Clinton also signs budget measure raising government's debt ceiling, Social Security earnings limit.

Associated Press

WASHINGTON - For the 12th time this deadlocked budget year, President Clinton signed a stopgap bill Friday to keep government running and to let lawmakers begin a two-week spring break

By voice vote in the House and a 64-24 Senate roll call, lawmakers agreed to temporarily let dozens of agencies function while the two sides continue their relentless battle over the size of job training, health and many other programs for 1996. Without the temporary legislation, large parts of many agencies would have been forced into an election-year closure at midnight that neither party wanted to see.

The White House said Clinton signed the bill in early evening. The resolution keeps the agencies in funds through April 24 — when there will be a bit over five months left in the fiscal year. Clinton also signed another budget measure extending the government's ability to borrow money and letting working Social Security recipients receive higher benefits

Legislators had hoped to complete their 1996 budget business before their Easter-Passover break, which began Friday afternoon. None was more eager to do so than Senate Majority Leader Bob Dole, R-Kan., the GOP presidential candidate who wants this Congress to build a record of Republican achievements. Instead, chagrined lawmakers will return in mid-April facing unresolved spending questions about this year, and having to start work on the 1997 measures.

I think we're 85 percent there, maybe 90 percent," House Appropriations Committee Chairman Bob Livingston, R-La., said of the 1996 legislation. "We're solving issues that have been lin-

WASHINGTON - Using the first court-ordered wiretap on an Internet computer, federal agents tracked down a university student in Argentina and charged him with hacking into U.S. military computers. He gained access to sensitive data on satellites, radiation and engineering. Julio Cesar Ardita, a 22-year-old computer science student and son of a former Argentine military officer, was charged with conducting illegal computer entries from Buenos Aires where he lives, Attorney General Janet Reno told her weekly news con-ference Friday. The entries occurred between July 12 and Dec. 28, 1995, when Ardita's computer and files were seized by order of Argentine Federal Judge Wilma Lopez. She told The Associated Press in Buenos Aires that she is investigating criminal charges brought against Ardita by Telecom Argentina, whose tele-phone lines he used to reach the worldwide Internet.

Grand jury refuses to indict school officials on claim that they locked student in closet

HARLINGEN (AP) - The father of a special education student who was locked in an elementary school closet as punishment is denouncing a grand jury's decision against indicting school officials.

"It's a shame that no one's held accountable," John McKenna said Thursday. "I'm very disappointed about it. It's a sad day when it's been validat-ed to us that yes, you can abuse handi-capped children."

McKenna contends that in 1994, his 11-year-old daughter, Kathleen, was locked in a small closet at Treasure Hills Elementa school.

"From what we can piece together, it was at least three times for 30 minutes to one hour," he said.

The "timeout room," a closet measuring 8 feet high and roughly 4 feet by 5 feet wide, was locked from the outside, the only view from a small wire-mesh window.

After the McKennas filed police reports and notified the school district, Harlingen's fire marshal declared the structure a fire hazard and had it removed from the special education

Nottingham's businesses seek facelift for community

NOTTINGHAM, England (AP) - Like the gentry of old Nottingham, business and some civic leaders have had quite enough of Robin Hood.

They want a new image for this city identified with the swashbuckling hero of medieval myth 'and modern movies. For them, a hero who steals from the rich and gives to the poor doesn't strike the right tone

But traditionalists are fuming at the prospect of the famed outlaw being sidelined for some ad agency 'line about investment opportunities

Just go a few blocks past the Robin Hood theme center on Maid Marian Way to city hall, and ask the Sheriff of Nottingham.

"People don't come to look at Nottingham's business world they know nothing about it," says Sheriff Roy Greensmith, a retired rail man, city council member and current holder of the now ceremonial title.

'Visitors come because of the connection between the Sheriff and the legend of Robin Hood.

After 17 years of Conservative government, unease has grown in Nottingham about the town's link to an outlaw and a band of Merry Men armed with bows and arrows. Two years ago, the city council, business and volunteer groups got together and commissioned a London firm to find out how people on the outside see this city of 280,000 on the edge of Sherwood Forest.

• The answer was simple: They see Robin Hood. And not much else.

Now it's decision time. Four advertising agencies charged with finding something short and snappy — along the lines of "I Love New York" — make their presen-tations in a couple of weeks.

"Imagine a city as a brand," savs Simon Wilkinson, chief executive of Nottingham First, a group of lawyers, accountants and other professionals pushing for change. 'Then you want an image, an ad-Jike jingle.

"Saying 'The Robin Hood City' is saying it's a nice little place to go for a look-round, a bit of history, but it doesn't say much else. Besides, he says, "I could say stealing from the rich and giving to the poor is a novel way of running professional business.

City officials advocate compromise - something new without ditching Robin. Labor veterans 'like Sheriff Greensmith have gone long with the search for a image, but they don't see what's wrong with Robin Hood in the first place. "There is a need in this country today for a social conscience, says Greensmith, his rail union badge pinned alongside his formal chain of office. "And if Robin Hood is not the personification of social conscience, I don't know what is. Business leaders point out that with 11-percent unemployment several points above the national average - the city should be more concerned about attracting Japanese computer chip plants and Ger-man electronics companies than with keeping the legend of Robin Hood alive. Not so, says Ian Walker, man-ager of Tales of Robin Hood, a privately owned, $2.3-million theme center with 45 staff members. "This is what they are trying to destroy, all this folklore and history," he says, showing a visitor shelves of Robin Hood dish towels, little arrows and Sherwood Forest T-shirts. As Walker's promotional litera-ture acknowledges, there's no proof that Robin Hood actually existed. His grave has never been found

Eiffel Tower takes on new attraction

PARIS (AP) — Visitors to the Eiffel Tower will now get more than a great view: They'll get a les-son in how the monument was built.

Operations manager Didier-Paul de Bacque said the new sexhibit unveiled Thursday was intended to be "state-of-the-art modern, which, after all, was what the tower was when it opened in 1889

The new attractions will open to the public this weekend. They include the Feroscope, a large glass sphere inlaid with peepholes through which people can scruti-nize details of the tower's construction. Using interactive video screens, visitors can "paint" the tower, selecting from an electron-ic palette to see how it would look dressed in pink, yellow, or even plaid.

Another innovation is the Summit Movements Observatory, which demonstrates "live" the motion of the tower's point due to wind and sun.

Police search for killer along border after women turn up dead

CIUDAD JUAREZ, Mexico (AP) — Gregorio Castro rides the desert, searching the sunbaked dunes for signs of trouble.

In the last 2 1/2 weeks, police have found the bodies of five young women in Lomas de Poleo, a com-munity in the hills of Ciudad Juarez. So now the young cowboy has taken it upon himself to get on his horse and patrol among the few homes scattered over this rugged region studded with cactus and thorny brush.

"I know all the people who live here," Castro said. "Anyone I see that I don't know, I will stop them. If I see a light in the middle of the night, I will saddle my horse and find out what it is.'

Wariness abounds, in part because the bodies of nine women were found dumped in another part of the city last year. Investigators, however, doubt those slayings are connected to the latest ones

Police found the first body March 13 and have since discovered four more, three in the last week. Authorities have yet to identify any of them. But all five appear to have been in their late teens, State Judicial Police spokesman Ernesto Garcia said Friday.

One girl was strangled, another stabbed, he said. Autopsies and other tests are still being performed on the others, but all are believed to have been slain.

Residents suspect a serial killer is on the loose.

'We don't know if there is one killer, or two or five or 20," Garcia said.

Authorities eventually arrested an Egyptian immigrant, Sharif

Mrs. Clinton tells women to demand rights

ATHENS, Greece (AP) - Touring this cradle of freedom, Hillary Rodham Clinton declared Friday that for democracy to truly succeed in America and other nations women must "become equal partners in society.

Too many women and children live "on the margins of society," she said, urging nations to better feed and educate the young and to give women improved health care, jobs, credit, legal protection and political rights.

"No country does enough to invest in its children or families," she said.

The remarks, following her tour of Athens and the remnants of its ancient democracy, mixed strong words and symbols to enforce the main theme of her eight-day European trip: The world prospers if women and children prosper.

In Greece for three days, she also hoped to soothe hurt feelings over Atlanta's successful bid for the Olympics. Greece, the birthplace of the athletic competition, had hoped to host the centennial anniversary of the modern Games. She will take part Saturday in the torch-lighting ceremony.

Standing on a hillside below the Parthenon, the crowning glory of Greek architecture, Mrs. Clinton told reporters Friday, "This is where it started. And we all owe such a debt of gratitude to the ancient Athenians who created this concept of democracy.

'We all have to try to perfect it." She picked up the theme later in an address at the Zappeion, a neoclassic building in central Athens. Surrounded by towering Ionic columns in a sunny courtyard, Mrs. Clinton said, "Democracy takes a lot of hard work."

'It has its imperfections," she said, "but it remains the most equitable, just and productive system of government ever devised.

She said a government is oblig-ed to spread "the fruits of democracy and peace" to its people by promoting economic stability, religious and social harmony, human rights, a healthy and educated population and laws that protect everybody.

"Democracy cannot succeed without the participation of all its citizens - men and women," she said to an audience of Greek leaders. "Clearly, our two nation have come closer than most to fulfilling that ideal. But we still have not achieved it."

The problem: "We see too many people who remain on the margins of society," especially women and children, Mrs. Clinton said.

Too many children are "hungry, unhealthy, unschooled and unloved," she said. Too many women lack what she called "the tools of opportunity," such as legal protection and good health care.

Using a windowless basement room in the Capitol as their headquarters, legislators struggling to complete a $160 billion measure covering the rest of the year had narrowed differences over education, the environment, housing and Clinton's prized national service program.

But they halted their efforts for now and quickly pushed the shortterm bill through Congress after concluding that they could not quickly solve their remaining disputes.

These included administration opposition to Republican provisions easing commercial use of federal forests, wetlands and California's Mojave Desert and ed to their demands for a seven-requiring the dismissal of soldiers year balanced budget. term solution to the 1996 budget fight, Clinton was ready to use his pen to end another fiscal problem for a longer time. He planned to sign a bill extending the Treasury's borrowing authority to $5.5 trillion - up from $4.9 trillion and enough to let the government pay its bills well into 1997.

For months, Republicans had used the borrowing legislation as a political weapon, refusing to send it to Clinton unless he accedtalks between the two sides failed and Republicans bore most public blame for forcing two federal shutdowns, GOP leaders eased their combative tactics.

Instead, they placed two provi-sions on the debt-limit legislation that both they and Clinton favored: one boosting Social Security benefits for recipients who still work, the other granting new authority for small businesses to challenge federal regulations in court. Congress approved the leg-islation on Thursday.

The Social Security language raises the current limit on outside earnings from $11,520 to $12,500 this year and to $30,000 by 2002. Fecipients between the ages of 65 and 69 lose $1 in benefits for each $3 they earn above the limit.

Also Friday, the House sent Clinton a bill limiting punitive damage awards in faulty-product lawsuits. Though supporters say the measure would thwart frivolous lawsuits that raise consumer prices, Clinton has threatened to veto the legislation. Opponents say it would allow insufficient compensation for victims of defective products.

The House vote on the liability legislation was 259-158 - 19 votes shy of the two-thirds majority needed to override a veto. The Senate approved the bill last week by 59-40, also shy of the two-thirds margin.

Upon Congress' return April 15  the day income tax returns are due - Republicans plan a pair of votes that while destined to lose will demonstrate their conservative fiscal philosophy. The House will vote on making it harder for Congress to raise taxes, and there will be a renewed Senate effort to approve a constitutional amendment requiring a balanced federal budget.

