ATC seeks new trainer

(ATCNS) - Progress in obtaining a new trainer to replace the aging T-37 is proceeding on schedule according to officials of the Air Training Command acquisitions division.

The next step in the process takes place Oct. 15 when five civilian manufacturing firms will submit their individual Next Generation Trainer concept definition studies to Air Force Systems Command. Air Force officials will review recommendations of those studies before sending out a formal request for fullscale development to private industry.

The five companies involved in the studies are Cessna Aircraft, which is proposing a modernization of ATC's present T-37 model; and Fairchild Republic, General Dynamics, Rockwell International and Vought Corp, all proposing new designs.

The Air Force bases its requirement for an NGT on two factors fleet insufficiency and operational deficiencies in the present primary jet trainer.

According to the best forecasts of ATC's pilot training needs over the next several years, the present fleet of T-37s will be insufficient in about seven more years. In essence, the Air Force will not be able to train enough pilots with the aircraft it has

However, the T-37's long recognized performance shortcomings present an equally valid case for replacing it with a more modern design.

First of all, the T-37's excessive fuel comsumption rate is hardly acceptable in today's energy aware Air Force. A new trainer could be expected to use at least 40 percent less fuel per mission than the present jet trainer.

In addition, today's T-37 is limited in range and endurance, which ATC training officials say seriously hampers training effectiveness and efficiency.

Other deficiencies include an outdated instrument display panel, limited weather and altitude capabilities and excessive noise.

Replacing any aircraft in the inventory is an expensive proposition, but the Air Force believes significant savings are possible with a new trainer. These savings, estimated to be approximately $39 million annually, will be achieved primarily through reduced fuel and maintenance requirements.

No matter who eventually receives the final contract to produce the NGT, the Air Force's next trainer is sure to look very similar to the present "Tweety Bird."

That is because the Air Force has already specified a side-by-side seating design already used in ATC's T-37. Air Force training officials have also stated a preference for another twin-engine trainer.

If all goes well, a prototype trainer should fly in late 1983, and a new fleet of trainers should begin replacing the T-37s by 1987.

Reese attains CFC goal

After only one week of the monthlong Combined Federal Campaign, Reese had already met and surpassed its $82,000 goal.

According to Capt. Frank Belote, CFC project officer, donations as of the afternoon of Oct. 7 reached 105 percent of the total. Only two · organizations on base had not met their goals as of Tuesday, but Captain Belote emphasized that there is still time for them to do so.

He believes this is the first time an Air Training Command base has ever achieved its goal in the first week. He hurried to stress that the campaign is still open to those who were on leave or unavailable for whatever reason. Also those who have not given still have a chance to join their coworkers in supporting the campaign.

Captain Belote closed his comments by stating, "Congratulations, Reese, you really did a hell of a job."

A1C Anthony J. Henry Jr., Air Base Group, has been selected as the Wing Airman of the Month. Lt. Col. Kenneth L. Leonard, Headquarters Squadron Section commander, cited Airman Henry for his military appearance and bearing, and his professionalism on the job. Airman Henry is also attending college after duty and plans to enter the Airman Education and Commissioning Program. (U.S. Air Force Photo)

THE ROUNDUP is an unofficial newspaper published weekly in the interest of personnel at Reese Air Force Base of Air Training Command. It is published by Barron Publications, Inc., a private concern which is in no way connected with the department of the Air Force. Opinions expressed by publishers and writers are not

Training equals survival

Every person on this installation, in ATC and the entire Air Force is touched in some manner by a training requirement.

Training new people for every conceivable job is the normal way of life in most businesses and especially in the armed forces. Where personnel turn over is fairly rapid, training is the key to the success of nearly all organizations.

We, in the Air Force, are no longer in the "normal" mode of operation, however losses of skilled people in virtually every discipline has been devastating. Training is the only way to replace or build back experience. It is the very key to the survival of a viable Air Force.

As an example - Reese's OMS squadron, which is representative of other OMS squadrons and many other organizations in the Air Force, is now made up of approximately 75% first term airmen. The remaining 25% are, for the most part, young staffs, techs, and masters.

It is easy to see that today's on-the-job trainer is easily one of the most important people in the Air Force. The quality of almost everything we do depends on how well the trainer does his job.

"Pencil whipping" the training does a disservice to everyone - especially the trainee who may never reach his real potential. We cannot survive with a quality force unless we train a quality force.

