

Chicago Mayor To Live In Crime-Ridden Area

CHICAGO (UPI) — Mayor Jane M. Byrne said Sunday she plans to move from her ritzy Gold Coast apartment into a crime-infested tenement where 11 people have been killed in the last two months and live there "for as long as it takes to clean it up."

"I refuse to give up another generation to gangs," Mrs. Byrne, criticized for failing to carry out her 1979 campaign promise to clean up the neighborhoods, told reporters at her present home, 10 blocks from the Cabrini-Green housing project where she plans to move.

The project's 23 high-rise buildings and 55 row houses, are home to about 14,000 residents — virtually all of them black and poor. It has been the site of open turf warfare between gangs in the last two months.

The mayor, who will be joined at Cabrini by her husband and political adviser, Jay McMullen, said they will stay "for as long as it takes to clean it up, and to prove to the community there... they are going to live without fear (and) raise their children without intimidation."

"I'm not afraid over there at all and I think what you have to prove is that you don't have to be afraid," said Mrs. Byrne, who will receive extensive police protection.

"If people want to say it's vote getting or anything like that I would suggest that whoever says it take the next apartment."

Mrs. Byrne, talking to reporters in her elegant apartment overlooking the Loop, Lake Michigan and Cabrini-Green, said she will begin looking for her new apartment

Tuesday. She said she and McMullen, however, will not give up their present dwelling.

An unprecedented 800 eviction notices were handed out, last Thursday, to Cabrini-Green residents who defied Chicago Housing Authority regulations by allowing unauthorized people to live in their apartments, said Mrs. Byrne.

In announcing the mayor's plan, Saturday night, McMullen said the mayor wanted "to find out the problems of why a highrise 10 blocks away from where we live now should be so different."

Eleven people have been killed and 37 injured in violence during battles between factions of the Cobra Stones and the Black Gangster Disciples.

IDENTITY MAY BE FOUND — Host David Hartman chats with amnesia victim "Jane Doe" on ABC-TV's Good Morning America show last month. The woman, found naked and near death in a Florida state park seven months ago, appeared on the program in an effort to find her identity. On Saturday, a Florida State Hospital official said the woman has been identified as the troubled daughter of a suburban Chicago couple. (AP Laserphoto)

Search Narrows For Jane Doe's Kin; Officials Apprehensive

FORT LAUDERDALE, Fla. (AP) — The search for the identity of a woman found nude, near death and with no memory has been narrowed to three "strong possibilities," officials say. They want one couple to meet Jane Doe to see if she is their missing daughter, but doctors advise that a face-to-face meeting might not be wise.

"All I can say is we have more diagnostic tests for Jane this week, and we are checking out three different families," said Jackie Daie, a spokeswoman at South Florida State Hospital, where the woman known only as Jane Doe has lived since a park ranger found her wandering in Birch State Park last September.

"All three of them look very promising, but she can't belong to three families, can she?" said the spokeswoman. Meanwhile, in Roselle, Ill., Irene Tomiczek said she saw Jane Doe on ABC's "Good Morning America" program and "When I looked at her on TV, I said, 'That's my daughter.'"

Police have asked Mrs. Tomiczek and her husband to come to Florida to meet Jane Doe to determine if she is their daughter, Cheryl Ann, who has been missing for seven years.

"We've asked the Tomiczek family to make arrangements, that we will be notifying them within a week to come to Florida," said Fort Lauderdale police Sgt. Frank Schueler. "We have alerted the other families that there's a strong possibility that we could call them."

Officials said Jane Doe provided clues to her identity while under the influence of sodium amytal, a drug that can act as a "truth serum." In at least two such sessions, she disclosed memories strongly linking her to Miss Tomiczek, officials say, adding that they still are not completely convinced of her identity.

"More And More"

"It's looking more and more like it's her," a hospital official told The Fort Lauderdale News and Sun-Sentinel.

The Fort Lauderdale newspaper, in a copyright story Saturday, said doctors and investigators are expected to decide this week whether the Tomiczeks should meet Jane Doe.

"It could be devastating to her," said a doctor who asked anonymously. "I don't think she's ready. I'm very leery of it, and so are some others."

"Emotionally, she had to be tremendously harmed," said psychologist Adelaide Perez, adding: "A lady could come tomorrow and say, 'That's my daughter,' but it wouldn't help if Jane doesn't remember, or doesn't want to remember."

The other families considered "strong possibilities" by officials are from the western and southeastern United States, Schueler told The Miami Herald. He would not identify them.

The state hospital and Fort Lauderdale police have received hundreds of in-

KKK To Ask Probe Of Violence

MERIDEN, Conn. (AP) — The Ku Klux Klan will seek a federal investigation of the weekend violence that erupted at a Klan rally and left at least 25 people injured, a national KKK leader said, Sunday.

Bill Wilkinson, Imperial Wizard of the Invisible Empire, Knights of the Ku Klux Klan, also said the Klan would sue the International Committee Against Racism and the Communist Workers Party in connection with Saturday's bloody clash.

The rally in support of police in this blue-collar city turned violent as anti-Klan protesters hurled rocks and bottles at white-robed demonstrators, pelted the Klansmen as they fled, and then turned on police.

Wilkinson, of Denham Springs, La., blamed the melee on "cowardly communists hiding behind innocent bystanders."

As Wilkinson made his statement, 80 policemen from six communities surrounded Wilkinson, eight-robed Klansmen and Connecticut Klan leader Bill Bohndorf. The Klansmen staged the news conference at the busy intersection of East Main and Broad streets in the heart of this central Connecticut city.

At least 19 policemen were hurt, Saturday, as they tried to protect Klansmen fleeing toward their cars from the rally at city hall.

An unknown number of counter-demonstrators were injured, and six Klan members, pelted with debris by rock-and-bottle throwing crowds, were treated for injuries.

One Klanswoman was in guarded condition, Sunday morning, at Yale-New Haven Hospital. A hospital spokesman said she had undergone surgery after being hit on the head by an unidentified object.

The Klan rally began, shortly after noon, with some 20 robed and hooded Klansmen marching down Meriden's main street to city hall in support of local police, according to Wilkinson. Police have been criticized for not suspending a white patrolman who shot and killed a black shoplifting suspect while the patrolman was off-duty.

But the rally was cut short when demonstrators from the International Com-

Poland's Leaders Attack Solidarity

Nation 'Facing Serious Threat'

WARSAW, Poland (AP) — The Communist Party's ruling Politburo on Sunday lashed out at what it called political activities of the independent union Solidarity and said they were "creating a state of anarchy." It warned that Poland is "facing a serious threat."

Shortly after the Politburo statement was carried by the official Polish news agency PAP, the Warsaw Solidarity branch announced that it had canceled a two-hour warning strike threatened for Monday. The strike had been planned to protest the beatings by police, last week, of Solidarity members in the industrial city of Bydgoszcz, 170 miles northwest of here. Three of the unionists were hospitalized for treatment of their injuries.

Monday Meeting

The national Solidarity union issued a communique, late Sunday night, saying its leaders would meet Monday in Bydgoszcz and calling on all chapters to refrain from strike actions until it decided on what steps to take.

Warsaw radio reported that Premier Wojciech Jaruzelski met Sunday in Silesia, south-central Poland, with Soviet Pact commanders who are leading Soviet-bloc military exercises in and around Poland. The radio said Jaruzelski, who is also a general and the defense minister, conferred with fellow defense ministers Martin Dzur of Czechoslovakia and Heinz Hoffmann of East Germany.

In Moscow, a commentary carried by the English-language service of Radio Moscow renewed the Soviet charge that the independent trade union is trying to cast itself in the role of a political opposition to Poland's communist regime.

The United States and its allies have warned the Soviet Union not to use the labor unrest in Poland as a pretext for military intervention. Reports, earlier this month, that the Warsaw Pact nations would be holding exercises in Poland and neighboring countries prompted expressions of concern in Washington. But the U.S. officials noted that the current exercises are normal for this time of year.

The Warsaw branch, Solidarity's largest, said it would remain on strike alert and act according to the decisions of the national union leaders. A two-hour warning strike in Warsaw would have dealt another blow to the 90-day labor truce sought by Premier Jaruzelski following his appointment in February.

National leaders of Solidarity had responded to the beating incident in Bydgoszcz, a city of 350,000, with a national strike alert, declared Friday for its estimated 10 million members. The incident was the first major violent clash between police and the independent union since it was formed during last summer's nationwide labor unrest.

The Politburo statement came as talks in Warsaw between union and government leaders over last Thursday's beatings ended inconclusively, and the union called its leaders for Monday's emergency meeting.

Polish radio said the government-union talks would resume Monday and national Solidarity leader Lech Walesa said, "The talks look like they will last a couple of months."

'Wind Dancer' Sees Average Crop Year

By LARRY ARNOLD

Avalanche-Journal Staff

ON A scale of one to four, this year will be a three.

At least that's one way of looking at the early morning prediction of Chief Runkles, who performed the annual Tab'a'na Yuan'e ceremony Sunday at sunrise at the Garza County Junior Livestock Pavilion in Post.

Tab'a'na Yuan'e is an authentic Indian "sunrise wind ceremony" which used the wind's direction at the exact moment of sunrise each March 22 to determine the success of the coming year.

Although winds were gusting so powerfully that the ceremony had to be moved indoors, a special messenger pegged the wind direction to be from the north, north-west.

Chief Runkles prefers to predict an "average" year based on the wind ceremony but the other three choices would have been a "bumper crop" year, a "poor year" or a year "to go fishing."

The farmers who were first told about the ceremony in 1906 kept accurate records and since that time, including the years since 1973 when the ceremony became a Post Chamber of Commerce-sponsored event, the predictions have been found to be 94 percent accurate.

The wind must be from the east or northeast for the very good "bumper" crop prediction and the Tab'a'na Yuan'e still has yet to experience the first of these.

Between 75 and 100 persons watched the ceremony and then participated in the Appreciation Breakfast sponsored by the Chamber of Commerce. The high winds and chill factor may have frightened off some spectators as nearly 200 See AVERAGE CROP Page 14

Import Restrictions May Hike Price Of All Cars

WASHINGTON (AP) — If Japan cuts auto exports to the United States, Americans likely will pay hundreds of dollars more for their Datsuns or Toyotas, and perhaps Pontiacs and Fords as well, some economists and auto dealers say.

"Unquestionably people will be paying more money not only for Japanese cars but for all cars," says Robert M. McElwaine, president of the American International Automobile Dealers Association.

And many economists believe a rollback in Japanese imports, as is being considered by President Reagan, also will add to inflation in other ways — for example, prompting higher wage demands by auto workers.

McElwaine, whose association of 4,500 dealers selling imports is strongly opposed to any trade restraints, claims that while import curbs will mean jobs for auto workers they will cause layoffs in the selling and importing end of the industry.

U.S. car manufacturers acknowledge that the price of Japanese cars probably will be increased — if not by the manufacturers, then by the dealers — if imports are reduced by 200,000 or 300,000 cars as has been recommended by some members of the Reagan Cabinet. Japan sent 1.9 million cars and trucks to the United States last year, compared to 900,000 in 1976.

The promise of more jobs for auto workers has helped put the United Auto Workers union on the side of the industry seeking the restraints. "I think the Japanese have taken unfair advantage of this market," UAW President Douglas Fraser said Sunday. "The auto industry is an industry in trouble and what we need is time, time to turn this industry around."

David N. McCammon, vice president of Ford Motor Co., says the overall inflationary impact of the increase will be offset elsewhere, such as savings on unemployment costs. And he argues that U.S. manufacturers will not boost prices to match the Japanese because they want to sell cars and reduce their overstocked inventories.

"The American market right now is terribly competitive," says Roger B. Smith, chairman of General Motors Corp.

Another GM official added: "We'd like to sell another 10,000 cars this month and if we could do that by not raising prices, we sure wouldn't raise prices. Our biggest problem is volume."

But others, including members of Reagan's Cabinet-level auto task force, car dealers, consumer groups, economists and industry analysts are not so certain about the industry's intention to hold down prices.

Perhaps dealers will not raise prices immediately, "but you're not going to see any of those rebates anymore," said one critic of import restrictions.

The Reagan task force, headed by Transportation Secretary Drew Lewis, has generally agreed that a reduction of Japanese imports would add to inflation — an increase in the Consumer Price Index of slightly less than one half of 1 percent — and probably raise the price of Japanese cars by $300 to $460, an administration source said.

"We don't know what effect that will have on American cars," the source, asking to remain anonymous, said in an interview.

Industry officials say the manufacturers' price of Japanese cars is generally $100 to $200 less than the comparable model of American cars similarly equipped.

The difference, says John J. Koons Jr., whose family owns 10 Washington-area dealerships that sell both domestic and foreign cars, is as much as $400 to $600 when dealer profit margins are considered.

Koons says it's too early to determine the price impact of cutting the imports. However, he said, "If the supply (of imports) is reduced by 10 percent across the board, your income has been reduced" and dealers will increase prices to make up for the reduction.

Both conservative and liberal economists believe the inflationary impact of import curbs would go beyond the price of automobiles.

Recently, Charles L. Schultze, an economist at the liberal Brookings Institution, and Eugene J. McAllister of the conservative Heritage Foundation, agreed on one thing: import reductions will lessen the incentive for auto workers to agree to wage concessions.

Restraining imports would "validate the auto industry's current wage and price structure" and jeopardize chances to "force some wage concessions" in auto negotiations next year, wrote Schultze, who was chairman of the Council of Economic Advisers in the Carter administration.

Atlanta Patrol Tension Eases

ATLANTA (AP) — Police arrested a fourth supporter of armed patrols at an Atlanta housing project Sunday as only 50 people showed up for a community rally called to solidify backing for the "self-defense" effort against the killer or killers of 20 black children.

The situation was tense at Techwood Homes, where three men have been charged with illegally carrying weapons and a fourth was arrested Sunday in connection with an angry confrontation with police the day before. At issue was the bearing of arms by what organizers say are self-defense patrols.

But police, who call the patrols a vigilante effort, kept their distance Sunday, and only about 50 people came to a rally designed to drum up support for armed patrols at the 5,500-resident project.

Meanwhile, black ministers from across the state participated in a 50-car procession through the city. The procession, which included 15 hearses, was followed by a memorial service for the slain children at the Salem Baptist Church, with 1,000 people attending.

Israel Green, head of the Techwood Homes tenants association and organizer of the patrols, barred reporters from the meeting, which took place indoors.

Afterward, all 50 people leaving the meeting refused comment. The group milled around, then some 25 people began marching in the street, demanding to know the whereabouts of the man arrested Sunday.

Police in squad cars kept watch from a distance, and other patrol cars crisscrossed the project grounds.

Although Green had said earlier that another gun would be carried Sunday during patrols, "by a woman this time," no one was seen displaying a weapon.

Police said they arrested Edward Cooper, 38, in connection with a confrontation at the project Saturday in which a police car was taken "hostage" by protesters for one hour.

Cooper, also known as Modibo Kadiatou, was charged with obstruction of officers in the performance of their duties, according to police spokesman Ben Sims.

"He was one of the people sitting around the car," said Sims, adding no other warrants were issued.

Most patrol members carry wood or metal baseball bats, but some have carried guns. The patrols, with members carrying only bats, continued throughout Saturday night.

Similar patrols are to begin this week at Capitol Homes project, and police disclosed that a youngster reported missing from that project had returned home.

Missing children are of prime concern in Atlanta, where a special police task force is investigating the unsolved slayings of 20 black children and the disappearances of two black children since July 1979.

When the Techwood patrols began Friday, activists Gene Ferguson and Chimumenga Jenga, neither of whom live at Techwood, were arrested on charges of possession of deadly weapons at a public gathering.

Jenga, who carried an M-1 carbine, also was charged with obstruction of an officer. Police have characterized Jenga and Ferguson as "rabble-rousers."

Jerome Gibbs, a Techwood resident, was charged Saturday with possession of a pistol without a license. The arrested men are due in court today.

Many Techwood residents have expressed displeasure with the patrols, with some suggesting the publicity might entice the killer or killers to Techwood. None of the 20 slain or two missing black children was from Techwood, although one victim lived eight blocks away.

Green was undaunted. "We're going to have 22 arrests, one for each kid that's been murdered or missing," he said.

While Friday's incident was quelled swiftly, on Saturday an angry crowd surrounded the car in which Gibbs was placed, refusing for several minutes to allow it to leave.

Later, when Deputy Chief Eldrin Bell arrived, the jeering crowd, which had swelled to more than 50, surrounded his car, with some in the group sticking their legs beneath the car's wheels.

When Bell walked out of the area, the crowd, then numbering about 100, followed and an officer drove the deputy chief's car away. Within minutes, the lone remaining police car was taken "hostage," with demonstrators positioning themselves on folding chairs around the empty vehicle.

That car was released about an hour later when Gibbs was freed.

The patrols are called the Ron Carter Patrols after a Black Panther who accidentally killed himself while cleaning a gun.

Cuba Called Base For Soviets

PALM BEACH, Fla. (AP) — Earl T. Smith, who was ambassador to Cuba when the island nation became communist, regards Cuba today as a well-armed base for Soviet expansion in Central America and urges a hard-line policy against it.

"There can be no co-existence with communist Cuba, and detente is ridiculous," said Smith, who served as the ranking U.S. diplomat to Cuba from June 13, 1957, until Jan. 10, 1959, a few days after Fidel Castro's rebels entered Havana.

"Russia is on the road to Central America; Nicaragua is another Cuba," Smith warned in a recent interview. "And until Reagan became president, El Salvador was going under. We have to stand firm someplace and, fortunately, it appears Reagan has chosen El Salvador."

Smith, appointed by Dwight D. Eisenhower, said that even before Castro overthrew President Fulgencio Batista, he had warned Washington officials not to trust the young revolutionary. Smith resigned after the revolution over his opposition to Castro.

Diplomatic relations ended between the United States and Cuba on Jan. 3, 1961.

Area Again To Escape Blowing Dust

A-J News Services
Although winds gusted to 30 mph or more Sunday the Lubbock area escaped another bout with blowing dust, and the outlook for today, according to the National Weather Service, is for a further reprieve.

Southerly winds, though, are expected to hit 10 to 15 mph velocities, diminishing to 5 to 10 mph tonight before rising again to 10 to 15 mph Tuesday.

Forecasters called for fair skies over the Lubbock area through Tuesday, with cool night and warm afternoons. The highs today and Tuesday are expected to be near 70 after nighttime lows in the upper 30s. On Sunday the high reached only 58 degrees in Lubbock.

For the state as a whole today, the weather service expects decreasing cloudiness over the Panhandle and to the north, with fair skies the rule through Tuesday.

The extended outlook for West Texas calls for sunny days and fair nights Wednesday and Thursday, turning partly cloudy Friday. Temperatures in the South Plains Wednesday through Friday are expected to reach into the 70s, with lows moving out of the 30s late in the week.

A strong frontal system, meanwhile, pushed heavy rain and thunderstorms across the Gulf Coast states Sunday, with thunderstorms dumping more than an inch of rain in parts of Georgia and Florida and tornadoes reported touching down near Tampa Bay.

Rain was scattered from Missouri to the Carolinas, and a tornado watch was in effect for central Florida during Sunday afternoon.

The rain quenched hundreds of forest fires in the Southeast, where parched conditions have resulted in blazes that have destroyed half a million acres of timber and brushland so far this year.

Cloudy skies continued over the Northeast and light snow spread over the central Appalachians. A travel advisory was issued for the mountains of southwestern Virginia because up to three inches of snow was expected there Sunday night.

Showers were scattered over the West Coast, turning to snow in the mountains. Travel advisories continued Sunday for parts of the Sierra Nevada and Lake Tahoe.

The U.S. Forest Service Avalanche Warning Center in Fort Collins, Colo., continued through today an avalanche alert in the Colorado Rockies in the wake of the first spring snowstorm of the year, which dumped as much as a foot of new snow.

Mid-afternoon temperatures around the nation ranged from a low of 25 in Hot Springs, Va., to a high of 80 in Palm Springs, Calif.

Sunny skies and mild temperatures were predicted for most of the nation today, with showers scattered over the middle and southern Atlantic Coast. The northern Plains were expected to reach the 50s, with the southern half of the nation in the 60s and 70s.

City Fire Blamed On Short-Circuit

An electrical short-circuit apparently was the cause of a Sunday morning fire that caused substantial damage to the 2116 28th Street home of D.H. Palmer, according to Lubbock Fire Department reports.

Firefighters were dispatched to the residence at 9:04 a.m. The 18 firemen had the blaze under control in four minutes after their arrival, a fire department spokesman said.

The fire caused an estimated $1,000 damage to the structure and contents of the home. Reports indicate the heaviest damage was in the bedroom and bathroom.

No injuries were reported.

Carol Burnett To Seek Less Damages

LOS ANGELES (AP) — Carol Burnett's lawyer says he won't ask for the full $10 million the entertainer sought in damages from the National Enquirer when final arguments begin today in Miss Burnett's libel suit.

Attorney Ed Bronson would not reveal the specific amount he planned to request when the two sides address jurors in Superior Court after a weekend break.

Meanwhile, Baseball Hall of Famer Bob Feller, a former Cleveland Indians' pitcher, has filed a $3 million libel suit against the Enquirer.

Miss Burnett has testified she fought for five years to bring the Enquirer to trial for a March 2, 1976 article that made it appear she had been drunk at the Rive Gauche restaurant in Washington, D.C.

Although the Enquirer printed a retraction, she sued the magazine because of the distress she experienced from the story, which she called "a pack of lies." Miss Burnett testified it upset her because both her parents died of alcoholism at age 46, and she has long campaigned against alcohol abuse.

She admitted under cross-examination that her career had not suffered since the article was published. The Enquirer argued that drunkenness was neither mentioned nor implied in the article and there was no intent to harm Miss Burnett.

Bronson said the request for $10 million in damages "was a statement ... we, by law, were required to put in the complaint. It is more than we are going to ask for."

Both sides rested their cases Thursday after seven days of testimony from 15 witnesses, all called by Bronson.

On Tuesday, comedian Johnny Carson used his NBC-TV "Tonight Show" to denounce an Enquirer article that said his third marriage was about to break up.

Calling the Enquirer editors "liars," Carson challenged them to sue him for slander.

Jurors were asked Wednesday at Enquirer lawyer William Masterson's request whether they heard Carson's statement. And Superior Court Judge Peter Smith dismissed two of them. With one alternate stepping in, the jury shrank to 11.

RON HUGULEY IS 30 TODAY

The judge on Friday dismissed as defendants the tabloid's editor, a gossip columnist and the Enquirer's distributor, leaving only the Enquirer. Smith earlier had ruled the Enquirer was a magazine, not a newspaper as Enquirer lawyers had claimed.

The distinction is important because California law contains strong protections for newspapers that print a retraction after publishing a potentially libelous article.

Budget Director Says Cuts Will Aid Poor

WASHINGTON (AP) — Budget director David Stockman said Sunday that by creating jobs and reducing inflation and interest rates, the Reagan administration's economic proposals "will do more good for the working poor than any of the categorical programs on the federal books today."

Stockman denied that the incentive to get jobs would be reduced for the poor because cuts in food stamp, Medicaid and other benefits the working poor can get would lessen the income difference between those people and those on welfare.

"I think the best incentive is the availability of a job, and that's what the program is designed to provide," Stockman said on the ABC television program "Issues and Answers."

"Financial incentives will do precious little good in an economy that's stagnant like ours."

He said the administration's plan would create two million jobs next year and 11 million over the next five years.

The budget director said the charge that the economic package would hurt the poor was ironic.

"Here you have a national economic program that can bring the inflation rate down to 8-percent, from double digits, next year, (at to) below 5 percent by the end of the decade," he said. "Who's getting hit the worst, the hardest, by grocery costs, by energy costs, today if it isn't the working poor?"

He predicted Congress would approve, "both in magnitude and composition," most of the administration's package of more than $48 billion in spending cuts.

Concerning the proposal for a tax cut of 10 percent a year for three years, Stockman said that for the first time in 20 years Congress would pass a tax package based on providing incentives to produce rather than simply shifting the tax burden.

"I just don't accept the assumption that the federal government has the responsibility to supplement the income of the working poor through a whole series of transfer payments," he said.

"We believe that the guy who takes two jobs and makes $26,000 a year shouldn't be obligated to transfer part of his income in taxes to the guy who's making $10,000."

Stockman didn't dispute that many of the "safety net" programs designed to protect the poor from budget cuts in fact help many people who work rather than those who are chronically unemployed. But he said "a preponderant share of the retired population of this country would be poor" if not for cost-of-living increases for those "safety net" programs, which include Social Security, veterans benefits and Medicare.

Asked why the administration didn't reduce or eliminate tax expenditures, such as income deductions, that favor the middle and upper income people rather than cut programs that serve the poor, Stockman said that would have been essentially raising taxes.

"You can't balance the budget by raising taxes. If you do you're simply going to further undermine the ability of our economy to save, to invest, to grow," he said.

Stockman said he would personally favor looking into the possibility of tax code changes such as reducing tax expenditures and closing loopholes later in President Reagan's term, but said the primary focus of the initial economic package was to cut spending and taxes swiftly.

He said direct expenditures benefiting the middle-and upper-income people were not spared from the budget ax.

"We have made higher income people no longer eligible for zero interest loans under the student loan program," he said, adding that the administration also proposed cutting off school-lunch subsidies to families with annual incomes of $16,000 or more.

Surrogate Parenthood Decision Awaited

PASADENA, Calif. (AP) — Denise Lucy Thrane can name the baby that is due any day now, but she may not be able to keep it because of a unique paternity-custody case filed when the surrogate mother reneged on her promise to give up the child.

Mrs. Thrane, a divorced mother of three from Arcadia, Calif., agreed last year to conceive and bear a baby for a childless couple from New York. But after she was artificially inseminated in June with sperm from James Noyes, she decided she wanted to keep the infant.

Noyes and his wife sued for custody of the baby. And the suit, which could affect the future of baby-by-contract agencies and surrogate-mother arrangements, opened in Superior Court Friday.

But the object of the dispute has yet to arrive, and Mrs. Thrane's lawyer said she had not yet entered the hospital.

"My assumption is that she's still not in the hospital and still hasn't had the baby," Stan Springer of West Covina, Calif., said Saturday. He could not be reached for comment Sunday.

Superior Court Judge Robert M. Olson, who said Friday the case had him "really in a quandary," considered several motions from the would-be parents and the surrogate mother.

Over the Noyeses' objections, he ruled Mrs. Thrane could give the baby a name. But at the couple's request, he ordered blood tests to help determine the child's father.

Olson also is considering an argument by Mrs. Thrane's lawyer that the case be dismissed on grounds that California law does not treat semen donors as natural fathers, who would have custody rights.

The Noyeses asked Olson to give them the infant or place it in a foster home until the case is decided, but the judge deferred a decision on that request.

He also delayed ruling on their request for a study of the Thrane and Noyes households.

The judge said he intended to proceed slowly and decide the case "in the best interests of the child."

But Olson added that lawmakers and society ultimately would have to deal with the questions the suit raises.

Lawyers involved in the case could recall only two other legal battles involving surrogate mothers, and neither involved a disagreement between the parties in the contract.

Man With Gun Arrested Along Bush Route

WASHINGTON (AP) — A 27-year-old Iranian student was arrested after he was found carrying a rifle with a telescopic lens near a route being traveled by Vice President George Bush, police said Sunday.

Kaveh Sotoudeh of Falls Church, Va., was arrested by police Saturday afternoon in the area of Chain Bridge and Canal Road after the Secret Service reported observing a man with a rifle about 3 p.m., police said.

Police said there was no indication that Sotoudeh, who was accompanied by an unidentified woman, was aware that Bush was in a motorcade traveling east on Canal Road.

"There is no overt connection" police Capt. Rodney A. Murray said. "We have no reason to believe he even knew it was the vice president's motorcade going by."

Police Capt. Rodney A. Murray said Sotoudeh, an Iranian national who is a student at American University, told police he was planning to do some target practicing and was "going to shoot at some cans."

