanger started the game with a lineup that stood 6-0, 5-11, 5-8, 5-7 and 5-3. But after three players fouled out in the final period Sanger had remaining only a 5-7, three 5-3s and a 5-2.

The star of Friday's game for New Deal, as usual, was Miss Teal, who scored 30 points and pulled down 18 rebounds — just under half of her team's totals in both categories.

Chaps Bomb Highlands

New Mexico Highlands, all gift-wrapped and primed for a thrashing, was waiting for the Chaps. LCC didn't let the Highlands diamondmen down, thrashing the Cowboys 5-1 and 12-6 in a doubleheader sweep.

The teams will conclude their four-game series today with another doubleheader slated for noon at the Chap Field. LCC's first twinbill sweep of the year left the Chaps with a 6-11 mark while the Cowboys slipped to 5-5.

Rick Coskrey (0-2) and David Bulls will be on the mound for the Chaps while Highlands will counter with the duo of Dennis Rino and Tony Zack.

During Friday's action, the Chaps feasted on second inning outbursts. In the opener LCC exploded for all five runs in the second and in the nightcap it was a nine-run burst in the second frame that buoyed LCC.

Highlands, though, pounced on LCC starter Rod Cline — who brought a 15.94 ERA into the game — early and went up 1-0 after the first. But Coskrey settled down to get the next eight batters in a row and earn the win.

Lewis Stephenson's bases-loaded double gave the Chaps the lead in the second. Randy Ledbetter drew a bases loaded walk, Billy Montemayor's sacrifice fly and Leland Creel's bloop single to right added three more tallies and that was it.

Creel got the Chaps rolling in the second frame of the nightcap with a leadoff home run, a shot over the left field fence. LCC eventually sent sent 15 men to the plate scoring nine times and leaving the pillows packed.

Gary Hix concluded the LCC scoring in the fourth when he rapped a three-run homer, the first in his career. Jamey Lanahan picked up the win in the nightcap despite throwing 132 pitches, allowing 12 hits and five walks.

Mustangs Reach Finals Of Big Spring Tourney

Coronado, Monterey and Dunbar were victors in city baseball action Friday and will be back in action today along with Estacado and Lubbock High in hopes of continuing their good fortune.

Coronado will continue its quest of the Roswell Tournament crown while the other four teams host double-headers today.

The Mustangs, now 2-1, earned a berth in the finals against the winner of the Ector-Goddard game, which was played late Friday night. Today's championship game will begin at 8 p.m.

Leading the way for the Mustangs Friday was Jerry Foster, who hit his third home run in as many games. His solo shot in the third got CHS going.

The Mustangs' other four runs were unearned. They were given two in the fourth when Dudley signaled for a double steal and when the ball was thrown away two runners scored.

In the fifth, the Mustangs scored two insurance runs in much the same fashion. With the bases loaded and one man out, two more runs scored on wild pitches.

The game's winning pitcher was Brian Brock. He struck out 10 batters, scattered seven hits and walked but two.

Jackson, who absorbed Coronado's heartbreaking 4-3 loss in its season opener, will start the championship game.

Monterey remained undefeated for the season by whipping Midland Lee, the team that handed Coronado its only loss, by a score of 7-4 Friday.

The Plainsmen had a 7-0 lead going into the sixth inning, but the Rebels rallied for three runs in the sixth and one in the seventh to make it respectable.

The Plainsmen scored right out of the blocks in the top of the first. Then, in the third Nathan Swindle, the game's winning pitcher, blasted a two-run double and Mark Venable added an RBI single to make it 4-0 Monterey.

MHS added two more in the fourth. Swindle had a one-hitter going through five innings and at one point retired 12 consecutive Rebel hitters.

The Plainsmen will host Midland High in a double-header at Lowrey Field today. The first game begins at 1 p.m.

Dunbar tied its 1980 winning output Friday with a victory in its season opener, defeating Andrews 5-2.

After spotting Andrews a two-run lead, the Panthers chipped away at that margin with one in the second and two in the fourth and fifth innings while shutting out their opponent the rest of the way.

Bernard Conner was the hitting star for Dunbar as he clouted a solo home run and a ground-rule double while scoring three runs.

Dunbar coach Jerry Lee will start Conner on the mound in the first game of the Panthers' double-header against Lamesa today. David Gallegos will pitch the second.

The games will be played at the Connie Mack Field at MacKenzie Park and start at 1 p.m.

Estacado will be going for its third consecutive victory this season when Andrews invades the Estacado Field today at 1 p.m. for a double-header.

Lubbock High, which lost its first game of the season, 6-5 to Tascosa, will try to turn it around today when it hosts Snyder in a twin-bill, at MacKenzie Park beginning at 1 p.m.

Tech Erases Four School Marks

AUSTIN (Special) — The Texas Tech women's swimming team set four school records and had six lifetime best performances to highlight action at the University of Texas Invitational Swimming and Diving Meet here Friday.

The Red Raiders' 200-yard medley relay team, led by Janie James, qualified for national competition with a time of 1:50.00, beating the cut-off time by .29 seconds.

Miss James cut .11 seconds off the national qualifying time of 27.88 seconds in her 50-yard relay interval to qualify for national competition as well.

The AIAW National Meet will be held in Columbia, S.C., March 18-21. Tech's one-meter diving specialist, Becky Bryant, has also qualified for nationals

Cynthia Rinehart set a school record in the 100-yard individual medley with a 1:01.73 clocking and set a lifetime best time in the 50-yard backstroke in 28.91 seconds.

