Hostage situation ends with gunman's suicide

ARLINGTON (AP) — A 6-hour hostage crisis at a convenience store ended late Saturday afternoon when a man shot and killed himself after his wife escaped while he talked with a hostage negotiator over the phone, police said.

Earlier, the man had shot two 7-Eleven employees, one of them fatally.

Thomas Edward Stephens, 40, a baggage handler for American Airlines, put down the phone, walked to the front of the store, pointed a .357-Magnum to his head and pulled the trigger, police spokesman Jim Willett said

"He's dead," Willett said about 6:30 p.m.

Stephens' wife, Pat, 37, had been held hostage in the store since her husband walked into the store about 12:15 p.m., Willett said. The man had been served with divorce papers on Friday, Willett said.

Police said Stephens had been at an alcohol rehabilitation center for the past two months, commuting daily to his job at Dallas-Fort Worth International Airport.

Also dead, from a gunshot wound to the chest and stomach, police said, was a woman identified as Terry Palmer, 30, of nearby Mansfield, who worked with Mrs. Stephens at the 7-Eleven Store and who Willett said Mrs. Stephens had recently moved in with. Another store employee, Craig Talley, 25, of Arlington, was reported in fair condition with arm, leg and foot wounds.

Police surrounded the 7-Eleven store after being called by witnesses who saw the gunman enter the store about 12:15 p.m. and lay a .357-Magnum on the counter, said Willett said

The fleeing customers told police they heard gunshots as they left the store

After a 3½-hour standoff, the man allowed two police, with their hands up, to enter the store and remove the wounded man and woman, who were employees at the 7-Eleven store

Arlington Memorial Hospital spokeswoman Carlene Ness said Ms. Palmer was dead on arrival and had been shot twice in the abdomen.

"We suspect they were not random victims because he (suspect) paid absolutely no attention to the customers in the store, and he became very irate when he discovered the man (shooting victim) was not dead," said police spokesman Jim Whlett.

Shortly after the two gunshot victims were released, police thought they heard a shot, but later both the suspect and hostage were spotted and appeared to be all right, said Willett.

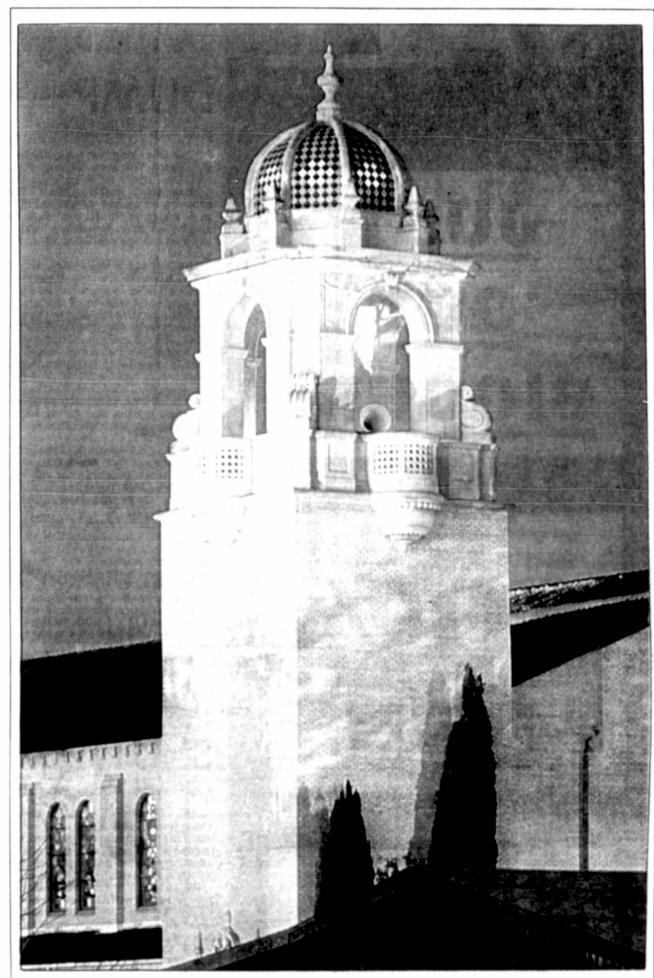

The suspect came out into the front portion of the store dragging the woman by her shirt about 5 p.m., then returned to the back storeroom where he was not visible from outside the store.

Police negotiators were unable to talk to the suspect for the next couple of hours, first because the phone was off the hook, and later because although the phone receiver was replaced again, it rang for almost an hour before the suspect answered.

At one point, he allowed his wife to call her parents, Willett said.

About 6:15 p.m., Willett said, Stephens' wife managed to escape unharmed.

'He was on the phone with our hostage negotiator when his wife saw an opportunity and snuck out the front door. He didn't know she was gone until she was gone." Willett said

The historical mission, sponsored by the National Aeronautics Space Administration, is not the first involving civilian Americans. NASA already has invited congressmen and a public school teacher along on similar flights.

NASA officials say they will select five semi-finalists from the list of applicants on April 4. The names of the finalist and an alternate will be announced on April 17 and, from there, he or she will participate in three months of flight training.

"It's going to be long wait until April," Ms. Dishman says.

Did Libya shoot down U.S. plane?

KUWAIT (AP) - Kuwait's official KUNA news agency on Saturday quoted a diplomat as saying Libyan anti-aircraft missile batteries shot down a U.S. jet fighter over the Mediterranean earlier in the week.

It did not identify the diplomat but reported he said the warplane was downed Wednesday by a Sovietmade SAM-7 missile as it flew over the Gulf of Sidra, also known as the Gulf of Sirte.

KUNA noted that a U.S. Navy spokesman in Rome had announced that a Marine F-18 Hornet was missing Wednesday after taking off from the aircraft carrier Coral Sea and was believed lost at sea off France's southern coast.

The Coral Sea had departed from Naples, Italy, on Jan. 3 with about eight other vessels from the 6th Fleet and Libyan leader Col. Moammar Khadafy claimed that America was massing warships off the Libyan coast to prepare for an attack. Washington denied that assertion and said the task force was on a routine exercise in the western Mediterranean and far off the Libvan coast. A Pentagon spokesman, Lt. Col. Gene Sands, was asked about the Kuwaiti report and he said, "I have nothing to substantiate that."

He referred all further queries to the Navy headquarters in Washington, and Navy spokesman Lt. Cmdr. Bill Sonntag said the missing plane was on a training mission in the vicinity of Nice, France, when it

"The status of the plane is missing and believed lost," he said, adding that an investigation "is being conducted.

Sonntag said he did not know where the Coral Sea was located when the plane took off Wednesday. He said later the plane disappeared off the French coast and was operating too far from Libva to have been infolved in a confrontation with a Libvan warplane. "It would be impossible for a Libyan jet to reach that far," he said. "Their range is not sufficient to allow that."

Sonntag was told that the KUNA dispatch said the F-18 was downed by a missile, not a jet, and he replied: 'I haven't seen the story from Kuwait. I'm just trying to address questions that might be raised.

First Baptist Church concluding centennial

By GEORGIA TEMPLE

Religion Writer

A "Century for Christ" celebration ends today at First Baptist Church, as the church concludes a year of celebrating its 100th anniversary. First Baptist was officially 100 years old Friday.

"A logo-medallion depicting the church's tower with the message "Century for Christ" was designed by Darrell Dunton to commemorate the centennial along with the inscription from Joshua 24:24, The Lord our God will we serve," said James Nance, minister of music at First Baptist.

The Rev. L.L. Morriss, pastor of First Baptist from 1954 to 1975, will be preaching the 8:30 and 11 a.m. services today.

At 3 p.m., a Dedication Service will be held setting the "Stone of Remembrance" and time capsule into place in the new monument built on church grounds

Then, at 7 p.m., the conclusion of the centennial celebration will be a special multi-media presentation. The presentation will include a tribute to the church's current pastor, the Rev. Daniel Vestal.

Throughout the year, each quarter century has received special emphasis during a specified quarter of the year.

"MEMBERS OF THE congregation have been encouraged to dress in the custom of the era," said Martin Neill, co-chairman along with his wife, Genell, of the 100-member Centennial Celebration Committee.

"Pictures, news stories and memorabilia have been displayed. A commemorative book, 'Great Things He Has Done,' has been written by Lu Cal-houn for the last decade, 1975-1986, and a special audio cassette tape, 'Stones of Remembrance,' has been produced by Martha Rogers and Doris Bruce with longtime members and former pastors being interviewed and parrated by Lloyd Hawkins and edited by Larry Hawkins of KRIG Radio, Odessa."

In addition, Neill said, the church also has available "To God Be the Glory," a history of the church from 1896 to 1975 by Billy Keith and the bronze medallion of the church's tower.

The church began its year's activities in May with an all church picnic and revival celebrating the years 1886 to 1911.

The morning worship services May 5 included a special dramatic "Centennial Profile" developed by Fuffy Green to depict events relating to the establishment of First Baptist Church. Marilyn Godwin Leonard portrayed an early member of the church remembering those early years. For the picnic, Gail Storrie wrote and directed a dramatic presentation depicting the earliest preachers of First Baptist.

'Over 1,000 members of the congregation enjoyed food and fellowship at Zachary Practice Field next to Memorial Stadium," Nance said.

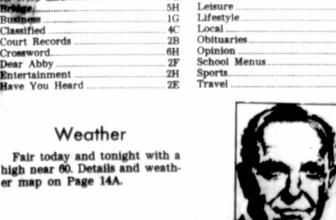

The revival, called a 'Spiritual Spectacular,' helped the church to bring into focus one of her major roles during the past 100 years: spiritual revival and renewal," Vestal said.

PREACHING DURING the revival were Joel Gregory, past professor at Southwestern Baptist Theological Seminary and current pastor of Travis Avenue Baptist Church in Fort Worth; John Bi-sagno, pastor of the First Baptist Church in Houston; Buckner Faning, pastor of Trinity Baptist Church in San Antonio; and D.L. Baptist Church in Lubbock. Mark Blankenship, minister of music from 1968 to 1973, and Tommy Brinkley, organist from 1960 to 1967, served as music director and organist for the revival

Blankenship also was commissioned to write a cho-ral anthem based on Joshua 24:24-27 from the Bible. The anthem, "A Stone of Remembrance," was pre-miered by the 100-voice Sanctuary Choir during the revival

Khadafy threats 'taken seriously'

WASHINGTON (AP) - President Reagan says threats by Col. Moam-mar Khadafy to attack U.S. military bases in Europe are being taken seri-ously because the United States "should be ready for any contingency" in dealing with Libya.

During an interview with a group of European journalists, Reagan was told that the Libyan leader "has threatened to hit American bases in Europe and the people around them

"We take those threats seriously," Reagan said, according to a text of the Friday interview that was released Saturday by the White House. Other than an ongoing response to the threat of terrorism, a Pentagon spokesman said he knew of no special precautions being taken at overseas bases following recent threats from Khadafy:

'We've taken a number of precautions over the past year and a half at military installations" and embassies, said Lt. Col. Gene Sands. "We have certainly taken increased precautions," he said. "I am sure the Khadafy thing enters into it, but that is a larger part of the terrorism problem.

In the interview, Reagan declined to say whether the U.S. economic sanctions imposed against Libya in response to recent terrorist attacks would be followed by use of retaliatory force. "I can't discuss things of that kind," he said. "I just say that I think we should be ready for any contingency.

But Reagan rejected a suggestion made last week by Sen. Howard Metzenbaum, D-Ohio, that Khadafy be assassinated if he is responsible for the Dec. 27 terrorist attacks on the Rome and Vienna airports.

During interviews last week with the Cleveland Plain Dealer and a Cleveland television station Metzenbaum said: "Maybe we are at the point in the world where Mr. Khadafy has to be eliminated."

'No. I was quite surprised by that," Reagan said. "You don't join them at their level. Terrorism in response to terrorism is not the answer. It is terrorism that is the evil." Metzenbaum had told the Plain Dealer in an interview published Thursday that he had qualms about approving assassination as an instru-ment of U.S. foreign policy. "Frankly, I have difficulty with my own thinking on it." But he also told the newspaper that "a singular action may be justified" in the case of Khadafy.

In an interview with talk show host Dick Feagler of WKJC-TV on Wednesday, Metzenbaum said, "Maybe we are the point in the world where Mr. Khadafy has to be éliminated." Asked whether he meant this literally, he replied, "Literally, liter-ally. Why not." As to whether he meant assassination, he said, "It would not be the first time."

The White House responded to Metzenbaum's statements by saying that assassination is illegal and is not among the policy options considered by the administration.

Reagan's interview with the European newspapers was scheduled in an effort to overcome resistance among political leaders in Europe to his call to join in economic sanctions against Libva.

"We're trying to explain our position to them and, very frankly, trying to persuade them that they do have a very real stake in this," he said.

"I don't think you should think of the sanctions as something that is forever," the president declared. "You think of it as something that says straighten up and fly right, Mr. Khadafy, and then things will change.

He said the resistance of friendly European nations to his sanctions 'certainly would not make us turn on them and I'm quite sure that they desire to keep the relationship the way it is."

On Tuesday, citing, "irrefutable evidence" that the government of Khadafy was involved in terrorist attacks at the Rome and Vienna airports on Dec. 27, Reagan ordered all U.S. citizens and companies to quit doing business with Libya.

He followed this by freezing Libyan assets in the United States and ordering American workers in Libya to leave that North African country.

site DOE recommends - by 1991, according to the Act - is suitable to be licensed. Frishman contends the department's method of comparing sites may leave them in an awkward position.

"IT'S STILL possible that they could recommend a site to the president without having a site that is licensable," he said. "What they're doing is shaving time, and allowing themselves to make a decision before they have finished that work." Ms. McClain conceded that there is "a finite possibility" the NRC may not approve the department's final recommendation for a site.

"With any site, there are going to be some attributes that you might consider less than desirable," she said, adding that such factors would not necessarily endanger the health or environment of local residents.

The department, Ms. McClain said, "going into it with a clear design of selecting a site we think is licensable, and having the information available to make that case.'

As far as "shaving time" to meet the Act's schedule, Ms. McClain said DOE has "taken the extra time to try and do the job sufficiently and well, which is evidenced by slippage in the schedule DOE has already sustained.

Frishman said he is worried that once the energy department completes its detailed characterization studies, the NRC might be reluctant to have DOE begin anew.

'When you get that far into the system, with literally billions of dollars expended, we're concerned the license might be finessed." he said

"Congress did not intend for us to start this process all over." she said. We feel we have good sites under consideration and it is not necessary" to begin again.

Frishman said that at the very least, he wants Congress to give the energy department some pointers on how to interpret the Act.

"We're not saying that amendments to the Act are necessary," Frishman said. "What we're trying to do is get Congress to give DOE some additional direction on how to implement" the law.

AN AIDE to U.S. Sen. Lloyd Bentsen said the Texas Democrat has "numerous concerns" and "a lot of questions" about the way DOE is handling the site selection process. Bentsen, the ranking minority member of the Senate Environmental Public Works Committee, has called on the department to "change several of the procedures and to justify other procedures," the aide said. Carlton Carl, an aide to U.S. Rep.

John Bryant, said the Dallas Democrat "does not like the way things are going" with DOE's site selection studies. Bryant is a member of the House Energy and Commerce Committee.

Some critics of the process have charged that DOE has already made up its collective mind on where to locate the dump. "We think they'll take anything," Frishman said,

"which is even worse.' "We've given a lot of evidence some real direction." Ms. McClain again disagreed.

"I would take issue that the department is settling for whatever it can get," she said. "We've had a decade of study on some of these sites." Ms. McClain, who has attended several anti-dump rallies in the Panhandle, said she is optimistic the department's ultimate choice for the repository will be based on strong technical data.

"We think that when the final recommendation is made it will be a sound recommendation," she said, "and it should be approved."

SO FAR, the DOE has found nothing to disqualify the Deaf Smith County site or sites in Nevada or Washington, Ms. McClain said. She said she could not rank any of the locations in order of preference.

If the current status remains, the DOE will proceed with what it calls a "site characterization" of all three potential locations.

Site characterizations are lengthy, detailed studies of underground rock formations, water supplies, and a variety of other factors that a nuclear waste dump might affect. The characterizations will also examine the affects a repository might have on local transportation, economy and culture.

Each site characterization is expected to cost about $1 billion.

Frishman said the DOE does not have enough information about the potential sites to even recommend three of them for characterization.

"What they're trying to do is find some kind of mathematical logic for comparing apples and oranges he Still, she doesn't fantasize much about the mission. However great or small the chances are of her becoming the first journalist to explore the wonders of space, she says, "I won't let myself do that ... yet.'

Ms. Dishman doesn't particularly care to be at the center of attention either. "I guess I'll have to be in the limelight some. I find that very uncomfortable.

Her journalistic instincts take over. "It would make one heck of a story," she adds.

A Rankin native, Ms. Dishman is owner of Write Communications, a Midland marketing and public relations firm and is past owner and publisher of the regional magazine, Petroplex Focus. She earned a bachelors degree in religious education and journalism from Hardin-Simmons University and later went on to receive a master's degree in journalism from the University of Oklahoma.

'Basically, I'm a very conservative person," she says. "I'm surprised I want to do it so badly.

She pauses, adding, "At some point someone will write this story. I want to be that person.'

Ms. Dishman was born with a cleft palate. Surgery to correct the problem left her with a severe speech impediment. But she says, "I never considered it a handicap...it is there and I have to accept it."

That's another reason why she chose to apply. "Because of my birth defect, I thought it would be a boost to others with a handicap," she says.

Ms. Dishman looks at the NASA mission with enthusiasm. Yet, she is skeptical of her own chances to be selected. She glances at the brochure, grabs it and holds tightly with both hands.

"Why would they pick someone from Midland, Texas - that insignificant place?" she asks rhetorically. "But they might."

From blast-off to touchdown, Ms. Dishman insists the "stories" to be written about the mission are endless and, if given the opportunity, she would treat each with tender loving care.

"They say everybody has at least one book in them during their lifetime," she says. "I wrote a book and had it published almost 20 years ago. I wonder if I have a second book in me?

Midland police probe several weekend thefts

From Staff Reports

Two thefts and a burglary were reported to the Midland County Sheriff's Office Saturday, according to reports.

A 1974 Furehof van-type trailer worth $5,000 was reported stolen at the Warfield Truck Stop on Farm to Market 1788. The trailer, thought to have been stolen sometime between Nov. 15 and Saturday, was reported missing by an employee, Paul Mitchell

According to reports, Mitchell's son had left the trailer at the lot because of mechanical problems. When he found the trailer missing, he called the truck stop's broker to locate it. The broker told Mitchell that a truck driver had seen the trailer parked at Key Oil Co. truck stop in Sealy, said reports. The investigation continues.

Debbie Smith, 30, of Horseshoe Lane, reported a burglary at her residence Saturday afternoon, said reports.

Taken were a color television, a satellite control unit, a stereo and a down-filled coat, totaling $1,460. Entry was gained through the front door, which Ms. Smith found ajar upon entering the house, although no signs of forced entry were found.

The burglary was thought to have occurred sometime between 7:30 a.m. and 2:30 p.m. Friday. There are no suspects although a white van was seen in the neighborhood at the time, according to reports.

A theft was reported at Rittenhouse Oil and Gas Co., 5700 Industrial, said reports.

Herschel Rittenhouse, 25, told officers that sometime Friday or Saturday several items were removed from a 1974 Chevrolet pickup truck.

Taken were the doors, tool box and a dashboard cover, totaling $550.

Rittenhouse found tracks from the truck to a service road along I-20. Also found were two cigarette butts left by the suspects at the scene. There are no suspects.

Another burglary was reported to the Midland Police Department Saturday evening, said reports.

The Village Manor Apartments, 2928 W. Louisiana Ave., reported the theft of a skillsaw, two telephones and two calculators. Entry was gained through a north window. No amount of loss was given.

"The music has a powerful close, one which climaxes by calling God's people to follow Him at all cost," Nance said. "To hear the 100-voice choir perform this work for the first time was quite an exhilerating experience."

The second Centennial Celebration, held Aug. 4, celebrated the years 1912 to 1936. During the morning worship services, former church members and staff members who were present were recognized. David Campbell, minister of music from 1973 to 1980, served as music director; and Mrs. Green and Marylyn Leonard produced and directed the second Centennial Profile

"A SPECIAL EMPHASIS on the mission involvement of First Baptist was made during the evening worship service," Vestal said.

"Testimonies by former staff members and others focused on the church's involvement in world missions both through the denomination and in individuals being 'called out' to serve all over the world. An 'Honor Roll' of those church members whom God has called into full-time Christian service was read." lestal said.

Dr. Boyd Hunt, professor at Southwestern Baptist Theological Seminary in Fort Worth and former in-terium pastor in 1953 and from 1975 to 1976, preached the evening worship service.

The years of 1937 to 1960 were observed by the third Centennial Celebration held Oct. 27.

The Rev. Vernon Yearby, pastor from 1942 to 1953, preached in the morning worship services; Mrs. Leonard presented a Centennial Profile and the Sanctuary Choir with orchestra presented the musical "Blessings" with full multi-media slide presentati in.

SATURDAY AND today, the years of 1961 to 1986 are being celebrated with the fourth Centennial Celebration.

The culmination and celebration of this final phase of the church's 100th birthday began with an all-church banquet at the Midland Center Saturday evening. Many former church members were among the 1,200-plus guests.

Morriss was honored for over 20 years of ministry in Midland and Dennis Swanberg, pastor at First Baptist Church of Saginaw, was a featured speaker. Adult Ensembles under the direction of Nance and Miss Bruce presented a musical review of songs from the past 100 years.

"I think Dr. Vestal summed up how many of us who have been involved in this historic year in our church's life feel when he said last Sunday, 'When you have a birthday party of significance you want lots of people to know about it and to come, especially when it coincides with the Centennial Celebration of the city. And not many people live to celebrate the 100 birthday of anything," Nance said. He added, "We hope all those who can will join us in this final tribute to those Midlanders whose pio-neering spirit helped make the day possible."

MANILA, Phil-ippines (AP) — Sen. Phil Gramm, speaking as a member of the Senate armed services committee, said Saturday that a clean presidential election in the Philippines is critical to future U.S. support of the government that takes power. The Texas Republican also said Americans do not foresee a Communist takeover in the Philippines and U.S. bases in this country "are here to stay," no matter who wins a spe-cial Feb. 7 election called by Presi-dent Ferdinand E. Marcos.

The opposition, led by Corazon Aquino, accuses Marcos of planning to cheat. But the president denies the charge and predicts he will win by a landslide.

Deficit hits schools

HOUSTON (AP) - Houston Independent School District officials are ooking for ways to tackle an unprecedented $40.2 million deficit projected for the 1986-87 school year.

Budget Director Rene Wilkerson told school officials during a special budget meeting Friday the money crunch is the result mainly of an unexpected $13 million drop in tax revenues for 1985-86.

The revenues fell because the Harris County Appraisal District last year cut about $2 billion in property values from HISD's tax rolls. Tax revenues to the district are expected to drop again in 1986-87 by $11 million, school officials said.

"This means that, unless we start looking for ways to remedy the problem, we're going to be looking at a

Art bill colors debate

WASHINGTON (AP) - A legal dispute over a famous artist's painting at Fort Worth's Kimbell Art Museum has spilled over into the halls of Congress with U.S. Sen. Lloyd Bentsen introducing a bill that critics say would make the U.S. "a pirate's cove" for stolen art.

The squabble involving both art and politics began with a 1984 lawsuit filed by the country of Romania against the Kimbell, seeking the return of El Greco's 16th century painting, "Giamcomo Bosio" or "A Portrait of an Elderly Ecclesiastic."

valued at more than $6 million, in 1977 for an undisclosed amount.

Romania claims the painting was held at one time by King Carol II, who abdicated during World War II, and it somehow wound up sold to a New York gallery.

In response to the Fort Worth museum's concern. Bentsen filed a bill that would block Romania's lawsuit and similar actions by other countries by putting a statute of limita-tions on claims by foreign governments seeking the return of national treasures.

Spindletop celebrated

BEAUMONT (AP) - For a few hours Friday, residents celebrated the event that transformed Beaumont from a quiet lumber and ricemilling community of 9,000 to a metropolis of 50,000. In observance of the Texas Sesqui-centennial celebration, the saga of the Lucas Gusher and the Spindletop crew from the Beaumont Fire De-partment re-enacted the famous eruption of 85 years ago.

Union blasts Reagan for farm bill, predicts more farm bankruptcies

BROWNSVILLE (AP) — Texas family farmers on Saturday continued their assault on the Reagan administration for passage of a controversial farm bill and said they will go bankrupt if the program is not changed. "If we have to farm five years under this, nobody

"If we have to farm five years under this, nobody here will be in farming," Texas Farmers Union President Joe Rankin said. "The administration provided the leadership for less farm income."

The farmers union, meeting in this South Texas city for its 82nd annual convention, has heard from Gov. Mark White, Agriculture Commissioner Jim Hightower and state legislators during its three-day conference.

All criticized the Reagan administration for passage of a bill that farmers said would force 25 percent of them out of business and bring them even less for their crops.

Rankin said only 300 of the more than 7,000 farmers union members turned out and blamed it on the depressed farm economy.

On Saturday, Oklahoma Farmers Union President Jack Kelsey criticized the farm bill, lashed out at resigning Agriculture Secretary John Block and said the future for farmers is bleak.

"We're working our hearts out, but we've come up with a farm bill that brings nothing to farmers, but a loss," he said.

"It is very hard to be kind to a person who during his reign there were more foreclosures, bankruptcies...and suicides than ever in the history of farming," Kelsey

Waco radio hoax tricks Elvis fans

WACO (AP) — Switchboard lights flared after a Waco radio station played an Elvis Presley record backwards, with a fake voice-over of "The King" himself promising to show up on the David Letterman show.

Never mind that Presley has been dead almost nine years.

Brad Rivers, known as "Smilin' Brad Rivers" on his show on KJNE-FM, arranged the hoax but said he had no idea it would get such a reaction.

Rivers said the station aired six direct disclaimers during his four-hour radio show, insisting the recording was compiled by staffers and was a "piece of entertainment" when it aired on Elvis's birthday, but fans still refused to believe the truth.

Telephone calls were made not only to the station but to NBC headquarters in New York after KJNE-FM's production team spun Presley's song, "Santa is Coming Back to Town," backwards, and Elvis "spoke."

"It was really a shock to me," Rivers said. "They all wanted to believe he was alive. I flat underestimated Elvis fans. I would probably do it again, but I'm concerned I hurt Elvis fans. We wanted to have fun with the rumor, not make fun of Elvis fans."

The radio station deluged with calls from Elvis fans, some wanting to buy copies of the message played on KJNE-FM, others wanting more said. "I think his leadership is a complete disaster." Kelsey also called Block, who resigned last week, a puppet of the Reagan administration. "Whenever we can find a man who can break those

"Whenever we can find a man who can break those strings and stand up for the farmers and fight for the farmers, then we'll have a secretary of agriculture, but I don't see that coming," Kelsey said.

I don't see that coming," Kelsey said. Rankin said that farmers across the country will begin looking in the next few months at the voting records of their congressmen and Republican senators who are up for re-election.

"Farmers are going to start looking into their pocketbooks and they are going to vote for some changes," he predicted. "It's not a Republican vs. Democrat thing straight across, because we've had some Democrats vote with the administration on this issue."

Texas Department of Agriculture statistics have indicated that more than 100 Texas farmers leave the business each week.

Rankin said children of farming families are in a precarious position because of the crisis and wanting to keep a family tradition.

"It's very demeaning to them," said Rankin, a third generation farmer. "I have a 17-year-old son. I certainly don't encourage him to go into farming. I want him to get an education to do other things.

"If I were to give him my farm debt-free he still wouldn't be able to make a living on that," he said. "I'm trying to keep ownership of the land and we hope the future will get better."

Group disputes hijack victim's Purple Heart

EL PASO (AP) — A civilian Air Force employee killed during a Mideast hijacking should not have been awarded a posthumous Purple Heart because it "degrades" the medal, members of the local chapter of the Military Order of the Purple Heart say. The group has drafted a letter to President Reagan and several Congressmen protesting the medal that was presented to Scarlett Rogenkamp's mother, Hetty Peterson, during graveside services. Hijackers shot Ms. Rogenkamp, 38, of Oceanside, Calif., in the head after they commandeered an Egyptair jetliner Nov. 24 on its way from Athens, Greece, to Cairo, Egypt.

"It was an unfortunate thing she did get killed in tragic circumstances — but the Purple Heart was not intended to be given to just anyone except those who are wounded in action," Gilberto Molinar said Friday.

Doctor: AIDS may develop in one third of exposed

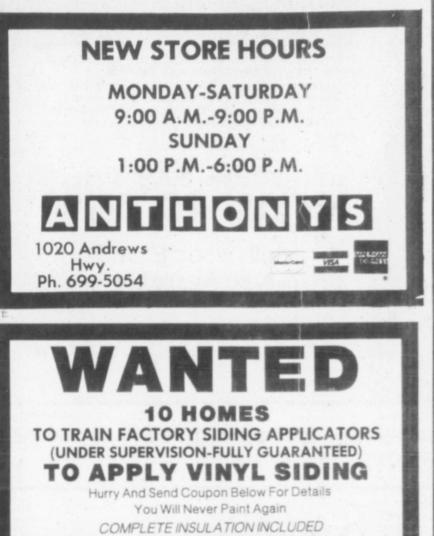

ATLANTA (AP) — As many as one out of three people exposed to the AIDS virus may develop the disease itself, not the 5 percent to 20 percent previously estimated, federal researchers say.

Scientists with the National Can-cer Institute in Washington have found that about one-third of a group of homosexual men in New York City who showed signs of the virus in 1982 have since developed acquired immune deficiency syndrome, said Dr. James Goedert, an NCI cancer expert.

The institute previously had esti-mated that between 5 percent and 20 percent of all people exposed to the AIDS virus contract the disease; the national Centers for Disease Control has estimated that 5 percent to 10 percent get AIDS.

"It's becoming clear that that's too low, at least the lower end," Goedert said.

With time, even more people exposed to the virus could go on to develop the disease, Goedert said. "Until we get there, we won't know," he said.

Group seeks answers on MIAs

WASHINGTON (AP) — The leader of a congressional delegation says he takes with him "the voice of the American people" when he travels to Vietnam this week to press for more answers about the fate of U.S. servicemen missing in Indochina.

Sen. Frank Murkowski, R-Alaska, departs Monday leading the first official Senate delegation to Hanoi since the end of the Vietnam War. Previous congressional trips have been conducted by House members.

As chairman of the Veterans Affairs Committee, Murkowski also plans hearings on possible recent sightings of live Americans in Southeast Asia when he returns from his nine-day journey. The senator, who has 60,000 veterans, more than 10 percent of Alaska's population, in his sparsely populated state, said "I am not without a reasonable doubt there could be some live Americans held in Vietnam."

Accompanying him to Vietnam, Laos and Thailand are Sen. Dennis DeConcini, D-Ariz., and Reps. Michael Bilirakis, R-Fla., and Bob McEwen, R-Ohio, who serve on the House Veterans' Affairs Committee.

DeConcini, whose Arizona constituents include the families of about 200 servicemen still unaccounted for in Southeast Asia, said he opposes any normalization of relations with Vietnam until MIA questions are answered to U.S. satisfaction.

"That is a sensitive issue here and in my opinion the Vietnamese have been very callous about it," said De-Concini. "I think now they realize that unless they come to terms with it there is little hope of normalization."

En route to Hanoi, the delegation will stop at Clark Air Force Base outside Manila for a briefing on the Feb. presidential election in the Philippines.

Murkowski's fact-finding mission follows the visit of a high-ranking Reagan Administration team that met last week in Hanoi with Foreign Minister Nguyen Co Thach.

The Vietnamese told that delegation they hope to resolve the issue of Americans missing in Vietnam and off its shores before the end of next year. The Vietnamese government also announced it has collected information on about 50 servicemen killed in the war, and would turn it over in late February. The two sides discussed future excavations of air crash sites and agreed there was no present need to establish a U.S. MIA liaison office in Hanoi.

There are 2,441 Americans listed as missing in action in Indochina. Most — 1,797 men — were reported missing in Vietnam, with 556 unaccounted for in Laos and and the rest lost in Cambodia.

Murkowski said he's taking his delegation to Hanoi and Vientiane, Laos, to reinforce the administration's efforts and show the United States' former enemies "the MIA issue is a high priority with the American people and Congress."

"This can't go on forever," said the first-term Republican. Logic dictates we're not going to find every single one of those missing in action, but this issue must be resolved to a reasonable satisfaction, and I don't think we've reached that point yet."

Murkowski is eager to open hearings on the renewed debate concerning possible sightings of live Americans still held in Indochina 13 years after America's longest war ended.

Last week six Americans, some of whom said they personally saw American prisoners as recently as four months ago in Vietnam and Laos, filed suit in U.S. District Court in Fayetteville, N.C., charging the Reagan administration with quashing witness accounts. The charges have been denied by administration officials.

Vietnam claims it holds no live Americans, but last week told the American visitors it would investigate such reports if they were received from the United States

The National League of Families of American Prisoners and Missing in Southeast Asia says it belives there are Americans being held alive in the former war zone.

Rise in lung cancer deaths predicted to follow world 'smoking epidemic'

WASHINGTON (AP) - A worsening worldwide epidemic of cigarette smoking will result in a 50 percent increase in lung cancer deaths by the year 2000, according to a study released Saturday.

More than 1 billion people in the world smoke cigarettes at an average rate of more than half a pack a day, said the study by the Worldwatch Institute, a Washington-based think tank.

Cigarette smoking is increasing worldwide at a rate of 2.1 percent a year, the study said.

Because smoking's health hazards appear only after years of exposure to smoke, the continued growth of the habit will mean increased illness in years to come, the study said.

"Tragically, the cost in lives and money can only be expected to grow," the study said. "Seventy-three percent more tobacco is consumed now than 20 years ago, so without a sudden drop in smoking, lung cancer deaths, for example, will almost certainly increase by 50 percent by the turn of the century. Many such losses will occur in nations totally unprepared to deal with the new epidemic."

"It follows, too, that the incidence of bronchitis and emphysema will grow as tobacco use grows," the study said. "At the current rate the next 20 years would also witness an increase of 50 percent in these diseases." The study, conducted by senior researcher William U. Chandler, is titled "Banishing Tobacco" and argues for that goal. But the study says the world has a long way to go to reach it.

Despite a perception in the United States of a decline in smoking, total cigarette consumption has declined in only a few countries worldwide - and the United States is not one of them

Greece leads the world in per capita cigarette consumption, the study says, followed by Japan, the United States, Canada, Yugoslavia and Poland.

While the percentage of U.S. adults who smoke has dropped from 43 percent to 32 percent since 1964, those who continue to smoke consume 20 percent more tobacco than smokers did 20 years ago, the study said.

