King's son participates in wreath-laying ceremony

Veterans of civil rights struggles in the United States and South Africa joined to remember Martin Luther King Jr. and his ideals today as the nation observed the first federal holiday honoring a black leader.

Vice President George Bush watched as King's son Dexter placed a wreath on his father's grave today in an Atlanta ceremony followed by an ecumenical service at Ebenezer Baptist Church, where King was ery, who heads the Southern Christian Leadership Conference founded nation's racial segregation policies, by King, said at the service. "We've come too far, we've worked too strenuously, we've marched too long, we've prayed too hard, we've wept too bitterly, we've bled too profusely and we've died too young

"Go out into the hedges and highways and lift up those who are oppressed, and then Martin will have a gift on his birthday," said the Rev. Joseph L. Roberts Jr., pastor of Ebenezer

Peace Prize for his opposition to his was to be awarded the annual Martin Luther King Jr. Peace Prize at the Atlanta service. Following that presentation, hundreds of former King colleages and friends planned to march through the city.

I'm so happy that today ... we are celebrating the first national holiday for a black American, which in a sense transcends Martin himself and really gives honor and respect to every black American, to those who struggled so long and so hard to

Benjamin Hooks, executive director of the NAACP, said today on the "CBS Morning News."

Marches and rallies were scheduled today in several state capitals, including Boston, Indianapolis, Nashville, Tenn., Columbia, S.C., and Olympia, Wash., as well as Cincinnati, Ohio. About 5,000 people attended a citywide ecumenical service in Philadelphia sponsored by the city and People United to Serve Humanity.

All 485 students at a black high school in Louisiana's Plaquemines

Parish stayed home today to protest the parish school board's refusal to recognize Martin Luther King Day as a holiday. "No one showed up this morning. No one but the teachers," said James Jones, assistant principal at Phoenix High School. Other parish workers had the day off. In Alabama, where King's civil rights crusade began in 1955 with a boycott of Montgomery city buses, a 14-foot statue of King was to be unveiled today in Birmingham near the 16th Street Baptist Church, where four young black girls were killed in

In Montgomery, a prayer and church service are planned at the Dexter Avenue King Memorial Baptist Church, where King was pastor in the late 1950s, followed by a ceremony on the Capitol steps about a block from the church.

Tutu stood Sunday in the pulpit of Atlanta's Ebenezer Baptist Church and promised a campaign of civil disobedience against apartheid laws in his white-ruled nation.

Armed forces oust Lesotho prime minister

MASERU, Lesotho (AP) — Armed forces ousted Prime Minister Leabua Jonathan and installed their commander, Maj Gen Justin Lekhanya, as head of a ruling military council today, in an apparently bloodless coup that caused wild rejoicing in this poverty-stricken mountain

Lesotho radio told the nation of the coup in the English and Sesotho anguages and said King Moshoeshoe Il remained head of state. The South African Press Association, based in neighboring South Africa, reported that Jonathan was at his home near the capital

Today's action came after days of unrest On Sunday, Jonathan accused South Africa of involvement, but said he believed he had survived the crisis He had governed Lesotho since it gained its independence from Britain in 1966.

Thousands poured into Kingsway. Maseru's main street chanting ululating and waving bamboo fronds An impromptu parade of pedestrians and vehicles cheered helmeted and armed soldiers in combat uniforms, who guarded government buildings. Most civil servants apparently left their offices to join in.

Lesotho's 1.3 million people have long been divided over Jonathan's authoritarian methods of government his appeals for aid from communist countries, and his confrontation with South Africa over the presence in Lesotho of African National Congress guerrillas.

South Africa, which surrounds Lesotho and controls its economy, imposed crippling delays on shipments across border posts three weeks ago, in what South African officials said were searches for arms and guerrillas opposed to South Africa's whiteled government. Lesotho was reported down to a few days' gasoline supply, despite rationing, and stocks of food and medicines were cut.

In Johannesburg, the semi-official South African Broadcasting Corp. today reported a first step toward lifting of the South African blockade. A newscast said a freight train crossed into Lesotho earlier today carrying fuel, refrigerated items and general merchandise

Lesotho's only international airport was closed this afternoon. Reporters flew to Bloemfontein, in South Africa, and drove about an hour to the main frontier post at Maseru, where a road and rail bridge crosses the Caledon River. South African border guards hurried the reporters through, moving them ahead of about 50 vehicles waiting to be searched before they entered Lesotho soldiers told reporters they could move about Maseru but should not to leave the city.

In Maseru, youths climbed up gov ernment buildings, pulled down Lesotho flags and tore them to shreds to show support for the military

Agnes Molapo, 26, said Jonathan had allowed the armed Youth League of his Basotho National Party to "torture people for nothing" and "to prevent free elections."

"Maybe things will be better now. she said. "Our prime minister used to speak unnecessary things, always insulting South Africa." She said she hoped-the new government would work better with South Africa so supplies got through to Lesotho

The Lesotho radio announcement broadcast about 6 a.m. after martial music, said, 'This step (the coup) has been taken to restore peace and national reconciliation, which has been a problem of politicians in Lesotho.

The whole nation is urged to cooperate and avoid unnecessary

It said a military council and the top civil servants in government ministries would run the govern ment for now, and that "the police and foreign companies should carry out their activities as if nothing has

In Pretoria, national South African police headquarters said border searches Thursday on a train waiting to enter Lesotho found a box containing Soviet-made mines, grenades and demolition charges of types used by the ANC

Lesotho has claimed that members of the ANC, which is fighting for black rule in South Africa, live in Lesotho, but are not permitted to

Lesotho radio had reported Sunday that four paramilitary soldiers were killed Friday in a shootout that began when they refused to turn in their weapons. Two days earlier, soldiers had surrounded government offices and rumors of a coup had swept the country. The information minister later attributed the Wednesday incident to a bomb

Residents of Maseru contacted by telephone by The Associated Press said earlier that they heard intermit tent automatic weapons fire near the Makoanyane paramilitary barracks on the edge of the city late Sunday.

The 3,000-member force under Lekhanya's command fulfills military and police functions in Lesotho. In Cape Town, South African For eign Minister R.F. Botha told reporters Sunday that Jonathan was "the greatest destabilizing factor" in Nine people, including six ANC members, were killed in a commando raid in Maseru Dec. 20. South Africa denied Lesotho charges that it

Midland police officers M.L. Bailey, left, and Bob Glover try out the new blue uniforms the city recently purchased. The switch from brown to blue uniforms marked the first change in colors since 1949 or 1950.

Midland officers to be in the blue

From Staff Reports

Thirty-five years ago, dust storms were more of the norm and Midland was a "browner" town. That was when the city selected brown tones for police uniforms. Last week, the police department turned blue, as in the "Hill Street Blues" television show. Approval to change the uniforms came last summer from the City Council. Police Chief Wayne Gideon said cost of the changeover amounted to $74,000. This is the first uniform change since 1949 or 1950," said Gideon. 'There were a lot of sandstorms and dust back then. The tan color was much more functional.

In recent years, the public has come to identify a police officer with the color navy, and particularly from the successful TV series, "Hill Street Blue." If the officer wasn't wearing blue, he didn't seem to have the same impact. In addition to selecting the fabric and design, the police department also had new shoulder patches designed which denote aspects of life about Midland.

Uniforms aren't the only change coming for the police de-partment. Gideon said the cars purchased in the future will be white with the same emblem on the side. Currently, most of the cars are in the same tone as the old uniforms — brown. The old uniforms aren't being tossed out in the garbage. Gideon said they will be sold to smaller police and sheriff's departments, with one shipment already going

Former hostages still bear scars of time held in Iran

SACRAMENTO, Calif. (AP) Since their return to the United States, they have marked the normal milestones of life - marriage, parenthood, divorce and career

After five years, some of the Americans held hostage in Iran for 444 days still bear the scars of their captivity. Victor Tomseth is uncomfortable if he's in a room without a view of the outside; Robert Blucker won't register to vote because of fear that he might be confined to a small room for jury duty. 'No doubt there's been some psy chic damage," says Blucker, a former embassy economics officer who is retired from the foreign service. But most of the emotional problems, if any, came soon after the hostages were released and were resolved through therapy or, in several cases, talking about their experiences in speeches and lectures, some of the ex-hostages say.

One thing a lot of us learned is that we don't know very much about how people react to stress," said John Limbert, who was political officer at the embassy in Iran and is now the No. 2 official at the American embassy in the African nation of Dtibouti.

When we got (released) they showed us a film about how people react to stress, and there were psychologists predicting all kinds of ways we would react." Limbert said. 'It scared...our families. They thought we were going to be zombies. And all that proves is the experts don't know.

Of the 52 Americans who were imprisoned for all 444 days, 51 are still alive, the Sacramento Bee said Sunday. One, William Keough, 55, died of Lou Gehrig's disease last Nov. 11.

The Bee located all but three of the 51 who were released Jan. 20. 1981, and interviewed 35 of them for several articles published Sunday. The experience changed them, some former hostages say. "My wife is fond of saying that one Mike Kennedy went to Iran and another came back. She prefers the one that came back," says retired foreign service officer Moorehead Kennedy. "We both grew.

Said William Royer Jr., a U.S. Information Agency employee, "I learned a great deal about myself. I gained a lot of confidence and reassurance about meeting the vicissitudes of life. Perhaps because of that, I'm a little more complacent, far more appreciative of the simple things, the small beauties in life."
Several of the hostages are still bitter that the United States did not make an early effort to rescue them or punish their captors.

We wished something would have happened right away. We thought about it every day," said Rodney Sickmann, a former Marine sergeant who is now a draft beer technician for a brewery in St. Louis.

There were times I wished they would have nuked Tehran because we were ready to die," said Phillip Ward, now a communications instructor for the State Department. But, he said, "Cooler heads prevailed.

Michael Howland, an administrator at the U.S. consulate in Frankfurt, West Germany, said, "The Tehran hostage crisis was well-managed. We had only limited options available to us. I'm grateful that it was done the way it was done. We're all still alive

Robert Ode, the oldest ex-hostage at age 70, says he hopes Americans have "learned something" from the Iran experience.

The thing we should be doing, whether it's in a country where there's terrorism or not, is to try and understand the people," said Ode, who is retired in Sun City West, Ariz. 'Not everyone thinks or acts like

Eagles' auxiliary national president in Midland in support of High Sky

"Helping children is really my ma jor thing," she said. Ms. Spahn, who lives in Rockville, Md., on Sunday visited Midland's High Sky Children's Ranch, which is one of the fraternal order's national projects. The Eagles' support for High Sky is a project of the Eagles' women's auxiliary. High Sky is a home for about 30 boys and girls who experienced abuse and neglect in their former family roles. Youngsters are accepted into the ranch from ages 6 to 17 and live there through their high-school years. The residents live in five cottages.

A Bahrain-based news agency quoted reliable sources in North Yemen today as saying President Ali Nasser Mohammed had returned to war-torn South Yemen and that his forces were in control of most of the pro-Soviet country.

The Gulf News Agency said the sources in San'a, North Yemen's capital, indicated loyalists had assumed control of the South Yemeni capital of Aden, while rebels led by former President Abdul-Fattah Ismail were 'entrenched in two provinces."

Fighting between Marxist factions in the country on the Arabian Peninsula's southern tip broke out on Jan. 13, apparently after a coup attempt by hardliners opposed to Mohammed's reported desire to liberalize the economy and improve relations with pro-Western Arab countries.

On Sunday, the Gulf News Agency said a radio station which claimed to be transmitting from Aden on behalf of an unidentified new leadership broadcast a statement indicating the rebels had ousted the president. It quoted the radio as accusing Mohammed of irresponsibility and dictatorship, and saying he had tried to "physically liquidate" members of the ruling Yemeni Socialist Party's Political Bureau and undermine state institutions.

Today, however, the Gulf News

Agency said its San'a sources indicated the the rebel station was operating from the northern province of Lahej, and not from Aden.

Mohammed was reported Satur-day to have flown to the Marxist African nation of Ethiopia from Aden. A radio station in Addis Ababa, the Ethiopian capital, said in a broadcast monitored in London that Mohammed had left Addis Ababa for "home" Sunday following a "stopover." In Tel Aviv, radio and television monitor Mickey Gurdus said he picked up a conversation in which the pilot of a small aircraft told airport authorities he had "a very important person" aboard. Gurdus said the plane landed in Ta'izz in North Yemen, about 20 miles from the South Yemen border.

Persian Gulf-based Arab diplomatic sources said Mohammed was to have flown from Ethiopia to San'a for talks with North Yemen's president, Ali Abdullah Saleh, and Palestine Liberation Organization chairman Yasser Arafat, both of whom have called for an end to the fighting. There was no official confirmation South Yemen's government announced Jan. 13 that Ismail; the vice chairman of the Presidium, Ali Antar; Local Administration Minister Ali al-Biadh, and ranking party member Ali al-Shayie had been executed after an abortive coup in which Mohammed reportedly survived an assassination attempt.

But a radio station, apparently op-erated by the rebels and broadcasting on the frequency of official Aden Radio, today said Ismail continued to lead the rebellion by some military units against Mohammed.

"Abdul-Fattah Ismail is still alive," said the broadcast, monitored in Bahrain. The radio also denied that the three other alleged masterminds of a coup attempt had been

Citing an unidentified official of the Yemeni Socialist Party, the radio claimed that it was Mohammed who tried to "liquidate" the four leaders along with Defense Minister Saleh Muslih at a Jan. 13 party meeting. 'Ali Nasser Mohammed fled Aden

The yacht took about 350 refugees of 42 nationalities to Djibouti on the East African coast Friday and Saturday.

