Former wing commander addresses fledgling pilots

Fifty officers will pin on their Air Force pilot wings here today during graduation ceremonies for Undergraduate Pilot Training Class 80-02.

Graduation ceremonies are scheduled to begin at 10 a.m. in the base theater. Guest speaker for today's event is Maj. Gen. Walter H. Baxter III, commander of the 24th North American Defense Command and the 24th Aerospace Defense Command Region with headquarters at Mallmstrom AFB,

A native Texan and West Point graduate, General Baxter is very familiar with the flying mission at Reese. In 1971 he was the deputy commander of Operations here and from 1972 through 1974 he served as the 64th Flying Training Wing commander.

General Baxter has logged more than 4,700 hours in 24 types of aircraft. Included in that figure are several combat missions in Korea and Southeast Asia. He led group strikes of F-51s into North Korea during the 1952 spring and winter offensives and General Baxter flew 125 F-4 Phantom combat missions during the Vietnam conflict.

General Baxter's military decorations include the Legion of Merit, with two Oak Leaf Clusters; the Distinguished Flying Cross, one oak leaf cluster; Air Medal, nine oak leaf clusters; and Joint Service Commendation Medal. For his service in Okinawa, he was awarded the Third Order of the Rising Sun by the Japanese government.

Following the graduation there will be a luncheon for the fledgling pilots, their families and guests at the Officers Club. Later in the day, a Red Carpet tour is planned for those attending the graduation. Tonight, a dinner-dance honoring the graduates will be held at the Officers Club. Activities are scheduled to start at 6:30 p.m.

Class commander for the T-38 phase of training was Capt. Arthur M. Nickell. Capt. Bruce Edstrom served as class commander during the T-37

Section leaders in Class 80-02 were Capt. Richard S. Peterson, section-one, and Capt. William E. Holden Jr., section-two.

Class 80-02 started training here on Feb. 16 and entered the T-38 phase in ate June.

It's been a great year

by Col. John W. Rushfeldt

We can look back at 1979 with a great deal of satisfaction.

Every organization on base has felt the impact of the greatly increased size of pilot training classes. In spite of parts and people shortages, facility limitations and too few dollars in the budget, we have met the challenge of our primary mission and will end the year about one and one-half training days ahead in the T-37 and five in the T-38.

The obstacles mentioned were overcome and the achievements accomplished because you did the job. Our military and civilian work force is one of the closest knit groups I have known. Each one doing their job well and working closely with fellow members is the "Reese Secret."

This spirit of cooperation must be nurtured by each of us. If we make every effort to continue to work together to train the best new aviators in the Air Force, we'll see an even better year in 1980.

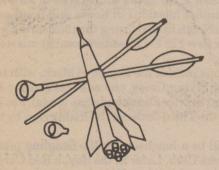

To each of you — a most sincere thanks for a job 'Well Done' and best wishes for a great new year.

Santa's toys could spell trouble

Before too much longer, Santa Claus will be making his rounds with a bagful of toys slung over his back.

That bagful of toys could quickly turn into a bagful of trouble. Not all toys are harmless and disaster may loom around the corner for the small child who receives a gift that was not purchased with toy safety in mind

Here are some hints on protecting children from toyrelated injuries.

 Remember that younger brothers and sisters may have access to toys bought for older children.

• Check fabric labels for "non-flammable," "flame-retardant," or "flameresistant" notices.

- Check instructions, which should be easy to read and understand.
- Instruct the child in the proper use of the toy.
- Choose a toy appropriate for the child's age and development. (Many toys have agegroup labels on the package.)
- Avoid toys that produce excessive noise.
- Avoid toys that shoot or launch dangerous missiles.

When choosing a toy for a small child, there are extra safety precautions to be taken: Make sure it:

- does not have detachable parts that can lodge in windpipe, ears or nostril,
- is too large to be swallowed,
- is not apt to break easily into small pieces or leave jagged edges,
- has not been assembled with easily exposed straight pins, wires, nails, etc.

- is not made of glass or brittle plastic,
- is not poisonous, toxic or electrically hazardous.
- does not have parts that can pinch fingers or catch hair, and
- for children under two, does not have long cords or thin plastic bag materials.

Make sure that the joy a child experiences upon receiving Christmas toys remains a joy. Think toy-safety.

