Gandhi sworn in as prime minister

NEW DELHI India (AP) - Rajiv Gandhi was sworn in as prime minis ter today after achieving the biggest election landslide in India's history. and pledged to lead a fight against poverty and corruption

The 40 year-old former airline pilot was sworn in by President Zail Singh in the chandelier-lit hall of the Presidential Palace

Prior to the ceremony in Delhi. Gandhi told Parliament members of his victorious Congress Party that he considered poverty the nation's No 1 problem He vowed to promote clean and honest" government and to seek national unity in the face of religious and ethnic strife

Gandhi also was preparing to appoint his Council of Ministers, or Cabinet Political observers predicted he would drop many ministers who advised his assassinated mother Indira Gandhi and to inject considerable new talent, including women and young professionals, in a new Cabinet of 30 to 35 members

Gandhi was unanimously elected earlier in the day as leader of the Congress Party, a formality which automatically made him the prime minister because of the party's majority in the lower house of Parliament The outgoing Parliament was dissolved, clearing the way for immediate formation of a new

Gandhi, with only four years' political experience, was sworn in as prime minister hours after his mother was slain Oct. 31 by two of her security guards identified by authorities as members of the Sikh

Gandhi pledged in his campaign to continue his mother's foreign and domestic policies, including nonalignment But foreign observers speculate that he may be more receptive to improving ties with the United States to offset India's close relationship with the Soviet Union.

Gandhi also promised to fight corruption and try to set up an honest and efficient government at all

In his first meeting with reporters. Gandhi pledged that one of his top priorities would be solving the Punjab separatist crisis by restoring the faith of alienated Sikhs there As a first step toward reconciliation, he promised to consult with Sikhs on what should be done to end secessionist agitation and army rule

Other stubborn problems facing Gandhi include widespread poverty and illiteracy

As Congress Party leader, Gandhi had tried to streamline its administration He has surrounded himself with a circle of young professional contemporaries known for their interest in technology and scientific management

In Pakistan, President Mohammed Zia ul-Haq said Sunday he looked forward to working with Gandhi toward mutually beneficial relations between the two nations, which have fought three wars since 1947

Taxi driver dies, building burned during protests

Army troops controlled this border city early today and patrolled in three other cities after violent political protests here that killed at least one person, injured about 80 and destroyed the municipal building.

Both the new mayor, Carlos Juaristi Septien of the ruling Institutional Revolutionary Party (PRI), and the opposition candidate who claimed he was robbed of victory, said they want calm restored to this city of 100,000, across the border from Eagle Pass, Texas Juaristi Septien, who begins his term Tuesday, pledged Sunday that the PRI will try not to provoke a confrontation" with the opposition.

The new mayor was sworn in Saturday in a ceremony that sparked nightlong rioting. The municipal building and the jail complex were

At least one death was confirmed in the violence, that of a taxi driver who died after inhaling tear gas fired on the demonstrators. Nearly 80 people were injured, many of them by gunshot wounds. A communique from the National Action Party (PAN), which also claimed victory in Ciudad Acuna, 56 miles to the north, and Monclova, 150 miles to the south, in Dec. 2 mayoral elections, said two people were killed, but the report could not be independently confirmed.

Fire Chief Juan Jose Briones said the burned-out municipal building appeared to be a total loss.

New PRI mayors were sworn in with no reported incidents Sunday in Ciudad Acuna, where National Action supporters had blocked the bridge to Del Rio, Texas, on Friday, and in Saltillo, where the small Authentic Party of the Mexican Revolution had protested the results.

Soldiers patrolled in both those cities and in Monclova, a city of 200,000 where a PRI mayoral candidate was to be sworn in today by state officials. The incumbent National Action mayor, Cesar Garcia Valdez said he would swear in his party's candidate.

About 1,500 National Action sympathizers barricaded a four-squareblock area around Monclova's city hall late Sunday and said they would stay through the night, local state police commander Arnulfo Villarreal said. Another 200 opposition sympathizers have occupied the municipal building since Thursday,

In Piedras Negras, nearly 1,000 people gathered in the plaza Sunday to look at what was left of the threestory municipal building. By late evening most had left.

Eleazar Cobos, the National Action candidate, said the violence was a sign of public indignation over the election results, but added, "If I had been here I would have been the first to stop it.

He urged about 200 people gathered in the plaza Sunday evening to go home, saying: "Promise me to be calm because that is the way we are going to win." National Action, a centrist party whose stronghold is in the north, contended that the PRI, which has governed Mexico for more than 50 years, manipulated the vote in the key cities to make sure its candidates would win.

Nationwide, National Action has long run a distant second to the PRI but appeared to gain strength with mayoral victories in two state capitals and in Ciudad Juarez, the country's fifth largest city.

Chief Justice calls for legislation relieving court of some of its duties tice Warren E. Burger, in a year-end report on the state of the judiciary pleaded Sunday for legislation to relieve the nation's highest court of the duty to grant full reviews to certain types of appeals. He also called anew for creation of a "temporary" tribunal to settle some conflicts among lower appellate courts.

Burger also wants a 10th Supreme Court justice who would not hear cases but would help ease the high court's workload by administering the federal court system.

In an interview in the American Bar Association Journal, the 77-yearold Burger, who now administers the system, was quoted as saying the job never interferes with his study of cases but "interferes with my

In the ABA Journal, published Saturday, Burger said he "put in 80 hours a week of work," much of it in administration.

Twelve-year-old boy leads efforts to help Philadelphia's homeless

PHILADELPHIA (AP) — Trevor Ferrell's efforts to feed and clothe the homeless got him a ribbing in school and forced him to repeat the sixth grade, but a year after he began his crusade the 12-year-old has become the leading voice for a network to help the city's street peo-

Despite the personal hardships. Trevor says the hardest part of his work is the publicity he has attracted. "I hate it," he said in a recent interview.

Trevor said he liked life more when it was simple, but his work has touched the hearts of countless others ranging from his schoolmates to well-to-do Philadelphians who take time out to make the nightly rounds with his van

"So many times, somebody said that giving has brought their family closer together," said Trevor's father, Frank. "Upper-crust society people, old Philadelphia families are getting involved. He's become a bridge for everybody."

In December 1983, Trevor watched a television program about street people, whose number in Philadelphia ranges anywhere from 3,000 by city estimates to 10,000 according to some charity groups, and decided that he wanted to see whether the homeless really existed. Ferrell thought a first-hand look might make his son more aware of those less fortunate, so the family drove from their suburban Gladwyne home to Philadelphia.

Chemicals await processing

WOODBINE, Ga. (AP) — The close scrutiny given the arrival of 15 tons of the chemical that killed more than 2,000 people in Bhopal, India, will continue as the chemical is processed at a Union Carbide Corp. plant, officials say.

Two tractor-trailer trucks carrying 68 drums of methyl isocyanate rolled into Georgia on Saturday after the shipment, rejected by Brazil in the wake of the Dec. 3 Indian tragedy, was unloaded from a ship in Norfolk, Va.

State and federal environmental officials opened the shipment and determined there were no leaks, said Leonard Ledbetter, commissioner of the Georgia Department of Natural Resources.

Processing the chemical into the pesticide Temik should begin this week and may last through January, said Ledbetter, adding that government inspectors will remain on hand to watch the process.

"Between the two groups of technical people — OSHA's in the plant and ours onitoring the environmental aspects - we think the processing can proceed without problems," he said.

State police in Virginia, North Carolina and Georgia accompanied the trucks as they traveled south to Woodbine, along the same route taken by an earlier shipment that was rejected by France.

"This material has been safely transported in a routine manner for many years," Union Carbide spokeswoman Mary Anne Ford, who accompanied the shipment from Norfolk, told reporters who crowded the gate of the Woodbine

Asked whether future shipments would receive similar escorts, she replied, "I would hope not."
The company had 148 drums of the chemical on hand before the Methyl isocyanate had been shipped to the Woodbine plant in drums loaded on trucks for 20 years

The plant's barrel unloading facility was reactivated under OSHA surveillance this month so the plant could receive a first shipment of barrels rejected by Brazil.

until two years ago, when tanker trucks began to be used, plant officials said.

One of the two trucks carrying methyl isocyanate is shown entering the gate at Union Carbide Corporation's Woodbine plant. The trucks were escorted dow I-95 through Georia by two Georgia State Patrol cars and a state Environmental Protection division van.

Friends, relatives: Bombing suspect a regular churchgoer year-old construction worker charged with four bombings at clinics where abortions were performed was a regular church-goer who was not active in right-to-life demonstrations, say people who know him. Matthew J. Goldsby was arrested Sunday on charges of violating federal gun-control and explosives laws for three bombings on Christmas Day and one in June, federal auth-

"He's an exceptionally fine Christian boy," said the mother of Goldsby's fiancee, who spoke on condition that she not be identified.

John R. Goldsby, the suspect's father, said that he had not seen his son for two years but that he had a theory on the bombings.

"I think it was religious convictions taken to some sort of terrorist extreme," the elder Goldsby said. To me, that is strictly what it is, and if he did it I don't condone it whatso-

Dan Conroy, head of the U.S. "In fact, I don't ever remember him Bureau of Alcohol, Tobacco and missing a church service. He's not Firearms' Miami office, said the Goldsby, of Cantonment, a rural area north of Pensacola, allegedly used "fairly sophisticated" blackpowder pipe bombs to blow up offices of two doctors and The Ladies Center on Christmas Day, causing $375,000 in damage. Goldsby also was charged with a June 25 bombing at The Ladies Center,

One of the doctors, William Permenter, praised the work of the ATF agents, saying, "These guys have really worked hard."

Twenty-nine abortion-related facilities across the nation have been bombed or burned in the past three years. Conroy said. He indicated that Goldsby's arrest brought the number of cases apparently solved to 12.

In New York, FBI Chief William Webster said his agency would continue to let the ATF handle the

We have a federal presence here, the highest priority that the ATF can give," Webster said Sunday on the CBS-TV program "Face the Nation" before the arrest was announced. "And we are here to help them.

The FBI said recently the bombings could be considered terrorist acts, and therefore the job of the FBI, if there were evidence they were the work of an organized Conroy refused to say what led investigators to suspect Goldsby, but he said the searches of his home and vehicle were productive. A $10,000 reward offered by the bureau failed to elicit any responses, he said.

Goldsby faces a maximum penalty of more than 100 years in prison, said Stephen E. Higgins, director of the ATF, in Washington. A final list of charges will await action by a federal grand jury on Jan. 15, said Assistant U.S. Attorney Susan Novotny.

The Rev. David Shofner of West Pensacola Baptist Church, who with Burt led picketing at all three facilities, said the arrest would clear the names of anti-abortion protesters. "If it's him, I'm glad they caught the person," Shofner said. "It'll take the pressure off us.'

The Christmas Day bombings occurred before dawn within 22 minutes of each other at the three clinics, investigators said. Combined damage estimates exceeded $375,000.

Surgeon seeks artificial heart transplant patient

Devries inspired by Schroeder's progress

LOUISVILLE, Ky. (AP) - Dr. William C. DeVries says there is "no reason not to go ahead now" with the implant of a third permanent artificial heart in view of the progress being made by William Schroeder.

Schroeder, 52, spent the weekend in his room at Humana Hospital Audubon watching football with his family, said spokesman Bob Irvine. The Jasper, Ind., man continued to make progress "slowly but steadily" and was in serious but stable condition Sunday as he entered his sixth week with the heart.

"We want our next patient to be almost identical to Bill Schroeder," said DeVries, who implanted Schroeder's Jarvik-7 mechanical pump on Nov. 25 and the first heart in Barney Clark in 1982.

Consenting to an artificial heart implant "takes a lot of courage," he said in an interview published Sunday in the Los Angeles Times. DeVries said he is seeking another 'dynamic, forceful fighter, a guy like Mr. Schroeder who wants to

An evaluation team will begin interviewing several prospective implant patients this week at Humana Heart Institute, said DeVries, the only surgeon authorized by the U.S. Food and Drug Administration to perform the oper-

DeVries said he is convinced that the artificial heart given to Schroeder five weeks ago has given him a better and longer life.

"To criticize the program is to criticize scientific endeavor and investigation," he said. "To say, 'We don't want you to look because we're afraid of what you'll find is a very anti-intellectual feeling that would inhibit medical treatment the world DeVries said he envisions a day when people who suffer heart attacks that destroy heart muscle would come to a hospital and "the doctors can take an artificial heart off the shelf and sew it in.

Doctors could conduct check-ups with "screwdrivers and wrenches and voltmeters," he added.

WEATHER SUMMARY

Cold weather expected to usher in new year

Heavy coats will be needed for tonight's festivities as the new year is expected to bring in colder temperatures, according to the National Weather Service at Midland Regional Airport.

Forecasters are calling for cloudy skies tonight and Tuesday. Temperatures are expected to drop to the mid-20s tonight warming to highs near 40 New Year's Day. Tonight's northerly winds at 10 to 20 mph will become northeasterly and gusty Tuesday.

Sunday's high of 56 was 26 degrees below the record set in 1951. This morning's low was 33 degrees above the record of 14 set in 1976.

Heavy rains drenched Texas' hill country early today, sending rivers out of their banks, closing highways and forcing the evacuation of some residents whose homes were threatened by rising waters.

Rains of up to 8 inches were reported throughout the hill country, and the National Weather Service said more rain was expected from another storm system moving in from Mexico.

At 4:45 a.m., virtually all of the western two-thirds of the state was placed under a flash flood watch, and weather officials warned that the approaching thunderstorms could contain high winds, hail and extremely heavy

Oklahoma is under a winter storm watch for tonight, and the National Weather Service said light rain along Texas' northern edge could change to snow tonight, accompanied by low temperatures of near 20, the weather service added.

Dense fog, drizzle and light rain was reported throughout Central Texas, with visibility near zero reported in some places.

Heavy overnight accumulations were reported as far north as Abilene, where weather officials said the ground was saturated and streets were

At Leakey, 45 miles southwest of Kerrville, Sheriff Buck Miller said about 4 a.m. that he had never seen rain as heavy as those that started in Real

County late Sunday afternoon and continued all night long. Miller said he was waiting for daylight so he could check out the situa-

"All the roads are closed at this time in the county except (U.S.) 83. It's open every now and then. We just don't know what we've got. I'm afraid it's not going to be good when we get out and see," Miller said.