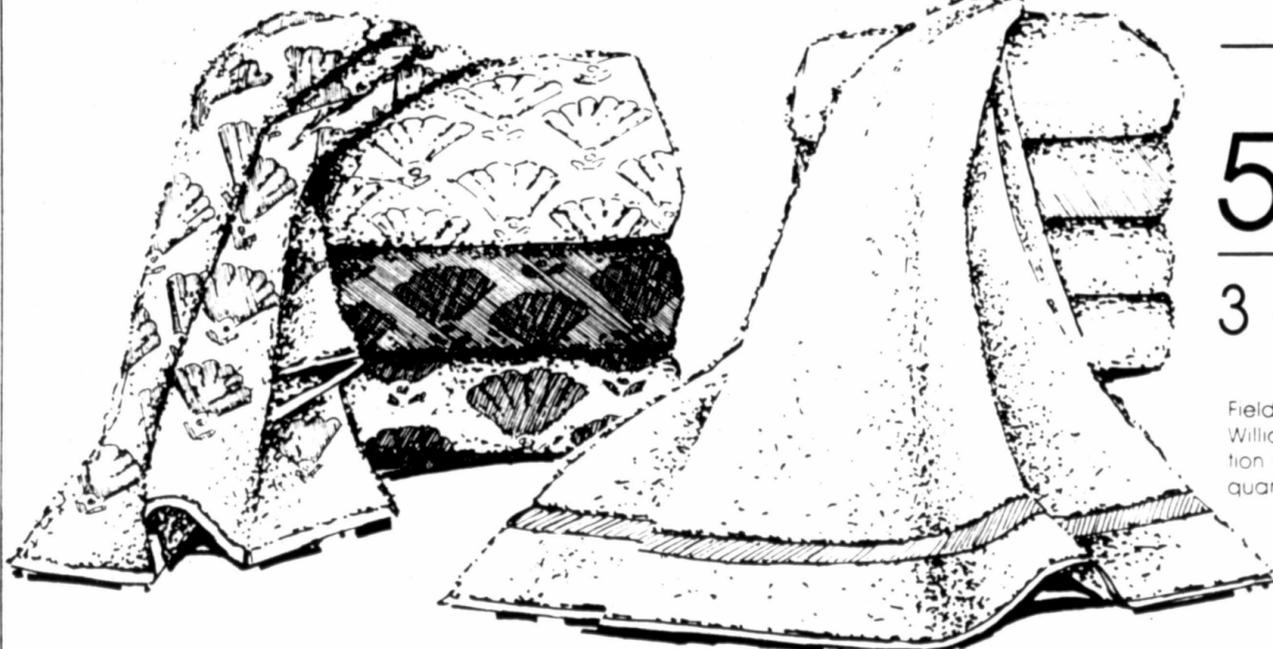

A rifle and a 22-caliber revolver were confiscated and Sotoudeh was charged with carrying a deadly weapon and an unregistered handgun, police said. He later was released on bail, police said.

CITY AND AREA TO BENEFIT

New Flight Service Welcome

LUBBOCK AND the area got another shot in the arm for their expanding airline service this past week.

Continental Airlines officials announced the addition of a new flight which will give South Plains residents direct connections into Denver one way and to Austin and Houston the other.

The new addition is on top of Continental flights to and from Lubbock and the West Coast, via El Paso and Tucson, which the airline now maintains.

In making its announcement, Continental opens up a direct route to the Denver hub, with fast connections to the Seattle area, Canada, San Francisco and Los Angeles.

The Austin-Houston connection also will offer travelers to those Texas political and business centers a choice.

WITH THE latest announcement, Lubbock Chamber of Commerce officials correctly observed that Lubbock probably has the best airline connections of any city its size in the nation.

Only recently, American Airlines announced that it would start direct service three times daily to and from Lubbock and Dallas.

The expanded services enhance long-standing connections offered by Braniff and Continental, as well as later routes offered by Texas International and Southwest.

Lubbock boardings, which have hovered just above or under the 500,000 mark for the past three years, are testimony to the fact area residents have accepted air travel as safe, efficient and still reasonable in price.

Not only do passengers have a multiple choice of intra-state and domestic flights, but direct connections through Braniff and Continental, plus soon-to-be American, to any number of overseas points.

BUT, THE airline business in Lubbock is just that, as well as a convenient way to get from here to there and back.

Lubbock's International Airport, with its ultra-modern terminal, is recognized as one of the better such facilities for a city this size in the nation.

Both the airport and the various airlines employ a large number of persons who make Lubbock their home. And the city and area receive untold publicity from airline advertising, magazines and person-to-person talk.

To all of the airlines serving Lubbock and this region, we say welcome. And to the area's residents, we join the Chamber of Commerce in observing that the South Plains and Eastern New Mexico now have a wide range of airline service from which to take advantage.

ROWLAND EVANS AND ROBERT NOVAK:

Call Of The Mild

WASHINGTON—High-level conflict over the routine administration decision to postpone or attend a March 25 SALT session in Geneva with the Soviet Union reveals a troubling weakness in President Reagan's national security apparatus, threatening more serious problems in the future.

The issue seemed simple enough when on Feb. 20 Richard V. Allen wrote a brief "Dear Cap" note to Sec. of Defense Caspar Weinberger.

Reagan's national security assistant instructed Weinberger to set up a meeting with the State Department, the Central Intelligence Agency (CIA) and the Arms Control and Disarmament Agency (ACDA). Subject: the March 25 Geneva compliance-review meeting of the Standing Consultative Commission (SCC).

Allen quickly found himself in a bureaucratic crossfire so lethal that three weeks later, the fast-closing question of the March 25 meeting was still unresolved and Weinberger never has called the meeting Allen asked for.

That leaves this question: In his effort to avoid the open warfare that so weakened the Carter administration's State Department and National Security Council (NSC) staff, is Reagan substituting an even more costly clandestine warfare?

Allen's memorandum to Weinberger was never acknowledged by Weinberger. Instead, nearly one week later Sec. of State Alexander Haig's deputy, William P. Clark, and Weinberger's deputy, Frank Carlucci, sent word back to Allen that a "joint position" was being developed and that if this matter requires the President's attention, the President (not Allen) would be informed.

ROBERT WALTERS:

Techs In Spotlight

WASHINGTON—In a dramatic departure from tradition, the nation's governors have taken an important first step toward assessing and resolving one of the most crucial long-range problems confronting the United States today.

A day-long conference held here in conjunction with the meeting of the National Governors' Association examined the prospects for the country's survival and success in the rapidly emerging post-industrial era.

The conference, devoted to a serious review of complex issues, provided vindication for those governors who don't deserve to be stereotyped as short-sighted politicians unable or unwilling to look beyond the current session of the state legislature or the probable results of the next election.

ALTHOUGH THE conference, organized by California Gov. Edmund G. "Jerry" Brown Jr., was a success, the nation's prospects are considerably more clouded as its economy shifts away from heavy industry toward a high-technology future dominated by the information, knowledge and communication industries.

That profound change already is well under way. Since 1950, that portion of the country's work force employed in the industrial sector has plummeted from 65 percent to less than 35 percent, while the portion working in the information sector has soared from 17 percent to 55 percent.

In the semiconductor industry alone, the annual value of production now stands at $8 billion but is expected to climb to $55 billion by 1990 and to exceed $100 billion by the end of the century.

OTHER HIGH-technology industries expected to grow very rapidly in the coming decades include genetic engineering, production of industrial robots and development of innovative forms of energy efficiency.

But this country is ill prepared to take advantage of those economic opportunities, especially in comparison with the other nations—notably Japan—that are seeking to capture global leadership in the advanced technology field.

"The demand for technically trained people far exceeds the supply," says Dr. Robert N. Noyce, vice chairman of the Intel Corp. He notes that only about 5 percent of this country's college students are majoring in technical subjects compared with 15 percent in Japan and Europe and 30 percent in the Soviet Union.

ANOTHER PERSPECTIVE on the same problem: Among every 10,000 Japanese citizens, only one is a lawyer, but 400 are engineers and scientists. Among every 10,000 Americans, 20 are lawyers, and only 70 are engineers and scientists.

Finally, workers often oppose technological innovation because they view it as a threat to their job security, a situation that rarely exists in large, sophisticated Japanese corporations that train and reassign employees whose tasks are assumed by computers, robots or other machines.

Despite those problems, the U.S. can enjoy a bright future in the technological era, Brown emphasizes, "if we forge a new partnership of the big governing elements of our society—particularly business, government and workers—to focus on what innovation can do for us."

JAY HARRIS:

The New India...

K. S. "SANDY" Sandanam, like many in his position, is a man with two loves.

On the one hand, he is a walking, talking exponent of "what's good about India and the Indian people."

On the other, he has high praise for the country which has been home to him and a place for an education for his two daughters the past six years.

Mr. Sandanam, a man of medium build, handsome features, a sharp mind and a sense of humor, is the director of the Government of India's Tourism office for a five-state region, with headquarters in Dallas.

As such, he "sells" India at every opportunity. He also serves as a goodwill ambassador for his country and helps direct those having official business with India to the right office.

"SANDY," AS he prefers to be called, was a visitor in Lubbock recently.

And as has been the case with other such foreign dignitaries and officials who come here, he opened doors to a new world for those with whom he came in contact, primarily students, faculty and townspeople at Lubbock Christian College and in interviews in the paper and on television.

As a person who comes from one of the world's most heavily populated nations, Mr. Sandanam emphasizes the importance of an education.

"I always enjoy talking to the students," Sandy told an honors class at LCC, "because I have great faith in you. This is a great country and it has so many opportunities...My one regret is that I am not young enough to join you and to seek a degree..."

"During my travels I always make it a point to visit a school or a university and to explain our problems and what we have achieved in India."

THOSE PROBLEMS and achievements today loom ever larger in a part of the world where almost half of mankind lives, India, China, the Middle East.

It is a world with ancient ties going back almost to the dawn of history, a world with deep religious and political differences and a world with a common goal, a better way of life for its people.

India, Sandy's homeland, is situated more or less in the middle of this old-new world.

Occupying the sub-continent of Asia, India is the world's largest democracy. It stretches 2,000 miles from the cold heights of the Himalayas in the North to the warm waters of the Indian ocean at Kanya Kumari (Cape Comorin) on the south.

An estimated 658 million people inhabit an area of just over one and a quarter million square miles, an area about one-third the size of the U.S., which has only a third as many people.

EVERY SEVENTH human being in the world today is an Indian.

The picture many have of India is a montage, sometimes a misleading one.

To many in the U.S., India is a mystic land of maharajas, bejeweled elephants, the Bengal tiger, colorfully-dressed women, abject poverty and ancient statues and palaces.

It is or has been all of those things, and much more. Today, India is a mixture of the past and the present. Since India gained its independence from Britain Aug. 15, 1947, from its guidance under its first Prime Minister, Jawaharlal Nehru, to its present Prime Minister, Indira Gandhi, the nation's goal has been to increase its agricultural and industrial production.

The aim of this planned economic development has been to more equitably distribute its benefits to as large a cross-section of society in India as possible. And while much remains to be done, India can draw satisfaction from the great strides it has made the past 30 years.

IN VIEW of the more or less bondage in which the nation was held by feudal lords, trading companies and later the British, India indeed has made progress.

In the short span of three decades, India has emerged as one of the top ten industrialized nations of the world.

This has been accomplished largely as a result of a sustained emphasis to build industries of a strategic importance and basic nature, including steel, shipbuilding, railroads, heavy electrical facilities, petrochemicals and machine manufacturing.

As both Mr. Sandanam and India's leaders note, this program includes "concrete measures to improve the living standards of the poor by provision of low cost housing and housing sites, reviewing minimum wages of farm workers and improving irrigation and farm production."

The "green revolution" is a case in point. Under this program, grain yields have been boosted to the point grain can be stockpiled for drought years to fight famine, with a surplus left for export.

INDIA HAS A government patterned both on the British Parliamentary system and the U.S. system.

There is a President, more or less a figurehead such as the monarchy in England but without the pomp, and there is a Prime Minister, who exerts the real power.

There is the Rajya Sabha, Council of States, made up of not more than 250 members, both appointed and elected. And there is the Lok Sabha, House of the People, made up of 544 persons, most directly elected. There is a strong judiciary and a system of 22 states and nine centrally run union territories.

Today, India is a nation of major cities, jammed with millions of persons, such as Calcutta, Bombay, Old and New Delhi. However, a majority of the citizens still live in the villages. It is a nation with excellent rail facilities, good domestic and international airlines and a growing school system at all levels. It also is a nation which has joined the atomic age with nuclear power.

It also is a fascinating place to visit. Because it is all these things, it is worth knowing more about.

'NO MORAL MANDATE'

Lefever Fits Bill On Policy

ERNEST W. LEFEVER seems an excellent choice by President Reagan to be assistant secretary of state for human rights and humanitarian affairs given the foreign policy objectives of the new administration.

"We have no moral mandate to remake the world in our own image," said Lefever in a New York Times interview. "It is arrogant for us to attempt to reform the domestic behavior of our allies and even of our adversaries."

President Reagan and Sec. of State Haig indicated at the very outset that international terrorism would replace human rights as the primary concern of U.S. foreign policy.

Jimmy Carter did not invent the concern for human rights, of course. The current concern dates back to World War II, the massacre of the Jews and the subsequent Declaration of Human Rights of 1948.

MOREOVER, TWO concepts have traditionally vied for primacy in U.S. foreign policy: the first stresses the morality of power, and the second the power of morality.

Given the pendulum swings in the official foreign-policy mindset, it was not surprising that in 1976, Candidate Carter pledged to release moralistic instincts which previous denigrated—supposedly—thereby creating in his words, "a foreign policy as good as the American people."

Even foreign-policy amateurs, however, should have realized that basic changes in regimes, not all of which could be instituted by the U.S., must precede any broad-scale improvement in the status of human rights in many countries.

They were slow to learn that unilateral condemnation is extremely difficult to sustain or institutionalize.

Unsuccessful attempts to impose this conception of human rights on other countries made it a confusing foreign policy goal, at best.

THE REAGAN administration has made it clear it will not pursue arms control negotiations with the Soviets without considering their conduct and activities outside the sphere of arms control.

Sec. Haig prefers trying to combat terrorism, over trying to promote esoteric human rights, arguing, correctly, that terrorism is "the ultimate abuse of human rights."

Mr. Carter tried to give us a foreign policy as "good" as the American people. The new administration is attempting to give us one as "intelligent" as the American people.

JOSEPH KRAFT:

Afghans Never Say Die In Fight For Freedom

PESHAWAR—Six different organizations claiming to represent Afghan freedom fighters make their headquarters here. Thousands of Afghan refugees cram the camps set up on the fringes of town.

No day goes by without some new arrivals, fresh from the struggle against the Russian occupation of Afghanistan.

So Peshawar—the capital of the Northwest Frontier Province of Pakistan and only 30 miles from the Khyber Pass on the border—offers perhaps the best outside vantage point for assessing what is happening inside Afghanistan.

Many signs indicate that the struggle is intrinsically chaotic.

Sazli Huq, the governor of the province and a professional soldier who rose to the rank of lieutenant general in the Pakistani army, likens the present conflict to the indecisive border wars the British fought against Afghan tribes in the last century.

HE SAYS the Afghans are natural fighters, used to guns—"crazy Pathans like me."

As for the Russians, he believes they have conceded the countryside, and are mainly concerned to hold bases and towns and roads.

They have lost some tanks and a few helicopters, and the toll would be much more severe if ground-to-air missiles were made available to the Afghans.

Gulbuddin Hekmatyar presents a very different picture. He is the leader of the largest and best known of the outside resistance organizations—the Herzb-Islam or Islamic party. He is a Moslem fundamentalist who has been fighting the central authorities in Kabul since his student days under the Afghan monarchy.

Ever since, he has been holding himself out here in Peshawar as the leader of a co-ordinated resistance movement.

ACCORDING TO Hekmatyar, about 70 percent of the freedom fighters inside Afghanistan work in co-operation with his organization. He claims that they don't need any help in weapons, particularly from the U.S. During an interview in his heavily guarded headquarters, he said:

"We are winning because our cause is just. We can beat one of the super powers. But if we associate with the other super power, we lose our cause. We lose the support of the Third World. We lose the support of Islam."

Another viewpoint emerges from an Afghan who calls himself Dr. Rassoul and claims to have been a member of a former government in Kabul. Dr. Rassoul runs a hospital in Peshawar, and receives new batches of refugees from Afghanistan all the time.

According to him, most of the fighting is done by smaller tribes in more remote parts of Afghanistan.

HE SAYS the tribesmen could use ground-to-air missiles against Russian helicopters. He says the helicopters—and the helicopters only—frighten and demoralize the tribesmen.

In his view, the tribesmen are mainly fighting for tribal independence. They are suspicious of the organizations that seek to manage the war from Peshawar.

In particular, he says, they do not want to have anything to do with political leaders. They will work with Peshawar only on the understanding that there be no political arrangements regarding the future.

What all this says to me is that the Afghan resistance serves chiefly to bloody the Russian military, and to give Moscow a diplomatic black eye. Better supplies to the tribesmen could probably take an even heavier toll.

BUT THERE is almost no probability the resistance effort can be co-ordinated to the point of military victory. The anti-Russian forces have almost no chance to take Kabul.

Even if they did, they would probably prove unable to form an effective government.

So while maintaining the military effort, it makes sense to hold the door open for negotiation. There is an off chance that the Russians might eventually grow tired of fighting, and elect to withdraw their troops in return for an Afghan regime that is technically nonaligned but heavily tilted to Moscow.

Newspapers, AT&T Battle Over Information

WASHINGTON (AP) — The American newspaper industry, anticipating the dawn of an electronic "information age," is casting a wary eye on the world's largest telephone company as it develops ambitious plans to provide advertising and information directly to the public.

Spurred by rising printing and distribution costs and new forms of competition, many newspaper publishers are exploring the possibility of electronic delivery — providing access to their product over small home computer terminals.

The American Telephone & Telegraph Co. — the Bell System — is also experimenting, eager not only to serve customers like newspapers but also to distribute its own information services as well.

AT&T says it doesn't want to gather and edit the news itself. But in turning to electronic delivery for its phone directories, it is not ruling out the possibility of offering more information than just the time and weather.

The newspaper publishers say the issue is thus whether a company that controls key "information highways" should also be allowed to compete with its customers in providing information. AT&T responds that the publishers are simply afraid of losing some advertising to an "electronic Yellow Pages."

Both sides have pleaded their case to the courts, the Federal Communications Commission, Congress — even the National Association of Broadcasters. Both sides agree, however, that Congress is likely to become the final referee.

"As much as everybody talks about deregulation, Congress will not be able to ignore this fight," says one FCC official who prefers not to be named.

Adds Jerry W. Friedheim, executive vice president of the American Newspaper Publishers Association (ANPA): "The decisions, when they come, will control the structure of American communications — maybe even of American society — for decades to come."

Newspaper publishers don't expect to see the demise of ink-on-paper distribution anytime soon; it's still much cheaper than electronic delivery. But computer and communication companies — particularly cable TV firms — are actively experimenting with a technology that bypasses newsprint.

Consumers are being offered the chance to use their TV set or a small computer terminal to shop at home, bank at home and gain access to all types of information, including news.

"All of these new services are coming," declares Thomas E. Wheeler, the president of the National Cable Television Association. "The only question is how they'll get into the home — via cable or via the telephone line."

Newspaper publishers say they don't have any problem with the telephone route, so long as the phone company serves only as a vehicle for distribution. That's the way AT&T currently operates. Under the terms of a 1956 consent decree with the Justice Department, the company cannot enter any unregulated markets.

AT&T is pressing, however, for the right to offer services beyond the basic voice communication regulated by the FCC. The agency has supported the company's position, as long as it establishes a fully separated subsidiary to enter those new areas.

Newspaper publishers, along with equipment and telephone service competitors of the Bell System, scoff at the idea that a new subsidiary will prevent AT&T from monopolizing the electronic marketplace. AT&T directly serves more than 80 percent of the nation's telephones, they note, and could place such tremendous resources at the disposal of the subsidiary that no one could compete on an equal basis.

"The issue is whether a regulated, government-granted monopoly should be in a position of going beyond its traditional role of providing an information highway to anyone who wants to use it, blind to the content of the messages," says K. Prescott Low, who publishes the Quincy, Mass., Patriot Ledger and has helped the ANPA study the issue.

"The problem is that allowing a telephone company to generate its own information service where it has a monopoly on facilities might lead to that company taking a proprietary interest in the content of other messages," Low adds.

"That's a red herring and really absurd," responds Dennis J. Sullivan, AT&T's vice president for market and product management.

Sullivan notes the new subsidiary would have to purchase transmission service just like any other customer, and that the telephone company must provide transmission service to any paying customer.

"But there's no such thing as a fully separated subsidiary," says Friedheim. "That would be something like having one monopoly utility owning 80 percent of American highways; turning them into toll roads, and also running its own freight-company delivery trucks on the highways to compete with our trucks and others."

AT&T responds its real interest is not generating news, but adapting the new technology to its telephone directories and protecting the $2.7 billion in annual revenue those directories generate.

While there will be "some overlap" between newspaper advertising and Yellow Pages advertising if the latter can be easily updated electronically, the overlap will be so small "that the threat doesn't justify their response," asserts Sullivan.

"This is not a newspaper-only issue from my standpoint, with a bunch of Neanderthal publishers trying to protect advertising," says Low.

Whether AT&T wants to acknowledge it or not, he continues, the resources now at the disposal of the Bell System were developed through the grant of a government monopoly. "And the phone company is talking about using (those resources) for a full-fledged information service that goes way beyond classified advertising."

As proof of that, Low points to the New England Telephone Co. in his state of Massachusetts — which is seeking permission to offer "Dial-It" services featuring sports scores, stock quotations and Boston news — and AT&T's plans to test an electronic system in Austin that would include information from outside sources such as Consumer Reports.

Such telephone company proposals do not worry all publishers, however. Allen H. Neuharth, chairman and president of the Gannett Co., the nation's largest newspaper group, told financial analysts recently his company would not participate in the battle against AT&T.

Neuharth, a member of the ANPA board, did vote to support the association's position in the dispute. But he also told the analysts he did not believe "the sky will fall if AT&T is allowed to put its Yellow Pages on TV."

Grattan Gray, the president and general manager of the Monroe, Mich., Evening News, is even more outspoken.

"The primary thing we do is gather and process information, edit it and put it in a form that is peculiar to the needs of our local customers," he says. "I'm sure the nature of the delivery system will change. It does not seem likely to me, however, that the telephone company is going to duplicate the kind of staff and editing responsibility that we accept in producing the newspaper."

Three Mile Island Woes Grow

MIDDLETOWN, Pa. (AP) — Two years after its spectacular leap to nuclear notoriety, the Three Mile Island reactor complex is a hot potato no one wants to touch.

The operator of the nuclear plant is on the verge of bankruptcy, cleanup insurance funds are running out and the small island in the Susquehanna River is turning into a high-level radioactive nuclear waste dump.

But no one is rushing in to save the day.

"It's a pass-the-buck kind of thing, and nothing is getting done," said John Minnich, chairman of the Dauphin County Commission. "God help us if we have another accident somewhere. Who is going to clean up the problem?"

The Three Mile Island Unit 2 reactor was disabled on March 28, 1979, in what is considered the nation's worst commercial nuclear accident.

During the two-week emergency, the plant overheated, the radioactive reactor core started to melt and 600,000 gallons of contaminated water flooded the basement of the concrete reactor containment building.

Last summer, amid much controversy, some 43,000 curies of radioactive krypton gas were vented from the containment building. Today the plant owners have almost finished an elaborate $9 million system to filter radioactive cesium and strontium from the water. Using a simpler system, they have removed the radioactive isotopes from less contaminated water that flooded an auxiliary building.

But canisters containing the filtered particles are still on the island, and local citizens, both pro-and anti-nuclear, are growing increasingly anxious about the situation.

"If they don't clean it up soon, we are going to have more problems than we had during the crisis," said Anne Trunk, a member of a TMI citizens advisory panel.

She added, "It's starting to bother a lot of people. A lot of my neighbors are turning out that it is going to become a dump site."

The consensus appears to be that the projected seven-year, $1 billion cleanup is moving too slowly. The reasons for the snail's pace include intense public scrutiny and opposition, lumbering regulatory procedures and, above all else, tight cash reserves.

"The whole thing revolves around money. There's really no money moving, and that's the real crisis," said Rep. Allen Ertel, D-Pa., whose congressional district includes TMI.

Cleanup director Bob Arnold says he needs $100 million to $125 million a year to decontaminate the plant as quickly as possible. But General Public Utilities Corp., the TMI owner, cut back spending from $100 million to $50 million last September.

GPU has also used up two-thirds of a $300 million cleanup insurance policy, and Arnold says GPU cannot possibly come up with the remaining $700 million of the projected $1 billion cost because regulatory commissions in New Jersey and Pennsylvania have said customer revenues may not be used for the cleanup.

Earlier this month, Ertel introduced a bill that would create a $750 million insurance fund to help clean up TMI and other nuclear accident sites. The fund would be built with contributions from nuclear utilities across the country.

The bill comes at a time when there appear to be some breaks in the logjam.

The Nuclear Regulatory Commission is close to approving a final environmental impact statement on the cleanup. NRC chairman Joseph Hendrie said that would wrap up the study phase and pave the way for action.

President Reagan has recommended a $75 million federal investment in cleanup research and aid over the next two years. But Ertel said one subcommittee has already shaved $12 million from the allocation, and part of the rest won't be available until 1983 — "so far off that it's ridiculous."

Arnold said GPU has deliberately refrained from leading its own survival fight because "there are so many subjective reactions to the company that anything we suggest might inspire resistance."

The company has developed some cleanup technology, but it has been hampered by severe cash flow constraints that show no sign of easing. According to GPU vice president Verner Condon, GPU has not issued dividends for five quarters and the prospect of payments for this quarter is "nil."

He estimated stockholders have lost $170 million in dividends since the accident, and the value of their stock has declined $840 million.

Metropolitan Edison, the GPU subsidiary that operates and owns 50 percent of the plant, has added $165 million to customer bills, entirely to pay for replacement power. It remains marginally solvent and faces another crisis in April, when $23 million in state taxes is due.

A consortium of banks has said it will not let Met Ed borrow money to pay its taxes unless the state Public Utility Commission grants most or all of a $76.5 million rate increase by April 15.

The commission has said the decision will be made later this month.

The banks say that is not soon enough.

The state Revenue Department says it cannot give Met Ed an extension on its taxes.

One way to increase GPU and Met Ed revenues — and reduce replacement power costs — would be to restart TMI's Unit 1 reactor, shut down by the NRC after the accident.

But months of NRC safety hearings about the undamaged reactor will not end until April 30. There is tremendous community opposition.

Condon said he is encouraged by the Ertel bill, the Reagan administration's attitude and a General Accounting Office study due in May.

But, he said, "Within the immediate future we cannot rely on any of these things. So the Pennsylvania PUC is going to have to provide for Met Ed's survival until these longer-term things develop. There is just nowhere else to go."

Philadelphia Transit Strike's Expansion To Suburbs Sought

PHILADELPHIA (AP) — City transit workers threatened to spread their week-old strike to the suburbs today by posting more than 1,000 pickets at Conrail stations in the nation's fourth-largest city and its surrounding counties.

"We're making this a regional strike so we can make it a short strike," Roger Tauss, chairman of the Transport Workers Union strike committee, said.

The union planned to send 1,200 pickets to work four-hour shifts at 15 stations in Philadelphia and four neighboring counties if a temporary injunction against picketing is lifted at a court hearing this morning, Tauss said.

The strike by the 4,900-member Local 234 against the Southeastern Pennsylvania Transportation Authority has shut down buses, trolleys and subways in the city, inconveniencing some 400,000 daily riders.

Suburban commuter trains, operated for the transit authority by Conrail, have not been struck. But twice last week Conrail crews refused to cross picket lines, temporarily stalling suburban service.

When picketing disrupted service on Friday, the transit authority won a temporary injunction against the picketing from Common Pleas Court Judge William Marutani.

The transit authority intended to ask Marutani to make the injunction permanent, but Tauss dismissed that possibility, saying "there's absolutely no legal basis for SEPTA to get an injunction."

But if Marutani doesn't lift the injunction, Tauss said, "He'll be appealed and he'll be laughed out of court."

By extending the picketing, the union hopes to make as many commuters as possible feel the effect of the strike and then pressure the transit authority for settlement of a two-year contract.

Talks bogged down over the hiring up to 250 parttime workers, which the union opposes but transit officials maintain is necessary to cut expenses.

The effects of the strike on commuters have been mixed.

"We should carry a gun and shoot all the pickets," said a bank vice president who was 2 1/4 hours late for work Friday.

But a transplanted New Yorker who had weathered two transit strikes there said the rush-hour drive to the suburbs "really wasn't that bad. I drove home at 5 o'clock with no problem."

Ridership on suburban trains was up 20 percent last week, Conrail reported. And carpooling was up, with the number of cars with two or more passengers increasing from 6 percent to 20 percent.

Solar Energy Seminar Set At WTSU

CANYON (Special) — A Solar Energy Seminar, sponsored by West Texas State University's Alternative Energy Institute, is scheduled for 9 a.m. to 5 p.m. April 11 in the university's Science Center.

The seminar will teach participants how to design, construct and use attached solar greenhouses. Lunch and materials will be provided with a $30 fee. A $20 student discount fee is available for the seminar.

Dr. Earl Gilmore, research professor with WT Alternative Energy Institute, will discuss solar principles, including solar angles, using the sun to heat and cool, the process of heat transport including radiation, conduction and convection and thermal storage.

Growing plants in the attached solar greenhouse will be discussed by Stacy Reese, instructor of horticulture in the Department of Plant Science of the WT School of Agriculture.

Tips on financing home improvements with the tax benefits of an attached solar greenhouse will be offered by Ardath White, assistant vice president of the American National Bank in Amarillo.

Dr. Ron McBride, assistant professor of industrial education and technology in the WT College of Education, will discuss design and construction of an attached solar greenhouse.

A team of Alternative Energy Institute members and 25 Panhandle-area residents constructed an attached solar greenhouse in November on the south side of the Combs-Worley Cottage at Amarillo Children's Home. The project was sponsored by the Texas Energy Society.

Seminar participants will view slides of the construction process and a 20-minute film on solar greenhouses will be shown.