U.S. consumes most energy

The overall energy situation in the United States is not rosy: Energy demand keeps rising; energy prices keep going up; the availability and future costs of supplies remain uncertain.

What can we do about it?

Conserve energy. This will help us extend our supplies and reduce our import burdens until we develop new energy technologies and resources.

Without personal hardship, we could easily cut our energy use by an estimated 30 percent or more-saving energy for our country and money for ourselves.

The energy we use for our homes and automobiles - gas, oil, electricity-draws on all of our energy resources. Cutting back on these uses is the simplest, most effective way to make our resources last longer. And each individual conservation effort, multiplied by millions, can serve as an "energy bank"-a supply that can be used to help balance our energy accounts.

We can conserve if we make energy thrift a part of our way of life - adopting commonsense energy habits. This booklet contains some practical advice on how you can

In upcoming weeks the Roundup will publish energy saving tips for the home, car and market place. Look for them.

Americans use more energy per person than any other people in the world. We have only 6 percent of the world's population, but we use about one-third of all the energy consumed on this globe. Our total national energy cost in 1975 amounted to about $170 billion, and each year this cost is steadily rising.

Where does all this energy go?

Our industry takes about 36 percent. Our commerce uses about 11 percent for enterprises including stores, offices, schools, and hospitals. Our residences take about 26 percent. And transportation accounts for another 27 percent or so.

Most of the energy we use in the United States comes from petroleum (crude oil). Because domestic production falls short of our needs, we have to import almost half of it, at a cost of $45 billion a year (at 1977 rates).

Expert estimates of our known and potential domestic reserves vary, but most likely we have a 25 to 30 year domestic supply of oil, if we keep our energy-use growth rate at about 2 percent per year.

However, if we continue using energy as we have become accustomed to, we could run out of domestic oil supplies before the year 2007, and we may run out of natural gas even sooner. The severe winter of 1976-1977 painfully dramatized the natural gas situation with its complex supply and economic pro-

Reese gains building money

Reese is one of severl Air Training Command bases that will benefit from Congressional approval of almost $40 million in new construction projects in the fiscal 1981 military construction appropriations bill.

Included in the bill for Reese was approval of a 3,720 square refueling vehicle maintenance facility and a 51-station consolidated aircraft support system.

The bill cleared both houses of Congress Oct. 1, passing by a 342-29 vote in the House of Representatives and a voice vote in the Senate. The construction authorization bill also passed both houses Oct. 1; however, the two bills still await the President's signature.

ATC's portion of the $5.1 billion Department of Defense construction package amounts to $39,765,000, almost $8 million more than originally asked for when the bill was submitted to Congress last spring.

This year's ATC construction program will include several energy conservation improvement projects, new dormitories for enlisted members at three bases, consolidated aircraft support system at two bases and various other facilities.

Chanute AFB, Ill., received the lion's share of ATC's appropriations with three construction projects that will total almost $18 million. These include a new emission control system for an existing heating plant, new enlisted members' dormitories which will house 504 persons and various energy conservation programs.

Four areas of construction are earmarked for Keesler AFB, Miss. Topping that list are a 15,000-square foot precision measurement equipment laboratory and a 3,300-square foot food inspection facility.

Other ATC construction projects scheduled this year include: ●Lackland AFB, Texas-a new security police training facili-55-station consolidated aircraft support system.

●Lowry AFB, Colo. - various energy conservation projects.

 Mather AFB, Calif. − new officer family housing units and energy conservation programs.

●Gunter AFS, Ala.-a new dormitory which will house 150 enlisted members.

 Maxwell AFB, Ala.—major improvements of an existing enlisted dormitory and energy conservation programs.

you've been reading the newspapers or watching television news, you've noticed that quite a few Air Force service members are involved in new activities in the Middle East.

You've also noticed that what they're doing is considered to be very important to the United States of America.

Hughes praises legislation

"This year's pay raise and increased benefits are the first tangible results of an Air Force commitment to correct military pay inadequacies. We've made our case, we've been heard, and that fact is reflected in recent legislation," Lt. Gen. James D. Hughes told members of the Pacific Air Forces Noncommissioned Officers Leadership School at Wheeler AFB in Hawaii.

Speaking at graduation ceremonies, the PACAF commander said, "the Secretary of the Air Force, the Chief of Staff and major command commanders have been speaking out and acting on the issues of better pay and benefits.