The 400-yard freestyle relay team of Amy Thorpe, Miss Rinehart, Amy Cahill and Dorinda Jung, set a school record with a time of 3:38.44.

Miss Jung also set a school record in the 50-yard freestyle event with a time of 24.96 seconds.

Play is being conducted in team competition with awards given to outstanding nidividual play. Divisions are A, B and C in singles and A in doubles.

The tournament is amoung the largest of junior high tennis tournaments in the state.

Coronado Hosts Lubbock Invitational

Boys' track squads from all five city schools — along with teams from across the South Plains — will converge on the Coronado High School track today for the annual Lubbock Invitational Meet. Competition will be held in both 5A and 4A divisions.

The preliminaries in the running events will begin at 10 a.m. with the finals slated to start at 2:15. Field events open at 10 a.m. also and will likely be concluded by 3 p.m.

A coaches meeting will be held at 9 a.m. and the awards ceremonies will start at 2:15 in the afternoon.

Andujar Arrives In Astro Camp

COCOA, Fla. (AP) — The arrival of pitcher Joaquin Andujar completes the Houston Astros spring training roster but two players have been sidelined by injuries.

Third baseman Art Howe is expected to be out of action about 10 days and shortstop Craig Reynolds has been ordered to take up to five days of rest.

Howe reported an Achilles tendinitis problem when he arrived in camp Sunday. Reynolds has been bothered by back spasms about a week and the rest was ordered by doctors after a Thursday examination.

Andujar arrived Thursday from his home in the Dominican Republic and indicated he no longer is interested in the "play-me-or-trade-me" edict he issued upon arrival a year ago.

"I wish I could spend my whole life with the Houston Astros," he said. "I just want to be ready whenever Bill wants to use me."

Andujar said last year he could not be effective if manager Bill Virdon did not start him every fourth or fifth day.

Turner Offers To Stage Debate

WEST PALM BEACH, Fla. (AP) — Atlanta Braves' owner Ted Turner, saying he's "embarrassed and ashamed for myself and my sport," Friday issued a challenge to baseball's major league plyers and owners to hold a televised debate to end their squabbling.

The Major League Players Association voted last week to strike May 29 if an agreement is not reached with owners, who are seeking compensation for free agents.

Turner made his comments after a poll of more than 1,200 fans in the Atlanta Journal Thursday showed that 91 percent said they would boycott the 1981 season to protest the bickering between the players and owners.

"I'm guilty; the players are guilty; we all are guilty," said Turner.

Chaparrals Host TIAA 'Liftoff'

By ERIC GALE
Avalanche-Journal Sports Staff

The wait was worth it for Dub Manis, assistant football and conditioning coach at Lubbock Christian College. It lasted two years.

Manis also believes that the weights will be worth it today when LCC hosts the Texas Intercollegiate Athletic Association Football Liftoff at 9:30 a.m. in the fieldhouse and 1:30 p.m. in Moody Auditorium.

"It should be entertaining, a real quality show," Manis said, of the weightlifting tournament that will pit a six-man squad from LCC against teams from fellow TIAA schools Austin, Sul Ross, Tarleton and, possibly, McMurry. Trinity, the sixth TIAA school, will not participate.

Manis has envisioned a TIAA liftoff for two years now, or ever since he joined the new-found Chaparral football program in 1979.

"I laid the foundation for weight-training at LCC," Manis said. "When I first arrived here, everybody was talking football and talking about playing football. It was being viewed as a club-level competition, it appeared. Everybody thought that all the other schools in the conference played it that way but I knew different. I saw we were in a desperate situation physically."

Not only did the first LCC team two years ago lack an awareness of the need for weight-training, it also lacked the equipment needed to train.

"I was told (by the LCC administration) that we didn't have money for weights, but I said you can't play football without it. Finally, I was commissioned to get plastic bars on discount from Gibson's, the kind bank presidents have on their bedroom floor, and the truth is our kids couldn't handle those. It was real discouraging."

Manis had to postpone his initial plan to sponsor a TIAA liftoff at LCC, at least until the Chaps filled in their musculature.

"It would've been too embarrassing to do it then," he said. "We were too weak. We did not have one kid on campus who could lift what is known as the basic weight: 150 pounds 10 times."

Prior to the 1980 season, Manis designed a conditioning program to improve the strength of the Chaps. It was tested last spring when LCC hosted — and defeated — Austin College in a liftoff.

This year Manis has expanded the field and, in the future, wishes to implement what he calls a Southwest Collegiate Football Liftoff that would include teams from the Southwest Conference, Lone Star Conference and TIAA.

Rules for today's competition will differ markedly from those of formal weightlifting in that technique will not be judged.

"This is football lifting, not power-lifting," Manis said. "It has been modified to suit football training. We allow for total body movement, for the whole body to explode into the bar. For example, in the bench press, a lifter can bounce the weight off his chest and bridge his back. This is not allowed in normal competition." Other lifts include the squat, power-clean and dead-lift.

LCC's six-man team includes Keith Johnson at 160 pounds; Brad Eblen, 175; Ron Kalt, 190; Grant Manis (Dub's son), 205; Rick Eaton, 220, and Kevin Brown, heavyweight.

Tickets are priced at $2 both for adults and children. A ticket purchased for the 9:30 a.m. session is good for the afternoon segment.