Fiscal Crisis Threatens Haitian Government

PORT-AU-PRINCE, Haiti (AP) — Three months after the International Monetary Fund replenished Haiti's foreign exchange reserves with about $20 million in support, that money is almost gone and Haiti is again deep in a fiscal crisis, diplomats and businessmen here say.

The diplomats maintain that the financial problem could jeopardize future access to foreign aid for the government of President-for-Life Jean-Claude Duvalier, 29. He took over 10 years ago at the death of his father, Francois "Papa Doc" Duvalier, also president for life.

Foreign exchange reserves are the stocks of foreign currency on which businessmen draw when they convert local money — in this case Haitian gourdes worth five to the dollar — into foreign currencies to pay bills abroad.

Many countries impose tight controls on such conversions, but until the current crisis Haiti had virtually none.

In addition to handing Duvalier possibly severe financial problems, the evaporation of foreign exchange reserves also could result in deep political repercussions, particularly because the reasons for the shortage are unclear.

Haiti's already-weak economy was battered last year when Hurricane Allen devastated the 1980 coffee crop. The same deepening rural poverty that has prompted tens of thousands of Haitian peasants to sail for the United States also has sent hundreds of thousands into this already teeming city to compete for meager amounts of food and work.

The foreign exchange crisis developed in two stages.

The International Monetary Fund, a major world lending agency, says that a year ago Haiti had a reserve of $45 million in foreign currency. But foreign diplomats here say that fell to about $4 million by last autumn.

The Haitian government blamed the drop on the hurricane damage to the coffee crop, the principal earner of foreign exchange, and decreases in the world price for coffee. Altogether, an estimated $35 million in expected receipts from coffee exports was lost.

In December, the IMF came to the rescue. It made available about $20 million in fresh support and softened the terms of repayment on continuing loan programs. The funds were deposited in Haiti's national bank.

But by early February, Haitian officials and pro-government businessmen agree, the country was again deep in a foreign exchange crisis. One foreign economist says less than $2 million was left.

Today, many people in this capital question the official explanation — that the decline in foreign exchange resulted from the hurricane's continuing effects.

Some diplomats and businessmen claim the crisis was seriously compounded by the government's continuing — and long-criticized — practice of using money in national accounts for purposes not set out in the national budget.

One important diplomat in the capital said he knew substantial unbudgeted withdrawals had been made from the nation's foreign exchange between late November and late January. A foreign economist estimated the total at around $14 million to $16 million.

All of these sources, who asked not to be identified, said they did not know how the money was spent.

A Haitian familiar with the banking system claimed only Duvalier himself has the power to initiate such off-budget withdrawals.

This could not be officially confirmed. Repeated efforts by The Associated Press since early February to reach government officials for comment on the reports have been fruitless.

Whatever its relationship to the current crisis, the practice of spending money outside the national budget has long been a sore point with the international aid agencies that together spend or lend $100 million a year in Haiti — often bypassing the Haitian government to work directly with independent agencies such as CARE, out of fear government officials will misuse the money.

In January 1980, an internal report of the U.S. Agency for International Development noted the Haitian government had decided to undertake development projects not included in the budget. It did not name the projects, but in the past several months the Duvalier government has been criticized for investing in an inefficient sugar plant and fishing fleet.

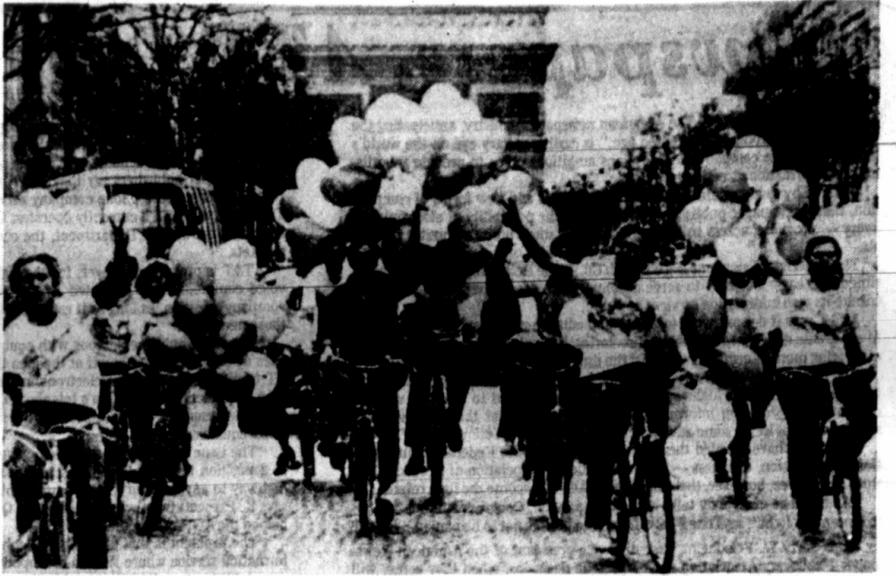

"Expenditures were not reported in the budget, and there was no control over many expenditures," the AID report said. It added that no public accounting is made of substantial amounts of revenues.

One foreign economist here estimates $25 million was spent outside the budget in 1980. He and others note there were such factors as food imports — which drained off $8 million in 1980. But they say this does not fully explain why less than $2 million remained of the IMF support funds just two months after they were deposited.

"This is probably the straw that broke the camel's back. It puts the IMF in the position of saying either you shape up or we leave," says one foreign economist.

Last Dec. 11, a joint commission of foreign aid donors issued a draft report that bluntly recommended to Haiti that it take measures: "1. Effective control of the use of public funds. 2. Suppression or reduction of extra-budgetary expenditures."

The recent non-budget withdrawals are reported to have been made since then.

Prime Minister Threatened By Strife Within Own Party

LONDON (AP) — Two years after her sweep to victory, Prime Minister Margaret Thatcher appears threatened from within her own party by a simmering Conservative revolt, and by a new opposition party gaining ground in public opinion polls.

"A determined effort is being made by a minority of Tories at Westminster to undermine Margaret Thatcher and secure her replacement as party leader, if possible, before the next election," said Conservative Parliament member George Gardiner, a Thatcher loyalist.

Gardiner's remarks, at a weekend meeting in his Reigate constituency, were the first public reference by a Conservative to a rebellion within the ruling party.

The revolt appears to be fueled by the high showing in public opinion polls of moderates from the Labor Party who recently broke ranks and plan to launch a new, as yet unnamed, social democratic party Thursday.

The Labor defectors hope to appeal to a middle-ground constituency between the leftward-moving Laborites and the harsh austerity-oriented Conservatives. The new party's founders, nine members of Parliament elected on the Labor ticket and four former Labor government Cabinet ministers, have held talks with the Liberal Party about an alliance.

The research firm National Opinion Poll, in a survey commissioned by the liberal Sunday newspaper The Observer, found that of 1,588 voters questioned in its most recent survey, 46 percent would vote for a Social Democrat-Liberal alliance if an election were held now.

Mrs. Thatcher, whose party ousted the socialist Labor Party in May 1979, must call an election by early 1984.

The Observer said the poll found that Labor would get 27 percent of the vote and the Conservative Party 25 percent if faced with the alliance. Even without an alliance, the social democrats would capture 35 percent of the votes, the newspaper reported.

The new poll results came just a week after an open revolt in the 635-member House of Commons against Mrs. Thatcher's harsh new budget. On Monday, 33 of her 336 legislators abstained or voted against the most unpopular part of her budget proposal — higher gasoline taxes — and one defected to the social democrats.

Treasury sources, meanwhile, were reported by the authoritative Sunday Times as forecasting Britain's jobless rate, now a record post-Depression 10 percent, will rise to 15 percent by the end of 1983, just around campaign time.

Both the Conservatives and Laborites criticized the social democrats over the weekend.

Agriculture Minister Peter Walker, one of several Cabinet members who want Mrs. Thatcher to moderate her policies and increase state spending and aid for battered private industry, described the social democrats as a "depot for deserters."

"There is a new challenge of a new party... (But) there is no justification for any Tory to leave," Walker said in a speech Sunday.

Norman St. John-Stevas, fired from the Cabinet last January, urged the Conservatives to move center and stop their infighting in order to meet the "particularly dangerous threat" from the social democrats.

"There could be a permanent change in British politics," said St. John-Stevas. "It is not a flight of fancy. It is a real danger."

Labor's environment spokesman, Gerald Kaufman, said, "We should not underestimate the threat from these all-things-to-all-men, statespersons for all seasons."

Possible American Policies Toward Africa Worry Some Governments

JOHANNESBURG, South Africa (AP) — The Reagan administration says it is still formulating policy on Africa. But perception of an American tilt toward white-ruled South Africa has alarmed some of the 50 nations on this turbulent continent.

National Security Adviser Richard V. Allen said in a speech in Washington Saturday that American relations with Africa will be "based on realism and a keen perception of our own needs."

Such pragmatism could threaten to alienate some leaders of Africa's 440 million people.

Shridath Ramphal, secretary-general of the 43-nation Commonwealth — about a third of whose members are African nations — told a news conference in Salisbury, Zimbabwe on Sunday: "I would be less than candid if I did not say that I sense alarm at signals coming out of Washington."

One such signal was last week's announcement by the Reagan administration that it would ask Congress to repeal the Clark amendment, legislation enacted in 1976 to bar American aid to anti-government guerrillas fighting in Marxist-ruled Angola.

The announcement was seen as an indication Washington plans to renew support for insurgents of the Union for the Total Independence of Angola led by Jonas Savimbi. Savimbi used to receive aid from the Central Intelligence Agency and it is generally believed he gets support from South Africa.

The State Department said Thursday that Savimbi will arrive in the United States this week at the invitation of private organizations. Spokesman William Dyess said Reagan administration officials are prepared to meet him.

American support for Angolan rebels would delight South Africa, which contends it stands alone against a Marxist onslaught on Africa.

Referring to South Africa in a recent interview with CBS, President Reagan asked rhetorically, "Can we abandon a country that... strategically is essential to the free world?"

Black African nations appear worried that improved South African-U.S. relations — which suffered under President Jimmy Carter's human rights campaign — would encourage the white-minority regime to drag its feet on independence for South-West Africa, also known as Namibia. The mineral-rich territory is administered by South Africa under an old League of Nations mandate revoked by the United Nations.

Palestinians Major Campaign Issue

TEL AVIV, Israel (AP) — The Palestinian question has emerged as a major issue in the campaign for Israel's June 30 elections, nudging aside controversy over the Jewish state's inflation-plagued economy.

The economy — with an annual inflation rate topping 130 percent — was a key factor in forcing the early elections.

Pakistan Asks Syria To Return Hijackers, Prisoners For Trial

ISLAMABAD, Pakistan (AP) — Pakistani President Mohammed Zia ul-Haq said Sunday he has asked Syria to extradite the three hijackers who surrendered in Damascus nine days ago and released more than 100 hostages from a commandeered Pakistani jetliner.

The hostages were traded for 54 Pakistani prisoners whose release the hijackers had demanded. Pakistani officials said earlier they expected the Syrians would arrest and return the 54 as well, on the basis of information about charges against them. Zia did not say whether he has asked Syria to extradite them.

There was no immediate response from the Syrian government.

Shortly after the 13-day ordeal was ended, Syria said it would allow the released prisoners to stay in Syria if they wished but that the three hijackers would have to leave as soon as they found another country to take them.

Syria agreed to accept the hijackers and the released prisoners after Libyan leader Moammar Khadafy backed out of an agreement to allow the plane carrying the vote had been scheduled for November but was forced ahead when Prime Minister Menachem Begin's Likud coalition lost its parliamentary majority with defections over a teacher pay raise issue.

Peace with the Palestinians is seen by many of the 2.4 million Israelis as a key to solving Israel's economic and other problems.

the Pakistani prisoners to land on Libyan soil. Libyan officials said the decision was made to help change Libya's image as a country that harbors terrorists.

Zia told reporters Sunday that Pakistan wanted to try the three for hijacking and murder — both capital crimes.

A Pakistani diplomat, Tariq Rahim was shot to death while the airplane was in Kabul, Afghanistan, where it had been first diverted. An American passenger, Frederick Hubbell of Des Moines, Iowa, said it was unclear whether the shooting was intentional or accidental while the man was being pistol-whipped.

Mongolian Part Of New Russian Team In Space

MOSCOW (AP) — The Soviet Union, which has trained and launched cosmonauts from Cuba, Vietnam and five other allies, sent a Mongolian cosmonaut and his Soviet commander into space Sunday aboard the Soyuz-39 capsule, the official news agency Tass reported.

It said the new team will link up with two Soviet cosmonauts launched March 12 who are circling the earth aboard the Salyut-6 space station.

Tass did not say how long the space mission of the Soviet and Mongolian cosmonauts would last.

The United States plans to send the space shuttle Columbia into its first orbit, a 54-hour mission, the week of April 5.

The new travelers to Salyut-6 were identified as Vladimir Dzhanibekov, the 38-year-old commander on his second space mission, and 33-year-old Jurgdermidiy Gurragecha, a Mongolian who had been training for the space shot since 1978.

Sunday's launch from the space station in Baikonur in Soviet Central Asia was the eighth in the Intercosmos series of flights in which Soviet cosmonauts accompany those from other Soviet-bloc countries. Tass said the liftoff was at 5:59 p.m. Moscow time (8:59 a.m. CST).

Cosmonauts Vladimir Kovalyovok, a 39-year-old air force pilot, and Viktor Savinykh, 41, were sent into space March 12 aboard the Soyuz T-4 spaceship. They linked up with the space station March 13.

The last Intercosmos flight was in September and involved a cosmonaut from Cuba. Other cosmonauts in the program have come from Poland, East Germany, Bulgaria, Hungary, Vietnam and Czechoslovakia.

Gurragecha's participation appeared to be a possible reward for Mongolia's support of the Kremlin in Moscow's ideological feud with China.

Mongolia, wedged between the Soviet Union and China, has a population of less than 2 million, mostly of oriental stock. One of the world's poorest communist nations, it has received heavy economic and military support from the Soviet Union and its allies, and three Soviet army divisions are believed to be stationed there.

In a preflight interview, the Mongolian crew member was quoted by Tass as saying, "I feel with great pride that my homeland, along with other socialist countries, is playing an active role in the exploration of space."

During his speech to the 26th Soviet Communist party last month, Soviet President Leonid I. Brezhnev said, "Cosmonauts of the fraternal countries are not working for science alone. They are also performing a tremendously important political mission."

Western analysts suggest the Intercosmos series contributes far less to scientific knowledge than to bolstering Soviet relations with its allies.

The Soviets' decision to have Gurragecha join in the program, before a spaceman from Romania who also is in training, seemed to highlight the point about loyalty. Romania often has steered an independent course from the Kremlin and it opposed the Soviet-led invasion of Czechoslovakia in 1968.

The sending of cosmonauts from Mongolia and Vietnam, which border China, also could be interpreted as a signal to other neighboring countries of the Soviets' determination to prove their technological prowess.

The launching also may have been designed to draw attention to next month's 20th anniversary of man's first space flight — by Soviet cosmonaut Yuri Gagarin.

The Soviets sent six crews into space in 1980. The United States' last manned flight was in July 1975, when the Apollo 18 linked with the Soviet spaceship Soyuz 19.

The Cotton Patch Acclaimed As Misses, Junior Specialty Store

Fashion ideas and fashion fulfillment are just as near as the Cotton Patch, regionally popular junior and misses specialty store at a convenient Hwy. 62/82 location in Idalou!

Enjoying wide appreciation and growing patronage throughout its existence, the Cotton Patch has kept pace, even leading in trends and in merchandise to best meet the preferences of its valued clientele.

In this continuing devotion to best serving the customer, the Cotton Patch has evolved into an exclusive junior and misses specialty store of note, stocking sizes 3 to 18 for the style-conscious women of West Texas.

Even the advertising logo of the Cotton Patch is being changed to more correctly define its concept, its role and its merchandise. Watch for it. The name remains the same, the location and phone number (892-3023) remain the same, and the owner and active operator still is Janis DeBusk.

Added Lines
 New lines of prestigious sports wear have been added.

A delightful variety of junior, misses and designer dresses is included in the specialized stock.

Spring and summer apparel is in abundance, with everything from sundresses to after-dinner wear.

"Cottons are definitely 'in' for summer '81, Janis correctly observes, "with really stylish wear of cotton and cotton fabrications, with variety, fashion and quality evident.

One of the largest and very nice blouse selections in the area is at the new-look Cotton Patch where rearranging and remodeling has just been completed, with antique displays adding to the provocative decor.

Special Value
 A special group of pastel corduroy overalls and jumpsuits is presented, marked down in price in a limited time offer.

From this group, regular $31.50 overalls are now just $19.50; and the $39.50 jumpsuits are at only $27.50 for a limited time, remember, so early selection is advised.

The entire line of prestigious cosmetics from Elizabeth Arden is available at the Cotton Patch, and the following related announcements are made:

New From Elizabeth Arden
 The Elizabeth Arden spring colors have arrived, with the new "Rainbow" palette of really pretty pastels.

Elizabeth Arden has come out with a new Millennium Skin Care System of four products, which the Cotton Patch is glad to enthusiastically introduce and stock.

Created to speed the cell renewal process and to help any age skin function better, the Millennium selection includes (1) hydrating cleanser, (2) revitalizing tonic, (3) day renewal emulsion, and (4) night renewal cream.

Thoroughly researched, proven and appreciated, the Millennium by Elizabeth Arden is a choice addition to "what's new" at the Cotton Patch where the whole attitude of ownership and staff is refreshing, where the welcome and the stock and the expertise join in meriting and inviting one's trade and confidence.

Plastic Pipe Distributors Aids Region With Modern Products

Plastic Pipe Distributors, at 2402 Erskine, phone 763-6531, backs its image of exceptional service with a record of service and growth from its beginnings over 20 years ago as the first plastic pipe distributor in Lubbock.

Add to this fact that over 50 years of experience is totaled for its key staff-members and that new products and services are added as customer needs are anticipated and dealt with... and there you have Plastic Pipe Distributors, truly a customer-oriented firm.

Dennis Casarez is longtime owner, and Stephen Thrash is assistant manager, with Walter Johnson as sales manager.

In brief, the following are included among today's expanded services and supplies at Plastic Pipe Distributors.

Nelson Sprinklers
 The firm is master distributor for Nelson lawn and garden sprinklers, with units to meet the landscape and turf irrigation equipment needs, whatever your situation.

There are the spray and impact heads with all the performance features, part of the inventory including a variety of products such as valve boxes, bases, traveling sprinklers, impact sprinklers, the gear driven rotary sprinklers, impact driven rotary sprinklers, pop-up spray heads, shrub spray heads and nozzles, automatic controllers and valves, etc.

Microjet Remarkable
 Be sure to learn about the new Microjet, too, "the most advanced irrigation system in the world," available from Plastic Pipe Distributors.

And the new spot systems with vortex emitter for low-volume irrigation, suitable for residential landscapes, pecan orchards, etc.

Plastic pipe is stocked, of course, and one can choose from PVC, from ABS for drains, waste and vents; and from polybutylene tubing that is the same size as copper tubing and can connect or replace copper tubing. (It takes freezing to -50 degrees!)

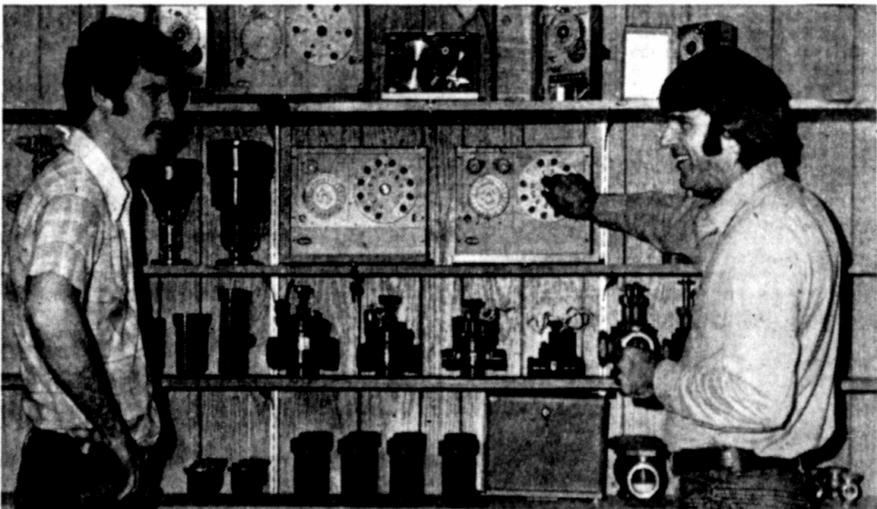

Stocked, also are UL electrical access fittings, conduit, boxes, plastic and brass gate and globe valves, even a full line of fittings including metal ones.

The product list goes on and on, and detailed description of many of these needed items will be discussed in future reports on these pages, but best advice is to "come on in and see what we have, discuss your needs with us, and let us be of service."

Design Service
 "On our staff is a licensed irrigator to design systems for homeowners. If you will bring a drawing of your lot, we can design and give a material list and cost of the complete lawn or other landscape irrigation system, even recommending someone to do the trenching if desired.

"We want to be of service to you as we have been for others during the past two decades. Whether the need is sprinkler supplies, irrigation system design, rough-in supplies for housing, or even other related products and service, we invite you to check with us at 2402 Erskine, phone 763-6531, in Lubbock."

MULTIPLE PRODUCTS AND SERVICES — Stephen Thrash (right) of Plastic Pipe Distributors discusses here with customer David Latham of Rainmaker Sprinkler Systems (installation contractor) the Nelson line including pictured auto controllers. Check the accompanying report for still other products of the long-established Lubbock distributorship.

STOCKED WALL TO WALL — A really tremendous stock can be a first and correct impression at The Yarn Tree in Briercroft Shopping Center. Against a backdrop of Patenayan yarn, owner Vicki Nesbitt calls attention to a needlepoint canvas for which she is selecting yarn. "Tomorrow's treasures" are just as near as The Yarn Tree in Lubbock.

Yarn Tree's Selection Backs Claim Of 'Everything You Need'

"With the largest stock of yarn in town, and with a really exciting array of kits, accessories, etc., together with qualified instruction and a very friendly atmosphere, the Yarn Tree fully justifies its motto of 'Everything You Need!'"

Located at 5302 Ave. Q (in Briercroft Shopping Center), the Yarn Tree, phone 763-5257, was opened last August by Vicki Nesbitt, native of the city. Vicki is a graduate of Monterey High School and will be remembered by many as Vicki King.

She has stocked the Yarn Tree in a fantastic and astute manner, providing what is desired and appreciated in large selection.

"Response has been most gratifying, and I thank every one of you," is the sincere message from Vicki who invites dependence upon her intriguing shop by new and old friends alike.

The Yarn Tree is open from 10 until 5:30 Mondays through Fridays, closing at an earlier 4 p. m. on Saturdays.

Aside from the tremendous stock, the Yarn Tree certainly deserves appreciation for such other features as free instruction aid with purchases there, with Vicki glad to assist in the many problems or questions normal with purchases at a better yarn shop.

Following, at random, are listed only some of the things to be found at the Yarn Shop, but the best suggestion is to come in and see for yourself!

There is a wide selection of yarns from fingering weight to bulky, including designer yarns.

A complete color range of Patenayan yarn for needlepoint and crewel is stocked... in 344 colors!

Tapestry Yarn
 There's a good selection of DMC tapestry yarn.

And crewel kits, needlepoint canvases and kits, cross stitch items including tablecloths and quilts, latch hook rug kits, canvas and pre-cut yarn.

Instruction books and leaflets for knitting, crochet, needlepoint and tatting.

Corcheting supplies include DMC sizes 10-50 wt. Coats knit cro sheen, in over 30 colors!

A good selection of patterns for tablecloths and doilies is offered, and counted cross stitch items including all DMC floss colors, a wide selection of fabrics and good choice in books.

A Christmas Corner, fully stocked the year around, includes needlepoint, crewel, cross stitch, etc.

There are accessories such as frames (many small specialty frames), a complete selection of knitting needles, crochet hooks, stretcher bars, self-stick mounting board, magnifying lamps and knitting bags.

Vinyl Needlepoint Canvas
 Plastic canvas kits and books, too. Featured items include the new Skip-a-Stitch vinyl needlepoint canvas, machine washable with no blocking required; it will not ravel or shrink, and soft and flexible, actually can be machine sewed.

On and on, the long list could continue, but let us simply re-emphasize in this report that we have "everything you need!" Other items will be listed in future stories on these pages. Watch them and our ads for up-to-date happenings and new arrivals at the Yarn Tree.

"Classes are available, scheduled as demand warrants, and with needlepoint, and 4-way bargello classes soon to start. Ask for details about day and evening schedules, and please come see us, whatever you do!"

Bookbinding & Bible Repair Rebounds From Fire Damage, Changes Location

Bookbinding & Bible Repair again is open for business... now at corner of 34th and Boston.

"Disastrous fire in early February at our former 2235 34th St location almost put us out of business, but with the blessings of good friends, understanding customers and the care of our Lord, we again can serve."

Moises Perez, owner and operator, continues in his sincere message.

"As in the past, Bookbinding & Bible Repair pledges to all that we will give our best in every job or problem or project that you entrust to us. We treat your projects as our own, serving your personal interest.

"Some of our equipment still is not functioning at full capacity, and repairs are being made, at times on an around-the-clock basis.

"We have been most fortunate to secure the facilities at southeast corner of the Boston Avenue-34th Street intersection where there is lots of off-street parking and easy access. The building is clearly marked and has been remodeled for our particular functions.

"Our phone number is new (795-7796), and the location is new, but the operation, dedication and quality remains the same for each of you, our appreciated customers. Please bear with us until we can operate at complete full speed ahead in our every operation; in the meantime we are turning out every job just as rapidly as possible and in an efficient manner to which the customer is entitled.

Visits Urged

"We want you to become acquainted with our new location and facilities, coming in to visit at earliest opportunity. We think you'll like what you find, and we appreciate you sharing in our enthusiasm of our 'come-back' from disaster."

"Bookbinding & Bible Repair is five years old, marking our anniversary this month. For this we give tribute to our God and to you, our customers as instruments of God."

"For those of you who may not know of our range of services, we point out the following in brief, it is quite likely that one or more of these services can be of benefit in your own situation:

- (1) Books rebound or restored.
 - (2) Restoration of Bibles that are out of use because of their condition but that can be rebound and re-used again and again.
 - (3) Binding of favorite magazines such as special years of the National Geographic Magazine, or any other professional or hobby magazine or journal.
 - (4) Blank books for special occasions.
 - (5) Restoration or rebinding of antique photo albums and pictures.
 - (6) New bindings in elegant leather for special letters or documents that should be preserved.
 - (7) Restoration of heirloom family Bibles for family records and future memories.
 - (8) Lamination;
 - (9) Spiro ring bindings, and
 - (10) Name imprinting in gold.
- "Our phone is 795-7796, and our location is 34th at Boston. We're easy to find!"

FAMILIAR NAME, NEW ADDRESS — Bookbinding & Bible Repair now is operating from modern quarters at southeast corner of the Boston Avenue — 34th Street intersection. Move to the new home was made after fire destruction at the former facilities of the widely-appreciated service firm headed by Moises Perez.

AT SMOKER'S CLINIC — Staffmembers demonstrate the 'painless' but specialized treatment for physical addiction to smoking, part of the treatment program offered there to 'break the smoking habit'. Inquiry for full details is welcomed by the Smoker's Clinic, 2415 6th St. in Lubbock, represented as one of the few of its type in the nation.

'Breaking Your Smoking Habit Is Smoker's Clinic Guarantee'

Stop smoking... with a money-back guarantee!

The message from Smoker's Clinic of Lubbock, 2415 6th St., phone 747-9400, is simple and direct:

"Our doctor-developed treatment program will break you of your smoking habit."

Part I. Physiological

"The treatment is within a doctor's office, conducted by licensed personnel, and is painless and safe, and it does not involve needles, injections, medicines, hypnosis or any scare techniques whatsoever. There are no withdrawal symptoms or side effects. The treatment takes 20 minutes and will totally eliminate your physical addiction to cigarettes and without withdrawal symptoms."

And the cost is just $75, with a money-back guarantee!

"The technique is sometimes called neuro-stimulation or electro-acupuncture. By stimulating certain nerves, the treatment effectively eliminates your body's need to smoke. Most people are cured by this one treatment alone, but a second electro-stimulation treatment is afforded without added cost when this is determined necessary.

Part II. Psychological

"The treatment for the second part of one's habit, the psychological dependence upon cigarette smoking, is part of the program, too, and consists of a program supervised by a trained counselor. Since your physical addiction will already have been cured by the neuro-stimulation, it is much easier and more effective at this point to stop the 'automatic' part of your unhealthy, expensive and dangerous habit."

"And look at this, adding emphasis to our certainty about the program's effectiveness, our concern about you getting your money's worth:

"If you have completed the entire treatment program within one month and have not stopped smoking, simply smoke your usual brand of cigarette at the fourth counseling session and sign an affidavit that you are still smoking your usual brand of cigarettes. You will be given a refund of your payment in full, without any further questions!"

Isn't this fantastic?

"The Smoker's Clinic treatment is the only program that has been specifically designed to cure both your body's addiction for cigarettes and your mental habit. Physically and psychologically, the program is effective. The Smoker's Clinic of Lubbock is the only one of its type in the entire state, and is located right here in Lubbock, remember, at 2415 6th St., phone (806) 747-9400.