"In fact, Air Force leadership was at the forefront of efforts on behalf of all military men and General Hughes said the recent passage of the 11.7 percent pay raise, the fair benefits package and the Nunn-Warner Amendment moved service members closer to regaining the real buying power lost since 1972, the last time military pay levels were comparable to the private sector.

"It all adds up to a package that many military people can't believe really went through, but it did.

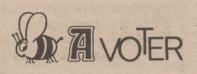

"And it's clear evidence that Air Force leadership has been hard at work, has been caring and has been effective in fighting for better pay and benefits for our people," he said.

Reminding the graduates of their NCO leadership responsibilities, General Hughes noted, "you may not be able to argue in front of Congress for better pay and benefits, but you can do a lot for recruiting and retention and morale by spreading the word about what is being done. Your leadership is concerned with those things just as much as with improving pay and benefits. And that's what we need, your help, now and in the future."

General Hughes asked the NCOs to listen to the new people issues, get the details and make sure their people hear about it.

"Our legitimate needs are being recognized and we must focus our efforts and our energy on meeting the mission requirements.

After all, our job is the most important one there is because our Nation and our way of life depend on it. That's where we should be looking as we look at the future. We've got a country to defend; let's get on with it."

Reese fights FUD

"The FOD is falling the FOD is falling!"

A latter-day Chicken Little on any Air Training Command flightline may be given a good deal more credence than the acorn-struck fowl proclaiming the end of the world. Foreign Object Damage has cost ATC in excess of $130,000 since January.

FOD control at Reese is the responsibility of Capt. Lowell Gossell. In a recent Roundup interview, he stated that Reese has had approximately $15,000 worth of Foreign Object Damage since January, about par with the command average, and announced plans to lower that figure.

An incentive program to reward those who are combating FOD is one program that is in the works. The Silver Nugget Award will be presented to the maintenance person who finds a small, silver object, placed by Captain Gossell on the ramp two months out of each quarter. The finder will be entitled to a reward appropriate to his efforts.

For the final month of each quarter, the FOD Man of the Quarter, selected by a board composed of crew chiefs and Captain Gossell, will receive a special reward.

To directly combat the damage problem, a high powered magnet that will attach to any flightline support truck has been obtained. This magnet, although costing $400, picks up small pieces of wire, stray nuts and bolts and wind-blown objects that could possibly cause damage to tires.

damage to only five could pay for the magnet.

According to Col. John Rushfeldt, deputy commander for maintenance, "FOD is a little like

At $78 per tire, preventing athlete's foot; once you stop treating it, it always comes back. It's something you never relax on. When everyone feels that the program is his or hers, then you don't have so much FOD."

FOD iob

Maintenance personnel did their part recently to combat Foreign Object Damage by using their aerobics walk as a FOD walkdown.

ROTC applications due Jan.

(ATCNS)-High school seniors who are interested in beginning their college careers with Air Force Reserve Officers' Training Corps four-year scholarships should apply this fall, according to Col. Hugh D. McCracken Jr., Air Force ROTC registrar.

Applications for four-year scholarships starting in the 1981-82 academic year must be submitted to Air Force ROTC headquarters at Maxwell AFB, Ala., by Jan. 15, 1981.

Air Force ROTC programs are available on 143 college and university campuses in the United States, the District of Columbia and Puerto Rico. A fouryear scholarship provides for payment of full tuition, books and most fees, as well as a $100 monthly stipend during the academic year.

McCracken added that students who are interested in ROTC scholarships should contact their high school guidance counselors or the professor of aerospace studies at a local college or university hosting Air Force ROTC. Additional information is available through the office of public affairs, Air Force ROTC, Maxwell &FB, Ala.,

Good times

Sunday's Thunderbird demonstration turned out to be quite a success. Thunderbird officials estimate 35,000 people turned out for the afternoon's display. Even the weather was quite cooperative with a light breeze and balmy temperatures throughout the afternoon. (U.S. Air Force Photo)

Street Talk

Capt. Waymond C. Nutt Jr. 54th FTS/IP

Sounds pretty good to me really. I don't see anything really drastic in it. It won't really make much difference in my career plans.

2nd Lt. Priscilla Braud Chief, Unit Admin/OMS

I don't feel like one bill can really make a major difference in career plans. I do think it will be a positive stroke once all the idiosyncrasies are worked out.

Capt. Reggie Prewitt 35th FTS/IP

An interesting note in this week's Street Talk.