Extremely heavy rains were reported overnight in western Real County, near Camp Wood, off the Nueces River.

Shortly after midnight, after several hours of rains, the National Weather Service issued flash flood warnings for Uvalde, Real, Bandera, Kerr and Gillespie counties, and flood warnings for the Frio and Sabinal rivers and the Seco and Hondo creeks.

Low-water crossings and farm roads throughout the hill country were under water from rains that began late Sunday afternoon and continued all night long. Up to 8 inches of rain was reported across the area. Residents of the region were told to expect still more rain.

A strong upper-level disturbance was swinging out of the northern sections of Mexico and toward North Texas. Several families were evacuated along the banks of the Guadalupe River in and around Kerrville and Center Point, which is about 10 miles southeast Heavy thunderstorms spawned tornadoes near Seguin in Guadalupe

County Sunday afternoon. Small twisters were observed across a 25-mile stretch about 5 p.m. Sunday, said Al Bierstedt of the county sheriff's office. Amid a tornado warning in Comal County, strong winds were reported in the Canyon Lake area, while to the north in Hays County a tornado touched down and left damaged billboards and debris, authorities said.

Wells said roofs of two houses were ripped off, trees were uprooted, and several storage buildings were destroyed on the east side of the San Marcos city limits.

NATION

Snow moved across the northern United States, dipped into the nation's mid-section and threatened northern New England today while rain was widespread elsewhere, prompting flood warnings in Texas and New York.

Travelers' advisories for freezing rain were issued in southeastern Nebraska, and for snow in northern Wisconsin and central Minnesota, which had predictions for a half-foot or more.

The northern and central mountains of Colorado were under travelers' warnings for snow and winter storm watches were in effect in Oklahoma and Missouri. Snow also spread across Nebraska, Kansas, the Dakotas and

West Texas had showers and scattered thunderstorms, which led to scattered flood warnings, and rain spread from eastern Missouri to Indiana. Rain and melting snow produced by unseasonably high temperatures led Juaristi Septien said Sunday the situation was due "more to an organized movement to destabilize the national institutions than to people's dissatisfaction.' But Briones, the fire chief, said,

"It's a political affair. People became angry. There is some dissatisfaction with election results."

Jesus de la Pena Lopez, one of those gathered in the plaza, said the PRI and the government "started this thing. We want freedom. What good is it for people to go vote if the vote is not respected."

Cobos was on a trip to Mexico City and Saltillo, the state capital, in connection with his victory claim when the violence began late Saturday. An estimated 3,000 people gathered in the main plaza while Juaristi Septien, declared the winner by a narrow margin, was sworn in at the municipal building by Gov. Jose de las Fuentes.

As the governor left, the crowd began throwing rocks at two carloads of state officials, and police fired tear gas, reporters and witnesses said. A surge by the crowd forced police, armed only with clubs and tear gas, to the adjoining jail and the rioters stormed and burned the municipal building, they said.

Differing accounts said prisoners were either freed by the crowd or police or some transferred to another facility before the jail burned. Eight cars, including four police cars, were burned.

Army troops brought the situation under control by dawn Sunday.

Promises, promises

ew Year's resolutions United States. have a well-deserved reputation for going the way of spoiled milk shortly after the stroke of midnight on Dec. 31st. That's unfortunate because if all those who take the time to make resolutions kept them, the world might be better as a result.

There are any number of resolutions that come to mind for different elected individuals and others in the public spotlight that could be extremely beneficial if made in earnest and kept. For example, starting at the top:

When Ronald Reagan was elected to his first term as President he ran on the theme of getting the government "off our backs." Well, Reagan soon will be sworn into his second term, which is testimony within itself to the fact that he's been doing something right, and the government is still on our backs.

So, maybe Reagan should resolve today, before the stroke of midnight, to dedicate himself - body and soul - to doing what he said he'd try to do in 1980. He certainly wouldn't get any argument from us.

While President Reagan's "resolving," we would also enjoy seeing him include a footnote about being a bit more conciliatory in dealings with the Russians. In recent moves, the Soviets have seemed to be coming around on the idea of working more toward peace. That's good and with a little urging, the move might blossom. leaders resolved to play by the make it rules for a change and to abide

For one thing, that would reduce significantly the international pressure for the arms race and render the world much safer. It would undercut the pressure to always be one step ahead, a pressure that undeniably increases the risk of a military confrontation.

While were on the two superpowers and the topic of war, what if Reagan and Konstantin Chernenko vowed to start another arms race — to rid the world of nuclear weapons once and for all?

 It would be nice if Gov. Mark White and all the gang in Austin resolved to not increase state taxes this legislative session but, instead, to redraw the mold of state government by cutting spending, eliminating useless programs and funneling tax money into areas where it's needed, such as education, highways, water conservation and so forth. Taxpayers are overburdened anyway and, who knows, it might start a trend.

- And, on the local level, what if everyone resolved to stop being at each other's throats endlessly and to be more caring. That applies to government officials, public sector employees, average residents and really just about everyone in Midland. Tensions of a growing city push us all that way, but we all should strive to be more forgiving and understanding.

Like they say, we're all in this - Over at the Kremlin, together. It can be as pleasant or wouldn't it be nice if the Soviet as unpleasant as we want to

It truly can be a great new by the terms of arms limitation year - if we all try just a little treaties they enter into with the harder.

Pitfalls of hope this week. By all means let us talk with Soviet leaders and try to work out an accommodation, he said, but let us also avoid the pitfalls of wishful thinking.

Proxmire's advice is especially relevant in the wake of the death of Defense Minister Dmitri F. Ustinov, longtime head of the Soviet military-industrial complex, and the inevitable speculation that followed his

In addition to being the boss of the Soviet "Pentagon," the 76year-old Ustinov was a member of the ruling Politburo and of the Central Committee Secretariat that carries out Kremlin policies. He presided over the Soviet military buildup of recent years. Western experts also believe that he was powerful in internal Kremlin politics. The West obviously has an interest in how the power vacuum left by his death is filled.

Several unusual events followed Ustinov's death last week. First, in a sharp break with tradition, the first formal notice of his passing came from Mikhail S. Gorbachev, the heir-apparent to ailing Soviet leader Konstantin U. Chernenko, as he was leaving London. In another break with past practice, the post of defense minister went not to Grigory V. Romanov, who was in charge of funeral arrangements, but to Marshal Sergei Sokolov, a 73-year-old professional soldier. Finally, Chernenko did not attend the funeral services.

Western experts generally conclude that Gorbachev is indeed the heir-apparent to Chernenko, whose health presumably was too frail to brave Moscow's sub-zero weather for en. William Proxmire, D- the funeral. But Romanov's Wis., who has never been hopes are still alive; if he had a hard-liner on East West been named defense minister. relations, had some good advice that might have sidetracked his chance at the top job. And the appointment of an old soldier in Romanov's stead suggests a continuing reluctance by Kremlin oldsters to transfer power to younger men.

> The euphoria that surrounded Gorbachev's visit to Britain reflects the deep-seated compulsion in the West to hope and believe that a leadership change in the Kremlin will produce a change for the better in Soviet policy. It is a longing that we all share. But it is well to remember that whoever succeeds Chernenko will still have to cope with a Politburo dominated by old, rigid party veterans, and with a huge bureaucracy that has a vested interest in present policies at home and abroad.

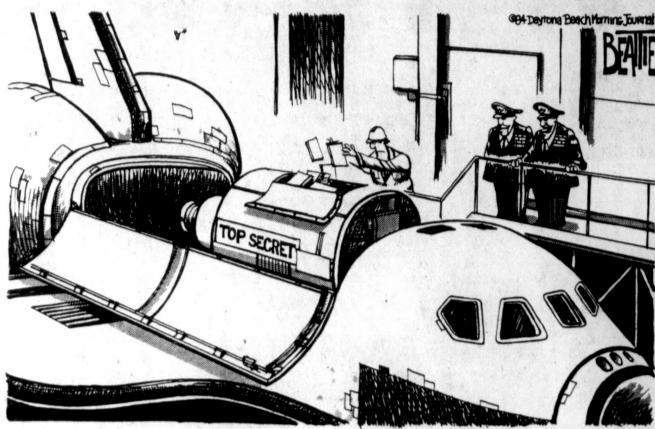

> Many outside experts are optimistic that if the 53-year-old Gorbachev does ascend to the top leadership post he will try to inaugurate a period of quiet in foreign relations while the Kremlin deals with pressing economic problems. But even if the experts are right, which is far from certain, experience suggests that any change in Soviet posture will be slow and evolu-

'Mob' won't celebrate tonight

while millions of American families celebrate their hopes for a brighter new year, the champagne will be a little flat for the "families" that make up the Cosa Nostra underworld.

If they're at all realistic. mobsters from boss to button man will be toasting each other, not with "Auld Lang Syne,' but with a mournful rendition of Those

ing Up That Old Gang of Mine.' The numbers alone are enough to chill any underworld festivities: In 1981 there were 515 convictions of organized crime figures; in 1983, there were 1,331. And many of those convicted were high-level mob bosses, like Carlos Marcello of New Orleans, Frank Balestrieri of Milwaukee, Russell Bufalino of Pennsylvania, James T. Licavoli of Detroit and Eugene Smaldone of Denver. There goes Frank, there goes

Jack Anderson

But even the impressive figures don't tell the whole story. As FBI Assistant Director Oliver "Buck" Revell told my associate Tony Capaccio, mob bosses can often run their family crime businesses from their prison cells. So the Justice Department has been indicting the entire leadership on grounds that the 'family" itself constitutes a criminal

This not only cripples the organizations' tight administration, but allows the government to seize bank accounts and other assets that keep the criminal cartels functioning. This tactic has been used in Los Angeles, Denver, Cleveland and Mil-

The latest chapter in the government's war on organized crime is due to unfold on Wednesday (Jan. 2) when a federal judge in New York will set a trial date for nine indicted members of the Joseph Colombo family. Even though the 100-member crime group declined in influence after the 1971 gunshot wounding of Colombo and his death in 1978, the family is still regarded by law enforcement experts as perhaps the third strongest of New York City's five crime families. Two of the Colombo bosses, Carime Persico and John "Sonny' Franzese, are already in prison, and the latest indictment names Persico on bribery counts stemming from his current tour in the federal pen.

Here are some other develop ments in the new year that should mute any merrymaking by the Colombo crime family tonight: On Jan. 28, Martin Hodas, a family associate known as Times Square's "King of the Peep Show," will be sentenced for his role in an attempt to flood Canada with hardcore pornographic video tapes. Gerry Langella, whom the G-men have identified as the boss of day-to-day Colombo operations, faces charges that he conspired with a concrete-workers' union official to extort 10 New York area firms of amounts ranging from $700 to $29,000 since 1981.

The crime family's legal adviser, or "consiglieri," 79-year-old Thomas "The Old Man" DiBella, is charged with extorting $800 per home from the MJR Construction Co. at the Driftwood Landing development in Atlantic Beach, N.Y

tion as an official of two restaurant workers' union locals to extort money from such Big Apple restaurants as Cafe Ziegfeld on West 45th Street and Ciro's at One Lincoln Plaza.

Frank "Beansie" Melli, a family "soldier," has been charged for his role in the alleged fencing of $2.2 million in stolen Arnex watches and $700,000 worth of Oriental art objects stolen from the Robert Ellsworth Gallery in Manhattan.

Another family capo, Benny Aloi, has been charged with loansharking - charging the owners of Sylvie's clothing store in New York City 2 percent weekly interest on a $50,000 loan. This shylock activity is said to have occurred in 1982, while Aloi was being given $30,595.99 in gambling credits and freebies by Atlantic City casinos.

ROACH UPDATE: Sex is a touchy subject among members of Congress, but it may be the solution to the cockroach problem on Capitol Hill that I wrote about recently.

Gary Short of Rancho Mirage, Calif., runs an outfit called Biological Controls, and he sells a "roachbuster" machine that he claims is sure death for the ubiquitous little insects. As I understand it, the gizmo emits a scent that attracts female cockroaches onto a grill. The female in turn puts out a scent that lures the nearest male roach. The electrically charged grill then zaps the lovebugs into a pan of glue under-hat do health nuts, anti-apartheid demonstrators, and the decline of democracy all have in common? They are all symptoms of a people who no longer know why they exist.

What purpose does political freedom serve? To allow people to eat, sleep and have mals in the forest do those things and slaves in the most repressive of nations are allowed to do those things. Political freedom is not necessary for those activities. Well, perhaps the purpose is to allow as many people as possible to get rich. That is often voiced as the great virtue of the capitalistic system — it allows people to advance materially as far as their ability and luck will take them.

Unfortunately, wealth has a limited value. You can only wear one pair of shoes at a time, sleep in one bed at a time, and eat a certain amount of food no matter what the size of your bank account is. True, if you are wealthy, you can sleep in a bigger bed, eat a wider variety of food, and pay more for your shoes than any shoes could possibly be worth. You can afford the most expert medical care. You can afford more expensive amusements.

But in the end the wealthy as well as the poor grow old, weak and die and at just about the same age. There is no difference between the corpse of Nelson Rockefeller and the corpse of an Indian who died in Bhopal except that as in life one is encased in more expensive surroundings than the other.

At best, the function of wealth is only to make more comfortable and more convenient the transition between birth and death. In so far as the capacity of wealth to do that is concerned, it makes no difference whether the wealth is acquired by honest labor or by murder and theft. The rulers of the Soviet Union live as comfortably as any capitalist.

The dilemma of the Western intellectual is that he threw out God and has nothing with which to replace the diety. And without deity, he cannot think of any purpose for living and he has no moral framework for his values. Consequently he is left with situational ethics which is no ethics. Indeed, if humans are nothing more than a chemical accident on an insignificant cinder in a meaningless universe, there is no point to anything. You might as well while away your few hours of life doing anything which gives you pleasure.

That is why some people become obsessive about their health. Unable to think of any purpose which good health might serve, they make good health an end in itself. They want to feel good not in order to be able to accomplish something but just for the sake of feeling good. Psychologically, the health addict and the drug addict are doing the same thing.

That is why people act in such contradictory ways on foreign pol-icy matters. Without a moral framework, they based their values on superficial appearances or their own selfish interests. The mechanics of government, however, are valueneutral. Adolph Hitler was elected. Jews and other enemies of the Third Reich were legally exterminated. The Soviet Union has a constitution. a parliament, laws, courts, and elec-

The emptiness of this position was never made more clear than when Lyndon Johnson justified the Viet-nam War on the basis that the purpose was simply to allow the South Vietnamese to elect whatever kind of government they wanted including, presumably, a communist government.