The real facts are that if you stop smoking, you will probably lose your bad cough, your food will taste better, you will save money and you will feel better all over."

"So... if you are sure you are ready to make the commitment to stop smoking, we urge you to take advantage of the Smoker's Clinic money-back guarantee treatment program. For a convenient appointment call the Smoker's Clinic of Lubbock, phone 747-9400."

Wind, Sand Discomforts, Other Factors Focus Attention On Insulating Windows

Insulating Windows, Inc., 327 E. 74th St. in Lubbock, asks two pertinent questions, urging you to read these even if you don't read a bit further!

(1) "Don't you wish that you had been enjoying the protection of storm windows and storm doors from Insulating Windows when that tremendous wind and sand blasted through?"

(2) "Have you wanted to discuss your insulating window needs, related energy saving, costs, etc., with us, but you just didn't know how to reach our offices? Some have reported a problem here, and we'll try to give full directions. If still confused, call us at 745-5768 and we'll possibly be able to give you specifics that can help."

"We are at 327 E. 74th St., with our big manufacturing facilities and our offices all at the same address. One can easily locate and reach us by going east on Loop 289 South, taking the first exit east of Avenue H; continue eastward along the frontage road and watch for the West Texas Millwright or Cummings Diesel facilities; we are just to the south of these, about one block south of Loop 289."

Practical In Every Season

As for wishing you had storm windows and doors custom made at Insulating Windows, Inc., we still urge you to get full details and discover just how practical these can be. Sure, these would have been great for winter... but there are other winters to come! And the protection can be doubly appreciated during the sandstorms, or when energy saving is considered, with related cost savings.

"We want to work with you in every way possible" is the message from the owner at Insulating Windows, Inc., phone 745-5768, at 327 E. 74th St.

The conscientious and capable folks there invite visits and inquiry about any aspect of their products and services. Everything is custom made at Insulating Windows, Inc., with primary products including picture storm windows, patio sliding storm doors, aluminum replacement windows, storm windows and storm doors.

Consider this: "Dead air space in all our windows manufactured at Insulating Windows, Inc., involve 1 1/2-in. to 2-inch dead air space for energy efficiency, and if attached to existing windows enable 2 1/2-in. to 3-in. dead air space."

A vinyl bulb seal is featured, eliminating caulking; and we know it lasts longer!

A rubber seal is utilized for glass mold.

Seams are caulked at the precisely mitered corners.

Storm doors are available with numerous options (2 lite or 4 lite).

"And one does not have to do the entire home at one time to get started on an energy efficiency program via way of storm windows. Let us measure your home, and then you purchase a few units (a room at a time, as example) if your financial planning finds this most advisable."

Ada Van Horn is owner and manager of Insulating Windows, Inc. She is an area native understanding the needs imposed by sandstorms, snow, sleet, wind, weather changes, etc., and wants to make your home more comfortable and beautiful... at a saving one can appreciate.

Insulating Windows, Inc., serves superbly from its large facilities in Lubbock, at 327 E. 74th St., just south of Loop 289, with dealers including the Muleshoe Home Center in Muleshoe, and others in Brownfield and Sweetwater.

Actually, Insulating Windows, Inc., can open a whole new world in one's enjoyment of the home every day of the year, summer and winter.

If the consideration is beauty, economy, quality, health, investment, design or service, then take advantage of the finest in each, afforded by Insulating Windows, Inc., phone 745-5768, at 327 E. 74th St., where sole owner Ada Van Horn and a capable staff can go into detail on each aspect, standing ready to assist you as they have helped others."

Storkie's Cites Sale Selection, Gift Registration, New Arrivals

"Spring is bustin' out all over at Storkie's, 34th at H, the maternity and baby shop that Lubbock and area is talking about!"

"Yes, new spring merchandise is arriving daily... and prices are right; we invite your comparing."

Special Award
"Also, please come in and register for a $25 gift certificate to be given at 2 p.m., Saturday, April 4. You do not have to be present to win; and the certificate may be used for selections in either the maternity or baby departments at Storkie's."

At Storkie's there are new maternity bathing suits, shorts, spring dresses, pants and tops, all available for selection... and the colors are yummy!

The maternity size range is from the small size 4 to the full figure 24.

Lingerie Sale
"There is a complete lingerie department, and to acquaint you with our store, there is a sale in all lingerie and gowns and robes throughout this week: 10 per cent off panties, slips, bras, nursing gowns and robes. You'll want to take advantage of this special."

"Remember, at Storkie's we put sale items in layaway, just as other merchandise, so it would be wise to take advantage of the many markdowns now available."

Other Reductions
There is one rack of nursing smock tops, in pretty prints, that are reduced; all bathing suits are marked down; and some spring dresses already have been reduced in price; so come and browse and take advantage of the layaway, not only on regular merchandise but on sale items as well.

Remember those maternity sizes 4-24, and the fantastic nursing bras at $8.50 and up, sizes to 44F.

The many items that are arriving in the infant and children's department are truly becoming "adorable affordables."

Sizes in the baby department are girls 0-6X and boys 0-4T.

For one week, this week, there will be a sale featuring 10 per cent off on anything not already marked down in the baby department!

"For your shopping pleasure we ask you to drop by and browse; there are many sale items in the baby department, with values throughout the store."

Gift wrap service is available; use of Master Charge and Visa is welcome; store hours are 10-6, six days a week.

"If inflation is eating into your dollar and if you are appreciative of friendly, courteous service, then you need to shop Storkie's, at 34th & H, Family Park Shopping Center, phone 747-8331, next door to Anthony's Owner Faye Spoth and staff are anxious to serve you and save for you."

Specials, Landscaping Service Told By A-One Nursery In City

A-One Nursery, 7500 82nd St., enters another season with "what's right" and "what's desired" for South Plains landscapes. Long a leader in design, installation and maintenance services, A-One traditionally has a huge nursery stock presented at appealing and advertised prices.

Winfred Self, owner and operator, takes whatever steps he believes best in assuring A-One's continued leadership.

As example, this week's report is focused on three significant A-One situations:

- (1) A long list of low prices is posted in the A-One ads.
- (2) Special 1-week specials are announced on selected items, and
- (3) Services of the Landscaping Design department of the firm are re-emphasized.

Landscaping Specialist
Mike Sandlin is in charge of this complete Landscaping Design department. A Lubbock native who is a '74 graduate of Monterey High School, and a '78 graduate in Landscape Architecture from Texas Tech, joined the A-One firm a year ago, and reception of his services has been most gratifying.

Sandlin can check at the landscape site with prospective customers, learning of the purposes and preferences, then returning to the nursery to draw plans as determined necessary. All plants, trees, etc. are available from A-One, of course.

The customer can exercise two choices: (1) purchase the landscaping plan and use it as desired, or (2) let A-One install in part or in full, affording a turnkey job when desired.

In either event, the cost likely is much less than one would expect. Sandlin emphasizes.

No long landscaping waits are involved, and only qualified, experienced crews are utilized.

"Isn't it time to think landscaping?"

One-Week Specials

The One-Week Specials revealed at A-One for the current week include:

Giant size pecan trees, 10 ft. to 12 ft. height, 1 1/4-1 1/2 cal., regular $49.95 trees at A-One, marked for sale at one-half price!

Giant size oaks (red and live oak) also are half price this week.

All 1 gal. and 5 gal. shrubs are 35 per cent off regular price in the limited-time offer, and Giant size fruit trees are at half price.

Other Values

Another "buy" of immediate interest at A-One is the 6 pack (at 99 cents) of cabbage, broccoli or Brussel sprouts.

Everbearing strawberry plants, in 2 1/2 in. pots, are 49 cents each or $4.95 per dozen.

Extra nice silver maple and sycamore trees, 12 ft. to 14 ft., are at 35 per cent discount. Giant size maples, sycamore, locust, golden rains and catalpa are 50 per cent off marked price.

Select, too, from pom poms and poodles, from the windbreaker Arizona Cypress, Keteleeri, Hillspire and Wichita Junipers.

Peach, pear, apricot, plum, nectarine, cherry and apple trees are all at 50 per cent saving.

All 1-gal. roses are $1.49 each, with 2-gal sizes at $2.99.

A very good selection of shrubs is evident, with savings of 35 per cent.

Or maybe the need is aggregate stepping stones, now at $1.88.

Fertilizers are on hand, too, including Fertiloam Weed and Feed Special, and Zipp 16-8-8 with iron and zinc added.

"On and on the values could be listed, but one should visit the big A-1 facility to fully realize how this long-established firm can meet your lawn and landscape needs."

A-1 is open from 9 to 6, Mondays through Saturdays, and on Sundays from 1:30 to 5 o'clock.

Area residents long have benefited from the installation and maintenance services and landscape design from A-1, together with such benefits as the new shipments and unique sale prices right here at beginning of the season.

For more than two decades, actually, folks throughout the region have been assisted by the services of Winfred Self, owner and operator of A-1 Nursery, since 1973 at its present expanded quarters.

Everything at the modern nursery is coordinated for the very best in products and service.

Even with the big stock, the know-how of Self and his experienced crew possibly is the biggest asset of A-1, as hundreds of customers can attest.

(There are other really super specials in addition to the ones mentioned above; come on out and discover these for yourself.)

Shop A-1 Nursery today and save!

SALE BEGINS TODAY — Ed Barclay, owner, and Vicki Whisenand, longtime staffmember at Ed's Wagon Wheel Western Wear, call attention to the extensive stock, new arrivals and enhunt, longtime staffmember at Ed's Wagon Wheel Western Wear, now the sale opportunities at the 5015 University Ave. firm.

Ed's Wagon Wheel Western Wear Announces 'Rodeo Sale' Values

The big Rodeo Sale begins today at Ed's Wagon Wheel Western Wear, the time-honored store now at 5015 University Ave. providing western clothing for all the family, for work and dress-up, and with appreciated accessories and horse tack.

Just in time for the ABC Rodeo beginning Wednesday, Ed's sale should not be overlooked if quality and pricing advantages appeal. (Tickets for the rodeo are available at Ed's, too.)

These are among the specials:
Short-sleeve shirts and straw hats are 25 per cent off, right here at the beginning of the season when they are most needed!
One rack of men's suits is a whopping 50 per cent off!

Big Bell Levi's and Wranglers are as low as $9.95.

All no-fault Wranglers are now $14.95. Check Wranglers, Lees and Levis are a low $9.95.

One rack of long-sleeve shirts is at one-half price.

Saddle Value
Ed's has a really good selection of tack, and for the ABC Rodeo, Ed is giving $100 off on any Longhorn or Billy Cook saddle in stock!

Look at these other items among the great bargains Ed has arranged:

One rack of ladies suits is at half price.

Ladies regular stock long-sleeve shirts are 25 per cent off.

Boys and students Levis are $7.95 and $9.95.

One style of Laramie boots, regular $139.95, now carries an $89.95 price tag for the sale!

All Justin calfskin boots are now $89.95!

Ed's Wagon Wheel Western Wear, at 5015 University Avenue, with scads of off-street parking at its University Park Shopping Center location, is open from 9 until 6, and on Thursday evenings until 9 o'clock.

(Remember, after 14 years at a downtown location, Ed Barclay last summer moved to the new and larger quarters in the all-new University Park Shopping Center just south off 50th Street on University Avenue. The location is convenient from "anywhere," and the stock and service is the best, typically Ed's Wagon Wheel Western Wear!)

Pick Up Pals Maintains Large Stock Accessories, Tells One-Week Special

Proving the claim of "easily affordable" accessories for the pickup, made available by Pick Up Pals, is the one-week sale on wood grain side rails, regular $97.45 installed, but for this week marked at unbelievable $59.95 installed!

Functionally protective and attractive accessories from the best pals one's pickup has ever had is the whole story at the Lubbock-owned Pick Up Pals. Broadway at Avenue Q, and in Amarillo at 3330 S. Western.

Pick Up Pals right here in Lubbock has an extensive stock, and some may not realize that the skilled folks there offer installation on any item handled by the firm.

Check these within the wide variety at Pick Up Pals, many of these items especially desirable at this time of year:

There are floor consoles, always convenient.

And tool boxes of all kinds (side or cross-bed).

There are aluminum grille guards, and a complete line of running boards.

Aero Shields

Select from chrome tailgate covers, rear window louvers, and the Aero

Shields for deflecting bugs, etc., with an air screen quite a protection in the spring and summer months, too.

Custom fitted and made of unbreakable space-age polycarbonate, the Aero Shield helps keep the windshield clear of bugs, spray, grit and all. (It is guaranteed for two years against breakage, and is available in five transparent colors.)

Recognizing that cost of vehicles keeps increasing day by day, one can see the added reason to let Pick Up Pals help protect the pickup investment. (Most likely this one-of-its-kind local firm has the very accessory desired, but in event it is not available from the big stock, then the friendly folks at Pick Up Pals can locate most items on short notice.)

"To introduce you to the big stock or to refresh your memory, check the following as among items at Pick Up Pals where whole new world of enjoyment of your pickup begins — at a cost likely less than imagined!"

Line-A-Beds

Don't fail to see the popular, and so practical, Line-A-Beds, in choice of black or white. These are the liner protectors for truck beds, vacuum molded as a tight-fitting insert and made from a high-density extra high molecular weight polyolefin base material. Made of the same high-impact materials that go into crash helmets and football helmets, it is almost impossible to break or stain. One solid piece covers and protects a pickup floor, headwell, sides and side rails. The Line-A-Bed is often used for auto parts delivery because of its durability.

Pick Up Pals stocks units to fit all import and U.S. pickups. No long delays to wait for a unit. Installation, when desired, most usually can be the same day ordered.

"Anyone who uses a pickup should consider a Line-A-Bed, whether the truck is for business, pleasure or combination. It is one of the options available that returns your investment!"

Multiple Needs

Or maybe the need is a bumper, auxiliary lighting, grille guards, headache racks, seat covers, ropes and hooks, mirrors, fog lights, driving lights, wire mesh headlight guards, spare locks, sliding rear windows, visors, and more it all is at Pick Up Pals, the friendly business at Broadway and Q in Lubbock.

AT FRANK BROWN PONTIAC-HONDA — The exciting Accord 2-door, by Honda, is shown here by Ronnie Burns of the Frank Brown staff in Lubbock, with Ronnie pointing out that Honda is available at prices as low as $5,499.

Frank Brown Points Out Honda Popularity, Savings, Styling

Frank Brown Pontiac-Honda in Lubbock has made a lot of friends with its sales and service of Honda, the "we make it simple" car.

Frank Brown, at 4637 50th St., actually has sold over 2,000 Honda cars in the past 10 years! There must be a reason!

"One of these reasons, of course, is attractive pricing. Did you realize that a Honda could be yours for as low price as $5,499?"

Growth of Honda sales and popularity has had close kinship in time with the growth of the entire Frank Brown operation.

Frank Brown Pontiac, Inc., dates its founding to mid-1970, with the present facility completed for move-in in early '72.

The Honda 2-cylinder air cooled model, in August of '71, was the first Honda handled by the Lubbock firm.

Then in 1973 there came the new 4-cylinder water cooled Honda cars.

Today, Frank Brown Pontiac-Honda is proud to present the Civic and Accord models and the Prelude 2-door sports car. All models and colors are in the big Frank Brown inventory.

Parts, Service

And equally as important. A parts inventory of over $75,000 is maintained by Frank Brown for Honda alone. Technicians attend regularly-scheduled out-of-town schools staged by Honda to keep abreast of all that's new.

It adds to this:

Frank Brown is proud to be a Honda dealer, proud to represent the superb craftsmanship, quality and over-all desirability that are hallmarks of Honda, "the car Detroit should study in evaluating their new designs if interested in quality!"

"May we show how a Honda might be the very unit for you, just as it has been for hundreds of your friends and neighbors right here in the Lubbock area?"

Lauded In Report

Attention is directed to report in the Feb 1981 "Road & Track" magazine, explaining the Honda Accord was voted "simply the best" in front wheel drive sedans.

In part, the report said:

"Refinement and delicacy typify the Accord, coming away with 13 '1sts' among the 21 categories and amassing 817 points to place 1st in the subjective ratings... the Accord also did very well in our personal preferences: two staff members had it list on both lists."

"The Accord's engine is a smooth and responsive powerplant, free-revving up to around 5000 rpm... the Accord's gearbox and linkage were considered best of the lot."

"The most impressive thing about the Accord is a fit and finish that would do justice to a car costing considerably more. One staff member termed it 'jewel-like' and another called the Accord 'the Mercedes-Benz of small cars' and the rest of us agreed."

"So... let the homefolks at Frank Brown Pontiac-Honda in Lubbock prove all this to your own satisfaction. We invite you to inspect and consider a Honda... it might be just what you have wanted but did not realize is available."

Pricing, Conveniences, Friendliness Attract At Global Discount Pharmacy

A lot of people can testify to the advantages of patronizing Global Discount Pharmacy, Inc. 2809 Ave. Q.

Some are especially appreciative of the 15 per cent discount extended senior citizens (at age 60) on all prescriptions.

Others note the personalized service of a small operation, with the pharmacist taking personal interest and speeding one's prescription service, without the longer waits sometimes associated with the larger pharmacy in more congested areas.

There's easy off-street parking at Global Discount Pharmacy, on the east side of Avenue Q, where owner-pharmacist Henry Dominguez is on the job.

Dominguez is a graduate of Southwestern State at Weatherford, Okla., and he has over a decade of experience in Lubbock and Levelland.

Prices at Global Discount Pharmacy invite comparison. Lots of "up front" items are stocked and at prices to please, with the prescription items also afforded at sensible costs.

Use of both Master Charge and visa is welcomed.

Two Phones

Two phone numbers are afforded for the customers convenience, 744-5353 and 744-9902, and still another line for doctors' use.

Henry Dominguez personally is on duty at all hours the pharmacy is open, filling all prescriptions. He is truly dedicated to giving an exceptional service.

Long Hours

Global Discount Pharmacy is open from 9 a.m. until 6 p.m., Mondays through Fridays, closing an hour earlier on Saturdays, at 5 p.m., and closed on Sundays.

FOR GOOD MEAT, BEST PREPARATION — Willis Watts and Greg Watts of Red Barn Meat Market are shown in the montage here emphasizing the three-step cooling process and really modern facilities at the 82nd & Indiana market where beef is sent from initial aging cooler to a second room for cutting and finally to placement in the cases for customer comparison, selection and purchase.

Price Advantage, Top Selection Appeal At Red Barn Meat Market

"For those of you who like to eat well and economize at the same time, Red Barn Meat Market, 8112 Indiana, can be your best friend!"

Yes, it still is true at Red Barn Meat: A half of beef (U.S.D.A. Choice) Yield 1 and 2, still is $1.29 per pound!

Purchase of beef and pork cuts at this time could be a very wise move, Red Barn Meat Market owner Willis Watts points out.

"Prices are sure to get higher, and I really believe now is the time to buy freezer beef and save. We like to help you hedge against short supplies and high prices, we like to save money for our customers just as we like to provide the finest meat."

Greg Watts, son of owner Willis Watts, is now actively associated in the business, and both emphasize that "there is a difference" in meat quality and meat preparation, and for this difference an eye-opener awaits at Red Barn.

Reports on these pages previously have pinpointed the many superior aspects of the market's operation, service and products, but special emphasis again is directed to the meticulous process involved in bringing to the customer the very finest in beef... at Red Barn Meat Market.

Not one, but three, coolers are utilized.

First, beef is brought into the aging cooler where it is kept a minimum of 10 to 14 days, with longer aging when requested by the customer.

Then, the meat is taken into another cooler where it is cut for placement in the cases.

So, finally, one observes, compares and selects from the cases, last of the three cooling operations.

Not just some of the beef, but all of the beef sold at Red Barn Meat Market is subjected to this process for greater customer satisfaction.

"We urge you to look for the grade on the beef you buy," is the further suggestion from this veteran butcher. All beef made available at the Red Barn Meat Market is U.S.D.A. Choice corn-fed cattle. Also, it is yield graded; we just will not buy anything above a '2' yield, meaning that we maintain the best of quality and still keep the fat content as low as possible. In addition to this, we also age our cattle, adding to the flavor and tenderness.

All cattle are from feed lots in the Hereford area.

This quality in every product, plus the across-counter service by knowledgeable staffmembers, is just part of the convincing story that unravels at Red Barn Meat Market, a logical place to trade!

Whether reason for a visit here this week is to stock up the home freezer, to secure meat for a special dinner, to pick up convenience-type items or just to browse and select where you know quality comes foremost, shopping at Red Barn Meat is a rewarding experience.

A lengthy service case is noticed upon one's entry to the spacious market. In another area, a self service case is provided.

Then, as further service, convenience type items (necessities for picnics, barbecues, etc.) are stocked, including milk, bread, chips, sauces, cookies and more.

Watts and his most capable staff take pride in introducing the customer to this "better and complete service market", a description to which a lot of area residents have attested since the market's opening in mid-1976.

The South Indiana market was planned and functionally designed to not only be attractive, but to be convenient, efficient and thoroughly service oriented. Watts opened this big market in May 1976, as the largest independent retail meat market in all West Texas, comprising about 4,275 sq. ft. floor space under roof, plus a large parking apron with access from both Indiana and from 82nd Street.

It is neat, sanitary, attractive and easy to reach from just about anywhere!

A full variety of beef, pork, poultry and fish is stocked, the public has found. As a complete service market, orders for special cuts are welcomed, and full quarters, halves and full beefs are available.

A full line of cheese is stocked. Master Charge and Visa are accepted. From the spacious service area one can see through expansive glass windows into the processing room, noting the efficiency of the butchers and the firm's devotion to cleanest quarters possible. Seventeen art pieces by Bill Leftwich are tastefully arranged on the service area walls.

Owner-operator Willis Watts has been a Lubbock resident 13 years. He was born and reared in West Texas and appreciates the area residents' recognition of quality meats and quality service.

For a revelation in superior products and service, a complete service market provided by "your kind of folks", a visit to Red Barn Meat Market, 82nd at Indiana, is heartily recommended. Likely such visits will become a habit for your better eating!

Reopening Of Coal Pact Talks Hinted

CHARLESTON, W.Va. (AP) — United Mine Workers President Sam Church, saying union and coal industry representatives are close to resuming contract talks, Sunday summoned his negotiators back to Washington just five days before an impending strike.

At stake is a contract covering 160,000 members of the UMW, which has struck over every contract since 1964.

Brightened hopes for renewed talks did not diminish prospects for a walkout at 12:01 a.m. Friday, ratification requires about 10 days and the UMW has a long tradition of not working without a contract.

"Hopefully we'll be at the table within the next 24 hours," said Church. Asked if an agreement were near, Church would only say that he was waiting for resumption of talks with the Bituminous Coal Operators Association.

"We've really been working on it 'cause we'd like to get this settled. I don't want to see my people suffer," he said.

Summoned to Washington were the union's five-member bargaining team and 39-member bargaining council. The union's five top negotiators were to meet Sunday night with Church.

The union president was unavailable for comment Sunday. Eldon Callen, his top spokesman, declined comment.

Vernon Massey, international executive board member for the UMW's District 17, said Sunday he and other members of the bargaining council were told to meet at the union's national headquarters Tuesday.

"There's something developing or he (Church) wouldn't be calling us back," said Massey. He declined to elaborate, adding only: "They just called me. I haven't had time to get my plane ticket yet."

Jack Perry, District 17 president and bargaining team member, confirmed that the council had been recalled. Asked if the move indicated possible progress in contract talks with the coal industry, Perry said "Yes. Or I wouldn't see any necessity for us to be called back."

Under UMW procedures, the five-member bargaining team meets with BCOA negotiators to work out a contract and the 39-member bargaining council must ratify any contract before it can be submitted to members. Church sent the bargaining team home Friday. The council left three days before.

BCOA officials could not be reached for comment on the union's action. B.R. Brown, the group's chief negotiator, had said industry representatives would resume the talks when the union softened some demands.

It could not be learned whether Brown and his two negotiating partners were returning to Washington. But a call to the home of Dennis O'Neal, Brown's chief aide, indicated he was en route to Washington.

A major issue in the stalled negotiations is Sunday work. The present contract calls for miners to work a five-day week, but they can be required to work overtime on Saturdays. No work is done on Sunday. The industry now wants to operate its mines continuously.

Also unresolved is an attempt by the industry to remove from the new contract a provision dating to 1964. The previous and present contracts required the 130 coal companies who belong to the BCOA to pay into the union's health and pension funds a royalty of $1.90 a ton for all the non-union coal they purchase.

To meet customer demands, for example, some coal operators have purchased from non-union companies low-sulfur grade coal needed by electric utilities facing tightened clean air regulations.

Church reported Friday that the industry had been willing to retreat from its demand that the multi-employer pension pooling arrangement be replaced by one in which coal companies could carry individual pension plans handled by private insurance companies. The industry had been reported ready to consign that question to a study committee when the talks collapsed Tuesday.

After calm was restored in the city, city police said they were upset that a 40-member standby state police contingent had refused their request for assistance Saturday afternoon.

State Police spokesman Joseph Crowley said: "Our undercover agents in the crowd did not feel that the situation had deteriorated to the point where Meriden police could no longer protect their residents."

State Police spokesman Joseph Crowley said: "Our undercover agents in the crowd did not feel that the situation had deteriorated to the point where Meriden police could no longer protect their residents."

But Meriden police Sgt. John Lorenc said: "Their failure to act was quite upsetting to us because some of our men were hurt. We got more cooperation from (neighboring) Cheshire. They offered us their entire department."

Solidarity Attacked By Polish Leaders

presented a tough list of demands but stopped short of threatening a strike.

According to PAP, the Politburo met to discuss the situation and stated that Poland "was facing a serious threat."

"The hitherto results of hard efforts of the party, the state and all patriotic forces of prudence and responsibility, aimed at overcoming the social tension and stabilizing life of the country, have been disturbed," the Politburo statement said.

Focusing on events in Bydgoszcz, the Politburo said, "state authorities cannot and will not tolerate" illegal sit-ins, and mentioned a week-long farmers' sit-in at the headquarters of the pro-communist United Peasants Party there.

"Political Character"

Strike threats resulting from the Bydgoszcz incident have "a clearly political character," the Politburo statement said. It added:

"A tendency to develop activities of a political character has gained the upper hand in Solidarity as has a tendency illegally to usurp the functions of the duly constituted representative and executive bodies. This creates a state of anarchy."

Solidarity has said it does not want to become a political party or share power with the party.

The Radio Moscow commentary said the "escalation (of work stoppages), especially in January" could be tied to the Solidarity leadership, "which seems to think it does not have to take responsibility."

It said the Polish government was doing its utmost to carry out agreements that ended last summer's strikes. "What is necessary is reciprocal action on the part of the other sides of the agreement — the trade unions."

Pastoral Letter

Cardinal Stefan Wyszynski, Roman Catholic primate of Poland, issued a call Sunday for "calm, self-control and responsibility." A pastoral letter from the cardinal was read at Mass in the Church of the Holy Cross and broadcast by Warsaw Radio. Ninety percent of Poland's 36 million people are Catholics.

Chicago Mayor Plans Move Into Tenement

came only weeks after she ousted two black members of the Chicago School Board and named white replacements. The ouster sparked an outburst of rage in the black community, comprising nearly 50 percent of the city's 2.9 million residents, which gave Mrs. Byrne overwhelming support in her 1979 upset victory.

Police Superintendent Richard Brzezczek said he supported the plan, and would "transfer the executive function (of the police department) or a portion of it to the new residence."

The announcement drew mixed reaction from city officials and Cabrini residents, many of them calling the planned move courageous but symbolic.

Alderman Danny Davis, a black, was not impressed.

"It's absolutely, unequivocally, a political move. I think it's characteristic of how she has dealt with the black needs and black problems in the city since she took office," he said, "and that is to heap insult after insult after insult as though blacks are totally ignorant."

The mayor's announcement was prompted partly by her seeing a 16-year-old girl in a squad car after the girl had been raped. "It's got to stop," said Mrs. Byrne.

U.S. Eyes Discussion Of Weapons Cutback

WASHINGTON (AP) — The Reagan administration, in a gesture to West European allies, will begin consultations in Brussels, later this month, on negotiations for a cutback in U.S. and Soviet medium-range nuclear weapons.

The talks could lead to East-West negotiations by the end of the year, although the administration intends to move cautiously in dealing with the Soviet Union.

Meanwhile, the administration postponed a meeting with the Russians on the SALT I treaty that was scheduled to begin next Wednesday in Geneva. The talks are held twice a year to review U.S. and Soviet compliance with the limitations on various nuclear weapons systems.

Administrative Point

A U.S. official, who asked not to be identified, said the principal reason for the postponement was that a new head of the U.S. delegation had not been appointed. Also, he said, the Americans needed more time to prepare for the discussions.

"It is not a major substantive development," he said. "We will go ahead and have another meeting, later on."

Heading the U.S. delegation to the Brussels talks will be Assistant Secretary of State Lawrence Eagleburger, who is trying both to strengthen ties among the allies and take a tough stand toward Moscow, administration sources disclosed.

Involved is the NATO decision in December 1979 to deploy new U.S. medium-range nuclear missiles in West Germany, Britain and Italy, beginning in 1983. The Pershing and Cruise missiles are to be targeted on the Soviet Union, which has 2000 missiles already aimed at Western Europe.

