"It's no use now, Langdon," I called to intrude. I misun;'erstood-or didn't hear where the servant said I was to wait. However, no harm done. So piteously crying, "mamma, mamma, long! I'm off" But I made no move toward the door by which I had entered; instead, I advanced a few feet nearer the door from which his voice had come.

After a brief-a very brief-pause the carnival some miscreant poisoned spite every effort made to save him. there came in Langdon's voice-laugh-

I had always thought him handwas smoking a cigarette in an oriental holder nearly a foot long; but the air of the room, so perfect was the ventilation, instead of being scented with tobacco, had the odor of some fresh, clean, slightly safine perfume. I think what was in my mind must have shown in my face, must have subtly flattered him, for, when I looked at him, he was giving me a look of genuine friendly kindliness. "This is-perfect, Langdon," said I. And I think I'm a judge."

He inspected the coal of his cigar- my tone of "despatch your business ette, lifting his eyebrows at it. Pres sir, and be gone;" for I was both busy ently he said: "And she?"

my skin began to burn. "By the way, there will take you to him." Langdon, what's the name of your architect ?"

"Wilder and Marcy," said he, They're fairly satisfactory, if you tell em zil the time. They're perfectly beaten track and fight tooth and nall against those who do go out of it."

"Fil have a talk with Marcy this very day," said I.

"Oh, you're in a hurry!" He laughed. And you haven't asked her. You remind me of that Greek philosopher who was in love with Lais. They asked him: 'But does she love you?' And he said: 'One does not inquire of the fish one likes whether it likes one.'

I flushed. "You'll pardon me, Langdon," said I, "but I don't like that. It isn't my attitude at all toward-the right sort of women.

He looked half-quizzical, half-apologetic. "Ah, to be sure," said he. forgot you weren't a married man.

And so I left him, with a look in his eyes that came back to me long afterward when I realized the full meaning of that apparently almost commonplace interview.

The same day I began to plunge on textile, watching the market closely that I might go more slowly should there be signs of a dangerous breakfor no more than Langdon did I want a sudden panicky slump. The old do-nothing's face lost its confident, condescending expression. His lip quivered, and 1 think there were tears in his bad, dim, gray-green em exactly what you want and watch eyes. I suppose he thought his a profoundly pathetic case; no doubt he conventional and so can't distinguish hadn't the remotest conception what eiween originality that's artistic and he really was-and no doubt, also, originality that's only bizarre. They're there are many who would honestly like most people-they keep to the take his view. As if the fact that he was born with all possible advantages against being drawn out of it and did not make him and his plight inexcusnble.

"No, my dear Blacklock," said he, cringing now as easily as he had condescended-how to cringe and bow to condescend are taught at the same school, the one ne had gone to all his life. "It is you I want to talk with, And, first, I owe you my apologies. I know you'll make allowances for one who was never trained to business methods I've always been like a child in those matters."

"You frighten me," said I. "The last 'gentleman' who came throwing me off my guard with that plea was shrewd enough to get away with a very large sum of my hard-earned money Besides"-and I was laughing, though not too good-naturedly-"I've noticed that you 'gentlemen' become vague about business only when the balance is against you. When it's in your favor, you manage to get your minds on business long enough to collect to the last fraction of a cent."

He heartily echoed my laugh, "I only wish I were clever," said he. "However, I've come to ask your indulgence. I'd have been here before, but those who owe me have been put ting me off. And they're of the sort of people whom it's impossible to press.'

"I'd like to accommodate you further," said I, shedding that last little hint as a cliff sheds rain, "but your account has been in an unsatisfactory state for nearly a month now."

"I'm sure you'll give me a few days longer," was his easy reply, as if we were discussing a triffe. "By the way, you haven't been to see us yet. Only this morning my wife was wondering when you'd come. You quite captivated her, Blacklock. Can't you dine with us to-morrow night-no, Sunday -at eight? We're having in a few people I think you'd like to meet."

"Glad to come," said I, wishing to be rid of him, now that my point was gained. "We'll let the account stand open for the present-I rather think your stocks are going up. Give my regards to-the ladies, please, especially to Miss Anita."

He winced, but thanked me graciously; gave me his soft, fine hand to shake and departed, as eager to be off as I to be rid of him. "Sunday nextat eight," were his last words. "Don't fail us"-that in the tone of a king addressing some obscure person whom commanded to court it may be that old Ellersly was wholly unconscious of his superciliousness, fancied he was treating me as if I were almost an equal; but I suspect he rather accentuated his natural manner, with the idea of impressing upon me that in our deal he was giving at least as much as L My petty and inevitable success with that helpless creature added amazingly, ludicrously, to that dangerous elation which, as I can now see, had been growing in me ever since the day Roebuck yielded so readily to my demands as to National coal. The whole trouble with me was that up to that time I had won all my victories by the plainest kind of straightaway hard work. I was imagining myself victor in contests of wit against wit, when, in fact, no one with any especial eqipment of brains had ever opposed me; all the really strong men had been helping me because they found me useful. But for my selfhypnotism in the case of Roebuck, I find no excuse whatever for myself. He sent for me and told me what share in National coal they had decided to give me for my Manasquale mines. "Langdon and Melville," said he, "think me too liberal; far too liberal, my boy. But I insisted-in your case I felt we could afford to be generous as well as just." All this with an air that was a combination of the pastor and the parent. I can't even offer the excuse of not having seen that he was a hypocrite. I felt his hypocrisy at once, and my first impulse was to jump for my breastworks. But instantly my vanity got behind me, held me in the open. pushed me on toward him. If you will notice, almost all "confidence" games rely for success chiefly upon enlisting a man's vanity to play the traitor to his judgment. So, instead of reading his liberality as plain proof of intended treachery, I read it as plain proof of my own greatness, and of the fear it had inspired in old Roebuck. Laugh with me if you like, but before you laugh at me, think carefully-those of you who have ever put yourselves to the test on the field of action-think carefully whether you have never found that your head decoration which you thought a crown was in reality the peaked and belled cap of the fool. "That's it-the wife," said I. "But you have no wife. At least-