These morally empty people can easily seize on South Africa as bad because it does not allow a part of its citizenry to vote. They see nothing wrong with Zimbabwe, which is far more repressive of its citizens. because its citizens presumably elected their oppressor. They see nothing inconsistent with advocating no trade with South Africa for not allowing people to vote while advocating trade with China which committed genocide in Tibet and has murdered 40 to 50 million of its own citizens.

Thus, the intellectual entrusted with the leadership of the democracies, drifts or becomes paralyzed while the totalitarians advance inexorably. The totalitarians have consciously made power their purpose and base their morality on the acquisition of power. Whatever advances the goal is good; whatever impedes it, is bad.

That's why the outcome of the contest between freedom and totalitarianism will be decided by the totalitarians and the religious believers. They alone believe that human beings have a purpose worth dying to achieve. Only those who live by faith — either in God or in a secular religion like communism — are willing to make sacrifices. The person who can see no reason for living will seldom see any reason for sacrificing his comfort, much ss for dying. Such a person is eas-

ASHINGTON — Caught in sands of a conservative firestorm Ethiopians against his move to purge and other Reaganites from the State Department, Secretary of State George Shultz backtracked a little by asking a key victim of his Christmas Massacre - Assistant Secretary Richard T. McCormack - to stay on.

McCormack was a top aide to Sen. Jesse Helms, leader of the Republican right wing, before taking the State Department post in charge of economic affairs. As such, he was a prime target for Shultz's housecleaning. But the firestorm of criticism reached the Oval Office and President Reagan with such force that Shultz took a quiet step back.

McCormack has not decided whether to accept Shultz's offer, and it is uncertain whether the secretary wants to keep him in his present job or move him elsewhere. The offer, however, is solid evidence that Shultz knows he overplayed his hand in attempting his purge with surreptitious speed over the Christmas holidays.

OMB'S STARVATION POLICY President Reagan is being warned by the State Department that unless he reverses Budget Director David Stockman's decision to reduce U.S. famine relief funds for starving Africans to a mere $100 million, he will face "a runaway Congress" that will radically increase starvation aid and make him look heartless.

Dole five days later was elected majority leader by senatorial colleagues who expect him to steer a course relatively independent of Reagan. The letter to alternates and delegates showed Dole assuming different posture in keeping his foot in the 1968 presidential water.

The mystery about how long Michael K. Deaver, White House deputy chief of staff, will stay on with President Reagan was deepened by his December telephone conversations with Washington real estate men about buying a house. In one such talk, Deaver was talking about looking at houses in the $500,000 to $700,000 range. Since such a home is well beyond his means as a federal employee whose income disclosure statements show he has no personal fortune, colleagues concluded he is about to take a well-paying job in the private

But longtime associates of Deaver contend he never will leave the president, and that the first lady will insist that he stay. If so, he was just window shopping with the realtors.

'NO' TO VIGUERIE

New Rightist Richard A. Viguerie was politely rejected when he tried to hire Lee Atwater, deputy national chairman of the victorious Reagan-Bush campaign, to run his contemplated 1985 quest for the Republican nomination to be lieutenant governor of Virginia.

Atwater, who is joining the presti-ious Republican campaign firm of Black, Manafort & Stone, had an excuse: the firm is committed to Rep. Stan Parris, seeking the Republican nomination for governor, and does not manage two statewide candidates in the same state. But it was an easy no for Atwater.

That's because Viguerie's computerized mass-mailings for conservative causes and his outspoken rhetoric have rubbed mainstream Republicans, including some Reagan administration insiders, the wrong way. Helping elect him in his first campaign for office could compli-cate relations with other Republicans for Atwater and his new firm.

Fahd Kawasmeh's coffin, wrapped in a red, white and black Palestinian flag, was placed in a flower-draped jeep bedecked by portraits of the victim, who was gunned down in front of his home Saturday by assailants using silencer-equipped pistols. He was a member of the PLO's executive committee.

The chairman of the Palestine Liberation Organization, Yasser Arafat, accused Syria on Sunday of masterminding the assassination of Kawasmeh, a former mayor of Hebron in response to the burial request in the Israeli-occupied West Bank of Hebron remained in doubt.

Kawasmeh was a leading supporter of efforts to develop a joint PLO-Jordanian stand on solving the Arab-Israeli conflict.

In 1983, Arafat negotiated with Jordan's King Hussein toward a possible peaceful settlement of the Arab-Israeli conflict. The PLO's National Council, its policy-making body, in November authorized further study of such a Jordan-PLO

PLO oppose that strategy.
A caller telephoned the French news agency Agence France-Presse and claimed responsibility for the attack in the name of Black September, a radical Palestinian group bitterly at odds with Arafat and his policies.

The caller reportedly said Kawas-

Hussein and other senior Jordanian officials met with Arafat and a Palestinian delegation on Sunday night at the royal palace in Amman, the government announced. Details of the talks were not revealed.

In Tel Aviv, Israel, Foreign Minister Yitzhak Shamir was quoted by Israel Television on Sunday as saying that the killing of Kawasmeh should be a lesson to Hussein not to cooperate with the PLO.

Israeli leaders have expressed concern that the recent rapprochement between Hussein and Arafat could signal renewed guerrilla activity from Jordan. No arrests in Kawasmeh's killing have been announced.

Vietnamese, Cambodians continue fight near border camp

NONG SAMET, Thailand (AP) -Vietnamese occupation troops and Cambodian guerrillas fought at close range in the border resistance camp of Rithisen today, the seventh straight day of combat, Thai military sources said.

Vietnamese troops were holding firm inside Rithisen and fighting also was reported around at least five other guerrilla bases along the Thai-Cambodian border, Thai and guerrilla sources said.

The Thai officials, who were monitoring developments from the Thai- the day as the Khmer People's Quarterbacks Beware!

It was a rough day on quarterbacks in the NFL Sunday as Washington's Joe Theismann is buried by sack happy Chicago Bears in photo above while Denver's John Elway grimaces as he is hit by Pittsburgh's Bryan Hinkle.

Sack Pack makes life miserable for Theismann

WASHINGTON (AP) - The Washington Redskins knew all about the Chicago Bears' record-breaking Sack Pack. They just couldn't do much about it.

"It was kind of like being on the freeway at rush hour — without a car," said Washington quarterback Joe Theismann, who was sacked seven times by Dan Hampton, Richard Dent and their cohorts as the Bears beat the Redskins 23-19 and ended their dreams of a third straight Super Bowl trip.

Steve Fuller, the backup for the injured Jim McMahon and himself coming back from a month on the injured list, threw touchdown passes of 16 yards to Dennis McKinnon and 75 to Willie Gault, and Walter Payton, who rushed for 104 yards, threw a 19-yard option pass for another touchdown to Pat Dunsmore.

But Chicago's surprising air attack was overshadowed by its pass rush, that registered a league-record 72 sacks in a 10-6 regular season and came out on top of a vicious sack duel with the Redskins in the final quarter. Washington, trailing by six points, started inside the 50 three times; and three times they came away with nothing, and most of the time, they went backwards.

DENT, who had three sacks and Hampton, who had 2½, were constantly meeting at Theimsann. Even when they didn't get him, they forced him into passes to nowhere.

"We had a diet of fish, chicken and beef all week. We were hungry for pork," Hampton said in a reference to the fabled "Hogs" of Washington's offensive line.

'Theismann was shell-shocked. He didn't know where he was half the Hogs, said. "We didn't do the job." The victory, Chicago's first in a post-season contest since they beat the New York Giants 1963 in the NFL championship game, puts the Bears one game away from the Super Bowl. They will play in San Francisco against the 49ers, who finished the regular season 15-1 and beat the Giants 21-10 on Saturday.

FOR THE Redskins, it ends a dream of becoming the first team to win three consecutive NFC titles and it was their first playoff loss ever at Robert F. Kennedy in eight

If the Chicago defense was no surprise, Fuller's 211 passing yards were considering his second-string status, his month on the injury list and the fact that he's known more as a scrambler than a passer.

We didn't run up a lot of points, but we moved the football on them and that gave us confidence early on," said Fuller, one of six quarterbacks the Bears used this season. We weren't going to leave anything out there on the field. We weren't going to give them anything and we weren't going to let them take any-

Washington, which finished the season 11-6, led only once, 3-0 on Mark Moseley's 25-yard field goal midway through the first quarter. But the Bears took a 10-3 lead at the half on a 34-yard field goal by Bob Thomas and a 19-yard touchdown pass from Payton to Dunsmore, a tight end. The touchdown, on a fakereverse option pass, was the third touchdown pass this season for the NFL's leading career rusher, who finished the game with 104 yards on 24 carries.

Steelers pressure pays off, 24-17

DENVER (AP) — The Pittsburgh Steelers' game plan was to run the ball and keep pressure on Denver Bronco quarterback John Elway, and while the result wasn't exactly artistic, the efficiency with which they pulled it off was awe-inspiring.

Frank Pollard rushed for 99 yards and two touchdowns, and Walter Abercrombie added 75 yards. The Steeler defense sacked Elway four times and intercepted him twice, including safety Eric Williams' 28yard return that set up Pollard's clinching score with 1:59 remaining to give the Steelers a 24-17 National Football League playoff victory.

Pittsburgh, which had the worst regular-season record of any division winner at 9-7, now advances to the American Conference championship game next week against the Miami Dolphins in the Orange Bowl. Denver had a 13-3 regular-season

History is on the Steelers' side. Denver and Pittsburgh had met twice before in divisional playoff action, and both times the winner went on to play in the Super Bowl. .

'Our run blocking was exceptional," Steeler Coach Chuck Noll said. "Against Miami, we'll have to run the ball just like we did today."

The difference in the game was their ability to run the ball and our inability to run it," said Denver Coach Dan Reeves, whose team gained only 51 yards rushing compared to the Steelers' 169.

"GOING IN, we knew we had to get our running game going. We didn't do it. To get our passing game going, we had to handle the blitz, and we just didn't handle it. You have to give their defense credit. They did an excellent job."

Noll was pleased by his team's ability to bounce back from adversity. The Steelers recovered from .

two first-quarter fumbles deep in their own territory, from a blocked punt that gave Denver possession at the Steeler 4-yard line, and from a 17-10 third-quarter deficit. What happened to our team early could have knocked the pins out from under anybody," Noll said. "Our comeback shows what this team is made of. Denver came into the game with the fifth-best rushing defense in the NFL, and had held opponents under 100 yards on the ground in its last five games.

No. 1 vote still up in air, claims NBC poll

MIAMI (AP) — Almost 70 percent of the voters in the AP college football poll are still undecided about the eventual national champion despite No. 1-ranked Brigham Young's 13-0 record, according to a survey taken by NBC-

Rich Assenzio, administrator of NBC Sports, said Sunday the network reached 58 of the 60 AP voters and 41 of them - 68.3 percent said they had not settled on Brigham Young as the national champion.

The other 17 said they would vote for BYU regardless of the outcome of Tuesday night's Orange Bowl game between runner-up Oklahoma, 9-1-1, and No. 4 Washington, 10-1, which will be televised by NBC

The survey also disclosed that Oklahoma might win the national championship if the Sooners win the Orange Bowl by two touchdowns or more, while Washington apparently has no chance to finish No. 1. The 41 undecided voters were asked how they would vote under the following circumstances: 1. If Oklahoma wins by less than a touchdown Oklahoma 16, BYU 15, third-ranked Florida

Let's hear it for the Cougars

Everybody complained when Houston earned the right to the host role in the Cotton Bowl. The Cougars started the season as the SWC's laughing stock and then snuck into the New Year's Day game when SMU and Texas got careless and the clock struck midnight for TCU.

Now that you've had a chance to think about it, aren't you glad it's Houston and not Texas facing Boston College Tuesday?

Out in Anaheim, sponsors of the game were fearful that the Freedom Bowl might not be certified for an encore if a minimum 40 per cent of the stadium wasn't sold, as stipulated by the NCAA.

The Freedom Bowl did meet that obligation, but when Iowa and Texas lined up for the kick off the other night the crowd was far short of 40 per cent of capacity. Many ticket purchasers opted not to come to the game because of the steady down-

AS MIGHT be expected, there was grumbling among the alumni in Austin after the A&M defeat and it was directed at Coach Fred Akers. The charge is that the Steers have had a tendency to fade in the stretch and it hasn't helped matters that Texas is 2-6 under Akers in postseason play, the games in which The Eyes of the Nation are on Texas.

Still, as lopsided as was the Iowa lacing, it didn't hurt as much as last year's loss to Georgia in the Cotton Bowl when a mistake cost the Longhorns the national championship which was just a few minutes

Dupard shakes off injury to lead SMU

HONOLULU (AP) - Jeff Atkins and Reggie Dupard of No. 10 Southern Methodist rushed for a combined 242 yards and the Mustangs escaped a last-ditch Notre Dame rally to beat the Irish 27-20 Saturday in the third annual Aloha Bowl.

Dupard, who rushed for 130 yards despite missing most of the first half with an ankle injury, scored on a two-yard run to give SMU a 27-17 lead with 6:13 left in the game. After John Carney's 31-yard field goal pulled No. 17 Notre Dame to within 27-20 with 3:15 remaining, the Irish got the ball back and drove to the SMU 16. But SMU got a big break when quarterback Steve Beuerlein overthrew an open Milt Jackson

"We got lucky," said Safety Tim Green, referring to a mixup in the SMU secondary. "They caught us good. It scared me. When I looked up and saw the ball was going to be overthrown, I was relieved. Oh man, I couldn't have lived if he caught it."

"I blew it," said Beuerlein. "I just didn't get him the ball. I choked. I think I can hit that pass 10 out of 10 times but I tried to

Second-ranked Oklahoma and fourth-ranked Washington will slug it out in the Orange Bowl on New Year's Day, hoping to steal a national championship away from unbeaten Brigham

The rest of the bowl games Monday and Tuesday will be played by teams looking not for a national title, but for respect.

"This is our first time to a major bowl game in 40 years, we we're still trying to earn respect," said Doug Flutie, the Heisman Trophy-winning quarterback who will lead Boston College against Houston in the Cotton Bowl (1:30 p.m. EST-CBS) - one of five major bowl games on New Year's "We're hungry for a win. "We didn't believe those stats," Noll said. "They play in the AFC West. They put the ball in the air a lot in that division, and they don't see many running plays.'