A warrant for the arrest of Laura Young, also known as Laura Holloman and Laura Smith, has been issued from Judge Thomas L. Clinton. Information leading to her arrest will bring a $300 reward from Crime Line.

Miss Young, charged with forgery, is a black female born Feb. 21, 1961.

A $300 reward is offered for information leading to the arrest of Daniel R. Farris, a fugitive charged with revocation of probation and possession of a controlled substance.

Judge Denzil Bevers issued the warrant for the arrest of Farris, who is described as a white man born Sept. 4, 1958, 5-foot-11 and 140 pounds with blonde hair and blue eyes.

persons watched the event last year.

The ceremony began with Chief Runkles lighting the council fire in the traditional "rubbing two sticks together" way.

While his grandson Douglas Runkles kept time on the drum, Runkles' granddaughter D. Lane, both of Midland, performed the tribal prayer dance followed by the peace-pipe dance. Chief Runkles asked the blessings of the four directions and "Mother Earth who gives us food."

A dance by the grandchildren together preceded Chief Runkles' rattle dance to chase away evil spirits. As he danced, his grandson noted the wind's direction and the spear with four eagle feathers was placed in the ground to mark the direction and the "average year" prediction was announced.

Chief Runkles, alias Frank A. Runkles, is the owner of The Runkles Family Collection, Indian Antiques & Artifacts in Post. He said he has taught Indian lore for 50 years and spent 30 years with the Boy Scouts of America in teaching and studying Indian lore.

The annual ceremony was changed somewhat this year by the merchants of the Post Chamber of Commerce, who offered to feed breakfast to everyone who visited for the modest fee of $1. The breakfast had previously been used for a farmers-only appreciation meal.

And with a meal like the one presented Sunday, the year already is off to a better-than-average start.

been required," Graham said. "Everybody is a little confused about what is required of them under the law."

Graham formerly served as general counsel for the property tax board. Since entering private practice in 1979, he has represented several tax appraisal districts around the state.

"I frankly don't see any legitimate defense for jurisdictions that have refused to pay appraisal districts," Graham said.

Most of the delinquent taxing units "just have not looked down the road far enough," Graham said. "At the end of this year, all statutes under which their tax rolls are prepared will be repealed."

The taxing units that do not pay a county appraisal district will not be entitled to receive their property appraisals from the district, the attorney said. "The net effect," he said, "is they won't have a tax roll starting in 1982."

Graham estimated that between 30 and 40 tax appraisal districts in the state have one or more jurisdictions that have refused to pay.

By delaying payments to the appraisal district, Graham said, the taxing units are likely to delay the district in its property appraisals. The delinquent units probably will hurt themselves because their tax rolls will be late next year, he added.

Graham said appraisal districts have the option to sue delinquent taxing jurisdictions, seeking declaratory judgments concerning the payments. If a judgment is obtained, he said, the court can issue a writ to force an entity to pay.

Officials with the tax appraisal district here said they hope to avoid a court battle with the water district. "We intend to work with them in any way they will let us," said Roland Wilkinson, assistant chief appraiser.

Legal remedies would be used only as a last resort, Wilkinson said. "We are trying to do everything in a positive way," he added.

But if the water district or any other local taxing authority continues to withhold payments, the tax appraisal district board already has indicated its willingness to go to court, Wilkinson said.

The cycle flipped, and Sherrod was thrown to the pavement. Miss Jones, who was wearing Sherrod's helmet, landed in a grassy area, police said. Sherrod was not wearing a helmet.

A 27-year-old Lubbock man was seriously injured Sunday night in a motorcycle accident in the 4600-block of 69th Street, according to police.

John Michael Sherrod, 27, of 9006-B Elgin Ave. was undergoing emergency treatment late Sunday at Lubbock General Hospital.

Sherrod suffered head injuries in the 8:20 p.m. accident, and he was unconscious on arrival at the hospital, where he was transported by EMS ambulance.

A passenger on Sherrod's Suzuki 750 motorcycle, Lisa R. Jones, 20, of 2309 14th St., suffered minor cuts and bruises in the accident.

Miss Jones told police Sherrod was giving her a ride on the motorcycle when he accelerated sharply while eastbound on 69th Street. He failed to negotiate a curve in the 4600-block, and the motorcycle struck the curb, police said.

The cycle flipped, and Sherrod was thrown to the pavement. Miss Jones, who was wearing Sherrod's helmet, landed in a grassy area, police said. Sherrod was not wearing a helmet.

Doctors say her memory loss stems from conversion reaction — the mind's conversion of emotional trauma into physical symptoms.

Under the truth drug, Jane Doe mentioned St. Francis High School, a Wheaton, Ill., parochial school where Miss Tomiczek attended ninth grade. Mrs. Tomiczek said her daughter's early education was in Roman Catholic schools.

Jane Doe has displayed signs of a Catholic upbringing, taking part in communion and making the sign of the cross without instruction when a psychologist took her to mass, according to an investigator who asked not to be identified.

Under the influence of the drug, Jane Doe recalled playing dressup in an attic as a child. That was a favorite childhood pastime of Miss Tomiczek, her mother said.

Nicaragua Parties Claim Dictatorship

MANAGUA, Nicaragua (AP) — Five opposition parties claimed Sunday that the Sandinista government intends to establish a communist dictatorship in this Central American nation.

"The abuses the current government is committing against the liberty of political and union organizations are symptoms indicative of the political decision to establish a Marxist-Leninist dictatorship," a joint statement by the political parties said.

The statement released Sunday was signed by members of the Social-Democrat, Social-Christian, Conservative-Democrat and Liberal Constitutionalist parties and the Nicaraguan Democratic Movement.

Two Lubbockites Shot During Disturbance

A disturbance early Sunday morning at a 42nd Street residence led two Lubbock men with minor gunshot wounds, according to police reports.

When police arrived at the address about 3 a.m. Sunday, they found 28-year-old Scott Euresti of 1610 45th St. lying on his back on the living room floor. He had been shot once in the left leg and had suffered a deep cut to the middle of his forehead, police said.

According to witnesses Euresti was wounded in a fight with the 22-year-old man who lives at the residence.

A witness said he, Euresti and another man went to the suspect's house, where the suspect was in the front yard changing a tire on a car.

The victim reportedly walked out of the house carrying a knife, and a scuffle ensued. Details of exactly what happened were unclear, but witnesses reported hearing several gunshots.

When police confronted the suspect in the back bedroom of his house, they found that he, too, had been shot in the left leg. A .25-caliber pistol was found under the mattress of the bed, reports show.

Both the victim and the suspect

Fears Communist Rule

EDISON, N.J. (AP) — Princess Ashraf Pahlavi, twin sister of the late Shah of Iran, says communists will take over Iran unless the monarchy is returned to power.

Princess Ashraf spoke Friday during a rare public appearance at the Pines Manor before 225 members of the North Jersey chapter of the Association of the United States Army. A few hours before, her nephew, Prince Reza Kurush Pahlavi, heir to the Peacock Throne of Iran, speaking from his home in Cairo, Egypt, called on the 2 million exiled Iranians to unite.

"In today's Iran, according to all observers, the Marxists are the only well-organized disciplined force," the princess said. "Once in power, they will call for the Soviet Union to come to their rescue, just as they did in Afghanistan."

"Already the red flag flies over some of the northern provinces," she said.

Princess Ashraf was accompanied by an entourage of security personnel from two private firms — and a dog trained to sniff out explosives.

Look Alike Contest Planned

NEW YORK (AP) — Opera star Luciano Pavarotti has a look alike in Brooklyn, or so say the friends of restaurateur Ralph Grimaldi.

Grimaldi, who owns Jimmy's restaurant in the fashionable Brooklyn Heights area of New York City's most populous borough, decided he wasn't the only man around who resembles the portly popular tenor.

So he's announced plans for a "Pavarotti Look Alike Contest" — with the date for judging still to be scheduled — and offered prizes including tickets to a Pavarotti concert and a copy of the singer's new book, "Pavarotti: My Own Story."

And Grimaldi says the contest is wide open — he's disqualifying himself.

Rogers Files Lawsuit

MILAMI (AP) — Country singer Kenny Rogers has filed a $700,000 damage suit against a south Florida developer, claiming he sold Rogers a yacht that was not seaworthy.

Rogers bought the 22-year-old boat, The Gambler's Lady, from R. Joseph Mulhern last year for $575,000, according to the complaint filed Friday in Broward County Circuit Court.

Mulhern called the suit "frivolous and groundless."

"First of all, I didn't even want to sell it," Mulhern said. "He chased me to buy it." Mulhern said he is preparing a $10 million slander suit against Rogers.

Rogers' suit asks for the $200,000 it allegedly would cost to make the vessel seaworthy and $500,000 in punitive damages.

The 75-foot luxury boat was once owned by television producer David Wolper. The suit charges that coverup work was done to the vessel to conceal mechanical and structural defects.

Forbes Buys Panels

NEW YORK (AP) — Publisher Malcolm S. Forbes has bought a set of eight lacquered mural panels from the grand salon of the French luxury liner Normandie for $90,000, according to Christie's auction house.

The panels, painted by Jean Dupas in the early 1930s, depict scenes from the history of navigation. The Metropolitan Museum of Art owns 55 of the panels.

Liberals Called 'Cry Babies'

ATLANTA (AP) — With a wave of conservatism sweeping the country, American liberals have become "a bunch of cry babies" and the news media have developed a "mental block" against political activism by conservative churchmen, TV evangelist Jerry Falwell says.

The leader of the Moral Majority charged Friday that liberals have behaved like "poor losers" since Ronald Reagan was elected president.

At a news conference in Smyrna outside Atlanta, Falwell said he was surprised at "how the national media so totally have a mental block on conservative churchmen getting involved in politics."

"Nobody was saying a thing about the Berrigan brothers or William Sloane Coffin or the Rev. Jesse Jackson" and their political activism, Falwell said.

"What is good for the liberal goose is good for the conservative gander," he added. "Everything we are doing, we are learning from the other side. ... what concerns them (liberal churchmen) is that we outnumber them."

Falwell was in Georgia to address U.S. Rep. Larry McDonald's 7th District advisory committee.

Sinatra Included In Drive

GENEVA, N.Y. (AP) — Frank Sinatra was on the mailing list when DeSalles High School launched its annual $100,000 fund-raising drive. Now the famed crooner is on the thank-you list.

On Friday, students and staff at the Catholic high school were stunned to find a $1,000 check from Sinatra in the mail.

Principal Edward Tracey found it "overpowering" that Sinatra would have spotted the request among all his fan mail and responded to it.

In honor of the gift, Tracey brought his collection of Sinatra records to school and played them over the public address system.

SINATRA

Freshman Steve Bucklin, 14, had decided to write to him and ask for a donation because he'd read about the singer's generosity.

"I'm going to sit down and write him a thank-you letter," Bucklin said. "I certainly think he's a very caring person."

Duchess In Blue Jeans

LONDON (AP) — A member of Britain's royal family appeared in figure-hugging blue jeans Saturday, the first time royalty watchers could remember such a turnout.

The Duchess of Kent, a cousin by marriage of Queen Elizabeth II, arrived home from a Caribbean vacation wearing a loose jumper over a check shirt and jeans.

Fashion writers said they could not remember seeing a royal lady in jeans before, although riding breeches and slacks are often worn.

At London's Heathrow Airport, the duke and duchess looked bronzed after their stay in Barbados.

With her long blond hair swept back in a ponytail, the 48-year-old duchess said, "We've had two weeks of glorious weather."

The duchess was formerly Katharine Worsley, daughter of a Yorkshire landowner.

Labor Leader Honored

STOCKHOLM, Sweden (AP) — Polish independent trade union leader Lech Walesa has been awarded a $10,000 prize by a Swedish newspaper in honor of his work "for social justice and peace."

He will receive the "Let Live Prize," given annually by the provincial newspaper Arbetet of Malmoe, "for his and the free union movement Solidarity's work for social justice and peace," the newspaper said.

Previous recipients include Sweden's nuclear disarmament expert in the United Nations, Alva Myrdal, and several Swedish authors.

"The money will be used in Solidarity's work," the 37-year-old Walesa told chief editor Lars Engqvist, who met him in Poland last week. "But the distinction I will keep for myself. It is the first prize I have ever been awarded," he was quoted as saying.

Walesa is scheduled to go to Malmoe, Sweden, to receive the prize May 21.

Congressional Record Includes School Contest Winners' Names

WASHINGTON (AP) — Rep. Glenn M. Anderson put into the Congressional Record nearly two pages of essays and winners' names from the patriotism speech contest of Pacific Heights Elementary School, San Bruno, Calif.

In the same issue, March 11, Rep. William J. Hughes included a newspaper article honoring one of his New Jersey constituents. That item took up an entire page of the Congressional Record, the official log of the Congress.

Rep. Dante B. Fascell extolled one of his Florida constituents for his 33 years of service to veterans, Rep. Robert J. Lagomarsino noted the retirement of two women from the Ventura County Veterans Service Office, and Rep. John J. Duncan contributed a speech former baseball star Hank Aaron gave at a dinner Duncan attended in Knoxville, Tenn.

Senate and House members receive political benefits for noting the activities of their constituents in the Congressional Record, but the benefits are not free — the American taxpayers are paying the bill at a rate of $480 a page.

Rep. Dan Glickman, although expressing little optimism for success, has been waging an austerity battle with his colleagues to limit the members' remarks in the Congressional Record to those "relevant to governmental matters." The Kansas Democrat also wants to do away with bound sets of the Congressional Record and reduce the number of free subscriptions.

Sen. Charles McC. Mathias, R-Md., new chairman of the Congressional Joint Committee on Printing, also is looking for ways to save money but cutting the printing budget. He has pledged sharp cuts throughout the government publishing budget, which has been estimated at nearly $2 billion a year although no one is really sure how big it is.

In the year ended last Sept. 30, government publishing costs for Congress alone included $26 million to print the transcript of congressional hearings, $13 million to publish the daily Congressional Record (and an additional $7.2 million on bound copies), $8.2 million on legislative bills, resolutions and amendments, $7.9 million on miscellaneous printing and binding, and $4.8 million to print committee reports.

Glickman's proposals include elimination of the luxury of printing a new menu for the congressional dining rooms each day at a cost of $100,000 a year; he suggests putting the chef's special of the day on a mimeographed insert. He also recommends publishing just one congressional telephone book a year, instead of the three House directories that came out last year.

The three-term congressman would also like to stop the printing and distribution of volumes containing tributes to deceased congressional members even though the tributes have already appeared in the Record. That service costs $75,000 a year.

Mathias said he expects to raise the price of the Congressional Record to try to wipe out a $300,000 subsidy. It now costs $135 to each of the 4,000 subscribers.

Also, he has cut out a second printing of the Congressional Directory during each session, and has reduced by 15 percent the number of Congressional Pictorial Directories, cutting the number back to 15,000 with only one printing a session.

He has pledged to look throughout government and stop "the continued unnecessary printing of documents which are not wanted or needed by government officials, scholars or the public."

Mathias said he wanted the Government Printing Office, one of the largest organizations of the U.S. government, to be "the best service organization and a model of an efficient, effective governmental organization that is the envy of all other government offices for the productivity and resourcefulness it demonstrates daily."

Three City Park Deer Killed By Hunting Bow

SHREVEPORT, La. (AP) — Someone with a hunting bow shot three deer penned in a city park, killing two and leaving a third so severely wounded it had to be destroyed, police said.

A fourth deer was wounded in the right rear ankle, but police were not sure if it had been shot or had hurt itself. Four arrows with aluminum shafts and hunting tips were found in the pen.

Texas Beer Wholesalers Influential, Persuasive

AUSTIN (AP) — Texans don't just like beer, they love it, spend millions of dollars on it and drink millions of gallons of it.

Slaking the thirst for beer is very big business, and it's big politics, too. That combination makes for interesting times when Texas legislators get together.

The Alcoholic Beverage Commission reports that last year, Texans consumed some 406.5 million gallons of suds, enough to pour every man, woman and child in the state 28.9 gallons of the stuff. That would fill a 5-foot-long bathtub halfway up.

Other alcoholic beverages don't even come close. Texans bought only 22 million gallons of distilled spirits in 1980, 13.2 million gallons of ales and malt liquors, and 12.1 million gallons of wine.

Taxes collected from beer sales alone are more than the other three categories of booze combined.

The ABC says that last year it took in more than $65 million from its tax of $5 per 31-gallon beer barrel. Taxes on sales of all other booze generated about $51 million.

All of this from one of the most highly regulated industries in the state — and one of the most competitive.

The average alcohol aficionado may think little and care less about the intricate wars among brewers, wholesalers and retailers. But the businessmen care intensely, and do what they can to make sure lawmakers understand their concern.

That is, the beer wholesalers do. They have statewide and local lobbies to push their legislation, and use a political action committee — WBPACT — and local PACs to make political contributions.

In the past, the wholesalers lobby has been able to persuade legislators to pass some fairly controversial laws, much to the envy and annoyance of tavern owners.

Last session, for example, wholesalers pushed for an act that instituted a "three-tier" beer distribution system in Texas. The law effectively assures middlemen — wholesalers — a lock on beer sales. Retailers can't buy from each other and brewers can't sell to retailers or the public.

"What is the public interest in guaranteeing a cut to the middleman on 100 percent of the total market in this state?" asked Rep. Wayne Peveto when the measure passed the House two years ago. "Let's not heap more scorn on this legislature by passing this bill."

It passed 97-29, and Rep. Buck Florence, D-Hugh Springs, said it was obvious the "beer lobby had the House wired" and the bill "greased" for passage.

Now, tavern owners say the law keeps prices artificially high.

"I can find beer advertised in the newspaper cheaper than I can buy from the distributor, but I can't buy from the retailer because of the three-tier law," said Pat Conway, owner of Don Politico's, an Austin bar that serves only beer and wine.

"I wish we (retailers) had a lobby," he said. "I'd be willing to pay for one. But you can't get the retailers together."

John Muir, owner of another Austin watering hole, The Raw Deal, complains that distributors are "always forever following each other's lead in raising prices," but that he can't buy from anyone else.

He professed a kind of admiration for the middlemen.

"Talk about having your industry organized! They're way above and beyond the normal wholesale merchant," he said. "They use the legislature to organize the industry to maximize profit and minimize competition. That's what any business tries to do, but they get it done."

Rising Fuel Prices Causing Rapid Drop In Big Bend Tourists

PANTHER JUNCTION (AP) — Rangers insist Big Bend National Park is not on the brink of becoming a "ghost park," but they concede the number of people visiting the rugged canyons, mountains and deserts has plunged almost as fast as the price of gasoline has soared in the past five years.

Fewer than half the number of people visited the park last year than in 1976. Park officials say the decline has been steady and it's still going on.

"Big Bend's drop is among the worst in the country," said Al Galipeau, a statistician with the National Park Service's planning office in Denver.

Rangers say the answer is obvious to them — the cost of gasoline has put this remote park in far Southwest Texas out of range of many vacationers. In 1976, when a gallon of gasoline cost about 55 cents, a motorist could drive his family here and back from Houston for about $50.

the ashes are disposed of in the main current of the river," according to park literature.

Also, "molestation of any kind to the fish (in ponds and springs) is prohibited," the federal park regulations state. That also applies to rattlesnakes.

In fact, it is specifically against the law to "kill, wound, frighten, capture, touch or molest" the snakes or any other wild creatures.

"What you have here is an open air museum and zoo, where the rattlesnake was here first," said Berry. "They won't bite you unless you stick your hand into a hole or under a rock, anyway."

He said there have been three recorded snakebite cases in the park's 37-year history. There are no recorded cases of any humans ever being attacked by the many panthers that live in the park, but Today, gasoline for that same trip would cost about $110.

"People are visiting parks closer to home, and there's nobody close to home around Big Bend," said Ben Moffett of Santa Fe, N.M., a spokesman for the National Park Service's Southwest region, which includes six states. "Big Bend has gone down more than any park in the southwest because of its isolation."

But the remote location is one of the advantages of this 1,100-square-mile wildlife refuge that got its name from the 107-mile bend in the Rio Grande in which it is nestled, says acting Park Superintendent Russ Berry.

"We're 130 miles south of I-10, so you've got a 260-mile round trip if you want to come off the Interstate — and that's before you drive to the crossroads," he said.

"It's not our job to go out and recruit visitors," Berry said, but he confessed that since federal funds for parks are based in part on visitation statistics, he would like to see more people.

In the meantime, he said, fewer people cause less harm to the delicate flora and fauna that flourish here, including some species unique to the park's diverse forests, springs, basins and deserts. In the past, as the number of visitors grew, rules evolved which Berry said are intended to promote, not restrict, enjoyment of the park by preserving the natural resources.

The rules are very specific in some cases. For instance, if you are camping out on the Rio Grande floodplain while on a raft trip, you may build a small fire "as long as it is contained in a metal firepan, charcoal or dead wood is used, and if one does, Berry conceded a park ranger would probably look the other way if the attacked camper violated the law against molesting or frightening the animals.

"I don't like all the rules. When somebody comes in and sees 'don't, don't, don't,' he may get the wrong impression of the park, Berry said. "But some of them are not so much rules as they are standards of conduct."

A few campers have complained about all the don't-dos, Berry said, but he said the splendor of the Big Bend Park, created in 1944 from the Canyon State Park, leaves most visitors too awed to gripe.

The park was made a national preserve to protect the resources in this area, which includes the northern range of the Chihuahuan desert. The main attractions are the Chisos Mountains and three sheer-walled canyons carved by the Rio Grande which vary in depth from 1,400 to 1,600 feet.

"Their rims cannot be reached by climbing out," warns a Big Bend pamphlet.

Berry said only an experienced canoeist would be advised to take a trip down the entire 107-mile bend, which would take one to two weeks. But he said novices can float the Santa Elena Canyon, which includes the "Rock Slide" rapids, if they have the proper equipment and get briefed by a park ranger before they put in will focus on the right of a woman to be treated like a human being," including the right to defend herself against abuse to the point of killing, said Richard "Racehorse" Haynes, Mrs. Daniel's lawyer.

All last week, in a usually sleepy county courtroom, Vickie Daniel's lurid tales of violence, perversion, drink and drugs provoked gasps and laid the foundation for a battered spouse defense.

Testimony in the child custody suit filed by Price Daniel's sister, Jean Daniel Murph, resumes today. In remarks made outside the courtroom, Mrs. Murph agreed that the testimony in the case points toward a battered spouse syndrome — but she says there are two abused spouses, Daniel and Mrs. Daniel's first husband, who testified that Vickie Daniel once came at him with a knife.

But Larry Moore and other witnesses also have testified that his former wife was a good mother, an assessment that Moore's second wife agreed with.

Mrs. Murph maintains that Vickie Daniel is an unfit mother because she fired the rifle shot that killed her husband Jan. 19 at their ranch home near Liberty. Three-year-old Franklin Baldwin Daniel and 1-year-old Marion Price Daniel IV are the objects of the child custody suit.

J.C. "Zeke" Zbrank, Mrs. Murph's lawyer, is expected to call to the stand early this week a psychiatrist hired by Mrs. Murph who examined Mrs. Daniel. Zbrank says he expects to call the last of his 20 witnesses by the end of the week.

Then it will be Haynes' turn to call witnesses in the proceeding. The prominent defense lawyer has peppered his cross examinations with insinuations that Daniel neglected his wife and family and Vickie Daniel has testified that she was beaten by her husband the night he was shot.

Although the crowds at the Liberty County courthouse have relished each tidbit of testimony about Daniel's alleged character flaws — including his supposed use of drugs and his purported sexual perversions — Haynes remains unconvinced that his client is still seen as an accused rather than a convicted murderer.

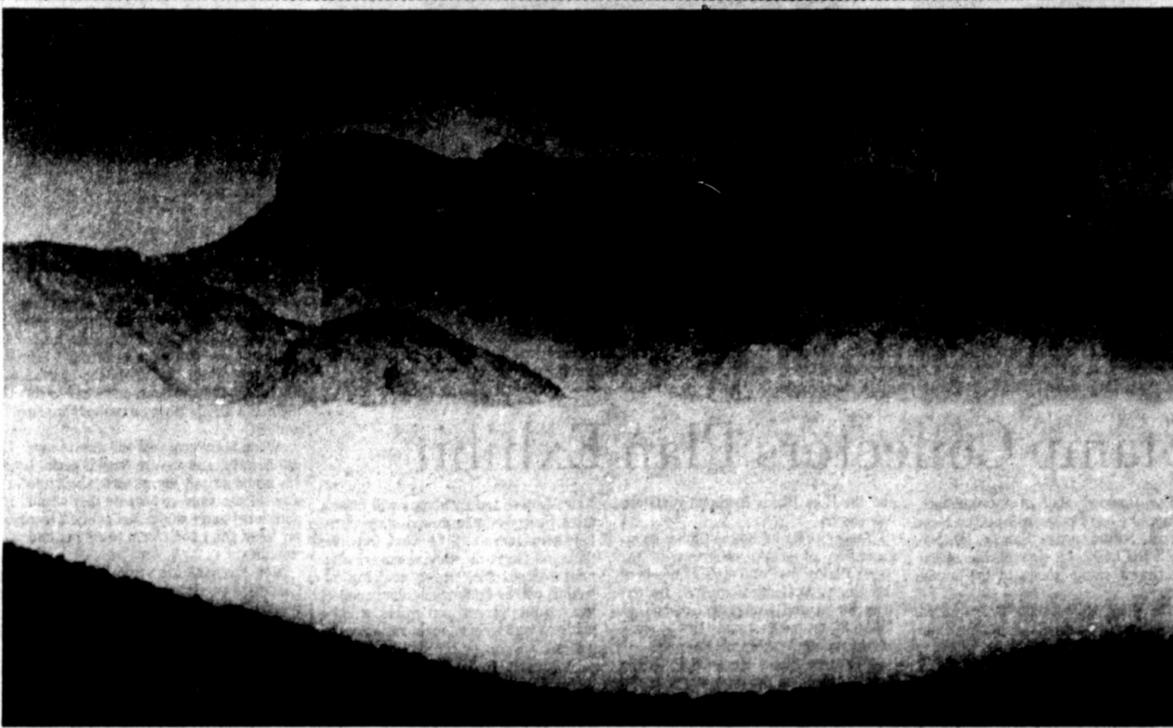

"I don't know what happened to the presumption of innocence," said Haynes. "Just because someone has been charged with a crime, including murder, does not rob that individual of all their treasures, including children."

Fort Worth 'C&W Joint' To Open April 1

FORT WORTH (AP) — In his own words, Billy Bob is building himself a "helluva beer joint."

Where else, he wonders, can you shoot the bull, drink the Bull, eat the bull or ride the bull? You might say Billy Bob is bullish on Fort Worth.

Then again, you might say it's all a bunch of bull.

But whatever, come April 1, the doors swing open at Billy Bob's Texas, modestly ballyhooed as "the world's largest nightclub entertainment facility."

What's more, Willie and Waylon and Larry Gatlin and a bunch of other good ole boys will be there to greet you.

Sooe call it "Gilley's North," an allusion to the super-sized country and western saloon near Houston that introduced the world to the mechanical bull.

Remember John Tavolta and "Urban Cowboy?"

Now comes Billy Bob Barnett, a 6-foot-5, 250-pound bear of a man who is convinced Texas, if not the world, is ready for bigger and better things.

Including live bulls for your dancing and drinking pleasure.

"I feel like it will work," said Billy Bob as he and an uneasy PR — public relations — lady guided a skeptic through the mammoth, 100,000-square-foot dance hall.

"Texas is probably the only state big enough for two big joints," said Billy Bob.

"Entertainment centers," corrected the PR lady.

"Gonna have live bull riding two or three nights a week, including lady bullriders," said Billy Bob.

"Topless?" wondered the skeptic.

"That would draw a crowd," said Billy Bob, appreciatively.

"Don't say that," cautioned the PR lady.

"We wouldn't be opposed to it," insisted Billy Bob.

With a smile best described as sickly, the PR lady pointed out that Billy Bob's Texas is more than just a big barn in which to drink and ride bulls.

For one thing, it features 14,000 square feet of dance floor, a 2,600-square-foot private membership VIP club, 42 bar stations and retail stores selling Western wear, souvenirs and snacks.

It will accommodate 4,000 to 6,000 patrons, depending on whether you talk with Billy Bob or the PR lady.

And a mobile barbecue facility will feed 'em all.

Besides professional bullriding, Billy Bob revealed, Billy Bob's Texas may also be the only dancehall with a barber shop.

"Entertainment center," corrected the PR lady.

One thing the entertainment joint has going for it is its location, in the heart of Fort Worth's historic stockyards area.

Once a total eyesore, and almost as safe as the south side of Chicago in the Capone era, the stockyards area has undergone a facelift and long overdue renaissance.

In the mood of things, a cowboy cop patrols the area on horseback.

It is now a legitimate tourist attraction, offering a wide variety of western-styled food, leather goods, clothing and entertainment.

You can buy a horse or a cow or a suede jacket or a saddle just about as easily as a Lone Star Longneck or a bourbon and branch.

And the odds against getting in and out alive are substantially better than 3 to 1.