Christmas — bah-humbug?

Ahhh, Christmas! The happiest time of the year, right?

Wrong. Psychiatrists say that the holiday season actually is depressing to many people. Psychological episodes and suicide attempts increase during the Christmas period.

Why? Everything emphasizes the family, getting together with friends, going home for the holidays or exchanging presents. For people alone, with no family or friends, or who can't go home then, it can merely emphasize their aloneness.

We don't advocate that advertising, songs or the spirit of the season be changed. It's nice to have at least one time of the year when peace and togetherness are emphasized.

However, those of us who are fortunate enough to have family or friends near us should be a little more compassionate toward those by themselves. Invite them to join in holiday activities, make them feel they belong.

Why bother? You could gain a new friend and spread a little Christmas cheer.

Even Scrogge quit saying, "Bah, humbug."

Hanukkah celebrates victory in war for religious freedom

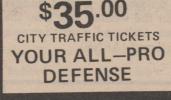

by Maj. Mel Polick

The lights of Hanukkah will glow at military installations as Jewish military personnel celebrate the "Festival of Lights".

Hanukkah, which is Hebrew for dedication, begins at sundown on Saturday and is a celebration of the first victory in the fight for religious freedom. It marks the rededication of the Temple in Jerusalem in pre-Christian times. In the second century (before the common era), Antiochus, King of Syria, defiled the Temple turning it into a pagan sanctuary where sacrifices were offered to heathen gods. Jewish religious practice was forbidden.

The Jews revolted under the leadership of the Maccabees and won the first war ever fought for religious freedom. To celebrate they cleansed the Temple, rededicated it and kindled the perpetual light, a symbol still found in Judaism today. The festival continued for eight days.

To commemorate this historic victory for religious freedom,

Jews all over the world light candles and exchange gifts for eight days.

On the first night of Hanukkah one candle is lit in the menorah, a special candleabra used only during Janukkah. An additional candle is added each night until the last night when all eight candles are glowing brightly.

Children especially enjoy Janukkah because they receive Hanukkah gelt (money or chocolate candy shaped like coins). Other Hanukkah traditions include playing with dreidles (Hanukkah tops), eating potato latkes (pancakes), and singing songs including Maoz Tzur, an old Hebrew melody telling of this first victory for religious freedom.

AF demonstrates commitment: expands women's opportunities

By expanding opportunities for women the Air Force has demonstrated a commitment to equal treatment that goes beyond tokenism, Under Secretary of the Air Force Antonia Handler Chayes told members of Congress.

Speaking to the subcommittee on military personnel of the House Armed Services Committee, Ms. Chayes said, "Finding women on the flightline or in a maintenance shop of any international airline these days is not a common occurrence. The Air Force has a growing need for women in these roles however, and having them on the flightline is reality beyond tokenism."

She pointed out that the number of Air Force women has increased during the past decade, while the active-duty force strength has declined.

"In a period of shortage of skilled and trainable manpower, the Air Force, with its sophisticated weapon systems, requires highly trainable recruits and officers with the education and ability to manage advanced weapon systems and the people who operate and maintain them. It is not sensible to shut out 50 percent of a dwindling manpower

"We now have over 20,000 women working in specialties once considered non-traditional. In fact, the Air Force currently has more women working in aircraft maintenance than in personnel specialties."

Ms. Chayes described future plans.

"Our current objective is to have 97,000 women on active duty by the end of fiscal 1985, an 80 percent increase over our present number. Women should then constitute about 18 percent of the active force, compared to 1.4 percent 10 years ago."

Calling for a reconsideration of the "women in combat" law, the under secretary said, "In any future war, I have no doubt women will face more severe risks of injury, just as United States civilians will. What we achieve by barring women from combat roles is an obstacle to career advancement, and little enhancement of protection.

"Moreover, there is the question of equity-of equal opportunity to fight and die for country as opposed to the risk of death women have always faced in roles as nurses and other support functions during wartime. It is also a matter of equity for men, who should not be forced into greater danger than the women who take the same oath and wear the same uniform." (AFNS)

Secretary Mark talks about money, mission

Speaking about retention efforts in the Air Force with interviewers at Strategic Air Command headquarters, Secretary of the Air Force Hans M. Mark recognized the plight of members who are financially hard pressed, but denied that money alone was the answer.