Tech Runs In Border Olympics

LAREDO (Special) — The Texas Tech men's track team will go against Southwest Conference competition for the first time outdoors this season when the Red Raiders begin running in the 49th Annual Border Olympics today.

Coach Corky Oglesby will take a 14-man squad to the meet which has attracted teams from Houston, Texas, defending champion Texas A&M, Baylor, TCU and Rice. Joining the seven SWC schools will be North Texas State and Lamar.

Defending college division champ Angelo State will return, along with Wayland Baptist College.

"We are looking forward to going against the strong SWC teams outdoors," Oglesby said. "We ran well down here last year."

The same field was on hand last year when the Raiders scored 47 1/2 points and finished fourth. Edwin Newsome returns to defend his championship in the 400-meter dash.

Newsome won his specialty last weekend in Abilene with a time of 47.9 seconds, joining teammates Thomas Selmon in the long jump, James Mays in the 800, Bert Torres in the 5,000 and Greg Rolle in the 400-meter hurdles in the winners' circle. Rolle was timed at 52.1 seconds in theintermediate hurdles, just one-tenth of a second off the school record.

"Greg should break that record this weekend," Oglesby said. "He didn't even have his steps down last weekend and still ran a good time."

The Raiders will be hurt in the mile relay, which they also won last weekend, by the absence of quarter-miler Mitchum Burris. Burris is sidelined with a shin splint. Also missing will be pole vaulter Craig Wilson with a pulled muscle.

It will also be Wayland Baptist's first outdoor competition of the year. The Pioneers will be represented by 15 athletes in 12 events.

Distance men Mark Manwaring and Jeff George will compete in the 5,000 meter run. Joel Ngetich returns to the meet as defending champion in both the 800 meters and mile relay, winning those two crowns while at Ranger Junior College last spring.

Robert Johnson, a freshman from Canyon, will run in the 60-yard high hurdles. Ron Caten will compete in the 800-meter run and mile relay. Rick Losoya will also compete in the 800-meter run and 1,500-meter run events while All-American James Fort will run in the relays and 400-meter dash.

Carpenters 'Fed Up,' Put Phils On Market

CLEARWATER, Fla. (AP) — The world champion Philadelphia Phillies were offered for sale Friday by owner Ruly Carpenter who said he was fed up with the bickering between baseball and its players.

"It was one of the most difficult decisions the (Carpenter) family ever had to make," said Carpenter in a statement read to his players in their spring training camp locker room.

The owner spoke about a minute and a half to the stunned players who had just trooped off the practice field, perspiration dripping from their foreheads, after the daily spring workout.

Carpenter declined to estimate what it would take to buy the Phillies, commenting only, "If he (a purchaser) has to ask how much, he can't afford it."

In recent sales, the New York Mets went for an estimated $21 million, the Seattle Mariners for $10 million, the Oakland A's for $12 million, and the Chicago White Sox for $20 million.

The Phillies are one of the most valued franchises in baseball, drawing in excess of 3.7 million fans over the past few seasons. The club also reportedly has one of the top three payrolls.

Ironically, Carpenter's decision to unload the club came some five months after the Phillies won the National League pennant, and their first World Series in the 97-year history of the franchise.

"The primary reason for the decision to sell is that it has become apparent to me that some deeply ingrained philosophical differences exist between the Carpenter family and some of the other owners as to how the baseball business should be conducted," Carpenter said.

Carpenter said in his statement that he and his family endorsed the position taken by management in the most recent battle with the Players Association over the issue of player compensation for a free agent.

The club owners want an established player as compensation in the event they lose a player in the free agent draft. They have offered the Players Association a plan whereby 15 players would be protected on each team's 40-man roster and the compensating player would come from the remaining 25.

Carpenter said the re-entry draft of 1980 was "the final nail in the coffin." He said he had hoped the owners would see the light and stop the multimillion dollar bidding for free agents.

"There were discussions among my peers (on the free agent problem) and I was very confident that the 1980 re-entry draft would restore some sanity," Carpenter said. "But we're off and running again."

Big Jackson-Winfield 'Rivalry' Not Developing

FORT LAUDERDALE, Fla. (AP) — Critics warned that jealousy would be inevitable between Reggie Jackson and the New York Yankees' new $20 million nugget, Dave Winfield. But it hasn't materialized.

Rather than a calamitous Cain and Abel situation, a Damon and Pythias scenario appears the more likely bill of fare for avid watchers of the Yankee clubhouse.

"I like Reggie. He is a winner," says Winfield, a superb 6-foot-6, 220-pound all-around athlete, whose talents were hidden away in San Diego before George Steinbrenner's checkbook plucked him from the free agent draft last October.

"There will be no problem between us," insists Reggie, the recognized team leader who once proclaimed himself "the straw that stirs the drink."

"I will help him all I can," Jackson added. "I don't want him to go through what I did."

Mr. October shudders when he thinks about his break-in with the Yankees four years ago when he was downgraded by his manager, cold-shouldered by virtually all his teammates and left to sizzle in his own juice.

For months Jackson was a lonely, suffering man, dressing in his nook, not hearing but knowing of the whispers around him.

He no longer will talk about it. "Words can't describe it," he says. "I don't even want to think about it."

Winfield, although a .284 hitter who signed the richest contract in baseball history, so far has not experienced the Hades that Jackson professes to have survived.

A quiet, low-key man, Winfield inconspicuously goes through his routines in the clubhouse and on the field, rarely entering into the ribaldry that seems to infect all large groups of athletes confined to close quarters.

