Lt. Col. Leslie A. Hobgood took over as assistant deputy of operations on Nov. 3. Colonel Hobgood was the Student Squadron commander from September 1979 to Nov. 2, 1980. He arrived at Reese June 30, 1978.

Maj. Eugene A. Bardal took over as Student Squadron commander Oct. 28. Major Bardal was the chief of safety from Sept. 24, 1979 to Oct. 27, 1980. He arrived at Reese Aug. 2, 1979.

Capt. Kenneth E. Hamlin took over as wing chief of safety Nov. 3. Captain Hamlin was the chief of Pilot Qualifications T-37's from Feb. 15 to Nov. 2, 1980. He arrived at Reese Sept. 28, 1979.

Lt. Cmdr. Ronald E. Keene took over as commander, 64th Civil Engineering Squadron Oct. 29, 1980. Lt. Commander Keene was Chief of Operations and Maintenance from June 4 to Oct. 28, 1980. He arrived at Reese Dec. 7, 1979.

Police commander grants interview

Brig. Gen. William R. Brooksher, chief of security police and commander of the Air Force Office of Security Police, Kirtland AFB, N.M., answered the following questions during his visit at Reese AFB, Nov. 4.

Q. Your Peacekeeper "80" program was mainly directed at improving the Security Police within the career field. Can you tell us what is in store for Peacekeeper "81"?

A. First the program goes by decades, "80", "90" ... The Peacekeeper "80" program's most important part is improving the overall career field, resting on everyone wearing a badge, to improve from myself right down to the young person who just came in yesterday. We need to do things the way they ought to be done the best we can do them. To gain from our Security Police people to form a commitment to truly believe in performing that way, acting that way, and looking that way. We will not tolerate, among us, those who will not do so.

Q. What programs are in effect or are going into effect to increase retention within the Security Police career field?

A. Many things have impact. First the 11.7 percent pay raise will help some. We have to improve the working conditions, get new equipment, to improve weaponry, and to make people aware of their job duties. It would also improve if the young people could be placed in leadership positions early in order to give them responsibility.

Q. What efforts are being made or projected to be made to reduce the number of non-productives graduating from the Security Police Academy?

A. There are no non-productives graduating from the academy. Those who fail to keep up the standards change their AFSC's.

Q. How do you feel about making security police a major command and having tenent units assigned to each base?

A. Definitely no. It should stay as is with one person in command.

Q. How is the Palace Balance Program, now in progress, going to affect promotions of those, in grades E-5 through E-8, already in the career field?

A. Make them better. There is a fallacy that many people have that if we bring in non-commissioned officers from outside the career field, that would prevent security police from getting a promotion. That is not true. People who think this don't understand how the promotion system works. The USAF has an equal opportunity system of promotions.

ATC names Babicki best of year

TSgt. James T. Babicki

TSgt. James T. Babicki has been named the Air Training Command Budget NCO of the Year.

Sergeant Babicki, 32, works in the budget office as a budget analyst. The Washington, Mich. native was in competition for the award with all other budget NCOs in the Air Training Command.

A 13-year Air Force member, Sergeant Babicki establishes almost daily analyses of obligation rates, flying hour costs, costs per student, contract costs and civilian manyear costs. He continually scrutinizes budget accounts to isolate any funds for reprogramming of funds.

Because of his actions, Reese has been able to resolve many internal funding problems without calling for assistance from ATC. The sergeant was responsible for monitoring $21,000,000 in funds.

Sergeant Babicki was nominated for the award for his initiative in preparing the base resource advisors prior to receipt of instructions from ATC on submitting the new budget. Realizing what was needed, he tasked Reese's financial managers, early in the planning cycle, to begin preparing their budget submissions. Because he obtained much of the needed information early, only minor changes were necessary to have the budget ready for the Financial Working Group's approval.

Sergeant Babicki will now be in competition with budget NCOs Air Force wide for top honors.