Computer wiretap produces hacking charges

WASHINGTON (AP) - Using the first military, NASA and other university computcourt-ordered wiretap on an Internet computer, federal agents tracked down a university student in Argentina and charged him with hacking into U.S. military computers. He gained access to sensitive data on satellites, radiation and engineering.

Julio Cesar Ardita, a 22-year-old computer science student and son of a former Argentine military officer, was charged with conducting illegal computer entries from Buenos Aires where he lives, Attorney General Janet Reno told her weekly news conference Friday.

The entries occurred between July 12 and Dec. 28, 1995, when Ardita's computer and files were seized by order of Argentine Federal Judge Wilma Lopez. She told The Associated Press in Buenos Aires that she is investigating criminal charges brought against Ardita by Telecom Argentina, whose telephone lines he used to reach the worldwide Internet.

Ardita remains free, but Lopez plans to question him further.

U.S. investigators would arrest him if he came to this country, but the three U.S. felony charges, all related to illegal computer entry, are not extraditable offenses under U.S.-Argentine treaties.

Reno and Donald K. Stern, U.S. attorney in ed to ascribe a me while the U.S. investigation continues. They emphasized that Ardita got access to confidential and sensitive government information but not classified national security files. 'It's not a national security leak," Stern said. Last November and December, a courtordered wiretap was placed on the computer run by Harvard University's Faculty of Arts and Sciences on the Internet. Authorities said Ardita broke into that computer first last summer, stole passwords from some of its 16,500 legitimate users and used the Harvard computer as a platform to penetrate ers on the Internet.

This marks the first time that a person making criminal misuse of a computer has been tracked down using a court-ordered wiretap on the computer network," Reno said. In previous arrests of computer criminals, government agents were invited to monitor computer networks by their operators. The warrant was obtained because the Harvard computer - unlike those in previous cases does not regularly warn users of possible monitoring.

'This is a case of cybersleuthing, a glimpse of what computer crime-fighting will look like in the coming years," Stern said.

Police typically try to learn a criminal's appearance and methods. "Here we asked the same kind of questions, except we put them into a computer program," Stern said. "We found out what passwords he was using, ... what patterns of speech he was using, ... the names of the programs he was using. We even took a look at what his hangouts were, where he was choosing to enter.'

government computer program called Eyewatch searched all communications on the Harvard computer for Ardita's telltale trademarks so investigators could pick them out to any files.

Judge Lopez said Ardita studies computer science and communications at the Universidad Argentina John F. Kennedy in Buenos Aires. He could not be reached for comment at his residence. His father, Julio Rafael Ardita, is a consultant to the Argentine Congress, records show.

Garza said that last summer the government first detected an illegal entry, now believed to be Ardita's work, at the Naval Command, Control and Ocean Surveillance Center in San Diego. Later, he broke into computers at the Naval Research Laboratory in Washington, NASA's Jet Propulsion Laboratory in Pasadena, Calif., NASA's Ames Research Center at Moffett Field, Calif., and Los Alamos National Laboratory in New Mexico, Garza said.

Ardita failed 90 times to enter the Army Research Laboratory computer at Aberdeen, Md., Garza added, but he successfully broke into computers at the California Institute of Technology, the University of Massachusetts, Northeastern University, and in Korea, Mexico, Taiwan, Chile and Brazil.

Assessing the damage, Stephen P. Heymann, a federal prosecutor in Boston, said it cost more than $100,000 just to investigate the intrusions at NASA's computers and to recon-Reno said, "This is an example of how the Fourth Amendment (prohibiting illegal searches) and a court order can be used to protect rights while adapting to modern technology. Heymann said four screening steps, including computerized searches designed to pick up no more than 80 characters, were used to avoid intercepting communications of innocent third parties. Out of hundreds of thousands of communications on the Harvard network, investigators believe that they read only two messages that might not have been sent by Ardita, Heymann said.

In memory of Selena 1971-1995

SELENA: Singer's legacy lives on

lifestyle sometimes passes for substance, controversy for celebrity

She was the undisputed queen of Tejano, a blend of Mexican cumbias and rancheras spiced with elements of pop and country and propelled by the accordion.

The music originated in the 1800s in Texas when, it is believed, European immigrants introduced the accordion into the Texas-Mexico region. But Selena was one of the bright young stars who helped reinvent the music for a younger generation. She fused Mexican dance rhythms with MTV-era technology and incorporated ballads, touches of rock and hip-hop, rhythms from the Caribbean.

She captured the imagination of a culture, inspired thousands of girls and led a music genre toward mainstream acceptance. Her appeal crossed generational, cultural and geographic lines.

One year later, Selena's legacy continues to unfold in music, on TV and movies and in pop culture.

'Dreaming of You," which contained new songs in English and earlier Tejano hits, was the best-selling album in the country when it was released in July 1995

So far it has sold 2.5 million copies. And as the anniversary of her death approached, the CD was still No. 1 on the Billboard Latin 50 album chart, where it had been for 33 consecutive weeks

At one point last spring, five of Selena's CDs were on Billboard's pop charts at the same time, a feat accomplished only by the likes of Garth Brooks and the Beatles.

Selena's legacy can be heard at Corpus Christi's Q Productions, where music by artists such as 12-year-old Jennifer Pena is arranged, directed and produced by Selena's father, Abraham Quintanilla Jr., and her brother A.B. III.

Pena and her band Los Jets previewed songs from her highly anticipated debut album "Dulsura" at a recent performance in San Antonio's Market Square. The Q Production team clearly has applied the same musical formula to her that helped lift Selena to the top - an emphasis on keyboard-driven, pop-inflectce cumbias dented turnout for the "Selena" movie casting call March 16 in Market Square. Almost 6,000 people from throughout Texas and Mexico tried out for the parts of Selena at ages 8 and 18. At one point the line of aspiring Selenas stretched from the Centro De Artes building all the way to Interstate 35, three blocks . away. Thousands of girls wearing black pants or skirts, caps, bustiers and bright red lipstick jammed the square in a surreal scene.

Selena's mother, Marcella, said the impressive turnout was bittersweet.

'This is wonderful, and it makes me feel good that Selena had a lot of fans," she said. "I have been listening to the interviews, and they say they see her as a role model and look up to her, and they want to follow her footsteps and have a chance to be in the movie.

'That makes me feel good. But it's also been very hard for me because I see a lot of girls who look like Selena, and I have mixed emotions. I wish I had Selena here, that we wouldn't have to be going through this. But she is in the hearts of everyone here.'

Selena's popularity has transcended South Texas and has had an impact on pop culture. She has inspired hero worship similar in intensity, if not magnitude, to that surrounding Elvis Presley when he died in 1977. According to the Memphis press, 30,000 mourners filed by Elvis' casket.

The media reported the same number passed by Selena's coffin in Corpus Christi. The coffin had to be opened midway through her wake to silence rumors that the singer wasn't really dead.

The myth of Selena is apparent in the hundreds of murals painted across Texas, and the tributes devoted to her.

It's apparent in the number of babies christened with her name. Between April and mid-August, 537 newborn girls in Texas were named Selena, according to the state's Bureau of Vital Statistics. That's an average of about 100 a month.

And it's apparent in the parks and pavilions named after her.

To date, at least five books on

DESSA — Two events are scheduled to pay tribute to Selena on Sunday, the first anniversary of her death. Students from Odessa schools will give a musical presentation, "Remembering Our Selena," 4:10 p.m. at Blackshear Elementary School, Murphy and Dixie. For more information call 561-9629. A candlelight vigil, at which her songs will be played, is set for 7:30 p.m. at 1100 S. Grant. For more information call 530-3328.

Selena's husband, Chris Perez, largely has withdrawn from the media spotlight since her death.

He jammed with La Mafia during the Radio y Music Convention in January in Los Angeles, but otherwise he's kept a low profile.

There's street talk about Perez launching a rock band. But Q Productions officials say there are no concrete plans, and Perez was unavailable for comment.

In recent months Selena also has been the subject of several video specials. The most recent was the "Selena" pay-per-view program on Paragon Cable, which generated about 1,500 requests. Cable officials said that was an especially good number since the producers only had three days to promote the event. And then there's the unpreceSelena have been published.

Arctic experiment ends with bitter-sweet deal

TORONTO (AP) decades after an icebreaker deposited them on two desolate Arctic islands, a few Inuit families are getting $7.3 million in government compensation for their hardships. To their dismay, the payout comes with no apology

The deal announced Thursday by the Department of Indian Affairs is intended to end years of inquiries and political wrangling over the controversial relocation project.

But it does not erase the bitterness of surviving Inuit, who say they were pawns in an ill-planned social experiment.

"The absence of an apology is a real slap in the face for us," said John Amagoalik, whose family was among four dropped off on a frigid gravel beach on Cornwallis Island in 1953 at the onset of the Arctic's four-month winter darkness.

The government said at the time that it was moving about 90 Inuit - known then as Eskimos - to the High Arctic because of poor hunting in their home territory, 1,200 miles away in northern Quebec.

The Inuit contend the government wanted to populate Cornwallis and Ellesmere islands to assert Canadian sovereignty and

- Four to test whether the families could survive in primitive conditions. No one disputes that the families volunteered for the move, but there is disagreement over whether they were fully informed about the conditions awaiting them in the Arctic - and the difficulties they would face trying to return to Quebec.

After years of resistance by his predecessors, Indian Affairs Minister Ron Irwin agreed that the government would pay $7.3 million to the surviving members of the 17 Inuit families.

The package includes a $5.9million trust fund and $1.5 million in cash for the 55 living exiles and descendants of those who have since died.

The Inuit say they were dumped on the shores of Resolute Bay and Grise Fjord without any housing or firewood. Some recall scavenging for food in the dump of a military base

The Inuit pressed hard for an outright apology, but the final statement accepted by them and the Indian Affairs Ministry says simply that the hardships resulted "in part because of government planning and implementation."

The officials involved "were acting with honorable intentions in what was perceived to be in the best interests of the Inuit at the time," the agreement says.

John Raynor, assistant deputy minister for the far north, said the government was adamant in refusing an apology.

"History is history," he said in a telephone interview Friday. "At the time, this relocation was done with every best intention to benefit these particular people."

Some retired officials were opposed to paying compensation, saying the Inuit would have starved to death in northern Quebec and now were manipulating white guilt to make money.

"I don't think for a minute that they suffered any real hardship,' Gordon Robertson, a former commissioner of the Northwest Territories, told the Ottawa Citizen.

Such remarks infuriate the Inuit survivors, who remember disease and hunger during that first winter in an environment they were ill-prepared to deal with.

"How dare they talk like that when they're not the ones that went," said Martha Flaherty, who was a toddler when her family was moved to the High Arctic. "They don't know what we went through.

Senate candidate Morales says he's not afraid student loan dispute will derail political career

Dem's wife has $27,000 outstanding Indian Health Service education loan.

Associated Press

MARSHALL (AP) - Democratic U.S. Senate candidate Victor Morales said Friday he's not worried that his improbable political career will be derailed by a dispute with the federal government over a $27,000 student loan to his wife.

"There is now a little bit of a problem going around in my campaign about a student grant, loan, whatever. And the newsmen are asking me 'Are you not concerned this might hurt your political career?" Morales told an audience at the Suburban Acres Nursing Center.

'And I said, no ma'am, because I know who I am, I know where I stand, I don't go by what other peo-ple think. I live my life, and I feel secure," he said.

It was the first time Morales addressed the flap over the loan in a campaign speech, although several Texans said they're not concerned about the matter.

Morales and his April 9 runoff opponent, U.S. Rep. John Bryant, spoke at the nursing home after appearing at the Gregg County Democratic Party's candidate forum in Longview. One will claim the nomination to challenge Republican Sen. Phil Gramm in November.

In Longview, neither candidate brought up the issue of Dani Morales' outstanding Indian Health Service education loan. But both fielded media questions about it.