Prevalance of smoking seems to have had little connection with government anti-smoking efforts, the study said.

For example, Poland, China, East Germany and the Soviet Union ban tobacco advertising and have strong anti-smoking policies, but consumption remains high. But advertising bans and warning labels in Finland, Norway and Sweden have resulted in a decline in cigarette consumption.

Gov. Edwards to face re-trial

NEW ORLEANS (AP) - The government will seek to retry Gov. Edwin Edwards, his brother and three other people on federal racketeering and fraud charges stemming from a $10 million hospital investment scheme, a prosecutor said Saturday.

"Maybe we can do it better the second time," said U.S. Attorney John Volz.

The first trial ended in December with three defendants freed for lack of evidence, and a mistrial declared for Edwards and the other four.

Volz announced his decision at a news conference here, and Edwards followed up with a news conference of his own in Baton Rouge

"This is a political case, rather than a legal one," said Edwards, a Democrat. "It's not surprising he decided to retry it.

A strong majority of the jurors in the first trial, which lasted three months, voted to find the men innocent on all counts.

Nevertheless, Volz said he and his assistants will present a "streamlined" case to a new jury. He said the next trial might take only five or six weeks and that he would try to make the case easier to understand.

Volz said he would probably try the case this summer. But Edwards said he would seek a trial in late February or March in hopes of getting the matter behind him before the state Legislature convenes in regular session in April.

The governor, his brother Marion and their business associates, Gus Mijalis, Ronald Falgout and James Wyllie Jr., are accused of using their influence to obtain state certification for hospital and nursing home projects in which they held interests. Five of the projects were sold for about $10 million. Edwards made about $2 million on the deals in which he was involved.

Much of the allegedly illegal activity took place between the end of Edwards' second term as governor in 1980 and the beginning of his third term in March 1984. However, prosecutors claimed he took actions after he regained office to benefit the enterprise. A retrial would prove costly to both sides.

Judges weigh balanced-budget bill

WASHINGTON (AP) - The new law that could force an end to the federal government's deficit spending by 1991 swept through Congress with overwhelming majority support.

But in a packed courtroom last week, the measure came under heavy attack on constitutional grounds and even defenders of the Gramm-Rudman Act had trouble mustering enthusiastic support for Michael Davidson, a lawyer for the Senate leadership, said the law is experimental and deserves a chance. It tion of powers.

"should not be terminated so quickly," Davidson urged a special threejudge federal panel.

Perhaps the most vigorous backing of the law came from Judge Antonin Scalia of the U.S. Circuit Court of Appeals here who presided over more than three hours of often arcane arguments.

Scalia, who may have been playing devil's advocate, repeatedly challenged the lawyers who were attacking the measure as an abdication of congressional powers and a violation of constitutionally mandated separa-

Leading the charge against the law was Alan Morrison, who heads a pro-consumer organization affiliated with Ralph Nader and who represented 12 members of Congress who filed suit against Gramm-Rudman.

Morrison asserted that a political stalemate caused by Congress' inability to make the tough choices of trimming spending prompted the Gramm-Rudman "gimmick."

He said the month-old act unlawfully delegates congressional powers to three agencies headed by appointed bureaucrats.

ATLANTA (AP) — The nation Martin Luther King Jr. challenged to fulfill its promise of freedom will honor him next week with a new holiday, the first ever for a black American.

Congress has declared the third Monday of January a time "to reflect on the principles of racial equality and nonviolent social change" that guided the martyred civil rights leader and forged his dream for the United States.

And so, to usher in the first official observance of the holiday, organizers have chosen the theme "Living the Dream" for the Jan. 20 celebration.

King, who was born Jan. 15, 1929, was assassinated April 4, 1968.

Events kicking off the holiday have already begun in Atlanta, King's birthplace and home during most of his crusade against racial segregation, and in Washington, scene of his stirring call for America to "rise up and live out the true meaning of its creed.

The Martin Luther King Jr. Center for Nonviolent Social Change has planned a series of events in Atlanta, culminating in a parade on the holiday that will reunite many of the people who marched with King in the 1950s and '60s.

Before the parade, his widow, Coretta Scott King, will present the 1986 peace prize that bears King's name.

The celebration will end the night of the holiday with a nationally televised gala featuring performances in Atlanta and Washington benefiting the King center.

The gala is being produced by musician Stevie Wonder, who campaigned for years for a holiday in

Members of the clergy in Chicago are planning an interfaith service Jan. 19, and they have asked those who attend to bring food for the poor.

Wisconsin Gov. Anthony Earl has asked state employees to spend the holiday helping farmers pick corn left in fields because of wet weather, an idea applauded by black activists. In Rhode Island, King's birthday will be marked by the statewide ringing of church bells and a twominute radio and television broadcast of excerpts of King's "I Have a Dream" speech in 1963.

Welfare mothers carry burden of dependency

grams for welfare mothers that don't provide child care and other services doom millions of women to lives of dependency on government assistance, according to a congressional study released Saturday.

Despite "overwhelming evidence...that women in poverty desire to be self-sufficient," welfare regulations make it harder, not easier, for aid recipients to become financially independent, said the report by the House Government Operations Committee.

'Although there are many federal requirements for participation in work and training for welfare families, there are no concurrent federal provisions for quality child care, even to low-income families," the report said.

The lack of safe and affordable child care can foreclose the possibility of employment, training, education, and even the opportunity to job hunt," the report said.

Regulations governing the Aid to Families with Dependent Children h helps 10.8 million ram, which people in 3.7 million households, make it difficult for low-income mothers to obtain the education or training needed to get other than the most low-paying jobs, the report said. "The low earnings, instability, and lack of benefits associated with these jobs make economic independence an elusive goal for many relying on public assistance," the report said. Noting that the number of households headed by women increased from 4.4 million in 1960 to 9.4 million in 1982, the report said there is a growing shortage of child care for working mothers.

WASHINGTON (AP) - Job pro- that fails to fully integrate quality child care will not only be unworkable and counterproductive, but will compromise the welfare of low-income children," the panel said.

Arlene Gahan, a spokeswoman for the Social Security Administration, which administers AFDC, said the shortage of child care is a concern, but she said "we've been talking to the states and it has not appeared to be so great a problem as it was originally thought to be."

But Helen Blank, a child care exert for the Children's Defense Fund, said cuts in federal day-care money since 1981 have forced 24 states to reduce the number of children served. If the amounts are adjusted for inflation, 35 states spent less money on child care in 1985 than they did in 1981, she said.

The report also noted that because of budget reductions, the existing Work Incentive (WIN) program "has only been able to provide services to a small percent of the AFDC caseload, and has generally targeted those recipients who are most readily employable and least expensive serve. Last year, the WIN program gave states $248 million to set up job placement and training programs for welfare mothers. The Reagan administration, which has sought each year to abolish the WIN program, contends states are not strict enough about requiring recipients to look for work or participate in training programs. But the study, prepared by the House panel's intergovernmental relations and human resources subcommittee, praised the efforts of several states, including Massachusetts, to develop demonstration work programs for welfare mothers.

NEW YORK (AP) - New York becomes a wordsmith's wonderland this week, as authors Kurt Vonne-gut, Eugene Ionesco, Nadine Gordimer and more than 700 colleagues join in an international talkfest on the conflict between writers and the state.

The 48th International PEN Congress, described as the largest gathering of American and foreign writers ever assembled, begins Sunday night with a welcome from Secretary of State George Shultz and from writer Norman Mailer, president of the PEN American Center and organizer of the congress.

Mailer helped raise the $800,000 tab for the congress by staging a series of readings by famous writers and convinced the State Department to admit writers who would otherwise be denied visas because of their beliefs.

The theme of the congress, selected by short story writer Donald transplantation." Barthelme, is "The Writer's Imagination and the Imagination of the State

"The central idea of the congress is that governments everywhere are out of control; that is, instead of existing to serve citizens, they have a life of their own and a life that must be examined," Barthelme said.

Bolivian coca leaf farmers leaving siege on police camp

LA PAZ, Bolivia (AP) - Most of the estimated 17,000 coca leaf farmers encircling a camp of 245 narcotics officers quit their siege Saturday and military intervention will not be needed, officials said.

Edgar Merwin, Washington's adviser to the U.S.-financed narcotics unit, said fewer than 100 growers still surrounded the elite "Leopards" police camp, although roads to the camp remained blocked and farming leaders threatened violence if the police did not leave the area.

The officers have been trapped in their remote camp in central Bolivia since Tuesday by coca farmers angered by the government campaign to disrupt cocaine production. Cocaine is made from the coca leaf.

The farmers also contend that two drunken officers raped a local woman.

Leaders of the local farmers federation said in a statement released to reporters Saturday that "acts of vio-

The police camp is at Ivargazama, a village in Bolivia's tropical Chapare egion

The government had said Friday it might send troops to rescue the police.

But Lopez said on Saturday: "It is no longer necessary to send troops because farmers are returning to their normal activities.

Merwin said the roadblocks were now manned mainly by drug traffickers, and growers were losing interest.

"There is no doubt cocaine traffickers are behind the blockade, said Merwin, who has maintained regular radio contact with the Leoprds camp.

The Leopards were set up in 1983 with financial help from the U.S. government. Merwin is a former

Special Forces officer contracted by the State Department to advise and train the unit

Cocaine brings at least $450 million a year into this impoverished Andean mountain nation, about the same amount as legal exports, said Interior Minister Barthelemy.

The population of the Chapare has doubled to 80,000 in the last three years because of the lucrative nature of coca farming or production of coca paste, the intermediate step between coca leaf and refined cocaine.

The United States, the major market for the cocaine, has said it will cut off aid to Bolivia unless it reduces coca production by nearly 10,000 acres. American aid since President Victor Paz Estenssoro was sworn in Aug. 6 has totaled $64.5 million, but the amount for 1986 has not been set.

Beginning in December, the Bolivian government promised farmers $350 for every hectare - about 21/2 acres - they take out of coca production.

The Leopards entered the Chapare area in December after a gathering of at least 10,000 coca leaf farmers voted to resist the government's voluntary reduction plan.

Police say the area around where the Leopards are besieged had produced 1,100 pounds of coca paste a month before the Leopards arrived.

NOTICE OF AVAILABILITY= OF EDUCATIONAL FUNDS

ELIGIBILITY - Those eligible to apply are descendants and spouses of persons who were employed for a minimum of one year by either the late Mr. Sid Richardson or by an organization in which he had a substantial business interest during his lifetime, or who subsequent to his death have been employed for a minimum of one year in a business enterprise which is a continuation of a business in which he had a substantial interest.

Limited funds are available to assist in defraying cost of college education and of vocational training. These scholarships are awarded on a competitive basis according to academic achievement and financial need. Eligible persons applying for aid for the academic year beginning in the summer of 1986 must file application forms prior to March 31, 1986.

Also in Manila, U.S. Sen. Phil Gramm, R-Texas, a member of the Senate Armed Services Committee, told a news conference a clean, honest vote is critical to future U.S. support of the government that will take power after the election.

It took Mrs. Aquino and her motorcade four hours to get through the throngs over the 10-mile route from the airport to downtown Cebu, a distance that normally can be negotiated in 30 minutes.

Crowds kept up a chant of "Cory, Doy!" referring to Mrs. Aquino and Laurel by their nicknames, and groups of men shouted "Hang Marcos!" as the motorcade reached the regional headquarters of Marcos' New Society Movement in the city.

The six-man U.S. delegation from the National Republican Institute for International Affairs and the National Democratic Institute for International Affairs met reporters before returning to the United States.

Keith Schuette, executive director of the NRIA, told a news conference that the proposed group of international election watchers could include government and political party representatives experienced in observing elections.

The group, which was in the country for a week, met with Marcos Friday evening.

Schuette said, "Most appropriate to us (in that meeting) is the public reiteration of President Marcos' commitment to international observers...(and) his commitment for a clean and honest election. We believe that those public statements are essential to our mission."

The members said in a statement they had made no final decision, but would prepare a report upon their return to Washington and release their findings Jan. 23.

Iran to up oil exports after new discovery

NICOSIA, Cyprus (AP) - Iran has discovered new oil deposits and is increasing the capacity of its oil export terminals to 6 million barrels per day, Iran's official Islamic Republic News Agency reported Saturday.

IRNA, monitored in Nicosia, said Prime Minister Hussein Musavi disclosed the information in an interview published in the Turkish daily newspaper Gunes. "We have discovered major oil reserves and, in the near future, the capacity of our oil export oil re-capacity of our oil export oil re-serves will increase to 6 million bar-rels per day." Musavi said, according to excerpts published by IRNA. The agency gave no details of the new discoveries. Iran's current export capacity is not known, but it is fulfilling its ex-port quota of 2.3 million barrels per day as set by the Organization of Pe-troleum Exporting Countries.

WORLD IN BRIEF

Polish leader jailed

WARSAW, Poland (AP) — The government Saturday announced the arrest of a top Solidarity underground leader, in hiding since the December 1981 martial law crackdown that suppressed the Soviet bloc's first free trade union movement.

The official news agency PAP said security police in Gdansk captured Bogdan Borusewicz, who represented the Gdansk region on the Solidarity underground's three-member Provisional Coordinating Commission, known by its Polish initials TKK.

"An intensive investigation is being carried out in the case," PAP said.

Borusewicz was on the military prosecutor's wanted list for "carrying out illegal activities aimed against the vital interests of the state," PAP said.

U.S. Guard in Stuttgart

STUTTGART, West Germany (AP) — The first of 3,500 Wisconsin National Guard troops arrived Saturday in Stuttgart to prepare for field manuevers in West Germany, a U.S. Army spokeswoman said. U.S. Army officials said this week

U.S. Army officials said this week transfer of 3,500 troops from the 32nd Separate Infantry Brigade to West Germany would be the largest such movement ever of a single U.S. reserve or National Guard unit during a "Reforger" exercise.

Reforger, an acronym for Return of Forces to Germany, is an annual exercise in which American troops and equipment are brought to Europe to reinforce NATO forces assigned to defend the continent against Soviet-led Warsaw pact troops in case of war.

Pope blasts terrorists

VATICAN CITY (LAT) — Pope John Paul II Saturday sharply condemned terrorism in his New Year's address before the Vatican's diplomatic corps here.

The pope urged the United Nations not to tolerate the behavior of member states if they failed to disassociate themselves sufficiently from terrorism, which he said "strikes blindly to kill." He also deplored "systematic and to a certain extent institutionalized" terrorism of "states which destroy the freedom and rights of millions of people."

Soviets towing sub

MIDLAND REPORTER-TELEGRAM, SUN., JANUARY 12, 1986

TOKYO (AP) — A Japanese patrol plane spotted a Soviet resue ship towing a surfaced Soviet submarine northward in the East China Sea on Saturday, Maritime Self-Defense Force officials said.

Force spokesman Kazuhiko Watanabe said a 4,050-ton salvage, rescue and mooring vessel was towing the 5,800-ton, Echo II-class cruise missile submarine about 280 miles northwest of the southern Japanese island of Okinawa. Watanabe said it was not known if the submarine was disabled.

China's output rising

PEKING (AP) — China's industrial output rose 17.7 percent in 1985, more than double the state target of 8 percent despite government spending cuts to cool the overheated economy, the official news agency Xinhua reported Saturday.

Industrial output was valued at $257.4 billion, the agency said, quoting Zhao Weichen, vice minister of the State Economic Commission.

Real Estate today By Don Harvey

WHY BUY WHEN RENTING IS SO NICE?

We have often observed that ownership has so many advantages over renting. We still believe it, yet there are some who don't.

Take the case of the young family that has rented a new apartment. They are delighted because the rental includes a lot of amenities more than seen in customary rental units. In fact, many of these additional amenity costs are not even passed through to tenants. If it seems to good to be true, it probably is. The answer could be future condominium conversion.

The property owner may want to have all the luxury physical components in place today for conversion and sale of units some time in the future. When? Only the owner knows- but there is the possibility that, as a renter, you may be left in limbo when the conversion date arrives.

On the other hand, If you BUY your own home or condo unit, you'll never have to worry looking for another place to live. The decision and timing will be yours and yours alone.

Tito's widow sues state for millions as Yugoslavs suffer economic crisis

BELGRADE, Yugoslavia (AP) — The widow of Presi-dent Josip Broz Tito is suing the Yugoslav government in hopes of gaining possession of his valuable properties now in the hands of the state.

They include a residence near Belgrade, valuable furnishings from his residence on the Adriatic island of Brioni, a vineyard on the island of Vanga, cars, boats, paintings, and Tito's medals.

Jovanka Broz's claim, filed in the Federal Public Claims Court here, is unprecedented and authorities have shown some concern that the suit could besmirch Tito's image as a partisan fighter against the Nazis in World War II and the founder of Communist Yugoslavia.

Tito, who died May 4, 1980 after 35 years in power, is still officially venerated. But many Yugoslavs now maintain that the country's current economic crisis inflation at 78 percent, unemployment at 15 percent and a foreign debt of about $20 billion - took root in the last few years of the Tito era and hold him at least partly to blame.

Tito and Jovanka Broz married in 1953, and she was a permanent fixture at his side, until she unexpectedly dropped from public view in 1978, after rumors of a bitter dispute with him over policy matters.

She appeared at his funeral but has rarely been seen since, although she is said to bring flowers each morning to Tito's grave in Belgrade.

Her claim against the government was made public Dec. 27, when Justice Minister Borislav Krajina announced he was seeking legislation regulating property rights to the late president's estate. On Krajina's urging, the Federal Assembly passed a law making most of the estate public property. It was not disclosed when Mrs. Broz filed her suit in the Public Claims Court, but some sources say it could have been initiated as early as 1984, followed by a series of motions. The court's proceedings are closed to the public and there has been no indication when a deci#### sion is likely.

The total value of Tito's properties has never been reported, if even assessed in any detailed way.

In West European terms, his residence on Brioni alone would be worth millions of dollars. The island has a private zoo, Roman ruins and museums with valuable artifacts

A private house, nestled in orange and lemon groves on nearby Vanga Island, is decorated with gifts from foreign leaders. It also contains a Picasso painting, a photo lab, a machine shop and oddities such as two stuffed leopards.

Krajina said Mrs. Broz and two sons from Tito's two previous marriages were also suing several publishers over royalties from his written works. That suit is before the Belgrade District Court.

The biweekly magazine Svet said in a recent edition the royalties from two of the publishing houses alone were worth the equivalent of $150,000, but the total amount sought from all the publishers has not been disclosed.

Krajina contended that the state has been more than fair to Tito's widow.

He told the Federal Assembly the government built her a residence valued at the equivalent of $330,000 after she refused to pick one of six homes offered after Tito's death.

He said her monthly pension of $560, which is five times the average Yugoslav's salary, and all maintenance costs of her new house are paid by the government.

According to the magazine Nin, the dispute has caused "public shock" among a population facing eroding living standards and other economic problems.

The government seems aware that a dispute over wealth could fuel ill feelings during a period of hard times in Yugoslavia and erode Tito's image even further.

Soviets lagging on oil production

MOSCOW (AP) - The Communist Party daily Pravda said Saturday the Soviet Union failed to meet oil production targets for 1985 and expressed concern that output already is lagging behind planned levels for 1986

In a front-page article, Pravda crit-icized officials in charge of the oil industry for dragging their feet in implementing plans to boost production.

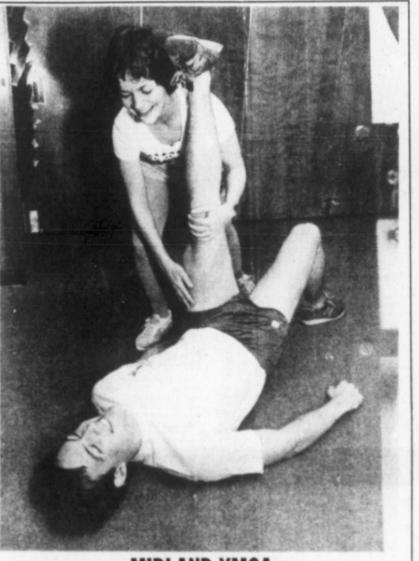

Similar criticism was leveled in a separate front-page article in the national newspaper Sovietskaya Rossiya.

They blamed oil industry and government officials for failing to make technological improvements fast enough, especially in the Tyumen region of western Siberia, which produces about 60 percent of Soviet oil.

"The plan of last year wasn't ful-filled," Pravda said, adding that work already is lagging behind the plan for 1986.

Last year was the fifth consecutive year the Soviet Union has not fulfilled its oil production plan.

out the programs for speeding up scientific and technological progress in working the wells, and the appropriate schedules were composed and the orders were given," Pravda said. There have been resolutions, but so far there is little return from them," it said.

Pravda did not provide figures on actual oil production last year. The official target had been set at about 630 million tons.

The news agency Tass reported last fall that oil output for the first nine months of 1985 declined 3 percent, to 445 million tons, from the same period a year earlier.

Soviet oil output declined for the first time on a year-to-year basis in 1984, falling to 613 million tons from 616.3 million tons in 1983.

Since then the state-run news media have issued repeated calls to improve production facilities and living conditions in the oil fields.

The Soviet Union is the world's largest producer of oil and natural gas.

Fair skies continue

From Staff and Wire Reports

Skies will continue to be fair with cooler temperatures at night, accord-ing to the National Weather Service at Midland Regional Air Terminal.

Today will be fair with high temperatures expected near 60 degrees and northeasterly winds at 10 to 15 mph. Tonight will be continued fair with a low in the upper 20's. Mon-day's high will be near 60 degrees.

The highest temperature ever recorded for Saturday's date was 78 degrees in 1935. A low of 5 degrees was recorded on today's date in 1963.

STATE

Sunny skies and mild temperatures prevailed across Texas on Saturday as high pressure remained the dominate weather feature. Other than a few high level clouds over the lower Rio Grande Valley, Texas skies were cloud free.

Northerly winds prevailed across much of South Texas while west and southwest winds were common across the rest of the state. Wind speeds were generally in the 10 to 20 mph range.

Temperatures warmed into the 60s across most of the state, except for a few readings in the 50s over the Permian Basin and far West Texas. Late-afternoon extremes ranged from 58 at El Paso to 68 at Brownsville and McAllen.

The National Weather Service said highs Sunday should be mostly in the 60s except for readings in the 50s over parts of West Texas and in the lower 70s in far South Texas.

NATION

It was dry and unseasonably warm Saturday for many parts of the United States, although a blast of high wind in Montana and North Dakota added a wintry touch.

It was record 56 degrees in Omaha, Neb., breaking a record of 54 degrees set on Jan. 11, 1880, and again in 1941. In downtown Omaha Central Park Mall, picnics and roller skating replaced ice skating as people enjoyed the unseasonably mild weather.

Other high temperature records for the date were posted in usually chilly International Falls, Minn., which got up to 42 degrees, and St. Cloud, Minn., which was one degree cooler.

Strong winds howled across the northern Plains and high wind warnings were issued for northeast Montana as well as northwest and northcentral North Dakota. West winds of 30 to 45 mph with gusts in excess of 50 mph are expected.

LOCAL Opinion

Labor council gears up to fight trade imbalance

By RAMONA NYE Staff Writer

The trade imbalance is the number one threat to labor in the United States, says the president of the Permian Basin Central Labor Council.

"We're really concerned about the imbalance of trade. It worries us because it's tied in with the loss of jobs and it's the worst in our history. And there doesn't seem to be anything being done about it," said D.L. Willis, president of the central organization of 17 unions in the Permian Basin, including seven in Midland.

To equalize the trade imbalance, the organization will be working locally to elect congressmen who are willing to pressure foreign governments to accept more Americanmade products into their markets, he said

The government expects foreign markets to voluntarily accept products now banned for sale in their countries, he said.

The fact is, they're not going to do it voluntarily unless we're willing to pressure them. They're not going to change.

"We will support free trade as long as there is reciprocity," he said. Once, only the clothing, textile and steel industries were affected by trade imbalances, he said, but now the electronics industry is starting to hurt.

One example is Japan's refusal to sell American-made telephone equipment in its country.

They (Japan) have never allowed us to sell our telephone equipment over there, but they want to dump theirs on us," said Willis, who works on telephone equipment for Southwestern Bell.

Other than electing congressman who support enforced reciprocity, Willis said, "There's very little we can do here. But at least we ought to let our national leaders know we're concerned about it."

Unemployment rates and the economic bust also have affected local union memberships by cutting them in half. Permian Basin area memberships have dropped from a high of about 12,500 during the boom to a present membership of about 6,500, he said.

"There's been a dramatic decline in membership here, basically for economic reasons," Willis said.

And unless the economy shows an upturn, Willis says he does not foresee more unions forming in the area or increased membership

"The recession has had a real detrimental effect on union organizations out here.

"It tends to help union organizing when there's a good, positive attitude, as far as the economy is concerned.

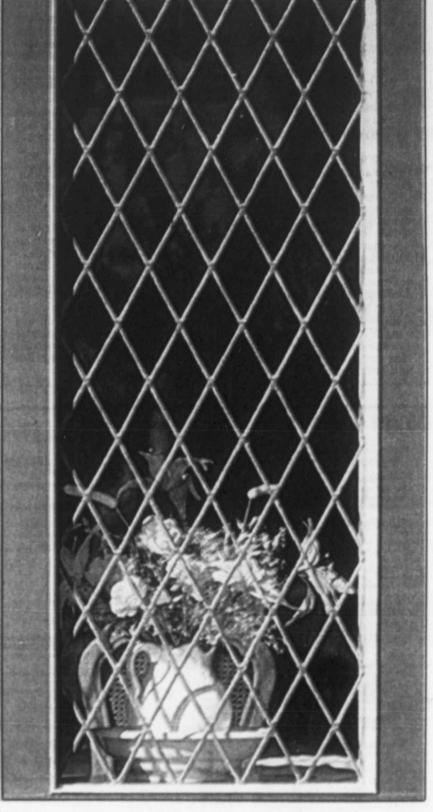

"When times are good, you've got people that are always wanting to progress," said the 40-year union member.

Despite local decreased membership, Willis says, nationwide the image of unions is improving following several union attempts to buy failing factories and keep people employed. In general, Willis says, American people seem to accept a double standard when it comes to unions.

"The amazing thing about American people, if you ask them, 'Do they think workers should have unions? 90 percent will say 'yes.' If you ask them if Polish workers should have unions, 100 percent will say 'yes.'

"A lot are not willing to apply the same philosophy they would give to Polish unions to organizations that would help people here.'

Unions like any organization will have flaws, though, Willis admits. like anything Unions are They're not perfect. They're creatures of individuals. It's the responsibility of individuals to maintain employment. Unions are there to help individuals if individuals are unjustly treated."

Commissioner cites candor in re-election bid

From Staff Reports

Midland County Commissioner Win Brown cited his candor and "upfront" approach to issues in announcing his candidacy for reelection

He also spoke of his efforts in running an efficient county government.

Brown, an independent landman, is seeking his fifth four-year term as commissioner under the Republican Party banner. Filing deadline for candidacy is Feb. 3.

He was first elected in 1970. "I think that our county government has been run very efficiently,' said Brown, 58. He said the county commissioners have kept the tax rate, now set at 19.96 cents per $100 valuation, "as low as possible

"And even in one year (in the 1970s) in my term in office, we even lowered it." The tax rate was dropped due to an increase in property values. But shortly afterward, Brown recalled, "The boom hit, and we had to go back up."

The tax rate has remained basically the same," he said, but often fluctuates due to variations in property values, he said. The commissioners set the tax rate each year.

"I feel that I have represented my people (in Precinct 4 in northwest Midland) in a manner in which they wanted to be represented.

Brown said he always has kept an "open-door policy," tries promptly to respond to calls and is not bothered by after-hours telephone calls.

"I will always listen to the voters," he said, "I will always keep a very sensitive ear to the voters.'

Brown cited some of the more recent challenging issues before the Commissioners' Court:

. Jail: "Really, I was the only commissioner who took a stand on that (building a new jail), and my stance has been growing in popularity." Brown favored a $9.9-million bond issue to build a new jail apart from the courthouse. "It was the most cost-effective approach to our problems." Instead, voters opted for a $3million bond issue which called for renovating the existing jail and launching a study into Midland county courthouse, jail and library

Win Brown

• Continuing threat: "We see more encroachment of the federal government at the county level, and that's not right. I am strictly an advocate of keeping as many things as possible on the local level and not letting the federal government intervene. Let's take care of what we can the best way we can and not let the federal or state government do it for

• Branch library: The Midland Centennial Branch Library was opened in late 1985 at Midland Park Mall. "It appears to be quite successful in meeting the needs of a lot of people at a minimal cost."

· Culver Youth Home. Expansion of the home for troubled teen-agers is in progress.

Brown is president-elect of the West Texas County Judges and Commissioners Association (WTCJCA) and is former chairman of the North Texas State University's Board of Regents. He is a 1951 graduate of NTSU. He said the association of judges and commissioners works for "good legislation."

Brown views himself as a doer. "So many county officials want to et back and let George do it." Brown said he holds a steady urse and doesn

A livestock show is sort of a prepschool for life

"I think the kids learn respect as much as anything else," said Ted McVey, who exhibited livestock as a youngster in the 1950s

This weekend, Midland County 4-H Club and Future Farmers of America youths are preparing their combined 120 calves, swine and lambs for auctioning at 7 p.m. Monday in the 37th annual Midland County Livestock Show at Midland County Exhibit Building.

"We've got good quality lambs and steers," Earnest Kiker, Midland County agricultural agent, said Saturday. "We've got good barrows. All of the young people have been working hard throughout the year" in preparing for the show.

"It's an outstanding show," said Upton County Judge Peggy Garner of McCamey, "and I especially liked the sheep judge (Kyle Smith of Seminole). And my grandson (Clay) didn't even win."

McVey said youths in the 4-H and FFA programs develop respect for the animals which they come to know and understand and develop rapport with the people with whom they work. Youngsters learn that animals aren't "dumb" and that each animal has a personality.

"It keeps them on a positive note."

McVey said. "I think it ties the kids and parents close together to have projects to work with.

His youngest child, Ronda, is in the FFA program at Lee High School. Her brother and two sisters were Lee FFA'ers.

"Best of all," said McVey, "we've got a 2-year-old grandbaby, and he's got seven years to go before he can show (in a livestock exhibition)."

The youths and their parents "get excited" about livestock projects. And McVey noted that Spot, one of Ronda's three pigs in the 1986 show, got "caught up" in the excitement of readying for the livestock judging. "He just fell in here," McVey said of the pig, "and he's going whole hog. He's really feeling good. He's smoking. He's out there to win."

Stacey Bryant, a 15-year-old FFA'er at Midland High School, showed the champion medium-wool lamb in the 1985 show.

"It helps you out a lot to more or less learn how to handle money," he said of his experience in livestock projects.

Stacey suggested that he's the sheep man in the family and that his father, Terry Bryant, is the hog man. "I have to teach him a few things about sheep," which Stacey said are "just dumb" and were born to find a place to die. "He don't know nothing about them. All he knows about is hogs.'

Shelter director wants 'secret' out

By MARK LEWIS Staff Writer

Cheryl Franklin has a problem.

As executive director of the only battered-women shelter in the Permian Basin, she offers help to thousands of physically abused women in the area, along with their children. The problem is how to let them know that help is available.

The Permian Basin Center for Battered Women and Their Children "is the best-kept secret in town," Ms. Franklin said Friday. "We're very concerned about public awareness.

To reach the people who need its services, the center is planning to advertise in a somewhat unusual media outlet - the women's restrooms of the 50 largest businesses in the Midland-Odessa area.

Small cards with "You are not Alone" printed on them, along with the center's name and 24-hour hotline numbers (683-1300 and 563-0800), will be placed on the walls of women's rooms in local Southwestern Bell offices and other businesses which have agreed to participate.

"We've been working on this about two weeks now," Ms. Franklin said. Women's rooms are a good place to reach family-violence victims because some women are embarrassed to copy the center's phone num-ber off a public bulletin board, she said. "We don't have our phone number up where it's easily accessible to people.'

The stigma attached to family violence has also made some employers reluctant to have the cards put in their restrooms.

"It sounds real simple, but a lot of owners think this card will offend their staff and offend their customers," she said. But overall, "Our results have been positive.'

According to the Texas Council on Family Violence, about 100,000 Texas women are physically abused "on at least a weekly basis," Ms. Franklin said. Besides the emotional and physical distress inflicted on its victims, family violence has a high economic cost, she added.

Whatever the reason, prime time has choice content

It is something that, under normal circumstances, I try to avoid at all costs. But, given the almost phenomenal craze that has swept the country, I decided to stay home on Thursday night and watch prime-time network television.

More specifically, I tuned in three of NBC's biggies — "The Cosby Show," "Family Ties" and "Cheers."

Based on what I've been hearing and reading these three programs, especially the first two, have captivated America and, being one who likes to keep up with all the hottest trends, I decided to see what I'd been

So I did. For an hour-and-a-half I sat on the couch, watching and passing judgment.

And my verdict? I was impressed. Extremely so, in fact. On numerous occasions I actually caught myself laughing out loud. And at prime time TV, of all things.

Prime time TV and I had a rather ugly divorce several years ago when the first Mary Tyler Moore and Bob Newhart shows went off the air. At that time, I decided there was nothing of value on during those hours and, in effect, began my own personal boycott. Occasionally, I would sneak a glance at a new program but, for the most part, I was content watching sports, news and reruns of syndicated programs, resonably secure in my knowledge that I was missing nothing of importance.

Then along came the Thursday night lineup.

Being impressed with "Cheers" did not surprise me. Its somewhat adult brand of humor is geared to-ward people my age and, besides, any program with a sports tavern as a setting can't be all bad. Its cast of offbeat barflies has a way of making a perion feel right at home. What did catch me off guard was enjoying "The Cosby Show" and

"Family Ties," shows with terribly some themes based on close whole knitted families and the day-to-day problems they face.

Typical topics, I've been told, might include a child's first day of school, learning household responsi-bilities and coping with the fact that your parents, who are approaching middle age, are going to have another baby.

Let's face it, these are subjects that, in the past at least, we left to Mister Rogers and other assorted PBS characters.

Now, they have moved to prime time and, according to the ratings.

with a great deal of success. Why?

The so-called experts offer a variety of explanations

The one I keep hearing the most is that this trend toward traditional values is all a part of the conservative movement in America, the Rea-gan Revolution, as it has been called by some. To hear them tell it, there is a new sense of decency in the country and, in some vague way, Reagan is responsible.

Others take a more pragmatic ap-proach. They contend that compared to the mindless drivel that previousfilled the airwaves, anything ly would be considered an improve-ment. Viewers, in effect, were starved for quality.

Still others go a step further and say this change for the better is merely the result of better actors and writers being recruited back to television. The subject matter, they counter, is secondary. In other words, give a Bill Cosby a staff of excellent writers and he can make a 30-minute sitcom on puckets was 30-minute sitcom on nuclear war em charming

They may have a point. d.