FBI may get responsibility for East Bloc defectors

WASHINGTON (AP) — The White House may transfer primary responsibility for East bloc defectors to the FBI following what officials say was the CIA's mishandling of former Soviet KGB agent Vitaly Yurchenko. A senior White House officical and several outside experts said the proposed expanded role for the FBI is one of a variety of measures under consideration to entice potential defectors and to avoid another embarrassment similar to the Yurchenko

The options include granting highranking defectors an automatic permanent income, reducing the five-to 10-year waiting period for the conferral of American citizenship and the creation of a "think tank" comprised exclusively of defectors, the sources said would provide a pool of wisdom on which government policymakers could draw.

Such an institution, they said,

The procedures for dealing with defectors have been under review for some time and were given impetus last November when Yurchenko. who defected in July, fled from his CIA handlers to the Soviet Embassy. He returned to Moscow four days

'Nobody could have handled that case worse than the CIA," said Donald Jameson, a former CIA official who has dealt extensively with Yurchenko himself maintained he was abducted, drugged, tortured and held incommunicado. Others have said Yurchenko may have been a KGB plant and that his actions were aimed all along at embarrassing the CIA. But the prevailing view for reasons of his own.

A White House official, speaking privately last week, called the proposed shift of responsibilities to the FBI "a great move." He said defectors invariably have been able to establish much closer rapport with FBI personnel compared with CIA

White House spokesman Edward Djerejian acknowledged that the procedures for dealing with defectors were being reviewed but he declined comment on the options under consideration. FBI and CIA spokesmen refused to discuss the

Sen. Malcolm Wallop, R-Wyo., who has taken a special interest in the defector issue, said the CIA has among government and outside ex- made defector resettlement a "deadperts is that Yurchenko was a bona- end career assignment." He advoide defector who decided to return cates giving FBI the leading role for dealing with defectors.

Several other experts, who spoke on the condition that they not be identified, said a permanent income for defectors would be the best way to compensate them for the valuable information they provide the government

Because of CIA reluctance to provide a lifetime income to most defectors, their principal fear is that "they will fall off the economic ladder, one observer said.

He said one defector who had provided extremely useful information to the CIA was at the point of fleeing to South America because of his disgust with the agency's refusal to give him an assured income.

Nicolae Horodinca, a Romanian defector, expressed profound disillusionment with the CIA, contending the agency broke promises to provide him with a job, a house, life insurance and medical insurance.

The CIA makes zombies of defectors," said Horodinca, who has had no contact with the agency in more than four years.

Vladimir Sakharov, a Soviet defector, said the CIA repeatedly ignored his academic accomplishments and sent him to a motel management school. After the school went bankrupt, the CIA recommended he sell shoes, clothes or cars, he said.

Sakharov broke with the CIA three years ago and said he was doing well on his own. He lectures frequently and is writing a book.

Another Soviet defector, Yelena Metrikhina, said her experience indicates FBI personnel are far more sensitive than CIA officers. Jameson said the CIA had urged she become a secretary after defecting even though she is an "authentically brilliant woman.' Ignoring the CIA's advice, Ms. Me-trikhina attended Wharton School of Business, completing her studies well ahead of time while caring for her two children, Jameson said. Asked for comment, the CIA said it never discusses its treatment of defectors. At present, the CIA has statutory responsibility for defectors but FBI personnel often become involved on a case-by-case basis.

According to one analyst, the bureau is much better equipped than the CIA to assist defectors who settle outside Washington because of the FBI's nationwide responsibilities and superior manpower.

"He wanted to turn back," Jackson recalled. "But he knew he had to go on, to do God's will. So he spent his last birthday alive organizing a demonstration for justice, for feeding the hungry, for empowerment."

King was shot to death in April. 1968, in Memphis, Tenn., where he had been leading demonstrations on behalf of striking city sanitation workers.

Tutu, the keynote speaker at an international conference honoring King, said that if the South African government does not change its racial policies, he would lead "a campaign of civil disobedience against unjust laws." Our people are peaceful to a fault," he said, "We are stupid, for we keep going up against an instransigent government. They use tear gas, builets, dogs and whips." A train derailment in Washington state Sunday forced organizers of a "Freedom Train" to switch to buses to carry 400 poor, elderly and handi-capped people to the state capital to-day for celebrations of King's birthday. Twenty-eight people were injured in the derailment.

In Buffalo, N.Y., vandals painted a bust of King white Sunday night, but city parks officials had the paint cleaned off by 9:30 a.m. today, in time for the holiday, police said.

An unidentified caller told police "white men are painting the statue," in Martin Luther King Park, authorities said this morning. A house-to-house check by police yielded no clues, police said.

Throughout Ohio, people gathered over the weekend at churches, schools and community centers for services to commemorate King's life.

King's cousin, the Rev. Joel King Jr., 34, a Columbus minister, told one gathering that the holiday should be a day when "we recommit ourselves as individuals to the cause of human rights and civil rights and do something to help the underprivileged. black and white."

Gonzalez not ready to quit after 25 years

SAN ANTONIO (AP) - U.S. Rep. Henry B. Gonzalez, in the midst of celebrating 25 years in Congress, says he's not about to throw in the towel any time soon.

"This is not a retirement party, I assure you," the Democrat told a capacity crowd of 1,200 supporters at a banquet honoring his service Satur-day night. "We have continued challenges ahead of us.'

Gonzalez, 69, was first elected to the 20th District seat in 1961 when incumbent Paul Kilday resigned to take a position on the U.S. Court of Military Appeals. He was the first Hispanic congressman from Texas, and he earlier was the first Hispanic state senator in the Legislature.

"Henry B. is what I consider a true public servant - a true legend in his own time," said Gov. Mark White, one of several dignitaries who gave tributes to the congressman.

Gonzalez, White said, represents "the true essence of constituent

Other dignitaries on hand for the banquet were U.S. House Majority Leader Jim Wright, Texas Supreme Court Justice Raul Gonzalez, State Treasurer Ann Richards, Attorney General Jim Mattox and San Antonio Mayor Henry Cisneros.

The keynote speaker was New York Gov. Mario Cuomo, who likened his own background to that of

"I don't think the view of the world I had growing up in South Jamaica, Queens, New York, was any different than Henry Gonzalez's was growing up on the West Side of San Antonio." Cuomo said.

The governor said both he and Gonzalez went to schools where the language was different from what was spoken at home

"I came here tonight thinking how well those two boys have done," Cuomo said. "Henry Gonzalez has fought to make the American dream available to everyone.

"We reject the idea that America has used herself up," he added. "Tonight we salute Henry Gonzalez's decision to fight for inclusion. He is forever taking up the cause of the outsider, the immigrant, the oppressed.

Cuomo gained national promi-nence in 1984, when he gave a stirring keynote address at the Democratic National Convention. He has been mentioned as a possible presidential candidate in 1988, and he said he has not ruled out that

Cuomo, who has said earlier he plans to run for re-election for governor this year, denied that Saturday night's appearance in San Antonio was an attempt to gain national Rather, he said he agreed to speak at the event as a favor to Jim Wright. And in his speech Saturday, Cuomo made no mention of his political aspirations.

Cisneros, who said he normally would be expected to introduce Cuomo as possibly the next presi-dent of the United States, said Cuomo asked him not to.

But the mayor warned the discarded introductory statement "might very well be true."

Murder trial of principal expected to last two weeks

LIVINGSTON (AP) - Prosecutors say they will present circumstantial evidence to prove a former junior high school principal fatally shot a football coach who was a rival for the school secretary's love. The murder trial of Hurley Fontenot, former principal at Hull-Daisetta Woodson Junior High School, starts with opening arguments today and is expected to last about two weeks, attorneys and prosecutors Fontenot, 48, is charged in the shooting death of Billy Mac Fleming, 38, who coached football and taught math at the Liberty County school. Fontenot is free on $50,000 bond and has pleaded innocent to the killing.

Jurors were seated in the case last week after State District Judge John Martin rejected a defense request to move the trial because of extensive Polk County District Attorney Peter Speers said prosecutors will use circumstantial evidence to prove Fontenot killed Fleming.

But defense attorney Dick De-Guerin, of Houston, advised jurors during jury selection to "be more doubting when considering circum-stantial evidence."

Fleming was last seen alive April 12. Ten days later, a berry picker found his body in a densely forested area near Segno in Polk County. He had been shot twice in the back of the head, authorities said.

Prosecutors say they believe Flem-ing was killed in Liberty County and the body was moved.

Authorities allege Fontenot be-came jealous when he learned Flem-ing was seeing the school secretary, Laura Nugent, whom both men dated and hoped to marry.

Fontenot told investigators he gave the coach a ride to his truck after school April 12, then went to pick his daughter up at a Houston airport. When his daughter did not arrive, Fontenot said, he went to horse races in Louisiana.

'Hunger county' residents angry over report

VERNON (AP) — Retired ranch and Bryan Standlee says "nothing poor county," Standlee said. "I'd have to be pretty darn hungry to get hand Bryan Standlee says "nothing has ever kicked up as much dust" in Wilbarger County as the announce-ment that it's a place where people go hungry.

A report compiled by a Harvardbased research group and released Tuesday by the Harvard University School of Public Health and Physicians Task Force on Hunger, named Wilbarger as one of 150 "hunger counties" across the United States.

Texas has 29 hunger counties, the Hunger counties are those where

20 percent or more of the residents live below poverty level but at least one-third of the eligible participants don't receive food stamps, the report "That report made us mad. This is on food stamps.

Standlee's sentiments are reflective of those of many of the 16,000 residents of the largely rural county in far north central Texas.

While they acknowledge that there are people who need help, and some who could use more to eat, they resent being labeled a "hunger

"We may not live in as nice a house as some other people, but we're not going hungry," Mary Fanner said as she waited for a ride to work in front of her small home in a low-income neighborhood in

Residents complain that the report ignored their efforts at taking care

"Here we are doing all of this stuff here. We think we are doing a great job. We are trying to provide any program that we can," Wilbarger County Judge Bob Arnold told the Fort Worth Star-Telegram.

And then, all of a sudden, your name is on a list that says there are a bunch of hungry people here. We have more human services providers than you can shake a stick at. Besides food stamps, food programs offered in Wilbarger County include the Meals-on-Wheels program that serves 62 people daily with another 10 to 12 on a waiting list; Red Cross; a meals programs provided by the local senior citizens group; and free and reduced lunch and breakfast programs at the school that serve about 870 students

The county also has a federal commodities subsidy program that provides cheese, butter and dried foods to about 1,000 people monthly; food closets provided by churches and the ministerial alliance; the Women, Infants and Children's Program; and the Salvation Army.

In addition, some private homebound programs serve some households.

"If someone needs help, all they have to do is ask," Arnold said. Barbara Evans, spokeswoman for the Department of Human Services, said that an average of 815 people in Wilbarger County receive food stamps every month. She said that more people are probably eligible, but there are many reasons they don't take them.

Anti-abortionist claims movement 'winning ground'

DALLAS (AP) - The head of a statewide anti-abortion organization told 2,000 protesters they are "winning ground" in the abortion controversy as the group marked the anniversary of the 1973 Supreme Court decision legalizing abortion.

"We're winning the war of public opinion and we're going to turn this thing around," said Bill Price, president of the Texas Coalition for Life. Anti-abortion protesters gathered Sunday at a central Dallas park to norate Sanctity of L proclaimed by President Reagan, and to observe the anniversary of the Jan. 22, 1973, Supreme Court decision legalizing abortions.

"There's strength in numbers," said Linda Trammell, a member of the Collin County Right To Life Group. "There are a lot of us that believe in sanctity of life, contrary to popular opinion. The sky is beautiful and that makes us come alive."

The demonstration ended with a march to Presbyterian Hospital in north Dallas, during which protesters carried 1,300 plywood crosses. Price said the crosses symbolized abortions performed at the hospital

Protesters chanted "abortion is murder," and sang religious songs while gathered outside yellow cords that roped off the hospital's grounds. Dallas police had to turn away some protesters as they began marching up one of the hospital's driveways. The hospital had been targeted by the group last year, but declined to change its abortion policies despite threats of continued protests at the

As protesters marched to the hospital Sunday, four or five pro-choice demonstrators occasionally debated with the anti-abortionists.

"I don't think they influence public policy," said Kurt Albach, a pro-choice demonstrator. "For the numbers they have here, they are still in a minority...I don't think Americans approve of their sort of fanaticism.'

The rally was one of several held across the nation marking the Roe vs. Wade decision that legalized abortions. Texas rallies were held in Fort Worth and Tyler Sunday, and in Amarillo, Austin and Beaumont

Price quoted the vice president of Planned Parenthood in New York as saying anti-abortionists' "skills have increased, have become more sophisticated" and "are rapidly recruiting additional followers, particularly the

He told protesters that if they are "tired of the legislative door being slammed" on them, top-ranking Democratic officials would have to be voted out of office.

"Do you want a governor who says the killing of an unborn child is a matter of choice?" Price asked protesters. "Then Mark White must go."

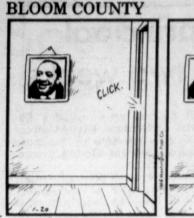

Price also criticized State Attorney General Jim Mattox, saying he harasses centers that counsel women who may be facing an unwanted Officials at Presbyterian Hospital would not comment on Sunday's demonstration.

Attorney General candidate Ed Walsh and 199th District Court Judge John Roach of Collin County both piedged to try to change state abortion laws.

Other politicians attending the rally included Sen. John Leedom, R. Dallas, Rep. Bill Cerverha, R-Richardson, state representative candidate Glenn Repp and Fifth Congressional District senatorial candidate John Carter.

Q.2 - Both vulnerable, as South you hold: ♥K10542 ♦ Q96 ◆ A765 47

The bidding has proceeded: North East South West 1 + Pass 1 0 1 + Pass Pass What do you bid now?