"My initial reaction is, if you have an overdue and outstanding student loan, you've got to pay that back before you start loaning money to your campaign,' said Bryant, who as the Moraleses' congressman said he had tried to help them resolve the loan issue in the past.

Official keeps arrest warrant for shock jock Stern on books

HARLINGEN (AP) - Justice of the Peace Eloy Cano says freedom of speech is alive and well in South Texas, except when it comes to Howard Stern.

That's why an arrest warrant he issued for Stern remains on the books nearly a year after the radio shock jock made disparaging remarks about slain Tejano star Selena.

"I wasn't doing it for the glory, Cano said Thursday. "I was doing it because it was the right thing to do. I have no regrets at all.

Cano issued the warrant for disorderly conduct after Stern made offensive comments about Selena and Hispanic culture following the singer's March 31, 1995, murder.

"Alvin and the Chipmunks have more soul. ... Spanish people have the worst taste in music. They have no depth," Stern said on his nation-ally syndicated show. He also mixed in sounds of gunfire with a tape of Selena's music and ridiculed the shape of her body.

Stern later apologized for the remarks, which were not broad-

"When they say, 'Do you think this will hurt you politically?', that's the least of my worries," said Morales, a Dallas-area teacher. "I fully was prepared that this was going to happen. I expected it, but we are clear of conscience.

Mrs. Morales' scholarship would have been forgiven if she worked in a health-related job helping Indians after she graduated from Texas Woman's University in the mid-1980s.

Morales says she was unable to find an appropri-ate job until three years later. By then she was married, had young children and was not in a position to pursue it, he said.

Bryant said he recalls speaking to Morales about the student loan when the couple sought his help. He said he has asked his staff to review his records on their case Asked why he had not raised the matter when Morales entered the race, Bryant said, "I knew about this but I thought it was case work and I wasn't going to mention it.

One of those attending the Longview forum, Pat-sy Kirk, said she wasn't concerned about the loan issue

'Her student loan is not the dad-burned issue," said Ms. Kirk 41, of Longview. "His background cannot be any worse than anybody up there in Washington already. It would not bother me one iota.

In Marshall, Tonya Marks said she hadn't made up her mind about which candidate to support until she heard Morales and Bryant speak. Now she plans to vote for Morales.

"I think we need more people like that. I liked Vic-tor Morales. He's not a politician. I think the politicians who are there, if they can't keep the government running, then they don't need to be there," said Ms. Marks, 25, a homemaker from Henderson.

Enraged Hispanic groups called for boycotts of the show and its advertisers. The boycotts have since been lifted but not the warrant, which was based on a complaint filed by Laura Barboza, Cano's secretary.

The warrant means Stern could be arrested as soon as he steps foot in Texas. Disorderly conduct is a Class C misdemeanor, punishable by a maximum fine of $500.

The arrest order can be voided if Cano or Ms. Barboza pull it or if Ms. Barboza dies.

Atlantis heads home early with leaky hydraulics BILL'S FENCE CRAFT

SPACE CENTER, Houston (AP) - Atlantis' astronauts headed for an early return to Earth today because of a steering-system leak, after dropping off a shuttle crewmate at Russia's space station for a five-month stay.

NASA shortened the shuttle mission by one day because of the hydraulic trouble and cloudy, windy weather in the forecast later in the weekend at Cape Canaveral, Fla.

Because of the leak, the space agency wanted to give the crew a greater margin of safety and bring the shuttle home in the best possible weather.

Atlantis sprang the leak in one of three identical hydraulic systems during liftoff on March 22, and NASA briefly considered ending the mission as soon as the shuttle delivered astronaut Shannon Lucid to space station Mir. But the space agency decided it would be safe for the shuttle to proceed with five days of docked flight with Mir

On Friday, three of Atlantis' 38 primary steering thrusters failed during a routine check. But the problem was not considered serious Atlantis was scheduled to land at Cape Canaveral just before 9 a.m. CST today. Forecasters' only concern was fog.

German soldiers patrol former Yugoslavia for first time since WW II

RASELJKE, Bosnia-Herzegov-ina (AP) — Senior cadet Dirk Roester downshifts his supply truck over mountains where an earlier generation of German soldiers battled Yugoslav partisans during World War II.

His mission, however, is peaceful. The 14-vehicle column is making a seven-hour trip to deliver bullets, toilet paper, boot polish and food from a depot in Croatia to British soldiers camped out in the Bosnian Serb town of Sipovo.

Roester is among about 2,700 German soldiers sent to four bases in Croatia to provide support for NATO-led forces camped out in Bosnia. They are carrying out Germany's first true military mission abroad since World War II proof to the country's NATO allies that Germany is willing to put its soldiers at risk in the name of peace.

The significance of the mission was drilled into the soldiers before they arrived. They heard lectures on the atrocities committed by Hitler's troops. And they were told to be moderate drinkers and model soldiers, on their best behavior with civilians.

The Germans are quartered in relatively comfortable, prefab buildings at their seaside Croatian bases. They go sightseeing, dine out and drink beer after hours, luxuries denied their American comrades in Bosnia.

But their work is hazardous.

Some drive convoys across the former confrontation lines in Bosnia to deliver essentials to other NATO soldiers. Others clear minefields in Bosnia and are building a bridge in Visoko, near Sarajevo, for use by NATO-led troop's.

"We value very highly the German contribution. They are taking their share of rough times," says Lt. Col. Mark Rayner, a spokesman for the NATO-led ground troops in Bosnia.

On March 15, at the Visoko bridge site, a German engineer was injured by a mine blast. A week later, another mine exploded beneath a German armored vehicle at the same site, but caused no casualties.

Most Bosnian Serbs don't want the Germans in Bosnia because is horrible because innocent civil-German troops and their fascist Croatian allies massacred Serbs during World War II. Along with the usual hazards — land mines, bandits coveting NATO equipment German troops face the possibility that someone might try to avenge the bloodshed of half a century ago.

So when German troops travel into Bosnia, they go ready for trouble.

The 30 soldiers in Roester's convoy wear flak vests and helmets. Their assault rifles are loaded. A small tank with a 20-mm cannon is leading the convoy, and another brings up the rear. There's a chemical toilet on one truck, sparing soldiers a walk into the woods - where there could be land mines when nature calls.

After World War II, successive leaders in Bonn had interpreted unclear passages in the post-war German constitution as forbidding them to send troops to non-NATO areas.

Pressure mounted on Germany to change the policy after the country's reunification in 1990 and after the 1991 Gulf War, in which Germany did not take part despite grumbling among its allies.

British Queen ends Czech visit

PRAGUE, Czech Republic (AP) - Queen Elizabeth II wound up her visit to the Czech Republic on Friday with a brief tour of Prague enlivened by thousands of flagwaving citizens.

The queen and prince Philip were on a three-day official visit to the Central European country on the invitation of President Vaclav Havel.

"I know that Prague, a city of which any continent would be proud, will be a worthy European City of Culture in the year 2000," she said in a brief speech.

Prague and eight other cities, including Avignon in southern France and Krakow in Poland, will receive the honorary title awarded by a European Union commission in four years.

The queen received a symbolic key for the city's gates before viewing the Town Hall's astronomical clock, one of the city's best-known tourist attractions.

The prince visited Prague's traditional Staropramen brewery, recently taken over by the British giant Bass PLC.

Illegal immigrants start fire, riot in military stockade

MIRAMAR NAVAL AIR STATION, Calif. (AP) — Illegal immigrants jailed in a Navy brig started a fire and rioted Friday afternoon, the military said.

Several injured inmates were taken to Scripps Hospital in La Jolla, said Marine Staff Sgt. Arnold Patterson. San Diego police were called to the hospital because the inmates were causing a disturbance there, he said.

No details on the number injured or the hospital disturbance were available.

The rioting and fire began at 1:15 p.m., and all branches of the military and bases throughsmoke could be seen rising from the brig on the sprawling air station, which was closed to the media and other civilians. The fire was extinguished by 2 p.m.

U.S. Attorney Alan Bersin got permission last year to use the stockade as a second jail for federal inmates and criminal illegal immigrants to ease overcrowding at the downtown San Diego federal detention center.

Miramar's brig, which holds prisoners from out Southern California, has room for 360 prisoners with one prisoner to a cell.

ernment witness who implicated President Clinton in a deal that brought charges against Clinton's business partners admitted Thursday that he sent a forged document to a federal agency. The witness, Bill Watt, testified that he did so to pressure David Hale to pay off a $10,000 loan he said Hale conned him into taking from Hale's federally backed small business lending company.

Watt testified in the federal trial of Gov. Jim Guy Tucker and Clinton's Whitewater real estate partners James and Susan McDougal. Hale is expected to be LITTLE ROCK (AP) - A gov- the government's chief witness in the trial, which is in its fourth week.

Later Thursday, prosecutors suggested that Watt had tried to encourage other potential wit nesses to resist Whitewater investigators by referring them to lawyers who had been in contact with Clinton's lawyer, David Kendall, prompting angry objections from the defense.

"Is there anything wrong with someone having a lawyer and them getting together when you're fighting a $1 million-a-month prosecution machine?" McDougal lawyer Sam Heuer asked.

On Wednesday, Watt said he was told by Hale that Clinton pressed Hale to complete an $825,000 loan in another transaction which is at the center of the indictment accusing Tucker and the McDougals.

Hale also has publicly alleged that Clinton pressured him to make a loan of $300,000 in 1986 to Susan McDougal. Clinton has said Hale's tale is "a bunch of bull."

An application for the loan from Hale's Small Business Administration-backed lending company to Watt said the money would be used to set up a law practice to accommodate business that Watt would conduct when he was not on the bench. That would have met federal restrictions on the loan.

"David has a habit of representing that everybody else's money is his money," Watt testified. When he found out that he had violated federal law. Watt said he nearly came to blows with Hale about the loan outside a Little Rock restaurant.

Watt acknowledged under oath that he later produced a document truthfully itemizing how he spent the money and forged Hale's signature onto it. He said he meant to use it only to threaten Hale, but that he later sent the document to the SBA while negotiating to repay the loan. He said he paid the note in full in February.

House passes bill to limit punitive damage awards; veto likely

WASHINGTON (AP) - Threatened with a veto, the House sent President Clinton legislation Fri-day to limit punitive damage awards in faulty-product lawsuits. Supporters from both parties called on Clinton to reconsider his promise.

By a vote of 259-158 - 19 votes shy of the number needed to override a veto — the House approved the compromise measure pushed by business groups.

It was at most half a loaf for House Republicans, who have contended that legal overhaul legislation is needed to stem a tide of frivolous lawsuits. A far more sweeping package affecting all civil lawsuits, not just product-liability cases, was passed by the House a year ago as part of the GOP's "Contract With America."

Last week, the Senate passed the faulty-products bill by a 59-40 vote. That was a victory for Senate Majority Leader Bob Dole, Clinton's presumed election rival, but

House Republicans question Democrat's ethics

WASHINGTON (NYT) — As an Cause's legislative director. independent counsel toils behind McGehee advocates the cre the scenes on his investigation of House Speaker Newt Gingrich, Republicans have launched an ethics counteroffensive against Democrats.

Three complaints have been filed in recent months against two Democratic leaders, and Republicans have made trade unions the target of an Federal Election Commission complaint modeled after one filed against GOPAC, the speaker's former political action committee.

"I guess a little turnabout is fair play," said Rep. John Linder, R-Ga., echoing Republicans' assertions that the Democrats misused the ethics process to attack Gingrich.

when the ethics committee is facing an exceptional workload.

The need to interpret a new gift ban and the committee chairwoman's decision to forgo outside help and conduct her own inquiries has led to more than 80 meetings for a committee that met only a dozen times two years ago.