Services for Billie Jo Holman, 30, will be at 1:30 p.m. Monday in the Ellis Funeral Home Chapel with Douglas Parson of the Golf Course Road Church of Christ officiating. Burial will be in Greenwood Community Cemetery.

She died Thursday in Sheridan, Wyo.

Mrs. Holman was born March 2, 1955, in Snyder, the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Newt Evans. In 1958, the family moved to Andrews where she graduated from high school. In 1982 she became a respiratory therapist and moved to Sheridan.

Survivors include her husband, Ronald Neal Holman of Sheridan; two sons, Eric Neal Holman and Frank Evan Holman of Sheridan; a daughter, Crystal Robin Holman of Sheridan; her mother, Mrs. Ardell Evans of Midland; a brother, Richard Evans of San Angelo; and three sisters, LaJuan Womack of Midland, Tommie Jean Horn of Austin and Mable Kay Rodabaugh of Plattsmouth, Neb.

Juanita Copenhaver

Services for Juanita Copenhaver, 65, of Midland will be at 3:30 p.m. Monday in the Ellis Funeral Home Chapel with the Rev. Bob Porterfield of the Kentucky Avenue Baptist Church officiating. Burial will be in Fairview Cemetery.

Ms. Copenhaver died Thursday night from injuries suffered in an automobile accident.

She was born Aug. 1, 1918, in Mercury, the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. George Rouse. Before her marriage to Alan Copenhaver in 1946 in Aransas Pass, she lived in several Texas towns. In 1974, the family moved to Midland. Copenhaver died Jan. 11, 1984.

Survivors include a son, Chief Warrant Officer Bobby E. May of the U.S. Naval Air Station at Beeville; her mother, Esther Russell Rouse of Bloomington; three brothers, Jesse Rouse, James P. Rouse and J.T. Rouse, all of Victoria; two sisters, Geweldeane Britton of Victoria and Joyce Walters of Bloomington; four grandchildren and three greatgrandchildren.

Council, Commissioners Court to meet

THIS WEEK IN GOVERNMENT

Midland City Council will meet with the County Commissioners at 2:30 p.m. Tuesday at City Hall to discuss several topics which involve both entities.

That agenda for the joint meet-ing includes various charges for services, the status of Highway 158 project and widening and paving Indiana Street.

The joint meeting is part of the City Council's regularly scheduled session that starts at 10 a.m. Tuesday in City Hall.

On that agenda are discussions

Widening the Northwest Drainage Channel at Maxwell, Midkiff and Haynes streets;

Amending the code to allow large trucks to be parked in residential areas, which is now forbidden by current ordinances:

Changing the ordinance regulating carnivals and circuses;

Authorizing execution of a contract with Midland Independent School District for construction of tennis courts at Midland High School.

At 11 a.m., the council will hold a public hearing on declaring certain structures to be dangerous and ordering their removal.

billion each year, plus another $100 million in medical bills," she said.

The center provides shelter for women who don't want to stay with their abusive husbands but have no place to go. Counseling for abused women who don't want to leave their homes is also available at the center, and the staff runs other programs designed to help children cope with family violence and to educate the community about the problem.

Apart from Ms. Franklin's Midland facility, the nearest shelters are in Lubbock, Alpine and San Angelo.

"In all these itty-bitty towns around here, there's nothing," she said. "We're the only one in the 15-county area that offers anything like this."

Battered women in rural areas have a particularly hard time getting help because "Everybody knows what's going on, but nobody's going to talk about it too much." she said.

To reach these women, the center needs publicity, and the "You are not Alone" campaign may help. But the center, a non-profit organization, also needs volunteers and increased private donations.

We estimate it costs us $45 per day per client, including their children," Ms. Franklin said. "The more dollars we get, the more services we can give them."

If the money can be raised, there are plans for a new, larger facility that would double the center's current capacity.

"We can hold 25 women and children. We are full right now," but even if the current publicity campaign brings more women in, the center will find a place for them, she said. "We don't turn away anybody."

SHOW

His father, displaying his sense of humor, said anymore he wasn't even sure of that.

Pam Adams, a 16-year-old sophomore at Midland High School and the MHS FFA chapter sweetheart, exhibited Hampshire swine in the 1986 show. Last year, she exhibited the reserve grand champion swine.

"I like it; it's fun," she said. Annette Beier, 17-year-old FFA senior at Lee High School, entered an exotic black cross-bred steer, a pig and a lamb in the show. Last year, her pig won the grand championship.

"It's a lot of fun," she said of "following through" with livestock projects. "It makes you want to do more. to make a lot out of your future, not to give up."

Jody Franks, an 11-year-old Greenwood 4-H'er, exhibited a lamb in the show

"I'm looking forward to being in FFA," said Jody, who said he may show steers and pigs when he gets older.

His father, Don Franks, said project-raising in 4-H and FFA programs teaches youngsters "responsibility."

"They find out that Daddy is not going to do everything," Franks said. "They (the youngsters) feed and ex-sponsoring Midland County Livestock Association, said the livestock programs instill a sense of responsibility in boys and girls.

'A child having the responsibility of attending to chores or whatever will, as a man or woman, accept and carry out responsibilities," Welch said

Charlie Green, president of the livestock association, noted that some youngsters in 4-H and FFA enter careers in agriculture, but many go into careers in other fields.

"The values and monetary rewards gained through their agricultural projects help them to achieve their goals in career development," Green said.

Ken Pruitt, who was in FFA in Midland in the 1950s, said there is "definite" value in 4-H and FFA projects.

"If you don't get these kids involved in something (worthwhile), they are going to get involved in something and usually it's not the best for them."

Through their projects, youngsters learn "responsibility and discipline, because they have to do it everyday," Pruitt said.

And the responsibility teaches them to get along with others."

international terrorists, despite repeated bold talk, is singularly puzzling. It has been demonstrated unmistakably that the leaders of Iran, the country responsible for most American deaths by terrorism, are afraid of U.S. military wrath. In fact, on intervention in motion. Yet each time the White House pulls back from the Rubicon, the Shiite Moslem terror-masters grow cockier, evidently convincing themselves that the president's hard- recommended that the hijacked Kuline rhetoric is empty bombast.

The first incident, a full account of which has remained bottled up in secret intelligence files, occurred when Iranian-controlled Shiite gunmen hijacked Kuwait Air Lines Flight 221 before dawn on Dec. 4, 1984, and flew it to Tehran. Two of the four Americans aboard were to die before the incident ended.

Shortly after noon that day, Western intelligence services intercepted an urgent telephone conversation between a foreign ministry official in Tehran and Ayatollah Ali Akbar Mohtashami, Iranian ambassador to Svria Mohtashami warned his colleague in Tehran that the United States 'might intervene in this matter." He referred to "Telex 22206," a cable he had sent two days earlier that apparently raised the possibility of U.S. military reaction to the planned hijacking.

Mohtashami, who is believed by the CIA to have been involved in several of the worst anti-American terrorist operations in the Middle East.

waiti airliner be flown to Beirut, waiti airliner be flown to Beirut, where pro-Iranian Hezbollah and Is-lamic Amal groups could protect it from a U.S. strike. There, according to the intercepted conversation, the hijackers could "take revenge on the VIPs one by one" — a chilling refer-ence to the murder of the Americans on beard on board.

Tipped off to the hijackers' possible move and the Iranians' intention to allow the Americans to be killed, U.S. officials immediately put the crack, 90-man, anti-terrorist Delta Force on alert at Fort Bragg, N.C. The next day, after the second American was shot and killed, Delta Force went on "maximum alert" ready to move within one hour.

The order to move out came on Dec. 7. President Reagan arrived in the White House situation room at 1:11 p.m. for a detailed briefing on the hijacking. National Security Council officials told the president it appeared the plane would be flown to Beirut; the command was given to send Delta Force on its way

The commando team flew to West

Germany en route to a Middle East destination. They were in position within a two-hour flight of Beirut airport — by mid-morning Dec. 9. The carrier Nimitz and other Navy support forces were off the Leba nese coast ready for action.

But the strike was forestalled by the Iranians. Shortly before mid-night on Dec. 8, the security forces at Tehran airport suddenly came to life and staged a carefully orchestrated "rescue" operation that injured none of the terrorists.

The second time Moslem terrorists backed down in the face of American military muscle was last June after the hijacking of TWA Flight 847. Once Syrian and Lebanese Shiite officials allied with the Iranians realized Delta Force was finally going to strike, the TWA hostages were set free.

The administration's failure to wreak actual retaliation against Iran is even more puzzling in light of the gruesome "body count" of Americans killed in terrorist actions.

Libya, the target of the administration's rhetorical wrath, was probably involved in at least some stage of the Rome and Vienna airport massacres, in which five Americans happened to be among those killed. Yet Iranians and their hirelings have been responsible for the murders of 264 Americans - and the victims were killed because they were Americans.

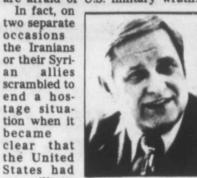

Far from being punished for their undeclared war on American citizens, the Iranian fanatics have been "rewarded" by tough talk from the White House, which only puffs up their warped egos when it is not followed up by action.

"Let terrorists be aware that when the rules of international behavior are violated, our policy will be one of swift and effective retribution," Reagan declared on Jan. 27, 1981, as he welcomed home the 52 American hostages from their 444-day captivity in Tehran.

In April 1983, a suicide bomber with Iranian connections blew up the U.S. Embassy in Beirut, killing 17 Americans. Six months later, another Iranian-trained terrorist blew up the Marine barracks at Beirut airport, killing 241 Marines. "Those who directed this atrocity must be dealt justice, and they will be," said Reagan. But no action was taken against Iran, despite clear evidence of its complicity.

Today many Democrats, with their crippling habit of thinking too cautiously, are saying: We need a Southerner - Robb, or Gov. Mark White of Texas, or Sen. Sam Nunn of Georgia - for Vice President. But why just Vice President? Nunn is conspicuously more able than anyone who is apt to be put ahead of him on the ticket, so it seems clear that Democrats have not kicked the habit of condescending to the South.

They should consider this. Since 1948 (when they won with a man, Harry Truman, from a state that had

Mondale did better than Stevenson among women, blacks, Jews, college graduates, professionals. Stevenson did better than Mondale among men, union members, blue-collar workers, Catholics and white Southerners. The Democratic Party, says Schneider, has become less populist and more liberal as the country has tended toward what Reagan embodies: populist conservatism. Both populism and conservatism have strong

Since Roosevelt's death, no non-

Southern Democratic presidential candidate has won 50 percent of the national vote. While Mondale was carrying just seven Scuthern congressional districts, more conservative Democrats were winning 73 Southern seats. In 1936, 85 percent of white Southerners voted for Roosevelt. Barely one-quarter of them voted for Mondale. More than half of Mondale's Southern votes came from blacks. But since 1930, the black portion of the population has declined at least 20 percent in every Southern state except Tennessee.

In this optimistic country, change implies hope. Liberalism lost its grip on the country when it built a government that showered benefits on client groups that then had a stake in the status quo. Such liberalism made the Democratic Party the party of government and government's clients (principally, of public employees and the poor).

The remaining fuzzy-headed liberal was a female of childbearing age, but the biological rigors of the situation made it apparent that the beloved old fuzzy-headed liberal would not be around much longer to

Congress adopted a resolution urging that he marry the female fuzzy-headed liberal so they could produce a family of hybrid fuzzyheaded knee-jerk liberals to keep conservatives feeling superior for years to come. Fortunately, the macabre crossbreeding of fuzzy-headed with knee-

Yet despite all common sense, the idea of CBS's liberalism spread so heatedly that such mandarins of conservatism as Sen. Jesse Helms and the Rev. Jerry Falwell subscribed to the argument that God-fearing folks would have to buy it to save the Republic.

CBS is about as liberal as the Meadowlands Sports Complex, which also exists solely to make more money or people who already have a lot. Had there been any authentic liberals of consequence left after the Reagan conservatives were well on with their task of dismantling the government, it wouldn't have occurred to anyone to turn money-grubbing old CBS into one of the archfiends of progressive thought.

Already, conservatives so conservative they would have scared Robert A. Taft are being judged unfit to serve the cause. If moderates like George Bush and neuters like CBS are already accused of liberalism, President Reagan's time may come before 1988. That's why it's impor tant to preserve some liberals. # BILL MODISETT Uncle Sam must stand up to Khadafy's bullying

When you were a youngster did you ever see playground bully in action? Chances are, if you did it went something like this: Bully strutted around looking for some kid minding his own business and did something to

Bill Modisett provoke that kid. Bully wanted to feel powerful, at someone else's expense. If the kid the bully was picking on cowered under the attack, or began to cry in fright, the bully had a field day. If the kid said something to the bully, such as, "Leave me alone or I'll get really mad," that only made the situation worse. It gave the bully an incentive the try even harder to "break" the kid's emotional calm and reduce him to tears. So, the bully intensified his tactics, egged on by the power he was wielding over the other child.

But what happened when the bul-ly made the mistake of picking on the wrong kid? I'll tell you what happened. The bully ended up with a bloody nose, sore ribs and a worthwhile lesson which said: "If you pick on this kid, you'd better be ready to

The same situation now exists in regard to terrorists like Libya's Moammar Khadafy. He's bullying the "kid" - in this case Uncle Sam - and getting a high off the apparent power he is able to wield. He enjoys pushing Sam around and oc-casionally slapping Sam's face or pulling his beard. But the bully isn't going to go too far because Sam has a reputation as a tough kid when he's mad. The bully is just going to keep pushing to see how far he can back Sam.

Personally, I think Sam has backed about as far as he can go, without tripping over his own feet or a tree limb. But there are a few people in the administration who apparently feel there's still hope the bully will go away. They don't know much about bullies.

Bullies, you see, get their kicks by wielding false power - power they don't really have. As long as they can get away with it, they'll keep it up. But if some tough kid slaps them down a couple of times, they'll usually give up the attack.

I'm not saying the United States should nuke Libya or send in an invasion force of Marines. That's not necessary and probably would lead to a protracted war that our good elected representatives likely wouldn't have the stomach to finish in our favor.

Citizens' group rejects proposed Master Plan

The Reporter-Telegram on Jan. 3 printed a misleading front page article regarding Midland's proposed Master Plan. The article inferred that the plan is basically copesetic. There is a group of concerned citizens that begs to differ with that evaluation. This group has serious reservations about the Master Plan in its present form.

On Dec. 19, a group of Midlanders met to discuss Midland's proposed Master Plan, its impact on their neighborhood, Midland's future growth and its government. This meeting resulted in the formation of a Concerned Neighborhood Group (CNG) whose primary goal is to promote the continued integrity of the neighborhood bounded by Big Spring, Wadley, Midkiff, Andrews Highway and Illinois Streets and to insure that Midland's future is conscientiously planned.

The group does not agree with the Master Plan's proposals to:

1. Link Interstate 20 to Loop 250 by connecting Garfield Street to Andrews Highway south of Michigan Street, and the widening of Garfield Street that this would necessitate. 2. Extend "A" Street across Loop

250. 3. Specific language in the plan which places traffic movement as priority over people and neighborhoods.

We are in favor of and support: 1. The return of Michigan and Louisiana Streets to two-way streets west of "A" Street.

2. An imaginative and viable traffic circulation system for Midland. A system that is sensitive to neighborhoods and people, that efficiently moves traffic, does not cause neighborhood deterioration and where possible revitalizes neighborhoods. 3. Sensible, sensitive and intelligent growth for Midland.

What is needed is some honesty and courage. That's all. Ronald Reagan needs to tell Khadafy, "Fella, we've got enough evidence that indicates you're supporting these terrorists to come after you next time a bomb goes off." Then he's got to follow through.

That's where the United States is falling through. It's giving the ultimatum, but when a terrorist attack occurs Sam is simply saying, "Well, next time for sure!

Somebody has to stand up to the bully, and Uncle Sam has been elected because of his once forceful leadership of the world.

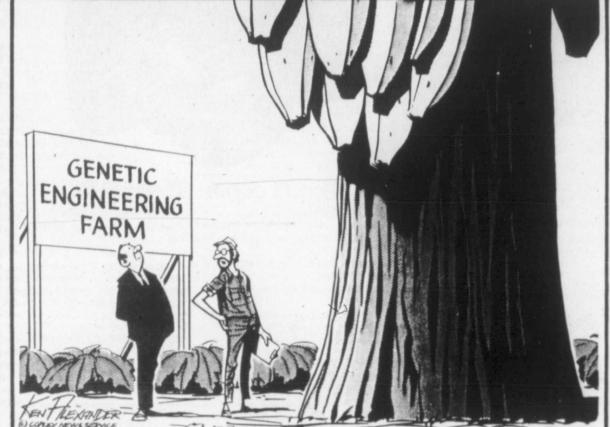

Don't think the bully will stop until Sam is either in tears or devastated by the attack. Don't live in the dream world that some savior will come along to pull Sam's feet out of the fire. We are the savior of the world according to history. And the rest of the world is watching to see if we'll run these bullies off the playground.

measures against Moammar Khadafy, the madman leader of Libya who is the godfather of international terrorism.

In this way, the president is allow-ing time for nations trading with Libya to reconsider their relations with that country, since an overwhelming majority favored continued trading ties with the Khadafy regime. The president, at his first news conference of 1986, gave a reasoned presentation of the problems involved in retaliating against Khadafy, whom he described as "a barbarian" and "flaky." Reagan, who imposed a step-by-step economic squeeze on Libya, froze all Libyan assets including bank accounts held in America. While precise figures are still unavailable, the assets total hundreds of millions of dollars to date.

Khadafy has been quick to respond to Reagan's action by telling European diplomats that he supports the PLO in its actions against Israel but will not tolerate terrorists. In Washington administration sources were skeptical about Khadafy's word since he has constantly re-

Reagan tempered his response to Libyan-sponsored terrorism, primarily because of the 1,500 Americans working in Libya, nearly all on oil installations, who might be held hostage by the eccentric inclinations of Khadafy. The president additionally broke all economic ties with the Libyans, which over the years have been reduced to a very tiny portion of America's foreign trade.

In his statement preceding his press conference and during a question and answer period, Reagan didn't conceal his contempt for the cowardice of Khadafy, who has lately been trying to show another more reasonable face to the outside world. The president charged Khadafy with first praising the terrorists who shot up the Rome and Vienna air-ports as "heroic acts" and subsequently backing down from his original bluster of bravado on behalf of the terrorists. Of the 19 people slain by the terrorists at the airports, five were Americans - including an 11year-old girl.

Besides being reluctant to exercise a military strike at this point Reagan also expressed concerned about the SAM-5 missiles which the Soviet Union has supplied to Libya. These have a range of about 250 miles, are guarded by Cubans and and the second of the second design of the second state of the second second second second second second second made operational by Soviet special-ists. When asked whether he had discussed the Soviet SAM supplies with Soviet leader Mikhail Gorbachev at the Geneva summit, Reagan replied with a cryptic "yes," and would no. go into further detail. At his press conference last Tuesday night, the president warned the Americans still in Libya to leave the country by Feb. 1 or face legal action

He also reduced to zero the $258 million worth of exports from the United States to Libya and canceled all imports from Libya to America. A potentially more devastating le-ver Reagan holds is to withhold exports to Libya by American-owned subsidiaries abroad. Before using this, the administration obviously is waiting to gage the impact of other

President Reagan said he understood why s ome countries would be affected activersely if their trade with Libya was impaired, but he was devastating when he observed that for the sake of material gain people would be gout at risk.

This remark will certainly have a telling influence on any government dealing with Libya, whether its transaction is are large or small.

President Reagan acidly denounced |Khadafy's deliberate lies when the Libyan strongman calmly declared t hat he knew of no terrorist installation in Libya. The White House has i intelligence data proving that as m any as 15 camps have been set up wit hin Libya to train Palestin an gueri illas and other terrorists.

Khadai 'y's antics, outlined by Rea gan, wer e summed up some years ago by the late Egyptian leader An-war Sadiat, who observed: "Khad ify as a youngster fell from a camel on his head. He never

and the called a second day of the second and a second sec recovered.'

Sadat, whose bold and imaginative policies brought peace with Israel, defended his country from repeated Libyan attacks. At one point Khadafy launched an assault against which Sadat retaliated with force. Although he could have pushed deeply into Libya, at the time he chose not to do so and later said that had been a mistake in judgment on his part.

It is extremely curious that today most Arab nations would be united, whether they like Khadafy or not, in his defense if America launched a military strike. It is baffling to the Western mind that many of his dedi-cated adversaries in the Middle East-ern world would defend Khadafy, ern world would derend Knadary, even in a lukewarm manner. But the Middle East, as we have come to understand through its ups and downs, frequently flip-flops. Reagan has given the West the lead and the time to endorse the econom-ic programs necessary to bring Kha-dary to his knees. We'll have to wait and see.

We'll have to wait and see.

Women who own their own business are invited to a follow-up meeting of the women in small business seminar held last March. Women of the Permian Basin will hear a program on timely topics and a presen-tation about the Association of Women Entrepreneurs, a national organization. This meeting concludes the January offering of the Women's Center and will be held at 7:30 p.m. Jan. 23.

LETTER FROM COLLEGE Spring registration set; Loverboy concert tonight

By H.A. TUCK

Registration for the Spring Semes-ter is slated for Tuesday and Wednesday in the Physical Educa-tion Building. Hours are 9 a.m.-1 p.m. and 4:30-8 p.m. on Tuesday and 10 a.m.-1p.m. and 4:30-8 p.m. on Wednesday. All time slots for Tuesday and most of those for Wednesday have been reserved by students who pre-registered and received time permits.

Those without time permits who wish to register may do so only after 6 p.m. on Wednesday. Those persons will be processed as quickly as possible

An orientation class for first-time students at Midland College is set for Friday from 8 a.m.-1 p.m. in the Allison Fine Arts Building auditorium. Even those students who won't be able to register until later should attend this session. Students receive one-hour credit for attending orientation and completing a rather comprehensive exam about the facilities of Midland College.

There will not be an late registration until Monday, Jan. 20, the day classes begin for the spring term.

Faculty members report on Monday for in-service programs, then have more in-service on Thursday, plus division meetings and time for office work and class preparation on Thursday and Friday.

The "real reason" resumes for the Chaparral basketball team Monday with a conference game against the Howard College Hawks in Big Spring. That game starts at 8 p.m. They'll be back home in Chaparral Center on Thursday, hosting Frank Phillips College at 7:30 p.m.

All the Chaparral conference games can be heard on KCRS Radio, 50AM

With the record the Chaps have compiled this season, they deserve you support. We hope to see you at Chap Center Thursday night.

There's a concert in Chaparral Center this evening at 8 p.m., featuring "Loverboy." Tickets may be pur-chased at the Chap Center box office starting an hour before the concert.

If music a little less amplified is more your taste, there's another musical event on campus tonight. That's the recital by the Thouvenal String Quartet which is playing at 8 p.m. in the Allison Fine Arts Auditorium. Admission may be paid at the door.

Thursday night's Chili Supper at the Student Center is a private event, but we wanted to alert the public in case anyone saw lots of smoke and steam coming out the building.

This is scheduled as the second annual Faculty Chili Supper, which is logical considering they had the first one last year. All employees and their spouses or dates are invited to come and bring their best chili concoctions for judging by an impartial taster

Last year's winner, Cheryl Frank-lin (wife of assistant basketball coach Reggie Franklin) likely will be trying to retain her title.

Any time you can see two of the world's finest professional athletes, you have an attraction worth attending. And that's what you can see Feb. 6, when John McEnroe and Mats Wilander play tennis in Chaparral Center. McEnroe, who battled Vitas Gerulitis here last August, is bringing his "Tennis Over America" presentation back to Midland. This time McEnroe is ranked #2 in the world and Wilander is #3, so it should be quite a show.

Midland tennis enthusiasts last August found out that McEnroe is just as fiery in an exhibition as he is in the finals of Wimbledon or the Unit-ed States Open. That's just the way he plays...and going against Wilander should produce some excellent tennis.

Tennis coach Joe Williams may have his best teams ever this year. But one thing is certain and that is the current players are the best academically we've ever had.

For the fall semester, one of his players was listed on the President's Honor Roll for having a perfect 4.0 grade point average. Six more players made the Dean's Honor Roll for having 3.5 grade point averages. That's seven of his 11 players on Honor Rolls, which is a super ratio. It's even better when you consider how many days they were occupied with travel and tournaments this fall, and that six of the seven on the lists aren't even native Americans.

Williams is excited about Midland College hosting the NJCAA women's tennis tournament May 18-24. It had been held in Ocala, Fla., the past several years and was scheduled to be there this spring. But due to some problems in Ocala, the NJCAA asked for new bids for the tourney and MC got the event. The women's national tournament was held here a couple of years in the late 1970s.

The men's tournament also is being moved from Ocala to Waco. Williams admits the Florida trip is a nice incentive and bonus for his players, but likes the idea of playing both events in Texas this year.

H.A. Tuck is public relations director at Midland College.

EDUCATION IN BRIEF

Essay deadline March 1

March 1 is the deadline for the 1986 scholarship essay contest which has been announced by the Permian Basin chapter of Mensa, the "High IQ Club," and the Mensa Education & Research Foundation.

Awards of $1,000, $500, $200 and $100 will be made in each of Mensa's nine regions, including the Permian Basin area. Nationally, two special awards will be given. The Rita Levine Memorial Scholarship will award $600 to a woman returning to school after an absence of seven or more years. The Howard M. Turney Financial Aid Program will provide $1,000 for study or career in engineering, mathematics, medicine, or the physical sciences, and requires that the recipient score in the top 2 percent of the general population on a standard IQ test.

It is not necessary to be a member of Mensa to apply for the scholarships. Awards are unrestricted as to age, race, sex (except for the Levine award), level of post-secondary education, and financial status. The sole requirement for a regional award is that the applicant be enrolled, for the year following the award, in a degree program in an accredited American institution of post-secondary education. The contest is open to high school seniors and above.

The award will be made on the basis of an essay of no more than 500 words which describes the applicant's career direction toward which the scholarship is to provide aid.

For information or to obtain application forms, contact the Permian Basin Scholarship chairman at 3213 W. Kansas, Midland, Texas 79701. A stamped, self-addressed envelope must accompany requests for applications.

Lee parents to meet

The Lee High School Parent Support Group will meet at 7:30 p.m. Monday at 2313 Metz Drive. Jerry Kelly, a counselor at the Samaritan Counseling Center, will be the guest speaker. Call 694-2318 for information.

Midlander in Australia

SHERMAN - Lea Schlagal of Midland is making a month-long exploration of another state which, besides Texas, is enjoying its sesquicentennial year - South Australia.

Along with 18 other Austin College students, Miss Schlagal, the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. John L. Schlagal, will not only get a first-hand look at the Aboriginal and Maori cultures, through visits to the museums in Sydney, Adelaide and Auckland, but also will tour points of local cultural interest from Mount Wellington and the Port Arthur Penal Colony in Australia to the valleys of New Zealand and the beaches of Fiji.

"A principal purpose of the tour is for the students to compare and contrast Texas and South Australian culture in this sesquicentennial year, and for them to interview professionals in the students' field of academic concentration," says Howard Starr, the course's instructor and vice president for college relations. The Austin College January Term is a four-week "change of pace" to allow students to focus on one area of study, often outside their own area of concentration.

Trip to France slated

Midland College instructor Dr. Jerry Franks is sponsoring a trip to Paris, France, March 28 through April 4. The tour, which costs $1,079 per per-son, is open to all Midland-Odessa residents.

Included in the tour price is a roundrip airfare between Midland and Paris via American Airlines, six nights accommodation, daily continental breakfasts, a panoramic city sightseeing tour, and hotel service charges and taxes.

A $100 deposit per person is due at the time of booking. Final payment is due Feb. 11. Passport applications should be filed no later than Jan. 31.

A $50 cancellation fee is imposed by the airline after tickets are issued, except upon receit of a doctor's certificate.

Franks is offering the tour as a community service. The tour is not a college-sponsored or credit activity. For information, call Franks at 684 5141.

UnDisaster Day to be celebrated

From Staff Reports

The organization that has been so busy helping millions cope with unprecedented disasters in the past four months has declared Jan. 22 as American Red Cross UnDisaster Day in Midland, James Roye, chapter chairman, said here today.

Joining with hundreds of Red Cross chapters across the county, the Midland chapter will hold a disaster shelter and lunch at the Washington YMCA, 1600 E. Wall St., from noon to 4 p.m.

The lunch will feature typical disaster fare including sandwiches, snacks and beverages while volunteers will simulate a real shelter operation, complete with emergency radio communi-cations, first aid and nursing stations, sound effects, sleeping and mass care areas and other typical shelter functions.

The day is part of a national observance to call attention to the organization's need for disaster funds. The Red Cross is seeking more than $20 million to assist the organization in providing aid to disaster victims in the U.S. Midland County's quota toward this goal is $10,000. To date, $6,000 has been raised, according to Roye. The Red Cross, which depends on the public for support, has spent nearly $50 million since July 1965, providing feedings and mass care to more than four million people, giving financial assistance to some 31,000 families and sheltering more than 900,000 people in more than 2,100 locations. This figure does not include the 53 persons given disaster assis-tance in Midland County.

Roye said that it is critical for community leaders, news media and potential givers to under-stand what the Red Cross does for disaster victims and how the organization must prepare to meet future natural disasters, including the traditional spring flood-ing and tornadoes that hit certain parts of the country.

"We will be on the job through disasters and undisasters," said Roye. "but we're calling on the community to help pull us through. Locally, we've assisted 14 burn-outs (family residents)."

Persons wishing to contribute to the disaster campaign may do so by sending contributions to American Red Cross, P.O. Box 1706, Midland, Texas 79702, or drop by during regular office hours at 2306 Elizabeth St. Additional information is available by calling 684-6161.

Rebels' Young named first team All-State

Midland Lee's Jake Young

By ERIC SCHURER Sports Writer

The years of hard work paid off for Midland Lee's stellar offensive lineman Jake Young Saturday when he was named first team All-State by the Texas Sports Writers Association.

Young, a two-year starter for the Rebs, is the only Midland player named to the first two teams, but three players from Odessa Permian were also named to the first team. Joining Young on the All-State list are Panthers Greg Anderson, Jerry LeClair, Danny Servance and Robert Williams.

Young is the first player from Midland to be named to the All State first team since Coy Stewart of Midland Lee in 1983.

"I'm really quite surprised," Young said when notified of his selection. "I didn't think I would make the first team. I thought with a little luck I might get on the second or third team. I'm very happy really."

YOUNG CREDITS coaching, teammates and the recognition that comes with playing in one of the state's tougher districts, District 4-5A, with helping him gain his All-State berth.

"But I couldn't have done anything without good coaching and help from the team. I got really good coaching from Midland Lee," Young said. "We also had a very good representation from our district. There weren't really any bad teams in the district this year so that helps."

Young has been the anchor of a Rebel offensive line that has guided Lee into the state playoffs each of the past two seasons. Rebel coach Jack Tayrien said Young set the record for "pancake" blocks, knocking the opposing lineman off his feet, as a junior, then broke his own record in 1985.

"It couldn't go to a more deserving youngster," said Tayrien. "I'm very pleased for him to have that honor. He's the best high school lineman I've had the opportunity to have worked with."

YOUNG, AT 6-51/2, 220-pounds, is being recruited by all of the major colleges in the state and around the country but he has already narrowed his official visits to five schools. In December, Young visited Nebraska, and on Jan. 17 Young will take a trip up to Texas Tech. He also has official visits planned for Texas, Texas A&M and TCU.

"He's always graded very high on all of our films, and he's not fully grown as far as his weight goes,'

Tayrien said. "He's probably just hit-ting his growing spurt." In fact, Young has put on about 50 pounds since his junior season and made large gains in strength, all without losing any of his quickness or mobility.

"What makes Jake so good is that he's got quick feet and good motor skills," Tayrien said, "those are his biggest attributes. But he's a very intense player, too. He's also a very dedicated youngster, a hard worker and very intelligent - and that's a plus.

"I'VE TALKED to all five coaches at the schools I'm going to visit, and I'm really impressed with all of them," Young said. "I just want to do anything they tell me to do at whatever school I go to to help that team

If he does anything close to what he's done for Midland Lee in the past two seasons, that should just come naturally.

Ector grad says pressuring Marino key for Pats

By BOB BRUNDAGE

Sports Writer When the New England Patriots step onto the astro turf in the Orange Bowl today to face the Miami Dolphins in the AFC Champi-onship game, look for No. 54. He's Ed Williams and he's a product of the Permian Basin.

Williams graduated from Odessa Ector in 1980 where he was Parade All-American at linebacker and tight end. He received a scholarship at the University of Texas where he was a two and a half year starter at defensive end.

Williams was the Patriots' second-round draft choice two years ago and now he's part of one of the strongest linebacking corps in the NFL as a backup for one of the league's best linebacker's: Andre Tippett.

By making it to the AFC title game, Williams is also a part of one of the strongest teams in the NFL, one of the four best left in the playoffs. And, Williams believes they will last two more weeks despite the Dolphin-crazy fans and the difficulty of beating Miami in the Orange Bowl.

"It gets so loud there it's hard to hear what the quarterback is saying," said Williams. "Under these same conditions here (the second to last regular-season game) we played them a really close game and I think we should have beaten them. But, now we know what to expect and we should beat them." Overcoming the noise is the first obstacle in the Patriots' way. Getting to Dolphin quarterback Dan Marino is the second.

Los Angeles running back Eric Dickerson is a big key to the Rams attack when they take on the Chicago Bears today at Soldier Fiel in the NFC Championship game.

Passing, D edge for Bears

CHICAGO - Both teams have running backs capable of breaking open a game. Both have passing attacks that sometimes fall asleep. But no matter what the offenses do, both have defenses that can win games by themselves.

The teams are the Chicago Bears and the Los Angeles Rams, who meet at Soldier Field Sunday for the National Conference championship. Though the running games might be more or less equal, the Bears have better passing and better defense, and they are favored.

The winner will advance to Super Bowl XX two weeks from Sunday in New Orleans. There, it will oppose the winner of Sunday's American Conference championship game in Miami between the Dolphins and the New England Patriots.

Last Sunday, on the same artificial surface at Soldier Field, the Bears trounced the Giants, 21-0. The weather that day was awful, with the temperature at 14 degrees, the wind at 15 miles an hour and the wind-chill factor at minus 13. This time, the temperature is expected to climb to 38, a virtual heat wave.

The Bears (15-1) had the best regular-season record of the National Football League's 28 teams. The Rams were 11-5, and last Saturday they easily beat the Dallas Cowboys, 20-0, in the conference playoff semifinals.

History is on the side of the underdog Rams. They last played the Bears in 1983 and 1984 and won each time, with Eric Dickerson running for 127 and 149 yards. In those games, Walter Payton of the Bears, the league's career rushing leader, was held to 60 and 62 yards.