Other Yankees treat him with deference.

"I am not much to make waves. I'm not controversial or what you would call colorful," he says in low tones. "I expect my production to do the talking for me."

But Winfield, an outstanding athlete at the University of Minnesota where he was wooed by professional scouts in football, basketball and baseball, is not a shrinking violet.

He knows he has talent. He just doesn't flaunt it. He is confident that, now with a winning club, this talent will be properly reflected.

"No one knows how good I am," he says, "because I haven't played in a good lineup. I can produce big numbers with people around me."

Boss Steinbrenner must think so, too. Winfield was given a 10-year contract for $1.5 million a year, with bonus and cost-of-living clauses that push his salary package between $20 and $24 million.

In the first week of spring training, the tall, graceful athlete has been tense. It has shown in his face and in his periodic stints in the batting cage.

He knows it. Everybody else knows it. But for the confident Winfield there is no panic button.

"I will be OK," he says, and smiles.

"He will, too," choruses Jackson. "I will personally see to it."

Reggie, following a familiar pattern, showed up two days late and largely upstaged the debut of the rich new kid on the block.

On the first couple of days, all the attention of the fans and press were focused on Winfield — and he handled himself well. But on Sunday, March 1, when Reggie didn't show, the spotlight turned.

All the attention was directed at Reggie — his $5,000 fine, Seinbrenner's outrage and indications that Jackson's tardiness would delay, if not harpoon, scheduled renegotation of his five-year, $3 million contract, expiring with the 1981 season.

By the end of the week, Winfield was just another Yankee.

This didn't bother Winfield, or so he insisted. It bothered Jackson more. He didn't intend for his late arrival to infringe on Winfield, although he was aware it would upset George.

Since arriving in camp, Reggie has made every effort to spike general beliefs that two men of such stature and conviction in their own abilities could not exist amicably.

They were supposed to glower at each other from across the room. They were supposed to just nod in passing. Reggie was supposed to be chagrined that another Yankee could make almost three times as much as he does. Winfield was supposed to be envious of all the attention focused on the controversial, electrically charged Jackson.

On his check-in day, Tuesday, when he was besieged by press and cameramen, Reggie made a special point of walking over to Winfield's locker and exchanging pleasantries.

On the field, they were side by side, going into adjoining cages for batting practice, exchanging bats and discussing techniques.

Unless both of them are pulling off amazing charades, they share a genuine mutual respect. They seem to realize they are two different types of personsseeking the same goal. They are not on a collision course.

"I talked to Reggie before I signed with the Yankees," Winfield says. "He told me the whole picture and in the end said he would like to see me on the Yankees. It would be to his advantage to have somebody like me hit behind him. Pitchers would have to pitch to him."

When Reggie came to the Yankees, he was resented by most of the players. One reason was his salary, best on the club. Another was that he was believed to be a favorite of Steinbrenner. A third was that Jackson was Jackson — outspoken, strong of will and a natural news-maker.

As Winfield said, Reggie is a winner.

Winfield insists he too will be a winner. He will. Reggie has given his word.

PLAINS AGRICULTURE

By DUANE HOWELL

A DISAGREEMENT APPEARS TO BE SHAPING up between Secretary of Agriculture John Block and some major cotton industry groups over the target price concept.

Block has said he is philosophically opposed to the target price program because it can require direct payments from the federal treasury and is inconsistent with the free market system.

Some free-market advocates, however, argue that abandoning the target price concept could result in heavy political pressure to raise loan rates to uneconomic levels at which the loan program would interfere with orderly marketing.

No deficiency payments have been made to cotton farmers since the inception of the target price program in 1973, although some have been made to grain producers.

The National Cotton Council, however, argues that farmers nevertheless favor the concept to protect them against unreasonably low prices.

BOTH THE NCC AND THE AMERICAN COTTON Shippers Association recommended this week at farm bill hearings in Washington that yearly target prices be based on production cost per acre rather than on cost per pound, as at present.

They both also agreed that the Agriculture Act of 1977 and its market-oriented program has satisfied all segments of the industry and prompted them to call for an extension of the present program's general premise.

However, the NCC asked for, among other modifications, a 7-cent increase in the minimum loan level, saying this represents "a modest recognition of the upward trend in both domestic and foreign market prices since the 48-cent floor (in effect for 1980-81) was approved in 1978."

The ACSA also called for a loan rate increase but gave no specific figures. The minimum base loan level determined for the 1981-82 crop year is 52.46 cents per pound.

Block has said a number of times he favors a "modest" increase in loan levels.

THE CHANGE PROPOSED BY THE COUNCIL and the shippers in target price computations would prevent dramatic moves in results of the production-cost calculations from year to year, proponents of the new plan say. The target price for 1980 was 58.4 cents per pound.

If the USDA adopts the change proposed by the council, the 1981 target price would be 68.99 cents, according to the NCC's Dabney Wellford.

This would be 10.59 cents above the 1980 target price but it would be 2.61 cents under the 1981 target price that would be established if the USDA continues to use the present formula, according to Wellford's calculations.

In other years and under other circumstances, the reverse pattern might be seen. The USDA is expected to announce the official 1981 target price in late May or early June.

Wellford pointed to several advantages under the cost-per-acre method. Because yields vary substantially from year to year, he said, target prices have been highly erratic.

FOR EXAMPLE, THE TARGET PRICE in 1979 was 57.7 cents. Unusually high yields that year caused the 1980 target price to increase by only a slight 0.7 cents, despite soaring production cost increases.