Common Cause, the public interest lobbying group, and several House members say the recent machinations are proof that the ethics system is hopelessly tainted by politics and ought to be changed.

'This is a very political and very partisan Congress, and it's spilling over into the ethics committee,' said Meredith McGehee, Common for which the Michigan Democrat

McGehee advocates the creation of an independent Office of Ethics Counsel to interpret the rules, investigate complaints and recommend sanctions.

Linder and other Republicans have suggested inserting a provi-sion that if someone files a ethics complaint that is later dismissed, that person must cover the costs incurred by their target. "There's got to be some risk in it," Linder said.

Rep. Porter Goss, R-Fla., a member of the ethics committee, had planned to hold hearings on revamping the ethics process until he was named chairman of the subcommittee overseeing the Gingrich investigation.

Committee Chairwoman Nancy The tug-of-war comes at a time Johnson acknowledges that her panel has been tainted by the bitter atmosphere in the House. "The complaints reflect the tension in the chamber," she said

"But if a system doesn't work in the hard times, it won't work at all. It's our job to make it work," she added.

Since the panel began considering ethics charges against Gin-grich, two complaints have been filed against the speaker's chief antagonist, House Minority Whip David Bonior, by the Landmark Legal Foundation, an organization whose financial backers include some wealthy GOPAC backers. One complaint focuses on a 12year-old book on Vietnam veterans Atlantic Records will release the new Hootle & The Blowfish single to radio stations across the country Monday.

For over 1,000 stations, the new song, "Old Man and Me," will not come via the traditional delivery person, but instead by modem. The audio-via-ISDN lines promises to deliver sound-quality equal to that heard on compact disc, according to Atlantic.

KBAT, Midland-Odessa's album rock station, is one of the stations set to receive the new Hootie via ISDN lines.

Bob Gerhard, the station's program director, says the station will transfer the audio to tape around 9 a.m. If all goes well, the song from the popular South Carolina band will make its debut sometime Monday morning.

"This is something we've seen the possibility of for a long time," Gerhard said. "For me personally, it's exiciting to see our industry moving in this direction."

The new Hootie and the Blowfish album is set for an April 23 release.

Surf carefully: They know who visits

N.Y. Times News Service

It's great fun to surf the Internet's World Wide Web by clicking on a link found on one page to connect to still another. That's surfing, and it'll take you to a wild variety of Web sites around the world.

Some of them are pretty seamy places. Without really trying, you can end up at pages devoted to hard-core sex, racism and violence. Some are the kind of places where you frankly wouldn't want to be seen.

But — although it may come as a surprise to some newcomers — each Web page is capable of keeping a complete record of who you are. It's just part of how the Web works. A Web server — the computer that is host to the page you visit — automatically tracks the address that identifies your computer on the Net (called an IP). It can also record the name of the page you visited before that one and, in some cases, your e-mail address.

That potential for abuse is seldom realized. Most Webmasters don't use that information for evil. But since there is that possibility, a wise Web user will learn about the potential for harm on the Net. If you'd like to read more about the privacy and security implications of using the Web, visit The World Wide Web Security FAQ at http://wwwgenome.wi.mit.edu/WWW/faqs/www-security-faq.html. Lots of information

In Net lingo, FAQ stands for frequently asked questions. Most of these FAQs are a bit on the dry side — there are none of the usual flashy graphics. But most, like this one, are packed with information.

Security is an important issue on the Net. The very ability to be able to communicate seamlessly with people from around the world also means it is possible for people from around the world to know your business.

For instance, if you send an e-mail message or post a comment in one of the Usenet newsgroups, everyone will know your e-mail address.

Even if your comment or note is perfectly innocent, there may be times when you would rather not have your identity known. For instance, a controversial comment can open the door to a deluge of e-mail.

SEATTLE — As Microsoft Network passes the million-subscriber milestone, its new programming and content manager says the fledgling online and Internet access service is undergoing a major overhaul.

Bob Bejan, executive producer for Microsoft Network in the United States, said the company is planning to relaunch the seven-month-old service to mark its transition from a proprietary online service to a World Wide Web site fully integrated into the Internet.

"You can look for a bold, pretty sweeping change in (Microsoft Network's) look and feel, and in what the program offerings are going to be," Bejan said Monday.

He would not divulge what the changes would be. And while Bejan declined to say specifically when the re-launch would take place, a revamped news site within the network — and possibly the entire network — is scheduled to debut April 1.

Bejan joined Microsoft two weeks ago to boost the content available over the network. He reports to Microsoft Vice President Russ Siegelman, who runs the Microsoft Network division.

"In the past, finding the desired information on the Internet has involved tracking down and using multiple searches," said Halsey Minor, CEO of C/NET.

"Search.com changes everything by providing a single point of entry into the Internet's most exciting information services."

Search.com features new technology that lets users personalize the site by placing their favorite search services right on the home page. The patent-pending technology "makes it possible for personalized pages to be delivered to users as fast as the static, unpersonalized variety on the Web today," said Jonathan Rosenberg, C/NET's executive vice president of technology.

In an effort to stay abreast of the rapid growth of the Web, C/NET officials said they plan to continually review and add new search tools to the site. "One of the beauties of Search.com is that our editors will always be able to steer viewers to the most advanced engines available," said Kevin Wendle, executive producer of C/NET Online.

Search.com is C/NET's third Web site. The company also operates C/NET Online (www.cnet.com), a counterpart to C/NET television show; and Shareware.com (www.shareware.com), which provides links to sites offering inexpensive and free software.

Consider the 1996 major league season exciting for a couple of reasons: First, it appears the sport will actually make it intact through its first 162-game season in three years, and second, '96 marks the first year when resources galore exist on the widelyaccessible, largely free web.

There are a few pitfalls for baseball fans. Most notably, a great deal of the sites devoted to the sport are little more than glorified advertisements

If you'd like to be able to send e-mail anonymously, the Web can help.

. There are several sites on the Web where you can enter a message and have it e-mailed anonymously. One is called Noah's Place http://www.lookup.com/Homepages/64499/anon.html. You enter the message and intended e-mail address right on the page, and the note is sent anonymously. It goes without saying that these anonymous remailers should not be used to harass someone, or as part of any illegal activity.

Using encryption

Most people won't need to send an anonymous e-mail message. But many computer users will, at one time or another, find the need to send an encrypted message. That's one that can only be decoded by someone with the proper "key" on the other end. Until the key is used, the contents of the message are locked away from prying eyes.

One of the Net's most popular encryption programs is called PGP, which stands for Pretty Good Privacy. If you'd like to learn more, the Cryptography and PGP Page

APPLE: PC sales also sluggish in first half

(From 1B)

An Apple spokeswoman said a bulk of the company's loss is from a $125 million restructuring charge it announced in January; in addition, she said the company will post an operating loss.

"Apple isn't moving enough product, but neither is Com-paq," said Daniel Kunstler, senior technology analyst at J.P. Morgan Securities Inc. in San Francisco, noting Apple's staggering inventory of $1.94 billion. "Demand is slow in the consumer market while corporations are sitting on their hands waiting for (Microsoft Corp.'s) Windows NT (operating sys-tem) to ship."

Indeed, all signs are that the PC market is experiencing a sluggish patch before sales pick up in the second half of the year, according to industry analysts.

Sales of computers to U.S. consumers will grow just 8 percent in 1996, after three consecutive years of double-digit growth, Dataquest Inc. said on Monday. The market research company said domestic home sales will actually fall 2.3 percent in 1998.

MSN: Spokesman touts network as super WWW site

(From 1B)

"Microsoft's ability to bring me into the fold really indicates how serious we are about becoming a media company and all that that means," he said.

Microsoft Network's Aug. 24 debut coincided with the release of Microsoft's Windows 95 operating system. At the time, established computer online services feared that easy "one-button" access to the network through Windows 95 would give Microsoft an unfair marketing advantage against other proprietary services such as America Online and CompuServe.

But the rapid growth of the Internet as a low-cost alternative for content providers to get their message out to computer users threatened all proprietary online services. Apple Computer and AT&T decided to close their offerings. AOL, Microsoft and CompuServe restructured, establishing stronger ties to the Internet.

Microsoft Network was initially criticized for being too technical and unappealing to novice computer users

Bejan said Microsoft is in the process of turning the network into kind of super Web site on the global computer network, one that will fully exploit the possibilities of interactive multimedia technologies.

"We're moving to the Web," Bejan said, "so we're really taking that move as an opportunity to re-emerge.'

Microsoft plans to continue to develop content internally and through partnerships, he said. The network recently unveiled a new feature that will offer extensive coverage of the 1996 presidential election, developed as part of the MSNBC joint venture formed by Microsoft and NBC earlier this year.

Microsoft announced Monday that more than 1 million people now subscribe to the network. Chairman Bill Gates said the company reached that mark five months sooner than expected.

"We've been in business seven months and got to 1 million,' Gates said at a conference in New York on the Internet and electronic commerce. "Other services took five years to get there.'

America Online is the largest online service, with more than 5 million subscribers.

Gates said the biggest roadblock to broader use of the Internet is the availability of greater "bandwidth" — connections that can handle more data signals simultaneously.

'The bandwidth problem is one that won't disappear overnight,' he said. "Even at the turn of the century, 90 percent of the people who connect will do so over normal phone lines.

Zip drive: If your hard drive is full of stored files — photos, doc-uments and such — you're a perfect candidate for a Zip Drive. I suggest you transfer everything but programs and your most-used files to a Zip. These drives cost about $200 and use 100- megabyte cartridges, so this is a cheap, expandable option. regular surfer of the web, you'll enjoy the following sites, and quite likely have already found them:

John Skilton's Baseball Links (http://www.pc-professor. com/baseball/) separates baseball into most every subtopic available, from feature sites on the Negro Leagues, to as many minor league pages that are available to a plethora of fantasy listings. In addition, Skilton offers a baseball site of the week. Last week's was a link to something called John Mosey's Fantasy Baseball Home Page (http://www.csd.udm.edu/ ~mosey/).

USA Today's baseball page (http://www.usatoday.com/sports /baseball/sbfant.htm) includes /baseball/sblant.htm) includes links to articles published in last week's Baseball Weekly Fantasy Guide '96 as well as a master list to all known home pages on the web of major league teams run both by fans and some by the clubs themselves. Baseball Weekly, which has quickly grown into the authority on major league ball, is now dumping some of its weekly contents onto the web at http://www.usatoday. com/sports/baseball/sb.htm.

For sheer volume, it's hard to beat the tons of info available at FASTBALL, (http://www.fast-ball.com). Your head will spin from all the links.

There is of course the old standard: ESPNET Sports Zone, at http://webl. starwave.com/mlb/. ESPN provides mostly free information but does have some subscriber-based services. Free info includes breaking news, box scores (which are loaded as they become available each night) features, standings, schedules, stats and transactions. Friday's ESPNet baseball page included articles on the first full-season since 1993 and the latest on Kirby Puckett's injury. Another popular free feature on the page is a column by the ultimate baseball fanatic, Keith Olbermann. There are hundreds more baseball sites; these are a few of the most resourceful. And there is now a Fantasy Base-ball forum available on BasinLink for users so inclined to trade infor-mation lessible observed to trade information locally about fantasy and rotisserie ball. Set your modem to call 570-9999, then enter the forums area in the Permian Basin category for access.

plan."

Fratus said on-line customers can find many other general and specialty bookstores on the Internet — a vast system connecting computers around the world. But he said CompuBooks is the only electronic bookstore not connected with a publisher or a traditional bookstore.

Fratus said Mrs. Munoz, a former information service manager for the state, originally planned to operate the business in her spare time.

"We've spent a lot of time laughing at how naive we were, thinking that this would take only a little time," she said. "Everything we thought was wrong. But we were flexible. We knew the technology was here."