"History," said Coach Mike Ditka of the Bears, "is unimportant.'

How about last year's championship game, in which the San Francisco 49ers befuddled the Bears and whipped them, 23-0? "That was last year," Ditka said.

How about the Bears' overwhelming defense last Sunday against the Giants?

What you do last week," Ditka said, "has no bearing on what you do this week."

"You've got to put pressure on Marino," said Williams. "He doesn't handle pressure well. He doesn't like taking sacks. You put pressure on and he'll throw the ball away to keep from being sacked.

"If you're around him, making him move around, it makes him jittery. A couple of good shots from us will make him start thinking about it and make him start throwing the ball away." However, the reverse also holds true. Can the Dolphins be defeated without pressuring Marino? "I doubt it, he's too good a quarterback. If the receivers have time to scramble, it could take us out of what we're prepared for defensively and there's bound to an opening somewhere. Marino will hit it.

When the Patriots have the ball, Williams thinks the front line will be the decisive factor, blocking for the backs.

"We've got to play ball control, keep it away from Marino," said Williams. "We've got a great line to protect Craig James and Tony Collins and they are great New England linebacker Ed Williams runners."

AS RECENT as a year ago, NFL fans would have scoffed at the idea of the Patriots in the AFC championship game. No matter how much talent they put on the field, there was always a way to lose. They could never put it all together. Until now.

"I think everybody finally got a little bit closer to each other. You can have as much talent as you like but if they don't play with each other and care about each other they're not going to go anywhere," said Williams. "This year we emphasized that and have a coach (Raymond Berry) that stressed that. It makes the team play that much stronger.

"The Patriots always have a great amount of talent but have never put it together before this year. I think we'll put it together for the Miami game.

Even the loss of Irving Fryar doesn't seem to dampen Williams' spirits. He believes in the team's overall talent.

"All year long we've had major players go down and people have stepped in to do the job," said Williams. "Like our coaches have been saying, most of our backups would be starters for other teams. We've got the people to do the job.

In his two years with the Patriots, Williams has become one of the top backups on a team full of linebackers.

"We've got a very talented group of linebackers," said Williams. "I'm just getting here and we have a lot of linebackers that have been here four or five years. I play behind Andre Tippett and I'm on all of the special teams.'

Those special teams have been a big key to the Patriots' success this year. Last week against the Los Angeles Raiders, for example, rookie safety Jim Bowman fell on a kickoff fumble in the end zone to break a 20-20 tie and give the Patriots a 27-20 victory.

Verdict still out on Chaps?

At 17-0, No. 3 in the nation, you might know the gossips are busy spreading their vicious rumors. "Best team in Midland College history, bar none." "Invincible. No one around good

Texas If Coach Jerry Stone isn't sleeping nights with this kind of talk circulating, it's understandable. Really, coach, I thought you might run into some problems out in Mesa, but gosh you breezed right through everybody out there."

"That's not true. In the last two games, we were behind and had to rally to win. Neither win was as easy as perhaps the final score makes it look," protests Stone.

STONE isn't even complaining about the Chaps' No. 3 rating in the national poll. MC did corral five first place votes, but still were ranked be-hind Vincennes, Ind., which shows a modest 10-3 record.

"I guess the people that take part in the poll just felt they have a strong team, even without the player who was ruled ineligible." The three losses came after it was discovered that Vincennes had been playing an

"But I don't put a lot of stock in polls, says Stone, who feels it's interesting reading, but who's No. 1 will be determined, eventually, right on the court.

WITH the Howard Classic again failing to provide the kind of opposition hoped for, it's a good thing MC had the Mesa Optimist Shootout for a post-holiday reunion before heading into next week's resumption of WJCAC play.

"It's a good tournament and we may go back next year," says Stone. "Hutchinson, Kan., brought a group of 100 fans and I think Midlanders might find it a nice trip.

Stone feels Ricks of Idaho, the team MC beat in the semifinals, is a team that could make Nationals. Dixie, Utah., defending national champi-on, isn't as strong as a year ago, but then Dixie's lone loss was suffered in this tournament at the hands of Odessa College. A lot can happen in two months.

NEXT YEAR, MC may host its own post-holiday doubleheaders. "But tournaments cost money," cautions Stone.

Still, the Chaps seem to be playing an abbreviated home schedule this season. Only six games remain this season

The doubleheaders would be in addition to the Chaparral tournament in November. A few weeks ago, there were four teams from Texas listed among the top 20, San Jacinto, Tyler, McLennan and Laredo. Midland wasn't even listed.

Now, the Texas entries have dwindied to two, MC and San Jacinto. Apparently, SJ has taken charge in the other half of the state and will probably be the team against whom the Region V champion will have to play to get to Hutchinson.

BUT IN an effort to discredit rumors, Stone assures that "This team hasn't grown up yet. They can win a lot of games, but this is not an awesome team like the 1982 national champions. "This team can't get out and float around for half a game and still win. The '82 team could play around for 30 minutes, look up at the clock and decide it was time to get down to business.'

Stone goes on, "This is a good team, but it's a team that can be beat. We have to hustle and things have to click.'

supposed to be still out, although judging from those vicious rumors, a lot of minds have already been made

By WILLIAM N. WALLACE N.Y. Times News Service

MIAMI — History has no place in a football game, according to Julius Adams, and neither does a jinx, added Raymond Clayborn. In fact, there is no jinx.

But the news media - meaning newspapers, television and radio have another perception of Sunday's American Conference championship game here between the Miami Dolphins and the New England Patriots.

The lead theme in almost every commentary has been that the last time a Patriot team beat the Dolphins in the Orange Bowl was in 1966, and there have been 18 defeats since then.

There has been no comparable single-site streak in the history of the National Football League, and by implication the Patriots are therefore at least handicapped, if not doomed. Not so, says the Patriots' Adams, at 37 the oldest defensive lineman in the NFL and one who played in 13 of those games.

"I keep telling them that the past makes no difference," he said. "Tomorrow's game is all by itself. There is no history. And any player who thinks there is doesn't belong here." Clayborn, the New England cornerback, who has been in seven of always taken the record to mean Hardy." Game plans are obvious for teams Game plans are obvious for teams each given day." Clayborn also point-ed out it is not only the Patriots who lose in the Orange Bowl. The Dolphins have won all nine of their games at home this season and 21 of the last 22, and their current overall winning streak of eight is the longest in the NFL.

However, the New England team at home in Foxboro, Mass., has defeated Miami in eight of their last 10 games. So much for history.

Sunday's championship game, with the winner going to the Super Bowl, will focus on Craig James, the Patriots' halfback, and Dan Marino, the Dolphins' quarterback.

The Patriots' goal will be to run with the nimble James, a fine cutback and counter runner, against a presumed Miami weakness.

The Dolphins, as always, will lean on Marino's passing skills, which have been modified lately. Because defenses have stressed double coverage downfield on the two wide receivers, Mark Clayton and Mark Duper, Marino has sent more of his passes underneath to the tight end Bruce Hardy or the halfback Tony Nathan, running shorter routes. Don Shula, who has coached the Dolphins into the playoffs 13 times, said: "Marino's numbers this season don't rival last year, but he's still been outstanding. He's been especially good at going underneath the deep coverages to Nathan and meeting for the third time this season, each with a victory and a defeat. Shula said, "Our emphasis will be to put them into pass situations, get some sacks, force errors."

There were errors galore in the two previous Dolphin-Patriot games this season, with a total of 16 turnovers, eight for each side. But that is history

In their playoff game against Cleveland here last Saturday, the Dolphins gave up 251 yards rushing. They trailed by 18 points but won, 24-21.

'Cleveland did a number on us,' Shula said. "We came apart. This week we have stressed defense against the run.

That comment meant that Shula, an unrelenting taskmaster, worked his players hard this week.

Berry did not. His premise was that his team needed rest after playoff victories on the road, against the Jets and the Raiders. There have been only two light practices here. Berry will be short one valuable athlete, Irving Fryar, who has a severed tendon in his right hand. Shula has a full roster, if Clayton's shoulder bruise is healed, as expected. Jackie Shipp, the right inside linebacker, has a sprained ankle and there will be a game-time decision on whether he or Mark Brown will start.

Last week, to avoid the Cowboys'

rush, Brock generally discarded deep drops and passed mostly from a three-step drop. Even so, he complet-ed only 6 of 22 for 50 yards. Though he will probably use short drops against the Bears, there should be no mystery to the Rams' offense. "We'll try to run the ball," said times this season.

Stephen Starring is the replace-ment for Fryar at wide receiver. Berry, not bemoaning the loss, said, "He every bit the equal."

Starring had been a regular until Fryar replaced him this season.

But Fryar's absence means the Patriots will have to use Greg Hawthorne as a third wide receiver, behind Starring and Stanley Morgan. Hawthorne, a former running back, has caught only three passes this season.

Fryar was also an outstanding punt returner for New England. Cedric Jones will be the replacement.

Other notable players figure to be two linebackers: New England's Andre Tippett, who has 161/2 sacks, and Miami's Hugh Green. Green, obtained from the Tampa Bay Buccaneers in a trade last October, was cited by Shula as a badly needed addition, especially in defending against the running plays the Dolphins expect to see.

The game is a sellout and will be televised locally. The weather forecast hints of clouds and possible showers with temperatures in the 60s. ... The Patriots have won 11 of their last 13 games, five of their last six, and three in a row. If they beat the Dolphins and qualify for the Super Bowl, they will be the first wildcard team to reach that game with three victories on the road since the wild-card teams were introduced into the playoff system in 1970.

That's what we've done." The Bears will probably run, too. 'We must control the ball," Ditka said, "and we should be able to run against a three-man line. We have to take advantage of their zone defense and pass underneath the coverage."

The Rams seldom blitz, and they are unlikely to do that against such a mobile quarterback as Jim McMahon. Instead, they depend on pressure from their front line, especially Gary Jeter, a former Giant defensive end. The Rams' secondary will likely play a zone with four, five or six defensive backs.

The Rams have an advantage in special teams. Ron Brown led the league in kickoff returns, averaging 32.8 yards, and he has run back three kickoffs for touchdowns. Henry Ellard led the conference in punt returns with a 13.5-yard average. Dale Hatcher led the league in net punting with a 38.0-yard average.

The Bears have had trouble all year covering kicks, though they scored against the Giants on the return of a grazed or phantom punt. To remedy the problem, the Bears have added Otis Wilson and Wilber Marshall, two quick, mobile starting linebackers, to kickoff and punt coverage.

The Bears, with their near-perfect season and their celebrated rookie defensive tackle, William (the Refrigerator) Perry, have captured the public's imagination. Ditka explained it by saying that people were climbing on the bandwagon of a team that had been down for years. He also conceded that the Bears had not yet become America's Team.

"There are people," he said, "who don't like us or our tactics or even our uniforms."

LARAMIE, Wyo. - Wyoming's Les Bolden scored a game-high 23 points and Turk Boyd sank a free-throw with 21 seconds left to lift the Cowboys to a 63-62 overtime upset of No. 15 Texas-El Paso in Western Athletic Conference basketball Saturday night.

The decision, which broke the Miners' string of 14 straight triumphs, evened the Cowboys' overall record at 7-7 and WAC mark at 1-1. The loss dropped UTEP to 14-2 on the season and 3-1 in conference play

Bolden connected on a 10-foot jump shot with eight seconds left in regulation to knot the score at 56-56 and send the game to overtime.

In the extra period, Bolden again dropped in a jumper to tie the score at 60-60 with 2:47 remaining. Wyoming's Eric Leckner gave the Cowboys a 62-60 lead a minute later, but UTEP's Dave Feitl evened the score at 62-62 with two free throws at the 1:12 mark.

Boyd was fouled with 21 seconds left and popped in one of two freethrow attempts to break the tie. The Miners had two attempts to win the game, but failed on two jumpers in the last 10 seconds.

Leckner and Boyd both finished with 13 points for the winners. Feitl led the Texas-El Paso scoring with 18 points. Juden Smith, who missed a umper at the end of regulation, added 17 for the Miners.

SF Austin 82, Howard Payne 58 NACOGDOCHES — Led by Kevin Hurley's 21 points, Stephen F. Austin State University extended its winning streak to seven games with an victory over Howard Payne University.

Texas Roundup

The Lumberjacks improve their overall record to 13-2 and a home winning streak to 10 games. Howard Payne drops its fifth straight game with its record going to 3-9.

After leading at the half, 37-32, SFA used a stingy defense in the early going of the second half as the visiting Yellow Jackets were able to score only four points in the first nine minutes, while the Lumberjacks were connecting for 25 points to go up 62-36.

McNeese St. 67, Lamar 62

LAKE CHARLES, La. - McNeese State, led by guard Kenny Jimerson's 18 points, forced seven of Lamar's 17 turnovers late in the closing moments Saturday night and the Cowboys held on for a SLC opening victory.

McNeese emerged with an overall record of 11-5 after its fourth consecutive triumph and 14th straight victory at home

Lamar fell to 9-5 after matching McNeese's game-long full-court press with one of its own.

It was close from the opening tipoff and, after a McNeese field goal built the Cowboys an eight-point lead to start the second half, Lamar faltered after closing to within a point four times after that.

Pan Am 56, SE Louisiana 46 EDINBURG - Michael Anderson scored 15 points - two more than Southeasterrn Louisiana scored during the entire first half - to carry Pan American to a victory Pan American led at halftime 2213, and raises its record to 7-6. Southeastern Louisiana falls to 6-10.

Eric Fortenberry sank all five field goals and seven of nine freethrows to score 17 points for the losing Lions.

The Broncs jumped ahead and never trailed, running up the final margin when Southeastern Louisiana fouled six times in the final minutes.

Creighton 58, WTSU 56, (OT) AMARILLO — Renard Edwards' in-the-lane jumper with six seconds remaining in overtime gave Creighton a victory over West Texas State Creighton improved to 5-7 overall and 1-2 in conference, while WTSU fell to 8-6 and 2-2.

After trailing by as many as 12 points early in the first half. Creighton rallied behind 17 points by forward Kenny Evans.

Evans fouled out with 25 seconds remaining in regulation, and WTSU's Fred Johnson sank two free throws to tie the score at 49-49 and send the game into overtime.

Texas-Arlington 68, NTSU 65 ARLINGTON - Texas-Arlington held off a furious closing rally by North Texas State and captured a SLC victory behind James Harris' 15 points.

UTA led by 11 points, 61-50, with 7:03 remaining, but the Eagles scored 15 of the next 21 points to pull to within two points, 67-65, with time running out. CARLSBAD, Calif. - Calvin Peete, who came to La Costa seeking to redeem himself, kicked off the 1986 PGA Tour with a front-running, record-breaking, six-stroke victory Saturday in MONY Tournament of Champions.

Scratchpad

Peete, the tour's most prolific winner in the last four years, acquired his 11th triumph of his late-starting career with a closing round of 68 and a 267 total.

He gave them the best four rounds since the old tournament, which brings together only the winners of PGA Tour titles, came to the La Costa Country Club from Las Vegas in 1969.

He gave them rounds of 68, 67, 64 and 68. That added up to a 21-underpar total, breaking the tournament scoring record of 268 set by Jerry Barber in Las Vegas in 1960. It's six strokes better than the La Costa scoring record set by Frank Beard in 1971.

Peete, 43, now the winner of 10 titles since the start of the 1982 season - the best record on the American tour - led or shared the lead all the way.

He led by three shots over Mark O'Meara starting the final round by eight over the rest of the pack and never gave them a chance. After five holes of play in bright, warm sunshine, his leading margin was five strokes and he took it from there.

Golf

ATLANTA — A powerful serve carried top-seeded Ivan Lendl of Czechoslovakia to a 6-2, 6-3 victory over Jimmy Connors in the men's singles final of the $500,000 AT&T

Challenge Tennis Tournament. Lendl had 13 aces and 10 other service winners in the match, which earned him $150,000. He never lost a service game and broke Connors' serve twice in each set.

Connors, seeded fourth in the tourney, won his share of the long rallies but was unable to keep Lendl's service in play often enough.

Lendl, 26, got his first break in the fifth game of the first set on two forehand winners and a pair of unforced errors by Connors. That put Lendl up 3-2. Connors, 33, made three unforced errors in losing his service in the set's seventh game.

LONDON - Two-time champions Heinz Gunthardt of Switzerland and Balazs Taroczy of Hungary blasted defending champions Ken Flach and Robert Seguso of the United States in four sets to reach the final of the World Doubles Tennis Championships for the fourth time in five years to take effect next August.

Winners in 1982 and 1983 and reigning Wimbledon doubles champions, Gunthardt, 26, and Taroczy, 31, avenged last year's final defeat by winning 7-5, 3-6, 6-3, 7-6 (7-3) in 21/2

Research commissioned by the NCAA has indicated that perhaps 50 percent of the male freshmen athletes who enrolled in Division I schools in 1982 would not have qualified under Proposition 48. The rule covers all sports.

But figuring football and men's basketball alone, Division I schools extend approximately 4,000 scholarships each year, which would mean roughly 2,000 young men might find themselves ineligible next fall. Educators on both sides of the issue agree that a larger percentage of black freshman than white would be affected.

Football

HONOLULU - Doug Gaynor of Cal State-Long Beach passed for two touchdowns to lead the West to a 23-10 victory over the East in the Hula Bowl.

The West defense stopped what Coach Johnny Majors of Tennesee had predicted would be a strong offensive show for his East team.

The East was held to only 90 yards in the first three quarters, including zero yardage in the third quarter, before coming alive in the fourth. The East had only eight first downs, compared with 25 for the West.

Gaynor was named the game's top offensive player, while Rogers Alex-ander of Penn State was selected as the outstanding defensive player.

STANFORD, Calif. - Louisiana State's Garry James ran for two touchdowns, leading the East to an 18-7 victory, and won the most valuable offensive player award in the Shrine East-West football game.

The largest crowd in the all-star game's 61-year history, 77,000, saw the charity contest at Stanford Stadium.

The West succumbed to six turnovers, including four interceptions in the second half against Washington State quarterback Mark Rypien. Indiana quarterback Steve Bradley opened the game by marching the East 68 yards in 13 plays for a touchdown. James capped the drive with a plunge from the one.

NCAA

NEW ORLEANS - A drug-testing program and stricter academic rules that could make thousands of freshmen ineligible top the agenda for this week's 80th annual convention of the NCAA.

A record number of about 1,800 delegates were expected to begin voting Monday on 110 proposals. The most far-reaching measures will put the finishing touches on Proposition 48, the bitterly debated freshmen eligibility rule adopted at the 1983 convention and scheduled

ATLANTA - Quarterback Willie "Satellite" Totten of Mississippi Valley threw two touchdown passes to lead the Southwestern Athletic Conference all-stars to a 16-14 victory over the Mid-Eastern Athletic Conference in the Freedom Bowl All-Star Classic

The SWAC defense preserved the victory by stopping quarterback Gil-bert Renfroe of Tennessee State as he tried to run for a tying two-point conversion in the fourth quarter.

Totten hit Mississippi Valley teammate Joe Thomas three times in a six-play, 42-yard drive in the first quarter, including a 25-yard touchdown strike.

HP golfers not happy with canceled tee times

By TED BATTLES Sports Editor

It's mid-winter, but the Hogan Park Golf Course pot is again boiling over the lack of playing time on the Midland municipal course. Golfers don't like to be benched for no apparent reason.

Hogan regulars are upset over the fact that tee off times have been canceled until afternoon, "because of cold weather."

One irate player who had his Saturday morning tee time cancelled because the greens were too cold to play on, said, "You could stick a tee into the ground an inch deep, yet they said it was too cold.

They were teeing off at Ranchland Hills Country Club and Midland Country Club, but not at Hogan. Hogan and Ranchland are so close, it's difficult to figure why the greens at one course are playable and those just a short distance away are not.

In the past, the only time Hogan was closed was when the golfers closed it, "because it was simply too damned cold, windy and onery for any self respecting human being to be out in that kind of weather. Who ever heard of a course being closed because of cold greens?"

HOGAN PARK golf Pro Price Courter claims it's normal procedure.

"Any time the weather is like it is this time of year, you will have the golf course closed down at times," Courter explains. "We've had a lot of moisture and when it gets down to freezing during the night, it results in frozen conditions on a lot of greens.

The damage apparently occurs when bent grass is in a frozen state down into its root system. Foot traffic at that crucial time can cause damage to the plant and the plant will die.

As for the fact that golfers are playing at nearby RHCC, Courter notes, "Conditions vary from course to course, and, for that matter, from green to green. It's based on moisture content and the amount of sunlight and different superintendents respond differently. It's not up to the pro shop ing. He feels you'll be glad come spring.

staff to determine whether or not golfers can play. That's the superintendent's job."

AT HOGAN, the superintendent is Robert Campbell, who is relatively new to the Midland scene. And closing the course "On account of cold weather or frozen greens" is something Midlanders have not encountered before.

"Basically, it's for the protection of the course," says Courter, who once served as an assistant at RHCC. "I wish I had some pictures of courses where foot traffic was allowed too soon. The damage shows up in the spring when the foot prints become evident.'

Right now, the bent grass is on the borderline of dormancy and is extremely vulnerable. "Bent is a cool season grass which survives and maintains the greens color through the winter.

"I think closing the greens reflects an improved attitude by the greens keeper in trying to provide the public with better greens. It's not unusual. I go through this every year. I'm just surprised at the reaction," says Courter.

AS FOR some greens looking ready for play despite the ban, Courter points out that "It's a matter of how the sun hits some greens. We can't just open three, five and seven. It may be a case of waiting for just one or two greens that have been shielded from the sun.

Caring for the greens could pay dividends for the golfer, says Courter, in more than just the elimination of foot prints on the green in the spring and summer. If the bent grass survives and takes hold after the cold months, "Then we won't have to overseed in the fall, an expensive procedure that closes down the greens for a couple of weeks.'

Closing the greens in the winter is a relatively new phenomena to Hogan golfers and perhaps the failure to do so is one reason for past complaints about the prime time condition of Hogans greens. Courter just asks for patience and understand-

Again, it's Benford

Associated Press

FAYETTEVILLE, Ark. - Tony Benford hit his third gamewinning shot in three conference games, an 8-foot jump shot with eight seconds to play, to lift Texas Tech to a 48-46 Southwest Conference victory over Arkansas Saturday night.

Arkansas' Mike Ratliff drove up the floor and sank a 30-foot shot with two seconds left, but was called for walking.

Benford's 19 points helped Texas Tech stay undefeated in three SWC games and lifted the Red Raiders to 8-6 overall.

How to get all the credit cards you need and then use them to make $10,000 or more within 60-90 days

Discover the little-known secrets of how to become a "credit card millionaire"

Discover how you can acquire a credit line of $10,000, $20,000, $100,000 and even $200,000 using credit cards. Credit that you can convert into cash or use to increase your wealth by thousands in 60-90 days.

How to acquire all the credit cards you need for making money (not just the few you need for personal or business use) and six ways to make money with them. How to get cards with no annual fees and with low interest rates. How to get credit cards even if you've been turned down before. Even if you've been bankrupted.

How to get a good credit rating, even if your present rating is terrible. Even

The Credit Card Millionaire System works wonders! Here's proof:

"$100,000 line of credit"

"I attended one of your seminars in Northern California and I followed the instructions, and I want you to know that your message worked superbly for me. I received over 50 credit cards with more on the way. I have now established a line of credit exceeding $100,000." -Columbus, Ohio

"Helped me make a fresh start"

"I just started a new job and have separated from my husband. My credit was not so good but thanks to your course, I am turning that around. The new year promises to be good, and I want to thank you from the bottom of my heart for helping me to make a fresh start." --St. Louis. Missouri

if you're out of work. Even if you've been divorced.

You'll discover all this and more at the nation's original Credit Card Millionaire Seminar. Developed by the "credit card millionaire" himself - Tim Taylor, lecturer, author, and TV personality who has helped more than 20,000 get all the credit they want and instant access to thousands of dollars in cash.

It's an evening loaded with practical money-making ideas that you can use right now. Whether you're shackled by bad credit or are looking for the smart way to get wealthy, this evening can change your life! All for only $10 at the door.

Come early. Seating is limited. We've had to turn hundreds away at previous seminars.

"On our journey to financial independence"

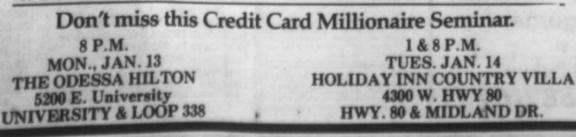

"We found your material to be very informative and not only provided serious methodologies and strategies to use, but also started our creative imagination with the different concepts that can be utilized while on our journey to financial independence." - Monroe, Washington

"Cleaned up my credit"

"Thank you so much for all the information. I was able to completely clean up my credit reports. Thank you for your expertise." ---Northern California

"Educating all of us"

Old house finds new home in country

The large master bath demonstrates the simple elegance, typical of the refurbished home. Two pedestal lavatories stand against one wall. An old six foot bathtub is encased in marble.

The kitchen, which features oak cabinets modeled after an antique piece, has a pan ceiling and is adjacent to a spacious dining area.

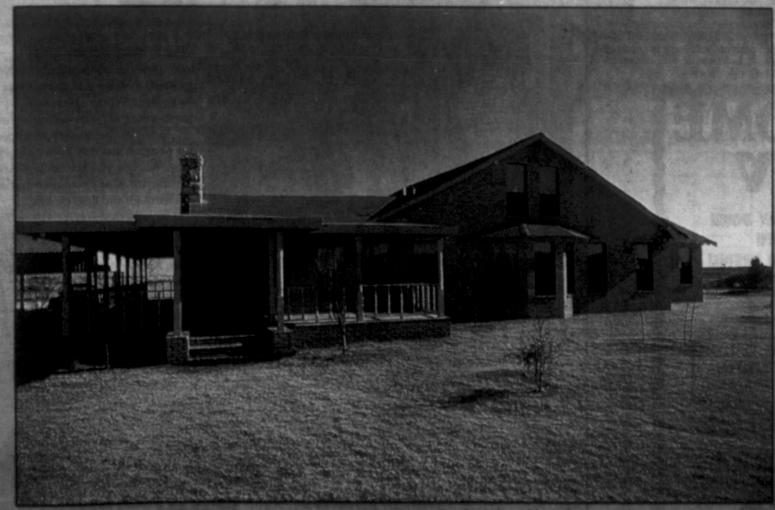

The master bedroom has one-by-four pine door frames, swag and cascading drapes and hardwood floors, which are found throughout the country home.

A nicelysized nursery is located on first floor.

In 1981 this picture was taken of a vacant, old Midland home on County Road 1065 South. It had been moved twice and was about to be moved again and remodeled by Pete and Mary Petri.

This home, which is supposed to date back at least to 1928, has a new exterior of pink brick. Unsuccessful attempts were made to preserve the original 105 siding.

Old house moved, transformed from shack to home

Julie A. Wiseman Advertising Feature Writer

"I accidently told the Lord 'I sure would like to redo an old house," recalls Mary Petri. Ms. Petri feels certain that the Lord answered her prayers in 1981 when she and her husband, Pete Petri, became owners of an old Midland home.

One might rightfully call the structure a transient house, without passing any kind of judgment on its current or previous inhabitants. The Petri family is not certain when the home was built, though the date on one of its original bathtubs is April 9, 1928. They are certain, however, that the stout structure has been moved at least three times, each time by Mr. E. C. Trice,

The old home, originally covered with 105 siding, once sat on Block 82, lots 10, 11 and 12 of the Original Town. That put it adjacent to the old Scarborough barn, right behind the old community theatre and just one block from the home of Mrs. Roberts, one of Midland's well-known citizens. In those days, residents of this big home received their mail at 308 W. Indiana.

In 1939 and 1940 the city directory marked it as a boarding house. The City of Midland purchased the house in 1956. By 1960 the City decided the house needed to be removed from its original lot. Trice accepted the structure as payment for removing it from the city's lot. He moved it to 500 East Hicks on January 8, 1960.

The County of Midland purchased the original lot in 1963 for easement purposes. Now, Midlanders recognize the area as part of the large parking lots just South of the Midland County Public Library.

The house at 500 East Hicks was eventually sold by Mr. Trice to J.P. Caldwell. Then, in 1976 the late Jerry Gay purchased the home and had it moved, by Trice, to County Road 1065 South in June of 1978. Gay added a significant amount of footage to the home.

In 1980 or 1981 Gary Dawson bought the property where the home was located. He needed the land cleared. So, Pete and Mary Petri became the new owners, and on October 19, 1981 they had the house moved once again by Trice. This time it was a short trip, half a mile down the road to another lot on County Road 1065 South.

"I hope this home has finally found a permanent resting place," Ms. Petri recalls Trice's comment upon moving the house a third time. Now the mailing address is Route 1, Box 133H, Midland, Texas 79701, and

Ms. Petri is still hoping to learn more about the earlier adventures of this home and its inhabitants.

Ms. Petri says they had the house placed sideways on the lot, so that bay windows, which once faced the two sides of the home, now adorn the front and back. What was originally the front porch was naturally shifted to the side. This provided a logical place to add a few feet and create an office.

The family began remodeling the dusty house which had sat vacant and open for a number of years. As the work began, they put their double wide mobile home on the market. Midland had reached an economic slow down, thus no quick sale was expected. The Petri's soon found that this project would teach them to expect the unexpected. The mobile home sold quickly. The family of five found themselves moving into their "new" home on August 22, 1962, long before the end of remodeling was even in sight. "We moved into this house with no plumbing, only raw electricity, no windows... It was a wet spring and we had mosquitos. We went down the road to get a bath and sprayed with Off when we got back. We had an outhouse for a while ... Of course, the kids wouldn't have any friends out ... It looked so bad," explains Ms. Petri.

Discoveries like the ceiling was 8'3" high, by no means a standard height; no room had 16" studs or studs at any set distance apart, as far as that goes; the original 105 stdus of stdus at any set distance apart, as far as that goes, the original 105 siding would continue to leak even after sand blasting, caulking, priming and painting; and the old tongue-and-groove boards which covered every wall and ceiling were a tremendous storehouse for dust which sifted down every time someone took a step on the second floor. Reconstruction took two years, much of which time Ms. Petri was washing dishes in an ice chest and preparing one-dish meals in a crock pot and microwave on the first floor, directly beneath the upstairs space which was being used as the chilren's room.

At night, she and her husband carefully trailed across beams to bed down the kids in one corner of the attic where a minimal amount of plywood had been laid.

In the midst of the remodeling project a grand piano, which Ms. Petri purchased, was delivered to the home. The stately piano coexisted with all the construction "crud," Ms. Petri says.

Even as a porch, adorned with white columns and measuring the width of the house, was being added, the family probably did not spend much time standing in awe of the view that encompasses the skylines of Big Spring, Stanton and Midland, which looks like the "City of Gold" when the sun strikes the metallic buildings each morning. Despite the extensive remodeling, "We didn't find any old relics in the house at all, which was disappointing," Ms. Petri says.

Now, without betraying the secret struggles of fledgling remodelers, the comfortable home exhibits a decor reminiscent of the prosperous days when it was first built.

Though no original walls were moved and a majority of the original materials were preserved in the renovation, hopes to make the 105 siding storm-worthy had to be abandoned. Thus the house, which sits on a 10-acre tract, was given a new exterior of pink brick. Ms. Petri says they seized this opportunity to added more insulation to the exterior walls

The old cotton-covered wiring with insulators was replaced. A perimeter heating and cooling system with a heat pump was installed. Storm windows replaced the old broken windows. An attic fan was added to aid in cooling the home

The original hardwood floors were maintained in the reconstruction. For small areas where the original floor would not hold up, the wood was replaced with wood from the old floor in the Birkhead Feed Store.

The living room, with its hardwood floor, four-inch pine trim for baseboards, window seals and door frames, ceiling fan, acoustical ceiling, swag and cascading drapes along with lace-like sheers, is typical of the decor throughout the home. A fireplace with marble hearth and beautiful wood mantle was added. One corner is highlighted by a beautiful chandelier. A neutral-tone area rug defines a warm sitting area.

Adjacent to the living room is a carefully designed kitchen and dining area. The walls are blue and bordered with patterned wallpaper. The floor covering is two-tone grey. A pan ceiling adds a special dimension to the area.

The kitchen features oak cabinets modeled after an antique piece. The upper cabinets have clear glass doors. Marble is used both on the cabinets and on the space efficient island in the center of the kitchen. The oven and cook top are built in, as is the dishwasher.

Beyond the spacious dining area, which features a brilliant chandelier, is a large pantry and utility room, designed to house the refrigerator and freezer, as well as the washer and dryer.

Down the hall, the master bedroom has mink-colored walls as well as the pine door frames and hardwood floors found throughout the country home. Once again, a light brown area rug gives the room a warm feeling. Velvet moire drapes adorn the large windows.

The large master bath also has swag drapes. Two pedestal lavatories stand against one wall. An old six foot bathtub is encased in marble and a five foot shower is equipped with two shower heads.

Near the master bedroom is a home office, where the original front porch was. The room was extended ten feet to create a 16-foot by 19-foot office. Around the edge of the room is a hardwood floor, while the center is carpeted with a plush, light brown carpet. The paint in this room is said to be a tumbleweed color.

Also on first floor, the nicely-sized nursery has bright, blue walls. On top of the hardwood floor is a mulberry-colored area rug. Another first floor room, now being utilized as a child's bedroom, would be ideal as a television room. It has a hardwood floor, antique satin curtains and many of the nice amenities found throughout the home.

A second bath has a skirted tub and grey tile shower. A tan-colored wallpaper with a raised design adorns the walls. Ash cabinets provide storage space in this bath.

Up the wide staircase, covered with mulberry-colored carpet, is a spacious bedroom and bath.

Plush wine-colored carpet is used in this comfortable room. The bath has one of the home's original skirted tubs, a pedestal sink and two closets. The tiled shower has two shower heads. Embossed wallpaper covers most of the walls and coordinates with the nearby walls painted in a mink hue. Satin curtains with lace sheers complete the soft decor of the room.

Since all the extensive remodeling was completed in July of 1963, Ms. Petri recalls her prayer for an opportunity to get to "redo" an old home and comments, "Now I'd say I'd like to redecorate it (an old home)."

However, she concedes, if completely redoing another home would leave the family debt-free, she's willing to undertake the task again. Ms. Petri quotes Romans 13:8, "Owe no man anything, but to love one another." Then she explains, "We do not want to be a slave to any lender. That's our whole purpose in selling this home - to be out of debt."

This house and ten acres is now listed by Chaparral Realtors at $180,000. One side of the property has an electric fence. Some fruit trees, which are on a drip system, a stock tank and a water well, which provides 35 gallons per minute, are found on the land.

Disposals shouldn't talk back

Jamming and harsh grinding noises shouldn't get in the way of a garbage disposal doing its job on kitchen waste.