Denver defensive end Rulon Jones called the Steelers "the best running team we've faced all year. They kept us off-balance the entire second DENVER had two early opportunities at making the game a runaway. Steeler quarterback Mark Malone was sacked and fumbled, giving Denver possession at the Pittsburgh 23. But Rich Karlis missed a 39-yard field goal attempt.

On the next play from scrimmage, Malone fumbled the snap, and Denver recovered at the 22. Elway got Denver in the end zone, beating the blitz and hitting tight end James Wright on a 9-yard scoring pass.

Pittsburgh drew within 7-3 on a Gary Anderson field goal early in the second quarter, but Denver threatened again.

Gerald Willhite tossed a halfback pass to Steve Watson for a 52-yard gain, and Denver reached the Steeler 6, where Elway was intercepted on an attempted screen pass by nose tackle Gary Dunn.

yards and Malone's 19-yard pass to Bennie Cunningham. Pollard got the score on a 1-yard run.

Barely a minute into the second half, Denver's Roger Jackson blocked a punt, and the Broncos had the ball at the Steeler 4. But the Pittsburgh defense held, and Karlis kicked a 21-yard field goal for a 10-10

On the play before the kick, Elway was hit after releasing a pass by defensive end Keith Willis, and he came off the field limping with a groin injury. He stayed in the game, but the injury limited his mobility.

ELWAY INJURED his left knee in the fourth quarter when he was hit by Steelers linebacker Mike Merriweather while attempting a short sideline pass to Steve Watson.

After the game, Elway and his father, Stanford University Coach Jack Elway, said the quarterback would have to undergo arthscopic surgery for torn knee cartilage. Elway said it would be his second such surgery. "I've had surgery on that knee before when I was in high

"It's nothing serious," Elway said of the procedure, which usually requires two to three weeks of rehabilitation before a player can return to action.

The Steelers went ahead 10-7 late in the half with a 78-yard drive, keyed by Pollard runs of 23 and 14

Elway subsequently drove Denver 46 yards in six plays, firing a 20-yard dart to Steve Watson for the TD.

Something missing from Steelers

DENVER — His photo remains on the cover of the Pittsburgh Steelers' media guide, but he wasn't here Sunday. Franco Harris was home in Pittsburgh while the Steelers defeated the Denver Broncos, 24-17, in the Super Bowl XIX playoffs — the first time the Steelers have played a postseason game without having the National Football League's most productive postseason running back in uniform. "I'll be watching the game on television," he was saying from his Pittsburgh home, "and I'll be rooting for the Steelers. Despite the contract dispute that provoked his release by the Steelers before the season began, Harris apparently will always be a Steeler at heart. Not long after his release, he was watching the Steelers on TV when another viewer hooted his former team.

"Please don't do that," Harris said quietly.

IF THE 34-year-old fullback had continued with the Steelers this season, some Pittsburgh people believe he would have provided some needed leadership for a team that has lost so many of its Super Bowl statesmen in recent years Terry Bradshaw, Mean Joe Greene, Lynn Swann, Mel Blount.

But despite his sudden and sad departure, Franco Harris spoke tenderly of his career with

"I had 12 good years," he said. "Even though they ended the way they did, I had 12 good years and that's what I'll always remember. Things didn't work out, but there's no sense being bitter about anything. I can't let that spoil what I've had. I don't feel embarrassed in any way. Nor should he. He not only helped the Steelers win four Super Bowl games, more than any other team, but he helped them through the playoffs.

Harris rushed for a record total of 1,556 yards and caught 51 passes for 504 yards as the Steelers compiled a 14-6 postseason record. In each of five games, he galloped for more than 100 yards. including 158 in Super Bowl IX, the Steelers' first tance of the game," he said, "and also to the money aspect.

HARRIS DIDN'T play in one postseason game the 1976 American Conference championship game at Oakland, which the Raiders won, 247, dethroning the Steelers after their first two-year Super Bowl reign. He had suffered damaged ribs the week before after having gained 153 yards against the Baltimore Colts; the Steelers' other running back then, Rocky Bleier, also missed that championship game with a damaged foot.

"If we both had been healthy," Harris said, "I think we would've won that championship game and gone on to be the only team to win three straight Super Bowls."

Until he joined the Steelers in 1972 as a rookie out of Penn State, they had never qualified for a postseason game. And because of him, that first postseason game against the Oakland Raiders produced arguably the most memorable single play in any NFL postseason game - the play known ever since as the "immaculate reception."

In the closing seconds, Terry Bradshaw threw a desperation fourth-and-10 pass that richocheted off a collision between John (Frenchy) Fuqua, a Steeler running back, and Jack Tatum, a Raider safety.

After reaching down near his shoetops to catch the ball, Harris dashed 42 yards into the end zone at Three Rivers Stadium to complete a 60-yard touchdown play with 5 seconds remaining. Instead of losing, the Steelers suddenly won, 13-7,

"That play," he recalled, "was a matter of not wanting to give up, of going until the whistle blows, of reminding myself that the game wasn't over. Running downfield and seeing the ball thrown and going to the ball, I kept telling myself, 'Keep going, keep going, something will happen.' And something did."

THAT "IMMACULATE reception" is what Harris will be remembered for - not for how his Steeler career ended, not for his few weeks with the Seattle Seahawks this season. When he went to training camp with the

"I think I responded to the intensity and impor- Steelers, he had needed only 363 yards to surpass Jim Brown's total of 12,312 yards, then the NFL record. But with the Seahawks, he had only 170 yards. With a career total of 12,120, he's still 193 short. He has also been passed by Walter Payton of the Chicago Bears, who now holds the career-rushing record with 13,309 yards.

"I would have liked to have gotten the record," Harris said, "but it didn't happen."

It probably won't ever happen for Harris now, not with Payton more than 1,000 yards ahead of him. But he's hoping to play in the NFL next

"Right now I'm planning on playing another year," he said. "I'd like it to be in the NFL."

IT COULD be in the United States Football League, but his yardage there naturally wouldn't count toward his NFL total

"I'm not expecting anything to happen now," he said. "But maybe something will after the

At the moment, Harris is busy preparing for his televised four-event $100,000 "challenge" with 48year-old Jim Brown at the Tropicana Hotel in Atlantic City in two weeks. They are scheduled to run a 40-yard dash, play racquetball and one-onone basketball, and compete in one other event, as yet undetermined.

During the 1983 season, when Harris loomed as the primary threat to Brown's career-rushing total, the onetime Cleveland Browns' fullback talked about how the Steeler fullback didn't deserve to be the man to break his record. Brown talked about how Harris occasionally ran out of bounds rather than bull for another yard or two.

Brown also talked about how, at his age, he could still beat Harris over 40 yards, the distance at which football coaches time their players.

'It's not like the Superstars competition, where you know that a number of guys are not going to win a certain event," Harris said. "There's a lot more intensity in a one-on-one situation like this

NEW YORK - The free-agent market, which languished for three weeks after the draft, heated up in a hurry, and in precisely one month clubs signed the 11 most attractive free agents for a total of $49 million. So now what?

Well, for those clubs and any others that may be interested in playing the winter game next year, here is a peek at what the 1985 freeagent market could look like.

Many, very likely most, of the players eligible to be free after next season will sign new contracts with their teams before reaching the draft, but at least 100 players at this moment are in position to leave their current employers next

Looking for a hard-hitting left fielder? Jim Rice could be available. You'd rather have a base-stealing center fielder? Willie Wilson could be the man. Or a right fielder who has been a free agent before? Try

FOR THE team that has a gaping hole at shortstop, it could have Ozzie Smith and Garry Templeton to choose from. Catchers are always in demand, and next year's market could feature Butch Wynegar, Carlton Fisk and Darrell Porter.

Pitchers are in even greater demand, which means that Nolan Ryan, who was the first player to earn $1 million a year, could become the first player to sign three contracts worth $1 million or more a year. Or if a team prefers a knuckleballing brother act instead of a 96mile-an-hour fastball, Phil and Joe Niekro could be free agents

Everybody wants left-handed pitching. That could make Scott McGregor, Geoff Zahn, Larry Mc Williams, Bob Knepper and Frank Tanana valuable. For those in the market for a good late-inning relief pitcher, the group could include Bill Caudill, Al Holland, Bob Stanley and pair of Detroit dandies, Aurelio Lopez and Willie Hernandez, the American League's most valuable player and Cy Young Award winner, who continues to toy with the Tigers' offer of a four-year contract for more than $4.5 million.

Kirk Gibson, a blossoming outfielder, is another Tiger who could be a free agent. Other potential free-agent outfielders include Gary Matthews, Garry Maddox, Lonnie Smith, Terry Puhl and Claudell Washington. Among the available infielders could be Al Oliver and Rod Carew for first base, Bobby Comment

Grich for second base and Graig Nettles and Ken Oberkfell for third. Barring new contracts that would take players past the 1985 season, the Houston Astros appear to have the most players eligible, eight, while Kansas City has the most in the American League, seven. Gentlemen, start your checkbooks

THE WAY George Steinbrenner sees it, he lost Rich Gossage as a 1983 free agent to Ballard Smith on the tennis courts of La Jolla, Calif. This year, though, Steinbrenner did not lose Ed Whitson to Smith on the ski slopes of Deer Valley, Utah. Since Gossage signed with the San Diego Padres a year ago, Steinbren-ner has suggested from time to time that even before the 1983 season ended that Smith, the Padres' president, and Jerry Kapstein, Gossage's agent, had made a deal on the tennis courts of La Jolla, a San Diego suburb, where both live. Smith has denied that assertion Steinbrenner, the Yankees' owner, will not be able to make a similar allegation in the signing of Whitson, who played for the Padres the last two years. The Yankees signed the pitcher even though Smith and Tom Reich, Whitson's agent, were skiing coincidentally in Deer Valley last week, staying only about 300 yards from each other.

"I had several conversations with Ballard there," Reich said. "They were very sincere; they wanted him back. It was a good-faith effort, but it was too late.

BASED ON comments that have been made by some public officials in New Jersey, it would seem that major league teams were standing in line for the honor of playing in the state. One state official was quoted as saying that when a bill authorizing the construction of a baseball stadium was introduced in the State Legislature Dec. 6, the week of the winter meetings, it "sent shock waves" among the owners meeting in Houston. The only problem was, by the time the bill was introduced most of the owners had left Houston because their meetings had ended.

A more recent story quoted Jim Fox, who works for Donald Trump, as saying that the Pittsburgh Pirates had rebuffed an effort by Fox, on behalf of Trump, to buy the team, which is for sale. Trump, though, denied he wanted to buy the

For a team that leads the league in defense, the Philadelphia Flyers haven't been acting all that stingy

Until Sunday night, the Flyers had gone three weeks without a particularly solid defensive effort. They had given up at least three goals in every game since and three times surrendered six.

Bucks are growing up in a hurry

MILWAUKEE (AP) — The Milwaukee Bucks are growing up a little faster than expected this season.

This is considered a rebuilding year for the perennial NBA Central Division champions because of the off-season retirement of Bob Lanier and trade of Marques Johnson to the Los Angeles Clippers for Terry Cum-

But the Bucks proved their on-court maturity Sunday night in defeating the world champion Boston Celtics 11498. After an 18-point lead evaported to three, the Bucks charged back to post their eighth straight victory.

"You might expect a young team to crumble when a team like Boston cuts an 18-point lead down to only three," said Bucks guard Sidney Moncrief, who finished with a gamehigh 27 points and eight assists. "But we didn't. We kept executing our offense and playing hard."

Boston's Larry Bird hit two jumpers at the start of the fourth quarter to trim Milwaukee's lead to 82-79. Cummings then countered with a 12footer and two three-point plays and Moncrief added a baseline jumper that expanded the Bucks' lead to 92-

79 with 9:14 to go. "The offense was directed at me and Sid," Cummings said of the 10-0 spurt. "It just happened that I got the ball in real good position. It got my rhythm going a little bit." Boston, seeing its three-game winning streak come to an end, could get no closer than nine points the rest of the way The Bucks, improving to 22-11, also got 23 points apiece from Paul Pressey and Cummings Bird and Kevin McHale topped the Celtics, 26-6, with 24 points each and Dennis Johnson added 23.

"We really didn't execute our plays and rebound and didn't play physical," said Bird. "Against Milwaukee you've got to play physical and you got to take your shots at them. If you don't, they run their slow-paced game and stay right in

Milwaukee turned the ball over

After Boston's Robert Parish hit a running hook shot to tie the game 22-22, the Bucks went on a 9-2 spree to lead 32-24 at the end of the first period. Pressey sank a mid-court shot just before the horn.

Milwaukee continued to pour it on in the second quarter, increasing its lead to 54-36 on Hodges' 20-footer at 3:59. The Celtics were able to trim the margin to 60-51 at the intermission as McHale scored 16 points in the second quarter. The Bucks got strong inside play from center Alton Lister, who had

Pound at record low; dollar gains

LONDON (AP) — Despite OPEC's efforts to firm up the oil market, fears of an oil-price collapse sent the British pound to an all-time low in early trading today. The dollar was mostly higher in quiet trading and gold prices were stationary.

The pound, a petrocurrency by virtue of Britain's large North Sea reserves, was under further pressure because of turmoil in the oil markets. Dealers said that OPEC's decision over the weekend to install a new price structure and regulatory mechanism did little to dampen investors' belief that prices are headed

As a result, sterling, which hit an all-time low of $1.15825 during trading Friday before rallying to close at $1.16275, sank back early today to $1.1560.

The dollar, meanwhile, was benefitting from demand by companies that need dollars to settle 1984 debts and left the buying until the last minute.

But trading was light on New Year's Eve, and many businesses closed early because of the holiday. Markets in Zurich were shut the whole day.

In Tokyo, where trading ends before Europe's business day begins, the dollar gained sharply to close at 251.58 yen, its highest level of the year. Later, in London, it slipped to 251.15 yen. The dollar opened 1984 at 233.30 yen in Tokyo. Last Friday, it closed at

Major stock exchanges see difficult year in 1984

By NICHOLAS D. KRISTOF N.Y. Times News Service

It has been a difficult year for most major stock exchanges, with Toronto and New York losing ground and minor gains on other exchanges offset by inflation and depreciation of their currencies.