A. - Partner has shown a minimum opening bid with no particular liking for hearts. Under the circumstances, there is no need for you to do anything rash. A jump to three clubs would be game-forcing. Bid two clubs; the very fact that you are acting freely shows a hand that is better than minimum for your first action.

Q.3-As South, vulnerable, you hold: ◆QJ9543 ♥K10652 ♦Q

The bidding has proceeded: North East South 1 + What action do you take?

A. - Only two calls come into consideration: pass and double. What you can't do is bid two hearts; that would be game-forcing. You could double one spade, but the auction is unlikely to die there-both West and your partner are short in spades, so one is bound to run. Pass, and see how the auction develops.

Q.4-Neither vulnerable, as South you hold:

◆763 ♥KQ9542 ♦A8 ◆72 The bidding has proceeded: South West North East Pass 1 + Pass 1 0 Pass What do you bid now?

A.-Be careful, this looks like a misfit. You have no liking for either of partner's suits, and he could easily be short in hearts. You should bid your suit again, but we prefer two hearts to a jump to three. You have a maximum for a simple rebid, but we don't think you can make game unless partner bids once more.

Q.5 - Both vulnerable, as South you hold:

◆AJ954 ♥72 ♦Q6 ◆K987 The bidding has proceeded: West North East South 20 20 What action do you take?

A.-To overcall vulnerable at the two-level, partner must have a reasonable hand. If he has a spade fit, your combined holding could produce a game. Bid two spades. You have a safety factor in that, if yor partner doesn't like your suit, he can retreat to his suit and you have a useful holding for him there.

Abzug testing waters for comeback

WHITE PLAINS, N.Y. (AP) -Bella Abzug is testing the waters for a congressional comeback despite failing to get her party's backing.

The 65-year-old lawyer, who once represented a district in New York City, said she'll decide by late February or early March whether to try for a seat repre-senting suburban Westchester

The seat was held for 16 years by Rep. Richard Ottinger, a Democrat whose assistant, Oren Teicher, lost to Republican Joseph DioGuardi in 1984. The party's executive committee chose Teicher, 36, for a rematch, a decision Mrs. Abzug feels was hasty and ill-advised. She said she was commissioning polls and attending Westchester functions "trying to determine for myself whether it's worth it" to enter the race. The county Democratic Party Chairman, Richard Weingarten, said, "Just because she has greater recognition doesn't mean she's a better candidate."

EATONTON, Ga. (AP) - Alice Walker got a grand homecoming for a screening of a movie based on her Pulitzer Prize-winning novel "The Color Purple." The sharecropper's daughter and her relatives rode limousines and walked a red carpet to the theater where she and other blacks once had to sit in the balcony. "It's wonderful to be home," said the 41-year-old author, who

Walker lives in California, as she was welcomed by about 1,000 people at a reception and two screenings Saturday.

The book presents a harsh picture of racism and family brutality in the middle Georgia countryside of the early 1900s. Ms. Walker's sister, Ruth Walker Hood of Atlan-ta, planned the event to raise college scholarship funds for Putnam County public high school

MESCAL, Ariz. (AP) - Singer Willie Nelson, who helped organize last September's FarmAid concert to help the nation's farmers, says he's now planning a benefit for native Americans.

"I've been thinking about doing something for the Indians for a long time," Nelson said. "They are constantly mistreated. I think it's about time we started treating them like citizens, like the original Americans that they are.

Nelson is here in this small town near Tucson to film the made-for-television movie "Stagecoach" along with fellow country singers Waylon Jennings, Kris Kristofferson, Johnny Cash and John Schneider.

All five musicians have parts in the second remake of the classic western and are writing a verse apiece for the movie's theme song.

NEW YORK (AP) - Max McGee says he was so sure he wouldn't get to play in Superbowl I that he stayed out all night before the game entertaining "a very nice girl from Chicago."

McGee, who caught a pass for the Green Bay Pack ers to score the first Superbowl touchdown reflected on that game and told Time magazine, "If I'd known it was going to get this big, I'd have kept the football.

"I was over the hill," he said, but Boyd Dowler fell injured "and the next thing I knew Bart Starr was audibling a quick little post pattern, my wakeup

TAFT, Calif. (AP) — Nearly 100 celebrities, including Kenny Rogers and Diana Ross, joined 1,200 townspeople in forming a mile-long human chain for a video promoting the "Hands Across America" project for hunger relief.

The three-minute video is to be played during the Super Bowl pre-game show Sunday. It touts the plan of Ken Kragen, organizer of USA For Africa's successful "We Are The World" album and video for starving Africans, to raise up to $100 million for America's hungry by linking hands across the nation

Residents of Taft, a town of 6,800 in the San Joaquin Valley oil fields 100 miles northwest of Los Angeles, took snapshots Saturday, lined up for autographs and chatted with the entertainers.

"I feel excited," said postman Don Gillespie, who held hands in line with Catherine Oxenberg of Despite staggering logistics, Kragen said he was confident the more than 5.4 million people needed for the nationwide human chain will be found. The estimated 100 million people watching the Super Bowl will be asked to participate along the 4,135-mile route and donate a minimum of $10.

Project director Fred Droz said Taft was chosen for the promotional yideo because it's "a good Amer-

NEW YORK (AP) - A 29-year-old man has been arrested and charged with burglarizing Yoko Ono's Central Park West apartment, police said today.

Omar Travers, of Manhattan, was arrested Sunday night for breaking into Ms. Ono's apartment through a fire escape window Sunday and leaving a note with his name and address and a photograph of himself, Sgt. Raymond O'Donnell, a police spokes-

O'Donnell said nothing was reported missing from the apartment in The Dakota, a posh condominium at 1 West 72nd St.

Ms. Ono, widow of former Beatle John Lennon, woke up when she heard a noise at 4 a.m. Sunday and found the note and a photograph. She then informed police of the break-in.

Dr. King's legacy

t's ironic but entirely fitting, in a sense, that the decision to honor the Rev. Dr. Martin Luther King Jr. with a federal holiday was marked by a degree of national strife. Strife fuels the fires of change, tempering men and women to the challenge before them.

It was so in Dr. King's day, as he led marches in the civil rights movement, and it remains so

The first national holiday in King's memory was today, although the actual date of his birth was Jan. 15, 1929.

In 1983 Congress approved legislation making King's birthday a national holiday, but only after a period of bitter debate. Anti-King forces, led by Sen. Jesse Helms, R-N.C., referred to the late civil rights leader's crusade as "action-oriented Marxism."

It's true a degree of animosity remains because of some of King's actions, including his harsh criticism of the Vietnam War. But his place in American history cannot be denied. His campaign to break down the barriers holding back black Americans and his dream of equal justice and equal opportunity for all people served to push forward the advance of civil rights in the 1960s.

But Dr. King should not be regarded only as a hero of black people, any more than George Washington should be regarded only as the father of the white man's country. Dr. King envisioned a world in which a person's race and skin color was not a determinant of their success or opportunity, but rather that would only be determined by their individual abilities and the JACK ANDERSON quality of their character.

He dreamed of a color-free world in which people could compete equally and share together all the joys and successes

That should be not a "dream" but a reality for every American. That is the gift Dr. King left behind and should be the torch the American people now bear in his

Tough crime report

he President's Commission on Organized Crime had a surprise in its report this

It turned on its creator, rebuking the Reagan administration for doing business with Teamsters Union President Jackie Presser.

The commission faulted the administration for maintaining close ties to the 2-million-member union, which the commission said is controlled by organized crime. The report also condemned long delays in a Department of Justice investigation of Presser.

The relationship doesn't look good, the report said. There is concern that Presser's endorsement of Reagan in the 1980 and 1984 political campaigns influenced the conduct of the investigation of the labor leader.

Presser was subpoenaed as a witness not long ago in the trial of five reputed crime bosses in Kansas City. The subpoena was suspended at the request of defense attorneys, however, when Presser's lawyer said the labor leader would refuse to answer questions because of possible self-incrimination.

The Teamsters Union was expelled from AFL-CIO membership in 1957 because of crime ties. AFL-CIO President Lane Kirkland blames the government for allowing corruption within the labor movement to continue. "Crooks hurt us," Kirkland said. "We're entitled to protection from them from our law enforcement authorities.'

Presser was a witness before the crime commission during its two-year probe. He was asked if he had received payments from a mob leader. His answer was, "I respectfully decline to answer on grounds of the Fifth Amendment.'

Previous Teamster presidents who took refuge in the Fifth Amendment when asked about crime ties were Roy L. Williams, James Hoffa and Dave Beck. All were sentenced to prison for their crimes. The union has a long history of dealing with the mobs and loaning large sums from its pension funds for crimerelated activities.

The Reagan administration should take heed of the commission's report and act accordingly. That means quit playing footsie with the Teamsters.

Another View:

Getting off center

he Soviet Union has some thinking-through to do of its own. It is too early to know whether Soviet leader Mikhail S. Gorbachev's proposal to eliminate all nuclear weapons by the year 2000 is a public-relations stroke or a serious bid to begin, as he put it, ridding "the Earth of nuclear weapons."

The place to begin finding out is Geneva, where U.S. and Soviet arms-control negotiators meet today for the first time since the November summit meeting. Unfortunately, the Soviet position against "Star Wars" research is as rigid as President Reagan's position in its favor - a barrier to bargaining that remains even after Reagan's positive response to the Gorbachev proposals.

Gorbachev's proposal Wednesday came in three parts: Over the next five to eight years the Soviet Union and the United States would reduce by half the nuclear arms that can reach each other's territory, with each side retaining no more than 6,000 warheads aboard strategic delivery vehicles. Beginning in 1990 the other nuclear powers -Great Britain, France and China would be brought into the process. In 1995 all five powers would start eliminating all nuclear weapons. He also called for a ban on chemical weapons, and said that Moscow wants agreements to reduce conventional, non-nuclear weapons.

If world statesmen could always be taken at their word, this would be an immensely encouraging development. Reagan, too, has expressed his interest in relieving the world of the threat of nuclear extinction. But people who are skeptical that the president's policies are in concert with his avowed aims are likely to be just as skeptical of Gorbachev's grand plan.

Reagan has called for a 50 percent reduction in strategic nuclear weapons, similar to Phase One of the Gorbachev proposal, but there are fundamental differences over where the cuts should be made.

Arnold Horelick, director of the Rand-University of California, Los Angeles, Center for Study of Soviet Behavior, fears that Gorbachev is "basically taking the earlier Soviet proposal and wrapping it with pie in the sky"to add to domestic and European pressures on Reagan to see things the Soviet way.

Despite their skepticism, U.S. experts on the Soviet Union still think that Moscow really does want and need a period of mutual restraint in the arms race because of its serious economic difficulties. The question is whether the Soviets are willing to address the United States' genuine security concerns instead of merely maneuvering for

That is essentially what the Geneva negotiations are about. Common sense calls for a U.S.-Soviet agreement setting a boundary between allowable research on strategic defense and prohibited development.

CHARLEY REESE Providing for defense essential

Monday, January 20, 1986 Midland Reporter-Telegram

n view of the hot air being generated by politicians over the level of defense spending in the next budget, let's put this issue in perspective. Let's assume you have a defective heart which will kill you un-less it is corrected by surgery. Now, let's look at three scenarios: (1) the only heart surgeon available wants $50,000 which is fraudulently high; (2) the operation costs $2,000 but you only have $1,000; and (3) the operation costs $2,000 and you have $4000 but you'd rather spend it on a vacation trip to Paris.

Question: Under any of the three scenarios, does your heart miracu-lously repair itself? Of course it

Given the missions assigned to it and the capabilities of our enemies, the armed forces need a certain level of weapons, ammunition, fuel, equipment and personnel. This need exists even if every defense contractor in America is an outrageous crook. It exists whether Congress balances the budget or not. It exists even if we would rather spend the money on Medicare.

That's so because need is largely determined by the external threat. The Soviet Union does not base its military strategy on our desire not to have to make any sacrifices.

The question of waste and fraud in defense procurement is irrelevant in determining and meeting this need for an adequate defense. If you need kidney dialysis, you need a kidney dialysis machine whether the machine manufacturer's profit is 5 percent or 80 percent.

I am not saying that waste and fraud should be ignored. I am just saying that defense needs and waste and fraud are two separate questions. You can't attack waste and fraud by buying fewer weapons and less ammunition.

Freezing or reducing the defense budget on the grounds it contains waste and fraud itself is a fraudulent approach.

Another wrong approach much favored by the Congress is compromise. For example, the military says it needs 100 MX missiles. Some Congressmen don't want any. Okay, we'll settle on 40. But 40 MX missiles do not have the same deterrent effect as 100. In buying weapons hali a loaf is not always better than no loaf. If six enemy soldiers are charging you, you need a minimum of six bullets not three. And you need them now - not two this year and two next

I'm not arguing for the MX, only saying that if your best professional estimate was that 100 MX were needed, then Congress should either give them 100 or none at all. An inade quate number of weapons is a waste.

True military needs are determined basically by two factors: The missions assigned to the military and the capacity of the enemy. Civilian politicians determine the missions; the enemy determines his own capability. Therefore the honest and rational way to reduce defense costs is to reduce the number of missions. It is dishonest and irresponsible to keep the missions but short the means to accomplish them. Such a dastardly policy guarantees defeat in war or, if we are saved by miracles, an unnecessary loss of life.

In terms of nuclear deterrent, you either have it or you don't. Nobody tries to deter war. You either deter it or you fight it. A mix of strategic weapons insufficient to deter war is a 100 percent waste. Two points to keep in mind. Your deterrent is what you start with minus what is taken out by Soviet defenses. Whatever is left is your deterrent. The other point is that whatever is left must deter the Soviets. What counts is what they would consider an unacceptable loss - not what some tender-heart in the United States would consider unacceptable.