Occasionally, food particles or hard materials can wedge between disposal blades and cause the machine to slow down, run louder or stop altogether.

Preventing these disposal prob-lems takes only a few seconds. It can ### be as simple as applying WD-40 to

The versatile lubricant, moisture displacer and cleaner works to free stuck particles from blades and to lubricate all moving parts of the disposal. The corrosion-resistant product prevents rust on blades and forms a protective coating which helps the disposal resist further jamming and tothermatic appliance uses the sun's energy to give homeowners hot water anytime of the day or night.

Homeowners can reduce or eliminate gas and electricity bills for water heating with a revolutionary appliance that's no more difficult to hook up than a dishwasher.

The "Energy Garden," from Ex-emplar, Inc., Hickory, North Carolina, is a self-contained solar collection and energy-storage system which hooks up to the spigot of your water heater. It can be installed by any homeowner in two to four hours.

The south-facing appliance sits in the yard outside the home or on the roof and utilizes the sun's natural energy to heat your water. During the day, Energy Garden sends the heated water to your water tank for use that evening. At night, it uses extra energy accumulated and stored in its cells to heat water again for early morning use.

The Energy Garden also has a unique programmable control with a voice synthesizer that talks to you. On command, it tells you the time and the vital temperatures of the system components.

It also lets you program to your lifestyle the amount of hot water you want and the amount of energy you would like to save. The control system assures you that you will never run out of hot water.

The Energy Garden is available at home centers and appliance stores. Retail price is $2,495 - one half the cost of conventional solar energy systems. It is $1,996 if you order di-

To announce the engagement of their son, Paul Libby, and Patti Robison, Genevieve and Har-ry Libby entertained last weekend with a party in the Petroleum Club's Atrium.

Decorated with a multi-colored silk floral arrangement, the buffet table featured a variety of hors d'oeuvres, along with champagne punch and hot apple cider.

Among the 80 guests were the Libby's daughter, Lisa, and from out-of-town, Phyllis and Ed Thurston and son, John of San Angelo, and Bryan Woodward of Breckenridge.

Patti is employed here as a consultant in Southwestern Bell's marketing division. Paul is a student at Oklahoma State University, majoring in mechanical engineering design. They are planning a May 17 wedding in St. Luke's United Methodist Church.

HONORING TEXAS A&M students, the Midland Aggie Mothers Club hosted a "Twas the Season" party Tuesday evening in the Texas American Bank Community Room

Not only was it fun for the students and their families to fraternize (and to be able to put names and faces together), but to celebrate A&M's Cotton Bowl victory over Auburn. The university colors of maroon and white were featured in the decorations, and holiday-type refreshments were served.

Judith (Mrs. Louis) Pare, social vice president, was in charge of arrangements. Margie (Mrs. Donald) Lee is president of the club, which was organized last year. Since such a large contingent of Midlanders (approximately 200) attend A&M, the club's primary purpose is to be of service to those students and to promote ways for them to become better acquainted.

FRIENDS OF BRUCE TER-RELL rang in the new year at his sixth annual Pre-Mortgage Burning Party. Noisemakers, party hats and streamers were trotted out as the countdown to 1986 began, and guests enjoyed champagne and a rousing rendition of Auld Lang Syne" at the stroke of midnight

Among those enjoying the festivities were radio personality Darrell Ward, Mona Gale Gibson, Ken Gosnell, Betty and Arlen Edgar, Dick Dawson, Laura and Mike Wilson, who just moved back to Midland from Jop-

MIDLAND FIGURES prominently in the January issue of "Ultra." A four-page spread is devoted to our city's "The First Hun-dred Years," while Midlander Judith (Mrs. James) Devenport is one of 35 women included on the magazine's Texas' Best-Dressed List and featured in a color photo. Yet another article, entitled "Still Texan After All These Years," focuses on former Midlander Vice President George Bush.

LONG DAYS ON the ski slopes, followed by cozy evenings around the fire, were enjoyed by countless Midlanders over the Christmas holidays. Among them were various local groups who took advantage of the vacation time to organize ski trips for their members.

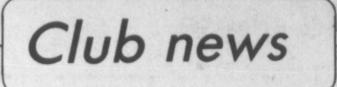

First Baptist Church took a group of 108 youth and adults to The Summit in Colorado, where they skied Breckenridge, Copper Mountain, Keystone and Beaver Creek. Besides the great skiing, the group enjoyed a nightly Bible study led by contemporary gospel singer Betsy Brown, whose Heartsong Ministries is based in Midland. The theme for the study was "Friendship."

Youth director Charlie Dodd was assisted by Bobby Henry in making the trip's arrangements. In addition to their wives, Jan Dodd and Janice Henry, 20 other adults assisted in sponsoring the group.

Seventy-eight skiers enjoyed a trip to Winter Park, Colo., sponsored by the First United Methodist Church. They celebrated New Year's Eve at an overnight stop in Denver en route to the ski area. The theme for the week's morning devotionals and evening worship was "Seasons of the Son," based on liturgical periods of the Randy McCurdy, director of youth/young adults ministries, was in charge of the trip. Sponsors were Grady Jones and daughter Kathy, Pam and Jerry Weant, Carrie Hall, Sharon and Wilson Heidelberg, Jane and Brad Kisner, Carolyn (Mrs. Joe) Terry, Kathy and Ron Wilson and Jan and Phil Warlick.

Study shows decline in child abuse

CHICAGO (AP) — Violence toward children has dropped sharply over the past 10 years in part because couples are having fewer children and because of improved of economic conditions, according to a study. A decade of efforts in preventing child abuse has resulted in a sharp decline in the number of children

A decade of efforts in preventing child abuse has resulted in a sharp decline in the number of children suffering "very severe" mistreatment — those who are beaten, hit with something, or threatened or assaulted with a gun or knife, according to the study presented at the Seventh National Conference on Child Abuse and Neglect.

While 3.6 percent of all children between the ages of 3 and 17 were severely abused in two-parent families in 1975, only 1.9 percent of that age group were similarly victimized this year, according to researchers at the University of Rhode Island and the University of New Hampshire.

THE STUDY BY Dr. Richard J. Gelles and Dr. Murray A. Straus said that at least 1 million children are abused each year, representing a decline of 705,000 incidents in 1985, compared to 10 years ago.

compared to 10 years ago. The study, funded by a grant from the National Institute of Mental Health, is one of several being presented to more than 500 leading authorities on violence against children from every state, Canada, Mexico, Australia and Europe.

It was based on a telephone survey from a sample of 4,032 child abuse cases, of which 1,428 were two-parent households.

The researchers attributed the decline to significant changes in family organization. They said couples were marrying later, waiting longer to have children and having fewer children. The number of unwanted pregnancies has dropped and economic conditions have improved over the past decade, they said.

The researchers, citing Harris Surveys, said 90 percent of the public consider child abuse a serious national problem, compared to only 10 percent in 1976.

Another study to be presented, part of a three-year effort by the National Center on Child Abuse and Neglect, concludes that more than half of parents who abuse their children mentally or physically are likely to do so again, even after treatment for abusive tendencies.

"WORKING WITH families once they have established abusive and neglectful parenting patterns is akin to constructing a flimsy fence at the base of a hill once the rains have started in the hopes of stopping a landslide," said Deborah Daro, whose study analyzed 19 child abuse projects across the country.

Daro's study on the success of treatment programs looked at 986 families composed of 1,250 adults. She concluded that treatment programs made little progress in stopping future instances of physical abuse, chronic neglect and emotional maltreatment. Between 40 percent and 60 percent of the children included in the study were abused while their parents were in treatment, she said.

"Once maltreatment starts, it's very difficult to correct, even in the best treatment programs," she said in a telephone interview Sunday. "By the time they get to the program, often times it's too late."

Daro acknowledged that some progress is being made in cutting down on repeat offenders, but said there still is much room for improvement. Focusing on prevention and early intervention would save money, she said.

IF THE TYPE of therapeutic and nontherapeutic services offered to the study's 966 families were applied to all 739,000 families who maltreated children in 1963, the cost would have been between $381 million and $1.2 billion.

By contrast, six weeks of parent education services could have been provided to all 360,707 low-income women who gave birth in 1982 women who are considered a high risk group for abuse — for a cost of $22.7 million, the study said.

Children rarely lie about sexual abuse

CHICAGO (AP) — Adults who are involved in custody disputes or who were abused when they were young are more than three times as likely as children to file false complaints of sexual abuse, a researcher says.

"I found that children make false or fictitious accounts very rarely," said Dr. David Jones, clinical director of Denver's Kempe National Center for the Prevention and Treatment of Child Abuse and Neglect.

'Do they ever get it wrong?' Jones said. "Yes, sometimes they do, but mostly they don't.

"They used to say in the child protection field that 'children never lie' or 'children never get it wrong,' but occasionally they do, although not very often."

Jones, in a report delivered at the Seventh National Conference on Child Abuse and Neglect, said children lied or were incorrect in fewer than 2 percent of cases studied; adults gave false reports in more than 6 percent.

"Adults who made false allegations generally were involved in acri-

Nuclear family dominant lifestyle

NEW YORK (AP) — Contrary to popular belief, the nuclear family consisting of a married couple and their children has always been the monious custody disputes ... and most were experiencing post-traumatic symptoms based on their own vicitimization when children," Jones said Monday.

OF 576 POSSIBLE child sexual abuse cases reported in 1963 to the Denver Department of Social Services, 267 were unfounded, either because there was not enough evidence or investigators determined they hadn't happened, he said.

Forty-five of the unfounded cases stemmed from false reports. Thirtysix, or 6.25 percent of the cases studied, were filed by adults, Jones said. Children made nine false reports, or 1.56 percent, he said.

Other studies have shown the public tends not to believe a child who claims to have been sexually abused when the accused adult denies it, unless there is other supporting evidence, Jones said.

And there is no way for authorities investigating a child's complaint to determine if the child is lying, he said. "I wish there was some sort of litmus test to determine if a child is telling the truth."

"There are indications that interviewers can watch for as the story unfolds. In my experience, children offering fictitious accounts showed an absence of any emotion. They weren't depressed or saddened or anxious."

The four-day conference was sponsored by the Chicago-based National Committee for the Prevention of Child Abuse.

THE COMMITTEE projected that reports of all types of child abuse would increase by 9 percent for 1985. A 14 percent increase was reported in 1984.

Christine Holmes, committee spokeswoman, said this year's smaller increase was determined in a 50state telephone survey of agencies that handle child abuse.

"We think the public is becoming more and more aware of the problem and prevention programs are having some impact," Ms. Holmes said.

Marriages bounce back, divorces drop

WASHINGTON (AP) - After two decades of increasing numbers of U.S. divorces, the government is reporting a second consecutive year when fewer marriages were dissolved.

Although the new figures may seem to show a trend of fewer divorces, some population experts say it may be only a brief respite.

"I think it's a fairly short term change, although some people want to interpret it to mean that marriage is getting" more solid, said Jean van der Tak of the Population Reference Bureau, a private Washington research group.

but does not interpret the reasons for change.

Connie Elizabeth Caton and

Eric Carleton Kothmann

Population experts have indicated that the drop in divorces is related to trends in family composition - with many young people delaying marriage - and the recession in the earyears of this decade.

Mrs. van der Tak said that provisional estimates indicate divorces will again be on the rise when the final figures are reported for 1984 and 1985, according to updated statistics published in Population Today, her group's periodical.

The 1981 recession was the worst since the Depression of the 1930s, she said, adding that at that time the number of household formations dropped as people delayed living on their own because they couldn't afford it. "Divorces cost money," she observed. "Divorce often is a great reflection of the economic times. I believe the recession was a prime cause for that (the divorce decline) happening in 1983." With the current improvements in the economy, she said, divorces are again increasing, up to an estimated 1,159,000 in the year ending in Sep-tember, 1984, and 1,186,000 for the year ended in September, 1985. The final figures for those years are not

Other demographers have also cited changes in society as a factor, with members of the post World War II baby boom generation delaying marriage to pursue education and careers.

The average length of marriages which end in divorce is 9.6 years, according to government statistics. Thus, if many marriages started later, they will also dissolve at a later date, the population experts say.

And since the marriage rate sagged in the 1970s with baby boomers putting it off, divorce could be expected to echo that drop a decade or so later.

As people tend to marry later in life, the average age at divorce also has increased. The average age of divorcing husbands was 36.1 in 1983, up from 34.8 in 1978. In the same time span the average age of wives at divorce rose from 32.1 to 33.5.

The decline in the total number of divorces in 1983 also resulted in a drop in the divorce rate, to 4.9 per 1,000 persons in the nation. It was 5.0 in 1982 and peaked at 5.3 per 1,000 in both 1979 and 1981.

The new statistics also upheld strong geographic variation cross the country.

The Northeast had the lowest diernment's new figures, released Friday by the National Center for Health Statistics, showed a 1 percent decline in divorce in 1983, following a 4 per cent drop in 1982. There were 1,158,000 divorces in the United States in 1983, 12,000 fewer than 1982, the Center for Health Statistics said. Figures for those years were the most recent complete data available.

The declines reversed a two-decade trend that had seen the number of U.S. divorces more than triple to an all-time high of 1,213,000 in 1981.

The center, a part of the Department of Health and Human Services, compiles the nation's vital statistics, along with observations of change, yet compile.

Postponement of marriage also has resulted in people marrying when they are somewhat more mature. That also tends to reduce the odds of divorce, since marriages are least stable among younger people. "In 1983, divorce rates were highest for married men 20-24 years of age (45.2 per 1,000) and for teen-age women (48.1)," the Center for Health Statistics reported. The rate was only half that for men in their 40s, and for men in their 50s it was one-fourth the level of men in their 20s, the center said. And the decline was even sharper for women, with those aged 50-54 only one-seventh as likely to divorce as teens.

vorce rate at 3.6 per 1,000 people, down from 3.7 in 1982. Next was the Midwest with a rate of 4.6 per 1,000, unchanged.

In the South the rate was 5.6, down from 5.7, while the West had the highest divorce rate at 5.8, down from 6.0 a year earlier.

Massachusetts replaced North Da-kota as the state with the lowest divorce rate, dropping from 3.4 to 3.2 between 1982 and 1983. North Dakota increased from 3.3 to 3.4 to fall into second place.

Nevada easily maintained the nation's highest divorce rate, edging up from 14.9 to 15.0.

Persons find first names often don't fit their personalities

New York Times News Service

NEW YORK - When Sonny Sloan named one of her daughters Gillis some 20-odd years ago - before the name became fashionable - she provoked an unexpected reaction.

"My mother had the nerve to telephone and ask me how I had chosen such an odd name," Mrs. Sloan recalled. "Not only that, she told me that I still had time to change it legally

At first, Mrs. Sloan couldn't believe what she was hearing. She was speechless with amazement. This reaction was occasioned because her own name, given her by the very same mother who was now registering serious doubts about Gillis, is Irvil. Not only that, but the name wasn't even a family hand-me-down; her mother had made it up.

A RANGE A REPORT OF A RANGE OF THE REPORT OF

"I hate Irvil," said Mrs. Sloan, who is an active worker for the Citizens Committee for Children and the New York Public Library. "I suffered with it all the way through school until I got to college. Then a friend took the 'son' out of Lawson, my maiden name, and I became 'Sonny.' My husband says that eventualwhen I become a grandmother, I can't be called 'Sonny,' but I'll never go back to Irvil - never.

Mrs. Sloan's reaction to her name is not unique. A great many men and women are not fond of, actively dislike or even hate their given names. Sometimes it's because, like Irvil, the name is unusual and the subject of teasing when they are young. Occasionally it's because it's difficult to pronounce and has to be spelled out, repeated or explained. But most often the disliked name is simple and not uncommon: it just doesn't fit the self-image of the bearer.

The 18-year-old Kenyon College freshman who is known to her friends as Jean Kindred actually has a Marjorie in front of that Jean. It's never used because, in Miss Kindred's view, "Margaret would have been all right but Marjorie is too prissy for me; Jean is nice and short and to the point."

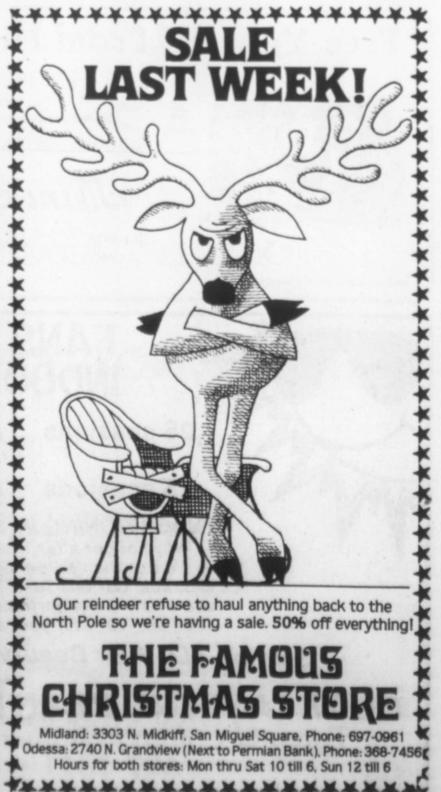

Her sister doesn't consider short and to the point any criterion. Her name is Lucy and she always wanted to be called something else.

"I don't like the sound of Lucy, she said. "It's too sing-songy.

"If I knew a girl named Lucy, I don't think I'd like her," she said. The designer Pauline Trigere doesn't like her name and never has, but the fact of the matter is that, despite her discontent, she can't think of any name she'd like better. "I never thought Pauline was feminine enough," she said. "But I never came up with another first name that would do." What she does like, she said, is be ing called "Trigere."

Teens study marriage in school

ARLINGTON HEIGHTS, Ill. (AP) - Bryan Lemmon carries a bag of flour to his classes at John Hersey High School, and he carries it carefully. It's not heavy — it's his baby.

Cuddling a five-pound flour bag is all part of an introduction to the responsibilities of marriage and family. If it sours some students on the idea of wedded bliss, that's just fine with the teachers.

"Many of our students come back and tell us that they're not going to marry as early as they thought they might," said Ann Slattery, a home economics teacher who teams with Bob Hannon to teach the class.

We slow them down a little, and that's just fine with us - and with their parents," she said.

Mrs. Slattery and Hannon wrote the text, which is now in its second printing as the course developed at Hersey High spreads across the nation.

LEMMON IS among 118 students taking the course at Hersey this year.

The students were married in a mock ceremony at the start of the semester, and 48 of the couples pretend have children. Lemmon and his bride are among four couples with twins - represented by two sacks of flour.

"They're required to have their child or children in class at all times and to care for them at all times," Mrs. Slattery said. "Obviously, a bag of flour is not the responsibility a child might be, but it's amazing how much they get into it.

HOSKINS-NIPP

ARLINGTON - First United Methodist Church in Arlington was the setting for the Jan. 4 wedding of Laurie Carol Hoskins of Arlington and Carriel Eister Nipp Jr. of Mid-land. The Rev. Don Pike officiated the 7 p.m. ceremony

The bride is the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Tom Hoskins of Arlington. Parents of the bridegroom are Mr. and Mrs. Carriel E. Nipp of Midland. Julie Hoskins of Arlington was maid of honor for her sister. Bridesmaids were Kelly Eaton, Kim Browning and Laura Landers of Arlington, and sister of the bridegroom Debra Nipp of Dallas. Mrs. Ricky Powell of Arlington was bridesmatron. Flower girl was Angie Hoskins of Wichita Falls, niece of the bride.

Jeff Hicks of Midland served as best man. Ushers were Tom Segulja of Midland, Mark Wilson of Austin and Tom Yelverton of Midland. Groomsmen were Hunter Novak of Dallas, Scott Kenney of Midland, Kelly Boone of Seminole, Steve Seay of Midland and Tim Edwards of Ohio. Matthew Segulja of Midland, nephew of the bridegroom, was ring bearer.

CLOUGH-DAUGHERTY

HOUSTON - Martha Clough and former Midlander Tracy Don Daugherty of Houston were married at 7:30 p.m. Dec. 31 aboard the sailing barque Ellissa, docked in Galveston Harbor.

The bride is the daughter of Dr. and Mrs. Edwin Low of Canyon. Parents of the bridegroom are Mr. and Mrs. Don E. Daugherty of Midland. The bride earned a bachelors degree from Baylor University and a masters degree from the University of Houston. She is coordinator of Communications, Language and Culture Center at the University of Houston. Her husband earned his bachelors and masters, degrees at Southern Methodist University, and his Ph.D. in English from the creative writing program at the University of Houston. He is working with Random House on the publication of a fiction novel, to be released in September.

Following a wedding trip to New Orleans, La., the couple will live in Houston.

Robot waiter draws customers

TOKYO (AP) - He can't take a dinner order, open a bottle of wine or explain the fly in the soup, and he moves at a snail's pace, but "Kenchan" may be the most popular waiter in Tokyo's Roppongi nightlife district.

Ken-chan is a robot — a 4-foothigh, talking mechanical man who has proved so entertaining to customers at Grazie's Italian restaurant that his owners say he is well worth his $40,000 U.S. purchase price.

"Some people come in and order just a cup of coffee or tea to see the robot," said Kenichi Echiuya, manager of Grazie's and three other restaurants at the same location.

"This is a family restaurant, and the children especially love to see him," he says. "He brings in customers.

However, while Ken serves primarily as a sort of walking advertisement for the restaurant, his distributor believes he is a prototype for a new type of robot which will be widely used in shops and restaurants.

"Usually robots are used in factory automation in Japan," says Ryuhei Akimoto of the Seibu Saison Group, which provided the software for the robot. "Shop automation in the service industries is far behind compared to factory automation."

COSTA MESA, Calif. (AP) -Homeowners have more doors and windows professionally remodeled than any other part of the home, according to a report

Parental righteousness: The tie that binds

AT WIT'S END

By ERMA BOMBECK

For years I've had a dream. I'd wake up one day and all our kids would be employed and their cars would be running. In my mind, I fantasized about how we'd all sit around the kitchen table and talk of happy things that had nothing whatsoever to do with resumes and carburetors. We'd be a family again.

Well, it happened. At 7:30 p.m. last Thursday, the "Halley's Comet of Family Living" occurred. All of us stood around the kitchen and celebrated the phenomenon.

"Well, this is really great," said my husband.

"It certainly will be wonderful to insurance?" talk about something meaningful and get on with our lives," I added. Possibly five full minutes passed without anyone saying anything and then I said to my son, "Aren't you going to get a haircut 'Made an appointment for the weekend," he said. "Did you pick up all that mail

that's been collecting here all ... "Got it yesterday," he said.

We sat in silence. Finally, my eyes brightened, "I'll bet you forgot Grandma's birthday and she's always so thoughtful about ...

'Took out her present last weekend. Had a nice visit.'

My husband turned to our daughter, "I don't suppose you've started saving a dime toward your car

"Paid it last week," she said.

Throughout the dinner hour we struggled to find some sin against parental wisdom that we could discuss. When they were between jobs it had been so stimulating. We could give them our "Pull yourself up by your bootstrap" speech (an oldie but a goodie), and when the cars broke down, it was wonderful to march out the traditional "If you hadn't been so stubborn and held out for a classic car, you'd have wheels today. Maybe next time you'll listen to your parents."

The evening dragged on. They couldn't do anything wrong. They had put oil in the car. Their laundry was done within the last week. They were eating well.

I never knew perfection could be so dull. But then I was new at it. Was it possible that controversy bound us together and the parent-child roles provided a common ground for rapport?

As they left, one of the motors in a car refused to turn over. "Turn off the engine before you flood it and then floor it," said his brother

"Nonsense," said my husband. "The battery is dead, and if you did what I told you to do in the first place, you'd have another year on the warranty.

I was putting together the "You probably left the door open and ran the battery down" speech. We were a family again.

Declare Your Own Holiday

If you want a special day set aside to honor World War II bombardiers or to encourage Midlanders to wear seat belts, Mayor G. Thane Akins is the person to ask.

"The people who want to proclaim a day something call the mayor," said City Manager Jim Brown.

"Then, if he agrees to that, they need to write it up the way they want it to read," he explained, "with all the 'whereases' and 'therefores.'"

Akins said he has no set criteria for judging the suggestions.

"There are probably a few things I wouldn't proclaim," he said, "if I have an adverse reaction to them."

"I'm sure that if they wanted to proclaim Alcoholic Beverages Week, it'd be turned down," Brown noted.

"I read them over to make sure there's nothing controversial that I wouldn't want to put my name to," Akins said. For example, Akins said he would avoid proclaiming anything like an "Abortion Day." However, Akins said he has never had a suggested proclamation submitted to him that he felt had to be completely rejected.

"The only one I can recall having troue with was a 'Clean Air Day,' " he said, cause the proclamation called for a cal of zero air pollutants.

"Which is ridiculous," Akins said, "beuse even nature puts pollutants in the

The number and frequency of proclamations can vary widely, according to Nancy Oldham of the city manager's office.

"We may not get one for three weeks and then we might get four a day," she said.

Sometimes, the proclamations are read aloud at City Council meetings, but, Brown said, "most often they are not." Just a few of the "holidays" proclaimed by Akins last year included:

 American History Month in February
 Boy Scouts of America Diamond Jubilee also in February.

• Bombardier Week (honoring the bombardiers who were stationed here during World War II) April 8-14.

Small Business Week May 5-12.

 Celebration of the Arts Week May 20-26.

 ABWA (American Business Women Association) Education Month in May.

 The Midland Speak Up, Join BP&W and National Business Women's Association month Aug. 28-Oct. 26, sponsored by the Uptown Chapter of Business and Professional Women to urge "all citizens to join in this salute to working women."

• The All-American Buckle Up to call "upon all citizens to establish a goal of always using occupant protection systems while traveling in motor vehicles" Nov. 24-30.

• National Drunk and Drugged Driving Awareness Week, which was Dec. 15-21 to precede the holiday season.

While Akins admits that issuing such proclamations is good public relations tool to help a politicians build a happy constituency, he said he considers them primarily "a matter of public service." "I enjoy doing it," he said.

"You and I might not have an interest in what some of them are about," he said, but "all of them are important to the people who want them proclaimed."

Every Day a Red-Letter Day

Merry Meitlisunntig!

Epiphany has passed and many Midland supermarkets have already replaced the items in their Christmas aisles with big heart-shaped boxes of Valentine's Day candy, skipping over the rest of January entirely.

Compared to January, February seems packed with holidays, including Groundhog Day, Mardi Gras, Ash Wednesday, Washington's and Lincoln's Birthdays as well as Valentine's Day.

There are, however, enough offbeat excuses to celebrate during January to help a party addict come down gently after the year-end holiday high.

The following list — compiled from such sources as "Chases's Annual Events," "Rolling Stone Rock Almanac" and "The World Almanac" — is a calendar to let the revelry roll on into February.

Not all of the events will be a cause of celebration for everyone. For example, many music-lovers don't consider the anniversary of the Disco Boom a cause for celebration, but, if nothing else, it can provide a timely party theme for those who want to dust off their old Bee Gees albums.

• Today — Meitlisunntig. According to "Chase's Annual Events," Meitlisunntig, the second Sunday in January, is a Swiss holiday when the girls of Meisterschwansen and Fahrwanghen parade wearing historic military uniforms. A festival follows the processions.

This custom supposedly dates from the Villmergen War of 1712, when the women of Meisterschwansen and Fahrwanghen gave vital help that led to a Swiss victory.

 January 13 — Stephen Foster Memorial Day. Composer Stephen Foster died on this date in 1864 in a New York hospital. His official memorial day was established by presidential proclamation in 1951.

People who didn't get to do any Christmas caroling last month can get together with friends and sing such well-known Foster compositions as "Swanee River," "Oh! Susanna," "Beautiful Dreamer" and "Jeanie with the Light Brown Hair."

• January 14 — Ratification Day. On this date in 1784, the Continental Congress ratified the Treaty of Paris, which officially ended the American Revolution.

• January 15 — Martin Luther King Jr.'s Birthday. The civil rights leader and Nobel Peace Prize recipient was born on this date in 1929.

He will be honored for the first time with a national public holiday this January 20. Like Washington and Lincoln, King had his birthday observance moved to a Monday by Congress.

• January 16 — National Nothing Day. A newspaper reporter named Harold Pullman Coffin invented Nothing Day in 1973 "to provide Americans with one national day when they can just sit without celebrating, observing or honoring anything."

• January 17 — Thomas Crapper Day. This date honors one of the pivotal figures of history, Englishman Thomas Crapper, who is credited with being the prime developer of the flush toilet in Victorian England.

 January 18 — Ati-Atihan Festival. A festival on the third weekend of January in Kalibo, Philippines, commemorates the peace pact between the Ati of Panay and the Malays who immigrated to the island.

Traditionally, the townspeople blacken their bodies with soot and wear strange costumes while singing and dancing in the streets.

DEAR ABBY

Mother fears for daughter's future

By ABIGAIL VAN BUREN

DEAR ABBY: My 17-year-old daughter has been dating a boy for 2½ years.

They recently got back together after being broken up for about four months, which were the happiest four months I've spent in the last 21/2 years.

For the entire time they dated it was one crisis after another. He treated her rotten and she always forgave him - even made excuses for him. She's a fine Christian girl, beautiful inside and out.

Well, when she and Brock (not his real name) broke up the last time, she admitted that he had been slapping and hitting her. She would tell us the bruises she had were from "falling" or bumping into things, but now it turns out Brock had hit her. She related one incident where he slapped her so hard, she hit her head against the back window of his truck and fell to the floor!

Now I'm sick at heart, fearing that she'll marry him. I hope and pray something will open her eyes before it's too late.

Abby, please advise girls that they

DEAR MOM: She may not listen to me, either, but I'll try:

People who tolerate repeated physical abuse need therapy to find out why they have such a low opinion of themselves that they will put up with it.

Brock is a classic potential wifebatterer. Your daughter should not continue seeing him unless he gets counseling and corrects his abusive behavior. And your daughter needs counseling, too.

DEAR ABBY: My husband (I'll call him Whiskers) grew a very lush beard two years ago, and I love it, but it has created a problem.

We are planning a trip to Australia, and the picture on his passport shows him to be clean shaven. Now that he has a beard, we are wondering if this might cause a problem. What is your advice? - WHIS-KERS' WIFE

Also, I would not have known any of the other girls who organized it if I bumped into one of them on the street

I was severely criticized because I didn't call to say I wasn't going to attend. (To tell you the truth, I forgot.) I was also criticized because I didn't send a gift.

January blahs follow holiday high

New York Times News Service

NEW YORK - The frenzy of the holiday season has ground to a halt; the parties are over, and so are the shopping, the cooking, the gift-wrap-ping, the giant family dinners.

In their place: the January blahs. As one New York man, weary from his social rounds and anticipating the month ahead, put it: "What is there to look forward to? Now there are no more parties, and I put off minor surgery so it wouldn't inter-fere with the holidays, so I must go into the hospital. And then there are the bills: I'm depressed." Gloria Nash, a sales executive with the Ritter Food Corp., took a differ-out but no more cheery view of the

Australia: An educational family vacation spot

Copley News Service

"There are millions of fish down here!

Nathan shoved the snorkel back in his mouth, ducked his head and was gone for another underwater look at the wonders of the Great Barrier Reef.

The reef was just one adventure on a two-week, four-city vacation in Australia, a trip that's sure to survive as a fond family memory long after three teenage sons have become men and left the nest.

Judging by what we saw, a lot of Americans, perhaps spurred by special packages such as the one offered by Qantas Airlines, are finding that the strong American dollar means extra savings on an exciting and educational family vacation in Australia.

And Australia is a gracious host for all ages. The highlights of the trip? From a teenager's perspective, swimming along the Great Barrier Reef and getting a close-up look at the magnificent coral formations and the hordes of fish and other sea life has to rank as a winner.

Of course, petting the kangaroos in the preserve near Brisbane was a first, too. The whole family became so engrossed that we had to scramble to make it back to our tour bus on time.

And the visit to Manly, the penin-sula across the harbor from Sydney, was memorable for the hydrofoil ride, the beach, the amusement park and rows and rows of little shops and restaurants. And how could any of these three boys forget Melbourne's miles of shops, including one special one that sold nothing but records, Tshirts, posters and other items related to heavy metal music?

BUT LONG after their tastes in music change, they surely will remember their exposure to a different way of life; a language that's the same, and yet different, and the warmth of the Australian people. "Doesn't anyone here like the U.S.?" Aaron asked as we drove from the Melbourne airport on our first day in Australia. We had just passed a string of signs and graffiti protesting nuclear weapons, and some of them had been critical of the United States.

We explained that people could have differing opinions and still be friends. That friendship was evident at every turn. The Australians are a gregarious people and one told us a little joke about a revolutionary camera with a shutter so fast it could catch an Australian with his mouth shut.

Time after time, on boats, buses, airplanes or a park bench, people would engage the boys in conversa-can presence in Australia during World War II. One fellow went so far as to remark that the United States had saved Australia from invasion. Grumbles from a couple of Australians prompted him to amend the statement. "What I meant to say was the United States helped prevent an invasion.

The friendliest people in Australia? Perhaps it was the cooks. Everyone expected the food to be different, and there was some concern about how the youngsters might react, especially since one is a finicky. eater

We shouldn't have worried. Yes, some of the food was not what we were accustomed to, but the quality varied not one bit from the fanciest hotel dining room to the smallest hole-in-the-wall selling take-away food

The smallest, most humble eateries that catered mainly to people who wanted take-out food were perfect for a family with five different appetites. Even the restaurants that could seat no more than eight or 10 people had remarkably varied offerings, from hamburgers to steaks to chicken to spaghetti to fish and chips and on and on. There was sure to be something on the menu to please everyone.

Beware, however, of Australian sweets and pastries. Restaurants everywhere offer delicious desserts displayed under glass where you can't help but notice them as you enter. It's pretty hard to keep your mind on dinner when you're thinking about dessert.

And any vacationer traveling with teenage boys should take advantage of the breakfast buffets, such as the ones offered at the hotels we visited. THE MAJOR differences? We The buffets were priced at $8 or $9 each, but they were feasts. Fueled by plate after plate of all the ham, bacon, sausage, eggs, fresh fruit, cereal and pastries they could eat, our boys didn't mind if we had to grab a quick, and sometimes skimpy, lunch while rushing from one tour to gate on foot.

The West Provide the second states and the second

Clothes are a more serious problem when traveling with youngsters. Blue jeans or shorts were standard attire with our group.

WE HAD each boy pack his own medium suitcase of clothes. Jackets and bulky items for the whole family went in a large suitcase. Everyone started with a clothes supply that should have lasted for two weeks, but, sure enough, on the fourth day we heard the plaintive cry: "Mom, I'm out of socks."

Well, Mom has heard that routine before, so she had slipped an extra dozen pairs into her suitcase.

It's easy enough to plan on hitting Laundromats along the way, but who wants to spend a vacation in a laundry? Hotels were little help. Some had no laundry facilities. One international hotel in Sydney had one washer and one dryer, but the washer would take only a very small load and, according to the sign on the dryer, it would need 90 minutes to handle a meager load of wet clothes.