Retention becomes major issue

Col. Richard E. Hearne
Base Commander

Retention — lately, this issue has received a great deal of attention from the Air Force. It is an issue that until recently was of no monumental concern. Today it is a major concern of commanders and supervisors throughout the Air Force, and rightly so!

We have expended a lot of time and energy trying to minimize this concern and we are watching it closely. Better housing, increased pay and allowances, better educational opportunities, expanded recreation facilities and job enrichment programs are a few of the areas we are striving to achieve and improve. These items are the material incentives that the Air Force as a whole can work toward.

I want to address one of the incentives that you personally, as commanders and supervisors can create and assure your people receive. I'm talking about recognition. Are you making a conscientious effort to recognize your people for their accomplishments? Are you taking a personal interest in your people on and off duty? If not — you should be.

Sometimes an occasional word of praise or a pat on the back will do the trick. Let your people know they are doing a good job. Take an interest in them as individuals, try to remember special occasions and offer a listening ear when possible. You can make a difference in how they see their jobs and how they feel about the Air Force.

People need to know that we care — that they make a difference — and that is your responsibility as a supervisor. If the job is significantly impressive, perhaps a written letter of appreciation could be presented at a staff meeting or even a formal decoration is warranted.

Don't just think about it — do it! And start today. Commit yourself to make a difference. I'm confident that if you do this, everyone will feel better about themselves and their jobs and more importantly, they will feel better about the Air Force.

We can depend on the Air Force to strive to do its part in improving retention — we need to do our part. Get involved and make a difference.

Clipped clipper

Recently, I clipped a coupon from the local newspaper for a reduction in price on anti-freeze. When I presented it at the base service station, they informed me I would have to take it to the Main Store. When the coupon was presented there, the Customer Service Desk informed me they could accept it either at the desk or at the check out stand. However, there was no anti-freeze in stock at the store, so the coupon could not be redeemed. It would have prevented needless running around and inconvenience to customers if all personnel were properly informed about the redemption of store coupons.

It is AAFES policy to accept vendor coupons for discounts for merchandise purchased through the exchange provided that the coupons have not expired and are redeemed for the exact item stated on the coupon (size, ounces, etc.). At the time of the unfortunate incident, the Base Exchange Service Station was not participating in the coupon program. The Service Station now accepts coupons. We are sorry for the inconvenience and if any other customers have any problems, we encourage them to contact the facility manager or the Exchange Manager.

A citizen?

Be sure your child is one

If you have had a child born overseas during the time you have been in the Service, you probably think you have done everything necessary for that child to prove that he or she is a United States citizen. Unless you have obtained a Certificate of Citizenship for that child, you have not, as parents, taken the necessary steps to provide your child with the documentation necessary to show that he or she is an American citizen.

If you have had a child born overseas, you probably have one or several State Department forms reporting the child's birth, or authorizing the child's admission to the United States. These forms are not sufficient, however, to prove American citizenship.

With certain unusual exceptions, if either of the parents of the child is an American citizen at the time of the birth abroad, the child will be a full-fledged American citizen, entitled to all rights a child born in this country would have, since our Constitution states that any child born in this country is an American citizen, the common way of proving that a person is a citizen is by showing a certificate of birth in the United States.

The foreign-born child, of course, will be unable to show such a certificate of birth and, therefore, will be unable to prove his citizenship unless an extensive check is made to determine the citizenship of the parents and whether any of the unusual circumstances are present which could preclude the child's being a citizen even though his parents are citizens.

To simplify proving one is a citizen in a situation such as this, the Immigration and Naturalization Service issues a legal document known as a Certificate of Citizenship. This certificate is the legal proof that the person named thereon is a citizen.

It is important to remember that the child is already a citizen and the certificate merely proves it. This is not a certificate of naturalization, but merely a certificate to prove existing status. The child would still be a citizen even though he did not have this certificate, it would just help him to be able to prove it.

To obtain this Certificate of Citizenship, it is necessary to file an application form, No. N-600, with the nearest Immigration and Naturalization Service Office and pay the necessary fee.