However, yields in 1980 dropped to a 23-year low, resulting in an estimated jump in the 1981 target price to 71.6 cents, according to the NCC's calculcations under the existing formula.

If the year-to-year variables intrinsic in the cost-per-pound method were eliminated, Wellford said, target prices could be based on one-year average changes in production costs, reflecting more current production cost information.

Under the target price program, deficiency payments are made to growers if the average market price they receive in a calendar year falls below the target level.

The NCC calculated the target prices using the two different formulas in preparation for its 1981 farm bill testimony this week at the opening round of hearings on basic farm legislation before a Senate agriculture subcommittee.

THE TARGET PRICE IS DETERMINED each year by computing changes in the two-year average cost of production, which is limited to machinery ownership costs, variable costs and farm overhead.

Since target prices took effect under the 1977 farm act, the USDA has based the formula on production cost per pound.

Because the 1977 farm act does not specify that the cost-per-pound method be used, NCC officials want the department to change its administrative policy and use the cost-per-acre method.

Council officials asked the Senate committee to include instructions on the policy change in its committee report on the 1981 farm bill.

COTTON FUTURES CLOSED A THINLY TRADED session Friday up 95 to 61 points in the current marketing year months, with December up 2 points at 91.52 cents.

Analysts said the mar/et was supported in quiet afternoon dealings by strong buying by Midwest-based professional traders as well as other commission house and local activity.

Much of the speculative buying was inspired more by strength in other commodity markets, particularly gold and grains, than by the fundamental picture of the cotton market, analysts added.

Some analysts had said the low net sales figure and the cancellations in this week's export report, released after the close Thursday, were likely to have a bearish effect Friday.

Others, however, had said traders had anticipated a low number and had attributed some of the price declines earlier this week to those expectations.

SOME ALSO HAD SAID THE GROSS SALES figure "was not all that bad" and were confused as to the meaning of the reported cancellations — whether they might have been due, possibly in part at least, to reporting adjustments or what — of 35,900 bales. The cancellations left net 1980-81 sales during the week ended Feb. 26 at only 8,400 bales.

"Since the market reacted bearishly to some big sales figures earlier," one trader had remarked tartly, "I guess it would make sense now for it to react in constructive fashion to a real low figure."

Eleven notices were issued, including seven by a Memphis-based shipper. Spot March's major receiver-stopper got 10 and stopped 24 of the 26 notices issued Thursday.

Open interest at the close Thursday totaled 33,951 contracts, off 211 on the day and off 777 from a week earlier. Still open in spot March, in which trading expires Monday, were 145 contracts, off 41 on the day and off 278 on the week.

Certificated stocks as of Thursday were 54,815 bales, up 3,172 from a week earlier, with 953 bales awaiting review and one awaiting withdrawal.

ON THE WEEK, SPOT MARCH LOST 75 points, May declined 123 points, and July dropped 141 points. October ended 100 points lower and December was off 98 points.

The March-May difference on the week narrowed on the board closes to a 60-point premium on May from 114 points, May-July widened to a 50-point premium on May from 32 points, and July-December narrowed to a 689-point premium on July from 732 points.

May closed at 414 points under the Liverpool "A" Index, against 406 last week. The "A" Index at 93.05 cents was off 115 points on the week.

The nine-market average spot price on the base quality ended at 82.51 cents, down 121 points for the week. The nine-market average basis was 640 points off May, compared with 642 points at last week's close.

Trading on Telcot Friday slowed to 3,184 bales as the big Memphis-based buyer of Thursday limited purchasing to some selective lots. The average price was 64.17 cents, an average of 2,589 points over the loan, and the market difference was nil.

Farm Payment Cut Possible

WASHINGTON (Reuters) — Elimination of farm deficiency payments could save the federal government $647 million over the next five years (fiscal 1982 to 1986), the Congressional Budget Office said.

Most of the savings could come from an end to payments made to rice growers, since demand for wheat, feed grains and cotton is expected to keep those market prices above the target prices through 1985, the nonpartisan budget group said.

Grain Futures

CHICAGO (AP) — Grain and soybean futures prices closed mostly higher in dull activity Friday on the Chicago Board of Trade.

Sources said that with a lack of any fresh news that was positive for prices, buying appeared to be coming from traders attempting to cover their short positions before going home for the weekend.

Wheat prices closed mixed. Traders cited forecasts for a weekend storm in winter wheat growing areas, noting that delivery months for old-crop wheat were higher and new-crop months were low. Weather beneficial to yields in the upcoming crop is negative for prices.

At the close, soybeans were ¼ cent to 7 cents higher, the contract for delivery in March was $7.08¾ a bushel; corn was ½ cent to 2½ cents higher, March $3.48¾ a bushel; oats were unchanged to 2 cents higher, March $2.18½ a bushel; wheat was 1¼ cents lower to 2¼ cents higher, March $4.28½ a bushel.

Cattle Futures Close Higher

By Reuters

CHICAGO — Cattle futures closed mostly 75 to 110 points higher on sales of 19,300 cars Friday on the Chicago Mercantile Exchange. Most months ended at the day's highs.

Futures ran up on continued wire house and commercial support. Demand was stimulated by firmer cash beef and expected strength next week on reduced slaughter. One commercial, however, was selling live cattle and buying feeder cattle futures at the close.