Handling money was difficult. To avoid the hassle and extra expense of each boy converting his own money into Australian dollars, we told them we would supply the Australian dollars and they could pay us back after the vacation. The system worked well, except the bookkeeping was staggering. The Australians are partly to blame. There were so many stores and so much fascinating merchandise that at times it seemed we were on a two-week shopping spree. Quality Australian bush hats ranged up to $49. Stuffed koala and kangaroo dolls came in all sizes and were reasonably priced. And who could resist a T-shirt with a koala pictured on it? Or a sweater to take home to Carol, or a wind chime to add to Mary's collection, and on and on.

WE'RE SORRY now that we passed up a sporting goods store's excellent prices on pistols. We priced cameras and decided we could wait until we arrived home. We found fascinating bookstores in every city we visited, and the books we purchased were passed around from boy to boy to while away the time on Qantas flights or to fill an evening in the hotel room.

Part of the excitement of shopping was that we never knew what we would find next. One evening in Melbourne, we ducked under a store's

Some tips for visitors to Australia

By JACK REBER Copley News Service

Here are some things you might want to know about travel in Australia, particularly if there are children in your party: Weather: August is winter in Australia, but we found a light jacket was all we needed, even in Melbourne, where every day included drizzles or rain.

Meals: Restaurants are everywhere; menus are varied and the food is the good old basic fare, meaning even finicky youngsters will have no problems. If they don't like fish after this trip, they never will. One caution: Don't assume the little restaurant where you had lunch will be open for dinner. Some close very early. We were in Brisbane on a public holiday when almost everything, including the hotel's restaurants, was closed.

Air travel: Face it, Australia is a long way from the United States. But Qantas will get you there as quickly as possible and as com-fortably. We flew on eight Qantas flights and all were on time Money: We paid about 71 cents for the Australian dollar. The only time we had trouble exchanging money was when we re-turned to the United States. Service at Australian banks is refreshingly swift. Visa/Master-Card are accepted.

Getting around: If you're 21 and have an American driver's license you can legally drive in Australia. Rather than tackle driving on the left side of the road and those infamous roundabouts the bus drivers complain abouts the bus drivers complain about, rely on Australia's excel-lent public transportation system. Tipping: Tipping is not as wide-spread in Australia as it is in the United States, although it is a common practice in the tourist centers. If you've received good service, leave a tip, but don't be surprised if it is refused.

Departure tax: You will hate to leave Australia, particularly when you have to pay $20 per per-son departure tax. You may hear that major credit cards are now being accepted in paying the tax. But check it out: at Cairns cash was required.

When Down Under expect the unexpected

By LOREEN ARBUS and NORM CHANDLER FOX Copley News Service

If it's possible, everything in Aus-tralia turns out to be more breathtaking in person than seen in even the most dazzling commercial. But the most exciting part of an Australian adventure is the unexpected. It's everywhere.

If you want to begin your Aussie holiday the instant you step aboard. an aircraft, fly Qantas. The staff members of this Aussie airline will immediately have you smiling, since they capitalize on one of their nation's great assets: the Australian sense of humor. Direct flights from Los Angeles and San Francisco take you to the country's newest international port of entry, Cairns, located in the state of Queensland's tropical north

An hour's drive further north is Port Douglas. A 7-mile sandy beach, an extraordinary nearby mountain gorge and a raffish pub in the town's Central Hotel combine to make Port Douglas a fun stop. Boarding the sleek 128-passenger, high-speed catamaran Quicksilver at 9:30 a.m. daily, you'll spend 90 minutes cruising to the eighth wonder of the world: The Great Barrier Reef.

Docking at a large, partly submerged, floating viewing platform, passengers can step into an adjacent glass-bottom sub-sea vessel and travel through the multicolored coral formations as countless varieties of tropical fish swim by. You also can

Imagine experiencing the best of a sheep station in the bush - all within the city limits. The place is called the Australian Woolshed, and it's located in Brisbane, the capital of Queensland. When you arrive during the day, you first get to see the ram's parade. Eight different species of sheep march into a large hall and mount stairs to the podium as if they were invited speakers for a banquet. There's a demonstration of sheep shearing by an expert who's been doing it for 40 years. Visitors get to try their hand at it afterward. A picnic lunch halfway down provides a nice break

One last stop for unusual excursions is the city of Adelaide, which is beautifully planned with a ring of parks separating the center of the city and the suburbs. With an unusually large number of churches that have become vacant, citizens have turned these beautiful buildings into discotheques. Our favorites included St. Paul's and Josephine's.

The most important thing to remember on your travels through Australia is to expect the unexpected.

Corporations plan security for traveling executives

Los Angeles Times-

Washington Post News Service The hijacking of an Egyptian jetliner en route from Athens to Cairo has focused efforts by major corporations to protect their executives while traveling abroad

Reacting to the threat, corporations around the country are consulting security experts before finalizing travel plans. They are warning employes about potential dangers, canceling some tours for executives and customers or switching to destinations that seem less hazardous - and trying to make their overseas facilities and personnel less-attractive targets. Some firms are asking agents to book officials under fictitious names and no longer want airline ticket jackets customized with company logos.

The travel industry was jarred for the third time in five months by the tragedy at Malta's airport Nov. 23, where an American woman was executed by the terrorists and 58 other passengers, crew members and hijackers were killed when Egyptian commandos stormed the plane.

Just one month earlier, the Italian cruise ship Achille Lauro had been hijacked in the Mediterranean. That incident, in which an American passenger was killed by terrorists, followed the hijacking in June of a TWA flight after it took off from Athens. A U.S. Navy diver on the jet was slain. After the TWA incident, the U.S. government advised Americans not to use the Athens airport and anxious travelers canceled their travel plans, costing Greek tourism about $300 million.

In addition, a number of Americans decided not to take previously booked Mediterranean cruises following the Achille Lauro incident because the cruises originated and ended in Athens, and other cruises were canceled because of concern expressed by clients and travel agents.

Despite these events and lingering uneasiness, the vast majority of U.S. tourists have completed their vacations abroad this summer and fall with no difficulties more serious than occasional missed connections and lost baggage. There is no way to accurately measure how leisure travel has been affected so far, but the chance of the average tourist being involved in a terrorist action remains minimal.

However, the recent tragedies have caused some business travelers to take more precautions. Among the indications of increased concern about terrorism: A conference on "Terrorism, Tourism and Traveler Security" will be held in Washington Feb. 12 -14. Sponsored by Antone Security Inc. (P.O. Box 409, Bowie, Md. 20715), a division of an international security firm, the conference is directed at corporations, travel agents and foreign tourist offices in this country. It is also open to the general public.

Mexico's tourism industry recovering from earthquake

Hearst News Service

MEXICO CITY - Laid low by the twin blows of September's terrible earthquakes and the vagaries of U.S. diplomacy, Mexico's faltering tourism's Department of Cultural and Educational Affairs.

"Things are much better now than they were just after the earthqua-kes," added Francisco Tejeda, sales manager of the posh hotel El Presidente Chapultepec.

Hotel managers in resort cities on the Pacific Coast and Yucatan Peninsula reported they were already full, and Mexican Secretary of Tourism

Enriquez Savignac is predicting a banner year for tourism in 1986. And though it isn't good for Mexico's shaky economy, the nation's free-floating peso makes vacationing earthquakes and the vagarles of U.S. diplomacy, Mexico's faltering tour-ism economy apparently has made a strong recovery. "Everything looks very good; we have come back," said Bernard Forat, chief of the Ministry of Tour-

Forat said that although the quakes killed more than 7,000 people and destroyed 3,000 buildings, in-cluding major tourist hotels in Mexi-co City and on the West Coast, the demand was not as extensive as the damage was not as extensive as the rest of the world thought.

"FIRST, THERE WAS no news because the telephones and Telex were not working," he said. "Then the first news was that the whole city was gone. People heard in Italy, France, all over the world, that Mexico (City) has disappeared, the end of the world had come." U.S. Ambassador John Gavin add-ed to the misinformation, and subsequent drop in tourism, by insisting at least 10,000 were dead in Mexico City, Forat said. Gavin, the State Department and the American Automobile Association already had damaged tourism earlier in the year by declaring that it was unsafe for Americans to travel in Mexico, Forat said.

"John Gavin declared in February that Guadalajara, Puerto Vallarta and even Acapulco were not safe for tourists," Forat said. "As a result, many groups canceled, including many that had come here for many

Forat suggested the warning from Gavin and the State Department, which also led to an AAA advisory, was prompted by the U.S. desire to pressure Mexican officials to find and prosecute the drug dealers responsible for the death of a U.S. narcotics agent outside Guadalajara.

"The result was a terrible image for Mexico in your country," said Forat, describing how people attend-ing a Texas music educators' convention in San Antonio in February would "not even stop" at the tourism ministry's promotion booth.

"We had about the same thing with the image of the earthquake, he said. "Everybody in the world saw the buildings crumbling, but not the rest.

in a 10 percent decline in tourism this year from 1984, when 4.7 million tourists visited the interior of the country and 72 million crossed the Mexican-U.S. border for short visits. The latter number makes it the most-crossed border in the world, Forat said.

The bad effects of the earthquakes and U.S. diplomacy apparently are over. Tejeda said occupancy in his hotel is 45 percent, about normal for the slow Christmas season in Mexico City. El Presidente chain hotels in such resort areas as Acapulco, Zihua-tanejo, Cancun and Puerto Vallarta are "very occupied," he said. Forat said the beach resorts are reporting 100 percent occupancy despite an 18 percent increase in hotel prices ordered by the government at the start

THE BAD PUBLICITY resulted of the winter season last month The Tourism Ministry is conduct-ing a $10 million "come to Mexico" campaign in the United States. Te-jeda said the Mexican Hotel Association also has launched a campaign in the U.S. and Europe.

"Price-wise, it is very good to come here," Tejeda said. "You can find very good hotels for $10." Top-of-theline hostelries here, such as El Camino Real, are renting rooms for $60 to $70 a night, he said.

FORAT SAID THE earthquakes affected only 2 percent of hotel capacity in Mexico. "Ninety-eight percent of the country is working," he said.

"Things really are almost back to normal, and it is a very good vacation bargain to come here.

Quaint hotel near Mexico's historic sites

By MARK I. PINSKY Los Angeles Times-Washington Post News Service

"I sat down on a stone and looked down - at trees, and nothing but trees, going on and on out of sight. It seemed to me that this wasn't a country to live in at all with the heat and the desolation; it was a country to die in and leave only ruins behind."

- Graham Greene, "Another Mexico"

CHICHEN ITZA, Mexico - If Graham Greene had stayed at the Hotel Mayaland he might have come away with a better impression of the Yucatan Peninsula, particularly because the place feels as if it sprang fully formed from the imagination of the British novelist.

According to the Mexican government tourism office, every Mexican president since Lazaro Cardenas has stayed here, as have Princess Anne, presidents of Yugoslavia and East Germany, Cabinet ministers of France and Italy, numerous movie stars and the Queen of Holland.

Yet from the outside, the four-story, ocher-colored structure on the edge of the Chichen Itza ruins looks like a crumbling, generic Third World building. It was built on land bought from Edward Herbert Thompson, the Harvard archeologist and American vice consul to Mexico who first recovered jeweled artifacts from the ruined city's Sacred Well. The hotel expanded gradually since construction began in 1922. Only inside the ornate, wrought-iron gates does the magic begin. Everything about the interior of the hotel. which opened in 1930, suggests a bygone era, or at least the set of an movie: high ceilings, tile xouc floors, heavy mahogany furniture, wooden louvered windows, inlaid door jambs and lintels.

THE DESK CLERK assures anxious visitors that there is no air conditioning because none is necessary, and he is correct. Ceiling fans, balconies and wide, open walkways between the rooms keep the temperature quite satisfactory for resting and sleeping. Neither are alarm clocks necessary; the tropical birds in the surrounding jungle wake you soon after the sun is up.

The staff of the 64-room hotel, all dressed in white, make plain in a way that is at the same time subtle and charming that they are not at all impressed with the dozen or so offseason, low-rent guests who have come to visit the Mayan ruins in the off-season.

They go about their business in an efficient manner, nonetheless, including regular off-key serenading of guests taking drinks on the main veranda at dusk, and later, from a second-floor balcony overlooking the dining room, those having their evening meal.

Dinner is served at 7:30 and men are required to wear long pants. The only jarring note, apart from those produced by the trio of musicians, is provided by a grotesque, colorful mural portraying mythic Maya figures. Christ and severed heads, which dominates the room.

APART FROM THE ambiance. the best thing about Mayaland is its proximity to the celebrated Chichen Itza ruins. The top of the Maya "observatory" is framed by the arch of the hotel's front door, and a ticket booth to the grounds is a right turn out the gate and, literally, a minute's walk away.

Five minutes more along the brown gravel path, lined by whitewashed rocks, takes you to the foot of the great pyramid Kukulcan. which the Spaniards called "the castle." The view in all directions from the top of the restored stone mound. as Greene observed elsewhere in Yucatan, is verdant jungle for unbroken miles.

Mayaland's location enables visitors to tour the extensive grounds of Chichen Itza in the morning and late afternoon - avoiding the yearround, brain-battering, midday sun and is also convenient for taking in the nighttime son et lumiere show near the great pyramid.

In the mornings, before the bus-loads of tourists arrive from Cancun and Merida, skinny young Maya boys, who will later peddle little stone deities called Chacmools, play baseball not far from the court where their ancestors played a ritualized ball game that sometimes ended in a sacrificial beheading.

Two shops sell cotton sportswear and traditional Mexican dolls; they open after lunch.

Executive found her place in oilpatch

After 37 years, Martha Elder fascinated with oil business

By SUSAN LINDSAY Business/Oil Writer

Like many people who came to the oilfield for fame and fortune, Martha Elder was no exception. When she came to Midland in 1948, she had few dollars in her pocket, and as few jobs of responsibility were open to women

But 37 years later, she has carved a nitch into the once male-dominated field and has helped pave the way toward women achieving responsible positions in the oilpatch.

"I was a disappointment to my mother at that time. I didn't finish college. I had very little money," she said. "I had heard so much about the oil business. I knew it paid well, so, I got an accounting job." The following year, she went to work for Fitting, Fitting and Jones. "When I started to work, I would get so frustrated because I did not understand the oilfield. Women didn't take an interest in those things then Johs for women were very limited." then. Jobs for women were very limited."

Men would question her capabilities, and would laugh at her, she said. "Mr. (Robert) Fitting didn't though. He would always take the time to explain things and give me responsibility." Another way the Coleman native learned the business was by necessi-ty. "The Scurry boom had started when I went to work. It was not uncommon for us to work a well producing 400 to 500 barrels of oil per day then. Mr. Fitting had to go out in the field a lot and check these wells and I would be left alone at the office. I had to run it and I had to know what to do."

For example, once she had to decide whether to make a drillstem test before a dry hole was plugged. "I decided to take the test, even if it cost a lot of money. It turned out to be the right decision," she said. Elder must have made many right decisions since that time in her 27 years with Fitting. She is now office manager for Pearson Sibert Oil Co. of Texas as well as secretary-treasurer for both Robert E. Fitting & Associates and Sharidge, Inc.

Now, she oversees all accounting for the three companies. At one time, her job involved huge ledger books and a sharp mind. Now, she said her job "is keeping up with the computers.

"The use of computers in the past four to five years has been the thing that has changed how the oil industry operates, as far as in the office anyway," she speculated. "Used to, you could take someone's word. There was no questioning who you were dealing with. Everyone used the same form and you knew the check would be there on time."

Martha Elder, office manager for Pearson Sibert Oil Co. of Texas, has worked 37 years in the oil industry and still finds it as fascinating as the day she began.

Now computers do all those things, she contends. "Not one day goes by when I don't have to figure out where some information came from or went to. If something is input in the computer wrong, you might not get your check. Computers have enabled the industry to come up with marvelous technology, but it's taken out a lot of the personalization and Ron Strong, newly appointed director of Texas Railroad Commission District 8, says he intends to continue the tradition of effeciency maintained in the Midland office. 'The Commission here has a good working relationship with the oil and gas community, and we want to continue it," said Strong.

Strong was named director of the busy office in December, replacing the late Archie Farr. Strong, who was formerly Assistant Director of District 10 in Pampa, brings ten years of Commission experience to District 8.

His main goal for the office is to function smoothly and to effectively coordinate activities between the field and Austin.

Strong holds a degree in engineer-ing from Amarillo College, and a de-gree in geology from West Texas State University in Canyon. He began his career with the Railroad Commission in 1976 as a geologist assistant in the District 10 office.

"The job is a challenge because the industry is always changing and the Commission must change with it. There is something different to do all the time so the job stays interesting."

"The Commission has faced new challenges in the areas of environmental protection, and although we have always been concerned with environmental issues, I am seeing a trend toward our taking more and more control over that area," he said.

important area to the Commission. "Texas has approximately 250,000 wells, that is 1/3 of the wells in the nation. Texas has 254 counties, of which 200 have some production. District 8 has more production than any other, with roughly 48,850 oil wells and 2,700 gas wells. That means 25 percent of the wells in Texas are in this district."

He sees the role of the District office as that of a regulatory enforcer. "We don't set policy - sometimes we interpret it, but our main job is to enforce policy that is made in Austin," he said.

Firms innovate plan to cut down trips to doctor

New York Times News Service

NEW YORK - What is the best way to keep your employees from making too many trips to the doctor? Some companies, it seems, think the answer is to give them some money. Two years ago, Quaker Oats, the Chicago food company, started to dole out cash to employees if the work force kept its medical hills be low the company's expectations. Each year, Quaker Oats sets a target figure - it was $1,658 for each salaried worker in 1984, $1,535 in 1985 for health care expenditures. If the final tab comes in below that target, then Quaker Oats distributes the surplus equally among the employees.

The health-care game When bosses HOSPITAL become doctors had found a lump on her breast and 15,000 of its employees a surgeon concluded that a biopsy was needed. Surgery was scheduled for the following Monday at 7 a.m.

Mrs. Andree's husband, George, works at the Dresser Industries plant in Muskegon, Mich. Recent changes in Dresser's health insurance plan mandated that, except in emergencies, workers must get clearance from a nurse at the Aetna Life Insurance Co. before being hospitalized. The surgeon's assistant, though, kept getting busy signals when she dialed the number. Andree says he got no answer at all.

Dr. Donald Crandall went ahead with the biopsy. As he would later say, "Her gynecologist said she needed an operation. A radiologist said she needed an operation. I said she needed an operation. To wait for a nurse on the phone who had never seen the patient to say it was O.K. was ridiculous.

The lesion proved benign. But then came the bad news. Aetna paid only 50 percent of the bill for the biopsy, not its usual 80 percent. The Andrees were stuck writing a check for $647, their penalty for failing to get company approval. "It looks to me like a one-way street, where the insurance company gets all the bene-fits," an angry Andree says. "Hooray for us if you don't get through to us in time and too bad for you, buddy."

Officials in charge of benefits at Dresser, when subsequently questioned about the case, said they were startled to hear of the incident; even though the rules were broken, they now expect to reimburse the Andrees for the $647. But they insist

In their scramble to trim their medical insurance bills, thousands of companies, from giants like General Motors to much small West Texas organizations, have instituted costcontainment plans that could be intruding on the traditional ways in which Americans tend to their illnesses. The corporations - and their insurers - contend that the intervention is weeding out plenty of unnecessary procedures and drawn-out ospitalizations

The economy is tough and insurance is getting higher. Cost-containment plans help to provide good benefits at a lower cost. The money for benefits has to come somewhere. This is a much better plan that eliminating benefits all to together or not giving employees a raise," said Thurston McCutcheon, CLU, of Area Insurance in Midland.

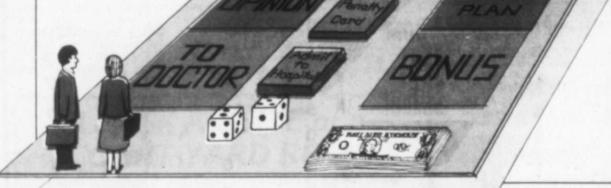

But critics, on the other hand, protest that companies are no longer simply snipping away at the fat in health care costs. They are cutting into tissue and muscle.

"I understand the reason behind the cost-containment programs, however. I feel that some companies do and could take advantage of it," said one Midland insurance consultant.

There are no definitive figures, but corporate meddling in employee health care is clearly becoming commonplace. Many companies are not just paying for second and third

Corporations breed new review industry

New York Times News Service

NEW YORK - The corporate determination to keep employees away from costly hospital care has even spawned an odd little industry. Some 150 medical review organizations - companies with names such as Intracorp, Medview, Cost Care, Health Care Compare, Quickadmit, Beech Street and Health Risk Management have sprung up in the last few years to handle for corporations and insurers the administrative aspects of things like pre-admission certification for hospitalization and second surgical opinion programs. Though doctors complain that their quality is decidedly uneven for example, some let part-time college students rather than nurses initially deal with medical issues they all work pretty much alike.

Intracorp, a subsidiary of the Cigna Corp., an insurance company, is one of the biggest in the field, handling 2.5 million covered workers at 2,100 companies. It has some 200 nurses stationed at its main offices in Blue Bell, Pa., and Anaheim, Calif., and sprinkled among 135 local offices. When a doctor wants to hospitalize a worker whose health plan is administered by Intracorp, he or someone from his office calls a toll-free number. A nurse answers the phone (assuming it isn't busy, a common critique doctors have of these types of firms), and eventually asks a battery of questions about the procedure. The nurse then pages through guidelines having to do with appropriate medical care and another tome that reports on average hospital stays for various ailments.

If everything seems in line, the nurse can give the go ahead. She cannot say no. If things don't square, she calls one of the 2,000 doctors who have a consulting arrangement with Intracorp. That doctor calls the treating physician, and if he concurs with the planned treatment, it goes ahead. If he disagrees, then a third doctor from Intracorp's stable casts the deciding vote.

INTRACORP SAYS that a hospitalization request is

Please see INDUSTRY, Page 3G

In 1984, an average dividend of $232 was parceled out to each salaried worker. In 1983, the average bonus was $128. The company says that changes in its plan have "flushed out a lot of unnecessary care" and cut hospital use between 1982 and 1984 by 22 percent and hospital days by 30 percent. "So this is sort of a reward for staying healthy," says a Quaker Oats spokesman.

Some doctors, however, see it more as a reward for suffering. Might not employees, these doctors suggest, forgo, or at least postpone, having an ailment looked at so that they could pocket that bonus?

"We don't feel any rebates are appropriate," says Dr. James Todd, the AMA's deputy senior executive vice president. "Those kind of incentives could keep an employee from get-ting needed care."

Quaker Oats pooh-poohs such talk. "I don't think that's the case," says Dennis Corry, Quaker Oats's benefits manager. "I just think most people in this country are pretty scared of being sick and maybe dying and they're not going to put off going to the doctor

John Paul Pitts' 'speculations' for 1986

I'm a few weeks behind most of the self-appointed prophets, seers, humor colunnists, witch doctors and economists who have already made their predictions for 1986, but there is still a lot of year in front of us so here goes. Not predictions ---- speculations for 1986.

NIXON RETURNS? --- Last year, if you remember, I predicted that Reagan would move to bring Richard Nixon back into the fold in 1985. That did not happen, but it is still something that should be done, both for the sake of Nixon and the nation. His kind of expertise is too valuable for a nation to cast out. Too, a lifetime of exile for telling a lie is too harsh a punishment. I still think Reagan will find a spot for Nixon as an emissary or adviser - maybe this year.

MIDDLE EAST WAR? - The

testhis could also be the year for the inevitable, major Middle East confrontation that the world has been moving toward for the past decade. Each year since 1973 the likelihood of a major world war in that region has increased and continues to increase, without much hope of avoiding it, given the deep-seated hostilities that can be appeased only by wars of extinction.

proliferation of terrorism indica-

BETTER OIL PRICES? --- I have heard it over and over: "Pray for war in the Middle East." Those who espouse such views are either fools or have no sons. A limited confrontation in the Middle East, in which Arabs kill Arabs or Persians in great numbers, and oil supplies are disrupted, is openly desired by many in the oil industry as a solution for low oil prices.

But limited wars have proven ineffective in pushing up oil prices. It will obviously take something bigger than an Iraq-Iran conflict to improve oil prices and that "something bigger" may be more than we bargained for. We were told that when Iraq began to bomb tankers at Karg Island the price of oil would jump. It has not. Obviously, a bigger, bloodier war, involving Saudi Arabia will be needed to restrict oil supplies and increase prices. But any war in which the vast oil reserves of Saudi Arabia are put at risk, will most likely involve the U.S., Israel, the entire Arab League and possibly Russia. The U.S. armed forces don't persist in war exercises in the hot, windy, sandy California desert just for their health. In the event of an all-out Middle East war, involving U.S. forces, rest assured that oil prices could quickly become the least of our CAPITALIST CHINA? --- China's Premier Deng Xiaoping made the cover of Time magazine as the Man of the Year. Maybe rightly so; he is leading China headlong into capitalism.

Make no mistake about it, China is still communist. It still thinks, looks and performs in the typical bungling, ineffecient communist fashion, but things are changing: Thanks to Xiaoping, the Chinese are no longer nibbling at capitalism but consuming it by larger and larger bites, and what they taste they like. Programs that work and products that improve life are having a profound impact on China.

This could be the year trade and business with China really expands. If it does, Texas and the oil industry in particular stand to be one of the main beneficiaries.

A NEW TEXACO? ---- In whatever fashion it survives the $11.1 billion judgement handed down against it, Texaco should emerge from its legal problems as a company anxious to find a new image. The corporation's poor image within and without the oil industry, just may have been a prime factor in its legal dilemma

For all its success in the bottomline category, Texaco remains probably the most unliked company in the oil business. The reasons for the illfeelings are too numerous to list. They involve the sharing of electric logs, hard deals, tight holes, and a logs, hard deals, tight holes, and a generally uncooperative attitude. Even though many oilmen think Texaco got a grossly raw deal in the Pennzoil judgement, they are never-theless chuckling inside because it was Texaco. Others are even less sympathetic: "Texaco finally got what it had coming." is the feeling of some who view Texaco as the J.R. of oil companies.

I'm inclined to think that this extremely bad image and bad feelings somehow found its way into the courtroom in Houston and inflated the size of the judgement. After all who would not welcome the oppor-tunity to make nasty J.R. Ewing squirm in a courtroom.

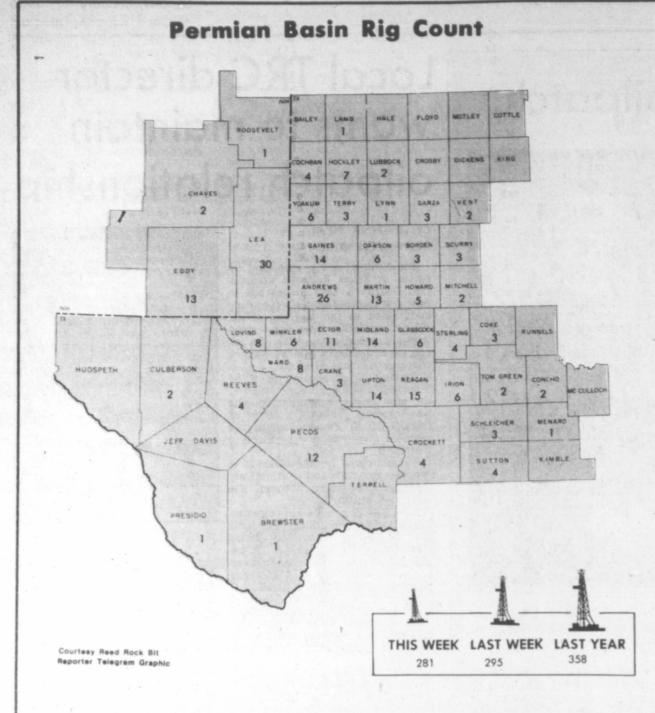

If Texaco does not come out of this ordeal with a determination to be a more plesant and cooperative corpo-ration, the stockholders might do well to do some serious housecleaning. Persisting in acting like Texaco. has never gotten Texaco anything but a bad name, bad press and now a bad rap.

Permian Basin rig count takes big drop

The rig count in the Basin dropped by a total of 14 rigs this week, the biggest decline seen in several months.

Midland County managed to add one to its total, for a tally of 14 for the week, while the Ector County total fell four. The largest decrease was seen in Lea County, losing seven to post a 30 rig total. Brewster and Lamb counties each saw new production for the first time in several months.

In the U.S. the rig count recovered slightly from last week's big loss, up 17. Texas posted the largest loss in the nation, down 40 to 592. Louisiana also posted a loss, down from 279 to 261. New Mexico lost four, down to 72, while Oklahomas gained 11 for 276.

The Permian Basin rig count stands at 281 for the week. A year ago that count was at 358. The U.S. recorded a total of 1,915 rigs at work, which compares to 2,556 for the same week last year.

Texas oil documentary vies for Oscar nomination

DALLAS (AP) - With eyewitness accounts of major oil discoveries, a Dallas couple has produced an award-winning film about Texas oil that is eligible for an Oscar nomination.

The idea for the film was planted when Robert Tranchin took his Boston-bred wife, Laurie, on a tour of his native state and they visited the East Texas Oil Museum.

Tranchin said he suddenly realized how little he knew of the force that transformed the Texas young H.L. Hunt, who made $100 million on the well.

Its contents were saturated with oil and looked like brown sugar, "the most beautiful sight we had ever seen." Moncrief recalled.

Phillips reduces debt by $1.8 million in 1985

BARTLESVILLE, OK, (SWN) -Phillips Petroleum Company said it reduced its debt by $1.8 billion in 1985 through a combination of asset sales and vigorous cost-reduction efforts.

C.J. Silas, chairman and chief executive officer, said Phillips sold, contracted for sale or agreed in principle to sell approximately $1.4 billion worth of assets during 1985. He said negotiations for the sale of additional assets were under way and that Phillips should comfortably reach its target of approximately $2 billion in asset sales by mid-1986. "We're very pleased with the extraordinary efforts our people have made to sharply reduce our debt while still maintaining our key busi-ness strengths," Silas said. "We're right on track to bring our debt down by another billion dollars or more in 1986."

Phillips assumed additional debt in March of 1985 through a capital restructuring program that returned $4.5 billion in equity to company shareholders. Since then, Phillips total debt has been reduced from $8.6 billion to approximately $6.8 billion at year-end 1985

Silas said that in addition to the proceeds from asset sales, the company's cost reductions and selective trimming of capital expenditures also provided funds for debt reduction.

We have been able to rebuild our cash operating account which should give us additional financial flexibility as we start out 1986," Silas said.

Phillips has said it expects to reduce total debt to $5.5 billion-$6 billion by year-end 1986.

Silas said Phillips most recent asset sales involved oil and gas properties in West Texas and Colorado. Terms of the sales were not disclosed.

In December Phillips announced the sale of its Pier 66 hotel and marina complex in Fort Lauderdale, Fla. and the sale of the company's majority interest in Aero Oil Company, a subsidiary supplying petroleum products in parts of New York and Pennsylvania.

China oil well tested by Phillips

BARTLESVILLE (SWN) Phillips Petroleum International Corp. Asia and Pecten Orient Co. have announced completion of testing of a well offshore The People's Republic of China. The Xijiang 24-1-1X, located in 330 feet of water approximately 80 miles southeast of Hong Kong in the South China Sea, tested oil from four separate zones below 8,000 feet at rates of 1860, 4000, 1710 and 4900 barrels per day. Gravity of the oil ranged from 35.0 to 40.5 degrees API with high wax content. This well is located approximately 4.5 miles southeast of the previously announced Xijiang 24-3-1AX discovery. The well was drilled in contract area 15/11, which Phillips and Pecten acquired in January 1984. Phil-lips Petroleum International Corporation Asia, a subsidiary of Phillips Petroleum Company, is the operator of the block and has a 50 percent interest. Pecten Orient Company, a subsidiary of Shell Oil Company, also has a 50 percent interest.

Business Club schedules social gathering

The Uptown Chapter of the Business & Professional Women's Club is hosting a Networking Hour on Tuesday, Jan. 14, beginning at 5:30 p.m. in the First City National Bank Employee Lounge, located on the second floor of Two First City Center.

This hour of networking is designed to give working women the opportunity to meet other business and professional women and exchange thoughts and ideas of the challenges and problems which face women today. All working women in the community are invited to attend.

For more information, contact Sarah Haefling at 685-5248.

The resulting documentary, "Wildcatter: A Story of Texas Oil," has won the CINE Golden Eagle Award, making the film eligible for an Academy of Arts & Sciences nomination for an Oscar.

Produced by the Tranchins' October Productions Inc., the film weaves both eyewitness accounts and historic still photographs to capture the excitement of the East Texas oilfield discovery.

The story begins with Columbus Marion "Dad" Joiner, a 70-year-old Depression-era promoter who has just lost his last dime drilling a dry hole and is contemplating suicide on the Galveston seawall.

While sleeping on the seawall, he dreams he makes a major oil discovery in Rusk County in East Texas.

He meets up with Albert "Doc" Lloyd, a self-taught geologist who prepares a study of East Texas. The two men join forces and strike it rich on their third well, the Daisy Bradford No. 3.

A photo of the well shows Joiner and Lloyd standing with a very being made. "We wanted to honor guys like Monty Moncrief, the oldtimers, the entrepreneurs, the people with vision, the dreamers. That's something that we liked very much." But he said the couple also wanted to show the bad that came from the discoveries, the greed that resulted from the "kids in a candy store."

The film also takes a look at the modern day wildcatter, showing the steps of syndication and exploration of a well drilled during the filming.

The Tranchins began work on their film in 1982 with the blessing of the Dallas Historical Society, which gave them non-profit status.

Funded by 60 backers, the Meadows Foundation and the Texas Committee for the Humanitities, the film was finished just in time to become a Sesquicentennial project.

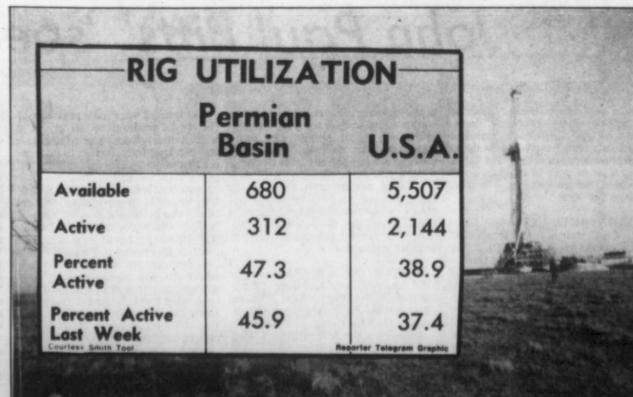

The film has been shown on KERA-TV in Dallas and has showings scheduled in cities throughout Texas this year.

turned down about 3 percent of the time. When it comes to the hospital days requested, however, Intracorp authorizes about 17 percent fewer days than asked for. A patient is free to ignore Intracorp's ruling and get treatment anyway, but if he does, his company insurance coverage will often be sharply reduced. Some companies, in fact, cut off coverage altogether if a worker stays in the hospital past the certified number of days.