In the good old days, people had a remarkable tendency to get themselves dead on the city's North Side, which embraces the stockyards and Billy Bob's.

Butch Cassidy and the Sundance Kid fooled around out there, as did Bonnie and Clyde.

"They walked in the same places we're walking and drank in the same places we're drinking," Billy Bob said.

Indeed, the building that houses the world's largest nightclub was built in the early 1900s. It served first as a cattle holding area and later as a horse barn.

"We retained the sloping floor, which was built that way for shoveling out the manure," Billy Bob smiled.

The PR lady shuddered perceptibly.

She thrust into the hands of the skeptic a news release which explained that Billy Bob was but one of four partners in the world's largest nightclub.

The others are brothers Mitt and Thomas Lloyd, who "operate cattle ranches near San Angelo," and Spencer Taylor, "one of Fort Worth's most successful club owners."

Taylor was described as the "operating partner."

The skeptic, curious about Billy Bob's dy-role, was told: "I'm the partner partner."

In the handout, Billy Bob is described as a "Lampasas rancher, businessman and entrepreneur...a football player from Texas A&M and a professional football player, having played with the Chicago Bears."

Billy Bob allowed as how he did a little ranching, once sold a little beer, played a little basketball and ran an Austin honkytonk called "The Bucket." He did not mention football, let alone the Chicago Bears.

Why name it Billy Bob's Texas as opposed to, say, Spencer's Texas?

"They said I was the only one that sounded country."

The PR lady winced.

"Billy Bob's Texas is going to be the hottest spot in the country for big name entertainers," the release quoted Billy Bob as saying. "We're proud to be carrying on the Texas tradition of a good old dance hall while at the same time bringing in top country artists."

In real life, he said:

"I've always thought that Fort Worth needed a fairly large C&W joint."

"Entertainment center," interrupted the PR lady.

"I thought this was where most of the real cowboys hung out," continued Billy Bob. "We're trying to give all the cowhands in the country a place to come again."

As a matter of fact, the rodeo arena will be used also for registered horse and cattle sales, calf roping competition and something called "clown fighting."

"That's where clowns fight brahman bulls," Billy Bob said matter of factly.

The skeptic wondered if the clowns fought the bulls with knives, swords, hand to hoof, or maybe with machine guns.

Whatever, Billy Bob's Texas is unique, as is Billy Bob, and the venture does represent a sizable gamble.

How much?

"Several million dollars," said he. Sounds risky, said the skeptic.

"I think it's a good investment." "You a gambler?" "I will shoot dice."

"Don't say that," warned the PR lady.

Hint To Vickie's Murder Defense Bared

LIBERTY (AP) — Although the murder trial of Vickie Daniel is still months away, her custody battle in a Liberty courtroom has already provided a glimpse at a likely part of her defense in the slaying of her husband, former Texas House speaker Price Daniel Jr.

Myasthenia Gravis Diagnosis Offered

South Plains and Panhandle residents can receive free diagnosis and treatment of myasthenia gravis April 3 and 4 at High Plains Baptist Hospital in Amarillo.

Dr. Bernard M. Patten, chief of neuromuscular diseases at Baylor College of Medicine in Houston, will conduct the free MG clinic.

Patients may register for an appointment or obtain further information by calling (806) 358-3151, Extension 5440. Physicians may refer patients or individuals may register themselves.

Myasthenia gravis is a neuromuscular disease characterized by fatigue, drooping eyelids, loss of balance, double or blurring vision, a nasal-pitched voice, difficulty chewing and swallowing, loss of facial expression, slurred voice and weakness in the arms and legs.

Doctors and nurses can obtain continuing education credit for attending an MG seminar prior to the free treatment clinic. Patten will discuss diagnosis and treatment at 8:15 p.m. April 2 at Texas Tech University Health Sciences Center in Amarillo.

In addition to his post at Baylor, Patten also is a member of the medical advisory board of the National Myasthenia Gravis Foundation.

Jenne McVicker, secretary of the Northwest Texas MG Foundation chapter which is one of the coordinators of the annual clinic, says Patten will stress the importance of early and correct diagnosis of MG.

Also helping coordinate the clinic is the Xi Rho Mu Chapter of Beta Sigma Phi. The Edie Brooks Memorial Myasthenia Gravis Clinic in Amarillo is named for the child of a sorority member who died of MG.

Co-sponsors of the annual clinic include High Plains Baptist Hospital, Texas Tech University Health Sciences Center, Northwest Texas Hospital and School of Nursing, St. Anthony's Hospital and Southwest Osteopathic Hospital.

ANN LANDERS

Electronic 'Whiz' Wants Proof

Dear Ann Landers: Will you please check with your electronic experts and verify the fact that it IS possible to put a device in eyeglasses so that the wearer can take pictures of what he sees without the knowledge of the people who are being photographed?

Also, I have been able to bug false teeth so that every word spoken is transmitted to a recorder.

This may sound ridiculous to the average person, but I have actually perfected these devices and use them regularly. When I mention this to friends they don't believe me. Please give me the backing I need. I am tired of people hinting that I am a little crazy. — Between Chicago And The Moon

Dear Moon: I made a few phone calls to inquire about the feasibility of your photographic and recording equipment. The people I talked to thought I was a little crazy. I don't know what is bugging you but it's not electronic.

Dear Ann Landers: I am a 14-year-old girl who has a problem I can't talk to anybody about. It's my 13-year-old sister.

Mary has a terrible temper. When she gets mad at me she hits and bites something awful. She is about 55 pounds heavier than I am, and there is no way I can stand up to her. Last week she bruised my face right by my ear, and I had to fix my hair a different way so nobody would notice.

When Mary cools off she always says she is sorry, and we are friends again. I am afraid to tell my parents about the way she beats me up because they would punish her and I would feel guilty. I love my sister and I don't want to get her into trouble.

Can you give me some advice, Ann Landers? — Older But Smaller And Weaker

Dear Older: Mary sounds like a very troubled girl. Her weight is another indication that she is not in control of herself.

If you love your sister you will tell your parents exactly what you told me. I hope they will see that she gets counseling.

Everything is all right" hit home. In my case, I am the one who does the phoning. I can't afford a psychiatrist, so will you please tell me why a grown daughter who is married and supposed to be on her own has to be in such close touch with her mother? Sometimes it's more than seven calls — it's more like 10 or 12.

I am sure I drive her crazy, although she never complains. Please help me sort this one out. — Hung Up In Dallas

Dear Hung: Those phone calls provide you with a sense of security. You need to find out why you are so unsure of yourself. You also need to find out if your mother has unwittingly fostered this dependency.

I urge you to get with a therapist. It need not be a psychiatrist who charges $90 an hour. Call your community health service and explore the alternatives. You will be surprised at how many there are.

Are your parents too strict? Hard to reach? Ann Landers' booklet, "Bugged By Parents? How to Get More Freedom," could help you bridge the generation gap. Send 50 cents with your request and a long, stamped, self-addressed envelope to Ann Landers, P.O. Box 11995, Chicago, Illinois 60611.

At Wit's End...

By ERMA BOMBECK
One of the most-often-asked questions I get from READERS is, "How many children do you REALLY have?"

The answer is six.

I have the three "at home" children. They're the ones who give me varicose veins of the neck from shouting. "Sit up straight! Say thank you! Clean up your plate. Get your feet off the furniture. Don't slam that door! Turn off the lights. Go to bed. Don't talk with food in your mouth. Get off the phone. Use your napkin. Tie your shoes. Wash your hands. Pay attention! I'm only saying this once."

Then there are the three "away from home" children people tell me about, who clear their own dishes away from the table, hold the door open for them, run errands, compliment them on their brownies, help them carry the groceries in from the car and devour vegetables they never touch at home.

The first time I heard of this phenomenon, I refused to believe it. My son had gone to spend the weekend at his friend's house. There was no doubt in my mind they would send him home by 10 in the evening, convinced he was sired by a tornado and raised by werewolves.

Morning came and still there was no frantic phone call. Around noon, a joyous voice came over the phone begging me to let my son stay through dinner.

"Who is this?" I shouted. "Is this some kind of sick joke?"

She said my son was not only a pearl to have around and talk with, but he set a spiritual example for her son by washing out the tub hanging up his towels, making his bed, and at this very moment was cutting the grass.

"Describe this child," I ordered. "He's seven years old, has blond hair, a wonderful smile, and impeccable table manners."

"Put him on the phone," I said suspiciously.

The next sound I heard was one large surly whine. "Whadya want? I suppose you want me to rush home and clean my room or get your glasses for you and be your slave?"

It was him all right.

Only other mothers understand this phenomenon. The child who chews other people's gum out of an ashtray at home, but returns a spoon that has dropped on the floor to the cafeteria cook. The child who throws up eating coconuts at home, but raves about Mrs. Miller's at Scout meeting. The kid who is so sick at home he cannot come to the table for his food, but becomes hysterical laughing at the doctor's riddle in the office.

A teenager visited our home last week and when he met me said, "Didn't I see you on the cover of Glamour magazine last week?"

Why call his mother? It would only depress her.

Goren On Bridge

BY CHARLES H. GOREN AND OMAR SHARIF
1981 by Chicago Tribune

Q.1—Both vulnerable, as South you hold:
♠KJ872 ♠AQ32 ♠1052 ♠6

The bidding has proceeded:
West North East South
1 ♠ 1 ♠ Pass ?

What do you bid now?

A.—There is nothing to be gained and a lot to lose by introducing your spade suit. You have found an adequate fit, so why tell the opponents more about your hand than they need to know. Issue a game invitation to partner by jumping to three hearts. A jump raise of an overall is not forcing.

Q.2—Both vulnerable, as South you hold:
♠85 ♠KQJ6 ♠J10 ♠AJ532

Partner opens the bidding with one heart. What do you respond?

A.—Why temporize with two clubs? Counting high cards and distribution, your hand is worth a full game force of three hearts. Any other bid earns a severe reprimand.

Q.3—East West vulnerable,

as South you hold:
♠976 ♠Q72 ♠AK43 ♠Q76

The bidding has proceeded:
North East South West
1 ♠ Pass 1 ♠ Pass
2 NT Pass ?

A.—You have a very useful hand, but is it enough for slam? The answer can be arrived at by simple arithmetic. Partner is showing 19-20 points and you have 11. That gives you a maximum of 31 in the combined hands, which is at least a queen short of what you would want to even consider contracting with for twelve tricks. Since you have no interest in slam, there is no need for you to bid any more than three no trump.

Q.4—As South, vulnerable, you hold:
♠AK1096 ♠AJ7 ♠A9853

The bidding has proceeded:
South West North East
1 ♠ Pass 2 ♠ Pass ?

What do you bid now?
A.—If you are a direct person, we would not blame you for either leaping straight to six clubs or using the grand slam force in an attempt to get to seven clubs. A more scientific method would be to start off with a jump shift to three diamonds, and then support clubs vigorously. That will convey to partner that you are very short in spades and could put you on the way to bidding a grand slam with confidence, rather than just bashing away.

Q.5—Both vulnerable, as South you hold:

♠10763 ♠KQ10743 ♠6 ♠92

The bidding has proceeded:
North East South
1 ♠ 2 ♠ ?

What do you bid?

A.—With such a good suit, it is tempting to bid two hearts. However, that is a dangerous tactic, since it will force your side to the three-level on hand that is a potential misfit. To make a free bid in a suit ranking higher than the opening bidder's you need a hand of near opening bid strength. Pass. If partner can reopen the bidding, you can then come into the auction with vigor.

Q.6—Neither vulnerable, as South you hold:
♠AQJ64 ♠1092 ♠A42 ♠43

The bidding has proceeded:
North East South West
1 ♠ Pass 1 ♠ Pass
3 ♠ Pass ?

What do you bid now?

A.—Smile, you're in slam country. But don't go ahead and bid it, or do something silly like asking for aces. Your doubleton club must flash a warning signal. For the moment, you can do more than tell partner that you are interested in slam by cue-bidding four diamonds. The next move must come from him.

Series To Explain Toxic Shock Syndrome

By PAUL DONOHUE, M.D.

Dear Dr. Donohue: I have always been fascinated with how diseases like the toxic shock syndrome are brought to light. I am sure another article (I read the column recently with the question about TSS) would be enlightening to your readers. — Mrs. R.R.

Your question is complex. Putting together the pieces of a new illness takes patience, alert observation and thousands of hours of plain drudgery. That is the story of toxic shock syndrome — patience, observation and drudgery. Most of the drudges are unheralded heroes in medicine's front lines. To understand how such puzzles are solved demands an understanding of organisms, bacteria in this instance.

There are thousands of bacteria in the world. Of those thousands, a hundred or so cause illnesses, and then usually only when a person has been weakened for some reason, as from a severe burn. Many potentially troublesome bacteria live in and on our bodies, causing no harm.

For example, the very common bacterium E. coli lives in our intestines, helping to digest food. However, if that bacterium gets into the urinary tract (kidneys on down) it causes an infection. It is in a place it shouldn't be, where tissue cannot cope with this alien. This is but one example.

The second part of the story is that some bacteria make poisons, which we call toxins. The streptococcus causes a sore throat. Some strep germs make a toxin called erythrogenic toxin, and that turns the skin red. Thus, when you have a strep throat from one of these bacteria, the illness is called scarlet fever. It is a strep throat with red skin, the red skin caused by the toxin made by those special strep germs.

Staph is a germ familiar to most. It can be found on the skin, sometimes in the mouth and the vagina. It usually does no harm there. But if it gets into a hair follicle, it produces a boil. Staph, like the strep germ, can make toxins. This is the background setting necessary for understanding toxic shock syndrome.

I will continue this important discussion tomorrow.

Dear Dr. Donohue: Two years ago when I had my second child I quit having my period. Here's my question. I want to know if not having a period will hurt me in any way. I am told not to worry. — M.C.

Not having a period will not hurt you. Not knowing why bothers me. If you nursed or are nursing your baby, that could be a harmless factor involved here.

You can use this as a general guide: Non-nursing mothers begin to menstruate anywhere from six weeks to 24 weeks after delivery. After six months, some reason other than the pregnancy should be investigated.

In nursing women, the time frame can be much longer. Women often do not menstruate while nursing. They resume menstruation anywhere from six weeks to 12 weeks after discontinuing nursing. After that time, it is well to be checked to learn why menstruation has not returned.

I do not mean to say that any woman who has not resumed menstruation in the time frames I give above have something seriously wrong with them. But causes other than pregnancy or nursing should be checked out. You should return to your doctor for a re-evaluation.

Dear Dr. Donohue: I am a 27-year-old woman who has been plagued with migraine headache for the past few years. When I got pregnant recently I asked my doctor how this problem might affect my pregnancy or the child. He said there should be no complications. In fact, he told me that I might even see an end to the attacks because of the pregnancy. Is this on the level? I must admit I haven't had the slightest hint of an attack in the four months since I became pregnant. — Mrs. R.T.

It is not at all unusual for a woman to be rid of migraine attacks during pregnancy. We don't know why this occurs, but it does. This can be a double blessing, since the popular anti-migraine medicine, ergot, is not advisable during a pregnancy.

Headaches — you can beat them! Write to Dr. Donohue, P.O. Box 11210, Chicago, Ill. 60611, for a copy of his booklet, "How to Tame Headaches." Enclose a long, self-addressed, stamped envelope and 50 cents.

Dr. Donohue welcomes reader mail but regrets that, due to the tremendous volume received daily, he is unable to answer individual letters. Readers' questions are incorporated in his column whenever possible.

HINTS FROM HELOISE:

Hot Water Heater Information

LUVS:

It is nice to have friends in places of authority, especially friends who look out for our well being and safety.

The Association of Home Appliance Manufacturers (AHAM) and the Gas Appliance Manufacturers Association (GAMA) inform us that we could be asking for trouble when we leave our homes shut up for any length of time while taking a much-needed vacation.

It's rare but it's been known to happen: If your house is closed up for two weeks or more and the hot water heater is operating, an explosion could occur.

Now, here's how that might happen. In case you didn't know it, the hot water system in our homes normally and regularly produces small amounts of hydrogen gas as a result of the chemical reaction of water with the corrosive protection device inside the water heater. Sounds technical, right?

Well, this gas escapes continually and safely each time you turn hot water faucets on in your home.

Here's the catch, though: If the hot water heater is not hydrogen gas can build up. If it is allowed to build up long enough, the gas can be sufficient to possibly cause an explosion when exposed to a spark from the electric components of dishwashers or clothes washers.

This type of explosion rarely occurs since it takes a considerable period of non-use to accumulate enough gas to create a potential danger. But, to be on the safe side, it's a good idea to use a little precaution, even if the house is to be closed up for only a short time.

When returning to your home after a few days of non-use, before washing that load of vacation laundry or running the dishwasher, turn on all the hot water faucets throughout the house — kitchen and bath. Let them run for about two minutes.

This will eliminate any accumulated hydrogen-gas and, as an added precaution, be sure not to smoke until you've cleared the faucets of gas buildup. — Hugs, Heloise

LETTER OF LAUGHTER

DEAR HELOISE:

You recently requested tips on how to beat those everyday dreaded household chores. Well, I've come up with some that really work for me.

My dearly beloved bought a dishwasher a few years back, but I wasn't crazy about having to bend over to empty and fill it (tummy kept getting in the way), so I solved that problem, and it was a lot easier than losing weight.

I sold the dishwasher and bought 20,000 paper plates, including disposable aluminum pans to cook in. I figure I come out about even economywise, as I rarely have to use the sink, thus saving on dishwashing detergent, scouring powder and soap pads. Besides, the kids think they're on a perpetual picnic.

Now dusting the furniture is a real pain but its solution is equally simple. I just don't do it — and I save on notebook paper! I mean, have you priced paper lately? So, I let the kids do their learnin' doodlin' on the dusty tables, 'rithmetic on the end tables and writin' on the coffee table. In case of a mistake, they just blow the dust around and start again.

Same goes with leaving the windows dirty. That greyness filters out the summer's scorching rays and I dare any chilly blast to even try to get through the cracks in the winter. Therefore, I'm doing my bit for ecology.

Well, these are just a few of my tried and true household hints. Hope you enjoyed them.

In fun! — Rose M. Minner

Thanks for helping us see the lighter side of never-ending jobs. — Heloise

ELIMINATING ODOR

DEAR HELOISE: If there's a smoker in the house, when you wipe out the ashtrays, rub a little lemon oil over them to add a little freshness to the air. — Marjorie PREPARING FOR PLAY — Making plans for the Lubbock and area bridge players, well as across North America, bridge benefit for the American Diabetes Association, scheduled for Thursday, are from left: Irvin Thomas of the Diabetes Association, Marguerite Marquam, Sue Thomas and Christ Hayter, who are planning the event. (Staff Photo by Wayne Wallace)

Bridge Players Plan Benefit

Lubbock and area bridge players will join thousands of other 'addicts' from throughout North America Thursday in competition to benefit the American Diabetes Association.

Marguerite Marquam, charity chairman and director for the benefit game, says the competition will be unique because every player in every game in every city will play the exact same hands.

Master points will be awarded to all winners, in separate sections for master and novice players. Mrs. Marquam said the League's Charity Foundation sponsors research into the causes and treatment of diabetes.

Sue Thomas, president of ACBL unit 197, said the local chapters of the diabetes association in home areas of contest winners will benefit directly from a special grant. A donation of $1,000 will be made in the names of National winners, with $750 for second place winners and $500 for third place winners. A $250 donation will be made in the name of each remaining pair who win in their district.

Entry fee for each player is $3.50. Proceeds will be distributed through the American Contract Bridge League's Charity Foundation.

Chris Hayter is national charity chairman. Dottie Gentry of Levelland will assist Mrs. Hayter with partnerships for advanced players. Ruth Willingham will arrange partnerships for novice players.

All interested players are invited to participate.

Women Demanding Tailored Clothing

By ANN EVANS
Family News Staff

The professional working woman has become more powerful in terms of numbers — and also in dollars. More than 40 million women in the United States hold down full-time jobs and comprise more than 50 percent of the work force. They also spend an average of $525.00 each on business clothes, according to statistics.

Classically styled tailored clothing is now demanded by women. They also want quality-made garments that will ensure many years of wear — just as their male associates have. Because of this, many men's wear manufacturers now are designing tailored clothing to fit the business woman's needs.

These companies now are offering men's wear expertise with the fit and needs of a woman's wardrobe. Until recently, women's tailored clothing has been trendy and was dated after one season. Today's woman wants — and needs — clothing that will last several years in both styling and overall construction.

Quality of construction is the most important aspect of a working woman's wardrobe. Jackets or blazers always should be lined, seams finished, hems invisible. The jacket lapel should have been soft-pressed to hold the lapel roll in place. Overall appearance of the jacket should speak of quality, tailored construction.

Blouses should be silk, crepe de chine, or a smooth, drapable fabric. Again, quality in blouses is important, whether you choose a button-down collar or soft bow blouse.

Skirts and slacks should have finished, pressed seams and fitted waistbands. Look for classic shapes such as A-line skirts or straight leg pants.

Details such as buttons, topstitching or lining are just as important as silhouette, fit and shape, and all these qualities make a tailored, classic suit. Select feminine but practical fabrics that will hold their shape such as wool, linen, linen blends or weaves such as gabardine.

Neutral colors such as white, tan, grey and black are best for suits so they can be mixed and matched with different blouses. Let blouses make your fashion color statements, but stay away from bottle green or hot pink.

The growing trend of men's wear tailoring expertise in women's wear is appreciated by working women, said Windy Rue, executive director and president of the National Association for Female Executives.

"Women today are entering the job force with a career orientation rather than looking for a place to land for a short while," she said.

Rue explained that a woman wearing tailored clothing in a job situation makes a statement about herself and her capabilities.

Adaptation Of Spaghetti Classic Offers Quick, Easy Meal With Good Nutrition

NEW YORK (Special) — Today we present quarter-of-an-hour menus to show how easily pasta meals can be prepared. They're money as well as time savers.

Macaroni Carbonara is a delightful adaptation of the spaghetti classic. While the macaroni cooks, ham and vegetables are chopped and shredded in the food processor. Heating is a matter of minutes in the microwave oven.

To complete the menu, offer mugs of tomato soup as an appetizer. Toss a spinach and mushroom salad to accompany the pasta. Pass a basket of fresh fruit for dessert.

Linguine with Tomato Sauce is another excellent suggestion. The sauce, made in an electric blender, heats microwave-style as the linguine boils. Why not begin this menu with apricot nectar? Have a salad of tossed greens with the entree. Pick up a cake of your choice at the supermarket for dessert.

This is a good time to remind ourselves of the fine nutrition enriched pasta offers. We are urged to increase complex carbohydrates in our diet. Elbow macaroni, spaghetti and egg noodles, made from durum and other high quality hard wheat, are an excellent source. They contain a good distribution of amino acids to supply protein along with niacin, thiamine, riboflavin and iron.

Here are our recipes. Conventional directions are included for those who may not have the time saving appliances. They are quick-to-prepare whichever route you go!

MACARONI CARBONARA

(Makes 4 servings)

- 2 cups elbow macaroni (8 oz.)
- 1 tsp. salt
- 3 qts. boiling water
- 1/2 lb. ham, cut into chunks
- 1/4 cup parsley sprigs
- 2 ribs celery, cut up
- 1 small onion, quartered
- 1 small green pepper
- 2 tbsps. butter or margarine
- 1 egg
- Dash pepper

Gradually add macaroni and salt to rapidly boiling water so that water continues to boil. Cook uncovered, stirring occasionally, until tender. Drain in colander.

While macaroni is cooking, process, until finely chopped, ham and parsley with cutting blade in food processor. Turn ham mixture into 2-quart microwave-proof casserole. Remove cutting blade from food processor. Attach shredding disc. Shred celery, onion and green pepper into food processor; add to casserole with butter. Cover and microwave 3 minutes, stirring after 2 minutes. Lightly beat egg with pepper; mix into ham mixture with macaroni. Microwave 1 minute.

Conventional method: Finely chop ham, parsley, celery, onion and green pepper. Sauté in butter in large skillet 5-10 minutes, stirring often. Mix in macaroni. Beat together egg and pepper. Mix into macaroni until well blended.

LINGUINE WITH TOMATO SAUCE

(Makes about 4 servings)

- 8 oz. linguine or spaghetti
- Salt
- 3 qts. boiling water
- 1 can (16 oz.) stewed tomatoes
- 2 tbsps. salad oil
- 2 tbsps. grated Parmesan cheese
- 1 clove garlic
- 1/4 bay leaf
- Dash pepper

Gradually add linguine and 1 tablespoon salt to rapidly boiling water so that water continues to boil. Cook uncovered, stirring occasionally, until tender. Drain in colander.

About 10 minutes before linguine is cooked, combine tomatoes, oil, cheese, garlic, bay leaf and pepper in electric blender container. Blend until smooth. Pour sauce into microwave-proof bowl. Cover and microwave 5 minutes. Serve sauce over linguine.

Conventional method: Crush tomatoes with a fork; mince garlic. Combine tomatoes, garlic, oil, bay leaf and pepper in a saucepan. Bring to a boil. Simmer, uncovered, 10 minutes. Stir in cheese and serve over linguine.

Fitness Workshop Will Feature Tips On Food, Exercise

A fitness workshop, held in conjunction with National Nutrition Month, will be at 7:30 p.m. Tuesday, March 24 at the Reddy Room of Southwestern Public Service, 1120 Main Street.

The program, which is sponsored by the Lubbock Dietetic Association and Southwestern Public Service, will feature an aerobic dance demonstration, jogging and relaxation pointers, and food tips.

Admission is free and the public is invited. Participants should wear loose clothing and tennis shoes for exercises. Nutritious snacks will be on hand for tasting.

LUXURIOUS LINEN — Choose an oyster white linen suit for a good wardrobe staple for warm weather. Robert Arthur gives the look a flattering shape this spring with a classic blazer, matching skirt and color coordinated geometric print blouse.

Fashion Language Made Easy

They're pretty, they're cool and they're fashionable, you think to yourself as you look at spring fashions.

But just look at those labels and tags — what in the world is "crepon" or "plisse"? You feel silly asking the salesclerk. Besides, she speaks a different language, too.

"Would you like to try this new coral georgette blouse?" she asks you. "It's in ombre shades to blend perfectly. Or how about a new moire shirtdress?"

Yes, fashion has a language of its own. And it's a good idea to know the language — or at least a little of it — before you venture off to shop.

Begin with fabrics and fabric weaves. These are not the ordinary materials you'll come across, but it's nice to recognize them when you see them.

BATIK (ba TEEK) is an Indonesian method of hand-printing textiles by coating with wax the parts not to be dyed.

BATISTE (ba TIS tay) is a fine, soft, sheer fabric of plain weave made of various fibers.

CREPE DE CHINE (krepp deh SHEEN) is a fine lightweight silk or rayon fabric with crepe texture made of highly twisted yarns.

CREPON (krepe ON) is a cotton or silk crepe fabric characterized by a crinkle surface.

DAMASK (da MASK) is a lustrous linen, cotton, silk or rayon fabric made with flat patterns in a satin weave on a plain-woven ground.

GEORGETTE (george ETTE), sometimes referred to as crepe georgette, is a lightweight sheer fabric with a fine textured surface. It has less luster than crepe de chine.

MADRAS (ma DRAS) is India's fine plain woven fabric, usually in cotton, with small plaids in bright colors.

MOIRE (more RAY) is a finishing process that produces a watery appearance on the surface of a fabric, which is why it is also called watered silk.

ORGANZA (or GAN za) is a pure silk fabric that resembles organdy. It is transparent and usually has a permanent crisp, starched finish. Organza ruffles stand up while georgette ruffles droop romantically.

Now for the shapes of spring. Don't mispronounce these or you'll be labeled a beginner.

BLOUSON (blue SAWN) is the French word for blouse. It is a silhouette with a bloused effect at the waist. Whatever you do, don't say BLOUSE on!

CUMMERBUND is a broad slash worn at the waist for accent.

FAGGOTING is decorative openwork stitching.

FLOUNCE is a gathered strip sewn to a garment with the lower edge left free. Flounces are found at the bottom of a skirt or sleeve; ruffles can be attached down the middle so both edges are free.

PEPLUM is a short skirting section attached to the waistline of a blouse, jacket or dress.

And the colors of spring are beautiful. You'll want to be sure of the pronunciation so you can ask for it.

CORAL is a variable color from the sea in a deep pink.

MADDER (MA der) is from the root of a Eurasian herb used for dyeing — it is a moderate to strong red.

OMBRE (OM ber) is a French word for shaded or graduated color ranging from light to dark tones.

'MONKEY LADIES' — Fourteen years ago three members of the Methodist Hospital Auxiliary began the project of making dolls to sell to the hospital gift shop. These ladies are, from left, Ruth Rice, Val Millsbaugh and Lucile Dillon.

'Monkey Ladies' Give Up Trade

The original "Monkey Ladies" of the Methodist Hospital Auxiliary have retired after 14 years of service, leaving behind 12,453 brightly colored stuffed monkeys and more than $34,820 in new patient care equipment for the hospital.

The Auxiliary honored these women at a recent luncheon. The "Monkey Ladies" are Ruth Bickell, Ann Davis, Lucile Dillon, Arva Felty, Tressa Harber, Francis McGee, Carita Massey, Phrona McClendon, Val Millsbaugh, Olympia Moore, Leta Rankin, Ruth Rice, Vyra Weems, Oris Wilkinson, Grace Witherspoon, Marcell Young and Inez Yates.