"For my own part," he said, "I believe that people like to belong to an institution that has a sense of the future . . ."

Referring to the October 1979 pay raise, he said, "We fought the raise battle this time around, the 5.5 percent versus the 7 percent. I personally believe that that isn't big enough to make a difference . . .

"While it was a good psychological boost, . . . it doesn't solve the problem. I think if you tried to solve the problem with money alone, however, it would be the wrong thing to do."

Dr. Mark said military people must have a "sense of mission" and "a sense of doing something that is not compensated for by money." Without this awareness, "you'll have mercenaries and I don't want that," he stated.

"But, we've got to see to it that the differential isn't so big that people quit," he added. (AFNS)

Allen asks retirees to aid in AF future

"Our biggest concern is not programs but people," Air Force Chief of Staff Gen. Lew Allen Jr. said.

Speaking at a one-day retiree symposium at San Antonio

General Allen said, "What genuinely concerns us are the disturbing trends in our service and the values of duty, patriotism and sacrifice we cherish," General Allen said.

He noted last year the Air Force established a major program to increase retiree involvement with the active force. He said the Air Force now has 104 retired affairs offices at bases in the United States and abroad to implement the program.

The chief of staff called on the retirees to help "by carrying to these young men and women the message that a career of disciplined teamwork and selfsacrifice in patriotic service is richly rewarding."

He encouraged the retirees to volunteer for Air Force speaking and counseling programs to provide a vital link with the history of our service.

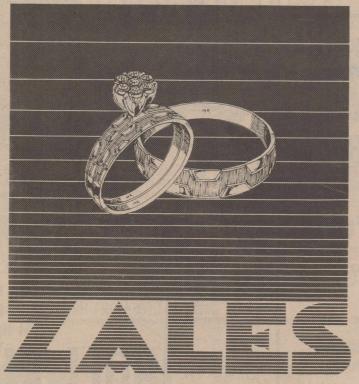

"Your accomplishments are proudly recorded in our history," General Allen said. "I ask you today to be a part of our future as well."

Air Force launches two communication satellites

tions satellites were launched from Cape Canaveral AFS, Fla., by a single Titan III booster and placed into orbits 22,300 miles above the earth.

The satellites will undergo a month of testing and then join five other satellites as part of the Defense Satellite Communication System.

The system provides worldwide communications links for the Defense Department, State Department, the United Twin Air Force communica- Kingdom and the North Atlantic Treaty Organization. The satellites can handle 1,300 simultaneous telephone links.

> The new satellites will replace two older ones that will be used as spares. The satellites cost about $16 million and have an on-orbit life span of five years.

Davis evaluates ATC

(Editor's note: Eight months ago Gen. B.L. Davis grasped the reins of the Air Training Command. Recently, Bob Reed of the ATC Public Affairs office talked with the general about the current status of the command. This is the second installment of a three-part interview.)

Reed: In our first interview, general, you dwelt at some length on the subject of current pilot loss, which you said was the highest in recent history. Have we turned the corner on that one yet?

Davis: I wish I could say yes, Bob, but the honest answer is no. I am beginning to see a few signs of the loss rate leveling off, but it's still unacceptably high.

Reed: General, we still hear grumblings about the commanders dragging their feet in assigning navigators to unit command and operations positions. Are the complaints valid?

Davis: Not in ATC. Out at Mather many have been assigned to those positions, and we have a lot more throughout ATC filling command positions in support areas. I'd like to make a personal observation about that, Bob. Flying organizations are composed of a select - elite - group of people. As a result, a commander's job there may be routine. But when you're given command of a squadron of maybe 1,200 enlisted personnel and junior officers in a support function - that's a different ballgame. It'll broaden a commander and teach him or her the nitty-gritty facts of Air Force life - right quick.

Reed: On another subject, general. How do you think the proposed 50 percent boost in flight pay is going to fare?

Davis: I believe it'll make it — if not this year, probably next. Heaven knows it's long overdue.

DON'T GET TURNED ON PLAY IT COOL WITH ELECTRICITY

After all, the present rates were set back in 1957.

Reed: One last question in this area: Have there been any decisions made yet as to the proper mix of simulator and actual flying training?

Davis: Not yet. Speaking personally, I'm reasonably convinced that simulator training produces better instrument pilots. But it shouldn't be too long before we see the final results of the study that's going on about the proper mix.