"No," I replied with a laugh. "Not yet. But I'm going to have."

Suddenly my mind reverted to my business. "How do you account for the steadiness of textile, Langdon?" I asked, returning to the carved sittingroom and trying to put those surroundings out of my mind.

"I don't account for it," was his languid, uninterested reply. "Any of your people under the mar-

'Yes, but I haven't written a line about textile for nearly a month now. I pretended to object, my vanity fairly purring with pleasure.

"That's the only reason I can give," said he.

"You are sure none of your people is supporting the stock?" I asked, as a form and not for information; for I thought I knew they weren't-I trusted him to have seen to that.

Ghosts of Dead Lakes.

In the great basin between the Rockles and the Sierra Nevadas lie the ghosts of many dead lakes. Rivers still flow down to the dry edge of these one-time great reservoirs and are licked up by evaporation and the chinook winds. Of all the lakes that once lay there, only Great Salt Lake, Lake Tahoe and Bear Lake are left. The Southern Pacific rolls for 165 miles across the bed of what was once Lake Lahontan, and the passengers gazing idly from the windows may see the terraces and wrinkles in the crust of the fossil lake which nature robbed and defrauded of its crystal treasures ages ago .- Exchange.

FARMERS' EDUCATIONAL AND CO-OPERATIVE UNION OF AMERICA

The manufacturers of farming tools and vehicles had a meeting recently. and the whole trend of the talk was standing of the real purposes of the order of things has established the that prices must be advanced. Now, it is the easiest thing in the world to meet this advance, if the farmers for wise consideration along lines that would only do it. The way to do it is will assure success. to put every farming tool, every vehicle and every implement on the place under shelter every night when at all practicable, and never leave anything out in the weather for a single moment when it can be put into a plase of safety and protection. If the farmers would do this, it would cut the demands for such things fully half in two. Would half of the demand bring the price down? You bet it would. The factories are now running over time, and the dealers are hardly able to get stocked up at all. Cut the demand in two, and the factories would immediately seek a market, and the "overproduction " of cotton would have a parallel. At any rate, this does us.

sort of a thing on the part of the farmers would be the only sensible thing to do anyway. How much better a tool works when it is clean and ready at the commencement of the job, instead of having to be used half a day to get it so that it can be decently used.

There is a constant tendency in the minds of some of the Farmers Union people to want to mix up and amalgamate with the labor unions of the towns and cities. They make a serious downfall of any of the necessary agenmistake. There is little or nothing in common between them, and the whole idea comes from politicians who would like to ride the organizations into office, or "business men" who want to prises. WEAK PEOP MADE STRONG AND ENERGETIC BY DR. WILLIAMS' PINK PILLS.

General Breakdown Caused by Deficlent Blood Quickly Corrected by This Tonic Remedy.

A feeling of general weakness, poor appetite, loss of breath after the slightest exercise and broken sleep are some of the symptoms of general debility. You may think that they have no relation to each other and that you will worry along, hoping all the time to feel better soon. This is a mistake, for every one of the symptoms is caused by bad blood, which must be made pure and new before health will be restored again. tonic treatment is necessary and for this Dr. Williams' Pink Pills.

Mr. J. G. Havey, of 95 Willow St., Chelsea, Mass., says: "I was sick for a number of years from general debility and indigestion. I was never free from stomach trouble and my nerves were so shattered that the least excitement unfitted me for any serious work. My sleep was restless on account of terrible pains in the small of my back. These pains would sometimes last for a month or two. My sight grew weak, there seeming to be a blur constantly before my eyes. I couldn't concentrate my mind on my work, and the attempt to do so completely exhausted me.

"I was finally forced to give up a position I had held for twenty-eight years. After trying several medicines without help, I read of Dr. Williams' Pink Pills and gave them a trial. They made me feel so much better and so much stronger that I started in business for myself here in Chelses. I have never had a return of my former sickness and cheerfully recommend Dr. Williams' Pink Pills as an excellent nerve and blood tonic."

Dr. Williams' Pink Pills have long been recognized as an excellent tonic remedy in cases of indigestion and general debility, where the stomach and other organs of the body are weakened and disordered simply through lack of proper nourishment. They have also been especially successful in curing anæmia, rheumatism, after-effects of the grip and fevers.

It is time that the Unions were taking some notice of the movement to fill the South with emigrants from all over Europe, and particularly from Spain and Italy. There must be warehouses, and the farmer should own them. He has the cotton at first hand, it has cost him less than it will cost anybody else, if it is sold at the right price, and he can therefore, hold it to better advantage than somebody who has to buy it and then add his cost and expenses.