An immigration officer will then make the necessary inquiries to insure that your child is a citizen, and if all is in order, the Certificate of Citizenship will be forthcoming.

A Certificate of Citizenship should be processed immediately because when it is needed it may take considerable time to round up the necessary documentation and the people required to be interviewed.

If the child and both parents are not together at the same time, do not hesitate in requesting a Certificate of Citizenship. There are immigration offices in almost every country in the world.

Some of the purposes for which the Certificate of Citizenship may be necessary are: to prove citizenship to get a passport, to enter a child in school in some states, to receive a commission in the Armed Forces, to secure a Government job, to expedite a security clearance and for Social Security purposes.

If you have any questions regarding Certificates of Citizenship, do not hesitate to make an appointment for legal assistance to discuss the matter with an attorney. You may also obtain information by writing to The Immigration and Naturalization Service.

ATC names Reese top AFRAP base

by SMSgt. Octaviano Guerrero
Base AFRAP Monitor

During a time when all military services are suffering recruiting shortages, the Air Force Recruiter Assistance Program has become an extremely important one to maintaining military readiness. Reese has proven its support of this program by being nominated as the Air Training Command AFRAP Base of the Quarter.

In 1976, Air Training Command initiated a unique program that is today known as the Air Force Recruiter Assistance Program. The program is designed to tap the full potential of the Air Force in support of the recruiting mission, the objective being to get Air Force bases involved in referring quality applicants to recruiters for follow-on contact.

Greater demands for people capable of maintaining technological skills, austere funding, a smaller recruiting force, and a changing social climate have combined to make the recruiter's job the toughest ever.

Because the Air Force gets more sophisticated every day, the need for high quality people to sustain and improve the aerospace team has never been greater. To support this end, the Air Force had to recruit about 71,000 men and women to meet Fiscal Year '79 requirements alone.

Recruiters are hopefully telling it like it is—both the good and the bad—and meeting with hundreds of people each week in the process. But this is not enough. Historically, only one of each five serious applicants actually enlists.

The difficulties facing recruiters are two-fold. First, they are seeking to meet with young people who have little inclination to seek contact with a recruiter and hear the Air Force story. Second, the recruiter must enlist people who can meet the rigorous mental, moral, and physical criteria set down by the Air Force.

Prior to the advent of the all volunteer force, military service was to a large degree draft-motivated. This is no longer the case. Today's young are motivated by their perceptions of what the Air Force can do for them and how well they fit the Air Force lifestyle. The Air Force can offer many benefits, but before these can be evaluated they must be communicated and understood. America's youth must be made aware that the Air Force is an opportunity they cannot afford to dismiss lightly. This is the ultimate goal of AFRAP.

Today, recruiting is focused on those individuals who have never served in the armed forces, although some people with prior service are enlisted. The majority of people will be those who have graduated from high school but will not be going on to college, at least not right away. Recruiting service, of course, also selects college graduates each year (primarily in the sciences and engineering) who can qualify for a commission through Officer Training School. At present we are hurting for all types of personnel, both enlisted and officer types.

We maintain the AFRAP system because it has proved itself to be a worthwhile program. The most recent data shows that over 22,000 useable leads were submitted by Air Force personnel, resulting in what is presently an indeterminable number of actual recruits.

I ask you to join me in a sincere effort to show ATC and Air Force that Reese AFB realizes the situation and is willing to do something about being a part of the solution. Let's pull together in the upcoming months and make this program really take off.

Project Stork offers help

Project Stork has been in operation at Reese for less than one year, but has already helped a number of families with their first babies.

Terry Barber, Family Services Project Stork chairman, has made changes in the operation of the program to insure its efficiency and to upgrade the layettes being given to families.

Layettes are given to families in grades E-3 and below for their first child. Included are diapers, pins, crib sheet, receiving blanket, undershirt, dress or diaper set and handmade cap and booties. During the winter months baby afghans made by volunteers will be given.