Wholesale beef was up 1 to 2 at 95 to 96 cents a pound, f.o.b. river points. Cash cattle were steady to up 50 cents with the best top $62 per hundredweight at Illinois Direct. Slaughter totaled 119,000 head. About 15,400 head are expected on Monday at the major markets.

Feeder cattle futures closed mostly 80 to 150 higher paced by April and August at the daily limit. Volume was 2,479 contracts.

Futures continued to work higher and posted new day's highs in mostly local trade. One commercial was also a good buyer at the close against sales of live cattle futures. Demand was also cited after reaching Thursday's highs. Wirehouse buying was also cited on the scale up. Sources noted that some traders felt live prices were bottoming out.

Hog futures closed 30 to 85 points higher on sales of 8,276 lots.

Futures extended gains on scattered support and posted new day's highs before resistance was met. Demand stemmed from higher cattle pits and expected lighter runs and reduced slaughter next week. Some stops were touched off early. Locals were most active after midsession with some light wire house buying cited. Offset was the lower slant to live markets.

Wholesale hams were unchanged to off 1 at 65 to 68 cents a pound, f.o.b. river points. Cash hogs were steady to off $1.25 with the best top $42.25 per hundredweight at Indianapolis. Kill totaled 358,000 head. The major markets are expecting about 30,000 head on Monday.

Pork belly (bacon) futures closed 72 to 105 higher on sales of 7,131 cars. All months ended near day's highs.

Futures uncovered spillover support from other meat pits and technical buying after recent sharp losses. Offset was further decline in cash product at noon. Cash hogs slanted lower but indications were for lighter runs and reduced slaughter next week, according to sources. Locals were most active.

Victorian Nude Fetches $242,000 At Auction

LONDON (AP) — A life-size painting of a full-frontal female nude, called "mischievous" by a shocked Victorian bishop when it was exhibited 103 years ago, sold in London Friday for $242,000.

The painting, entitled "A Sculptor's Model," by Sir Lawrence Alma-Tadema, was purchased by someone who wished to remain anonymous, said auctioneers at Christie's. The auctioneers rediscovered the work in the store room of the Norwegian National Gallery in Oslo.

With the help of Professor Vern G. Swanson, director of the Springville Museum in Springville, Utah and an expert on the artist, the picture was traced to its owner, William Collier.

When it was shown at the Royal Academy in 1878, Bishop Harvey Goodwin of Carlisle wrote: "My mind has been considerably exercised this season by the exhibition of Alma-Tadema's nude Venus ... old masters it might be assumed knew no better ... for a living artist to exhibit a life-size, life-like, almost photographic representation of a beautiful naked woman strikes my inartistic mind as somewhat if not very mischievous."

However, the critic Carel Vosnaer championed the painting as one of the great masterpieces of Alma-Tadema, a leading English Victorian artist inspired by classical subjects. Alma-Tadema died in 1912.

The picture belonged to Sir Lawrence Collier, who had it with him when he was British ambassador to Norway at the start of World War II. It remained in Oslo in the confusion of his recall to London.

The envoy's surviving son and heir, who put it for sale, said he had no idea of the existence of the painting before its ownership was traced to him.

It was the main attraction in a sale of 124 Victorian pictures which realized $1.1 million.

Alan Alda, Carol Burnett Picked As Favorites

CAROL BURNETT

HOLLYWOOD (AP) — Actor Alan Alda and actresses Carol Burnett and Jane Fonda, along with the television series "M-A-S-H," were named Thursday as the public's favorites in the People's Choice Awards.

Winners, who were presented their awards at Television Center in Hollywood, are chosen on the basis of a national public opinion survey.

Alda and Miss Burnett were named as both all-round best entertainer and favorite television performer in the male and female categories.

ALAN ALDA

It was the fourth time each has been selected best all-around entertainer.

Jane Fonda, who last year won as best movie actress, shared that spot this time with Goldie Hawn, while Clint Eastwood edged Burt Reynolds and Robert Redford as best movie actor. Reynolds won the award last year.

A perennial favorite, "M-A-S-H," won for the fourth consecutive year as favorite TV comedy series

"The Empire Strikes Back" was named best motion picture, with NBC's highly acclaimed "Shogun" capturing honors as favorite television mini-series and "Dallas" taking kudos as best TV dramatic program.

Diana Canova of "I'm a Big Girl Now" and Tom Selleck of "Magnum, P.I." were selected as favorite female and male performers in a new TV series. Brooke Shields, who co-starred in "Blue Lagoon," was named best young movie performer, and Gary Coleman of "Diff'rent Strokes" won as favorite young TV personality.

Fabled Charlie Chan Reappears—Without Script

FILMETER

A capsule look at cinema

FILMETER is compiled by Dick Kleiner in Hollywood and the N.E.A. staff in both Hollywood and New York.