The bookstore not only has taken more time — both Fratus and Munoz work full time at it — it also has taken more and more space.

Originally housed in two rooms, one their daughter's former bedroom, the bookstore now takes up three rooms and a warehouse built next to the couple's home on their four-acre lot in Waller County.

"At one point there were books on the kitchen table, in the hallway and the living room. We had stuff everywhere," Fratus said.

Mrs. Munoz added, "If you could see the master bedroom, you'd see it still."

Mrs. Munoz and Fratus said expected growth soon will force the entire business out of their home. But both said moving it out of their house will not grant them much freedom from the business.

"The phone is always ringing. Orders are always coming in, regardless of what time it is or holidays. We're always open," Mrs. Munoz said.

Fratus added, "The last time we went on a family vacation ... was to Disney World three months before CompuBooks opened."

The store employs opened. including the couple's oldest daughter, 17-year-old Yolanda. She gives the store full-time work during the day, dedicating her evenings to high school.

With flow charts in the office and warehouse, Fratus explains that two workers process orders, Mrs. Munoz handles book purchasing and contracts with various international institutions and a warehouse team of three maintains book stocks and fills orders.

Fratus does most of the financial and administrative work and several other employees help in various positions.

Fratus said he expects to double his staff in the near future. He and Mrs. Munoz hope to get not only their customers but some employees to enter the store via computWhile CompuBooks advertises itself as specializing in computer titles, Mrs. Munoz said the store works with customers to find any books published.

She also said future plans will lead the bookstore to handle more medical titles and more general reading titles.

"We do a lot for our customers," she said.

Sandra Nicholson, of the International Trade Center at the University of Texas at San Antonio, nominated Fratus and Mrs. Munoz for the 1996 Small Business Exporter of the Year award. She said the couple approached the center soon after their first book order came from Italy.

International sales account for more than 50 percent of all CompuBooks sales, with much of that from Japan.

"The cost of a computer book anywhere overseas is double to triple the list price," Fratus said, explaining the high number of international orders.

Ms. Nicholson said Fratus and Mrs. Munoz showed innovation and courage in starting on the Internet.

"CompuBooks has had the courage and business intuition to take advantage of the new technològies... and to ride the wave of the ever expanding Internet," she wrote to the U.S. Small Business Administration.

Reports show trade deficit rising

WASHINGTON (AP) - The cost millions of American jobs. trade deficit widened dramatically at the beginning of the year, climbing to $10.27 billion as imports hit an all-time high and aircraft sales abroad sank to the lowest level in 18 years.

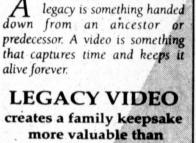

The January deficit, the worst in six months, was 47.6 percent higher than December's $6.96 billion imbalance. The deficits with Japan, China and Mexico all worsened.

While the administration sought to blame temporary factors such as January's bad weather and the fallout from a strike at Boeing for the deterioration, private economists said that weakening economies overseas and a pickup in U.S. demand could spell larger deficits for several more months.

We have seen the best news on trade for a while," said Bob Dederick, chief economic consultant at Northern Trust Co. in Chicago. "We are being hurt by weaker growth in Europe that is causing businesses there to cut back on their inventories.

Dederick said he still believed the overall deficit in goods and services, which climbed to a sevenyear-high of $111.5 billion last year, would decrease this year to around $100 billion. But he said much of the improvement would probably not occur until the second half of the year.

That would be unwelcome news for President Clinton, who has already come under fire from GOP presidential candidates such as Pat Buchanan for pursuing a trade strategy that they say has prised by the magnitude of the deficit increase. Many said they were revising downward their forecasts for overall economic growth, as measured by the gross domestic product, based on the trade report.

Bruce Steinberg, an economist at Merrill Lynch in New York, said he now believed GDP for the January-March period would post a barely discernible 0.5 percent to 1 percent rate of increase.

The administration sought to depict the widening trade deficit in the best light, noting that while U.S. exports fell in relation to December, they have risen over the past 12 months at a faster rate than imports.

U.S. Trade Representative Mickey Kantor said this trend was a major move for American trade in the right direction.

In another report Friday, the government reported that sales of new homes dipped 1.3 percent in February. Analysts discounted the decline, however, noting that sales were actually up in all parts of the country except where the severe weather had caused a 24 percent plunge.

Financial markets had little reaction to Friday's reports. The Dow Jones industrial average was down 11.92 in late afternoon trading

For January, exports of goods and services dropped 2.2 percent to $66.6 billion while imports were up 2.4 percent to a record $76.86 billion. The resulting deficit was the biggest since the $10.98 billion of last July.

The January drop in exports was heavily influenced by commercial aircraft, which fell $726 million to $493 million, the lowest monthly level since February 1978. Analysts attributed this decline primarily to the effects of last year's lengthy strike at Boeing Co..

Other big-ticket capital goods also showed weakness during the month with exports of telecommunications equipment dropping by $420 million, machine tools $134 million and industrial engines $106 million.

Republicans scrutinize Clinton's judicial choices

WASHINGTON (NYT) — For nearly three years President Clinton has carefully burnished his crime-fighter credentials.

He has appeared on the lawn of the White House in a sea of blue uniforms to mark the hiring of new police officers through his anti-crime package. He has championed the popular ban on assault-style weapons, defending it with gusto as Republicans try to repeal it.

In yet another event last week, he stood flanked by police chiefs and local officials including Atlanta's Mayor Bill Campbell to issue an order to kick lawbreakers out of public housing.

But Republicans — who once owned the crime issue and want to retake it in next fall's elections — believe they have found a chink in Clinton's anticrime image: The judges he picks for the federal bench.

'The president talks about putting cops on the beat, yet he appoints judges who are putting crim-inals back on the street," Senate Judiciary Committee Chairman Orrin Hatch, R-Utah, charged last week.

Hatch had been saying similar things for months, but suddenly people are listening, thanks in large part to a controversial ruling by Judge Harold Baer Jr., a Clinton appointee to the U.S. District Court in New York.

In a decision last January, Baer threw out a conviction in which police had seized nearly 80 pounds of cocaine and heroin from a car. The police had no probable cause to conduct the search, he ruled, although they saw four men place duffle bags in a car and then scatter at the sight of the officers.

Baer wrote that because police were considered corrupt in the neighborhood, it would have been 'unusual'''if the men had not run when the officers stared at them.

The storm of criticism that followed left the White House reeling, as aides saw visions of a replay of the Republicans' famous "Willie Horton" television ads that in 1988 portrayed the Democrats as soft on criminals.

Clinton spokesman Michael McCurry even hinted that the president might ask for the judge's res-ignation from his lifetime appointment. That threat was quickly withdrawn. But the attack was sharp enough to prompt four judges on the New York federal appeals court to protest the "extraordinary intimidation" by the White House and also by Republican Senate Majority Leader Bob Dole, who suggested Baer should be impeached.

At the Republican National Committee, press secretary Mary Crawford predicted that the judge selection will be an issue in the presidential campaign. "It's one of the clear contrasts between our nominee and Bill Clinton," she said. Meanwhile, Hatch's office is scouring decisions of the 185 federal judges that Clinton has appointed to find more ammunition. Among his next targets is Judge Rosemary Barkett, who went from the Florida Supreme Court to the 11th U.S. Circuit Court of Appeals in Atlanta.

Controversial from the start, Barkett has raised the ire of conservatives for a number of decisions since joining the federal court.

Among them: She sided with Timothy Upshaw, who confessed to setting fire to his girlfriend's home and killing her two children, by granting a hearing on whether he had "ineffective" legal advice. Upshaw's attorney had counseled against saying he was under the influence of drugs when he torched the house.

Dedicated citizens keep government going

VICTORIA, Texas — One man stood up during a Victoria city council meeting several years ago and told the board that a company say, 'I tried'. repaving Ben Jordan street wasn't doing the job to proper specifications.

Council members didn't act upon his complaints at that meeting, so Alton Sawey returned. They still didn't heed his concerns, so he went back, again and again, to voice his opinion.

Sawey kept telling them about the paving problems until one council member finally suggested an investigation. The council determined that the company wasn't doing the work to specifications.

Sawey had accomplished his self-assigned mission: He made a difference in the way his hometown was governed.

After his retirement 15 years ago, Sawey decided to become one of that vanishing group of citizens determined to be the "public" at public meetings.

City councils, commissioners courts and school board trustees aren't accustomed to seeing people like Sawey at their meetings.

In America, children are raised on history lessons of New England town meetings, during which people turned out in force to make decisions about their community. But most folks today are too busy with jobs, Boy Scouts and softball games to watch their elected officials at work.

Each month the scene is the same.

Officials sit in board meeting rooms hashing out the communi-

A recent unscientific survey of Victoria-area county commissioner's courts and city councils revealed that the empty meeting room is prevalent. When asked, city and county secretaries across the region often can't think of a single person who regularly attends meetings.

But there are some. Those few who have taken it upon themselves to offer advice, voice dissension, or merely listen and learn about what's happening in their community.

"I think I have something to fer," Ruth Griffin said. She offer." started attending Edna city council meetings in the summer of 1992. She had moved from Houston and saw problems that she believed she could help fix.

Since then, she has become a member of the Edna zoning board. Zoning laws, she said, were a luxury that Houston didn't have. Edna had the laws on the books but wasn't enforcing them. Griffin wanted to see that changed, so she got involved.

"You can give up, or you can at least be able to say, 'I tried,"" Henry said.

What many of these community watchdogs hate most is that people don't try. They don't go to meetings. They don't voice their concerns about their town. They just complain.

There are the people who only show up "when their ox is being gored," as Griffin puts it.

There's quite a few (people) that go because they have an ax to rind, and I don't feel that way," Reuss said.

But Wardell Toenjes goes to most Cuero city council meetings because he does have an ax to grind, he said. He is unhappy with the way the city is run, and he's quick to point out what he views as the council's flaws.

'They have a good old boy network here that just won't quit,' Toenjes said.

dents in which those people were killed," he said.

Honsinger, now an Arlington resident and lieutenant in the Dalworthington Gardens Department of Public Safety, is one of about 25 men listed on the memorial who have turned up alive. All were severely wounded in the war. Honsinger lost his right hand.

Jan Scruggs, president of the Vietnam Veterans Memorial Fund, the private nonprofit group that oversees inclusion of names, said 38 men named on the memorial were listed by the government as "evacuated due to wounds."

They didn't show up on the official lists of war dead, but their fates could not easily be determined. Honsinger was never considered missing in action. With the monument under construction, the group made a decision to "err in the way of inclusion," Scruggs said.

"If we'd had the time, we prob-ably could have found out," he said. "It was the best decision at the time based on the information we had.'

ABC News paid for Honsinger's March trip to Washington and fea-tured him on World News Tonight on March 9. Time magazine mentioned Honsinger in its April 1 edition in connection with a book to be published about Vietnam veterans.

Honsinger, who graduated from high school in Mineral Wells, fought in Vietnam for eight bloody months in 1966. Three months into his tour, his platoon was ambushed, and he was shot six times in the chest. At 19, he had earned his first Purple Heart.

Five months later, he earned his second Purple Heart — and a Silver Star. On Sept. 11, his platoon came under heavy enemy fire while on a search-and-destroy mission.

Honsinger was assigned to a .50-caliber machine gun on an armored personnel carrier. An anti-tank rocket hit the vehicle and severed Honsinger's right hand.

The award citation describes how Honsinger continued to fire his gun with one hand, exposing his upper body to enemy fire. Weak from blood loss, he dropped into the vehicle and passed grenades and ammunition to his comrades.