Intracorp and its competitors also administer second surgical opinion programs. Some of those programs are quite stringent. In the plan that the Prudential Insurance Co. has for its own employees, for example, if the second opinion is contrary, then a third tie-breaking opinion is sought. If a patient decides to have the surgery even after two of the three opinions oppose it, then the coverage is reduced to 80 percent of charges rather than 100 percent.

Even once a patient is resting in a hospital bed, Intracorp stays on top of matters. It will audit hospital bills. And it will have nurses do follow-up phone checks to see if everything is proceeding properly. Less than 5 percent of the time, Intracorp says it finds people staying longer than they should or doctors taking too long to write the discharge orders.

Many doctors, long unaccustomed to having interlopers peeking over their shoulders, are reacting with confusion and anger to the new health care plans. Donald Crandall, who practices with eight other surgeons in Muskegon, Mich., finds himself dealing with a bewildering array of new health care rules. He is a most unhappy doctor.

'No two plans are identical," he says. "So a surgeon in a busy practice may have 25 or 30 or 50 different programs. The patient frequently doesn't know the details of his plan. The other problem is that there usually is a toll-free number to call. We find that those numbers are inadequately staffed and you can't get through. You have to call two, four, five, ten times to get a decision. The effect on our office is we have had to add a full-time assistant to do nothing but handle these calls. And she's in tears half the time.

LIKE MANY OTHER doctors, Crandall believes that the short-term savings that may derive from some of these plans will be more than surpassed by long-term costs. He can't prove it. But he says, "Surgeons have anecdotal evidence that delayed surgery causes higher costs in the long run. Every doctor can give you five or ten cases.

"I know of a number of cases of people with gall bladder problems, where their insurers didn't think they should have the gall bladder removed," he added. "So they continued to take medication for indigestion and gas and kept going to doctors until they passed a stone and went in for emergency care.

Doctors also castigate companies for failing to take into account the inconveniences and mental distress that the new requirements can inflict. If you need to get a second, and perhaps third, surgical opinion in New York City, about all you may have to do is walk a block away to the next surgeon's office. But there is only one surgeon in Marshall, Mich. To get another opinion, you need to drive 30 miles to Sedalia or else travel around 50 miles to Columbia.

"This is hard on elderly people, and for many people it means they lose a day's work," says Dr. K. Thomas Papreck, a family doctor in Marshall. "The bottom line is people need to find a doctor they trust and listen to him. Unfortunately, these big companies don't know that.'

"The concern I have is the inflexibility," says Dr. Clarence Avery, a general surgeon who practices in San Leandro, Calif. "These new systems have a tendency to fit a patient into a rigid box. But sometimes a patient won't fit into that box.

Thus far, the squabbling has largely pitted doctors against companies. But lawyer may soon enter the fray. Medical review companies say they have already been threatened with lawsuits, but no court rulings of significance appear to have come down — yet. Corporations and insurers are quick to point out that they never tell an employee not to have a hysterectomy or forbid anyone from entering the hospital to see if that lesion is cancerous. All they do is, at times, decline to pick up the full bill for a procedure they deem unnecessary. The patient, they insist, can do as he pleases.

"Perhaps paying 80 percent instead of 100 percent of your bill is an incentive not to be treated," says William Watson, a vice president and associate actuary at the Prudential Insurance Co. "But the choice is up to you."

PERHAPS. LAWYERS who are starting to look into this area believe that financial stinginess alone can be cause for a liability action. Their reasoning is that refusal to pay bills, if the bills are sizable enough that the employee could not possibly afford them, is the equivalent of forbidding the care. "It clearly places us in a potentially liable position," acknowledges Robert Mackey, Medview's president.

"What I think is going to happen," says Dr. Weinberg, "is that the plaintiff lawyers are going to realize there's a gold mine out there and start suing the insurance companies. That will open a Pandora's box. And, frankly, that's what I think they should do.'

It is that small percentage handles much of the offices' form work. " I have asked for another PC The way it generally works is that and, hopefully, when that is added. ill workers who are likely to require we can become even more efficient."

> Strong has spent much of his first six weeks in Midland trying to get acquainted with the staff and the area. "This is a big area and it is going to take me a little time to get familiar with all of it, but I am trying to spend time out in the field. That allows me to get to know not only the area, but also to spend time with my field workers. That's important to me.

Another one of Strong's future plans involves the visiting of other District offices. "There are lots of perators who operate in several districts. It is my goal that there would be a uniformity and consistency within the different districts, realizing that each area does have its specific problems that need to be dealt with," he continued.

medical opinions; they are influencing which opinion the patient accepts. They are not just exhorting doctors and hospitals to keep care to an absolute minimum — they are refusing to fully pay for days and procedures they feel are unwarranted, even if the patient's doctor insists that the treatment is necessary. And workers who file frequent insurance claims for reimbursement of medical bills are being approached by "case managers" who attempt to map out a less costly plan of care.

Some corporations, such as Ciba-Geigy, the pharmaceutical and chemical company, will at times pay doctors more for procedures done outside a hospital. A few companies, like Lockheed, require new employees to sign up with health maintenance organizations rather than more-costly fee-for-service plans. # Montgomery Ward catalog store to close

From Staff Reports

Midland's Montgomery Ward catalog store will close its store on Feb. 12, according to J. Winder, district manager, the result of plans to discontinue the store's unprofitable catalog division. The Midland store opened in 1937 on the location where the George Mahon Federal Building now stands, and moved to its present location at 2513 W. Ohio in 1965.

Montgomery Ward, a subsidiary of Mobil Corp. since 1976, announced at the same time that it would close its Fort Worth catalog distribution center sometime in April, laying off about 600 employees

And corporations and their insurers argue that "managed care' programs are essential. "I think that they're all necessary and are critical to move medical care to a system of accountability," says Dr. Charles Arnold, the medical director for medical relations at Metropolitan Life. "From all sources, it is pretty clear that there is far more use of hospitals and surgery than is necessary." But it is far from clear just how much money is really saved as a result of the new intrusion by corporate management into employee medical care. The Employee Benefit Research Institute estimates that employers paid more than $87 billion for group health insurance in 1984, up from $82 billion in 1983 and about $70 billion in 1982. The figures indicate that the growth of health care costs is certainly slowing down, but a part of the slowdown is a result of earlier cost-cutting measures.

Gov. Mark White, Coke work on state celebration

HOUSTON (SWN) - Governor Mark White demonstrated his support of corporate participation in the state's sesquicentennial celebration by addressing sales representatives of Houston-based Coca-Cola Foods at the Driskill Hotel. Coca-Cola Foods announced its plans to support the sesquicentennial through sales and promotional activities of Maryland Club Coffee, the largest coffee brand manufactured in Texas.

"I am delighted with the corporate support that you are providing," said Governor White. "It is through support like this that has made our state great in the past and will continue to be the backbone of Texas' proud heritage.'

Maryland Club Coffee was first produced by Houstonian Hershel Duncan in 1918. A year-long promotional campaign has been developed to promote the Texas Sesquicentennial while generating awareness of the Maryland Club brand as a Texasbased, Texas-manufactured product. The initial promotion includes a cosponsorship of the Goddess of Liberty renovation project. Through coupons offered in ads for Maryland Club Coffee, the company will donate 10 cents for every can of coffee that consumers redeem to be used in the restoration effort. An estimated $100,000 will be generated for the renovation project.

In addition, a "Flavor of Texas" cookbook will be developed and distributed to consumers across the state that aims at providing historical excerpts and unique Texas recipes. During the latter part of the year, a promotion geared at enchancing the state's beautification efforts will be conducted.

Echoing the sentiments of many physicians, the American Medical Association has denounced plans that insist on second opinions, hefty deductibles that might inhibit someone from seeking care and any other impediments that make it more

> 'Increasing barriers are being placed between the patient and the medical care system," complains Dr. James Todd, the AMA's deputy se-nior executive vice president. with such a restriction.

IBM put into effect a number of changes in its medical plan in January 1985, including a variable deductible. Workers earning $50,000 or less have a $150 deductible. Higherpaid employees bear a deductible pegged at three-quarters of 1 percent of their salary. Another IBM feature, designed to have employees think twice before entering the hospital, is that workers must pay 40 percent of the first day's room charge during a hospital stay.

Ciba-Geigy instituted in 1983 an incentive to have surgery done outside the hospital. If a surgical procedure is performed at a hospital, the company will pay "reasonable and customary charges," a phrase that often means 80 to 90 percent of the total bill. If the surgery occurs outside the hospital, the company will pay whatever the surgeon charges.

One of the newest techniques for paring truly high health care costs is what is known as case management. What happens here is that employees with serious illnesses - cancer, stroke, heart disease - are offered the help of consultants to figure out ways to winnow down costs.

Dr. Jonathan Fielding, the head of U.S. Corporate Health Management, a health plan administrator that performs case management for clients, found at one corporation that betake a long time. GM tells about a worker's baby born with brain damage and club feet. The company actually heard about it by reading newspaper reports. The baby had been hospitalized for nearly a year. A case manager stepped in and arranged for the baby to be moved home, where visiting nurses care for it. "It's really playing a coordinating

For now, case management programs are strictly voluntary. Some doctors, though, fear that they will eventually lead to penalties if someone does not agree to cooperate, and will possibly push patients into environments that they dread, such as hospices and nursing homes.

Even tougher health care pro-grams probably lie ahead. Dr. Arnold Milstein, the head of National Medical Audit, reviews the medical reviewers, and his sense is that most outfits are far too soft and are going to be compelled to buckle down. "Some of them go through the motion of review but they never say no to anything," he says. "We have au-dited about 30 different ones and 95 percent of the performance shortfalls we identify are in the category of unjustifiably loose standards. We find very few instances of draconian measures

Oddly, he says that his clients the companies that hire the review outfits - have virtually no interest in finding out how hard it is for doctors to get requisite approval. His sense, though, is that many of the companies have inadequately

New trend indicates older worker answering 'help wanted' signs

New York Times News Service

NEW YORK - As the year ended, a relatively new phenomenon ap-peared in the labor area: help wanted signs that apparently are not drawing the young people who usu-ally take these low-level jobs. This could mean that the person serving a hamburger in a fast-food restaurant or wrapping a book in a bookstore will be older in the future, upsetting a tradition.

The Conference Board, a business research organization, recently announced that its help wanted adver-tising index for November had "reached the highest point in 1985." At 144, the index, which measures the volume of classified ads in 51 major newspapers across the country, rose four points from October and is seven points ahead of the 1984 month. The board called it "a truer indicator of the degree of improvement in labor market activity" than the Government's unemployment figure of 7 percent for November.

'This momentum, although moderate, should carry into the first few months of the new year," the board said, which means a good outlook for jobs for at least part of 1986.

Help wanted signs have been appearing in the windows of many establishments - bookstores, florists, hardware stores, coffee shops, supermarkets, and elsewhere - a basic indication that jobs are available and not being readily filled. Many such jobs, it is true, pay the minimum wage or not much higher, but in the young people. Recently, Herbert Bienstock, di-rector of the City University of New York Center for Labor and Urban Programs, Research and Analysis, drew attention to a fast-developing demographic trend. In about five years or so, the number of young people entering the labor force will plunge from the average of about 3 million entrants yearly of the late 1970s to about 1.3 million a year. The reason is that the baby-boom generation has been ensconced in the job market for some years, and a lower birth rate has resulted in a declining number of young people. This indicates that a large number of lower-paying jobs will be filled not so much by young workers, who demand jobs with bright futures, but by older workers, especially women, who want or need to return to work.

Many of these older workers might be those 65 years old and over who require extra money to supplement Social Security payments, small pensions or savings. Their ranks might include some of the thousands of older persons who have lost their jobs through corporate cutbacks or mergers. Others who retired early from jobs in lower middle management may have become disenchanted with too much free time and may have become worried about the inroads of inflation, even though the pace of the rise in the Consumer Price Index is relatively slow at present.

In many cases, the older job-seekpast they have tended to be filled by ers might be overqualified for the low-paying jobs offered in the store window signs, but many such jobs offer flexible hours and work-sharing, other trends that are currently

For example, a recent McDonald's advertisement in Family Circle magazine, aimed at homemakers, stressed flexible hours. In a picture among a group of smiling employees appearing in the ad there was a white-haired woman and several other middle-aged women. This is obviously quite a change from the usual idea of youthful workers in fast-food chains. The Travelers Insurance Companies some years ago started a program to bring back its retirees for part-time jobs, instead of relying on temporary help from agencies, and a small number of other companies do the same.

Bienstock calls the group of older workers who have either retired or dropped out of the job market in recent years "the lost battalion," a force that has drawn the interest of company managements seeking to fill low-level jobs. The numbers of these older workers that are still healthy enough to work are un-known, according to Bienstock, because they do not appear in the unemployment figures. Their impact will likely be that more and more sales personnel at fast-food chains, small neighborhood stores and other small businesses will be older, along with receptionists, medical assistants in doctors' offices, temporary office workers and

New York Times News Service

NEW YORK - After a humbling year, the nation's leading makers of home computers said Monday that they posted solid sales during the Christmas season. But the top sellers, early reports indicate, were older, established models, rather than flashy new computers rushed to market in an effort to pump up the troubled industry

In separate interviews, top officials of Commodore International Ltd. and Apple Computer Inc. said they thought that holiday sales were about even with last year's levels somewhat better than many analysts had predicted, but a huge letdown for an industry that just two years ago saw limitless growth ahead.

The industry's Christmas performance is being watched particularly carefully this year as manufacturers struggle to decide whether the home market can be revived. The Interna-Machine ally dropped out of the business last spring, discontinuing manufacture of its much-criticized PCjr and dropping its price dramatically in an effort to sell off a huge inventory. Other home computer makers, Apple and Commodore included, have increasingly focused on far more expensive, powerful machines intended for small-business users and professionals.

like last year, we sold just about everything we built," he said, referring to the huge inventories of Apple IIe's and IIc's left on retailers' shelves after Christmas 1984.

Apple apparently benefited both from sharp improvements in the eight-year old Apple II line and from the misfortunes of IBM, which Sculley was blaming a year ago for squashing Apple's sales with a $700 promotional price for the PCjr. This year, the PCjr was sold for about the same figure, but analysts say consumers were scared off by IBM's decision to stop making the machine, although the company promised to keep servicing it for five years.

Also helping Apple was a rocky start for Commodore's new Amiga computer, a new $1,300 model whose stunning graphics were widely expected to challenge Apple's more expensive Macintosh computer. But Monday, Thomas J. Rattigan, Commodore's president and chief operat-market research firm that conducts a monthly poll of computer retailers.

What crippled Amiga sales, company officials concede, was the lack of available software. While Commodore officials promised about 50 software titles, only about two dozen made it to market. "It's a legitimate criticism," Rattigan said, although he promised a rash of software introductions early this year.

Nonetheless, Rattigan stuck to the company's predictions that Commodore would turn a modest profit in the quarter ended Dec. 31, after losing more than $175 million in the previous three periods. "Believe it or not, we will beat last year's volume figures," he said, adding that the company sold more than a million computers in the quarter worldwide.

Most of them, however, were sales of the aging Commodore 64, whose price has been slashed repeatedly, and the new Commodore 128, a more powerful version of the 64 that can run all of the older computer's software. Commodore officials said they were surprised to find that more than half of the buyers of the Commodore 128 were new customers, not Commodore 64 owners in search of more computer capability

Survey shows rise in pessimism among Texas' major businesses

AUSTIN (AP) - Pessimism is up and optimism down among the state's businesses, but a slim majority still believes Texas business conditions will improve over the next six months, according to a new survey.

That was a key finding of the state comptroller's latest Survey of Business Expectations, a barometer of corporate beliefs about the Texas economy's future.

The autumn survey of 204 major business taxpayers, conducted in August and released Thursday, saw the overall Index of Future Business Conditions drop to 51.8, 3.8 points below the summer survey

The survey said that drop was based on current economic conditions. More than half of survey respondents said business was worse than a year ago, while less than 20 percent said conditions are better than last year.

The index has fallen from a high of 65.2 in early 1984. But comptroller's officials said a value greater than 50 still reflects positive expectations.

Increased pessimism ... is based on uncertainty about the short-term economic climate of the state," the survey said

"Only a third of the respondents expect the Texas economy to outperform the U.S. economy over the next six months. The largest number of respondents said the Texas economy will perform on the same level as the U.S. economy," the survey added.

Retailers - surveyed before the Christmas shopping season and now allowed to open on Sundays - were the most positive. Executives in mining and energy companies were the most pessimistic

"Leading the pessimists were the state's oil and gas and mining firms companies wary of future oil prices. Fully 90 percent of these companies said business conditions in their industry are worse than a year ago," the comptroller's report said.

With 43 percent of respondents saying the Texas economy will perform on the same level as the national economy, the survey said that reflects the state's increased economic diversity

"The state's important oil and gas industry, hobbled by falling oil prices and unable to keep pace with more rapidly growing industries such as construction, services and retail trade - is playing a smaller economic role in Texas," the report said.

"This time, for once, I think we called the shots right for Christmas," said John Sculley, Apple's president and chief executive officer, in an interview in New York Monday. "Un-ing officer, conceded that the company came in "at the low end" of projections and that it would sell between 50,000 and 100,000 units of the new machine by year's end.

"From the best we can see, they would have been lucky to get rid of 35,000," said Richard Matlack, president of Infocorp, a Cupertino, Calif.,

RIO DE JANEIRO, Brazil - Brazil's coffee crop has been reduced at least 43 percent by severe drought in growing areas, according to an official crop forecast, and the retail price of coffee is expected to rise sharply both in Brazil and in the United States

Pattie Knighton

The official estimate of 16.7 million bags (of 132 pounds each) was made public Monday as the Brazilian Coffee Institute, a state agency that regulates coffee trading, set a minimum export price of $2.80 a pound for this month and next.

The new minimum is virtually double the price that had been in effect. The Brazilian minimum closely parallels coffee prices in New York and other commodity exchanges, where prices have been soaring The prospect for U.S. coffee consumers is for a substantial rise in retail prices in the months ahead. Plains, N.Y., raised the wholesale price of its Maxwell House brand by 75 cents a pound since December. New York-based Chock Full O'Nuts said it has raised the wholesale price of its coffee by $1.25 a pound during the last six weeks.

The price of coffee on the New York Coffee, Sugar and Cocoa Exchange rose by more than 11 cents a pound on Tuesday to $2.7345 a pound. Bill O'Neill, director of research at Rudolf Wolff Futures in New York, said he expected prices to go over $3 and possibly as high as $3.50 a pound. "There is going to be a significant increase in the retail prices very shortly," said Howard Leitner, chief financial officer of Chock Full O'-Nuts. He would not to say how higher prices would affect his company. Brazil's next official estimate of the coffee crop is due in February,

Coffee plants flower near the end of January and produce green coffee buds, which are harvested during May, June and July ust as Consumers should be prepared for a repeat of that experience, O'Neill said. Analysts said that although current coffee stocks might be adequate to avoid a shortage, supplies are low within South America, where the better-quality coffee is produced.

"We are going to see reduced availability of quality as well as quantity," said O'Neill.

Houston-based exercise chain pioneers no-frills exercise

$4 million business began in garage

HOUSTON (AP) — Working at sev-eral health clubs convinced Sherri Frank Adair to jump out on her own and open a no-frills exercise studio in her garage.

A friend co-signed a $6,000 loan and another gave her a discount on rent for her to open a 900-squarefoot studio, allowing Mrs. Adair to move her classes out of her garage after the first three months.

That was five years ago. The $6,000 investment has turned Waist Basket Inc. into a $4 million-a-year business with 35 clubs.

Mrs. Adair says she opened her first Waist Basket studio after she realized that many health club members who come to exercise classes never use other equipment like saunas, pools, and weight machines.

"A lot of people — women espe-cially — came in, did exercise class and that's it," she says.

The Waist Basket concept is pure exercise

"I thought you could have a place that did not have all these amenities but provided a great workout in a minimal amount of time and people could join without having to sign a long-term contract. That's how it all started," she says.

Basket studio opened in Houston's Spring Branch area, Mrs. Adair established a second Houston location. By the end of 1982, the studios had multiplied to 20.

Now there are 28 studios in Houston, Austin, College Station, San Antonio, Lubbock, Denver, New Orleans and Sioux Falls, S.D., all run from the firm's headquarters in southwest Houston.

Mrs. Adair says her exercise-only studios also differ from others because they don't try to pressure people into signing long-term contracts. She says she saw too many displeased members who signed the longer contracts at the health clubs where she used to work.

'Our membership program is structured month-to-month," she says. Rates average $40.

"People need a convenient workout. They're not going to drive more than five minutes and rather than bring all their shampoo and clothes, they work out, put on a coverup and drive home," she says, explaining why only a few Waist Basket studios provide showers for members. All 400 instructors are trained on new exercise routines and about t

Eight months after the first Waist cardiopulmonary resuscitation, physiology and the prevention of sports injuries. The instructors also must meet a weight requirement for their height.

Members can choose from introductory, intermediate, advanced and super workout classes. Pregnant women are offered a program of their own.

Beside administering her staff, Mrs. Adair teaches an aerobics class daily at different studios throughout Houston. Her students have included members of the of the Houston Oilers and Houston Gamblers football teams and the rock group ZZ Top.

Some Oilers attend classes religiously during the off-season, she says. Wide receiver Tim Smith and guard John Schuhmaker even teamed together and bought a franchise studio.

Although most of the members are women, Mrs. Adair says men do participate. Eight instructors are male. Mrs. Adair says only 20 percent of the population exercises so there's still a large market to attract. "The continued awareness of exercising will continue to be," she says. "That's why we hope to open 100 more studios in 1986."

Sherri Frank Adair leads an exercise class at one of her Waist Basket Studios in Houston. She now has 28 studios in Houston, and others throughout the country.

Radio stations suddenly selling like Cabbage Patch dolls

Los Angeles Times — Washington Post News Service

At first blush, Orvon Gene Autry's office looks more like the showroom expenses, he observes dryly, can of a secondhand spurs-and-lariat em- mean fat profits for a station owner. porium than the headquarters of a $150 million radio empire.

Strewn with cowpuncher paintings, a couple of gaudy silver saddles and even a dour-looking wooden Indian, Autry's surroundings reveal little of the kind of resources that have made the owner of the California Angels baseball team one of the major players in the high-stakes radio game of 1985.

"You can't always tell with a radio station, whether it's going to make a profit or not, just by looking at it," Autry mused recently. Usually, Autry has been able to tell. He owns half a dozen radio stations, and they all make money

Lately, radio stations - particularly FM stations - have been selling the way Cabbage Patch dolls do the baseball team. day before Christmas. The sudden glamour of radio as an investment opportunity has been something of a puzzle to some, but not to Autry.

Unlike television stations - with their high-tech sound stages and backlots that would rival MGM during its heyday - most radio stations berry sauce and stuffing and nobody are headquartered in studios that would know the difference. More are as bland as a boiler room. They than once, Autry scorned the chance

But low-rent appearances can be very deceiving, drawls the 77-yearold Autry, casting a knowing glance at the wooden Indian seated to his right. Low rent, low wages and low

AUTRY BOUGHT HIMSELF a gold mine 33 years ago, for instance, when he picked up his first big AM radio bargain. KMPC, the 50,000-watt Los Angeles powerhouse that Autry and his partner bought in 1952 for $800,000, is worth at least 50 times that today. It took a lot of work: The studios are now state of the art and everyone from the deejays to the ad salesmen is now well paid. Over the years, the station's consistent positive cash flow paid for such Autry investment triumphs as the 1964 $12 million purchase of a Los Angeles television station (which he sold three years ago for $245 million) and the creation in 1960 of Autry's California Angels "You couldn't miss if you just stuck with it," he said. "AM radio went everywhere with you.

But America's original singing cowboy also thought he knew a turkey when he saw it. In the early '50s, FM radio could be served with cranare often operated by disheveled to own an FM radio station for a few deejays and underpaid executives. thousand dollars.

In 1949, for example, he sold a Los Angeles FM frequency for $45,000. Today that frequency is, radio station brokers estimate, worth close to $20 million

"It simply makes me sick," Autry said.

THERE WERE ONLY about 400 FM stations operating in the United States in the mid-'60s. As of this month, the Federal Communications Commission had 3,839 FM stations licensed to operate and another 700 in the process of being licensed, compared with 4,799 AMs.

In recent years, prices of radio sta-tions in general — and FM stations in particular - have skyrocketed. The bull market is explained in part by the fact there are only about 8,400 AM and FM licenses available in the United States. The competition for major-market licenses in such cities as Los Angeles and New York has always been fierce, but recently even stations in smaller markets have sold for more than $1 million.

After years of playing second fiddle to the more glamorous and lucrative medium of television, big business has finally recognized radio as the high-profit, low-overhead industry that it always has been.

'It's the only business I know where people come up to you and ask you to take their money," said Harry Spitzer, vice president and as 12 AM, 12 FM and 12 television sales director of the Southern Cali-

According to the New York-based Radio Advertising Bureau, the industry will bill $6.5 billion in advertising revenues this year — 12 percent more than last year. Television will bill more than $21 billion, but its production costs, payroll and capital expenditures are often 10 times that of radio.

LOW OVERHEAD AND net profit potential has been a radio truism for years, however. By itself, it doesn't explain the sudden explosion in station prices which, for most of the 1960s and '70s, were undervalued, according to analysts and industry veterans like Autry.

Tve been following this industry for 20 years, and the way it's accelerated the last year or two seems slightly reminiscent of California real estate," said Fred Anschel, a media stock analyst with Dean Witter. "Radio has had its ups and downs, but it's basically been a good investment. I do think some people may be overpaying right now.

Experts like Anschel blame the Federal Communications Commission in part for the ballooning price of radio stations. Until now, a single company could own no more than seven AM, seven FM and seven TV stations. The commission liberalized group ownership rules in 1984, allowing a single company to own as many stations, as long as they did not own same broadcast market.

A second reason for the current radio sales frenzy stems in part from the $3.5 billion merger of the American Broadcasting Companies and Capital Cities Communications. The merger, which becomes effective Jan. 3, forced both ABC and Cap Cities to sell off several radio stations in key markets like Los Angeles, spurring the bidding wars that have driven up radio prices, according to several experts.

Two months ago, ABC and Cap Cities sold a Houston FM station for $32 million.

THE AVERAGE price of a radio station in the United States last year was $1.19 million - almost double the average paid for a station in 1979. This year, the average price is expected to nearly double again. A station's premium price is usually tied to its listener ratings, measured quarterly by Arbitron Ratings Service. In today's bull market, even low-rated stations are commanding record prices.

"Thirty percent of the radio sta-tions in the U.S. are losing money," said Blackburn and Co.'s Rowan. "That's a fact.

Nonetheless, he said, even those stations sell for two to three times their gross annual sales revenue.

"Although the age of radio acquisitions is indeed good news, it will have a profound effect on station President Ben Hoberman told a group of Oregon broadcasters last month. "What are you acquiring when you buy a radio property? Talent, staff, programming, a studio, a license to broadcast, transmitting facilities, real estate, good will. Few assets; your major resource is

The other major acquisition is debt, and new owners are going to have to find ways - not all of them good - to pay off that debt.

'Most new owners will have to cut the fat and some of the bone" in order to pay the huge selling prices they're now paying, Hoberman said. "In the next five years, you'll see radio stations run with as few people as possible.

ONE RESULT OF this debt-induced cost cutting will be desperation programming, predicts Jerry Del Colliano, editor and publisher of Inside Radio, an influential industry newsletter. He advises audiences not to fall in love with their radio stations.

The bad news is that if you get to love your station, in a couple years it won't love you," he said. "When ratings go down, you'll hear the 'New' this or the 'New' that. One lesson that radio stations will not learn is that you have to find a good format and stick with it - not for the next two years, but a generation or more.

"In all candor, the switch-around is going to hurt the stations more

that includes such construction as highways, streets and airports, waterworks and sewers, totaled $2.5 billion for the year, almost double the approximate $1.3 billion awarded in 1984. There were 1,892 contracts being awarded, up from 1,581 the previous year.

Non-residential awards, which include educational buildings, churches, hospitals, hotels, public buildings and commercial construction, brought in just under $2.8 bil1,378, was up slightly from the 1,328 signed in 1984.

The State Department of Highways and Public Transportation awarded a record $1.4 billion in engineering contracts in 1984, and officials expect to award $2 billion in contracts during 1986. Algernon Blair, Inc., Montgomery, Ala., re-ceived a $26.1 million contract for III Corps nd Fort Hood Headquarters, while M.A. Mortenson Co., Lakewood, Colo., received $17 million for a VA Medical Center in Amarillo.

ENERGY FUTURE? * Compressed Natural Gas

- Is the use as a transportation fuel a possible "energy savior," as natural gas industry spokesman have proclaimed.?
- Will CNG become the long term answer for U.S. energy and economic problems, including foreign imports and the national deficit?
- Is it the revolutionary product that can revitalize America's domestic oil and gas industry?
- Can it free America totally from foreign imports?
- Can CNG become a viable alternative for gasoline? If so, in what time frame?
- How safe is it?

- How can oil and gas producers and entrepreneurs benefit from CNG?
- What is involved and what is the cost of marketing CNG?

These and many more questions concerning this new concept in natural gas marketing will be answered at this seminar. CONCERNED MEMBERS OF THE MIDLAND OIL AND GAS COMMUNITY ARE URGED TO ATTEND THIS FREE SEMINAR.

A FREE SEMINAR ON CNG

At 1:00 p.m., on January 22, 1986 in Midland Center, Energas, the Midland Reporter-Telegram and Permian Basin Petroleum Association will present an important free seminar on the feasibility and economics of CNG as a transportation fuel and its role in America's energy future.

SEMINAR SPEAKERS

Jeff Seisler — Director Natural Gas Vehicle Technology for American Gas Association — "The Feasbility, Technology and Economics of Natural Gas as a Transportation Fuel"

Jim Wallace — Texas Railroad Commission — "Regulations Regarding the sale and distribution of Compressed Natural Gas"

Bob Capps — Director of Marketing Energas — "An Overview of Compressed Natural Gas Operations in West Texas"

ennifer O'Neill - actress, actor's manager, model, horsewoman, mother — add them all up and you have one of show business's success stories and proof that you can triumph over your mistakes.

Three years ago this woman looked death straight in the face and not only fought her way back to life, but in the process discovered who she was and changed her lifestyle to today's whirlwind of activity.

She accidentally shot herself in the abdomen - with a gun she didn't think was loaded (not hers, she's terrified of guns), then not only had to save herself but also had to face extensive media coverage.

"It takes something like this experience to make you realize how frail we mortals are and helps you to refocus your life," says Ms. O'Neill, cuddling her Shelty. dog, Heather. "I was so lucky! The bullet went through my hip without hitting my spinal cord.

"Of course I didn't know that then. All I knew was blood and terror. For someone who has always hated guns, this was more than scary. My son, Reis, then 2, was in the house. Downstairs, thank God. My daughter, Aimee, then 15, was in school. I was married at the time to John Lederer, but I was alone and no one heard the shot.

What a weird experience. You go into shock. I realized only that if I lost consciousness, I'd be dead. What I had to do was reach that telephone and call for help. I reached. I called. Later in the hospital after they'd operated for five hours for internal damage, I wakened to learn that the bullet had missed everything vital. "A terrible experience. People went ahead and said what they were going to say and I was just happy to be alive and functional. Meanwhile, I re-evaluated my life

"Because I was family-oriented, I did a lot of things not necessarily beneficial to a film career. I did not move to L.A. I would not do nude scenes. I didn't want to travel. So long as that first marriage lasted (six years), I only averaged about a film a year. But once I was free, I became disenchanted with the kind of roles available and realized that the opportunity for artistic excellence initially comes from behind the camera."

and changed it. My accident became the turning point, the beginning of intense, totally absorbing work. When I took the part in 'Bare Essence' on NBC, I still had draining tubes in my side; but I knew how important it was to show the world that I was still around, alive and a new woman."

She continues, "I sold my farm in Connecticut, moved to L.A., ended my marriage, started my management business, formed my own production company, began utilizing my own creativity in music and in horsemanship and got hooked on motherhood.

"There's not been an important romance in my life since. After a young adulthood in which I married everyone to whom I was committed - five in all - beginning with Aimee's father - Deed Lassiter - when I was 17, 1 now realize that at this time of my life business is my marriage."

Ms. O'Neill reflects, "I don't see how a marriage can work if you don't see each other every day. My parents just celebrated their 40th anniversary. That's what I always wanted. They spend their time together, do everything together. I miss that. On the one hand, my life is very full. I'm not frenetically looking for someone, but I would be lying if I didn't say that conceptually, I miss being with someone and sharing my life.

Neill

"I do think it possible to do everything. My mother worked. If one has the right kind of marriage ... What I'm trying to say is that if I were to get into a relationship, I wouldn't stop doing what I'm doing. When you marry as young as I did," Ms. O'Neill admits, "the odds of that marriage working are nil. As you mature, you are far more capable and understanding. You learn to make time. I love motherhood. I'd like to have another child if circumstances were right, if I could raise it with a father in a functioning family unit."

She explains, "I sort of grew up with my daughter who was born when I was 19. I learned a great deal from that experience; and because I lost five babies between her and Reis, having him was like starting over. I'm into the routine now. When I'm not shooting a film, my day starts at 7 a.m. I have breakfast with my son, see him off to school and go to my office to work intensively on management, getting to know each client and his needs and talents.

"Filming the CBS series 'Cover Up' was tough, but I rented a house right next door to the studio so I could run home for lunch with my son and he came to the studio often after nursery school. I had no idea how stressed out you get working on episodic television. The good old 17hour day."

BETWEEN THE LINES

Q. Please tell me everything about Fred Ward, who is now in "Remo Williams." Has he worked in the theater and other films? Where did he grow up? Also, what nationality is he part Indian?

Christine Johnson Tollhouse, Calif.

A. He's a mixture of Scots, Irish and Cherokee, was born in San Diego but seems to have grown up all over the place. From San Diego, his family moved to Texas, but when he was 3, his mother left his father and they moved to New Orleans.

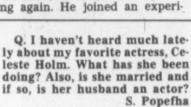

When she remarried, they moved back to California, but he returned to Texas at the age of 13 to move in with an aunt after his mother died. Three days after his high-school graduation, he joined the Air Force and after one tour of duty, was on the verge of reenlisting when, on a whim, he decided to move to New York and become an actor.