There was improvement in the fourth quarter, with most exchanges registering some rise in average share prices. Because of the pickup, and the prospect of renewed eco-nomic growth in the United States and other industrialized countries, many analysts expect 1985 to be better.

The World Index, a measure of stock prices around the globe, rose tock prices around the year, about 1 percent over the year, according to David M. Gong, a vice president of the T. Rowe Price International Fund in Baltimore. Most of that gain came in the last three months, Gong said. The index is compiled by the Geneva-based Capital International Perspective.

"Probably the outstanding performer of the year was the Japanese bank shares," he said, noting that some financial stocks doubled their value in the first and third quarters. Tokyo and Hong Kong turned in exchanges in the world. Hong Kong's average share prices have jumped about one-third in the last 12 months, much of that coming in the last three months after China and Britain reached an agreement on the future of the colony. The "one country, two systems" policy would preserve a capitalist role in Hong Kong for 50 years after it returns to Chinese rule in 1997.

Average prices on the Tokyo Exchange — which has been one of the best performers for most of the postwar period — have risen more than one-fifth this year, bolstered by a healthy export sector and anticipa-tion of the financial deregulation in

The exchange rate factor was crucial this year as the dollar continued its unexpected rise against other currencies. For example, the share rices of gold mining companies in ohannesburg rose about 20 percent during the year, but the country's currency, the rand, was falling much more quickly. So an American who invested $1,000 in such stocks at the beginning of the year, now has stocks worth much more in terms of the rand, but only about $750 at current exchange rates.

Likewise, stock price indexes in the best performance among major London gained about 20 percent over the year, but the pound depre-ciated by the same amount. On the other hand, market indexes in Australia, Singapore, Sweden and Switzerland as well as Toronto and New York lost value even in terms of their own currencies

The strong dollar also had an impact within each index, for in many countries the shares that performed the best were those of companies that exported to the United States. Their depreciated currencies made their goods cheaper in America, and their businesses flourished

Here is a roundup of activity on eight major exchanges around the

NEW YORK Although 1984 was a banner year for the American economy, jitters about economic prospects sent many Wall Street patrons ducking for cover in the bond markets. The Dow Jones industrial average of 30 major stocks lost about 50 points over the year. Despite two small rallies in the last three months, the market will end the fourth quarter about where

The year started well for most stocks, but rising interest rates alarmed many investors as the economy boomed in the first half of 1984. Enthusiasm returned in early August to the New York Stock Exchange, which is by far the lar-gest of the world's exchanges, pro-ducing a record one-week trading volume and the largest daily gain in 20 months.

But in the last three months, despite rallies in October and December, enthusiasm flagged amid concern about the Treasury Department's proposed tax plan, the burgeoning trade and budget deficits and gloomy predictions that a recession was in the offing. Many investors chose to use their money to lock in a guaranteed return from bonds and other fixed-income

"In the last quarter, the linkage between the stock market and interest rates fell apart," said Martin D. Sass, president of M.D. Sass Investors Services in New York. "You had interest rates falling and the bond market going up, but the stock market going nowhere."

Sass noted that smaller stocks not reflected in the Dow average such as some high-technology, highgrowth stocks traded over the counter - did even worse. Investors favored industry leaders that were well capitalized and had low price earnings ratios, he said.

LONDON

London's market continued in good form throughout the year and put on a fine performance in the fourth quarter. The successful sale of British Telecom shares in the fall gave the market a final spurt to about 580 on the Financial Times All-Share index, up 14 percent for the year. Most of that gain, about 10 percentage points, came in the last quarter alone.

When the quarter opened, some analysts were still skeptical about the government's ability to float British Telecom, the telephone company that a previous Labor Party government had nationalized. Those worries dragged the market down early in the quarter and again just before the stock sale at the end of November. But when the largest public offering in history was heav ly oversubscribed, the market climbed. Some analysts believe that the publicity surrounding that offering may encourage more individuals to invest in stocks, which will lift prices in the long run.

Offshore oil seismic tests being studied

Los Angeles Times Washington Post News Service

ABOARD THE ARCO RESOLU-TION - Fish, presumably to their chagrin, cannot swim with cotton stuffed in their ears.

Therefore, goes the complaint from West Coast commercial fishermen, when oil explorers commence seismic testing and firing air cannons underwater, it follows that sea bas and red snapper develop a tendency to split.

The skippers ask: Who knows what conclussion will be produced by percussion? Will it change the migration habits, hatcheries or sex lives of fish? Some marine ecologists have even expressed fears that one day, at the first crack of an oilman's acoustic signal, the California gray whales may reset rudders and migrate to Waikiki.

A sudden noise from an air or water gun only causes a whale to breathe heavily, Delworth "Dee" Chamberlain said. It does decrease his loiter time on the surface. He might also start whispering.

Apart from that, added Chamberlain, a marine biologist with the Arco's environmental sciences group, studies indicate that fish, whales, seals and otters respond to submarine rackets about the same way humans react to noisy parties in the apartment upstairs. They will finch. They will get irritated. But it's unlikely that they will move their home and habitat.

"And there is no mortality," he said, quoting one of his own written reviews. "There is no separation of infants from sea mammals." There is, he added, no greater movement of fish in response to noise than there is from the stimuli of food, weather and predators.

But many disagree with Chamberlain's views and the protests and theories ebb and flow. The Arco Resolution was participating in a study to try and determine precisely what the effects of seismic testing are. North Carolina fishermen have complained that seismic test ships were interfering with their hauls. Two years ago, a California whale activist blamed air guns for what he said was odd behavior among migrating whales and won a 30-day, threecounty ban on underwater blasting. Last year, it was salmon fishermen in Alaska. This year, California catchers of rockfish.

And then there was the bitter protest of Alan Hur, executive director of the Fisheries Protection Institute and skipper of the Omoo II out of Santa Barbara, Calif. Four years ago, he said, sound-monitoring cables and air-gun clusters streaming two miles behind one seismic boat snagged and destroyed 200 of his lobster traps.

"I went to the oil company, that I prefer remains unidentified, and their retort was: 'Sue us. We don't ve a damn.' So I went to the Pacific Coast Federation of Fishermen's Associations in Sausalito, (Calif.) and they asked me to carry this ball (protest) for the industry. That's when we took it to State Lands (Commission) and the Coastal

CAS says 1980 Ford pact should be re-examined

By H. JOSEF HEBERT Associated Press Writer

WASHINGTON (AP) - An auti safety group says a 1980 agreemen that averted a massive recall by Ford Motor Co. should be re-exa mined by the government because i failed to prevent deaths from as alleged transmission defect.

The Center for Auto Safety said Sunday that 77 people were killed in accidents in which the transmission slipped unexpectedly from park to reverse. The accidents involved 1970 through 1979 model Ford, Mercury and Lincoln Continental cars and light trucks, the center said.

In a letter to Transportation Secre tary Elizabeth Dole, the group dis puted government claims that the death rate from such accidents ha declined significantly since the agreement, which called for distrito owners of the more than 20 mil lion vehicles.

The center, a group founded by Ralph Nader, charged that the National Highway Traffic Safety Administration "has concealed the alarming increase in deaths ... by manipulating fatality statistics and by refusing to investigate - and thus count - dozens of reported Agency officials denied the auto safety group's allegations.

"Nobody's trying to do a two-step with the numbers," said NHTSA spokesman Richard Burdette. "The fact of the matter is that the (fatality) rate has decreased.

But some members of Congress also have raised concern about the agency's monitoring of the agreement reached by Ford four years ago in the waning days of the Carter administration.

Tool orders rise 32 percent in November

By DANIEL F. CUFF

N.Y. Times News Service

NEW YORK - New orders for domestic machine tools rose 32.4 percent in November from the same month a year ago, the industry's trade association said in a report that was cautiously optimistic for

"Demand for American machine tools should continue to increase in the new year," said James A. Gray, president of the National Machine Tool Builders' Association, in a statement. But he added that the outlook could change quickly if interest rates rise or manufacturing slows.

For machine tools, 1984 was a year of reasonable improvement from severely depressed 1983 and 1982, when the industry was under increasing pressure from imports and weakening prices, analysts said.

The import and pricing pressure is still there. Nevertheless, "1985 sales should increase again, but at a slower rate than 1984 as the overall economic growth slows," said Gerald Rothstein an analyst at Oppen-Rothstein, an analyst at Oppenheimer & Co. "It still will not do particularly well, certainly by any past

In its report issued for publication Monday, the trade association said that net new orders for machine tools fell 25.2 percent in November, to a level of $212.2 million, from October. Shipments rose 2 percent in November from a month earlier, to $212.4 million. Machine tools are power-driven machinery that cuts or

Economist: Mortgage rates will market keep dropping, prices will rise

By JOHN CUNNIFF

NEW YORK (AP) - If you are one of those loses people who delayed buying a house in 1984 because of high interest rates you may very well NEW YORK (AP) be offered a seat on the other side of the seesaw The stock market drifted aimlessly today

Interest rates, that is to say, are coming down in the closing session of — so what do you think is going up? Prices are going up, only a little bit right now but probably The noon Dow Jones good deal later on average of 30 industri-

What happens later on, however, depends a great deal on whether those home mortgage rates continue falling, as they have over the past few

Losers held a 4-3 lead Jack Carlson, chief economist of the National Association of Realtors, thinks they will, and Carlson has been fairly accurate about such By his calculations, fixed-rate loans have slightly in light activity dropped one percentage point and adjustable in the credit markets rate loans one-half percentage point since this past summer. And, he says, something of the sort this morning.

Phillips Petroleum
fell % to 45. A Wall may be expected "through next year." Fixed-rate mortgages fell fairly sharply in Street Journal article

November to an average of 13.42 percent for the entire month, compared with 14.05 percent in said analysts viewed the recapitalization October, according to the Federal Home Loan Loan Mortgage Corp. Adjustable mortgages were down to 12.49 perstall a recent takeover cent on loans with caps, or limits on the rates permitted in each adjustment period and for the life of the loan Carlson feels that fixed-rate loans will drop to 13 percent by the fall of 1985. Other analysts believe the declines might end during 1985's first quarter, but some of them claim rates might be as much as one point lower by then. All this is giving a boost to housing, both new and existing. Sales fell and prices stagnated in both categories of the market, but now a change seems to be under way. It's the other end of the

One of the first indications was provided by the Realtors, who announced that the median price of existing homes rose to $72,500 in October from $72,000 a year earlier. There is no certainty that prices will continue rising, but a quite formidable thesis supports the expectation. It is the thesis that high interest rates depress housing sales and lower rates bring people out in droves.

Whenever you get large movements of people toward any product in the marketplace, whether its a house or a Cabbage Patch doll, there is a tendency to bid up the price.

In housing, there is also a fundamental logic a work. When interest rates are lower so also, of course, are the monthly carrying costs. The difference might not be great — a one percentage point decline on a 25-year, $50,000 mortgage, for example, amounts to $38 a month — but it is sig-

The reason it is significant is that it might be critical. When you consider that almost every would-be homebuyer seeks the most house that can be afforded, a sum of $38 a month can seem like $100.

Moreover, small amounts if repeated grow into substantial sums, and $38 a month repeated 300 times over a 25-year period amounts to $11,400.

The important thing is to get in on the lower rates before price increases really take hold, because rising prices can offset falling rates. History demonstrates that it doesn't take more than a few months before this happens.

Meanwhile, a lot of people who count their pennies are entering the market, and there's a good chance some of them will get New Year

of options gamble

By BILL DOYLE

Q. I am a widowed senior citizen and have always invested conservatively. Recently, I was advised by someone in whom I have complete trust to take part in options, with which I am not at all familiar. I was told there is no risk in options. That I find hard to believe. What are the dangers, as well as the rewards, in buying options?

A. The straight purchase of an option is an outand-out gamble, in which you can lose every dime you put up.

A "put" option gives you the right to sell 100 shares of stock at a set price for a fixed period of time. A "call" option is just the opposite and gives you the right to buy 100 shares of stock at a set price for a fixed period of time.

You buy a put when you think the price of the stock on which the option is written is going to fall. You purchase a call when you believe the price of the stock involved is going to rise.

London morning fixing $309.00 up $0.70. Because the purchase price of an option is way below the price of the stock, you can make much more money in options than in stocks. But, if the stock's price doesn't move far enough in the direction you bet it would by the time the option expires, you're out all the money you paid.

However, there is a way to deal in options at no risk. You can sell options on stocks you own -"covered call options." In that case, you get the 'premiums" — the prices option buyers pay. Perhaps that's what your trusted adviser is suggest-

Many stockholders sell covered call options and get nice extra income from the premiums. You won't take on any real risk by selling a covered call option, but you will have to sell your stock to the option owner if the stock's price rises far

Q. The 200 shares of electric utility company preferred stock I own are "callable" at $26.65 a share through Oct. 1, 1987, and then at prices gradually declining to $25.55 in 1992. Does this mean the company must redeem my shares at those prices during those time

A. No. It means the company has the right but not the obligation - to buy back the stock and redeem it at those prices. Like many pre-ferred stocks, yours has a "call provision."

The prices at which preferred stocks can be called are set at the time the stocks are issued. The call prices are never below the prices at which the stocks were originally sold. In many cases, the call prices are set on a sliding scale and decline over the years - but never fall below the original issue prices.

The call prices give stockholders "call protection," meaning the preferred stocks can't be redeemed by the companies below the predeter-

Companies call in preferred stocks when money costs decline and the companies can issue new securities paying lower dividends or interest. Many corporate and municipal bonds have call provisions similar to preferred stocks.

Q. You have used the term "capital assets" in reference to capital gains tax. Exactly what is a capital asset?

A. The Internal Revenue Service's Publication 17 says, "for the most part, everything you own and use for personal purposes, pleasure or invest-ment is a capital asset." It goes on to give such examples as stocks, bonds, houses, household furnishings, cars, coin and stamp collections, gems and jewelry, gold, silver or other metals.

You're required to report the profit from the sale of any capital asset as a capital gain on your federal income tax return. And you can report a capital loss on the sale of a capital asset held as an investment.

However, you cannot take a capital loss on a capital asset used for personal purposes.