Last week, Col. Gobel James wrote in his Commander's Column that generalizations in day-to-day conversation were often responsible for distortion of the facts and confusion. He closed his column by charging people to put the question to themselves, "Do I have the facts, or am I

While compiling interviews on the subject of the House version of the Defense Officer Personnel Management Act, it became apparent that a majority of Reese people affected by the legislation were not even aware of the provisions of the act.

In recent years a great deal of complaining has been heard about the deterioration of entitlements, perhaps a great deal of it justified. But in recent months, a great many bills have been introduced or passed that improve the lot of Air Force members.

Maybe the griping has just become habit, or maybe its because those griping don't have all the facts. Keep informed of what Congress is doing for you, and to you, and don't generalize about the sorry lot we have in the military.

And now to the point. The question asked of several officers around Reese this week was, "If the current version of DOPMA becomes effective, would it affect your career plans. If not, do you think the act is a positive stroke, or negative."

New system aids CHAMPUS process

The first steps toward tying Civilian Health and Medical Program of the Uniformed Services into the Defense Enrollment Eligibility Reporting System were taken at a DEERS-CHAMPUS planning conference held recently at the Office of CHAMPUS in Denver, Colorado.

DEERS is a new computerbased enrollment system affecting all active duty and retired military personnel and their dependents and survivors. It will be used to record and verify eligibility for military medical care benefits - both direct care in military and PHS facilities and care from civilian sources under CHAMPUS.

Implementation of DEERS started earlier this year in selected areas of the country and currently is being used to verify eligibility only for those seeking direct care in military and Public Health Service medical facilities.

Use of the system to verify eligibility for CHAMPUS benefits is planned to start on Jan. 1, 1981, when Blue Cross of Southwestern Virginia, one of the CHAMPUS fiscal intermediaries that prrocesses claims, will be tied in with the DEERS computers. A DEERS hookup with Blue Cross of Washington-Alaska, another CHAMPUS fiscal intermediary, is planned for June 1, 1981.

A work group consisting of DEERS and CHAMPUS personnel was formed at the conference to carry out the addition of CHAMPUS to DEERS. As DEERS is expanded to cover all of the United States and, subsequently, overseas areas where military families are assigned, the capabilities of the system will be made available to all CHAM-PUS claims processors.

Eventually, approximately nine million beneficiaries will be enrolled in the system and their eligibility for CHAMPUS benefits will be verifiable through telephone hookups with DEERS computer banks.

CHAMPUS officials say that the DEERS integration into CHAMPUS claims processing will not interfere with the timeliness of the claim process-

DEERS is aimed at improving the management and administration of the military medical care system and eliminating waste and fraudulent practices, according to DoD officials. Combined with CHAMPUS, DEERS is expected to reduce the number of claims that have to be returned because of inaccurate or inadequate eligibility information.

Protests mar IM flag play

Protests dominated play in the intramural flag football league last week.

Two of the eight games scheduled were played under protest, including the key clash between the league's two top teams, the 54th Flying Training Squadron and the 64th Student Squadron.

The Organizational Maintenance game against the 35th FTS was also played under protest. League officials have yet to make a determination whether or not that protest will be upheld.

But the 54th FTS vs. Sturon game will be replayed from the two-second mark in the first half. The protest was filed after officials failed to notify the Sturon defensive captain that declining a penalty against the 54th FTS would give the league leaders a touchdown.

A player other than the defensive captain declined the penalty, but, according to league bylaws, that is illegal. The only defensive player that can accept or decline a penalty is the defensive captain. The game, which ended with the 54th on top 14-13, will be replayed from the point of infraction at a later date.

Despite the controversy, the 54th remained on top of the league standings. The defending champs beat winless Class 80-01, 35-6, to improve its season mark to 6-0.

Sturon kept pace by beating the Hospital, 26-8. The win raised Sturon to 4-0.

In other league action OMS downed the Hospital, 13-6; CE bested the 1958th Communications Squadron, 16-12, Supply blanked Air Base Group, 13-0; and Field Maintenance Squadron downed Resource Management, 12-6.

Partners tee off

At least thirty-five teams will battle for top honors in the Reese Open Golf Tournament here this weekend.

As of Wednesday morning, tourney officials said that more than half of the expected field of 64 teams had been filled.

The partnership tourney tees off Saturday in two flights. Sunday's round will be split into four handicapped flights. There is a $50 entry fee per team.