NEW RELEASES

CHARLIE CHAN AND THE CURSE OF THE DRAGON QUEEN (PG) — Peter Ustinov, Lee Grant, Angie Dickinson(Comedy mystery) Ancient proverb: He who forgets script is caught with plots down. The idea to bring back the old Oriental sleuth was a good one, and Ustinov is a dandy Chan. But they simply forgot a decent story line. The result? This is a pretty bland Chan.GRADE: C

GENERAL RELEASE

BREAKER MORANT (PG) — Edward Woodward, Jack Thompson. (Drama) Filmed in Australia, this is the story of three Australian carabineers in the Boer War who are tried by a British military court for murdering seven Boers and a German missionary. A taut film adaption of a play which explores man's heart as well as an empire's psyche. Brilliantly acted, it truly excites, in the best meaning of the word. GRADE: A

DOGS OF WAR, THE (R) — Christopher Walken, Colin Blakely. (Action adventure) A first-rate version of Frederick Forsyth's thriller about the mercenaries who try to take over a corrupt Idi Amin-like African country. Great action sequences and some fine touches of the bizarre, but it's all marred by the fact that Walken, a fine actor, is much too young to play the supposedly veteran mercenary who commands the operation. GRADE: B

FORT APACHE, THE BRONX (R) — Paul Newman, Ken Wahl, Edward Asner. (Police Drama) This is certainly one of the finest about New York's finest, or any police force for that matter based on truth, it is a look at the workings of the police in a Bronx precinct so wild it's nicknamed Fort Apache. And one cop — Newman — is faced with a terrible decision. This is first-rate film-making all the way.GRADE: A

INCREDIBLE SHRINKING WOMAN, THE (PG) — Lily Tomlin, Charles Grodin, Ned Beatty. (Comedy) The old sci-fi favorite has been modernized,humorized and feminized for Lily, and the result shinks. She's a nice, typical housewife whose body reacts adversely to today's chemical additives, and she begins shrinking. Some very funny moments, but the script is weak and so this is little more than a series of skits strung together. GRADE: B-minus

LAST METRO, THE (PG) — Catherine Deneuve, Heinz Bennent. (Drama) Paris. World War II. The Nazis occupy the city and we watch as a theater tries to stay open. The theater's guiding spirit, a Jew, is hidden by his wife, the company's star, in the basement. And the show must go on. A promising plot, but director and co-writer Francois Truffaut lets it fall apart totally, with a preposterous love affair contributing mightily to the downfall. GRADE:C

MELVIN AND HOWARD (PG) — Paul LeMat, Mary Steenburgen, Jason Robards. (Drama) The improbable, perhaps even impossible, but maybe true story of the loser and the billionaire. This is how Howard Huges and Melvin Dummar got together, and what the "Mormon will" meant to poor Melvin and his family. It's more about Melvin's life before the will, however, and that's pretty drery, although touching. The whole thing is strangely touching, and very well done.GRADE: B-plus

POPEYE (PG) — Robin Williams, Shelley Duvall, Paul L. Smith, Paul Dooley. (Comedy with music) The comic strip hero is reborn, in a stylized version by Robert Altman that grows on you. The flimsy story is the weakest thing, but the acting (especially Shelley Duvall as Olive Oyl) is fine, the effects are fun and the music fits neatly. It's a pleasant romp. GRADE: B

RAGING BULL (R) — Robert Deniro. (Drama) This is a film by Martin Scorsese that depicts the rise and fall of prize fighter Jake LaMotta. It is powerful, but always very self-conscious of its artistry; you never for a moment forget you are watching a movie (and a performance by DeNiro) that is designed to be arty. Thus, it loses its punch. It is bloody and raucous, but never for a moment real. GRADE: B

SPHINX (PG) — Lesley-Anne Down, Frank Langella. (Drama) In her search for the well-concealed tomb of an ancient pharoah, a beautiful young Egyptologist (Down) runs afoul of black marketeers dealing in antiquities, and falls in love with a mysterious Egyptian official (Langella) who may not be what he seems. The narrative line is undecipherable and cliche-ridden, and the love story is strictly no-sparks. Though filmed on location in Egypt, it's all pretty forgettable. GRADE: C-minus

(Film grading: A — superb; B — good; C — average; D — poor; F — awful)

We must develop them so we won't be dependent

Our Many Energy Sources

Natural gas
Clean-burning natural gas will continue to be a source of energy for years to come. It costs a lot to find, but because of higher profits offered gas companies, they are drilling even deeper to find new wells.

Coal
We have more coal than any other fuel. We have found ways to turn coal into a liquid and a gas. We are trying to make burning it better and cleaner. Coal will be a big source of energy for years to come.

Nuclear energy
Nuclear energy is usually made by using a material called uranium. The use of nuclear, or atomic, energy will probably increase. Nuclear experts in government and industry are trying to work out safer ways of storing nuclear wastes. A "breeder" reactor is a newer source of atomic energy that produces more fuel than it uses. Fusion is another type of atomic energy. This will take many years to develop, but it is a safer source.

Hydro power
About 15 percent of our country's energy is generated by water falling over dams. The "high" dam sites have already been developed. In the future many new low dams will be built to generate more hydro power.

Oil
Oil is our most important source of energy. Higher prices and profits have made oil companies try harder to find more oil in the U.S. Our country is trying to conserve oil. Coal has replaced oil to make some electricity. Good mass transit could help save our oil.

Synthetic fuels
U.S. businesses, with government help, are trying to develop synthetic fuels that will replace oil.

Shale and tar sands

Tar sands are sands that are covered with a heavy oil or tar. These sands are found mostly in Utah. It takes a lot of water to get oil from both shale and tar sands. This problem will have to be solved.

Gasohol
Gasohol is made from a blend of 10 percent alcohol (made mostly from corn) and 90 percent gasoline. People do not agree if this will be of use in the future since the process uses food to produce a fuel.

Biomass
Biomass is another word for garbage power. The garbage can be changed into a gas or it can be mixed with coal to make steam. It costs a lot to make energy from trash.

Geothermal

Solar
Many people are using rooftop solar panels to warm houses and heat water. Some houses are being built to make use of the sun's rays without solar collectors.