For instance, if you pay $12,000 for stock and sell it for $4,000, you have an $8,000 capital loss to report. But, if you purchase a car for $12,000 and sell it for $4,000 you're not allowed to take a capi-

Capacity to develop allergy may be inherited

Dear Dr. Solomon: I've had allergies as far back as I can remember, I know of young children who seem to have allergies from the moment they were born. Since these allergies can start so early in life, does that mean that they are inherited? - Mrs. E.K., Boise, Idaho Dear Mrs. K.: An allergic disease as such is not inherited, but the susceptibility to the development of an allergy may be. Some evidence to support this theory is that allergies tend to run in However, the individual's environment is also an important factor. This includes the patient's exposure to allergens, the substances that induce allergies. These allergens are encountered in the foods we eat and the air we breathe.

While the heredity factor cannot be avoided, allergic patients should try to avoid the environ-mental factors, such as house dust or cigarette smoke, that may trigger a reaction.

Dear Dr. Solomon: Anyone who goes to the beach or to a swimming pool knows that women get a lot more varicose veins than men. Why is this, and what, if anything, can be done about it? — Millie, Syracuse, N.Y.

Dear Millie: Women do develop varicose veins more often than men, in a ratio of about four to one. The veins commonly first appear during pregnancy, and there is often a familial tendency to their development.

Patients with varicose veins may prevent complications by avoiding standing for extended periods of time. If the condition is mild, the use of support hose may prove helpful. Otherwise, surgical stripping is a possibility.

Dear Dr. Solomon: I don't have what I would call sensitive skin, but whenever I become more active I seem to have trouble with infections. This not only happens during the summer months when I am most active, but also during the cold weather months. Is there something about physical activity that makes a person get infections?—

Dear Bruce: Dr. Rodney S.W. Basler, of the University of Nebraska College of Medicine in Omaha, points out the perspiration may be a casue of various skin infections, and thus may be associated particularly with participation in athletics. Wearing a swimsuit for a prolonged period of time may also be a cause of infection.

Other skin problems may be weather related They include exposure to cold, which may cause frostbite, and exposure to sun, which may cause sunburn. As you note in your letter, these skin problems are not limited to a single season of the

Dear Dr. Solomon: I know you often have said that the earlier you find out about a disease, the better the chance that it will be cured. I would like to know how this applies to breast cancer. I would also like to know what it is that makes one woman more likely than another woman to get breast cancer. — Ms. L.J., Wilkes-Barre, Pa.

Dear Ms. J.: If a woman is found to have a mass that measures less than one conetimeter, she would have an 85 percent chance of a 10-year survival. Moreover, the earlier the lesion would be detected, the less extensive the surgical proce-dure that would be required, and the better that possibility of reconstructive surgery following the operation.

Among the risk factors for breast cancer are family history of breast cancer, particularly in the woman's mother or sister; not having children or haveing had a first child after the age of 34 years; a history of cancer in on breast; and radiation exposure as, for example, in the treatment of acne.

The biggest beneficiary of rising prices has been the tobacco sector, which rose 24 percent. The main success here was BAT Industries, the conglomerate that pleased investors by selling its cosmetics business and agreeing to acquire Hambro Life Assurance PLC for $720 million. Insurance brokers also did well, climbing 23 percent as a result of the strong dollar and takeover rumors. The retail sector and packaging and papers also did well in the last quarter.

It has been a bad period, however, for the two largest sectors, oil and electronics. Oil shares fell 10 percent, while the electronics group edged down 1 percent. Britain's General Electric Co., whose shares make up half the electronics sector, supported its shares with a buy-back program in November, but they subsequently declined.

PARIS

If French investors propose a toast to the Paris Bourse's performance in 1984, they will probably pull out only a modest table wine. Equities rose steadily until October, when they peaked. Since then they have been hovering at about the same level, 15 percent above the beginning of 1984.

The index compiled by the Compagnie des Agents de Charge began theyear at 156 and rose to 179 by the end of the third quarter. After reaching 183 two months ago, it has hardly moved, and then only down-

Gerard Glinvil, an investment adviser with Credit Agricole, a major bank, said two great uncer-tainties were affecting the Bourse.

"In 1984 Mr. Mitterrand's policies have favored corporate rather than individual investors," he said, referring to President Francois Mitterrand, a Socialist. "But with a general election in the spring of 1986, he may modify this strategy to gain electoral support." In addition, many investors are postponing investment decisions until 1984 company results have been published in 1985, Glinvil added.

Volume slipped this year below last year's healthy figures. Trading for the first 11 months of the year dropped 6 percent, to 87 million shares. Analysts said that President Mitterrand's nationalizations had reduced the number of shares available on the Bourse. So more money has been available to buy fewer stocks, pushing up prices and making the index appear strong, even though trading has been weak.

Other experts said that the index has been bolstered by foreign investment. "U.S. and British concerns have been particularly active," said Geoffrey Reen, a Paris stockbroker. "This has helped keep the index near its 1984 high.

Reen noted that foreign investors seem particularly drawn to the French retail sector. As a result of this trend, he cited a rise of almost 100 percent during 1984 in the share price of Darty, the electric goods retailer, and an almost 60 percent increase in the stock price of Carrefour, the supermarket chain. "These companies have positioned themselves well in the market and their prospects for 1985 are good," he

TORONTO

Toronto's Stock Exchange is stumbling badly. The Exchange's 300 index is down about 6 percent over the year. The decline is the first since 1981 and only the second in the

In the fourth quarter, after Brian Mulroney won a landslide for his Progressive Conservative Party in national elections, the market stopped sinking and drifted along almost unchanged.

Slack demand for Canadian commodities such as oil, nickel and lumber has contributed to the slumping market. The overall metals index is down 23.3 percent, and Richard Anstett, who monitors the index for the Toronto Exchange, said, "Metals took their worst kicking in 10 years." Major metal stocks such as Noranda, Alcan and Cominco lost more than a quarter of their value. Falling gold prices also have hurt Canada, which is the third-largest gold producer, although considerably behind South Africa and the Soviet Union.

A rare booming sector was the automotive industry, which benefited from the strong United States dollar and a free-trade agreement with the United States in cars and automotive parts. Stocks of companies such as Ford Canada and Hayes Dana, the parts manufac-turer, were among the biggest gainers in Canada. (MORE)

Real estate and communications companies also did well. Cadillac Fairview, the real estate holding company controlled by the Bronfman family, was up 43 percent, and the Toronto Sun newspaper chain rose by 39 percent for the year.

The slow trading in Toronto, by far the busiest of the five Canadian exchanges, means that half of the member brokerages have lost money. Total profits for the 78 member firms were only $2 million for the first nine months of the year, down from $83 million a year ear-

Despite widespread sales of stocks by foreigners on the Tokyo Exchange, the largest market outside the United States, prices generally rose all year. Domestic institutional investors took up the slack left by foreigners and pushed the

Nikkei-Dow Jones average up 16 per-cent over the year, to about 11,500

In the first 11 months of 1984, foreign investors sold $7.18 billion more in securities than they purchased. The sell off, which some analysts attributed to profit taking and to the attractiveness of bond markets around the world, bucked a trend of increasing foreign investment in the Tokyo Exchange.

About half of the year's gain on the Nikkei-Dow Jones came in the last quarter of the year, as foreign sales slowed. In November, foreign investors were net sellers of Japanese stocks by only $3.26 million.

The Tokyo market, which in May celebrated the silver anniversary of its postwar reopening, is ending the year at a record high. Company results and expectations of lower interest rates helped the market

HONG KONG

Hong Kong's stock market and its dollar bobbed up and down with the colony's political fortunes. The Hang Seng index bottomed out at 746 in July, when negotiations between Britain and China over Hong Kong's future were strained. But the market rose late in the summer and soared to 1,001 on Sept. 26 when the two countries initialed an agreement for turning Hong Kong over to China in 1997.

That agreement, which provided for Hong Kong to continue as a capitalist bastion in Communist China for at least 50 years, stimulated the market to further highs later in the year. After beginning the fourth quarter just below the 1,000 mark, the stock index floated up on heavy trading to a 1984 high of 1,206 last Wednesday. The index has dropped a bit in the last few days in subdued profit taking.

Hong Kong's stock traders also attributed the upswing to an increase in exports, which in turn partly reflected the depressed currency. For the first 10 months of 1984, exports were more than onethird above the level of the previous year, the government said.

Market experts said the rising trend in stock prices would continue into the new year, bolstered by new investment and construction. Many businessmen and even private individuals delayed construction decisions until the outcome of the long negotiations concerning the territory's future.

FRANKFURT

Share prices on the Frankfurt Stock Exchange, West Germany's largest, staged a strong recovery in the last quarter, led by impressive gains in the banking and insurance industries. Those gains pushed the 100-share Frankfurter Allgemeine Zeitung index to a high for the year of 377.32 on Dec. 1, from a low of 317.17 on July 2.

The resurgence of the banks was led by Deutsche Bank, the industry leader, and Dresdner Bank, in the second spot. Analysts attributed their revival to declining interest rates, which fattened bank profits, and receding concern over a world financial crisis.

The stock market revival was also a result of higher demand for shares of chemical companies, such as Bayer and Schering, and high-technology manufacturers, such as Siemens and Nixdorf, the computer manufacturer.

Nevertheless, not all industry sectors shared in the recovery. With few exceptions, steel companies such as Thyssen, construction companies and machinery companies, such as Mannesmann, which have profited least from Germany's export-led economic recovery, remained lackluster.

Analysts described 1984 as a good year for German stock exchanges, as the promise of higher returns thanks to increased corporate earnings, rock-bottom inflation and declining interest rates - lured investors back into stocks from fixed-interest securities.

"After 20 years of Sleeping Beauty slumber, we're back in a good situa-tion," said Gunther Mecklenburger, head of the trust department at the Berliner Handels und Frankfurter Bank in Frankfurt.

JOHANNESBURG

Depressed gold prices and the worst drought in half a century are badly squeezing South African stocks and their backbone, the gold mining companies. The only way that South Africans can derive any cheer from the figures is to look at the Johannesburg Stock Exchange Actuaries All Gold index of gold mining companies, which is up about 20 percent for the year.

But that is little more than the 12 percent inflation, and the index is measured in South African rand. That currency has taken an extraordinary plunge against the dollar this year, so that in dollar terms the index has lost a quarter of its value over the year. In the last three months, the index has fallen even in terms of the rand.

The industrial stocks, which generally are less important than the gold stocks, did worse. The exchange's industrial index fell 3 percent over the year, although the index climbed sharply in the last quarter of the year. A prime interest rate of 24 percent is further hurting the industrials.

"Gold is still the locomotive of the economy," said Warren G. Myers, a vice president of Merrill Lynch Capital Markets in New York. Because gold prices are expected to remain low - the oil surplus is further dampening interest in gold — Myers expects the South African market to remain in a trough for most of 1985.

BUSINESS BRIEFS

Tandy Corp to introduce computer today

NEW YORK — The Tandy Corp. today will introduce a long-expected successor to its Model 100 briefcase-sized computer, which pioneered the market for lap machines.

The new machine, the Model 200, has a 16-line liquid crystal display screen with 40 characters per line, compared with eight lines in the original. It also comes with the Multiplan spreadsheet program in addition to the word processing and communications functions in the original. The Model 200 will be available in March and will sell for $1,000 in the basic version. Tandy, which owns and franchises the Radio Shack electronics stores, will continue to sell the Model 100, whose price has been cut to $400, half the original price.

The new machine, which weighs 4.5 pounds, comes with 24,000 characters of memory in the basic model, compared with 8,000 in the Model 100. It is being manufactured by Japan's Kyocera Corp., which also makes the

Even with the improvements, the Tandy machine is still less powerful than machines already being sold by such companies as Data General, Texas Instruments and Hewlett-Packard.

Tandy hopes to compete in the lower end of the market, appealing to journalists, lawyers and sales people. "We made a good market there, and we wanted to stay in that market," said Stewart Weinstock, portable and pocket computer buyer for Radio Shack.

Pistner resigning as president of Ward's

NEW YORK — Stephen L. Pistner is resigning as president and chief executive of the Montgomery Ward division of the Mobil Corp. and has accepted a position with another company that represents "a real course change for me," he said Sunday.

The Chicago-based Montgomery Ward, which last year had sales in excess of $6 billion, is the nation's sixth-largest retailer, with 375 stores. Pistner's resignation came as a bit of a shock to retailers and analysts.

partly because he has insisted in the past that he would remain with Montgomery Ward until such time as it could be put on a consistently profitable basis. Analysts credit Pistner with the turnaround in Montgomery Ward's fortunes during the four years of his stewardship, and they expressed concern that Ward's may not be able to keep up the pace without Bernard F. Brennan, who served under Pistner as an executive vice president at Ward's before leaving about a year ago to become president of the merchandising unit of Household International Inc., said Pistner's departure "comes as a complete surprise.

The 52-year-old Pistner declined to identify his new company, or the field it is in. "I received an outstanding offer," he said, "and that is what brought about my decision to resign. It's an amicable parting between myself and Mobil. The company he will join is much smaller than Montgomery Ward and is privately held but provides "entrepreneurial" opportunities, according to financial and retailing executives close to both Montgomery Ward and Normally an outspoken, enthusiastic individual, Pistner would only add: "It would have to be something that would be of great interest to me, and it is." At Montgomery Ward, Pistner has reportedly been earning about $1 million a year.

American Iron, Steel report imports higher

WASHINGTON (AP) — With U.S.-Japanese steel talks just two days off, the American Iron and Steel Institute is reporting that U.S. imports of steel from Japan are running almost two-thirds higher than last year.

Japanese Prime Minister Yasuhiro Nakasone is due to meet President Reagan in Los Angeles on Wednesday, with agreement still not complete between the two countries on cutting future exports from Japan. Japan has said it will make an agreement for more than one year to hold down shipments to its No. 1 trading partner, but has not yet accepted the five-year accord sought by the United States. A steel industry source, who spoke on condition that he not be named, said there was no agreement yet either on the breakdown of products According to the institute's figures, Japanese exports of steel mill products to the United States reached 6.2 million tons for the first 11 months of this year, compared with 3.7 million tons for the same period of 1983 — an

Retailers post 7 percent gain for month

By PAMELA G. HOLLIE N.Y. Times News Service

NEW YORK - A last-minute shopping surge that began just before Christmas continued through the final days of 1984, as shoppers, conditioned by pre-Christmas markdowns, returned to look for greater bargains. Retailers said the push helped them post a 7 percent to 20 percent sales gain for December versus December 1983 - in an otherwise disappointing

Christmas season. "The day after Christmas was very strong," said Marvin S. Traub, the chairman of Bloomingdale's in New York. He said his department store's most popular items this Christmas were watches, jewelry, cosmetics, fragrance and gourmet foods.