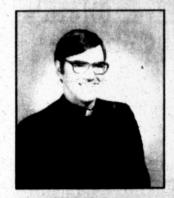

After his platoon overran the enemy's position, he helped evac-uate eight wounded soldiers before getting on the helicopter.

Written in 1985 by British composer John Rutter (b. 1945, London), the "Requiem" is not a strict following of the Latin mass for the dead, but rather the composer's selection of texts drawn from the mass and from the Anglican Book of Common Prayer.

In the worship service, no further words are spoken; there is no benediction: for Easter morning is a continuation of this unfolding drama. The church is left in semi-darkness, and all leave the church in silence.

Lady Vols beat UConn, avenge title game loss

Tennessee to face Georgia, a winner over Stanford in the other NCAA Women's Final Four semifinal, Sunday to decide national title.

The Associated Press

CHARLOTTE, N.C. — Finally, Ten-nessee was stronger down the stretch than Connecticut. And finally, the Lady Vols have beaten the Huskies.

Tennessee made seven of eight free throws in the final 1:43 of overtime, got a key defensive play from Tiffani Johnson and ended Connecticut's hopes of repeating as national champion with an 88-83 victory Friday night in a semifinal game of the women's NCAA tournament.

That sends Tennessee into its sixth national championship game Sunday, against either Georgia or Stanford, and gives the fourth-ranked Lady Vols (31-4) a chance to win their fourth NCAA title.

Connecticut (34-4), trying to become the first repeat champion since Southern Cal in 1984, sent the game into overtime at 75-75 when Nykesha Sales hit a 3-pointer from the top of the key with 4.2 seconds left. Sales finished with 28 points to lead all scorers

1:19 left in regulation and the secondranked Huskies couldn't hold on in the overtime. They had beaten Tennessee three straight times, including 70-64 in last year's title game, mainly by playing stronger at the end. It didn't happen this time.

After three ties in the extra session, Tennessee took the lead for good on a free throw by Michelle Marciniak with 1:43 left and the Lady Vols limited Connecticut to two shots the rest of the way.

One was a driving layup by Sales that cut the lead to 84-83 with 19.9 seconds remaining. Marciniak, who led Tennessee with 21 points, was fouled on the inbounds play and hit two free throws for an 86-83 Tennessee lead.

Then Johnson partially blocked Jennifer Rizzotti's 3-point shot from the right wing and the ball went to Latina Davis, who was fouled and made two free throws to wrap it up. Davis finished with 16 points, Johnson and freshman Chamique Holdsclaw each scored 13 and Abby Conklin 11. Rizzotti had 17 for Connecticut, while Wolters and Rerube scored 13 each Wolters

Only two weeks remain before the District 4-5A Tennis Tournament and tournaments like this weekend's Rebel Tennis Classic have the Tall City coaches looking for the right players.

Luckily for the Midland High and Midland Lee tennis teams, those players came out on Friday and have their respective teams in good position at the Rebel Tennis Classic held at Midland Lee, Midland High and Green Tree Country Club.

Midland High, which was ranked as one of the state's top 20 teams during the fall's team tennis season, came up with some big performances. In girls' singles, Midland High has three of the four A-Bracket semifinalist going into today's action. Carrie Geltemeyer, Laurie Haas and Kallie Kerr rolled to the semifinals without dropping a set. fourth semifinalist is Trinity's Toffee Wilson, who gave up two games on her way to the final four.

On the boys side, Nathan Lawrence and Spencer Ritchie gave MHS two semifinalists. The pair also went to today's play without dropping a set. All together, it was not a bad day for Tom Heiting's team

"It was kind of what we were expecting," said Heiting. "We are pleased with the fact that the younger players are dominating and that we have to beat each other. The girls, as well as anyone, are holding their own.

As the District 4-5A baseball season heads into the midway point of the season, both Midland Lee and Midland High have some work ahead to get back into playoff contention.

For the Rebels and the Bulldogs, the challenge is the thing.

We really need to win all the rest for us to win district," Lee coach Jesse Benavidez said. 'We kind of put ourselves in a difficult situation but the kids know what's ahead.'

The Rebels (11-10-1 overall, 3-2 in district) face Abilene Cooper today at 2 p.m. at Ernie Johnson Field while the Bulldogs (13-6, 2-2) travel to Abilene High (13-4, 4-0) for a date with the 4-5A leaders. The Rebels will be trying to avenge its only two district losses of the season last year while the Bulldogs try and give the current district leader its first league defeat.

"Right now there's four or five teams who are in the race and hopefully by the end of the first half we'll be in the mix somewhere," MHS coach Lew Kennedy said. 'Abilene, I guess, is the surprise so far, but it's going to be a nip-and-tuck race to the end. We hope we're 4-2 after the first half, but if we aren't, we know we won't be out of it.'

The Bulldogs have won their last two district games

MHS faces major challenge as three teams lead league

Lady Bulldogs host Odessa Permian in tough matchup, Midland Lee, Abilene Cooper get easier assignments.

Staff Report

Following Abilene Cooper's 3-1 vic-tory over Midland High Thursday, the District 4-5A softball race has another top-heavy log jam at the top of the standings.

Cooper, MHS and Midland Lee all carry identical 6-2 marks heading into today's 2 p.m. games where the Lady Bulldogs host Odessa Permian in the key match of the day at the Bill Williams Softball Complex in Hogan Park

Lee travels to 2-7 Odessa High while Cooper meets 1-7 San Angelo Central.

Logic would say that both Lee and Cooper should come away with wins today to maintain that jam at the top. However, MHS faces the major challenge when they face the wounded, but still scary, Lady Panthers, who at 4-3, could vault back into the three team playoff hunt by pulling off the upset over the Lady Buildogs today. Midland High also has a chance to even the season series with the Lady Panthers at 3-

"We were looking to even the score," aid MHS coach Ricci Woodard. "This is big and we need to win the important ones. This is an important one.

MHS lost to Cooper 3-1 on Thursday in a game where it allowed only five hits. The problem for MHS was the lack of hitting in its lineup. Midland High got only three hits. That will have to change.

"We know we will have to hit the ball better off any team," said Woodard. "Defense is keeping us in the game. To win, we will need more offense.

This could be the season's turning point for the Permian softball team, which was considered to have a real playoff shot going into the district campaign. However, Permian has lost three games in the last inning of play. For MHS, too, a win is needed to stay in the league championship formula and to keep out of danger from a Permian late season run.

"It wasn't easy the first time," said to get back into contention for the playoffs, but the Rebels' 2-2 start didn't sit well with many of the seniors on the team. A closed-door meeting between the players, where the senior leaders voiced their concerns, gave Lee the jumpstart it needed, pounding out 11 hits and seven runs in a two-run road win at Odessa Permian on Tuesday.

"After the meeting they were almost a different team," Benavidez said. "There was almost no sound on the bus dowr to Permian and the players were can give us a good start," really focused on the game."

The win was Lee's first this season on the road in district play, and is 2-0 in the friendly confines of Johnson Field. Mike Gonzales (1-2, 3.78 ERA) is expected to get the start on the mound for the Rebels. The 6-foot, senior righthander hasn't pitched since March 16, going three innings in a loss to Abilene High. Benavidez also has Randy Forman ready to go if needed. Forman (1-2) went the distance in a hard-luck, eight-inning loss to San Angelo Central last Saturday.

Benavidez said. "Forman pitched starts," Kennedy explained. "He's well enough to win that game so I think we've got some people who can throw the ball."

A pitcher who definitely is not struggling is Midland High's Keith Lant, who makes his first start since throwing a no-hitter today in what has turned out to be a very key game for the Bulldogs. Lant (5-2.22 ERA) no-hit Permian 11 days ago and hasn't seen any action since then, but Kennedy said the senior, three-year starter will be ready.

"Keith's a veteran and he knows how to deal with a situation like having so much rest in between kept his arm in shape and has thrown in the bullpen almost every day. He'll be all right."

After posting a 4-8 mark in district last year, the Eagles have soared to the top of the standings with a competent pitching staff and a lineup which seems to get the key base hit when it needs it.

"I'm not real surprised. They played really well the last part of last year and had a good summer," Kennedy said. "I guess it's kind of a surprise that they're 4-0, but I knew they would be better than they were last year."

two Bulldogs in the boys singles and his 9 a.m. match with MHS' Nathan Lawrence should be a good one.

Lee also has a talented doubles team in the A-Bracket finals. Conner Austin and Cassio Garzia will play against Odessa High's John Leach and Frank Ruda in today's 11 a.m. final. For coach Steve Buck, it will give a true indication of things to come down the line.

"I would like to see how Conner (Austin) and Cassio (Garzia) will do," said Buck. "I feel they can play with anyone.

Buck was also pleased with the effort of his players who played in the lower brackets. Those results give optimism for future teams and for Odessa in two weeks.

"We're strong and I have a lot of young kids doing well," said Buck. Weird things can happen (at district). You just have to play it and have fun.

Buck's doubles team of Austin and Garzia were involved in maybe the most intriguing match of the day. Playing on the courts just beside the golf course, the Lee duo and MHS team of Blade Van Stavern and Terrell McDonald teed off with blistering shots of their own.

together for the first time this year in its 6-2, 4-6, 6-3 victory over this MHS doubles team, which was the district best at the No. 3 spot with a 6-0 record in 4-5A play. Playing in Friday's gusty conditions made that win more impressive.

"It was a good match," said Garzia, who came to Lee this year from Sao Ceopoldo, Brazil. "I am not used to the winds, but I did all I could and Conner did the rest."

The Rebels took the first set easily and a straight set match seemed imminent. However, the MHS pair, as it had done many times in the past, came to life and broke Lee's serve three times en route to the 4-6 second-set win.

"It takes us a so long to start off," said Van Stavern. "That happens to us. Our net game today was just weak. We weren't putting away our volleys, and for doubles, you have to put those away.

That became very apparent in the third set as the Rebs took advantage of the MHS deficiency. The set, however, was won when McDonald was broken to give Lee a 4-2 lead. One Austin and Garzia would not let go of.

"We came out in the second and played tentative," said Austin. "Then, we got them frustrated Lee's twosome was playing and they lost their cool."

Today's play will start at 8 a.m. with A-Bracket boys singles and doubles. The girls singles and doubles of of B-and C-Brackets singles and doubles will also be played at Lee. Midland High will host the girls singles of the A-Bracket, boys singles and doubles of B, and

The two sides agreed to let Washington's high court settle the jurisdiction question, and it heard arguments Wednesday.

It's been a strange race thus far. Lee has lost twice to MHS. Midland High, which as never defeated Cooper since starting UIL play, fell twice to Cooper. And Cooper owns a loss to Lee and cross town rival Abilene High.

"I knew it was going to be a bal-anced district," said Lee coach Perry Young. "However, we're in good position at this point. We just need to take care of our own busi-

DALLAS - Talk about your understated celebrations.

After rolling to their 16th straight win, the San Antonio Spurs didn't jump around to celebrate a new franchise record. They had more of a business-asusual attitude.

"It's always good to make franchise history. It's been a very spe-cial month," San Antonio coach Bob Hill said. It sure has.

David Robinson scored 31 points and added 15 rebounds for the Spurs, who are undefeated in March and haven't lost since a 95-90 setback to the Los Angeles Clippers on Feb. 27.

Vinny Del Negro added 20 points for the Spurs, and Charles Smith scored 17 and had 12 rebounds. The Spurs are 21-4 since Smith came over in a trade with the New York Knicks

'63 Bulldogs broke barriers

Former coach McCarthy began Mississippi State's history-making legacy

By Bill Barnard

EAST RUTHERFORD, N.J. -Mississippi State, winner of four Southeastern Conference titles from 1959-63, made just one appearance in the NCAA tournament during that era of racial segregation.