The monkey program has brought a lot of happiness to multitudes of people, made significant contributions to the hospital, and boosted sales in the gift shop. "George M. Brewer, hospital president, said

"The program is unique to the Methodist Hospital Auxiliary, and it is certainly appropriate that it is one of the aspects of Methodist Hospital," he continued.

Lucile Dillon, chairman of the "Monkey Ladies" at the time of their retirement, and Val Millsbaugh started the program in 1966 when they were selling monkeys made by patients receiving psychiatric care.

"We decided to start our own monkey program, and that first time we made two monkeys," Mrs. Dillon said at the luncheon.

"I stuffed them, Val shaped them, and Ruth Rice made the clothes for that first batch," Mrs. Dillon recalled.

The program grew, and women worked on parts of the monkeys during the week and met on Fridays to put them together, assembly-line fashion. Making the monkeys always was not a smooth job. The women recall one monkey made with the face on backward, and it was not noticed until someone tried to put the clothes on it.

Much of the materials for the monkeys was donated, except the buttons, socks and yarn. Several bales of cotton were donated and stored in Auxiliaries' garages. Waste material from the textile department at Texas Tech University was given for stuffing material.

As much as 100 yards of lace for the clothes would be purchased during sales when lace was priced one cent per yard.

Monkeys made fourteen years ago were different in appearance than they are now. They had somewhat flat faces, but Mrs. Davis designed bigger lips to give them a more natural appearance. Each one appeared to have a "personality" of its own by the time it was finished.

"We kept the price down as much as possible all the years, because we wanted people to buy them for the enjoyment it would bring to the owners. Prices began at $2 in 1966 and rose to $5, but current prices of materials was forcing another price raise. Therefore, we decided to go out of business," Mrs. Dillon explained.

The "Monkey Ladies" said they are willing to teach others to make the monkeys. "If you try one work session, you find it is hard work, but if you go to the sessions two or three times, you are hooked," noted Mrs. McClendon.

Man Survives Long-Halted Heartbeat

TRUTH OR CONSEQUENCES, N.M. (UPI) — An Army officer whose heartbeat stopped for most of 45 minutes in a near drowning at Elephant Butte Lake was listed in critical condition Sunday.

Capt. Ron Butterman, who was scuba diving at the south central New Mexico reservoir, was found floating in the lake Saturday with his mask full of water. He was revived 45 minutes later by rescuers who said they could detect no heartbeat for most of the time.

Butterman was taken by ambulance to William Beaumont Hospital at Fort Bliss, where he was stationed.

The water temperature at the lake, where Butterman was scuba diving with a companion, was a chilly 42 degrees, a factor that may have helped rescuers.

Under normal conditions, about five minutes is the longest a person can be expected to survive the lack of a heartbeat, but officials said resuscitation efforts are continued longer for cold water victims because the temperature tends to protect organs against deterioration.

Residents Of Hawaii Angered By Crimes

HONOLULU (AP) — The acquittals of four teen-agers who confessed to gang raping a Finnish tourist have heightened residents' growing outrage about violent crimes and further tarnished Honolulu's image as a vacation paradise.

The acquittals came just one week after Randall Saito — an admitted necrophiliac, a person with sexual attraction to corpses — was found innocent by reason of insanity in the stabbing death of 29-year-old Sandra Yamashiro. The July 1979 attack occurred in the parking lot of Ala Moana Center, one of Honolulu's most popular shopping areas for residents and tourists.

Newspapers have been swamped with letters from angry citizens, protesters have demonstrated in the streets and tourism officials have set up programs aimed at combating crime.

March started off with the hijacking of a busload of Japanese tourists at Honolulu Airport. The 35 visitors, many of them honeymoon couples, were robbed of more than $11,000 in cash and other valuables as a teen-ager held a gun to the bus driver's head.

Two teen-agers were arrested a few days later, and the stolen loot was returned to the victims, who in turn gave back $17,600 they had been presented by local businesses and individuals. The Hawaii Visitors Bureau is using the money to reimburse other tourists who become victims of crime.

The carefree conditions in this highly touted vacation state took a pounding on Canadian television last fall when "The Fifth Estate," Canada's equivalent of CBS-TV's "60 Minutes," did a segment on Roger Clapham, a beekeeper from British Columbia who was beaten while vacationing on the island of Kauai.

Of the 10 men involved in the beating, only one defendant was charged, and he was found innocent by a jury.

Mounting pressure at home led to a visit from Harry Horne, Canada's consul general in San Francisco. Horne arrived to confer with Gov. George Ariyoshi in early November, just days after David Milne, 50, also of British Columbia, was stabbed and killed while struggling with a burglar in a rented apartment in Waikiki. There have been no arrests.

Last month, Honolulu's strained relations with the Canadian tourist market suffered another blow when the father of murder victim Colin Evans vowed "to do everything in my power" to keep fellow Canadians from visiting Hawaii.

Evans' beaten body was found last month at the base of a waterfall near downtown Honolulu. No arrests have been made.

The gang-rape acquittals sent 1,500 people into the streets to demonstrate their outrage and anger with what they said was the failure of the criminal justice system. Some wore black clothing or black armbands.

One female protester said she would shoot and kill any man intent on rape "and then plead insanity," an apparent reference to Circuit Court Judge Harold Shintaku's decision to acquit Saito, who had admitted killing Miss Yamashiro.

The gang-rape case involved 10 youths who were arrested after a dental student from Finland, then 24, reported she was held down in a beachside tent 35 miles from Honolulu and repeatedly assaulted for hours on July 8, 1979.

Five of the accused were tried as juveniles and committed to the Hawaii Youth Correctional Facility. Charges against one youth were dropped when the woman could not identify him.

In statements entered as evidence during the trial, the four remaining defendants admitted forcing sex with the woman while she was being held down. Some members of the jury later complained they were never presented with the full text of the confessions.

Other jurors defended their vote to acquit by saying they felt the prosecution failed to prove the woman had resisted sufficiently.

After the verdict, the victim summed up her feelings by saying, "Your whole legal system is a big gamble. What's right and what's wrong really have nothing to do with it at all."

INVESTORS' GUIDE
By BILL DOYLE

Q. I retired recently and expected to "roll over" the money in my pension and profit-sharing plan into a special individual retirement account (IRA) so that income tax would be deferred until I start withdrawing that money.

I planned to do this through the bank which is trustee for my former employer's retirement fund. The bank's only suggestion was an IRA account paying 8 percent interest. That wouldn't even keep up with inflation.

Can you direct this eager and naive retiree toward IRAs with higher returns — no-load mutual funds, money market mutual funds, savings certificates etc.?

A. That bank's suggestion, no doubt, involved savings certificates. Almost all banks and savings and loan associations (S&Ls) offer IRA accounts with 8 percent certificates.

A fair number of banks and S&Ls, however, will put IRA accounts into 30-month and/or 182-day certificates. As I write this, 30-month certificates are paying 12 percent and 182-day certificates 13.8 percent. Some banks and S&Ls put IRAs into the higher-yielding certificates only when the customer asks. So, it pays to ask. And, if that one bank sticks to the 8 percent line, it certainly pays to shop around at other banks and S&Ls. For a higher, immediate yield, you should look at money market mutual funds. Just remember that money fund yields are not guaranteed for specific periods of time, as certificate yields are. The yields on money funds can rise or fall, from day to day, spending upon interest rates in the marketplace. Almost all money market funds are "no-load" — meaning you pay no commission charge.

Q. In July, 1977, a stock broker, who was a casual friend, induced me to buy stock at 14 5/8 — $14.62 1/2 a share. He called me at home and at work two or three times a week and also wrote me letters, urging me to buy before the stock took off. He said he had positive inside information that I would make money.

The stock never rose above the price I paid. It went down. Now the company is in bankruptcy. The broker has never called me since the day he sold me that dog. Do I have any recourse against the broker?

A. Your lament is typical of all too many people who bought stock, only to see its price go in the wrong direction. In most cases the answer is you're stuck and can't do a thing. But yours may be an exception — if you saved the letters you say the broker wrote and if those letters state the broker was feeding you "inside information."

Trading on inside information fractures all the rules of full and prompt public disclosure. Lately, the Securities and Exchange Commission has hit a number of brokerage firms and individual brokers with charges of dealing in inside information.

If you turn over written evidence that the broker claimed to give you inside information, the SEC should nail that broker's hide to the wall.

It's more than unlikely that you will recover any of your loss. But you might get some mental satisfaction.

Q. Mexican banks offer very high rates of interest on one, two and three-year deposits. If I put money into a Mexican bank, is it kept in U.S. dollars or is it converted into Mexican pesos? Is there any risk involved?

A. Of course the money would be converted into Mexican currency. If you send money to a Mexican bank, you will have on deposit there as many pesos as your dollars buy.

The inflation rate in Mexico is much worse than in the U.S. So, when you take money out of a Mexican bank, you can expect the pesos you withdraw to buy fewer dollars. Even after interest is added, you could end up a loser.

That's the risk — a mighty big risk.

DOYLE welcomes written questions, but will be able to provide answers only through the column.

LSU, Indiana Enter NCAA Semifinals

By The Associated Press
NEW ORLEANS — Louisiana State University coach Dale Brown said Sunday he would give his team a few hours to savor their 96-85 victory over Wichita State in the NCAA Midwest Regional championship. But he quickly added the task of preparing for Indiana and the Final Four would begin almost immediately.

"Tomorrow morning when we wake up we'll be ready to charge the mountain again," Brown said after the game.

When the buzzer sounded, Brown led his team across the court where he and his players gestured their thanks to the supporters in a crowd of 32,474 ranked high into the upper reaches of the Superdome, some of them 19 stories above the floor.

LSU center Greg Cook said he wasn't waiting until Monday to begin thinking about the next hurdle.

"I'm tired of saying I've been there," Cook said, referring to the fact that LSU has bowed out twice before reaching a regional championship.

Losing coach Gene Smithson was philosophical about the defeat.

"We've been to the dance and we'll be back," he said.

Smithson said his team let the game get away from them midway through the first half, when LSU went on a 14-0 scoring tear.

"We didn't get our share of the easy buckets, and LSU got theirs," he said.

LSU's star forward Rudy Macklin, who had 21 points and 10 rebounds for the afternoon, said he got some pregame advice from Darrell Griffith, the star at Louisville last year when they whipped LSU in the Midwest Regional championship game.

Griffith has gone on to the National Basketball Association, but he and Macklin continue a friendship that began when they played against each other in the eighth grade in Louisville, Ky.

"I told him I couldn't get any sleep thinking about everything," Macklin said. "He told me to get out of the room and do something crazy. He said to play like we were going one-on-one."

Macklin said he did do something crazy, but he wouldn't say what it was.

However, once the game began Sunday, he was all business, going against Wichita State's powerful front line.

The victory over Wichita State sends LSU to the Final Four next week to face Indiana, a 78-46 victor over St. Joseph.

Wichita State held a narrow lead through early stages and battled LSU on even terms in the first six minutes of the game.

But Macklin hit a 12-foot jumper to start the 14-0 scoring spree and capped it with a two-point stuff at 10 minutes into the contest. He had six points in the binge, while Cook, who finished with 19 points, had four.

Macklin suffered a cut finger on his right hand with 10:13 left in the game and an LSU spokesman said the injury will require stitches.

LSU substituted liberally throughout the contest, playing 10 men in the first half and emptying the bench in the final three minutes.

Wichita State forward Antoine Carr led all scorers with 22 points, 14 of them in the second half. Teammate Cliff Livingston had 17 points.

LSU advances to the Final Four with a 31-3 record. Wichita State's year ends with a 26-7 slate.

Cardinals Drown Mustang Hopes

AUSTIN (AP) — The Cinderella, or Shallowater, Mustangs, who lived by the physical, inside game all season long, ran into a team they couldn't bully around Saturday in the finals of the Class 2A state basketball tournament and fell to the big Cardinals of Gladewater Sabine 62-43.

D SPORTS

Lubbock Avalanche-Journal
 Monday, March 23, 1981

It was Sabine's 39th consecutive victory and second straight state championship.

Robert Sanders led Shallowater with 20 points and Willie Johnson added 10 as the Mustangs ended the season with a 25-7 record.

With 1:27 to go it looked like San Antonio Marshall's miracle workers, who turned a 12-point second half deficit into a five-point lead, were ready to steal the Class 5A schoolboy basketball title from Port Arthur Lincoln Bumblebees.

Then the biggest Bee took over. "I felt confident we could still beat them," said Lincoln Coach James Gamble. "We wanted to get it inside to Leonard (Allen) and let him put it up."

They got it inside and Allen, a 6-8 senior, poured in 10 points in the final 55 seconds to give Lincoln, 36-3, the 92-84 win, and its first-ever state basketball title Saturday night.

Three defending state champs joined Lincoln as tournament winners. Snook beat Henrietta Midway 41-33 in Class A, Gladewater Sabine beat Shallowater 62-43 in Class 2A, and Beaumont Hebert squeezed by Canyon 59-57 in Class 4A.

Altair Rice took the Class 3A title with a 56-52 win over Powderly North Lamar.

Marshall, 31-8, took an improbable route to the finals, upsetting powerful Dallas Roosevelt 74-73 in the semifinals. The Rams, led by senior twins Vince and Vern Vittatoe, kept the game against Lincoln close on the strength of Vern's 18 first-half points, including six of eight from the field.

Lincoln's running game shifted into overdrive in the third period and the Bees raced to a 60-48 lead with 4:40 to play.

The fourth quarter opened with Marshall picking up several steals off its sniping defense. With 6:04 to go, Marshall tied it at 68 when Reggie Simmons hit a layup after a George Rodriguez blocked shot. The Rams kept going and, led by the Vittatoes, took a 84-79 with 1:27 to play.

Then Allen went to work, tapping in a missed free throw, hitting a soft turnaround jumper and adding six straight free throws for his 10 points in the final 55 seconds. He finished with 26 points and 15 rebounds.

On the defensive end of the court he picked up a blocked shot and an interception in the last 12 seconds to seal the state title.

"If I could bottle the feeling and sell it I'd be a rich man," Gimble said after the game.

Marshall Coach Bob Murphy split the final quarter into two parts. "The thing we did right was suck up our guts and play hard defense," he said about the strong comeback.

"What we did wrong was take a couple of bad shots," he said of the last-minute collapse.

Vern Vittatoe, a 6-3 senior, finished with 26 points and 10 rebounds. Brother Vince, a 6-4 senior, added 18.

Tracey Smith came off the Lincoln bench to give the Bees 14 points.

Hebert had the hardest time of the three defending champs. The quick Panthers bolted a 51-31 lead over Canyon, but looked helpless as the Eagles took over in the last 9½ minutes.

Andre Bouttee and Donald Mickens, Hebert's top scorers, missed crucial free throws, allowing Canyon to pull within one point at 58-57 with 33 seconds to go. The Eagles had a chance to win but 6-9 Butch Bearden was called for walking with 11 seconds remaining.

Bearden fouled Mickens, who missed his first free throw but made his second. Canyon's long in-bounds pass with four seconds to play was stolen by Mickens.

Bouttee scored 22 points and Mickens 18, but they hit only 10 of 18 free throws.

David Harbin scored 16 points, Bearden 14 and Ken Walling 12 for Canyon.

Snook's win gave it its fourth consecutive championship, tying a record set by Bowie in the early 1960s. It was the Blue-jays seventh title, tying a record held by Buna, which won its last crown in 1963.

Clint Thomas led Snook with 20 points and 10 rebounds in the 41-33 win over Midway.

Altair Rice used Larry Haynes' 19 points to hold off Powderly North Lamar 56-52 for the 3A crown, its first ever. The losers were led by Merritt Williams, who posted 18 points.

Mother Nature Postpones Golf Tourney

PONTE VEDRA BEACH, Fla. (AP) — Officials faced a severe weather forecast and uncertain chances today in an attempt to get in the storm-delayed final round of golf's richest event, the $440,000 Tournament Players Championship.

"I don't want to mislead you," Clyde Mangum, deputy commissioner of the PGA Tour, said Sunday when he announced the one-day delay in the windup of the annual championship of golf's touring pros.

"The forecast (for today) is not good. We will have the continued chance of rain. Winds will be at least as severe as they were Thursday and Friday, up to 30 miles per hour. And it will be cold."

So the possibility existed, Mangum said, that the final round will not be played until Tuesday.

But officials, hoping for a break in the weather, went ahead with plans to complete the 72-hole tournament today. Tee times were announced as 8-9:30 a.m. from both the first and 10th tees at the storm-lashed Sawgrass links. The leaders were expected to finish about 2 p.m.

CBS was scheduled to provide national television coverage on a tape-delayed basis 3:30-4:30 p.m.

Barry Jaeckel, who has had mixed success in a seven-year PGA Tour career, held a three-shot lead after three rounds.

Jaeckel, winner of the 1978 Tallahassee Open but a struggling member of the Monday morning qualifying ranks most of his career, had a 211 total, 5 shots under par, for 54 holes.

Tied for second in the event that offers a $72,000 first prize were former PGA champ John Mahaffey, Canadian Dan Halldorson and Jim Simons. They were at 214. Curtis Strange, at 215, was the only other man under par.

Defending champion Lee Trevino and Bruce Lietzke, a two-time winner this season, were in the group at par 216 and Jack Nicklaus was another shot back at 217.

Sunday's play was washed out by a series of thunderstorms that began lashing Florida's northeast coast with high winds and heavy rains in the early morning hours.

"Radar showed a solid mass of very severe thunderstorms backed up as far west as Mobile, Ala.," Mangum said. "There were no breaks in it, and it was all heading our way. A twister touched down 60 miles west. The whole system was coming right at us. We had no choice but to cancel."

Jaeckel, son of veteran character actor Richard Jaeckel, has won only once in seven years on the PGA Tour, and, for the past three seasons, has done little more than make expenses.

Postponement of Sunday's play in the annual championship of golf's touring pros was announced about 10:30 a.m. by Clyde Mangum, the deputy commissioner for the tour.

No one had started play. The scheduled early morning start of play was delayed by a series of thunderstorms and the approach of another, stronger front near midday prompted officials to cancel play for the day.

Mrs. Young Wins LPGA Event

LAS VEGAS, Nev. (AP) — Donna Caponi-Young fired a four-under-par 68 Sunday to capture the $200,000 Desert Inn Pro-Am women's golf tournament for the second consecutive year.

Mrs. Young was 10 strokes off the pace halfway through the 72-hole Ladies Professional Golf Association event over the 6,237-yard, par 36-36 — 72 Desert Inn County Club course, but came back on rounds of 69 Saturday and her 68 Sunday.

Mrs. Young, who earned $30,000, called the comeback "my best ever in terms of distance." She was 12 strokes back early in the third round before beginning her rally and finished with a total score of 286.

Mrs. Young was two shots off the pace of Nancy Lopez-Melton entering the final round. Mrs. Lopez-Melton came in with a 4-over-par 76 and finished in a tie for fourth place at 292.

Pat Bradley came in with a final-round 71 and finished second at 289. She earned $19,600. Next at 290 was Jane Blalock, who carded a 72 Sunday. She collected $14,000.

Mrs. Lopez-Melton tied for fourth with Cathy Reynolds and Judy Rankin.

All earned $8,333. Reynolds finished with a 73 and Rankin closed with a 72.

Six players finished at 293 — Beth Daniel, who had a 73 Sunday; Jo Ann Washam, who had a 75; Shelley Hamlin, who had a 72; Carolyn Hill, who had a 72; Kathy Postlewait, who had a 73, and Vicki Tabor, who had a 73.

Mrs. Lopez-Melton was going for her second straight LPGA victory. She had won the Arizona Copper Classic in Tucson two weeks ago, but sat out last week's Sun City Classic.

An eagle on the 15th hole put Mrs. Young into the lead for good. Prior to that, she was involved in a four-way battle for the lead along with Mrs. Lopez-Melton, Miss Blalock and Miss Bradley.

Mrs. Lopez-Melton, 24, had trouble off the tee Sunday. One of her misplaced drives put her under some olive trees on the ninth hole and led to an out-of-bounds shot when she pushed a seven-iron. She finished with a double-bogey six on that hole.

Another double bogey on the 13th hole just about put her out of contention. Mrs. Young ended all suspense with her eagle three on No. 15. She knocked in an 80-foot putt from off the green for her eagle.

Tulsa's Quick Success Surprises Coach

By The Associated Press
Nolan Richardson, who won the 1980 junior college basketball crown at Western Texas College in Snyder, brought four of his stars with him to Tulsa and now has his sights set on the 1981 National Invitation Tournament title.

Tulsa, 24-7, takes on West Virginia, 23-8, in the opening semifinal of the 44th annual NIT tonight. In the second game, Syracuse, 21-22, will face Purdue, 20-10. The winners will meet for the title Wednesday night.

Richardson captured a 37-0 record in winning the JUCO crown last year, then brought center Greg Stewart, guards Paul Pressey and Phil Spradling and forward David Brown with him. The result was an instant turnaround, from 8-19 a year ago to the best record in the school's history.

"We really had three teams," said Richardson. "We had the players who had been at Tulsa previously, the players who came over with me from Western Texas and the players I was able to recruit after getting the Tulsa job."

That the Golden Hurricane came on as strong as it did surprised even Richardson.

"I knew that we had some talented players but I thought it might take awhile to get everything together," the 38-year-old coach reflected. "The key came when we beat Louisville, the defending national champs."

"I've always thought that winning is a habit and losing is a habit. I felt that if I could get the four guys I brought with me to instill that winning spirit, it would catch on. When we beat Louisville (68-60 on Dec. 4 in the third game of the season) it brought everything together."

The 6-9 Stewart leads Tulsa with 15.2 points and 6.6 rebounds per game. Pressey, Brown, Spradling and Mike Anderson also have scoring averages in double figures.

"We're not married to any system," said Richardson, when asked about his team's style of play. "We've played slow and got beat, we've played fast and got beat. We'll try to speed it up, press, double-team, do whatever we can to take the other team out of its game."

Reaching the NIT's Final Four is a big boost for the Tulsa program, said senior forward Bob Stevenson.

"This is the second layer of icing on the cake for me," said Stevenson. "The first layer was doing so well in the Valley (tied for second in the Missouri Valley Conference) and getting into the tournament to start with. I hope we finished it off with some whipped cream and a cherry."

Standing in Tulsa's immediate path is West Virginia, which is coached by Gale Catlett, formerly of Cincinnati.

"We have a young basketball team, with nine freshmen or sophomores," said Catlett. "At times we've been outstanding, at other times we've been horrible. We try to fast break as much as we can, but sometimes we have a tendency to throw the ball up in the stands."

"If we play with the same kind of consistency we've had the last two weeks, we could go all the way."

Guard Greg Jones is West Virginia's leading scorer with a 15.1 average, but one of the keys to the Mountaineers' success is rebounding. They have outrebounded their opponents in 25 of their 31 games.

Syracuse finished its regular season with a 15-11 record and coach Jim Boeheim says, "Two weeks ago we would have been happy to be in any tournament. We were really down. But this is a different team now. Our team has really come together."

In that time the Orangemen won the Big East Conference tournament, then won three NIT games to earn a trip to New York. All six victories came on Syracuse's home court, the Carrier Dome.

"We were fortunate to play two tournaments at home. That was a tremendous advantage," conceded Boeheim, whose team is led by 7-foot senior center Dan Schayes and guard Erich Santifer. "We've played some good basketball on the road, although we haven't won much (a 4-8 road record). But we're such a different team now, we feel we can play well any place we play. And besides, we're not going far away."

That fact was also noted by Purdue coach Gene Keady, who took over the Boilermakers after Lee Rose left last summer after taking Purdue to the NCAA Final Four.

"No matter what Jim says, Syracuse is going to have the home-court advantage because they're going to have a lot of their fans here," said Keady.

"We're kinda psyched out after watching that 16-for-16 second half," he added, referring to Syracuse's third-round NIT game against Michigan, when the Orangemen hit their first 16 shots from the field in the second half en route to a 91-76 victory. "They were shooting so well. That concerns me. We'll have to get hitched up to play with a team like that."

Cavs Relieve Coach's Anxiety

ATLANTA (AP) — Coach Terry Holland had some doubts that his fifth-ranked Virginia Cavaliers would reach the NCAA's Final Four after a devastating loss to Maryland in the Atlantic Coast Conference basketball tournament.

But three consecutive come-from-behind second-half rallies in the East Regional, including Saturday's 74-60 trouncing of No. 16 Brigham Young have projected the Ralph Sampson-led Cavaliers to a meeting with ACC rival North Carolina Saturday in Philadelphia in one of two semifinal round games for the national title.

"Frankly, I was very concerned that the Maryland game might ruin us," Holland said Saturday after Virginia overcame a 31-28 halftime deficit to overpower BYU. "But we've got class players, and they made a great comeback. They've sacrificed to get this far, but the next two games are what really count."

Virginia, 28-3, the ACC regular season champion, received an 82-65 drubbing at the hands of Maryland in the league tournament but came back to edge Villanova 54-50 in the first round of the East Regional, then downed Tennessee 62-48 before the triumph over BYU, 25-7.

The meeting with sixth-ranked North Carolina should be a classic between the two ACC powers despite Virginia taking both regular season meetings, a 63-57 decision at home and an 80-79 overtime victory at Chapel Hill.

Would Holland had preferred meeting another team in the semifinal round?

"What I would have preferred," he said, "would be to play Carolina in the finals. At least we won't have to do much scouting. They know all about us, and we know all about them."

The other problem for Holland and his Cavaliers, is beating a Dean Smith club three times in one season, a feat only accomplished by the North Carolina State Wolfpack that featured David Thompson during the 1973-74 season.

In addition, it will be Virginia's first time in the Final Four and only their second NCAA appearance, having been knocked out in the first round in 1976.

Meanwhile, Smith's North Carolina squad, which whipped Kansas State 82-68 Saturday to capture the West region, has appeared in six NCAA tournaments and will be making its third appearance in the Final Four in 15 years, finishing second twice.

The Tar Heels, under Frank McGuire, captured the national title in 1957.

Virginia's victory Saturday was triggered by a controversial technical foul early in the second half that resulted in a five-point play.

Just four minutes into the second-half the 7-foot-4 All-American Sampson grabbed a missed shot and stuffed it into the basket, giving Virginia a 36-35 lead.

The play brought a protest from BYU's All-American Danny Ainge, who was hit with a technical foul, which Jeff Lamp converted and seconds later Othello Wilson hit on a 14-foot jumper to give the Cavaliers a 39-35 lead, an advantage they never lost.

"I thought Sampson had grabbed the rim with his other hand, then hung on the rim after he made the shot," said Ainge. "I told the ref two or three times. He thought that was too much, and he called a technical. I guess I was complaining too much."

Sampson, who scored 14 of his game-high 22 points after intermission, said of the play: "I didn't recall holding the rim."

"As far as the technical goes, I think it had to be a turning point because we had the lead before the play. They got five points out of it in one trip down court," said BYU Coach Frank Arnold.

"But I think the deserving team won this regional. Sampson is a great player, but they have so many other good players and that is why they are a great team. With Lamp and Raker and the rest, they are just a very difficult team to beat," he said. "They are a class act also."

Lamp, who added 18 points, the same number he had against Notre Dame, was selected as most valuable player for the tournament, while Lee Raker, along with Sampson, Ainge and Orlando Woolridge of Notre Dame, were selected to the tournament team.

Tigers, Hoosiers Win, Easily Advance To NCAA Final Four

into their fifth Final Four appearance.

Thomas had 12 assists and eight points to spearhead an Indiana offense that has grown rich with efficiency.

"At the beginning of the year, Isaiah was a bit reluctant to say 'This is the way we're going to do it.' But that reluctance has dissipated over the season," said Indiana coach Bobby Knight, who will try for his second NCAA title as a coach in the past five years next weekend in Philadelphia.

"Isiah has done a great job taking over," Knight said. "If you're going to be good, this (leadership) has to come from somebody on the floor. By doing this, Isiah not only made the team better, but it made him a better player, too."

Turner, who fouled out with 11:12 to play and Tolbert each scored 14 points as Indiana completely dominated the inside, holding a 33-21 rebounding edge.

And Turner, a 6-10 junior, and Tolbert, a 6-9 senior, were the men who stymied St. Joseph's offense that the Hawks came away with a 33 percent field goal mark for the game.

At the same time, Turner hit 7 of 8 shots and Tolbert 6 of 8 to contribute to Indiana's 68.6 field goal percentage.

"Tolbert's play has been excellent," Knight said. "There's no doubt in my mind that he was the most valuable player in the Big Ten this year. His play from the beginning of the conference season was instrumental in us winning the championship."

Knight won his only other NCAA title in 1976, beating Michigan 86-68. His Hoosiers will face the LSU Tigers Saturday in one semifinal game.

The loss ended the Cinderella story of the Hawks, whose stunning 49-48 upset of top-ranked DePaul in the subregionals got them to Bloomington.

"We were hoping at the outset to spread their defense," said Hawks coach Jim Lynam, who was a player for St. Joe's when the team made its only Final Four appearance in 1961. "But Indiana's such a terrific defensive team, baskets are hard to come by."