To encourage sales, retailers cut prices with unprecedented numbers of pre-Christmas sales. That strategy resulted in double-digit sales increases for some retailers, but such markdowns often cut into profits.

Since retailers refuse to talk about 1984 earnings until the end of the retail fiscal year on Jan. 31, it is not yet clear whether the spending surge in the three days before Christmas or the sales after the holiday generated enough business to bring profits in line with last

But, according to William S. Hansen, president of Buffums', a southern California department store, pre-Christmas markdowns put pressure on margins and profits. Buffums', he said, would not be as profitable this year as last.

The Christmas season was full of surprises for retail-

"It was an odd year," said Linda McEnroe, a spokesman for Federated Department Stores. "It was hard to predict when people were going to buy.

But December was even more unpredictable. "This month was a seesaw until Dec. 12, with good and bad days," said Ron Foppen, vice president and director of stores for Neiman-Marcus in Dallas.

For most of the month, consumers shopped during the weekends and stayed away during the week. At Frost Brothers in San Antonio, the shopping pattern even had hourly swings. Business was strong in the morning, weak in the afternoon and big again at night, a spokesman said.

The unusual pre-Christmas patterns were bad signs for retailers, who depend on the monthlong Christmas shopping season for as much as 50 percent of their yearly profits.

Rep. Timothy Wirth, D-Colo., in a letter to NHTSA last month accused the agency of neglecting the Ford transmission issue and "hoping this problem will go away.

"It has become increasingly clear that the sticker warning program is having virtually no effect on decreasing the incidents of deaths, injuries and accidents," Wirth said in his letter to NHTSA administrator Diane Steed.

Ms. Steed disputed figures cited by Wirth suggesting an increase in the death rate since the 1980 agreement. She said the death rate has declined significantly, and added that there is no evidence to support reopening the case.

In a letter to Wirth, Ms. Steed said that between July 20, 1977 and June 11, 1980 there were 64 fatalities confirmed in connection with the transmission problem compared to 39 fatalities between June 5, 1981 and

May 6, 1984. But the Center for Auto Safety put the number of deaths during the same period at 48 fatalities during 1977-80 period and 52 during the June, 1981 to May, 1984 period. The group claims the different NHTSA figures are due to misleading counting practices and the failure of the dents. In reaching the 77 fatality figure the auto safety group included a longer period from Dec. 30, 1980 to the present. The latest case cited by the auto safety group occurred last Oct. 25 in Drexel Hills, Pa. when an 84-year-old woman was struck by a driverless 1978 Lincoln Continental agency to investigate some acci-

as she walked away from a bank. Burdette, the NHTSA spokesman, said the agency had not received details of the Center for Auto Safety's allegations, but stood by earlier agency statements that only 51 deaths had been confirmed since 1980 in accidents involving Ford transmissions slipping.

The Ford transmission case represents one of the most heatedly argued safety investigations conducted by the NHTSA. The government's agreement with Ford prevented the ordered recall of anywhere from 16 million to 23 million 1970 through 1979 Ford, Mercury and Lincoln cars and light trucks. All the cars were equipped with five types of automatic transmissions that critics said had a potential of slipping from park to reverse when the motor idled. Ford made a design change in the transmissions beginning with 1980

The agency recommended a recall, but was overruled by then Transportation Secretary Neil Goldschmidt, who worked out an agreement with Ford calling for the automaker to send dashboard labels to all of the vehicle owners advising that the transmission might slip suddenly from park to reverse when the car is idling.

Mike Bell, a shipboard host for such functions, conducted a preliminary briefing in the ship's day room: "About a year ago we started pick-ing up some rumblings that we were dispersing the fish by our testing. Despite the results of earlier studies, we don't think these problems were going to go away. We decided that if we didn't address the problem now, we'd have to do it next year or the year after ... because we have become much more cognizant of our role with the environment With specific complaints, Bell said came fishing-industry workshops and suggested resolutions. Protests such as Hur's were passed to steering committees that grew into a blue-ribbon panel involving oil companies, commercial fishermen, universities, the International Association of Geophysical Contractors in Dallas, and agencies of state and federal governments.

A six-day pilot study was recommended. It would involve a small fleet of fisherman and one seismic research vessel. Twin skeins of air guns trailing behind the ship would set up an eight-hour barrage while the trawlers were locating plumes. or schools of fish. Independent teams of scientists and equipment for listening and measuring would then attempt to figure out what was going on below.

"Our vessel was scheduled to be in this (Santa Barbara) area," Bell said, 'so Arco donated the boat to the sixday program ... at a cost of $30,000 a

So for almost a week, the volunteer fishing boats - the Genoa and Waverly, the Ecstasy and Bonny Marietta — slipped out from Santa Barbara and Morro Bay for a day's fishing just like any other day. Except on board, scientists logged fish on fathometers and heard sounds on hydrophones. From 10 miles out. From one mile away. Plus or minus other disturbances. Depending on depth and water temperature and time of day.

Hur held Omoo II in reserve, leaving him free to supervise one portion of the study concerned with the effect of seismic booms on fish eggs

"Seismic energy," Hur explained in a later telephone interview, "not only has the potential of affecting fish dispersal but also eggs and larvae that are suspended in plankton. My concern is the long-term (seismic) effect on the microscopic babies. The big goal we have in mind is to make sure there is a fishery and fish to catch 10 years from now

Hur declined to discuss preliminary test results. "There's no doubt there's a heavy effect (from seismic testing), but how heavy?" he asked. "There also are many questions that go above and beyond what we are doing (testing) and what we know Does he believe that the oil industry is making honest efforts to address the problem? "They're making a political effort and going with the political tides of the time. But the industry right now is simply oil-ing the squeaky wheel." It will be some time, marine biologist Chamberlain said, before final test results are known.

A litter of 4-month-old greyhound pups await feeding time. The pups, estimated to be worth about $5,000 each, undergo an extensive training period before they begin racing at about 18 months of age.

A run for your money

idlander Claud Spain won't disagree that dog is man's best friend.

His dogs helped him to earn a small fortune.

Spain, the owner of more than 30,000 greyhound racing dogs during his lifetime, said, "I never wanted to be a full-time dog raiser. I always wanted to do it as a hobby. But once it gets into your blood, it's awful hard to get out.

"A good dog will run at anything that moves and he'll chase it 'til he drops. The desire to run is born in him," Spain said of the greyhound - known to be the fastest of dogs.

Originally bred for hunting purposes, all varieties of the greyhound have a streamlined body with a pointed muzzle, arched back, slender wasp waist and long, powerful legs which enable them to keep the game in view.

Today, the breed attracts thousands of racing fans each year who gather at various sites nationwide to watch their racing careers at about 18 favorite hound chase a mechanical rabbit around a 550-yard oval track, according to Spain.

Although Texas law prohibits pari-mutuel betting. Spain said opportunities are available for persons who wish to breed dogs for racing across the state line.

"At one time - and it still may be true - 80 percent of the dogs racing in Florida were raised in Texas. I've owned dogs in each of 14 states that allow legalized pari-mutuel betting," he said.

"When you turn a greyhound out, he's gonna run. He'll give 110 percent," Spain noted.

Citing examples of his own dogs, he said, "Ben his registered name is Bacon Switch — was never caught until the first turn in 160 of his 165 races.

"Impala Black Rose, she's the half sister of Marathon Hound - the world's most valuable canine. He won over $250,000 during his racing career which is more money than any other dog in the world. His stud fee now stands at $750," he added.

Greyhounds begin their months of age and continue until they no longer are physically able to perform, according to Spain.

"The average dog races about a year until he breaks a bone or pulls a muscle. When that happens, I'd say nine times out of 10 he never races again," he said. "Ben raced for 41/2 years. Then a film started forming over his rail eye and we retired him," he

Now after 20 years, Spain - respected throughout West Texas as an owner and breeder of greyhounds - said he's calling it quits.

The decision to sell his remaining stock came when various dog kennels hired inexperienced personnel and subsequently "ruined dogs" in the face of a sagging economy, according to Spain. "It just breaks my heart to have to quit after all these years. But when the economy slowed down the number of betters at the tracks decreased and many kennels were forced to cut costs by hiring inexperienced help," he said. "They ruined dogs as fast as we turned them out.

"I've been told that once you get into the business, you never get out completely. I guess my love for racing is as instinctive as it is for my dogs," said Spain.

Chris Van Veghel distributes a healthy supply of puppy chow to a litter of hungry greyhound puppies. All greyhound varieties have a streamlined body with a pointed muzzle, arched back, slender wasp waist and long, powerful legs, making them ideal for racing.

A full-grown female returns to her kennel after feeding time. The dogs are released four times daily for meals and exercise.

Gainesville mothers rally to aid Houston toddler

GAINESVILLE, Texas (AP) — A group of Gainesville mothers has railied to the aid of an 11-month-old Houston girl who because of a rare condition can ingest only mothers'

Elania Pohl has hypogammaglobu-linemia, which is characterized by a low level of antibodies in her blood that causes an allergic reaction to almost everything.

She survives solely on mothers' milk, which is not readily available and thus very expensive. To supple-ment milk that has been donated to the baby from groups in 11 states, the parents have had to buy milk from milk banks at prices ranging from $1.50 to $5 an ounce, producing a food bill of $704 every two weeks.

Her father says she would have suffered brain damage or died with-out donations from those — such as the Gainesville mothers — who learned of her problem.

After Sherri Mathis of Gainesville heard a radio report in November about the girl's plight, she called Cindy Pohl, the child's mother, then began calling mothers in Gainesville that she knew were nursing.
"I was overwhelmed by the response. The mothers just came together. There's not a big enough word to describe my feeling," Ms. Mathis told the Gainesville Daily Register.

The U.S. Coast Guard flew a jet into Gainesville Saturday to pick up more than 400 ounces of mothers' milk that about 15 women in the Gainesville area had donated. Enroute to Gainesville, the jet picked up the girl's father, Max Pohl, who is a member of the Coast

Donations have come from all over, Ms. Mathis said.

"I have one mother driving from Muenster to give milk every day,"

"It sends goose bumps up my back for people to spend their time and effort for a baby they don't even know," she said. Mothers contributing milk have put off baking, cleaning, preparing for the holidays and company in order to donate milk for Elania, Ms. Mathis added.

Gainesville Memorial Hospital at first donated a private room for the mothers' use when giving milk, but now most of the mothers have been going to Ms. Mathis' home or using a breast pump at their own homes.

A Gainesville pharmacy donated an electric breast pump for the mothers to use.

Giving a lot of milk each day is not as easy as it may sound for some women. The amount of milk given each day in Gainesville has varied.

"I felt good if I was getting four ounces a day from the mothers," Ms. Mathis said. "Some don't give an ounce in a day, and others give 10 Although the jet left Gainesville

Fans visit actor's gravesite

DeKALB, Texas (AP) - It is an unremarkable tombstone in a simple family plot, but the final resting place of the actor who played "Hoss Cartwright" on the TV western "Bonanza" has become a tourist attraction in this farm town of 2,100 in northeast Texas. "I've had people from Maine and California stop in here looking for Hoss Cartwright," Orval Miller, owner of Miller's Grocery, said of the influx of fans of the long-running series in which Dan Blocker played the hulking cowboy.

Blocker died in 1974 at the age of 42 of blood clots in his lungs, after undergoing gall bladder surgery and his body was flown from California for burial in his birthplace.

He is buried in Woodman Cemetery beside his father, Shack, and sister, Virginia. His grave is covered with a sprinkling of clover.

Each year, hundreds come to visit the site. "They want to see where he's buried," said cafe owner Roy

Texas firm first licensed to make cattle virus drug

STAFFORD, Texas (AP) - A Stafford firm says it will soon distribute a drug effective in fighting a cattle virus that results in losses of $333 million a year to livestock owners. Immuno Modulators Laboratories Inc. say they hope to make the interferon-based drug available by Jan. 14. The medicine has the trade name Agriferon and is approved to be used only by the Texas Department of Health.

The firm, whose offices are just southwest of Houston, claims to be the first company in the nation licensed to sell the interferon-based drug for veterinary Shipping fever is caused by a mix of three to five different viruses and is usually contracted by calves at feedlots or auctions, said Roger Wyatt, director of the firm's Agriferon Division.

Wyatt said calves with shipping fever have symptoms similar to those found in human influenza patients, such as runny noses and watery eyes. He said an animal's temperature may rise from its normal 101 degrees to 107 degrees.

Although 80 percent of calves that contract shipping virus recover without treatment, 10 percent to 15 percent of calves that suffer from the illness die. Wyatt said. Another 5 percent to 10 percent may suffer lung dam-

Wyatt estimates the illness cost cattle owners about $333 million a year, one fifth of which will be lost by Texas stock owners.

Currently, no single vaccine is available against the disease, and only individual virus strains may be treated, Wyatt said.

The firm's officials say they hope the Food and Drug Administration will eventually approve Agriferon for use across the

Wayne Houston Woody and J.N. Accident injures Midland woman

From Staff Reports

A Midland woman was listed in good condition in Midland Memogood condition in Midland Memorial Hospital today after being injured in a two-vehicle accident two miles east of town Sunday on FM 307, according to the Texas Department of Public Safety.

Rose Delema Walsh, 65, Route 1,

Box 135E, suffered fractured ribs after her '76 Buick collided with an '83 Chevrolet pickup driven by Perry Wayne Lee of Henrietta. Lee, who was unhurt, had been heading south on FM 307, while Ms. Walsh was turning from a private drive onto FM 307 when the accident occurred at 5:55 p.m.

Pickup reported stolen

From Staff Reports

A '79 Ford pickup valued at $4,200 was reported stolen Sunday, according to police reports. Gasper Guzman, 127 W. Gist, told police he parked the pickup in front of the Crown Royal Club, 1110 E. Scharbauer Drive, at 10 p.m. Saturday. When he emerged from the club at 2 a.m., it was

In other complaints to police Sunday, a color television worth $390 was reported stolen from the Lexington Inn, 1003 S. Midkiff. The television was taken from Room 1030 sometime between Dec. 21 and Friday.