In matters of deterrence, it's better to err on the side of too much for the goal is to stop even a Soviet leader with bad judgement from thinking he can get away with a first strike. As it turned out, Hitler was wrong when he thought he could take the Soviet Union with only 190 divisions. That was no consolation however, to the millions who died as result of his flawed judgement. Finally, keep in mind that the Constitution places responsibility for defense squarely on Congress. The President is only the commander in chief of whatever, if any, forces Congress provides. The Secretary of Defense is only a president's aide. The Defense Department was created by History's full of disasters that occurred because people whose job it was to provide for defense were stupid or irresponsible.

Roadbed washout cause of Amtrak derailment

DU PONT, Wash. (AP) - An Amtrak train carrying more than 200 people jumped the track on a stretch weakened by heavy rain and "every-body flew forward," causing at least 28 injuries, officials said.

"We took the train because I'm afraid of flying," she said. "Now, I'm afraid of trains, too."

The nine-car Coast Starlight, en route from Los Angeles to Seattle, jumped the Burlington Northern tracks about 4:30 p.m. Sunday, in a steep, wooded area about 45 miles south of Seattle, said Howard Kallio, a Burlington Northern spokesman. The region was drenched by heavy rain last week. Sue Martin, an Amtrak spokeswoman in Washington, D.C., said the treated at hospitals, most for neck and head injuries, she said. A 92-year-old British Columbia

The derailment was caused by "a washout of the roadbed underneath" the tracks, Burlington Northern spokesman T. Warnstadt said. Most of the injuries occurred in the sudden lurch as the front cars derailed, Warnstadt said.

There was a sudden stop and everybody flew forward," said passenger Steven Nieker, 17, of Chicago. "A lot of people were getting thrown around. It wasn't fun. There was an awful lot of confusion.

Two pay TV services begin scrambling satellite signals

WASHINGTON (AP) - The free ride may be over for people who have dish antennas in their back yards and receive shows that cable TV subscribers pay to watch.

Known as earth stations, they pick up television signals bounced off satellites 23,000 miles overhead. They can get more than 100 channels, and until recently none of the dish owners had to pay to watch any of them.

But last week, Home Box Office and Cinemax, two of the nation's leading pay-TV services, extended their signal scrambling from 12 hours to 24 hours a day. Dish owners who want to continue watching HBO must buy a decoding device, which sells at a suggested list price of $396, and pay HBO $12.95 a month for the

More than two dozen other programmers — includ-ing the MTV rock video channel, Cable News Network, the ESPN sports channel, the Nickelodeon children's program service and The Disney Channel — may scramble by the end of the year. Also, CBS is planning and NBC is considering a plan to scramble feeds to their affiliate stations. 'It's pretty much a foregone conclusion that scrambling is the wave of the future," said Robert Caird, vice president of direct broadcasting for HBO.

But the estimated 1.7 million owners of satellite dishes say the future is coming too quickly, without any regulations to assure that their skies won't go black and that they won't be gouged.

Dish owners and manufacturers are concerned that the cable industry is trying to control the earth station market, which could result in limiting program choices and raising costs for dish owners.

Many people bought their satellite dishes because they live in rural areas not penetrated by broadcast signals and where cable service was not available. Some bought them because they wanted a greater selection of channels than was offered by the cable company serving their

HBO and other programming services say they need to encrypt their signals to protect themselves not from the backyard dishes but from hotels, condominiums and other commercial services that are profiting from their product.

We think the industry is losing $500 million a year on illegal, commercial use of our signals," said Tola Murphy-Baran, a spokeswoman for Showtime and The Movie Channel.

Anguished horse trainers mourn thoroughbreds

ELMONT, N.Y. (AP) — Anguished horse trainers mourned the loss of 45 thoroughbreds suffocated by an early morning fire at a Belmont Park Racetrack barn that left the animals looking "like they're asleep," a fire official said.

A barn sprinkler system broke down late last week and was to be repaired by today, officials said. Track officials said the barn was worth $1 million and the horses were valued at up to $5 million.

"I'm so sorry they had to go, and go that way," Mike Daggett, a trainer who lost eight horses, said Sunday as firefighters drenched the twisted ruins of the wooden structure destroyed by the fire.

Ammonia lingers after blast

HUNTINGBURG, Ind. (AP) - The stinging stench of ammonia hovered around a turkey processing plant today as city officials counted their blessings that an explosion forcing the evacuation of hundreds didn't become a disaster.

One worker was injured and 500 to 800 people were forced to leave their homes for about 45 minutes Sunday evening after a leaking, 6,000-gallon tank of anhydrous ammonia spread a lethal cloud near the Farbest Foods plant, officials said.

"If that (the tank) would have ruptured, we would have had a real problem on our hands," Hunting-burg Fire Chief Marvin Boeglin said. "It would have been a real disaster."

Winds pushed an unknown amount of anhydrous ammonia, which causes a burning irritation to skin and eyes, southeasterly over the city of about 5,000 after the explosion about 7:20 p.m. EST.

From Staff and Wire Reports

Continuing warm temperatures and partly cloudy skies are in the forecast for the Permian Basin for Tuesday with the high predicted to reach near 80 according to the National Weather Service at Midland

Regional Airport.
Tonight will see fair skies and the low only reaching into the lower 50s with southerly winds at five to 10 mph. The winds will shift to the south-southeast at five to 10 mph on Tuesday morning and will strengthen to 10 to 20 mph in the afternoon.

STATE
Increasing cloudiness and slightly cooler temperatures are expected across Texas Tuesday, breaking the long bout of unseasonably warm temperatures.

But, forecasters say, the temperatures will not drop enough to make Texans believe winter has returned. Highs Tuesday will be about 5-10 degrees cooler than those expected today. Readings will be mostly in the 60s and 70s with a few areas in Northwest Texas to have highs in the 50s.

The increasing cloudiness will begin tonight after another day of record-breaking warm temperatures. Forecasters said readings today would reach into the 80s across portions of North Texas.

Dense fog was reported early to-day along lower sections of the Texas coast, prompting the National Weather Service to issue a travelers advisory for the Coastal Bend and the Lower Rio Grande Valley where visibility was reduced before dawn to between zero and one-eighth of a

Elsewhere across the state, skies were mostly clear early today.

NATION

A low pressure system over southern New Jersey sent snow into the eastern Ohio Valley today while much of the East had fog, rain and above-normal temperatures.

The northwest Plains had early-morning readings in the 30s to 40s, with a few scattered low 50s, and rainshowers were scattered along the central Pacific Coast. Rain, melting snow and ice jams caused flooding in western Pennsylvania, closing sections of several roads, and flooding was possible in western New York, the National Weather Service said.

By early today, 6 inches of snow fell on Seneca State Forest in Pocahontas County, W.Va; Huntington, W.Va. had 4 inches of snow; and south central Ohio had two to three

Chaps take aim on Wranglers

By TED BATTLES Sports Editor

Midland College already holds two victories over Odessa College, but Coach Jerry Stone isn't taking anything for granted when the teams meet at 7:30 p.m. tonight in the Langford Chaparral Center.

While the first two games were tournament finals- Midland and Odessa- this one counts in the Western Junior College Athletic Conference standings.

"Odessa is better than it was in those first two games. All those injured players are back and from the scores I've been seeing lately this won't be the same team," says Stone.
The Chaparrals, No. 2 ranked in the nation, bring a 19-0 record into the game. MC is 5-0 in WJCAC and with a 3-2 record, 12-7 for the season, this game carries a lot of significance for the Wranglers' conference

Both teams met Howard College last week and both triumphed, MC 74-65 and OC 81-75.

In the two previous meetings, the Chaps made a shambles of the Midland College tournament finals, 88-61, and a few weeks later posted a 73-56 win in the Odessa College finals.

They had lost some players to injury and we knew last fall they would be right up there at the top when the conference action got serious in January and February. They have some good players and every-one knows the Midland-Odessa series always produces good contests," Stone said.

"They not only have something to prove, but they have a psychological advantage over us.

In the recent Laredo tournament, OC lost to San Jacinto, the nation's third ranked team by 10 points.

This shapes up as a crucial week for the Chaps. Thursday MC goes to Snyder to play 16-6 Western Texas College, a 77-76 loser to MC in the Odessa tournament.

Greg Lazard leads OC in scoring with an 18.7 average and not only leads the Wranglers but the WJCAC in blocked shots. Lazard's presence under the boards is further emphasized by his 12.5 rebound average per game, which also leads the WJCAC.

Eric Chinn is second in assists, 7.0 game. MC's Ricky Grace leads the WJCAC in that department with

Heels survive Marquette fans

Associated Press

The North Carolina Tar Heels may be No. 1 in the hearts and minds of the voters in The Associated Press college basketball poll. In Milwaukee, though, they're clearly not a favorite with Marquette fans.

Carolina Coach Dean Smith and star guard Kenny Smith were hit in the head by thrown pennies while the undefeated Tar Heels were defeating the unranked Warriors 66-64 at the Milwaukee Arena. It was a distinctly different greeting than the Tar Heels received Saturday, when they opened the $33.8 million Dean Smith Studet Activities Center with a 95-92 victory over third-

On Saturday, 21,444 fans packed the new home of the Tar Heels, which was dedicated in Smith's name the night before. They saw Steve Hale score a career-high 28 points and Daugherty add 23 as Carolina handed Atlantic Coast Conference rival Duke its first loss.

Lady Bulldogs set Rebel snare

By ERIC SCHURER Sports Writer

They say it's lonely at the top, but Lee girls basketball coach Shirley Stephenson is enjoying the solitude right now. The last thing she wants to do is share the glory with her sister, Midland High coach Jane Young.

The Rebels are sitting atop the District 4-5A chase, undefeated at 8-0. The Bulldogs are just one game back, alone in second at 7-1. The two meet tonight in the second head-tohead clash of the season, this one at the MHS Gym in an 8 p.m. start.

A Rebel win and the rest of the district race could be nothing but a scrap for the second playoff spot. Already Lee has chalked up road wins over third place Abilene High, 6-2, and fourth place San Angelo, 44. The second half of the district schedule tends to favor the Rebs.

But if the Bulldogs could reverse the 42-38 decision the Rebels took at Lee Gym early in the season, the 'Dog' fight will be on. It would tie Lee and MHS at 8-1, and an AHS win over winless Abilene Cooper would leave the Eagles a single game behind at 7-2.

IT WOULD also begin to look painfully familiar to Stephenson, whose 1984-85 team also sprinted out to an 8-0 start, only to lose to MHS and begin a second half slump that cost the Rebels a trip to the playoffs.

"Lee is a very quick team, we will have to keep our poise to win it," MHS coach Young said. "But both teams will be up for the game, it doesn't take much for us to get them up for this one."

Both Tall City teams are coming off impressive district wins Friday night and both are playing as well as any team in the district. The Rebels slammed visiting Odessa High 68-40 to begin the second half of district play on a roll.

Likewise, the Bulldogs pounded on defending district champion Odessa Permian, 55-40, on the Panthers' home floor, running to their stath straight win.

I think both teams are at a good point right now," Young said. "Nei-ther team has any serious injuries, and both teams are really competitive against each other. I think it should take four quarters to determine it.'

MHS COUNTS on strong scoring from Amy Cumings and her 13.3 per game scoring average. But Cumings and the Bulldogs also lean on Nadine Hill (9.8) and Sebrenia Finch (8.5) to round out a the attack.

By contrast, Lee has survived all year with a five-players in, five-players out platoon system that gives Stephenson maximum production from 10 players. No Rebel averages in double figures, Becky White and Roz Eaden lead the way at 7.5 points per game, but all 10 regulars have hit double figures at least once. The Rebels average more than 57 points a game with their platoon system.

"It's been working OK for us," Stephenson said. "It keeps fresh people going all the time. And when either team is in there, I don't think we're losing that much. And usually one team will perform better than the

New England started its NFL playoff adventure with a 28-14 wild-card victory over the New York Jets at Giants Stadium in East Rutherford, N.J. The Bears coaching staff, however, sees New England's success on the road as a sign that the Patriots are a very good football team.

"They're the best team I've seen on film," said Bear Coach Mike Ditka.

Kind words, but they don't change the fact the Bears are heavily favored to beat the Cinderella Patriots. Only the Oakland Raiders, a 27-10 victor over Philadelphia in 1981 at the Superdome, emerged from the ranks of the wild-card teams to win a Super Bowl.

"Cinderella? What's that?" grumped Bears defensive coordinator Buddy Ryan. "They belong here. They won three games on the road."

With the Super Bowl often comes Super distractions in the way of an army of newsmen and the attractions of the host city, in this case New Orleans' famed Bourbon Street.

"It's a big time full of hoopla and lots of distractions," said New England's Greg Hawthorne, "but you've got to put it in perspective. You're there to play ball and not to get too crazy."

Pat center Guy Morriss said the media crush that will bear down on the players can be irksome and he advises them to "just relax. It can be a pain but, let's face it, we'd rather be answering questions (than be out of it) ... It's a pleasure to be there."

Hawthorne was with the Pittsburgh Steelers when they won the 1980 Super Bowl. Tight end Derrick Ramsey was on the Oakland Raiders in the 1981 contest when they beat the Eagles, who had Franklin and Morriss.

Franklin describes the week of news conferences and bustling hotel lobbies in a lively city like New Orleans as "mass hysteria." But he thinks the Patriots will cope well with the distractions even though it's the first time for most of them.

Ivan Lendl fells Becker with emotion

NEW YORK (AP) — Being No. 1 in the world is like being the "fastest gun in the West." Everybody is aiming to out-draw you.