Reed: In the meantime, are we going to get more actual flying hours?

Davis: Yes.

Reed: Let's move over to our huge technical training job. How's it faring in the command?

Davis: Great. I'm proud of the job that's being done.

Reed: Is the increased emphasis on first-job training paying off?

Davis: Yes. Definitely. That's not just talk; it's based on a lot of factual data gathered in surveys, plus a good deal of extremely favorable feedback from users.

Reed: How's the eight-hour day working out?

Davis: OK. Of course there are some who still have reservations. But I believe it's going to work out quite satisfactorily.

Reed: General, can I get you to go once more around the track on complainst about Air Force leadership not protesting forcefully enough against the nibbling away at entitlements?

Davis: Of course. I still maintain that's a largely unfounded criticism. Quality of life issues continue to have top priority with me, and I can assure you that it's the same with senior Air Force officials everywhere. For concrete proof in just one instance, take the recent 7 percent pay raise. That came about because the chief and the secretary persisted. They finally won.

Reed: Do you think that those who are trying to rescind junior enlisted travel entitlements will be successful? Davis: Obviously, I have no way of knowing for certain, but I don't think so. I truly believe that Congress will see the inherent justice of junior enlisted travel entitlements and will leave them alone.

Reed: A complete change of subject, general. What kind of ideas and suggestion came out of the board of captains and majors you convened? Wild, practical, or what?

Davis: There were many fresh, good ones, and my staff and I have spent long hours studying the report that extremely bright group of young officers came up with. I won't go into detail, but a lot of members of the command are aware of some of the changes we've already made, particularly in the planning process. Another small, but meaningful, one that comes to mind has to do with the orientation of new officers to Hq. ATC who, when they arrive, are shown how their work interfaces with that of other divisions. It was an excellent suggestion, makes the newcomers more comfortable and productive from the start.

People keep coming back

The opportunity to return to flying duties for rated officers and the active-duty Air Force way of life for support officers were the most important reasons why a number of officers applied for return to active duty.

That was the conclusion of a survey of 366 officers whose applications to return were approved by fiscal 79 Guard/Reserve Officer Recall Boards. The boards are now referred to as Voluntary Return to Extended Active Duty Boards.

Other frequently cited reasons were, in order, career and educational opportunities, job satisfaction and pay.

When asked to list secondary or contributing factors, the returnees most often mentioned pay, the chance to travel and the Air Force benefits package.

The survey gave respondents the opportunity to offer their own comments about why they decided to return to active duty. Typical of the comments are the following:

- "I enjoy the feeling of camaraderie in the military, the sense of belonging and working with others toward a common goal."
- "Perhaps the word patriotism is the reason."
- "Recent information leads me to believe the reasons for my separation are being remedied and career opportunities are improving for officers in the Air Force."
- "It is much harder on the outside to form family and personal friendships. I've heard it referred to as a lack of 'belonging' to the Air Force family. Sounds corny, but I think it's true.
- "Approximately three months after I separated I began to regret my decision. I had originally planned a military career, and the factors which contributed to my separation began to look small in comparison to the things I had enjoyed."

Married respondents were asked about the influence their families had on their decisions. Fifty-two percent indicated their families supported the decision to separate, with 11 percent opposed. An even greater 65 percent supported the decision to return with only 5 percent opposed.

The returnees were also asked their reasons for separating. They generally agreed that the factors influencing their separation were: little say in future assignments, more geographic stability in civilian jobs, civilian job opportunities more attractive, and more freedom in decision making in civilian jobs.

Many returnees, however, countered these factors with statements suggesting that "the grass isn't greener on the other side of the fence."

On such respondent, referring to the Air Force assignment policy and geographic stability associated with civilian jobs, said, "I have found that the hope for stability in civilian life is not available. If one wants to advance and achieve, one has to be mobile in civilian life as well as the military. Consequently, I have decided that if I am going to have to be mobile, I would rather do it in a life style and employment which I enjoy the most."

The "typical" respondent to the survey was a 31-year-old married captain, commissioned in 1970 and separated after five years of service. The group included pilots, navigators and support officers.

Most were lieutenants and captains, with a few majors. Ages varied between 25 and 41 years.