The sea
Scientists are looking at ways to use the waves, currents, tides and ocean temperatures to generate power. However, these can only be used in a few special places.

Wind power
Man has been using wind power for many years. The problem of what to do when the wind stops blowing has not been solved.

Ura Bird Interviews The Black Stallion

Kelly Reno, the human star of the film, gives a helping hand to the stallion's owner, Franny Cuello. She still walks with a cane from her accident. That's Amy Carter in the background.

The Black Stallion is the famous star from the movie with the same name. Ura Bird interviewed him when he was putting on a show at the White House several months ago. His real name is "Cass Ole."

U.B.: What is it like being a famous movie star?
B.S.: I travel a lot. I go to racetracks and horse shows to put on exhibitions. I still compete in horse shows. I still win ribbons, I might add.

U.B.: What kind of tricks can you do?
B.S.: I can rear up, sit down, lie down and do figure eights, to name a few. I am so well trained, I really don't have to practice, except for the exercise. I had stand-ins in the movie for the dangerous scenes, but I was in 85 percent of it.

U.B.: Do you wear any makeup?
B.S.: Yes, the white spots on my forehead and feet have to be dyed black.

U.B.: Where do you live?
B.S.: I live in San Antonio, Texas, at an Arabian horse farm. When I am in town, people come to see me on the weekends.

U.B.: Tell me about your past.
B.S.: I am now 11 years old. I belong to a young lady named Franny Cuello. We went to many horse shows where I won over 500 ribbons. While I was making the film, Franny was hurt in an accident, but her love for me made her try to walk and ride. I helped bring her back to health.

U.B.: What are your next plans?
B.S.: I'm glad you asked that. I am filming my next movie, "The Black Stallion Returns."

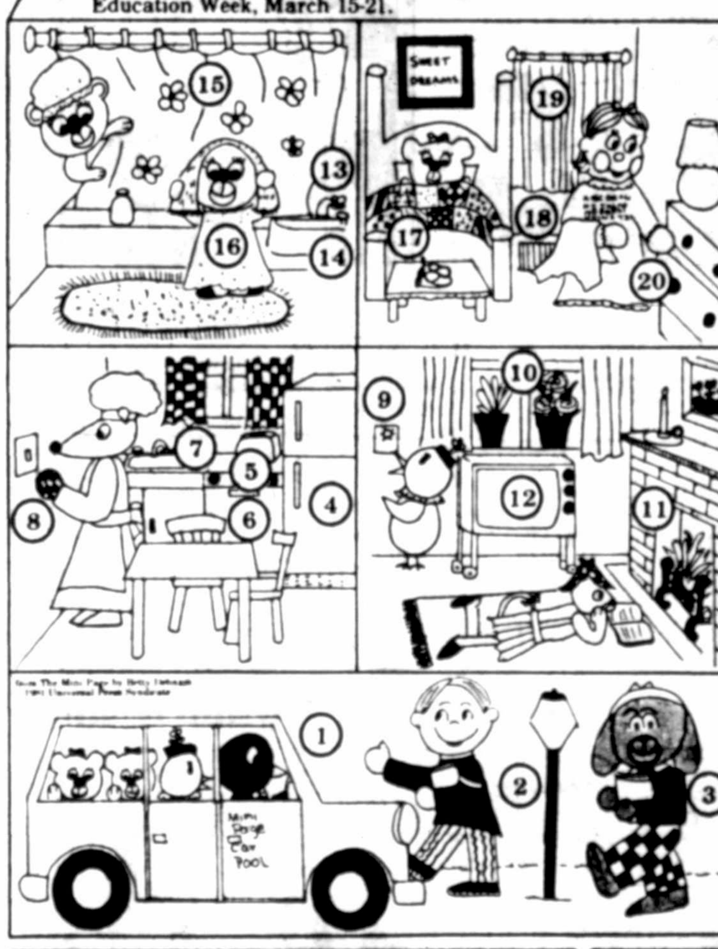
Energy Saving Tips from The Mini Page Gang!

March 20 is National Energy Education Day. This is a special day set aside by Congress to call attention to what we are learning and also what we need to know about energy. Many students will be passing on information to their parents. This day is a part of National Energy Education Week, March 15-21.



1. Form a car pool when possible.

6. Run the dishwasher only when it is full.
7. Check for leaky faucets.
8. Turn off lights when you leave a room.
9. Check the thermostat. Keep it at 68 degrees in the winter and 72 degrees in the summer.

17. Use an extra blanket rather than turning up the heat.
18. Check to see that nothing blocks furnace air vents.
19. Open the draperies in the morning to let the sunshine in and close them at night to keep the heat in.
20. Put your clothes away if they aren't dirty so Mom won't have to wash and iron so much.

Teacher's Guide

For use with issue: Our Many Energy Sources

Page 1: Pre- and beginning readers:
1. Discuss the fact that energy is the capacity for doing work. People use energy. Machines do, too. Talk about an energy shortage and what it means.
2. Discuss the many appliances and devices you have at home and at school that use energy. Tour the school and home and point out the many things that consume energy.

Reader:
To check comprehension, ask:
1. Why are companies trying harder to find oil and natural gas?
2. What is a "breeder" reactor?
3. Why do some people object to gasohol's use?
4. What is a problem with shale and tar sands?

Reader: Ask the children to put a check by the energy conservation tips they observe and an X by the ones they don't. Discuss how they could improve.