In those days, schools, restaurants, water fountains and life itself were strictly separated by race. The U.S. Supreme Court said in 1954 that separate but equal school policies were unconstitutional, but years later it was still unwritten law in Mississippi that the state's white athletes didn't play games with - or against blacks.

So when NCAA tournament invitations went to SEC champion Mississippi State in 1959, 1961 and 1962, the Bulldogs stayed home and Kentucky or Georgia Tech went instead. In 1960, Auburn also declined to play in the NCAAs for the same reason.

Finally, in 1963, coach Babe McCarthy, athletic director Wade Walker and school president D.W. Colvard challenged the established way of life. At a time when civil rights marches and sit-ins were just starting to occur in oth-er parts of the South, the three men decided it was time Mississippi State took its place in an integrated NCAA tournament.

However, the state legislature issued an injunction designed to prevent the team from making the trip to the tournament. The injunction, which named Walker, McCarthy and Colvard, prohibited them from using state funds to subvert state policy by playing an integrated team.

To escape the injunction, Walker, McCarthy and Colvard left the state days before the team did. The school's sports publicist shepherded the team to the airport, nervously watching for the sheriff all the way.

Former Mississippi State coach Babe McCarthy, left, poses for an undated 1960s photo with Jack Berkshire. Because of segregation laws in the state, the Bulldogs were not allowed to compete in the NCAA Tournament despite winning the Southeastern Conference title in 1959, 1961 and 1962. In 1963, McCarthy and his team sneaked out of the state to play in their first national tourney. Saturday MSU plays in its first Final Four.

dagger aspects to the story," said walking out or anything like that," Bob Hartley, a Mississippi State Hartley said. "It was a different employee for 50 years who was time then. People didn't challenge then the sports information direcauthority tor and is now a paid athletic consultant. "We definitely had to sneak out." player who played on two Boston Celtics title teams in the 1960s, was

The Bulldogs managed to get out of Starkville, Miss., and play in the NCAAs against Loyola-Chicago, an integrated team that went on to win the 1963 national title.

State officers didn't enforce the injunction on the players, who were not named in the action.

McCarthy, Colvard and Walker ultimately joined the team in Nashville before they went on to East Lansing, Mich., for the tournament game against Loyola.

"It wouldn't have happened without those three," Hartley said. It was different in 1959, 1961 and

1962, the other years the Bulldogs won the SEC title. 'Babe tried to persuade them

(school officials) to change their Howell said. "It wasn't the way we minds, but there was no threats of were brought up. We accepted things as they were.

We knew the unwritten policy was wrong and ridiculous. We knew it then and we know it now. All racist policies deny people their rights. We were denied our rights and our opportunity to play against the best.

Jack Cristil, the Mississippi State radio network play-by-play man for 43 years, said the state's racial policies of the 1950s and 1960s weren't discussed, just accepted.

Political correctness didn't exist then, at least not in Starkville. There also was little political activism.

'It wasn't like we sat around the coffee shop talking about missing the NCAA tournament," Cristil said. "It was the way it was going to be. We didn't know it then, but it was a time in history that was going to change.

Despite the defying the injunction, there were no post-tournament repercussions for the team and administration.

'Some papers said it was a sad day for Mississippi, but for the most part, we were greeted warmly," Hartley said.

One of the ironies connecting the 1963 team that went to the NCAA tournament for the first time and the 1996 team that is in the Final Four for the first time is that their current coach, Richard Williams, was a Bulldogs freshman in the fall of 1963

But the students of later generations are ready to forget the school's racial history.

'People need to get over it," said Marilyn Johnston of Memphis, a 1975 Mississippi State grad. "It's something that's part of our history. The team (most of which is black) has gotten over it. Harold Akins, a 1980 graduate from Memphis, said continuing the success of this year's team will make people forget. "We need to put enough Final Fours behind us to give everybody something else to talk about.'

Camby, a native of Hartford, Conn., received 63 votes in the national balloting of AP membership, easily outdistancing Ray Allen of Con-necticut, who had 29 1/2 votes. They were followed by Allen Iverson of Georgetown, 25, Tim Duncan of Wake Forest, 15 1/2, and Tony Delk of Kentucky, 13.

EAST RUTHERFORD, N.J. It was just four months ago that Massachusetts opened its season by knocking off No. 1 Kentucky.

Since then, a lot has changed for both teams, which meet again Saturday in the NCAA semifinals.

"That was early in the season and now it's two teams that have gotten a lot better," Kentucky's Tony Delk said Friday. "I was at the point then and everyone was out of position. We were trying to get our rotation down. They have gotten better because of a tough schedule.

Top-ranked Massachusetts (35-1) won that Nov. 28 meeting 92-82 behind the 32 points, nine rebounds and five blocks of All-America center Marcus Camby. "I didn't think we did a good job on Camby," Kentucky coach Rick Pitino said, "but I've watched the tape three times and we did a good job. He's just a great basketball player.'

It was far from a perfect effort for the Minutemen that night at Auburn Hills, Mich., in the Great Eight tournament. UMass committed 23 turnovers against Kentucky's pressure.

The number of mistakes dropped all season as the backcourt of Edgar Padilla and Carmelo Travieso jelled into one of the best guard tandems in the country. They were at their best in the regionals, combining for just 12 turnovers against the pressure of Arkansas and Georgetown.

"The Kentucky game was the first game of the season, and we were just trying to get used to each other," Padilla said. "Now we know what we have to do and it showed against Arkansas and Georgetown.'

Pitino said the first two games - the Wildcats opened with a 96-84 victory over Maryland — set the tone for the changes that changed everything. "We got down big against Maryland, and then there was UMass," he said. "It was obvious we were not playing the right people together and we made a change, putting Anthony Epps at the point, and we let Tony Delk concentrate on scoring. Now it's been a great situation as far as the cohesiveness of the team, and that's where we've evolved."

Kentucky (32-2) didn't lose again until the Southeastern Conference tournament championship game against Mississippi State, which meets Syracuse in the other Final Four game. It wasn't just a 27-game winning streak, it was a romp through the regular season with an average margin of victory of 23 points. That may explain why the Minutmen are 8-point underdogs. "We like being underdogs," Camby said. ""We've been underdogs all year long. They've been beating people by a lot. Maybe that's why they're the favorite.'

Kentucky center Mark Pope isn't buying into that theory.

"Gambling is like politics — don't understand it," he said. 'It doesn't make any sense. They beat us. They beat everyone they played. They've proven that they're a great eam.

Massachusetts' only loss was to George Washington. But the Minutemen's average margin of victory was nothing like Kentucky's. They won nine games by five points or less and had to go to overtime to win four games

'All those close games make them mentally tough," Delk said.

Four of the wins came without Camby when he was waiting for medical clearance to resume playing after mysteriously collapsing in mid-Janu-ary. Many believe it helped make the Minutemen a better team, one that learned it could win even without the dominant center on the court.

"If you concentrate so much on Camby, they'll cut you to pieces with their other players, because this is truly a great team," Pitino said. "No matter what coach you may go back to and ask them to give a defini-tion of a team, as far as understanding roles, as far as defense, as far as togetherness, as far as all the attributes you would say a great team would have, you can use Massachusetts as an example of that word."

after Wolters fouled out when called for going over the back of the 5-foot-5 Davis trying for a rebound.

Davis made the two free throws for a 73-70 lead. Rizzotti drove for an uncontested basket down the middle to pull the Huskies to within a point with 15.5 seconds left, but Connecticut was out of timeouts and had to foul to stop the clock. Marciniak went to the line and made both for a 75-72 lead with 12.9 seconds left.

That was more than enough time for Connecticut. Rizzotti got the ball to Sales, who faked Marciniak off her feet and had a wide-open shot from the top of the key. Marciniak missed a 3-point shot from the right wing just before the buzzer.

Tennessee had appeared to be in control midway through the second half. The Lady Vols were leading 53-52 when Marciniak hit a 3-pointer to start a 9-0 run that stretched the lead to 62-52 with 9:29 left.

Connecticut came right back, scoring 13 straight points to go up 65-62. Rizzotti accounted for the last six points of that run, making two free throws, hitting Berube behind the defense for a layup and driving the right side of the lane for a basket.

Tennessee regained the lead 71-70 when Marciniak drove the right side and banked in a left-handed layup with 2:05 left. Sales personally kept Connecticut in the game with 15 first-half points. She hit six of 11 shots, including all three of her 3-point attempts, while the rest of the Huskies combined to shoot 27.8 percent (5-for-18). They were outre-bounded 23-12 but trailed only 34-30.

CHARLOTTE, N.C. - Saudia Roundtree and Latrese Bush did their best to make it easy for Georgia. Then the Lady Bulldogs made it difficult with late freethrow problems.

Roundtree, an All-American and the Southeasern Conference player of the year, had 26 points and seven assists to lead Georgia to an 86-76 victory over Stanford in the NCAA tournament's semifinals.

Bush, a reserve guard who had-n't scored more than 11 points this season, added 11 points and two steals as the fifth-ranked Lady Bulldogs snapped the nation's longest winning streak at 23 games.

games. The two guards helped Georgia (28-4) build an 18-point lead in the second half before the Lady Bull-dogs gave most of it back by miss-ing 12 of their last 15 foul shots. Stanford (29-3) couldn't cut its deficit under five in the closing nals, but the Lady Bulldogs minutes and lost for the first time downed Tennessee in January, since December.

The victory put Georgia into Sunday's national title game against SEC rival Tennessee, an 88-83 winner over defending NCAA champion Connecticut earlier Friday. The Lady Vols defeated Georgia in last year's national semifitheir only meeting this season. The third-ranked Cardinal got 20 points from Kate Starbird and 16 from Olympia Scott.

Georgia advanced to the title game for the second time in school history. The Lady Bulldogs lost to Old Dominion in 1985.

Chevys have won four straight races since Dale Jarrett took the season-opening Daytona 500 in a close battle with Monte Carlo driver Dale Earnhardt. And, until Friday, General Motors cars had dominated 1996 qualifying, with Chevys taking three poles and Pontiac Grand Prixs two.

Thunderbird driver Jarrett, the series point leader, ran afoul of the often treacherous Bristol track Friday, losing control just as he crossed the finish line following his second and final qualifying lap.

Jarrett's Ford slid sideways and slammed hard into the low wall separating the track from pit lane, then skidded up the banking into the first-turn wall. He was not injured and will be listed in the seventh position with a lap of 122.552, but by switching to his backup car will, according to NASCAR rules,

"It surprised me," Pruett said of his time in the first group of qualifiers before the rain. "We've been working really hard over the winter on our street-course tires, and I think we'll even go faster yet."

Agassi into final; Goran beats Pete

KEY BISCAYNE, Fla. (AP) -Mother Nature and Goran Ivanisevic stopped Pete Sampras' run at the Lipton Championships. Ivanisevic regrouped during a 48-minute rain delay in the second Lipton set and beat Sam-Tennis pras 2-6, 6-4, 6-4 in the semifinals Friday night.

The Croat's comeback spoiled a bid by the second-seeded Sampras for his fourth consecutive Lipton final. Instead, Ivanisevic has a chance to win his fifth title of the year Sunday against Andre Agassi. Defending champion Agassi advanced by beating Frenchman Arnaud Boetsch 6-4, 6-3.

Chanda Rubin, a 20-year-old Louisianian seeking her first WTA Tour title, will play four-time Lipton champion Steffi Graf in the women's final Saturday.

Sampras' defeat cost him a shot at regaining the No. 1 computer ranking from Thomas Muster. Sampras needed to win the tour-nament to overtake Muster, who lost his opening match last week.

The sixth-seeded Ivanisevic, serving badly at the start, trailed 6-2, 1-0 when the rain came. After the delay he delivered all 11 of his aces and twice broke Sampras, who had not lost his serve previously in the tournament.