Playing Knight's traditional man-to-man defense, the Hoosiers never allowed St. Joseph's to execute its plan. On the Hawks' first possession, they came out in a four-corners offense, hoping to kill time and keep the game close. But the Indiana defenders so beleaguered St. Joe's that the Hawks found themselves down by 16 points with the game less than 17 minutes old.

"When you fall behind very early like we did, any kind of a spread offense becomes that much less effective," Lynam said. "Teams have defended (the four-corners) well against us, but not as well as Indiana."

Kush Does Not Plan To Change Tough Style

PHOENIX, Ariz. (AP) — Even an hour before he was acquitted on a charge of punching one of his ex-players, former Arizona State University football coach Frank Kush had already reached a verdict himself on "a personal decision."

Kush said whatever transpires, he won't change his hard-nose style now that he has switched to the professional coaching ranks.

"I've never been embarrassed by the way I coached," Kush told The Associated Press in an interview Friday. "I have no reason to change. I have no regrets about what I've done."

"I know there's going to be people watching my every move now. Every time I go near a player, I'm going to be under a magnifying glass. But I'm not concerned about that. It's the least of my worries. If I was concerned about it, I wouldn't have taken the job."

Kush, hired to coach the Hamilton Tiger-Cats of the Canadian Football League last December, is currently embroiled in a $2.2 million civil suit filed by former Arizona State punter Kevin Rutledge.

The 21-year-old Rutledge, who now attends the University of Nevada-Las Vegas, claims Kush split his lower lip with a "knuckle-punch" following a 27-yard punt in the Sun Devils' 41-7 loss to Washington Oct. 28, 1978, in Seattle.

He also claims Kush and ex-Arizona State assistant coach Bill Maskill harassed him into quitting the team in 1979 and forfeiting his scholarship.

Kush denied both charges and Maskill, now an assistant coach at the University of Louisville, disputed the harassment claim via a deposition read to the Maricopa County Superior Court earlier this month.

Friday, Kush was vindicated by a 5-3 jury verdict on the battery charge and won 7-1 on Rutledge's charge that Kush misrepresented a scholarship situation before the punter enrolled at Arizona State in August 1977.

"This thing is not going to follow me. It won't be a monkey on my back," said Kush. "I could care less what people think. They either believe you or they don't."

The trial began Jan. 12 with its first phase taking seven weeks to conclude. The second phase — dealing with the harassment issue, a breach of the scholarship contract and negligent supervision by the university over Kush — is scheduled to begin Wednesday.

"Deliberations, deliberations," Kush said as he paced the hallway outside Judge Thomas C. Kleinschmidt's chambers Friday before the verdicts were passed down. "Some people talk about hoping. But I have to be realistic about it. What will be, will be."

He pulled a quarter out of his pocket and said "if I flip this coin, it'll still be the same decision they (the jury) are making in there."

"This whole thing is driving me up a tree," added Kush. "It's a distraction. I can't concentrate on my work. It's like climbing up a ladder and finding one of the rungs missing. Sooner or later, I might trip on one of them."

Kush buried his right hand in the pocket of his trousers and stared into a styrofoam cup half-full of tea.

"I have a sensitive stomach over this," he said. "I thought if there was one thing I've learned over a period of years is to deal with adversity. I really don't get excited to any degree over the ups and downs of life.

"But in football, I have control. I hate having no control over this."

Kush's wife, Fran, said her 51-year-old husband spent his non-courtroom hours jogging because "it keeps him from pacing."

"It's my salvation," Kush said with a shrug. "If it hadn't been that way, I would have hung myself by now."

During his 22-year head coaching tenure at Arizona State — where he compiled a 176-54-1 record — Kush said he ran 10-15 miles after every Sun Devil win. And 15-20 after every loss.

"I'm a glutton for punishment," he said. "I believe in discipline. That's what's really on trial here."

At that point, Rutledge came through the archway of a door Kush was leaning against. The two exchanged glances, then turned their heads in opposite directions as Rutledge proceeded down the hall.

Kush had earlier remarked that when Rutledge demonstrated his punting form to the jury last month "he still made the same fundamental mistake he made when he played for me. He doesn't cross his (right) leg over on the follow-through."

Matadors Host Palo Duro; Mustangs Visit Caprock

Estacado will stay at home while Coronado will go on the road in city baseball action today.

The Matadors will host Palo Duro at 4 p.m. on the Estacado Diamond and the Mustangs will travel to Amarillo to take on Caprock in another 4 p.m. starter.

Estacado, now 7-3, was a consolation finalist in last weekend's Snyder Invitational Tournament. The Mats opened the tourney with a 9-5 loss to Andrews Friday, but rebounded to whip Brownfield 17-6 to earn a berth in the consolation finals against Levelland.

The Matadors took a 3-1 lead into the fifth inning, but Levelland exploded for three runs in that frame and added two more in the sixth for the win. The losing pitcher was Joe Benavidez, whose record drops to 3-2. His fielders committed four costly errors.

Coronado, 7-1, has not played in over a week because its Saturday double-header against Midland Lee was blown out. The last time the Mustangs played was Saturday, March 14, when they swept a double-header from Permian 8-7 and 13-2 at home.

Tuesday, Estacado goes on the road against Hobbs and Coronado at home against Snyder.

SlUGGER CUTS RECORD
CHICAGO (AP) — For years he sang in the sanctuary of locker rooms after a big win on the diamond. Now Mr. Cub is going to sing on the record.

Ernie Banks, the sunny man who clouted 512 home runs in a 19-year-career for the Chicago Cubs that led to baseball's Hall of Fame, has cut a 45 rpm single entitled "Teamwork." Banks' baritone is backed by the Chicago Bear and Chicago Bull cheerleaders and a horn section, guitar, keyboards and drums.

The disc will be released on the Wana Records label April 7.

NBA ROUNDUP

Sixers Regain NBA Atlantic Lead

By The Associated Press
PHILADELPHIA — Julius Erving dropped in 24 points for the Philadelphia 76ers regained first place in the Atlantic Division of the National Basketball Association with a 126-94 win over the Boston Celtics Sunday.

Erving scored eight of his 24 points in the last quarter and Bobby Jones 11 of his 15 as the 76ers drew away after Boston pulled to within nine points, 88-79, in the first two minutes of the fourth period.

The Celtics, whose Larry Bird scored 19 points, are now in second place in the division. It was Boston's ninth straight loss at the Spectrum.

The 76ers never trailed in the game after scoring the first five points. The closest Boston came in the first quarter, 12-11, when Nate Archibald scored one out of two free throws from the foul line.

Pacers 107, Cavaliers 101
INDIANAPOLIS — Billy Knight scored 16 of his game-high 33 points in the third quarter Sunday, sparking the Indiana Pacers to a come-from-behind NBA victory over the Cleveland Cavaliers.

Indiana, down by as many as 10 points in the first quarter, opened a 10-point lead early in the second half but fell behind again before Knight put the Pacers ahead for good.

Spurs 107, Clippers 99
SAN ANTONIO — George Gervin scored 29 points to lead San Antonio to a 107-99 win over San Diego Sunday that virtually killed the Clippers' hopes of gaining the NBA playoffs.

San Antonio never trailed after Gervin canned a 13-foot jump shot with 9:32 left in the first quarter, but the Spurs had to shut down three strong rallies by the Clippers to save the win.

With Gervin opening with 10 points, San Antonio spurred to a 29-20 first-period lead.

Bucks 125, Nets 116
PISCATAWAY, N.J. — Sidney Moncrief poured in 23 points to lead the Milwaukee Bucks to an easy NBA victory over the New Jersey Nets Sunday.

The Bucks never trailed in the game. Bob McAdoo scored eight of the Nets' final 12 points, but the surge — where the Nets outscored the Bucks 12-6 — didn't make a difference in the lopsided contest.

Bulls 109, Pistons 103
PONTIAC, Mich. — David Greenwood scored 23 points to lead the Chicago Bulls to an NBA victory over the Detroit Pistons Sunday afternoon.

The Bulls, who won their fifth straight game and 10th of their last 12, opened the game as though they would have an easy time with the lowly Pistons. Greenwood hit 12 points as Chicago took a 33-26 first-quarter lead. The Bulls maintained that lead throughout the second quarter, leading 56-48 at the half.

But Detroit came out in the third quarter to take a 75-72 lead behind Terry Tyler and Kent Benson. Then Chicago's Reggie Theus hit two free throws with no time remaining on the clock in the third quarter to give the Bulls an 80-79 lead going into the final period.

Lakers 126, Warriors 118
OAKLAND — Earvin Johnson drove for a basket with one second remaining to give the Los Angeles Lakers, who battled from 17 points behind, an NBA victory over the Golden State Warriors Sunday.

Johnson finished with 24 points, including 12 in the final quarter, as the Lakers won for the ninth time in 13 games since his return from a leg injury. Forward Jamaal Wilkes scored 10 points for the Lakers in the last quarter.

Los Angeles trailed 93-76 after being outscored 28-12 in the first eight minutes of the third quarter, but the Lakers were behind by only 99-89 entering the last period.

Rockets 114, Kings 108
KANSAS CITY, Mo. — Center Moses Malone scored a game-high 32 points and pulled down 17 rebounds to power the Houston Rockets to an NBA victory over the Kansas City Kings Sunday.

Malone, the league's leading rebounder and second leading scorer, ripped off 11 straight points late in the second quarter and early in the third quarter to lead the Rockets from a 10-point second-quarter deficit.

A basket by Malone with 10:40 left in the third quarter put the Rockets ahead to stay. The Rockets built a 10-point lead, 107-97, on a pair of free throws by Malone with 1:20 left in the game. A Kings rally in the final 1:11 fell short.

Nuggets 113, Jazz 108
DENVER — David Thompson scored 13 points in the third quarter Sunday afternoon as the Denver Nuggets rallied from a four-point deficit to outlast Utah an NBA game involving two teams without a berth in post-season action.

Thompson, the game's leading scorer with 28 points, put on a brilliant display, including a sensational slam-dunk off a fast break that gave Denver a five-point lead, 84-79, late in the third quarter and brought the crowd to its feet cheering. The Nuggets quickly built the lead to 10 points in the final stanza and never relinquished the edge.

Bullets 121, Hawks 101
LANDOVER, Md. — Kevin Grevey scored 14 of his game-high 24 points in the third quarter Sunday to pace the Washington Bullets to a rout of the Atlanta Hawks in NBA action.

The victory snapped a five-game losing streak for the Bullets, who were eliminated from the playoffs Friday night for the first time in 13 years.

The loss was the sixth in the last eight games for the Hawks, who again played without their injured regular forwards, John Drew and Dan Roundfield.

Mrs. Evert-Lloyd Comes Back Strong

BOSTON (AP) — Top-seeded Chris Evert-Lloyd, coming off a four-month layoff, came back from deficits in both sets Sunday to score a 6-4, 6-4 victory over Mima Jausovec and win the title in the $150,000 Avon Women's Tennis Tournament.

Evert-Lloyd, who hadn't played in a tournament since Nov. 23 and hadn't won one since Oct. 26, defeated the unseeded Yugoslav for the 12th time in their 12 meetings.

Jausovec, suffering from strep throat, grabbed a 4-2 lead in the first set when she broke Evert-Lloyd on each of her first three services.

Jausovec also jumped out to a 4-0 advantage in the second set, but was broken on her next three services. Evert-Lloyd sealed the victory by blanking her in the final game.

"I took three months off last year and I feel I played a lot better this time that I did in my first tournament back last year," a happy Lloyd said after capturing the $30,000 first prize and her first Boston championship in five tries.

'Dynamite' Dokes Decisions Cobb

LAS VEGAS, Nev. (AP) — Heavyweight Michael "Dynamite" Dokes scored a majority decision over Randy "Tex" Cobb in a nationally televised 10-round fight Sunday.

Dokes, the World Boxing Council's No. 3-ranked contender, was in charge through the first five rounds. But Cobb rallied in the sixth, seventh and eighth rounds and kept Dokes backpedaling for most of those three rounds.

Cobb, ranked ninth by the WBC, won only one round — the seventh — on The Associated Press scorecard, but fared well the second half of the fight at Caesar's Palace's Sports Pavilion. The bout was a preliminary to the Salvador Sanchez-Roberto Castanon WBC featherweight title fight.

Rutherford Wins Jimmy Bryan 150

PHOENIX, Ariz. (AP) — Some of the people on his Chaparral team spent a sleepless night of preparation, but Johnny Rutherford kept them awake with a solid victory Sunday in the $160,000 Kraco Jimmy Bryan 150 at Phoenix International Raceway.

Rutherford, who crashed spectacularly in the season finale here last November, didn't let the memory of that scary moment deter him from racing home more than a lap ahead of second-place Bobby Unser.

Team owner Jim Hall, the man who designed and built the "Yellow Submarine," the car in which Rutherford won last year's Indianapolis 500 and the national championship, didn't like the way the car ran when Rutherford qualified third on Saturday.

So, Hall, team engine-builder Mike Fanning and mechanic John Tuonakis flew a private jet back to their shop in Midland, Texas, and worked through the night on engine parts.

"There's an object lesson there," Rutherford said with a smile. "Always have an owner with a private plane."

Sanchez Shuns Castanon, Wants Gomez

LAS VEGAS, Nev. (AP) — World Boxing Council featherweight champion Salvador Sanchez, after an easy win over No. 1 challenger Roberto Castanon Sunday, said he's looking for a bout against the WBC's bantamweight champ.

"I hope that the next defense will be against Wilfredo Gomez," Sanchez said after he stopped Castanon at 1:09 of the 10th round of a nationally televised fight. "I want to prove I can beat him."

The fight may be coming soon. WBC President Jose Sulaiman said he had scheduled a meeting Sunday night to try to set up the bout.

Sanchez said the lackluster bout with Castanon was "not a very difficult fight. He didn't confuse me at all."

And Castanon, who appeared to lose his steam by the fifth round, admitted he was having difficulties.

"I don't take anything from Sanchez," he said, "but by the third or fourth round, I had nothing."

Midland Schedules Softball Tourney

MIDLAND (Special) — The third annual MSA May Class slowpitch softball tournament will be held May 1-2 at Hogan Park here.

The tourney is being sponsored by Stadium Sports Center. There will be two men's divisions and one women's division. The deadline for entering is Apr. 28. Entry fee is $75. Entries should be sent to Midland Softball Association, P.O. Box 2862, Midland 79702.

Miss McNamara, Conner Win Gymnastics Titles

FORT WORTH (AP) — Julianne McNamara and Bart Conner tumbled and twisted Sunday afternoon to capture the women's and men's all-around titles in the Sixth Annual American Cup gymnastics competition.

McNamara finished ahead of her seven competitors in the vault and uneven bars and tied for first in the floor exercise with Tracee Talavera, who relinquished the crown she won a year ago at Madison Square Garden to her 15-year-old U.S. teammate.

Conner consistently racked up high scores in the pommel horse, rings, vault and high bar events to outdistance U.S. teammate Jim Hartung and Yuejiu Li of the People's Republic of China, who finished second and third respectively.

The 14-year-old Talavera trailed McNamara by only 15 points midway through the competition but fell off the beam following a series of back flips, an error that dropped her to fifth place entering the climactic floor exercise.

In that event, Talavera, the 1981 national champion, executed a series of difficult tumbling routines and sassy dance movements to tie McNamara and leap in to a three-way tie with Lavinia Agache of Romania and Huang Qun of China for second place all-around.

McNamara utilized difficult hand presses, round-off back double-somersaults and one-armed handstands to move ahead early in the competition but her balance beam routine failed to match the flawless technical precision of Qun.

Conner, the 1976 American Cup champion, and Hartung got a break early in the day when Li caught his foot on the pommel horse to finish last in that event.

But Li, whose powerful leg muscles have earned him the nickname "Thunder-thighs," thrilled the audience with a triple back somersault off the high bar and a twisting double-back somersault on the floor exercise, but could not make up the large gap between himself and the two U.S. competitors.

MATTHEWS, PHILLIES BREAK TIES
CLEARWATER, Fla. — The Philadelphia Phillies' effort to obtain Atlanta outfielder Gary Matthews fell through Saturday when the Phillies refused to meet his long-term, multimillion dollar salary demand.

The Phillies and Braves had agreed upon a deal that would have sent Matthews to Philadelphia and second-year pitcher Bob Walk to Atlanta, but only if the Phillies could sign Matthews.

RCA Launches Newest Entry In Videodisc Battle

NEW YORK (AP) — After years of waiting, the battle for control of the home videodisc market is under way.

RCA Corp. is the new entrant, throwing itself into the fight with an opening barrage of network television ads Sunday to back its bet that videodiscs — records that provide pictures as well as sound — will spread to most homes in America.

The RCA system, designed and made in America, will run head-on into one developed in Europe by the Dutch giant Philips. Waiting in the wings and slated to hit the market next year is a Japanese system developed by JVC Corp.

RCA has spent $150 million developing the discs and players, and it will sell an additional $20 million into what RCA Chairman Edgar Griffiths calls "the most extensive advertising and promotional effort in the company's history." In addition to its TV ads, the company plans a big newspaper and magazine advertising campaign.

RCA is confidently predicting it will sell 200,000 players and 2 million discs in the first year, figures that Philips officials find astonishing. Griffiths estimates that in the 1990s, the videodisc market will total $7.5 billion a year.

To do that, it will have to spread to most homes, and become as prevalent as color television sets are now. "We have focused our product on the average television buyer," says Jack Sauter, the group vice president of RCA in charge of consumer electronics.

The initial RCA machine reflects that plan. It is priced at $499.95, keeping a promise the player will cost under $500. Originally, a price of under $400 was promised, but rising costs made that obsolete.

By contrast, the Philips machine, sold in this country by Magnavox, a Philips subsidiary, and Pioneer, a Japanese firm, has a list price of $700 to $750. It has more features — such as freeze frame and slow motion — and is aimed at a different audience. It was introduced in some markets in 1978 but reached national distribution only last November. Through the end of 1980 only 25,000 machines had been sold.

Both systems provide sharp, clear pictures, better than most regular television and all videotapes. The player is connected to a television set to play the discs.

Videodiscs are not cheap. The player is useless without discs, which cost $15 to $25 each for both systems. Movies, concerts, sports highlights and instruction in such fields as tennis are provided. And discs can be recorded only at the factory, unlike videotape, which can be used to tape programs off the air at home.

"Let's face it. This is a product you do not sell to a person barely scraping by making $20,000 a year," says John Messerschmitt, a vice president of North American Philips who sees the total market as a limited one.

If Messerschmitt is right, RCA may be badly miscalculating. To keep the price down, it decided to sell the first players with monaural sound, while Philips machines all have stereo that can be hooked into a component stereo system.

RCA plans to introduce stereo as an option sometime next year, but officials say they are convinced buyers will not care. "This is being aimed at the demographics of the consumer that buys a color TV set," says Roy Pollack, executive vice president of RCA. "It's not the same as an audiophile."

Since TV sets do not have stereo, adds Herbert Schlosser, the former president of NBC who is in charge of programs for the RCA videodisc system, "you would be saying to the consumer, 'Move your TV set next to your stereo.'"

RCA thinks a lot of videodisc buyers will have never considered videotape recorders, which typically cost $700 and up and use blank tapes priced at $15 and more and pre-recorded tapes costing far more than videodiscs. Philips, on the other hand, says 95 percent of its videodisc customers also have videotape recorders.

The RCA and Philips technologies are based on totally different technologies, and discs playable on one are useless on the other. The JVC system uses technology similar to RCA's, but it is also incompatible.

As a result, some would-be buyers may prefer to wait a few years, on the assumption that one or two of the systems will be withdrawn and owners will be left out in the cold, with no new discs available.

Each system is therefore trumpeting its allies. RCA boasts that it has signed up companies that control 60 percent of the color TV market, including Zenith, Sears, Montgomery Ward, Sanyo, Hitachi and Radio Shack, and notes that CBS will make discs for the RCA system.

JVC has signed up General Electric. Philips has signed deals with MCA, the owner of Universal Pictures and a key participant in development of its system, Pioneer and International Business Machines. IBM was attracted by the fact the Philips system can easily be used to store printed information.

One thing RCA has going for it is marketing muscle that has gained new respect since the company took over the No. 1 position in videotape recorders, surpassing Sony, the inventor of the recorders. The VHS format sold by RCA and others now commands about 60 percent of the total market, compared to 40 percent for the Beta system Sony and its allies sell.

"We at RCA made the (videotape recorder) a consumer product," says Roy Pollack, an executive vice president of RCA.

Before that success, RCA's image was a little tarnished. It pioneered both black-and-white and color television, only to lose advantages in those markets. But it has taken back the lead in black-and-white sets, and is running neck-and-neck with Zenith in the color market.

RCA says about 5,000 of its best television dealers will be selling the videodisc players and discs.

Messerschmitt says RCA's marketing blitz does not bother him. "We have the feeling that once RCA spends the money to introduce the videodisc, people will do the comparison shopping and make the proper conclusion," he says.

That comment illustrates one major difference in marketing. Philips generally advertises the features of its players, while RCA concentrates on the programs available, known as "software" in the industry.

The Philips system, known as LaserVision, uses lasers to read information from silvery discs. Because the laser goes through the protective coating, the discs are relatively immune to damage and retailers take delight in dropping them on the floor and stepping on them.

The RCA discs, by contrast, are black and play with a needle. Because they are vulnerable to dust and dirt, they come in protective "caddies" that insert the disc into the player and retrieve it in a way to keep people from touching it.

"They're dealing with a stylus," sniffs Messerschmitt. "That's Nipper's technology." Nipper is the dog in RCA's famous trademark.

But the RCA discs are apparently less expensive to produce, although numbers are hard to come by, and RCA officials insist they will not be troubled by the large number of defective discs that Philips admits plagued it a year ago. Messerschmitt says that problem has been solved.

The RCA disc plays one hour per side, allowing a two-hour movie to be put on one disc. Discs for the Philips player initially were 30 minutes to a side, and to get one hour on a side Philips has had to drop its exclusive features such as freeze frame and slow motion.

The JVS system plans to have more features than RCA, and says the price will be competitive.

ema, a new midtown pornography shop-turned-movie theater. It is the first theater in the Times Square area to offer classic feature films.

The opening was the culmination of a dream held by three Manhattan movie buffs who believe their venture is a first

STILL FILMING — Actors Raul Julia and Teri Garr perform a dance scene from Francis Coppola's "One from the Heart," currently filming in Los Angeles. There have been reports that

Operatic Superstars To Summit On Public Television Broadcast

NEW YORK (AP) — The "Live from Lincoln Center" broadcast on public TV this evening is an operatic superstars' summit — tenor Luciano Pavarotti, soprano Joan Sutherland, mezzo-soprano Marilyn Horne.

The three singers, all in jolly spirit after an Avery Fisher Hall orchestra rehearsal conducted by Richard Bonyng, Miss Sutherland's husband, have been warm friends and colleagues for some time.

Miss Sutherland, a star in Europe, and Miss Horne, an unknown, made their highly acclaimed New York debuts together, at Town Hall, in a concert performance of "Beatrice di Tenda" in 1961.

Pavarotti, singing bel canto and hitting eight high Cs, became the overnight toast of the town and the nation opposite Miss Sutherland in "The Daughter of the Regiment" at the Metropolitan Opera in 1972.

But all three have been too acclaimed and in too much demand worldwide for any two of them to have run their careers as a team. "Our lives have crisscrossed," Miss Sutherland said.

Pavarotti recalled celebrating "beautifully" his 30th birthday in Brisbane on the 14-week tour of Australia he made with the Bonyngs in 1965. "It was 45 nights of pleasure for me."

"In the same day, Joan sang — full voice — the final dress rehearsal of 'La Sonnambula' and 'La Traviata.' I thought, 'Let me try to see if I can do it.' I think I was strangled in the middle of the second thing. She went over the two things like drinking a glass of water."

Miss Sutherland reminded Miss Horne of a "Semiramide," an opera they often sang together, in Boston, when Miss Horne sang the warrior, in beard and mustache, six months pregnant. Miss Horne, who used a copy of Pavarotti's autobiography as a back cushion during the interview, replied, "I can't write a book. I'm too nice to say all the things I want to say." She laughed at her own remark and Miss Sutherland's, and added, "Honey, if you can't laugh at yourself in this business, you're dead."

Miss Sutherland and Miss Horne will sing in "Norma" — as they did at Miss Horne's Met debut in 1969 — at the San Francisco Opera in 1982. It will be their first "Norma" together in 12 years.

Miss Horne said, "I'm opening San Francisco's season next fall in 'Semiramide,' with Richard conducting. Joan has deserted us. We found a young kid we think is going to make it named Caballe."

Pavarotti, or "Big P," as Miss Sutherland said she calls him, often appears on stage with a handkerchief to wipe his perspiring brow. If he wags a handkerchief during the "Live from Lincoln Center" performance, the soprano said she will do the same thing.

Added Miss Horne: "Helen Morgan used to carry one. I want to see Luciano sit on the piano like Helen Morgan."

Miss Sutherland and Pavarotti gave a duet concert at Avery Fisher Hall in 1979.

Outlook Good For Finish Of Francis Coppola Film

HOLLYWOOD (AP) — Progress report on "One from the Heart" — Will he or won't he? The film industry has been recently engrossed in a new kind of cliffhanger: whether Francis Ford Coppola could muster his ailing finances to finish his $22-million Las Vegas musical. I can report that he will.

The gates of the Zoetrope Studios on Las Palmas Avenue are still open, despite Coppola's fears that he might have to abandon his brave new enterprise, a self-contained film factory in the oldtime tradition but with modern technology. I passed through those gates the other morning to see how he was getting along.

While Zoetrope didn't seem as bustling as it did several weeks ago, work was going on. Especially on the Bora Bora set, a tropical fantasy right out of a Dorothy Lamour movie circa 1943. Gene Kelly was overseeing choreographer Kenny Ortega who was overseeing a dance featuring Raul Julia and Teri Garr. Kelly was asked if he didn't feel in a touchy position, looking over another choreographer's shoulder.

"Not at all," said the amiable Irishman. "Everyone here is very free to make suggestions. Besides, I hired Kenny."

About the dancers: "Teri worked for me as a dancer at 14 when I did a little sequence with Shirley MacLaine in 'What a Way to Go.' She chose to go into straight acting, but she still knows dance fundamentals. The only trouble is when she can practice. She and Frederic Forrest are in almost every scene, so she's at the studio for makeup and hair at 7:30 in the morning and doesn't finish until 7:30 at night."

"Raul isn't a professional dancer, so we started giving him daily lessons last October. He worked for two and a half months — until the crunch (Zoetrope's financial crisis)."

"They're both damn good. Yesterday they had to do the whole dance number 20 times — four minutes of dancing through a set with 220 extras. That's hard work."

Coppola, the brains behind the fragile empire, was moving from one group of co-workers to another, conferring on details for the dance number. Like his studio operation, his bulk has deflated. His beard remains bushy, and he wears a somewhat incongruous business suit and ancient panama hat, apparently a good-luck talisman.

Coppola explained about the music: "It will begin in the sleazy style of a Vegas lounge act, just a few pieces in the band. Then, as the fantasy progresses, we add strings, make it more sophisticated."

"It's all new and different, he said, seeking ways to describe it:

"Well, you know the Frank Capra movie, 'It's a Wonderful Life'? That's what it's like, only with music. The songs are used to progress the story. No, not like 'Umbrellas of Cherbourg.' I'll tell you what it's really like: kabuki. If acting can tell a story, we use acting. If music can tell the story, we use music. Or scenery, anything to tell the story."

And the "One from the Heart" story will be told, he assured. He was only a couple of weeks from completion, thanks to financial aid from various directions. By using his new-fangled electronic methods of film making, he'll be able to show a finished print to film buyers by May 15.

"We'll make the July 4 opening easily," said Coppola. "Perhaps it will be seen in only a few theaters at first. The thinking has been to open across the country in 800 theaters, but now it is too late, the theaters have been booked."

As to the future: "It all depends on 'One from the Heart.' The whole studio depends on it. If people want to see it, we'll stay in business. If not..."

CAREERS

By JOYCE LAIN KENNEDY

Dear Joyce: I saw your column on dentistry. What options are there in the dental field for people who don't want the grind and expense of dental school?

— B. F., Phoenix, Ariz.

Dental assistants perform a range of duties that include clerical tasks, patient counseling and assisting during surgery. Though it's still possible to enter the field simply with on-job training, dentists increasingly prefer to hire certified graduates of one or two-year programs.

Average starting salary nationwide is about $8,000; salaries for experienced assistants range between $12,000 and $15,000. Most moving-up options require additional schooling.

To locate jobs, Bobbie de Laviada of the American Dental Assistants' Association suggests contacting local dental supply houses. Because their representatives call on dentists, they often know a dental assistant is vacating a position before the employing dentist does.

With a higher salary range of $12,000 to $20,000 a year generally, dental hygienists are the only ones other than dentists licensed to work in patients' mouths — removing deposits and polishing teeth, taxing X-rays and applying fluorides, among other functions. They are preventive specialists who emphasize good oral hygiene habits.

Aspiring dental hygienists can choose from two educational routes: accredited two-year programs at community colleges or four-year college programs that lead to a baccalaureate. The latter is recommended for those planning a career in teaching or public health dentistry.

Your Personal Biorhythms