On Sunday, it was Boris Becker's turn to challenge Ivan Lendl, the king of men's tennis.

The 18-year-old redhead from West Germany has the tools: the overpowering serve, the rifle-shot groundstrokes from both sides, the crisp volleys and the enthusiasm of Lendl, however, had emotion and experience to go along with the big shots. And then there's the pressure that comes with facing No. 1.

"When he's flying on emotion, it's tough to beat him," Becker admitted after he fell to Lendl 6-2, 7-6, 6-3 in the championship of the $500,000 Na-bisco Masters. "In the tiebreaker, I didn't play any bad points. It was just that he played better."

Becker boomed nine aces to six for Lendl. The teen-ager had 12 service winners to nine for Lendl. But the West German had 41 unforced errors, many of those coming by trying to hit the perfect shot, one that Lendl couldn't possibly get to.

BECKER HIT one of those "certain winners" during a remarkable rally in the third game of the final set, a rally that saw both players race from side to side, from the baseline to the net, keeping the ball in play. Then, with a lunge, Becker volleyed the ball into an open court, Lendl going the wrong way at the net and on the sideline.

Ivan Lendl holds the spoils of victory after defeating Boris Becker for the Nabisco Masters title Sunday.

But, somehow, the Czechoslovakian right-hander changed direction, raced toward the baseline and, while turning, whipped a forehand that sailed over the net, over the prone Becker and landed safely inside the

The shot brought a standing ovation from the Madison Square Garden crowd. And even Becker, after regaining his feet, had to applaud.

For Lendl, it was just another point won - and, just possibly, another point made to the newest pretender to the throne.

"Players like (Mats) Wilander and (Anders) Jarryd are fast, too, but when they get to the ball they miss the ball," Becker said. "They get to the ball, but he's (Lendl) still playing a great shot when he gets to the ball.

Irish real Bruin 'hazzard'

UCLA may break Notre Dame tie

By TRACY DODDS

Los Angeles Times-

Washington Post News Service

SOUTH BEND, Ind. — After losing to Notre Dame for the second straight year, UCLA Coach Walt Hazzard hinted Saturday that the emotion-packed, traditionally wild, always nationally televised game might be dropped from the Bruin schedule.

UCLA had just been beaten, 74.64, at the Athletic and Convocation Center when Hazzard was asked how he felt about the rivalry being cut back a couple of years ago — from a home-and-home, two-game series each season to just one game each season.

"It may come to the point where we might not play Notre Dame," Hazzard said. "Because of our conference tournament, we will have to eliminate one of our non-Surprised, reporters started to ask why UCLA couldn't drop a less popular game. Hazzard did a quick back-pedal. "I didn't say that was going to happen," he said. "It's something we will have to consider in the NOTRE DAME Coach Digger Phelps was ready when he was given the chance to respond to Hazzard's mention of dropping the series. Phelps pointed out that not only has the length of the season been expanded, but the number of games has also been expanded, from 27 to 28, since the addition of so many conference

He also mentioned that the National Collegiate Athletic Association demonstrated last year that it places most emphasis on strength of schedule when picking teams for the tournament.

And then he got to the real shot, his answer to Hazzard's comment earlier in the week that a non-conference game at this point interrupts the conference season. Phelps said, "Marquette (which, like Notre Dame, does not belong to a conference) has North Carolina this week. I don't think that's disrupting (North Carolina Coach) Dean Smith.

Way to go, Digger. Way to rile him. Put Hazzard down with a reference to one of his least favorite people and, thereby, remind all those folks that UCLA opened this season with a 37-point loss at North Hazzard thought, immediately after the North Carolina game, that maybe the Bruins should drop that series. too - after only one game.

Hazzard is not at his best after losing a basketball game. He doesn't take it very well.

In the final seconds of Saturday's game, he was shouting some parting shots at Notre Dame's Tim Kempton, the big, red-haired center who had just had his best game in years. Kempton once scored 26 points in a game as a sophomore, but he'd never had 20 points and 10 rebounds and played such a decisive role in a nationally televised game as he did Saturday.

ASKED WHAT Hazzard had said to him, Kempton said, "I looked over when I heard him calling my name. but when I caught the tone of it, I just tried to ignore it. I haven't had that happen to me since high school."

Kempton got on the bad side of the Bruins early when he hammered center Jack Haley under the UCLA basket and drew an intentional foul less than two min-

"Jack Haley was sticking his elbow in my neck," Kempton said. "I wanted to set the record straight. It wasn't to hurt him, but to let him know that he was not going to be doing that the entire game."

In the final tally, there were more fouls called on the Bruins. UCLA scored four points on only five free throws. Notre Dame scored 16 points on 22 free throws. Down the stretch, after UCLA had shot its way back into the game and was down by just three points with 1:35 to play, those free throws made the difference. A couple of the calls that most infuriated the Bruins also came near the end of the game, when the Bruins still had a chance to win.

Kempton was involved in one of the big ones. It was just after he had scored on a rebound to put Notre Dame up, 69-64, with 1:17 to play. Under the Bruin basket, Kempton made off with a rebound that first touched Bruin hands. Kempton was off-balance as he pulled away from the contact, and he was falling out of bounds. As he went over the end line, he threw the ball with both hands, back over his head, to give the Irish

Tech finally dies by miracle

Associated Press

Defending Southwest Conference champion Texas Tech has learned that if you live by miracle finishes, you can also get burned by them. The Red Raiders had won three basketball games in the final seconds on Tony Benford shots, but the Tech luck ran dry against Texas A&M

After the Raiders missed a slam dunk with 10 seconds to go, the Aggies cashed the mistake into the SWC leadership. Texas A&M hopes to recover from the finish in time to keep its 5-0 record unblemished at Houston Wednesday night.

"It's the most exciting game I've seen in my life and I've been in the game a long time," said Aggie Coach Shelby Metcalf. "It's the greatest win I've ever seen. And if I never coach another game I'll remember this

Texas A&M's 58-57 victory over Texas Tech on Jimmie Gilbert's three-point play came with five sec-

"It's the kind of victory that could really set them up for the year," said

SWC Roundup

Tech Coach Gerald Myers. "It puts them in great shape.

"Well, we've won two or three miraculous games in the last few seconds," he said. "That was heartbreaking after it looked like we had everything wrapped up. I'm sure if DeWayne Chism had it to do over he would make a simple basket."

In other SWC games Saturday, Ar-kansas handed Coach Nolan Richardson his first victory with a 58-50 verdict over Rice, Southern Methodist defeated Texas for the eighth consecutive time, 63-56, and Houston downed Baylor 79-58.

The victory was the first for pre-season favorite Arkansas in six games, and defending champion Texas Tech had a streak of 14 consecutive victories in SWC games before the loss to the Aggies.

Texas Tech drops into a second place with a 4-1 ledger, good for a tie with the Texas Christian Horned Frogs who were idle on Saturday. Texas is 42, followed by SMU at 3-2, Houston 2-3, Rice 1-4, Arkansas 1-5 and Baylor 0-6.

Richardson said he was relieved the Razorbacks finally won one.

"Our kids overcame adversity," he said. "I feel good about that."

SMU Coach Dave Bliss continued his domination of Texas Coach Bob Weltlich, who has yet to win a game against the Mustang mentor.

In other games Wednesday night, Texas Tech is at SMU, TCU is at Texas and Rice is at Baylor.

The Saturday schedule shows Texas Tech at TCU, Rice at Texas A&M. SMU at Houston, and Southern California at Arkansas.

Texas Tech gets another crack at the Aggies on Feb. 19, when the Red Raiders visit G. Rolie White

NBA Roundup Tripucka's bomb defeats Lakers

Associated Press

Kelly Tripucka, who had made only two of eight three-point shots all season, made the best of his ninth attempt. Tripucka took a pass that was nearly intercepted by Los Angeles and swished a high-arching threepointer with two seconds left to give the Detroit Pistons a 118-115 NBA victory over the Lakers

"I like to have the ball when the game is on the line," Tripucka said. "I saw James Worthy running at me. He actually had his hands on the ball and I got it away from him. I just let it fly."

"We both got our hands on it," Worthy said of the pass from Bill Laimbeer to Tripucka. "But he had a better grip than I did, and when I turned back around, he was squared away and I was just hoping it wouldn't go in." Kareem Abdul-Jabbar scored a season-high 38 players scored between 12 and 18 points for the Pistons, led by guards Joe Dumars and Isiah Thomas with 18 each. Detroit's victory was its third straight after los-points for the Lakers, and Worthy had 28. Seven ing 13 of 15, while the Lakers lost for only the seventh time in 38 games. "We're executing better on offense," Pistons Coach Chuck Daly said of the short winning streak. We're not going crazy. We're not just running around out there. We're getting better shots." Detroit made 63 percent of its field goal attempts by Earl Cureton 3:32 into the quarter. The Lakers cut the deficit to 63-52 at halftime. Los Angeles, which never led, rallied to tie the game 109-109 on a three-point play by Worthy with 3:09 to go. The two teams traded baskets until in the second period, taking a 43-27 lead on a dunk

Tripucka's clutch three-pointer. Lakers Coach Pat Riley said his team played defense too loosely against the Pistons, who shot 54 percent from the field for the game. Firemen stand behind coffins of victims of Saturday's plane crash in Guatemala. The bodies are being transported from a remote jungle region to the capital, Guatemala City.

Guatemala plane crash victims all recovered

GUATEMALA CITY (AP) - Authorities say they have recovered the bodies of 93 people killed in the crash of an airliner taking tourists to Mayan ruins in the jungle of north-ern Guatemala, but have not determined the cause of the country's worst air disaster.

The twin-engine Caravelle jet operated by the private Aerovias air-lines crashed Saturday as it approached the Santa Elena airport, about 150 miles north of Guatemala

According to reports from the State Department and the airline, eight Americans were among the dead. There were no survivors.

Guatemalan officials have not been able to give any reason for the crash, and officials are continuing to look for clues. They said the crew was experienced, and that the plane had been checked mechanically the evening before the flight.

"It was one of the most experienced crews in the country. It was the crew I would have trusted first," said a Guatemalan air force captain, who spoke on condition he not be Weather Center in Guatemala said the crash occurred in "good weather, the winds were calm and the visibility unlimited."

Officials at a hangar at the Guate-mala City airport being used as a temporary morgue said that by late Sunday shuttle flights had brought the bodies of 75 victims back to the capital city, but that they had only been able to identify 33 of them.

U.S. Consul Dora Trujillo, who was at the airport for the arrival of a plane bearing bodies Sunday night, said she believed two of the victims to be American but said it would take more tests to be sure. Labels on the coffins bore the names of John Puffett and Teresa Rodriguez, both listed by the airline as American passengers.

Grieving relatives jammed the tiny waiting room of the Aerovias terminal, waiting to be summoned to identify the bodies. They hugged each other, weeping, as the first remains were brought into the hangar.

Firms may get around Reagan's order

TRIPOLI, Libya (AP) — U.S. com-panies faced with President Rea-gan's deadline of Feb. 1 to end their business in Libya may be able to find foreign firms to cover their opera-tions without violating the law, dip-lomatic and commercial sources say.

At stake are the American com-panies' multi-billion-dollar investments in the North African nation's oil and construction industry.

Reagan has accused Libyan leader
Col. Moammar Khadafy of sponsoring terrorism. U.S. authorities accuse a Palestinian faction they say is backed by Khadafy of staging the Dec. 27 terrorist attacks at the Rome and Vienna airports in which 19 peo-ple, including five Americans, died.

In response to the attacks Reagan froze Libyan assets in the United States and ordered all American companies and workers to leave Libya by Feo. 1.

But one Western specialist said there had been "indications that the (Reagan) administration is willing to accept American companies simply transferring their Libyan operations to foreign-based subsidiaries."

Sources in Tripoli say the assets of some U.S. companies, such as the Occidental Petroleum Co., are too vast to be liquidated immediately.

One Western ambassador, who spoke recently on condition he not be identified, said "it would be completely unrealistic to suppose that all the American workers and the American companies can pack up and leave within two weeks."

Most American firms and employees are expected to abide by the presidential order and pull up stakes in Libya, and representatives of some U.S. companies emphatically

Media: Khadafy orders suicide-squad training

TRIPOLI, Libya (AP) — The official news agency said today that Libyan leader Col. Moammar Khadafy has ordered the training of suicide squads to conduct guerrilla operations.

In a brief dispatch, Libya's JANA news agency said Khadafy accepted demands from the Libyan peoples' congresses "for mili-tary training and formation of suicide squads as volunteers to conduct guerrilla operations in response to the American provocations and the hostile stance toward the Arab nation.'

JANA did not say where or when Khadafy made the statement. It also did not say where the suicide squads might be used.

President Reagan has said he has "irrefutable" proof of Libyan involvement in the Dec. 27 terrorist attacks at the Rome and Vienna airports in which 19 people, including five Americans, died. About 120 people were injured.

Khadafy has accused the Unit-ed States of assembling warships in the Mediterranean for a possible attack on Libya, and warned that an attack would be answered by attacks inside America.

"If America commits aggression against us, then we will commit aggression against it, inside America itself," JANA quoted Khadafy as saying earlier this

"In the event of an attack, we can reach any place, not with air-craft carriers nor with the bombers, but with suicide squads," JANA quoted him as telling reporters at that time.

deny they would attempt to circumvent the embargo.

The Western specialist, who spoke on condition he not be identified, said the U.S. firms most likely to obey Reagan's order promptly are those whose staff includes a large number of Americans and those "whose whole Libyan operations were losing money, anyway."

Many of the subsidiaries which might take over the activities of American companies are based in Europe. Their intervention depends largely on what may be decided at the Jan. 27 meeting in Brussels, Belgium of foreign ministers from the 12 member nations of the Common Market.