An '81 Pontiac Turbo belonging to a Lee High School student was broken into sometime over the weekend, according to reports. Stereo equipment worth $400 was taken from the car, which was parked at the Lee High parking lot, 3500 W. Neely Ave. There was about $200 worth of damage done to the car, which belongs to Gregory Walter Johnson, 3600 N. Loop 250, apt. 1044.

A Midland woman reported the theft of her purse from her locked car Saturday. Charlotte Rainey, 3100 Caldera, lost her credit cards and $350 in currency after leaving the purse in her '81 Buick Regal in a parking lot at 1008 S. Midkiff. The theft occurred about 11:30 p.m.

Dellie Wilkerson, 206 E. Dengar, reported the theft of four hup caps worth $250 from his Cadillac. Wilkerson was attending services at the North Side Church of Christ, 1511 N. Fort Worth St., between 10 a.m. and 11:45 a.m., and when he came out of the church, the hup caps were missing.

Jan Antony Thompson, 27, was still listed in critical condition this morning in Midland Memorial Hospital. Thompson, Route 1, Box 144H, was injured Dec. 24 in a two-vehicle accident near Andrews which took the life of his father, 62-year-old Claude Milton Thompson, 4710 Erie Drive, and William Larence Clark, 67, 1506 W. Whale sculptor thinks big

Los Angeles Times-

Washington Post News Service SAN LUIS OBISPO, Calif. -Michael Mancuso, 35, is a whale

sculptor. Known here as "The Whale Man," he has a 10-foot gray whale named Sarah in his living room and every room in his house is filled with

"At night Sarah glows in the light of the moon or from the light of my upstairs bedroom. It's eerie," Man-

"I will go into the living room in the dark. It's like I'm in the ocean. I imagine I am swimming with the whale. I know it sounds strange...

Ten thousand people applauded the sculptor and his whale in a local parade last April as they rode through town on a float.

It took Mancuso 133 hours during a three-month period from last December to March to create Sarah in his living room out of chicken wire, plywood, three coats of butcher paper, glue and Sculpt-a-Mancuso knows that one of these days he will sell Sarah.

"That's the way it is with artists. You either sell your creations or starve. But until I sell Sarah, I am enjoying her. So are my friends," he

When friends come to the sculptor's home, they sit in the living room with the whale. Mancuso often serenades Sarah and his friends with a medley on the piano. The whale is practically in the sculptor's lap when he sits on the piano stool.

"There isn't much room in the living room. But my friends don't mind. They have seen the whale from its inception. They are accustomed to Sarah.

Several friends were over. This lady got up out of her chair all of a sudden. She forgot about Sarah. She banged her head on the whale and almost knocked herself out."

Mancuso thought Sarah was an ideal name for the whale "because the whale looks like a Sarah and Sarah is a beautiful name. It means mother of peace.

Every room in the sculptor's home is full of small clay whales averaging a foot in length. Gray, sperm, right, beluga, humpback, blue, fin and killer whales.

The sculptor fires his clay whales in a kiln in his kitchen. The clay whales are sold in gift shops throughout California.

He has shelves stacked with books and magazines about whales. There are whale photographs, paintings and posters throughout the house.

"I never tire of whales." Mancuso said when he sells Sarah (he is asking $2,000) he will create another whale in his living room.

For companionship and eventually to sell. I hope I always have a large whale sharing my home with

Modern British architecture receives blunt criticism

Los Angeles Times-Washington Post News Service

LONDON - Britain's architectural establishment had rarely been so shaken.

Prince Charles, addressing the 150th anniversary dinner of the Royal Institute of British Architects, asked pointedly: "What are we doing to our city? For far too long, it seems to me, some planners and architects have consistently ignored the feelings and wishes of ordinary people in this country.

The fact that the future king of England would forgo the usual complimentary platitudes and speak so bluntly to a sensitive audience reflects the turmoil in which British architecture finds itself.

Colin Amery, the respected critic of the Financial Times, says: "It has taken 20 years, but the message is finally getting through to British architects: Their work is not populow professional standards and unadventurous clients.'

AMERY'S VIEWS have been widely echoed among people who think and write about architecture. Some examples:

Paul Spencer in the Sunday Mail: "The problem is that modern architecture in Britain has been so appallingly bad for so long that people are simply not prepared to tolerate it anymore.

George Nicholson, chairman of the Greater London Council Planning Committee: "The architectural profession has destroyed communities up and down the country.'

Architectural observers have pointed out that most of the bestknown architects in London have chosen to live in traditional houses Georgian or Victorian - rather than in modern buildings.

In their defense, Britain's modern architects accuse the critics of either being philistines or overly Ludwig Mies van der Rohe as "yet conservative and desirous of turning another giant glass stump, better london into a "Dickensian Disney-

MICHAEL MANSER, president of the Royal Institute, says: "There's a small but very active conservative view which has gotten a bit out of hand in England."

Manser blames the criticism to some extent on nostalgia and the fear of change. "The public," he says, "gets the architecture they deserve, by and large, and then moan about it."

In his speech to the architects, Prince Charles singled out for criticism projects that may determine the course of architecture in London for the next generation.

He called the proposed addition to the National Gallery on London's Trafalgar Square "a monstrous carbuncle on the face of a much-loved and elegant friend." He described a proposed office tower by the late versial tower.

Just for today I will have a program. I may not follow it exactly, myself from two pests: hurry and right and take the responsibility for my own actions. I will expect nothing from the world, but I will realize suited to downtown Chicago than the city of London.

THE PRINCE'S words may have an almost immediate effect. Patrick Jenkin, the Cabinet secretary for the environment, who must approve all major construction in London, has rejected the design for the National Gallery addition. The plan, by a leading London company, features a glass tower toped by a crown-like aluminum structure that seems awkward and banal to many critics.

The addition was to be funded by Trafalgar House, a major British conglomerate, and was to have provided top-floor space for the gallery's renowned collection of Italian Renaissance paintings. The lower floors were to have been for commercial offices. Trafalgar House and the architects are now considering an Aternative, without the controdeveloper Peter Palumbo had acquired a few blocks of real estate in the financial district. He proposed to raze the buildings there, opening up a square and making room for a 20-story tower designed by the famous architect, who died in 1969 in the United States.

BUT AT A public hearing, critics unleashed a barrage of unfavorable comment to counter statements made on behalf of Palumbo's plan. Philip Johnson, who collaborated with Mies on New York's Seagram building, said the design for the London project was "unimportant." Others called it truncated and graceless and "second-rate" Mies.

The dispute over the two projects experts say they would both have been approved a few years ago - is indicative of the rising level of public sentiment against many forms of modern architecture in Britain. And the public has been backed by organizations that want to preserve London's and Britain's Georgian and Victorian heritage. The emphasis is on rehabilitation rather than redevelopment.

Many of Britain's cities were extensively damaged in the Blitz, the German air assault of World War II, and after the war an effort was made to rebuild quickly. The modern movement, dedicated to high-rise office and apartment buildings, took hold and flourished.

ANOTHER ARCHITECTURAL writer, John Young, said recently: "There is understandable public resentment at the way developers, architects, planners and civil engineers have combined to tear the heart out of so many towns and cities to create new shopping centers, multistory car parks, and circulatory traffic systems.

"Above all, the lamentable record of postwar housing has done more than anything else the public opinion against those esponsible."

Elderly crane whooping it up at prospect he may be father

WASHINGTON (AP) — Wolf, a rare Siberian crane who beat the odds by living to age 75, is whooping it up at a wildlife preserve where keepers say he may have become a father.

Although the results of blood tests will tell for sure whether he is a father, "Wolf can take pride in the fact that he is one of the oldest animals on record to have bred in captivity," the World Wildlife Fund said in a statement issued last week at its Washington headquarters.

Cranes living in the wild usually die when they are 25 or 30 years old, but they can live longer in captivity if they are well fed and protected from danger, said Joan Fordham, administrator of the International Crane Foundation's preserve near Baraboo, Wis.

Wolf, who spent his early years in a zoo in Basel, Switzerland, came to Baraboo from a bird park in West Germany in 1979. Attempts to get him to breed in America with an elderly bird named Phyllis were not just a failure, they were deadly. Wolf killed her.

In 1983, however, another male named Tilliman was brought from Germany and "for some reason his presence rekindled in Wolf the fire which had eluded him in his court-ship of Phyllis," the statement said.

Both males fertilized the eggs of Hirakawa, a middle-aged female from Japan, and Vladimira, who arrived as an egg herself from the Soviet Union in 1977.

To avoid another tragic death, the male and female birds were separated by chicken wire so they could see one another and do the elaborate mating dances cranes perform, but breeding was performed by artificial insemination.

This year Vladimira has produced one chick and Hirakawa four. "We have a pretty good idea that Wolf is the father of at least one of Hirakawa's chicks, though we can't be sure until we get the result of some blood tests in the spring," Mrs. Fordham said. Siberian cranes, who measure five feet in height, have white bodies, black wing tips and red faces. They are not as rare as their cousins the whooping cranes, whose numbers have dwindled to about 170.

Fewer than 900 of the Siberian cranes are left in the the wild but they too are in serious danger of extinction, Mrs. Fordham said.

They breed naturally on the Siberian tundra and most of them spend the winter in China, where a projected dam on the Yangtze River might flood much of the shallow wetland they need. They also have been heavily hunted.

The International Crane Federation is seeking $21,000 from the World Wildlife Fund to support the captive flock in Wisconsin and to give the Soviet Union radio equipment to find the nests of common cranes.

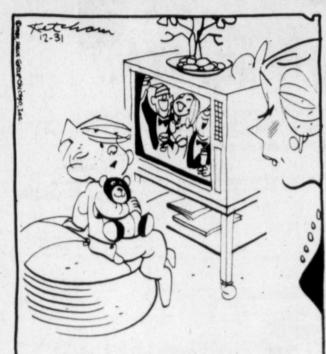

The idea is to put the eggs of Siberian cranes in the nests of the siberian cranes in the nests of the common variety in the hope that they will hatch and strengthen the wild flock in western Asia.

The fund has already given $10,000 to help buy 48 tiny radio transmitters to be attached to the cranes' long legs, and two ground. cranes' long legs, and two ground receiving stations. Mrs. Fordham said there was no concern about the Soviets diverting the equipment to military use.

"We were told there might be some worry, and we checked it out,'

Peter Ueberroth has been named Time's Man of the Year

NEW YORK (AP) - For masterminding "a triumph that involved nearly four-fifths of the nations of the globe," 1984 Olympics organizer Peter Ueberroth was named Time magazine's man of the year.

Time called Ueberroth, now commissioner of baseball, "a promoter with a global mission," and said he was chosen "for his supreme skill in making the Games work and because he is the embodiment of the entrepreneurial spirit that is flourishing in the United States.

The Olympics traditionally have lost money, but this year "received almost no government funds and ended up with an unimaginable surplus of $215 million and the sum could reach $250 million by June," Time said in it

The bottom line, in terms of both money and morale, was more than impressive," it said in its cover story.

Other nominees for the honor included President Reagan, El Salvador President Jose Napoleon Duarte, Democratic vice presidental nominee Geraldine Ferraro and "The Terrorist" described by Time as "a multiheaded monster.

Aviator Charles A. Lindbergh was Time's first man of the year.

INNSBRUCK, Austria (AP) — Actress-model Margaux Hemingway is recuperating from surgery after she broke her pelvis while skiing, according to personnel at the Innsbruck University Clinic and the Austrian Press Agency.

The news service on Sunday reported Miss Hemingway had broken her pelvis Friday. Hospital personnel confirmed she was

The news agency said in an unattributed report that Miss Hemingway planned to leave the hospital around Jan. 10 for London, where she would "possibly" be bedridden for five to six

Miss Hemingway, granddaugh-ter of the late author Ernest Hemingway, sustained the injury near the Tyrolian ski resort of Gerlos, according to the news agency.

(AP) - CBS newsman Mike Wallace is under observation in a hospital, suffering from the exhaustion of "an extensive work and travel schedule," the net-Mike Wallace work said.

Wallace, 66, was admitted to Lenox Hill Hospital on Sunday morning, said George Schweitzer, vice president of communications for the CBS Broadcast Group. Wallace had returned from Washington on Saturday night.

"He's had an extensive work and travel schedule, including a return from the famine area of Ethiopia four or five weeks ago," Schweitzer said.

Schweitzer said he did not know details of Wallace's condition or how long he was expected to be hospitalized. The hospital listed his condition as stable.

PHILADELPHIA (AP) - A crowd of card-toting well-wishers sang "Happy Birthday" to Massa, the world's oldest known gorilla, and the party - and a big sundae - apparently were good for the 54-year-old primate.

Texas has applied for Final Authoriza-tion under the Resource Conservation and Recovery Act (RCRA). The Environmental Protection Agency (EPA) has reviewed Texas' application and has reviewed Texas' application and has reviewed Texas' application and has reached a final determination that Texas' Hazardous 'Waste Program satisifies all of the requirements neces-sary for Final Authorization. Thus EPA is granting Final Authorization to the State to operate its program in lieu of the Federal program in Texas. EFFECTIVE DATE: Final Authorization for Texas, for purposes of judicial review, shall be effective December 26, 1984.

26, 1984. FOR FURTHER INFORMATION CONverse, EPA considers that aspect of the State Program to be equivalent to the State program to be equivalent to the State program to be equivalent to the state program. EPA recognizes that guidance is not yet available which would resolve the scope of the oil and gas exemption. When EPA does complete the scope of the oil and gas exemption. To qualify for Final Authorization, a State's program must (1) be "equivalent" to the Federal program and other state programs and (3) provide for adequate enforcement. (2) be consistent with the Federal program and other state programs and (3) provide for adequate enforcement. (Section 3006(b) of RCRA, 42 U.S.C. 6226(b)).

On June 22, 1984, Texas submitted a complete application to obtain Final Authorization but does see them as cause for serious doubt that Texas is complying with the spirit of the law.

COMMENT: The commenter doubts program. On September 10, 1984, EPA published a tentative decision announcing its intent to grant Texas Final Authorization.

should be exempt as harzardous wastes.

RESPONSE: EPA has found that the Texas universe of harzardous waste is equivalent to the federal universe. Section 3009 of RCRA allows states to have requirements more stringent that federal requirements. Therefore, so long as the Texas universe of hazardous wastes includes at least those wastes included in the federal universe, EPA considers that aspect of the State program to be equivalent to the federal program. EPA recognizes that guidance is not yet available which would resolve the scope of the oil and gas exemption.