Two errant volleys by Sampras contributed to the second break, which gave Ivanisevic a 4-3 lead in the final set. Sampras, struggling to put even Ivanisevic's second serve in play, managed just five points in the Croat's final six service games.

Despite some ragged moments, Agassi kept his cool on an 85degree afternoon against Boetsch. The hard court soaked up the Florida sun and made it seem much hotter.

'It wasn't an egregious case," the prosecutor said.

Williams, who pleaded innocent Monday to misdemeanor spousal battery and dissuading a witness, wasn't in court. The misdemeanor counts don't require his presence.

The 58-year-old Williams allegedly attacked his girlfriend, Patricia Von Heitman, 53, while driving home from a restaurant Jan. 30 and later after parking in the garage of the Hollywood Hills home they share.

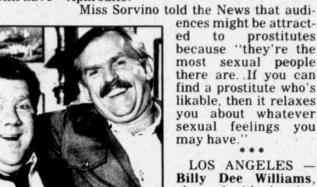

The woman told police Williams slapped her on the face and upper body and stopped her when she tried to notify police. She also said he pulled her out of the car and pushed her down.

Rabbi who led Reform Jewish renaissance looks forward to his retirement, sightseeing

By Tim Klass Associated Press

MERCER ISLAND, Wash. -Enough with being a full-time mediator and lightning rod, a lover of tradition and instigator of change, revered as a visionary and reviled as an apostate.

Preparing for retirement after 23 tumultuous years as head of Reform Judaism in America, Rabbi Alexander Moshe Schindler looks forward to more sightseeing between speeches, more reading for the joy of reading.

Not to any less controversy, though.

At age 70, a self-deprecating but unabashedly left-leaning activist, Schindler has broken from centuries of tradition on issues as fundamental as who is a Jew, while reveling in a resurgence of unned by rituals once liberal branch of one of the world's oldest religions. "If it has meaning, you ought to observe it. That's the principle of Reform. If it doesn't have meaning for you, don't observe it, Schindler says. In June, he will be succeeded as president of the Union of American Hebrew Congregations by Rabbi Eric H. Yoffie of Westfield, N.J. In an interview after a recent speech at Temple B'nai Torah in this Seattle suburb, Schindler said his greatest satisfaction has been Reform's resurgence amid growing conservative fundamentalism among Christians. Since he took over from Rabbi Maurice N. Eisendrath in 1973, the number of Reform affiliates in Canada and the United States has grown from about 400 to nearly 860. claiming 1.3 million adherents. Reform Judaism, also known as Liberal or Progressive, arose in early 19th century Germany during the Enlightenment. Hebrew was replaced by the local vernacular and musical instruments were introduced in services, men and women could sit together, prayers were shortened, major holiday observances were reduced by one day and many rituals, including the dietary laws, were abandoned. Some congregations even celebrated the Sabbath on Sunday. In surveys conducted by the Council of Jewish Federations, 33 percent of U.S. Jews identified themselves as Reform, 42 percent conservative and 11 percent Orthodox in 1971, compared with 42 percent Reform, 38 percent Conservative and 7 percent Orthodox in 1990. "We have emerged as the overwhelmingly predominant synagogue movement on the American Jewish scene," Schindler said. "What makes me happy is that it's not just a numeric strength. There has been a considerable amount of increased Jewish literacy and spirituality of the grass roots, a greater appreciation for the Jewish calendar, a greater understanding or a greater discipline in the observance of the mitzvot, the commandments," he said. "An ever-larger number of Reform Jews are beginning to view Reform not just as a religion of convenience, where there is Jewish minimalism, but as a faith, a religion that can satisfy the passionate heart.' Schindler's character and style win hosannas even from those most upset with his promotion of proselytizing and patrilineal descent, the belief that Jewishness can be conferred at birth by the father rather than only by the mother.

impressed with his ability to put aside his own parochial or denominational views when he served as chairman of the Council of Presidents," said Rabbi Haskell Lookstein, spiritual leader of the Modern Orthodox congregation Kehilath Jeshurun on New York's Upper East Side.

'I think Rabbi Schindler is genuinely in search of God and what is in the best interests of the Jewish people," Lookstein said. "I dis-agree with him on how best to approach God.'

Nonetheless, official Reform approval of patrilineal descent at Schindler's urging in 1983 after decades of growing informal acceptance "caused a much greater rift between Reform and Orthodoxy," Lookstein said.

Schindler also took heat for supporting gay and lesbian rabbis, an "outreach" program to attract non-Jewish spouses and children of Jews and, in 1993, a $5 million campaign to seek converts among those without any religious belief or practice, reversing more than 1,000 years of shunning proselytization and actively discouraging potential converts.

With an intermarriage rate exceeding 50 percent among U.S. Jews, an increase by a factor of 10 in the past past 30 years, "I want to be as inclusive as I can," he said.

Judaism followed patrilinear descent for more than 1,500 years and actively sought converts for more than 2,000 years, he argued.

'Judaism is in fact a missionary religion," Schindler said. "We have the right to take our place, to offer our ideological and spiritual riches in the marketplace of ideas.

Schindler was born in Munich, Germany, on Oct. 4, 1925, the son of a Yiddish poet and entrepreneurial businesswoman.

His father, Eliezer, fled the night Adolf Hitler was elected president in 1933. His mother, Sali, supported young Alex and his sister, Eva. with a mail-order business for five years until they, too, escaped.

Schindler, 12 when the family arrived in New York, had an Orthodox education and bar mitzvah, but was taken by his father to hear Jewish speakers ranging from atheistic socialists to charismatic Hasidic rabbis.

As a ski trooper in World War II, he earned the Bronze Star for bravery and Purple Heart for battle wounds. Like Senate Majority Leader Bob Dole, he served in the 10th Mountain Division. They were wounded two days apart in the Appenines of northern Italy.

Soon afterward, Schindler visited Munich and the extermination camp at nearby Dachau.

"When I saw what I saw, when I came back, I guess, subconsciously this worked on me," he said.

He dropped engineering for rabbinical studies, worked as an assistant rabbi in Worcester, Mass., for six years, then rose rapidly through Reform's administrative ranks.

"The Torah: A Modern Commentary" by Rabbi W. Gunther Plaut, the first comprehensive Reform Jewish exposition on the Torah, resulted from an 18-year project he helped start as nation-al education director.

Schindler and his wife, Rhea, have five children, one of whom is an assistant rabbi in Scarsdale, N.Y., and six grandchildren.

Fort Worth television station KXAS reported Thursday that prosecutors promised Angela Beck, a 22-year-old topless dancer, that any testimony she gives won't be used against her.

The KXAS report said the grand jury offered Nabwangu, 21, Beck and Roberts "use immunity." But other evidence could be used against them should they be charged and brought to trial.

Any of the three could now be held in contempt of court if they refuse to testify about events in the Irving motel room.

Astros' success depends upon starting rotation

KISSIMMEE, Fla. - Gerry Hunsicker has done his job. Now it's up to manager Terry Collins and the Houston Astros' players to do theirs. Hunsicker, who became gen-eral manager last November, set his priorities quickly and has accomplished most of them. He wanted an everyday third baseman and he got Sean Berry. He wanted to keep Craig Biggio and Hunsicker got that done too, with a little help from Biggio, who re-signed $22.36 million over four years, less than he could have gotten elsewhere.

"All a general manager can do is put a team on the field that has a chance to win," Hunsicker said. "I certainly feel this club is capable of winning the Central Division. I'll be disappointed if we're not in contention all year.

The Astros should score enough runs. Their chances of winning depend on the starting rotation turning around after a spotty performance last season. Big bucks starters Doug Drabek and Greg Swindell, both 10-9 last season, are in the final years of their contracts and have not pitched well consistently. Darryl Kile has a nohitter and All-Star appearance, but also was 4-12 last year, the worst season of his career.

much of last season after surgery to remove a rib that was constricting blood circulation to his pitching arm. He'll start the season on the disabled list because of a pulled chest muscle on his left side that apparently is not related to his previous injury. "It's obvious that pitching is going to be the key," Swindell said. "Doug and I haven't pulled our load. At times we have, but we need to be consistent throughout the whole vear.'

Swindell had a 4.47 ERA last season and spent part of the season in the bullpen. Drabek's ERA was 4.77, the highest of his career.

"History has shown this team is capable of scoring runs," Kile said. "We have a great offensive team and great defense so as a pitching staff we have to go out the pitch the way we're capable of doing. 'We've got a Cy Young guy (Drabek) and a guy who won 100 games (Swindell), young guys in Shane Reynolds and Mike Hampton, and me, so we're capable of winning." With Bagwell and Biggio on the right side of the infield, Berry will open at third and Orlando Miller at shortstop. There'll be a lefty-righty platoon of James Mouton and technology will get Bagwell through a complete season without another broken bone in his hand. He has been sidelined for three years with broken bones from being hit by pitches. He's now wearing a shock-absorbent brace over his left hand, and he says it will keep him in the lineup this season. "I really do have confidence that it will help me," Bagwell said. "In my mind, I'll be all right if I do get hit again. The first year we didn't do any-thing, the next year we did something and this year we really researched it." really researched it.

Derrick May in left field, Bri-an Hunter in center and Derek Bell in right. The Astros also are hoping

Biggio and Bagwell have vowed to be more vocal this season in the clubhouse. But they plan for everyone to be vocal.

"If anyone feels at any time that somebody isn't pulling his weight or going about business the right way, anybody can say anything to anybody," Biggio said. "Jeff and and I won't hesitate to say some-thing and Derek Bell won't either.'

Rangers have to stay healthy, pitch stronger

PORT CHARLOTTE, Fla. -The Texas Rangers kept the last season, 83 as the desigteam doctors busy last season and vowed it wouldn't happen again.

They came to spring training determined to put their injury-prone past behind them. But they couldn't even get out of spring training healthy.

Shortstop Benji Gil is out sixto-eight weeks following back surgery. No. 2 starter Roger Pavlik has a sore elbow. Juan Gonzalez had an excellent spring but has a nagging groin injury.

"We almost made it home," general manager Doug Melvin said. "But we're leaving camp with more positives than negatives. We've basically got our everyday lineup intact except for Benji.

The Rangers could be forgiven if they panic at the hint of a repeat of last year's casualty list, which included pow-er hitters Gonzalez and Dean Palmer. Gonzalez missed several games last week because of the groin injury. Melvin is building his hopes around Gonzalez being the everyday right fielder.

Gonzalez played in 90 games nated hitter because of a back injury.

"He's played extremely well in right field and that's where we need him," Melvin said. "He's thrown out three or four runners and has really made the adjustment.' Palmer tore a bicep last season and played in only 36 games, but hitting coach Rudy Jaramillo is convinced he's ready for a full season.

"He started real strong last season and had a good two-strike approach," Jaramillo said. "He's stronger now than before and he's got great bat speed. He's in the best shape he's ever been.

Tettleton has had a spotty spring, but Melvin expects another solid season from Tettleton as the DH. Tettleton hit 32 homers last season.

"That's Mickey, he's a streak hitter," Melvin said. "He's a productive hitter. when he's not hitting, he still gets on base because he's got good plate discipline. A lot of guys don't hit for a week and also don't walk."

guy but I don't see a lot of steals, maybe 25," Melvin said. "He's not flashy, just fundamentally sound.

The Rangers signed Ken Hill in the offseason after Kenny Rogers signed with the New York Yankees. He's expected to head a rotation that also includes Pavlik, Kevin Gross and Bobby Witt.

"People keep talking about our pitching last year but the reason we didn't win was offense, we were 11th in the league in offense and runs scored," Melvin said. "Our biggest improvement was in pitching. We still have to improve our pitching but there is a perception that when we lose it's because of our pitch-