The meeting is expected to determine Western Europe's attitude toward the U.S. embargo. The Western ambassador said U.S. sanctions "will hurt Libyan interests very badly, particularly the seizure of an estimated $3 billion dollars in American banks and the inability for the Libyans to use American financial circuits for their oil business."

Another diplomat pointed to the case of Malcolm Pike, business manager for a British engineering company. Pike has been refused permission to leave Libya for two years because his company, liquidated in 1983, owes the equivalent of $1.4 million in Libyan taxes.

"There could be a multitude of such measures, even if the Libyans don't take more serious reprisal measures against individual Americans,' the diplomat said.

Libyan officials met in Zurich Switzerland, last week with representatives of some American companies to discuss the effects of Reagan's order. Little emerged from the meeting, but the Libyans are believed to have hinted at possible financial "incentives" for companies and individuals prepared to defy Reagan's directives. By Libyan count, about 1,500 Americans work in Libya. Some diplomats say the true figure could be at least twice as high, because many Americans seek to conceal their presence here for tax and other

Coretta Scott King, wife of the late civil rights leader, stands before the bust of her husband after it was unveiled in the Capitol Rotunda Thursday.

The National Association for the Advancement of Colored People is asking Midlanders to join in recognizing Dr. Martin Luther King Jr.'s birthday.

A candlelight vigil will be held today at 7 p.m. by the Negro Business and Professional Women of Midland.

The public is invited to bring a candle to the vigil at Washington Park. A reception will follow at the Greater St. Luke Church, 401 S.

ASHINGTON — As Americans honor the memory of Martin Luther King Jr., some historians worry that more attention is being focused on King the man and martyr than on the movement.

"King himself, were he alive today, would be more insistent than anyone that any celebration should be a celebration of the civil rights movement...rather than him alone," said David J. Garrow, associate professor of political science at City College of New York and City University Graduate Center.

Garrow, whose third book about King is to be published soon, and other historians caution that the black leader is being elevated to the level of a "super-human being," an embodiment of the entire civil rights movement.

"King is being mythologized. He's being made an important figure outside his historical importance," said Ira Berlin, a history professor at the University of Maryland with an expertise in slavery and emancipation.

"King has become a representative of the movement as a whole," when in fact the struggle was fractious and divided among different ideas, he said. "King was an important part of that (movement) and he had extraordinary talent, but he was part of that — not the whole."

Darlene Clark Hine, vice provost and history professor at Purdue University, said King will be remembered as one of the greatest black leaders in American history. But it's critical that the movement for racial equality not be lost in his shadow, said Ms. Hine, an expert in Afro-American history.

"While his role was pivotal, it's important to keep in mind that the civil rights movement is 120 years old," she said, dating the struggle to 1865, the end of the Civil War. Others say its origins stretch back to Colonial times.

But some of King's supporters are ambivalent about the emphasis because they fought so hard to have his birthday recognized as a national holiday — only the second such designation for any American.

Within days of King's assassination on April 4, 1968, a bill was introduced in Congress seeking to have his birthday, Jan. 15, designated a national holiday. Fifteen years later, President Reagan signed into law legislation establishing the holiday on the third Monday in January. Today is the first legal observance of the holiday.

Clayborne Carson, an associate professor of history at Stanford University and editor of a collection of King's personal papers, speeches and writings, calls King's work "one of the great movements of world history."

He sees no danger that emphasis on King as a hero will supplant the importance of the civil rights movement "any more than celebrating George Washington's birthday would give the impression that he fought the Revolution by himself

County starts joint office for victims of abuse

SAN ANTONIO (AP) - The Bexar County district attorney's office and Texas Department of Human Resources have launched a legal center to help family abuse victims without shuffling them to different agencies, officials say

The joint office will be ready for occupancy by 32 workers in late February and was set up to make dealing with the legal system easier for victims of child abuse, prosecutors

"When a case comes over from the police department or (human services department), it will be assigned to one lawyer and one advocate who will see it through all the way to court," said attorney Karen Amos, legal chief of the unit.

The child will not be shuffled around or have to tell his story constantly," she said. "This is called vertical prosecution — the continuity helps make the child more comfortable.

Officials said the office's spouseabuse component, which has operated since January 1984, has helped more than 3,600 victims.

Three child abuse advocates in the new office become the lifeline between the victim and the legal system, officials said. They provide a reassuring hug, a concerned voice on the phone and patient explanation.

'Most district attorney's offices don't have advocates, but they are needed because the attorneys can't devote that much time to victims," said Joy Hollingsworth, advocate

She said advocates also track cases in the legal system for TDHR caseworkers and provide followup services. But the meshing of "social work-type" advocates with lawyers will take adjustment, she sa

After workers assess each victim's home situation, protective orders may be obtained for a child free of charge, while some private lawyers charge $500 to $1,500, officials said.

"For the first time, sexual, spouse and child abuse will all be handled by a coordinated approach that allows for effective intervention to stop the cycle — and that's what we are all about," said Joyce Dorrycott, chairwoman of both task forces.

"We are not just Band-Aids. We want children to get justice or at least a good chance for justice. We want them to know someone cares."

Texas Tech, Claydesta stage teleconference

From Staff Reports

With opening comments by Clayton Williams, Texas Tech University Health Sciences Center initiated a pilot program today to demonstrate the advantages of using teleconfer-ences for educational purposes. Physicians, nurses, businessmen and others will participate in a two-day program being held in Midland, Amarillo and Lubbock.

"The TTUHSC will use the pilot program to demonstrate the capabilities of interactive video program-ming between Texas Tech University and the Texas Tech Health Sciences Center at Lubbock and the HSC's Regional Academic Health Centers throughout West Texas," according to a press release.

ClayDesta Communications, a regional interexchange carrier, is do-nating the digital microwave circuits linking the interactive sites. Local service will be provided by Southwestern Bell Telephone Co.

Approximately 64 hours of the 26hour education demonstration will originate in Midland, including opening remarks by Williams, owner of ClayDesta Communications. The local broadcast is from the ClayDesta National Bank building on Wadley and Big Spring.
Other live broadcast sites will be at

THSC in Lubbock and Tech's Regional Academic Health Center at Amarillo. Medical school faculty and others from Tech's regional center at El Paso will participate at the Midland

All three sites will maintain audiovisual contact with each other throughout the two-day program. Questions and discussion between participants at all three sites will be "Great people in history are most often the symbols of greater forces beyond themselves, and I think this is the case" with King, he said.

But Garrow believes a danger in immortalizing King is that "it gives people an excessively simplistic understanding of history and conveys implicitly if not explicitly that social movements and political change depend on great individuals for their

"King himself believed very strongly that if he had not existed, somebody else would have emerged as a similar spokesman and symbol, Garrow said.

Raised to the level of sainthood, King becomes a "whitewashed" figure, "rather than a politically challenging man whose message still has very real present-day relevance," he King's life becomes more significant viewed against the backdrop of the civil rights movement, Berlin said. "It's only as seeing him as part of the larger movement that King really gains his true significance...and his special genius was his ability to articulate what so many people were willing to act upon at that particular time in history."

King's non-violent campaign of demonstrations and marches throughout the South in the 1950s and 1960s spurred the passage of legislation ending official segregation. He won the Nobel Peace Prize in

Viewing King as a national icon sets him up for "debunking," Berlin said, and information gathered at

I am concerned about a better world. I'm concerned about justice. I'm concerned about brotherhood. I'm concerned about truth. And when one is concerned about these, he can never advocate violence. For through violence you may murder a murderer but you can't murder murder. Through violence you may murder a liar but you can't establish truth. Through violence you may murder a hater, but you can't murder hate. Darkness cannot put out darkness. Only light can do that. Martin Luther King Jr., 1967 address the direction of former FBI Director J. Edgar Hoover has provided a number of avenues for critics. Most historians believe, however, life will not diminish his status in American history. "History has a way of dealing with heroes fairly well...(because) their values are so timeless," noted Nathan Huggins, a professor of history and Afro-American studies at Har-"Heroes are what they are because they allow us to invest in them the values which are ours, and we can use the person as a means of being the symbol of our aspirations, values and needs," Huggins said.

As with many national heroes, death is their making. King's assassination, as he stood on the balcony of a Memphis, Tenn., motel, erased much of the controversy of his latter years of life, many of the experts

During most of the 1960s, King had focused the civil rights movement on the struggle of blacks to gain equality. But by the time he died, he had become an outspoken critic of the Vietnam War and he was defining the black struggle in economic

"King was moving in a direction that may have put him at odds with a lot of trends of American society,"

Hine agreed: "If he had lived, I doubt that the powers-that-be would have recognized him with a national holiday. He was becoming a very (outspoken) social critic."

Many who will celebrate King's birth "conveniently forget those parts of King's legacy they weren't comfortable with," Garrow said. "King as a critic of American foreign policy and King as a critic of American poverty and maldistribution of wealth is the King that isn't celebrated in most of these celebrations," he said.

As the country gains distance from the events that propelled King into national prominence, the perspective on his role will change, predicts James O. Horton, associate professor of history at George Washington University who specializes in Afro-American history.

"I see Martin Luther King as part of a long tradition of black protests that stretches into the Colonial period," he said.

"Right now, our generation tends to see him as part of this great thing that happened in our lives. I think 100 years from now, it will be easier to see what happened in the '50s and '60s as part of a long, evolutionary

King's magnetism and persuasive powers rallied millions around his plea for equality, historians say, and demonstrated in a dramatic way the contradictions between America's principles and its practices.

"The principles enunciated by Thomas Jefferson that all men were created equal...were never real until Martin Luther King," said Robert L. Harris Jr., an associate professor of Afro-American history at Cornell University.

When you talk about...the fathers of the United States, people are going to talk about Jefferson, Madison. Lincoln and Martin Luther King in the same breath."

Professor: Mothers should be at home, not at work

Copley News Service

LOS ANGELES - Enid Blaylock, a petite college professor with big opinions, may want to fortify her home.

Taking potshots at Superwo-man is risky business. "All my writings are controver-sial," laughs Blaylock, a professor of educational psychology at Cali-fornia State University, Long Beach, for the past two decades.

Her latest target is child abuse that may unwittingly be inflicted by women subscribing to the Superwoman myth. She's not talking of the physical or sexual molestation that grabs headlines or lestation that grabs headlines, or the mental abuse that in recent years has grown in public Blaylock is pointing an accus-ing finger at what she says is a much more pervasive strain, a form that, in her words, is "the root cause of drug abuse, alcoholism, delinquency, alienation, sui-cide and other forms of emotional dysfunctions among today's

That's a heavy lineup of social

And the heavy, no less, is the working mother — that some-times downtrodden, always busy woman who juggles children, husband and career in a bid for hav-

ADDING A NEW burden of guilt to that often precarious bal-ancing act doesn't please Blaylock, herself a 55-year-old mother of two.

"I really feel bad about that," she says. "But as an educator I feel that I should express my opinion honestly.

"I know guilt is probably one of the most destructive emotions that one can have. And I really don't feel good about saying to mothers, especially heads of households who have no other alternative but to work, that they are abusing their children. But that's the way I feel."

The gist of Blaylock's theory which is capsulized in a paper she has written, to be followed by a more in-depth research piece — is that without the continuity that can be provided only by a loving, nurturing mother who stays at home during a child's first five years, that child can be plagued in adolescence by a slew of psychological problems growing out of insecurity and low self-esteem.

Blaylock sees the "emotional deprivation" that can result from placing toddlers in the care of placing toddlers in the care of others as nothing short of "the single most important cause of psychological dysfunctions."

"It matters very much if the mother is not the sole caretaker during her child's early formative years, from birth to 5 years, writes Blaylock. "During the first six months, an infant forms a bond with its mother, an attachment that provides a sense of be-longing, of continuity, of well-being.

"Maintaining this attachment is crucial to the development of a strong personal and family identity. ... No matter how loving the surrogate mother happens to be, she constitutes a disruption of this vital mother-child attachment. Mothers should place their young children in nursery schools only in the case of dire emergen-cy and for very brief periods."

UNDERSTANDABLY, IN A society in which the number of working women has ballooned from 21 percent at the turn of the century to about 53 percent to-day, those are fighting words. (The number of women working in 1984 in the 25 to 34 age-group is even higher, 69.8 percent, and in the 35 to 44 category, 70.1 percent.)

Says Judy Todd, a psychology professor at California State University, Dominguez Hills: "In 20 years as a child psychologist, I've never seen a piece of evidence that substantiates a statement like that. ... In fact, there's a lot of evidence that children whose mothers go to work benefit in a lot of ways. ... They certainly learn independence quicker than most children, and they learn self-responsibility."

Even Blaylock admits, "I'm in the minority, definitely the minority," regarding the theory. But she believes it's backed up by the research and case studies she's come across in 19 years as an educator and experience before that as a pediatric nurse.

She also points to a survey she conducted last fall in which she questioned 832 working mothers taking classes at CSULB, query-ing them about working and raising a family. Fifty-three percent, she notes, think they have insufficient time to spend with their children, and 67 percent say that, if financially secure, they would choose to stay in the home until their children were older than 5. (Blaylock is quick to caution that the survey's results may not be applicable to working mothers in general.)

FINANCIAL SECURITY is a key phrase. Blaylock believes that too often it's confused with basking in the lap of luxury items made to seem necessary by "pow-erful commercial interests" items such as dishwashers, vacuum cleaners and washing machines.

She minces no words: 'The idea that it doesn't matter who takes care of a young child as long as the caretaker is warm and loving was fabricated by the business world to encourage two-paycheck families, thus increasing earning power and better consumption. Almost three decades ago, Blay-lock says, she bought the myth herself when she went to work while her children were under 5. "I think I could have made it without two paychecks. But I did buy into that: To live well you need a lot of things. It's very pow-erful. We cannot get away from it; we're bombarded with it. The business interests pay psychologists a lot of money to create — to know exactly what to say and how how to say it — these needs in us. Unfortunately, our children are the casualties."