He enrolled at the Herbert Berghof Studio, moved into a cheap hotel and took janitorial and construction jobs to finance his studies. It didn't last long. He got restless and went to Florida, intent on hopping a freighter to some distant port, but wound up in New Orleans, loading trucks and working in a barrel factory. After his next stop, Yuba City, Calif., where he worked as a short-order cook in a bowling alley restaurant, he moved to San Francisco, determined to try acting again. He joined an experi-

Ventnor, N.J.

A. She's been working on behalf of the New Jersey. Motion Picture and Television Commission, of which she is chairperson, and acting on "Falcon Crest" although that stint, she's pretty sure, is over.

"They packed me off to the mental hospital after I committed two murders," she explained on a recent phone conversation. "And I don't see how they can bring me back - or if I want to come back. I really prefer working on promental theater troupe, made no money and subsequently went to work as a construction worker on San Francisco's BART subway line, as a logger in Northern California and as a lumberjack in Alaska

He then headed to Europe, where he acted in two TV films for noted Italian director Roberto Rossellini and dubbed spaghetti westerns before returning to San Francisco and the stage: Sam Shepard's "Inacoma" and "Angel City" under Shepard's direction. He still wasn't making any money, though, so he made and sold jewelry and moved to Los Angeles.

Six months later, he won the role of Clint Eastwood's jailbreak partner in "Escape from Alcatraz" and he's been working, and making money, ever since. His films include: "The Right Stuff," "Southern Comfort," "Uncommon Valor," "Silkwood," "Swing Shift" and "Secret Admirer." Depending upon the box office showing of "Remo Williams," you should also see him in a sequel, although one hasn't been firmed up as yet.

He's married, has a 12-year-old son, Django, and lives in Venice and Santa Barbara, Calif.

jects where you don't have to work day into night and never see the sun set.'

She also recently finished a CBS movie of the week called "Alter Ego" in which she plays the mother of a mystery writer, played by Robert Hayes. That is set, tentatively, to air in March.

And, in November, she appeared before Queen Elizabeth II at the Royal Command Performance in London, performing selections from the film "High Society." ("They told me that the Palace counts minutes and that the Queen really prefers dogs and horses to show business, but that 'High Society' is their favorite film," she says.)

Yes, she is married to actor Wesley Addy.

Q. My friends and I would like to know more about Willie Nelson.

C.J. Peters Scranton, Pa.

A. He's 52, from Abbott, Texas, and was raised by his grandparents after his parents separated. His grandfather gave him his first guitar when he was 5; his grandmother taught him to read music. He began to write songs, started a band after high school, went into the Air Force briefly and then returned to Texas and married Martha Matthews, a Waco carhop.

The marriage was stormy, and he realized it was over when he awoke one morning to find himself sewn into the bedsheets and Martha and their three children heading out the door.

By this point, he was in Nashville, where he stayed to try to get his songs recorded. He married again, to country singer Shirley Collie. That marriage ended as well, although not as dramatically, and he moved back to Texas. In the Texas city of Cut and Shoot, he spotted a factory worker named Connie Koepke; they later married, are still married and have two daughters, Paula, 15, and Amy, 12.

Willie's performing career also took off once he got back to Texas, helped by the albums "Yester-day's Wine," "Shotgun Willie," "Phases and Stages" and "The Red Headed Stranger.'

It really accelerated in 1978 with the release of his classics album, "Stardust." And from there he went into the movies: "The Electric Horseman," "Thief," "Barbarosa," "Honeysuckle Ro-se," the recent "Songwriter," with his pal Kris Kristofferson and the still-to-be-released film version of his "Red Headed Stranger' album.

Next up, two TV films: "The Last Days of Frank and Jesse James" with Kris and Johnny Cash and a musical remake of "Stagecoach" with Kris, Johnny and Waylon Jennings. Somewhere down the road, he may also do an album with Bob Dylan; they

Q. Could you tell me how old Bruce Boxleitner is, where he was born, if he married? Is he going to be in any more TV shows?

Laura Shannon Springfield, Ore. A. He's 34, was born in Elgin, Ill., is married to actress Kitty Holcomb and they have two sons, Sam, 5, and Lee, just a few months old. His next TV show, apart from the series "Scarecrow and Mrs. King," is a movie of the week called "Passion Flower," in which he portrays an American expatriate in Singapore who gets involved with a married woman, played by Barbara Hershey. It's supposed to be as steamy as network TV allows.

A. She took time off from her career starting in 1941 to devote her energy to the war effort. She returned in 1948 with a movie, "An Innocent Affair," and a Broadway play, "Goodbye, My Fancy," married Time-Life publisher Andrew Heiskell in 1950 and was divorced by him in 1964. Most recently, the 79-year-old actress has been living in retirement in Spain's Costa del Sol.

Texas Opera Theatre shows opera anything but boring

HOUSTON (AP) - For the Texas on a street corner in Arkansas, a shopping mall in Massachusetts or even a prison in Louisiana.

Celeste Holm

The 60-member troupe willingly spends weeks on a bus, putting up with some tough times, to take the music of Donzetti, Puccini and Verdi to small town America, from Show Low, Ariz., to Orono, Maine.

"There isn't any place we won't go," said Jane Weaver, general manager and chief executive officer of Texas Opera Theater. "All we need is a space about 20 feet by 30 feet." In Eagle Pass, a town of 21,000

When the opera is in town, high Opera Theater, opening night can be school girls in prom dresses and corsages hand out programs to patrons who watch the show from bleachers.

'That's all we have," says Caroline Cerna, an Eagle Pass woman who has worked to bring Texas Opera Theater to the community for nine years. "But it's important that the people in our town, especially the children, hear good music.'

Texas Opera Theater was organized in 1974 with a grant from the Galveston-based Moody Foundation. The group at first served as the educational arm of the Houston Grand Opera, primarily touring schools in the Houston area. In 1980, it spun off as a separate the careers of young American sing- take them 3,050 miles to perform Biers and to showing new audiences that opera is anything but stuffy or boring.

Since then, the troupe of 20 singers, a 23-piece orchestra and a production crew of five has visited 40 states and introduced the classics all sung in English - to more than one million people.

"In one community, you could tell the women were dragging their husbands to the performance. They still had the dirt in their boots," Ms. Weaver says. "But after a while they really got into it. They didn't exactly know when to clap so they stomped

Accommodations for the performers are a long way from the luxury of the Met.

Dressing rooms may be in a high school locker room, or a welding shop or restroom — if the players are lucky. Sometimes there are no restrooms and no running water.

But the singers, who stay with the

One night a singer may have the lead role, then play a supporting part the next performance. And it takes a lot of endurance, says mezzosoprano Karen Nickell.

She continues, "I was physically fit. I've always played tennis and ridden horseback. I have my stallion, Sneak Preview, out here as well as Warm Blood, who is a jumper. But there's little time to ride when you're on a series.

"I had to laugh. My friend, Lee Majors, was working on the same lot. We had once done a feature together ('Steele'), and by my remarks he realized I had no concept of the exigencies of television. All year, seeing me on the lot, he'd tease me. 'Having fun, Jennifer?' Piece of cake, isn't it?

Well, it was tough cake. And then the tragedy of John Erik Hexum's death and all the memories of my near miss. Keeping my two children close helped. Reis is a corker and Aimee is a great friend. She's working right now, taking a break - 1 hope only a break - from school. She's finished high school and is working as a receptionist; I just hope she'll go on to college."

Aimee's picture stands in a handsome frame on the piano in this house Ms. O'Neill uses as management headquarters. She is a beautiful girl; show-business beauty. "She also has a beautiful voice," Ms. O'-Neill says. "I'd be more than happy to help her, but she has no aspirations at the moment. She'd rather get engaged. I implore her not to. 'Don't do as I did,' I tell her; but it's hard to be convincing when I was working at 15 and married at 17."

Ms. O'Neill was born in Rio de Janeiro to an English mother and a Spanish-Irish father. She grew up in Connecticut and fell madly in love with horses when she visited her grandparents in Rio. While still a student at the Dalton School, she started modeling at 15, to earn money to buy horses

After Aimee was born, Ms. O'Neill started acting lessons at New York's Neighborhood Playhouse, was signed by Paramount and cast oppo-site John Wayne in "Rio Lobo."

"Because I was family-oriented, I did a lot of things not necessarily beneficial to a film career," she remembers. "I did not move to L.A. I would not do nude scenes. I didn't want to travel. So long as that first marriage lasted (six years), I only averaged about a film a year."

She continues, "But once I was free, I became disenchanted with the kind of roles available and realized that the opportunity for artistic excellence initially comes from behind the camera.

So with the idea of becoming a filmmaker, she took her baby and went to Europe, where she starred in several films and put herself under the tutelage of Italian master Luchino Visconti.

Her award-winning film with him, "The Innocent," marked a professional turning point. She continuied to star in such pictures as "The Reincarnation of Peter Proud," "The Psychic," "A Force of One" and "Scanners."

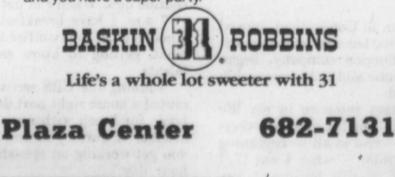

She began laying plans to establish her own production company and her first made-for-television motion picture, "Love's Savage Fury, scored as ABC's top-rated project for 1979-80.

'Head Office' heavy-handed

By DAVID LEE FORREST

The worst thing about the painfully clumsy "Head Office" is that it assassinates its two most powerfully funny comics before they even have a chance to preside over the film This satire about the corporate business world has a fairly impressive cast. including Judge Reinhold of "Beverly Hills Cop" and "Fast Times at Ridgemont High," Danny DeVito of "Taxi," Rick Moranis "Ghostbusters," Eddie Albert of of "Green Acres," Don Novello (alias Father Guido Sarducci) of "Saturday Night Live," Brian Doyle-Murray also of "Saturday Night Live," Wallace Shawn of "My Dinner With Andre," Jane Seymour of "East of Eden" and even boxing promoter Don King of gravity-defying-hair fame. Reinhold stars as a good-natured but lazy business school grad who lands a job in a huge corporation solely because his fa-ther is a United States senator. The firm is a ludicrous but lucrative multi-national headed by Ed-die Albert, who notes that "When I first came to this town I had less than $43 million in my pocket." Reinhold is first assigned to work with DeVito's character, then with Moranis, but they both die from job-related causes before Reinhold's first coffee break. This is a terrible shame because

DeVito and Moranis both put in beautifully frenzied performances before their untimely demises. Had their characters survived, the film's humor might not have slipped into the coma that lasts until the closing credits roll. The rest of the cast is either confined to small bits that never develop into anything or are given such terrible gags that even the best comedians couldn't make them work.

While "Head Office" starts out looking promisingly like an up-dated version of 1967's "How to Succeed in Business Without Really Trying," it ends up like a lousy ripoff of 1976's "Network."

Had "Head Office" stuck to social satire it might have stayed funny, but its grab for political satire is ham-fisted.

There's plenty of potentially funny material about business and politics to be dissected, but, as the awful "Best Defense" and the almost-but-not-quite-as-awful "Deal of the Century" disasterously demonstrated, such satire réquires a delicate touch.

In this new comedy, however, first-time director Ken Finkleman operates like his hands are laced up in boxing gloves. He flails away ineffectually at jingodering with unfunny punches like naming an unlikable charac-ter "Nixon" and having a a rightwing speaker scream in Hitleresque German at a prayer breakfast. He also takes softer jabs at the other side of the political arena istic advertising, bribery, corporate corruption and money-laun-

by making up obnoxious activist groups like "Child Psychologists for a Free Poland Against Whaling."

To say that "Head Office" is heavy-handed would be a gross understatement; it's like saying that getting hit in the head with a sledgehammer might hurt.

"Head Office," rated PG-13 for sexual innuendo and strong language, is now showing at the UA Cine IV.

David Lee Forrest is film critic of the Reporter-Telegram.

Cable may have Comedy Channel

LOS ANGELES (AP) - Need a laugh at 3 a.m.? Tom Kay is working on plans for a 24-hour comedy cable channel.

Kay said he hopes to do for comedy what MTV has done for rock music. The format, he said, will "showcase a laugh every half minute, 120 laughs per hour and 2,880 laughs a day.

"I know the public needs a service like the Comedy Channel. Laughter is one of life's great pleasures, and it's a lot healthier than Valium," he said. Kay said the proposed channel would feature all kinds of humor, from standup to films to comedy plications to Midland Arts Assembly's third annual sketches. He will present the service to the Nation-Celebration of the Arts being held May 16-18 at al Cable Television Association meeting in March and would like to have it in operation by the end of

Tim Reid does have serious side

It was a moment of truth. It was initiation night, a night to serve notice to his friends - his gang, really teens, belonged among them.

night, and it was Reid's turn "to take someone out." Not to kill, necessarshow he had what it took to survive and fit into a world in which violence was the norm.

"I found myself wanting to be a part of a group I knew was bent on destruction," Reid recalled. But when the time came for him to prove himself, Reid couldn't do it. That circle of 11 friends never quite became an even dozen.

"Of the 11 kids I knew then," said Reid, "only four of us are alive today

Drugs, gang violence, and armed robberies that went awry took their toll on that old gang of his.

"I'm the only one to finish high school," said Reid. "Actually, I'm the only one in my immediate family to finish high school or college.

Now, Reid finds himself frequently on the road, talking to groups about kids and drugs. Reid's own flirtation with juvenile hooliganism, plus his perspective as a parent, have given him a number of hard-nosed opinions about the young, where they're heading and what they need.

"Somewhere we've lost respect for younger and elderly people," he said. For the children, he said, it's meant a serious loss of self-esteem. The road back is a long one, said Reid, and it leads through the home. "It has to be done through parents. The hero in the house should be the mother, father, uncle, whoever," said Reid. "I see a tremendous alienation among young people. The gen-eration gap is no longer a gap — it's two opposing forces, two groups who don't understand each other."

"WKRP in Cincinnati." It isn't evident either as he plays Downtown Brown, a plainclothes police lieutenant who helps his friends "Simon & Simon" in a style befitting the academy of creative law enforcement.

But the serious side is there, shaped by his upbringing in Norfolk, Va., given substance by his own role as a parent, and given impact by his celebrity as an actor.

Reid is in his third season as Downtown Brown. He beefed up for the part at the start of the season, adding about 25 pounds of muscle to his slim 150-pound frame. "I wanted to look the part," he said. If he looks a bit on the anemic side as the season goes on, it's because he's tapered off in his workouts, losing 12 pounds of bulk in a 14-month period. And understably there are other demands on his time. He and his wife, Daphne Maxwell, are renovating the house they recently bought in California. "We decided on a few changes," said Reid. "But I didn't know we'd end up moving walls." The changes will eventually accommodate Ms. Maxwell sewing room, a hobby that absorbs her when she isn't acting, which she does occasionally on "Simon &

Reid and Ms. Maxweil are each married for the second time. Reid has a son and daughter by his first marriage, and Ms. Maxwell has a son by hers; they're all in their teens. When the summer comes and "Simon" is on hiatus, it's travel time. We're not into drugs or fast cars," said Reid. "We travel every year." High points have included France, Japan and England.

'We took the kids to Stonehenge," recalled Reid. "There we were, looking at this marvel, and I turned around and what were the kids doing? Taking pictures of cows. That's what happens when you travel with kids who are city slickers.'

Exposure to new things has been a two-way proposition for Reid and his children. He credits the experience of his oldest son, now 19, with awakening him to the threat drugs pose to oung people. "I found there was a budding interest in illegal drugs in sixth-graders through high school-aged kids in Illinois, where we were at the time," recalled Reid. "White kids and black kids were sniffing glue and it wasn't being publicized. My son was 4 or 5 at the time. I wanted him to have a fighting chance. I wanted him to see me in action against it," said Reid, who worked to alert others to the problem as a member of the Jaycees. problem as a member of the Jaycees. The whole phenomenon, said Reid, "is a symphony of young people cry-ing out for understanding." Reid's own youth is punctuated with achievement, despite its early, walk-on-the-wild-side undercurrent.

He was a member of the track team at Crestwood High School in Chesa-peake, Va., and served as student council vice president and as a yearbook editor. After high school, he waited tables in a spiffy restaurant in Virginia Beach and made enough to write his own tuition checks at Norfolk State College.

His junior year was a pivotal one. In addition to marrying and fathering his son that year, he was asked by a drama professor to try out for a big role in the school's production of "Oedipus Rex." A mentorship and career bloomed. The professor, Stanley Wilson, died in 1981, and Reid set up a scholarship in his name in Norfolk State's drama department.

Meanwhile, Reid used his degree in business and marketing to land a job as a marketing representative in Chicago for DuPont. There, Reid met Tom Dreesen, a kindred spirit with whom he formed a comedy team. The duo eventually broke up, but the addiction induced by the first laugh in a Chicago area night club has endured.

Stand-up comedy led to television commercials and a move to California, where he studied acting at the Film Actors' Workshop in Burbank. His acting exploits have included "Teachers Only" for television and the movies "Mother, Jugs and Speed" and "Uptown Saturday Night."

Looking beyond "Simon & Simon," Reid sees film production and Virginia in his future. "I'd like to move back east, maybe to Virginia, and stay involved in production," he said. He lamented the lack of black-produced, black-oriented TV and motion picture projects, and accepted part of the blame. "I haven't done it," he said flatly. "I have Spielberg dreams...Now I'm working on smaller productions." Rather than endure the frustrations of trying — and failing — to pull off large-scale produc-tions, Reid is committed to thinking small for now, but he's mindful that larger things are there for the doing.

"Why not take a smaller project and push it through?" he said. "Blacks have tremendous tenacity and stubbornness and arrogance. If we didn't, we would nave died on the boats coming over."

Beets enjoy high-brow status

By TED LARSEN King Features Syndicate

The lowly garden beet is find-ing a high-brow academic status it's never enjoyed before. There are serious moves in food chemistry to make beet juice derivatives the prime source of red food coloring, because it's both very red and very safe.

Man has been enjoying beets since prehistory along a wide band of soil stretching from England to India. Perhaps because they keep so well, beets jumped to their greatest popularity in Germany and Russia, where the growing season can be painfully short. The French didn't take an interest in beets until the 19th century, about the same time they arrived in the United States.

In Europe, farmers feed their cattle giant mangel-wurzels, the fatties of the beet family, often reaching 60 pounds each. Mangles have never been especially popular with American growers, but an unusual white variety continues to be a significant cash crop.

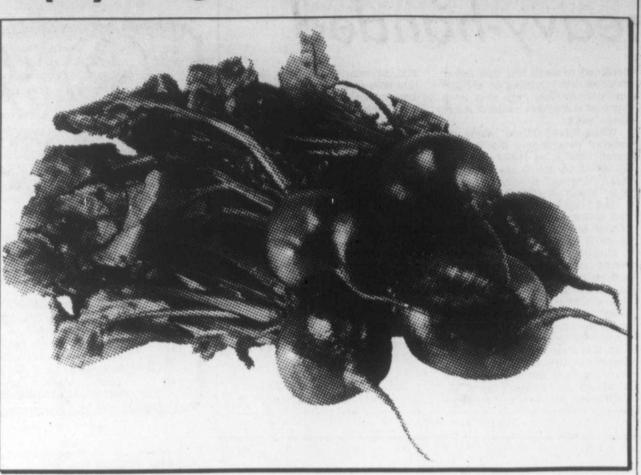

Developed in the 1800s, this beet is too fibrous and woody to eat, but remarkably 8 percent of its weight is often sugar. When the French lost their West Indian islands, home-grown sugar beets became the prime source for

The hope of the food-coloring industry lies in betacyanin, a natural dye that gives beets their red trademark. The ability of humans to digest this crimson color comes from a single gene. If you inherited two recessive-gene parents, the unsettling color continues right through your urinary tract.

While beets get high nutrition marks, as good sources of vita-mins A and C, riboflavin and iron, they also contain a strange vitamin imposter.

Science knows it as an "antivitamin," in this case "antithiamine." This substance tricks cells into believing it's real thiamin (B1), keeping the genuine article out. Antithiamine is probably a harmless curiosity. In fact, it's so poorly understood, if you asked a nutritionist for an explanation, the reply would probably be. "Beets me.

Cold beet salads are a staple of German cuisine. This one is both simple, delicious and versatile.

GERMAN BEET SALAD 3 cups beets, cooked, sliced

- 2 medium onions, sliced cup beet liquid (from cooking) cup cider vinegar teaspoon salt tablespoon sugar
- tablespoon caraway seeds

Cut the beets into ¼-inch slices. Arrange a layer of beets in a mixing bowl, top with a layer of sliced onions. Season each layer with a bit of salt and sugar. Place beet liquid and vinegar in a saucepan and heat to boiling. Sprinkle caraway seeds on top of salad and pour on hot beet juice/water mixture. Place in refrigerator and allow to stand at least 24 hours before serving. Stir occasionally to distribute marinade. Hints:

This is one of those recipes that should really be made a couple of days ahead. The longer in advance the better.

The ideal container for making this salad is a tall, narrow bowl fine. It's important to make sure the beets and onions are completely surrounded by the marinade.

Dill can successfully be substituted for the caraway.

This soup may be off the "beeten" path, but its a great way to start dinner. Or by itself with fresh bread, what a perfect meat-

Discard the mashed beets and onions. Add chopped beets, carrots, vinegar and horseradish to the strained stock and bring to a boil again. Cook 20-30 minutes, until the vegetables are cooked to your liking. Season again with vinegar, horseradish, salt and pepper to taste. Just before serving, garnish each serving with a dollop of sour cream and a sprinkling of grated raw carrot.

Most adults do not properly respect snow

By SARAH OVERSTREET King Features Syndicate

If I had to point to the thing I found most disappointing after I reached adulthood, I guess I'd have to say it's the lack of proper respect for snow among my fellow adults. Year by year after about age 17, you find fewer and fewer cohorts who will willingly do anything that involves snow. My own 30-plus friends are to the point where they do not want snow to touch their bodies

Snow poopers, I call them. It's the old law of supply and de-mand, as I see it. Now that they can go out and play in the snow anytime they want, without anyone nagging at them, they don't want to. When their mothers guarded their snow time as zealously as their vaccination records, they wanted to play out in the snow more than anything.

We never even asked how cold it was, in those days. Any time it snowed, we just went out in it and stayed as long as we were allowed to. We didn't mind that our mothers put plastic bread sacks over our mittens and snow boots.

We used our stumps (have you ever tried to sculpt with your hands covered in mittens and bread sacks?) to make snow creatures, although my girlfriends and I were never very good at making snowmen. We couldn't get the hang of rolling the ball through the snow to make it pick up more snow and make the ball steadily bigger.

We girls preferred to lie in the snow and flap our arms and legs, an unathletic but aesthetic maneuver which resulted in "snow angels." We'd then get up gingerly so we wouldn't injure the forms with our footprints, stand back, and admire our work.

We stayed in the snow for hours and then begged to stay out in it "just 15 minutes more, and then we'll come in and we won't ask you any more, honest.

And then we'd ask again. The first thing I did after a snowfall was to make snow ice cream. My mother preferred it that way, to get it fresh before the dogs got a shot at

As I remember it, it was a syrupy, watery mess of egg yolk, vanilla, sug-ar and snow. I would eat the whole enamel panful if she'd let me. Then in high school, we tied car hoods - two at a time - behind someone's car and rode the hoods over the ice-covered country roads. We'd lean into the ditches on curves, courting the ever-titillating topple. The back car hood was always the riskiest, sort of like the end man in a game of crack-the-whip on roller skates.

There is only one snow memory I'm not so fond of: galoshes. My parents, who walked to school in nothing but their thin leather shoes, thought they were the most wonderful invention since the car. My father's were giant black rubber things with metal latches that clanked.

My mother's were those awful clear rubber ones that buckled at the ankle, emphasized her skinny legs and through which her real shoes showed. I always hoped my parents wouldn't be in their galoshes any time we'd see any of my friends.

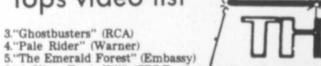

was cursed with a new pair of galoshes every year as my feet grew. but every year they were the same: red or yellow rubber so bright a B-52 could fire a direct hit on them, elastic loop to hook over a button at the side. I couldn't have been the only child to have been subjected to them, but it seemed as though I was. Sometimes I'd take the offensive overshoes off and carry them to school under my books so the other kids couldn't see them. I'd sit in wet shoes all day, but if I caught cold, it was a small price to pay for freedom from public humiliation.

I have a pair of brown, waterproof all-weather boots now that are probably no more attractive than those old red or yellow galoshes, but I like them just fine. I'm sure if I had some kids, they'd ask me not to wear the things in front of their friends.

Artist pioneers art of 'spun porcelain'

MANHATTAN BEACH, Minn. (AP) selling his wares on commission to - Thirteen years ago, Fred Gridley gave up his job as a lie detector operator in California to return to his native Minnesota and begin a career as an artist

Gridley says he pioneered the art of making "spun porcelain" thim-bles, earrings, necklace beads and bells. His works can now be found throughout the country.

Gridley, 41, an Arlington native, was a theater major at Hamline University in St. Paul. After graduation, he went to graduate school at UCLA and the University of Puerto Rico. He directed a theater company in Venezuela for two years, then served as U.S. Embassy photographer in Caracas before becoming a polygraphist in California.

When he returned to Minnesota, he served a three-year apprenticeship in studio arts, including bronze, glass and stoneware, under master potter Nils Lou in the Minneapolis-St. Paul area.

It was during that time that Gridley began experimenting with "unorthodox" clay handling techniques, he said. Basically, he applied his glass skills to clay.

In 1975, Gridley devoted himself to developing the technique full time. The following year, he moved to Manhattan Beach, where he designed and built a rustic studio and home. He says he now commands a "respectable middle-class income" rings and glue the posts on.

various shops around the country. The process he uses to make his porcelain thimbles, beads, bells and earrings is much like baking a layered dessert. First, Gridley kneads his clay, which he obtains from Minneapolis, with different colored pigments.

Each colored portion is rolled very thin. The layers are then stacked sometimes 150 to the inch - ready for slicing

For thimbles, Gridley uses a "cookie cutter" he designed himself to cut shapes out of the multicolored clay.

He forms the clay piece around a wooden instrument, called a mandrel. A knife is used to "move" the layers of clay into different patterns. The shaped thimble is then pressed into a plaster die for drying.

Each thimble is an original. Gridley even stamps them wih his initials and the year. The procelain pieces are baked at more than 2,000 degrees Fahrenheit in Gridley's kiln, then polished to a glossy sheen in a rock polisher.

Although his thimbles may be gaining him renown in the art world, Gridley's earrings are his "bread and butter," he says. Last year he said he sold "many thousands" of pairs "from Maine to Hawaii."

His wife, Cathy, a fibers artist, and a few area women help sort the ear-

AND OMAR SHARIF © 1986 Tribune Media Services, Inc. DEAR MR. GOREN

BY CHARLES GOREN

Q. - In one of your recent columns I came across the phrase "working cards." I thought that all high cards counted the same. How can I tell when they are working or not?-S.B., Forest Hills, N.Y.

A.-When you value your hand initially, all high cards are given their count-unless, of course, they are insufficiently guarded, when they are allotted either their point count or distributional count, whichever is higher. However, as the auction progresses, the value of high cards can vary drastically.

Let's take an extreme example. You hold:

♦QJ76 ♡K9 ◊AQ63 ♦Q98 Partner opens the bidding with one spade and you make a forcing jump raise of three spades. Partner's next action is to cue-bid four diamonds, showing first-round control of that suit.

Since you hold the ace of diamonds, partner must have a void in the suit. With one bid, partner has wiped out almost half the value of your hand. Now instead of covering partner's losers in diamonds and perhaps even being a source of tricks, your diamonds will do no more than provide a discard for partner. All you can do is sign off at four spades.

Switch your diamond and heart holdings. Now all your cards in the red suits are working. Your king of diamonds means that you have no losers in that suit, so you should cue-bid the ace of hearts to cooperate with partner's slam inquiry.

Here's an even simpler example. Suppose partner opens the bidding with a demand bid of two hearts and you hold:

◆xxx ♡xx ◊Qxxx ◆xxxx Your queen of diamonds might or might not be a useful card, depending on how the auction develops. However, change the hand to:

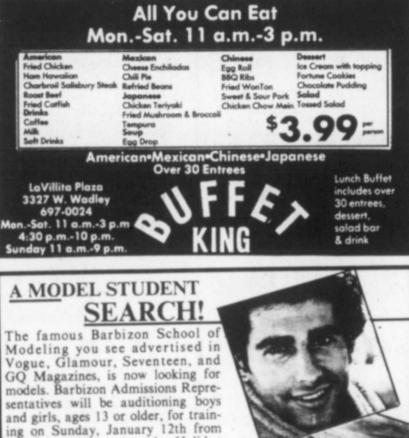

◆xxx . ♡Qx ◇xxxx ◆xxxx Now you should value your queen in partner's suit as a full trick.

Consider these two hands: (1) ♦x ♡xx ◊KJxxx ♦AKJxx (2) +xxx VKQx OAxxx +xxx Partner opens the bidding with one spade and, over your response, jumps to three hearts, then rebids hearts at his next turn. Which of the two hands would you rather have?

You are beginning to grasp the concept of working cards if you selected hand (2). Despite the fact that it is 3 points weaker than hand (1), it contains three cards that are of use to partner, including two in hearts that are worth their weight in gold. By contrast, the first hand might not produce a single card that is of any use to partner.

Professor explains six possible origins of life on Earth

"Origins: The Possibilities of Science for the Genesis of Life on Earth," by Robert Shapiro; Summit: $16.95; 304 pp.

By JOHN D. O'CONNOR Los Angeles Times-

Washington Post News Service

"In the beginning the earth's atmosphere contained methane, hydrogen, ammonia and water vapor." So starts the most popular but probably not the most accurate account of the origin of life on Earth.

If the hallmark of a living organism is the ability to reproduce and evolve, that is to successfully adapt to changing environments, then by what process did the first living organism come into being? The most repeated paradigm suggests that the primitive Earth had an atmosphere of methane, ammonia, hydrogen and water which when exposed to intense energy such as lightning, produced simple organic compounds, amino acids and nucleotides - the building blocks of proteins and DNA. Over a period of about 1 billion years, by mechanisms as yet un-known, these simple molecules reacted with each other to form larger and larger molecules that eventually became sequestered within an oily membrane and there began to reproduce themselves. (There is considerable debate concerning whether the first replicative forms were protein or nucleic acids and Shapiro offers the pros and cons for each with considerable clarity.) During the subse-quent 3.5 million years, the evolution of such duplicating protocells result-ed in the spectacular variety of life visible to us today.

There are alternative explanations to the origin of life, and in his book "Origins," Robert Shapiro, a professor of chemistry at New York University, examines six such explanations in addition to the one mentioned.

Some of the explanations are be-yond the realm of science such as the creation myth of the Eskimos and the biblical presentation of Genesis. Others involved the arrival of life from extraterrestrial sources. Perhaps life arrived in the form of bacteria or a virus riding on a beam of starlight or upon a comet! No single explanation is espoused by the author with particular fervor or mis-sionary zeal. Instead, Shapiro attempts to examine each of the seven possibilities for the origin of life which he so deftly presents in his prologue. His narrative approach is

His style is conversational and almost folksy - particularly in the chapter where he describes some of the interactions of the scientists gathered in Mainz, Germany, in 1983 at an international conference on the origins of life. The basic chemistry and cell biology necessary to understand the various experiments which have attempted to unravel the mystery of origins can be comprehended easily by the nonscientist. Moreover, his identification of the major proponents of each hypothesis and their placement in a historical context adds a dimension that seems to make the reading easier and to connect the disparate theories. In addition, the statistical arguments concerning the probability of certain chemical reactions occuring are presented by an inventive analogy to a multistory tower of numbers and by the familiar analogy to a chimpanzee writing Shakespearean sonnets.

In contrast to the notorious proclamation of Archbishop James Ussher of Trinity College in Dublin, who in 1650 declared that God made heaven and Earth on Saturday, Oct. 22, 4004 BC, most scientific evidence suggests the age of the Earth to be approximately 4.5 billion years. After approximately 1 billion years the first single-celled organism appeared. The question of how that first living cell arose should pique the interest of every thoughtful human being. Shapiro has written a wonderfully readable and sometimes highly critical analyses of the most prominent (not necessarily most plausible) explanation for the origin of that first cell which informs and occasionally entertains the reader and fulfills the author's desire to instill "Not only a sense of wonder at the unsolved riddle of our existence but also a preference for doubt in place of dogma and a keen appreciation for the proper practice of science."

YOUR HOROSCOPE

Monday, January 13, 1986

YOUR BIRTHDAY TODAY: Be sure of your authority before insisting others do things your way. You do not want to alienate those whose help you need. A positive attitude helps you convince others that you are on the right track.

ARIES (March 21-April 19): Mutual trust is essential to the speedy resolution of a domestic dispute. Offer a compromise. You need to curb your temper when dealing with an authority figure who opposes your plans.

TAURUS (April 20-May 20): Intellectual tasks are favored this morning. A favorite possession could be damaged by a loved one's carelessness. Control your temper! His or her feelings are more important than any item.

GEMINI (May 21-June 20): Those with artistic talent enjoy good luck now. Return a friend's invitation. Plan a fun but inexpensive dinner at home. Your personal finances would benefit from closer scrutiny. Analyze your spending habits

CANCER (June 21-July 22): You find the solution to a puzzling family problem today. Guard business secrets, as the element of surprise is part of your formula for success

LEO (July 23-Aug. 22): Welcome close friends' suggestions where career or business matters are concerned. Someone could try to tempt you from the straight and narrow. Refuse to be enticed. Dine out with loved one.

VIRGO (Aug. 23-Sept. 22): An influential person's assistance looks crucial to the success of a financial venture. Recognize that there could be strings attached. Show a willingness to compromise.

LIBRA (Sept. 23-Oct. 22): An unusual opportunity deserves further investigation. Stay away from anything that sounds like a getrich-quick scheme. You need more data before making a financial commitment. Refuse to be rushed.

SCORPIO (Oct. 23-Nov. 21): Work behind the scenes for that promotion or raise you want. A message from afar brings valuable inside information. Let romantic partner know your goals. Be honest if unwilling to settle down.

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 22-Dec. 21): A display of creative talent gives your work a new dimension. Someone in authority is deeply impressed. Friends and family members benefit from your insights. Find a way to convince someone with doubts.

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22-Jan. 19): You feel more confident today. Come to grips with an important issue. Beating around the bush would be a mistake. A prominent individual is ready to cooperate. A romance begins to intensify. AQUARIUS (Jan. 20-Feb. 18):

A second job could take care of those holiday bills. If you ask for a loan, be honest about how long you will need to repay it. Give more thought to romance.

PISCES (Feb. 19-March 20): A good day to catch up on your correspondence and put your financial papers in better order. A business associate brings welcome news from overseas. You greet a proposed change with eager anticipation.