Administrative cost is the

To make conversion from Series E to Series EE bonds easier, the Air Force Accounting and Finance Center is sending activeduty military, retirees and civilian personnel information on the conversion pro-

Special notices will be sent in December to the estimated 320,000 people enrolled in the Air Force savings bond program.

Air Force people have until March 1980 to either convert or stop their bonds.

Those not contacting their base finance offices will automatically have their allotments applied to the Series EE bonds. Retirees must make their decision by Feb. 10 and should contact finance officials at AFAFC/ RPT, Denver, Colo. 80279.

The Series EE bond will have a higher minimum denomination - $50 instead of $25 - and a longer term to maturity - 11 years instead of five. Although the interest rate of 6.5 percent remains the same, Series EE bonds cannot be cashed for six months after issue instead of the current two months for E bonds.

Series EE face values are: $50, $75, $100, $200, $500 or $1,000 for payroll savings. The individual pays 50 percent of the face value. Officials noted the Series E bonds will continue to generate interest at the prevailing rate for a minimum of 25 years.

An example of the conversion would be: money going toward buying a $25 E bond each month, will now go toward buying a $50 EE bond. The one pay deduction - which was $18.75 per month - will now be $12.50 each month for two months. (If bond money is deducted by pay periods, substitute pay period for month.)

Individuals who have questions after receiving their notification should call Ext. 3192 or stop by the military pay section of Accounting and finance. Retirees should contact the retired pay directorate at the Air Force Accounting and Finance Center in Denver at (303) 370-7051.

'Quick getaway' protects MX

West, where the MX may be based, the key to its survival in a nuclear attack is "the hideout" and the "quick getaway."

President Carter recently approved the multiple protective structures system as the basing mode for the $33 billion project. Plans call for 200 mobile intercontinental ballistic missiles to reach initial operational capability by 1986.

The hide-out is not a shack in the sagebrush but a system of 200 loop-road networks, one per missile, each with 23 horizontal hardened shelters.

Describing the system in a recent report to members of Congress, Secretary of the Air Force Hans M. Mark noted the

In the language of the Old two elements that work toward the survivability of the system - preservation of location uncertainty and a high degree of mobility.

> Location uncertainty is maintained by moving the missile from one shelter to another in a way to make it impossible for satellites in space to determine whether what is being moved is indeed the missile.

There are four components in the system: the missile, the shelter, the missile transporter (called a transporter-erector launcher or TEL), and the

The shield as described by Dr. Mark is provided by a special vehicle that can move alone or straddle and move in unison with the TEL and its missile. After the TEL is relocated in a new shelter, the shield vehicle may visit all the other shelters where it simulates entry of the missile and transporter into the

The end result is that an observer has no idea where the missile and its transporter are actually located.

This is no mean of trick considering the great size of the misile and its transporter. The TEL vehicle itself weighs in a 700,000 pounds, has six axles and 24 tires.

The getaway feature of MX survivability is the ability of the TEL and its missile to move

Toy drive nets more than 1,000

Reese's Toys for Tots campaign has reaped a harvest of more than 1,000 toys for disadvantaged children in the Lubbock area.

The drive, sponsored on base for the fourth straight year by the 1958th Communications Squadron, is designed to bring some Christmas cheer to children who otherwise would have a bleak holiday.

Both new and repairable toys were donated by Reese people. The repairable toys were fixed by members of the 1958th Comm. Sq.

All of the toys will be turned over to the Marine Corps Reserves in Lubbock for distribution. A campaign spokesman estimated the area-wide donation of toys to the Marine drive at between 10 and 12 thousand toys.

Joint assignment policies change

Air Force couples will have a better chance of moving together when a new assignment procedure begins in 1980.

According to Reese personnel officials, when one member is selected for an assignment, the spouse will be identified to resource managers at the Air Force Manpower and Personnel Center. This will allow them to consider both members for assignment to the same location.

Presently there is no provision for identifying the spouse. Now when a member receives an assignment, the spouse has to apply for a join-spouse assignment.

The extra time involved in applying after an assignment is made often results in the members moving at different times. There is also the possibility that there will be no opening for the spouse.

The new system should improve chances of couples being assigned together and moving concurrently. It will also provide better management and use of Air Force people.

The key to the military couples assignment system is Air Force Form 1048, "Military Spouse Information Sheet." Each military spouse involved should fill one out before Jan. 31, 1980.