Concludes Blaylock: "I think it's really only a minority of mothers who really need to work."

Todd bristles at that notion. "Td like to point out that statistics don't bear that out," she says. "Most working mothers are sin-gle, or they need that second pay-check to barely make it ... (and) with a divorce rate that's 50 percent in California, most women can just expect to be divorced. And then they will need to earn money. And if they stayed home, it will be to their children's extreme disbenefit later when they have no working experience."
(Statistics from the U.S. Bureau of Labor, as of March 1985, show that 39 percent of working wom-en are mothers and 25.5 percent of that number are single BLAYLOCK CONTINUES, "Here's another (myth): Being a mother should not entail sacrificing one's individuality, indepen-dence, freedom, career. ... Well, being a good mother requires some modification in all these areas. ... Women must recognize the improbability of meeting the emotional needs of a young child, managing a household and engaging in gainful employment simultaneously. The demands of work and home management are more and home management are more pressing than a child's emotional needs. Whenever time and energy conflicts arise, the child invariably will be the loser."

But would they be losers if left in the hands of a frustrated mother? Says Todd, "It seems reasonable that if the mother is resentful about staying home with the children that it wouldn't be good for them.'

To which Blaylock concedes, "In some cases, where the mother doesn't really like children, the child might be better off with her at work and some more nurturing person taking care of the child. But the child will still lose out in terms of not having this uninter-rupted, warm relationship with his/her mother. It will be just like the lesser of two evils."

THERE ARE NO easy answers. Blaylock even spurns the oftheard "quality of time vs. quanti-ty of time" debate.

"This is a rationalization," she says bluntly. "If a child needs you at a particular time and you're not available, regardless of what quality time you give later, it's still not adequate for the child's needs. ... (Quality time) is helpful for the child, but I don't think that compensates for the other times when the child really needs the parents.'

She also puts down her foot on the role-reversal proposal — with Dad opting to stay at home and cook the bacon Mom brings home — as an answer. Biology dictates that it's the mother whose fulltime attention is needed in those early years, she says. It's the mother's heartbeat, the mother's voice, that the infant hears after conception, Blaylock adds. "It is more with the mother that they feel they aren't separated in a separate self, not with the father."

Todd isn't convinced. "I think that (role-reversal) would turn out well, if everyone is happy with

On her part, Blaylock has her own suggestions. "Women can have many years to pursue careers, engage in self-fulfilling en-deavors and enjoy freedom and independence if they begin child-bearing early," she says.

BY AGE 5, a child is equipped physiologically and emotionally to cope without that maternal continuity, she says, and a mother can explore other avenues outside parenting.

"But I really feel strongly about this, that society is not geared toward adequately meeting the needs of our children," Blaylock says. "The government should give much, much greater tax deduction to fathers who are working and have children, so the mothers can stay home and take care of the children."

Life with alcoholic parents follows children as adults

Hearst News Service

It was his first date. Sammy, age 14, took 45 minutes getting ready donning his neatly pressed oxford cloth shirt and the new slacks his mother had bought him. He spent 10 minutes just getting his tie perfectly

As he came out of the bathroom, he tried to escape his father's vision. But his dad, who had been drinking beer since the morning, spotted him.

"Wheeeee-yew, will you look at the lady's man? Hey, Sam, let's get a look at the 'Big Man on Campus!' Come on, come on over.

As Sammy tentatively approached his drunken father, the man started sniffing the air. "What's that smell? Did you use my aftershave, boy? Going to drive the women wild? Can't you speak, boy? You're never going to get any-where if you can't speak up. You'll end up like the old man. They'll just walk all over you. Lousy kids will just walk out the door without so much as a goodbye. I'm not even a father to you anymore, I'm just a piece of furniture.

Just as Sammy feared, his father was starting to get angry. The man stormed into the bathroom, emerging with the bottle of aftershave lotion.

"Come here," he shouted. Before Sammy knew it, his father had collared him and was splashing the af-tershave on his head. By the time Sammy wrenched away, his hair and jacket were soaked. With tears in his eyes, the boy stormed out of the

AS HE WAS growing up, Sammy used to swear that he'd never touch a drink, that he didn't want to end up like his father. But by the time he reached his 30s, alcohol had become a problem for him. He changed jobs almost every year. By the time he was 35, he was divorced, nearly bankrupt, facing an eviction notice and feeling completely alone. But Sam is not alone. He is one of 28 million Americans who have had an alcoholic parent.

Although alcoholism has long been called a "family disease," the effects of growing up in an alcoholic home are only starting to be recognized. According to recent statistics, adult children of alcoholics (ACAs) have four times the chance of becoming alcoholics themselves. They have four times the chance of marrying another alcoholic.

The National Association for Children of Alcoholics (NACOA) says that children of alcoholics often have an inability to trust, an extreme need to control, an excessive sense of responsibility and a denial of feelings. ACAs are at the highest risk of developing learning disabilities, anxiety, stress-related medical problems and compulsive achieving, but often these problems don't show up until years later, after the child of an alcoholic is established in a career, and married, with children of his own.

John, an advertising writer, seemed to have it all together: an expensive home in a fashionable neighborhood of Cambridge, England; a Vassar-educated wife, a crowd of witty and charming friends, three beautiful children. He'd even written a couple of successful novels.

"I was a very successful person," he says. "I lived in a fabulous house. Our children were in private schools. We took our vacations on the continent. But I felt there's something missing here. I wasn't really there for any of it. I couldn't appreciate it. either lived in the past or the

DESPITE THE outward trappings of success, John was depressed. He was prone to unexplained outbursts of anger. After 15 years of marriage, John's wife was starting to drink

"The signs of alcoholism were there," John says. "She was starting to pass out on the couch at night, not coming to bed," he says. Two of John's sons were also starting to

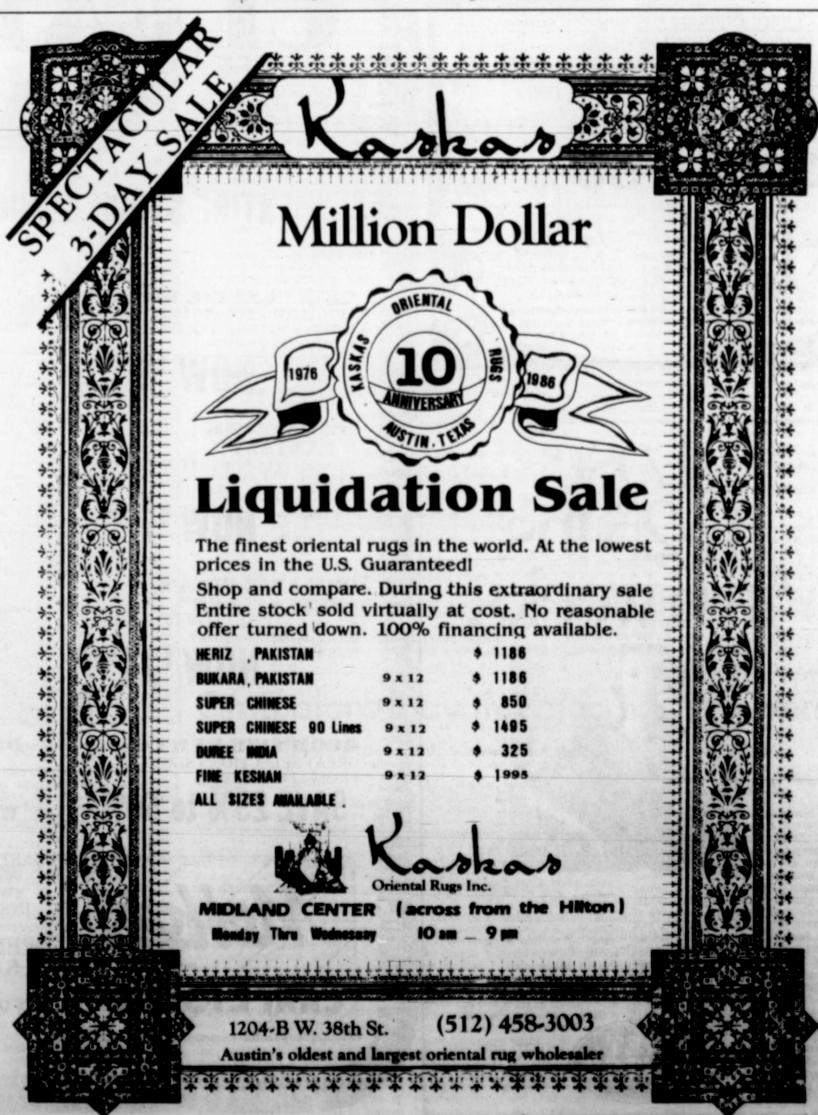

In order to cope with his wife's drinking, John started attending meetings of Al-Anon, a group made up of people who have a family member with a drinking problem. It was through Al-Anon that John realized that his father had been an alcoholic. Psychologists who are study-ing adult children of alcoholics say that many ACAs continue to use the coping skills they learned as children living in an alcoholic home.
"Most children of alcoholics learned very early not to trust," says Tim Cermak, head of the National Association for Children of Alcoholics. "Usually things were so chaotic, they quickly learned that people couldn't be trusted. You learn to rely on yourself and yourself alone."

Lisa always felt she had to take care of her non-alcoholic mother, to listen to her problems and try to protect her from her drunken father's physical abuse. A quiet girl, Lisa learned not to make waves. Even when she was raped at age 17, Lisa didn't tell her family because, she says, "I didn't want to upset them."

These days Lisa, 30, considers herself "recovering." She's now able to tell friends and relatives what she needs. She's even able to speak up when angry. But she says she still gets uncomfortable if a relationship gets "too close."

"CHILDREN OF alcoholics often feel burdened by relationships," says Stephanie Brown, Ph.D., of the Stanford (Calif.) Alcohol Clinic. "If something goes wrong, they feel they are at fault. They have chronic guilt at their inability to 'fix someone else.' That particular pattern stems from feeling responsibility in an alcoholic

Vet losing hospital benefits

By ABIGAIL VAN BUREN

DEAR ABBY: My father was rushed to the hospital with a sudden stroke. He is also suffering from heart failure and diabetes.

Dad is a World War II veteran, so we got in touch with the veterans service and were told that as soon as Dad's condition stabilized, he could be transferred to the veterans hospital, where he would be eligible for his veterans benefits.

Well, Dad's condition finally stabilized, but the veterans hospital refused to take him. Why? Because he was not taken to the veterans hospital first! Abby, Dad has earned the right to be treated at the veterans hospital, but because we didn't know about this "rule," he is being denied the benefits he earned. He served his country when it needed him, and now, just because he went to the "wrong" hospital first, it's as though he didn't spend a day in the Army! This is so unfair.

your father's rights and how to get them, so I recommend you get the newly published paperback titled "The Viet Vet Survival Guide."

It contains valuable up-to-date information for ALL veterans - male and female - not just those from the Vietnam era.

Realizing the average Vietnam veteran did not get past high school, the authors use plain language and short sentences. They tell how to get medical care, psychiatric counseling, disability compensation, housing, and even how to apply for loans and up-grade bad discharges. They also deal with issues from Agent Orange to postwar stress, drug and alcohol de-pendency, and patients' rights, and clearly spell out what a veteran and his dependents are entitled to. The "Viet Vet Survival Guide" (published by Ballantine) is available for $3.95 in most bookstores — or send $4.50 (check or money order) to VVA Product Sales, P.O. Box 3666, Santa Rosa, Calif. 95402.

Blood test could predict heart attack candidates

Los Angeles Times

SARASOTA, Fla. - A simple blood test to predict a person's susceptibility to heart attack - the nation's No. 1 killer - is being developed and may be on the market in three years, according to a scientist.

"By looking at genes directly we could predict a susceptibility and tell him or her that this is the risk," said Dr. Philippe M. Frossard. "Early preventive measures such as diet, exercise and drug treatment could be started.' Frossard discussed the test which would be a major stride in the prevention and treatment of cardiovascular disease — in a presentation at the American Heart Association meeting. He said certain characteristics, or markers, have been found in genes linked to high blood pressure and atherosclerosis, the development of fatty deposits on walls of arteries.

A study of 3,000 U.S. residents' reactions to the test is under way, said Frossard, a scientist with California

Biotechnology in Palo Alto. "Millions are spent on treatment and rehabilitation of cardiovascular disease every year," he said. The disease kills 700,000 Americans each Compressed natural gas (CNG) could become the transportation fuel for tomorrow - and today - says Bob Capps, director of marketing for Energas. Capps, with Jeff Seisler of the American Gas Association and Jim Wallace of the Texas Railroad Commission, will present a seminar Wednesday on the feasibility, technology, economics and regulations involved in the utilization of compressed natural gas as a fuel in trucks and automobiles.

Energas is currently operating 91 company vehicles at locations in Amarillo, Lubbock and Midland on natural gas with great success, according to Capps. "We are saving about $44,000 a year on our 32 vehicles in Amarillo and $39,000 a year on 37 vehicles in Lubbock," said Capps. "It is too early to calculate what the savings will be on our 22 converted vehicles in Midland, but we expect it to be in the same range.

He said CNG had been clearly demonstrated as a viable fuel alternative for fleet operators, particularly those who have vehicles that travel designated routes and fixed milage each day. The utility executive who has been leading a CNG marketing effort in West Texas said a number of municipalities and school districts were already using

"We have systems running on 16 school buses in both Dalhart and Pampa and on 28 city vehicles in Amarillo and six city vehicles in Midland," said Capps. "It's not a very significant number now, but its a good start. Dalhart has already brought its own compressor. Hank Kirk, director of fleet operations for the City of Midland, said initial response to the use of CNG on city vehicles had been enthusiastic. "We have been running about 30 days with no problems whatsoever, but it is still too early for a through cost evaluation. I think in the long run, however, it will prove to be cost effective for the city.