The system will vary. Enlisted couples will be processed automatically. Officer couples and officerenlisted couples will not. Air Force members married to members of other services must still apply under the join-spouse policy because of different assignment systems.

Facts on the new system are available at the Customer Service Center, Ext. 3276.

Sixteen cage squads seek classic crowns

Sixteen prep cage squads are chasing divisional titles in the fifth Annual Reese Christmas Classic here today and tomorrow.

Tournament action was scheduled to begin at 10 a.m. yesterday with an Olympic style opening ceremony involving all sixteen teams.

The tournament, tabbed by base officials as one of the strongest prep fields in the state, features cage action in two divisions.

President's Division

In the President's Division, 4-A and 3-A schools, El Paso Andress is seeking its second straight division crown and third in the tourney's five-year history. •

Challenging the defending Champs are Abeline Cooper, led by 6 foot 9 high school All America hopeful Woody Martin; Clovis, last year's New Mexico state champs with All America candidate Brooks Jennings; Andrews; Roswell, N.M.; Lubbock Coronado, Lubbock Dunbar and Lubbock Christian.

Commandant's Division

Back to defend its Commander's Division title is El Paso Cathedral. Challenging in the 2-A division will be a very strong squad from Olney, Morton, Idalou, Denver City, the Boys Ranch Spearman and Lubbock Roosevelt.

Into a crowd Abeline Coopers Kevin Henry drives into a crowd during Cooper's win over Lubbock Coronado on the Mustang's home court earlier this year. Both teams are helping to unseat defending President's Division champ El Paso Andress in this year's tourney. (U.S. Air Force photo)

Tourney records

Individual scoring records that may be broken this year include Rocky Rawls 34 point effort for Dimmit against Big Spring in 1977. Ironically, Rawls is now playing guard for Howard College, a junior college in Big Spring. The scoring record for a championship game in the Commandant's Division belongs to Mike Williams. The Morton star scored 28 points against El Paso Kermit.

Andress in the 1975 title game. Willaims is averaging 24 points and 12 rebounds per game for East Texas State.

President's Division records are held by El Paso Cathedral's Alex Valdez, championship game, and Frenship's Loyd Strong, non-title game. Strong set a tournament record with 36 points against Lubbock Christian in 1977 and Valdez set a title mark of 24 points in Cathedral's 1977 win over

Intramural bowling

With the midseason series of games completed Tuesday night, Supply dominates the intramural bowling league, holding both first and second place and fielding the top two bowlers in the league.

Supply Number Two stands in first place with a 45-12 record while Supply Number One is seven games back in second place. Terry Bowers dropped his season average by two points from last weeks league-high 176 to drop into second place behind Leroy Weddington, who now boasts a 176 average.

in a battle for third position in the league. Both teams are 10 games off the pace with a 35-21

Rattler cagers regroup; enter Altus tourname

Still trying to shake off the disappointment of two tough losses last weekend the regrouping Rattler cagers will have to open the Altus tournament action this weekend against a powerful Ft. Sill

Reese came within seconds of picking up their fourth win of the season in a heartbreaking 77-74 loss to Brooks in the opening round of the Lackland Invitational. The Rattlers, who had led 40-39 at the half, had eight players in the scoring column as they posted one of the team's most balanced attacks of the season. Cecil Spivey led the offense with 24, followed by Don Fuller's 20 points.

The Rattlers held a slim 43-42 halftime lead over Sheppard in the second game before falling to the Senators for the fifth time this year. However, behind Don Fuller's amazing 52 point performance, the Rattlers played their best game this year against the Wichita Falls squad, losing 94-83. Reese had lost the first four meetings by an

Ft. Sill, which defeated Sheppard earlier this month, sports an imposing front line. Michael Wilson, a strong leaper, mans the post for the Army team at 6 foot 5 and is flanked by 6 foot 5 forward Danny Henson and 6 foot nine power forward Michael Wilson. In the backcourt will be speedy Slick Jones and running mate Booker T. Presley, the team's leading scorer with a 22 point plus average on the year.

Co-coach Nate Jones was encouraged by the Rattlers road performance despite the team's obvious disappointment at playing well but losing.

"We still think we have a good ball club," stressed Jones after the losses. "If we can get by Ft. Sill we think we have a real good chance of reaching the