Capps said natural gas on a gasoline equivalent basis costs about 44 cents per gallon in Midland plus eight cents to compress for a total of 52 cents per gallon, resulting in a 50 percent or more fuel savings. The cost to convert a vehicle to natural gas is approximately $1,300. Payout for the conversion kit, which allows a vehicle to operate on gasoline or natural gas, is slightly over a year, but it may be transferred from vehicle to vehicle. CNG also produces about the same miles per gallon as

Italy, New Zealand and Canada are very strong into the use of CNG and even offer tax incentives to those using the fuel, according to Capps, who says that one day car owners may be able to fuel their vehicles at home with small compressors and outside gas connections.

"That, however, is down the road," said Capps. "Right now, it is being promoted primarily as an alternate fuel for fleets." He said no kits are now available for diesel vehicles but research is underway that will evenually make possible the conversion of diesel vehicles to natural gas."

He also views the developing compressed natural gas market as a pos-

The current cost of a fueling station capable of fueling fleet vehicles on a rotating basis is $75,000 to $90,000. A small tank, weighing 148 pounds and rated to 4,000 psi is installed in the trunk of the vehicle is

"Tests have concluded that CNG is far safer than gasoline," said Capps.

"These tanks have been dropped off building and had hole shot through them without exploding."
The Compressed Natural Gas seminar is set for 1 p.m. Wednesday at Midland Center and is free to the public. Natural gas vehicles will be available for inspection.

Legal secretaries to meet Thursday

Jerri Fielding, administrative assistant and recruitment coordinator at Stubbeman, Mcrae, Sealy, Laughlin & Browder, Inc., will be the guest speaker for the Midland Legal Secretaries noon meeting Thursday, January 23, 1986 at the Ramada Inn, 3100 W. Wall in Midland.

"You Can Do It Too" will be the topic of Fielding's presentation on public speaking. She calls public speaking our number one fear, but in her talk will give pointers to help overcome this fear and to find a spirit of fun in public speaking.

Fielding is a graduate of the University of Texas of the Permian Basin with a BBA degree in management. She is a resident of Odessa, but has worked in Midland for 15 years and says she enjoys being a part of both communities. She has experience as a legal secretary that should make her familiar with the requirements of the position and provide empathy for the problems faced by this area of the work force.

As a five year member of Toastmasters International who is currently serving as Division West Lt.

Jerri Fielding

Governor, Fielding has earned the rank of Able Toastmaster and is working to become a Distinguished Toastmaster. She has given more than 100 speeches in addition to serving as a district officer for several

Blake Drilling presents 19 awards

Blake Drilling & Exploration of Midland presented safety certificates and awards to 19 employees who had no lost time accidents during the period July through December 1985 at its safety awards

Sonny Blake, vice president of the company, presented the awards at the banquet held Thursday at the Holiday Inn County Villa Convention Center. Phil Graves, president of Safety International, was guest speaker.

The drilling company was chartered as a Texas corporation November 1984. Roger J. Blake, long-time oil industry drilling superintendent. is owner and chief executive officer. Blake has three rigs presently operating in the Permian Basin area, with depth capacities of 7,000 to 13,000 feet.

Blake Rig No. 1 received a special award from the International Association of Drilling Contractors for operating one year without a lost time accident or fatality. The company has operated since inception with a total of only two minor lost time accidents, in 118,500 man hours. Blake Drilling is a member of the

Laid-off Enduro employees consider buying idled plant unfinished steel used in the stainless steel manufacturing process. In 1985, Enduro management began to question

MASSILLON, Ohio (AP) - "Save Enduro" signs are posted in public places all over this northeast Ohio town of 30,000 people, where idled workers of the dormant Enduro Stanless Inc. plant are hoping they can rescue their livelihoods.

Melvin "Red" Paxton, 50, a 32-year worker at the plant, counts himself among those at United Steelworkers of Americal Local 1124 who back an employee purchase.

"We're just sitting in limbo," Paxton said, adding that he would be willing to earn less money and accept reduced benefits so Enduro employees can buy the business.

"I feel I can bend," Paxton said one afternoon last week at the union hall, where some of the 537 members were arriving to take home free cheese. "I just want to know that I'm bending for a reason. I've got a lifetime socked up in here, but now I can't get insurance. And I've been putting off surgery I was supposed to have.

The idled workers also want a Senate investigation of what they say are questionable Justice Department decisions which drastically changed their lives by altering the ability of Enduro Stainless Inc. to operate successfully.

When LTV Corp. of Dallas and Republic Steel Corp. of Cleveland sought to merge in 1984, the Justice Department held up approval of the merger until certain antitrust safeguards were met. One condition was the divestiture of Republic's Enduro plant, a profitable producer of stainless sheet and specialty products.

OMB plans may threaten home buyers

'Fannie Mae' chief says down payments may double

Copley News Service

DALLAS - The Office of Management and Budget advocates antihousing proposals in the guise of deficit reduction that would be disastrous for millions of potential home buyers, according to David O. Maxwell, chairman and chief executive officer of the Federal National Mortgage Association.

The anti-housing zealots in the Office of Management and Budget want to remove every vestige of gov-ernment-supported housing," Maxwell said in a speech at a convention of national home builders on Saturday.

Maxwell said the budget proposals could double the down payments for home loans and said it would have the greatest effect on households with less than $40,000 annual

Maxwell urged delegates at the 42nd annual National Association of Home Builders convention to oppose OMB's budget attacks against the public-private partnership that has made home ownership possible for millions of Americans of modest means for more than a half-century. Maxwell's company, nicknamed "Fannie Mae," has purchased more than $165 billion in mortgages on all types of housing since being char-tered by Congress in 1938.

Make no mistake about it," Maxwell charged, "they are cold-bloodedly determined to drive the American home buyers into a ruinous competition for mortgage money with Wall Street merger maniacs and the tentacled, multinational oc-topi of the world." The usually softspoken Maxwell warned that OMB is using the budget to attack housing issues that have nothing to do with

The attack is motivated solely by an ideological hostility to government support of any kind to give the low-, moderate and middle-income home buyers a chance to compete for capital," Maxwell added. The Fannie Mae chairman said the OMB's budget proposals have not been formally announced, but charged that "a cabal of anti-housing zealots" in the federal agency wants to "double the down payment required for FHA and VA mortgages; cap the income level to qualify for an FHA loan at $40,000; limit Ginnie Mae's guarantee to only 80 percent instead of 100 percent of a loan and further cut the Department of Housing and Urban Development's budget for low-income housing assistance; gut rural housing, and impose a confiscatory tax on government. tance; gut rural housing, and impose a confiscatory tax on government-sponsored housing enterprises, a tax that would hit especially hard at Fannie Mae. And who would be hurt by the tax on Fannie Mae?," Maxwell asked his audience. "Not a rich home buyer. No buyers of $200,000 homes need worry." Hurt most would lowand middle-income families, Maxwell said.

INVESTOR'S GUIDE

Profit from sale of stock can't be divided onto two years' tax returns

Q. On Dec. 26, I sold 1,000 shares of stock I had owned for several years and realized a very large profit. Rather than report all of that profit on my 1965 income tax return and pay a huge tax come April 15, I would like to report half of it on my 1965 return and the other half on my 1966 return, thereby spreading the tax bite over two years and defer paying part of it until April 15, 1967

Can this be done? A. Nope. You have your choice of reporting the entire profit on either your 1985 or 1986 return. You can't split it and report part on each of two years' returns.

Because of the five-businessday settlement rule, the proceeds from stocks sold at a profit after Dec. 22 did not be-come available until January. For reasons only CPAs and tax lawyers can fathom, that makes them installment sales, with the profit taxable in 1986 However, you can "elect out" of using the installment sale method simply by reporting the transaction on your 1985 return and paying whatever tax Choosing the return on which to report that profit gets a bit hairy.

Because you owned the stock for more than six months, the profit is a long-term capital gain — only 40 percent of which is taxable under current only 40 percent of which is taxable under current tax law. You add that 40 percent to your other taxable income and pay whatever tax applies.

The top federal income tax bracket now is 50 percent, making the maximum tax bite on long-term capital gains 20 percent for 1985.

That could change for 1986, with capital gains taxes being lowered, if our foot-dragging Congress ever completes the badly needed overhaul of the Internal Revenue Code.

Q. Is it true that all my losses last year on sales of stocks, even those for transactions on December 31, must be reported on my 1985 income tax return? A. Yes. If you sold stock on Dec. 31, you report gram, Box 1650, Midland, Texas 79702.

How do I report this on my income tax return?

A. The easy way is to report it as a capital gain on Schedule D of your federal income tax return.

Your "holding period" for the rights dates back to the day you bought the stock.

So, if you owned the stock more than six months before you sold the rights, for $254.20, because nothing is simple in our present tax system you don't have to handle it that easy way. You can treat a portion of the cost "basis" of your 2,000 shares of stock as the basis of the rights. That does not affect a sale at a loss.

A. Most likely, there is no immediate tax impact. Virtually all rights are issued free from tax. You'll probably find that spelled out in the literature explaining what you paid for those shares. Keep a record of that, as you should for all securities you buy. When and if you sell, the difference between your basis and the proceeds from the sale is either a capital gain or a capital loss, which you will be required to report on your income tax return.

Research firms' crystal balls reveal 1987 to be bullish year of growth

By JOHN CUNNIFF

AP Business Analyst

The following lists of New York and American stock ex-With 49 weeks to go in 1986, two of the country's biggest equity research firms, Merrill Lynch and Salomon Brothers, have decided it is time to look reported in the Reporter-Telegram's regular daily postings for the

They like much of what they see, including no great threats from those old bugaboos of inflation and interest rates, which probably accounts in part for the unusually early forecasts.

ML expects 1987 "will be another year of real growth," with gross national product swelling 2.9 percent. With a 4.3 percent forecast, Salomon is even more bullish. Last year's growth rate was 3.1

Their interest in the future is reasonable enough, because current stock prices are set by expectations of future gains or losses, but these forecasts come at a time when most forecasters aren't even through with 1986.

In fact, some institutions in the past have continued to issue "forecast revisions" into early summer, a practice that is roughly akin to placing your bets on a horse halfway through the race.

Salomon seemingly couldn't restrain itself, explaining that after years in which Murphy's Law held sway we are now into a new era, one marked by supreme confidence that Forbush's Law will be a dominant force.

Most people are aware that Murphy's Law postu-

It's all different today, say the researchers, who claim Forbush's Law, named for Miss Nelli Forbush, the cockeyed opitimist in "South Pacific," the famous musical by Richard Rodgers and Oscar above expectations.

The key barometers of stock market activity, they explain, make it "hard to believe that Miss Forbush will not have her way," a statment likely to be viewed as the ultimate expression of optimism in an optimistic year.

In fact, contrary thinkers - those who question trends, consensus views, and expressions of optimism - may see the viewpoint as evidence of the smug euphoria that, they say, comes before any stock market fall.

The Salomon researchers, however, aren't without ammunition to defend their view, and they point them out right at the beginning of their Interest rates, they note, have fallen to the lowest level in five years, moderate economic growth has left credit markets in good condition, and the dollar has fallen 20 percent in less than a year. That's only the beginning of the bright picture. They continue: Inflation has been only moderate, oil prices are weakening, Congress seems to be facing tax and deficit problems, there are underutilized resources in the economy, and the Federal Reserve's posture have been "accommodative."

This is how ML's chief economist, Donald H. Straszheim, pictures next year:

"1987 will be another year of real growth (2.9 percent in our forecast), not appreciably different from the fresh-start year of 1986 (3.1 percent), but better than the soft-landing year of 1985 (2.4

Small volcanic island emerges near Iwo Jima

TOKYO (AP) - Blasting smoke and rocks high into the sky, a small volcanic island is emerging near Iwo Jima in the Pacific Ocean, the Maritime Self Defense Force reported today.

The MSDF vessel Takuyo confirmed the sighting of a new island where smoke was sighted Sunday, about 30 miles south-southwest of Iwo Jima, MSDF spokeswoman Miwa Watanabe said. The Takuyo reported seeing constant spurts of smoke more than a mile into the air, Ms. Watanabe The emerging island was 2,310 feet long, up to 990 feet wide and about 50 feet high, she said. Iwo Jima, a volcanic island in the Pacific that was the sight of a major World War II battle, is about 840 miles south of Tokyo. Ms. Watanabe said new islands near Iwo Jima had been sighted in 1905 and 1908, but submerged

AUTO NEWS Corvette Roadster returns

WARREN, Mich. - In the beginning, all roadsters. were It wasn't until 1963 that the coupe entered the lineup of America's favorite and only - sports car. Then, for awhile,

Now, a decade after the last soft-top Corvette was built, the roadster (sports jargon for convertible) is back - in a style that befits the fastest production car in the world. And everyone will be identical to the 'Vette roadster pacing the Indianapolis 500-Mile Race May 25. Production is set to begin in mid-

February at the Bowling Green, Kentucky assembly plant (the sole producer of Corvette) and an estimated 6,000 Corvette roadsters will be built during the remainder of the '86 model year. A bright-yellow model - identical to showroom models except for special track lights -- will pace the "500." What distinguishes a 1986 Corvette roadster. Other than the specially-fabricated light bar and strobed driving, brake and cornering lamps, the Corvette pace car is identical to the showroom model "If you know anything about the "500," you know the pace car company would never put a car on that track ahead of 33 speeding