Family Services provides cards at the base hospital to be filled out and brought to the Family Services office in order to receive the layette package. Those who deliver off base may pick up cards at the Family Services Center Monday through Friday 9 a.m. to 3 p.m.

October legal actions count no courts - martial

Although October held no courts-martial for any Reese people, the number of Article 15s was up substantially over the past few months.

Fifteen instances of non-judicial punishment were recorded by the office of the Staff Judge Advocate during the month, and an additional nine people with previously suspended punishments had the suspension vacated.

One commonly abused article of the Uniform Code of Military Justice was once again near the top of the list of offenses: fifteen instances of violations of Article 86 were recorded, resulting in $1,658 in forfeitures, 10 reductions in grade, three of which were suspended, 89 days extra duty and 135 days restriction.

One airman and one airman basic charged with Article 86 violations were also charged with failure to obey and possession of marijuana, respectively.

An airman who wilfully disobeyed an order received a suspended reduction in grade and was ordered to forfeit $200 and perform 14 days extra duty.

One rather unusual case involved a senior airman charged with a violation of Article 128 when he unlawfully bit an individual. The airman received a suspended reduction in grade and was ordered to forfeit $150 and perform 14 days extra duty.

Article 92 of the UCMJ was violated by three people during the month. An airman first class who failed to obey an order received a suspended reduction in grade, 14 days extra duty and a forfeiture of $200. A senior master sergeant, charged with two counts of violation of lawful general regulation and stealing government property was reprimanded and forfeited $100, while a captain, charged with violations of Articles 92 and 108, was reprimanded.

Stealing, a violation of Article 121, also figured in the case of an airman first class who was caught shoplifting at the Base Exchange. An item worth $8.78 cost the airman a suspended reduction in grade, $150 and 14 days extra duty.

Twice disobeying an order cost an airman first class a stripe and $100, while another E-3 received a reduction in grade and forfeiture of $50 for one instance of disobedience.

Two airmen, both charged with possession of marijuana, received similar penalties. One was reduced to airman basic, ordered to forfeit $104, and received 14 days extra duty and 14 days restriction. The other got a suspended reduction in grade, forfeited $200 and received 14 days extra duty and 14 days restriction.

Wrapping up the October legal actions was a staff sergeant charged with three violations of Article 134; adultery, disorderly in station and communicating a threat. He received a suspended reduction in grade, forfeiture of $100 and 14 days extra duty.

Testing chief explains Score release delay

RANDOLPH AFB, Texas (AFNS) — Why the long wait to get the results of promotion testing? There are a number of reasons, said Air Force Manpower and Personnel Center's Testing Branch Chief, SMSgt. Michael Flood, here.

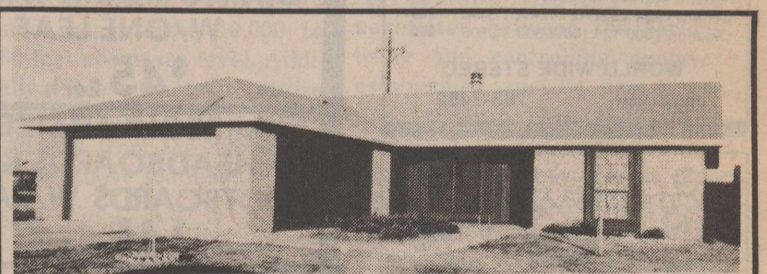

What must be realized first about the tests taken under the Weighted Airman Promotion System is that they aren't meant to teach. For that reason, explained Sergeant Flood, immediate feedback is not that important.

Another reason is that during post-test-taking monthly scoring, the scores could change. It's possible for some questions to become invalid or obsolete and then be deleted from the score key and not be included in the final test score.

One more step takes place before test scores are released: verification of the other promotion factors. Once this is done, selection of promotees begins by applying the promotion quota to a by-total-WAPS-score, high-to-low listing of eligible members in each specialty. The score of the last promotee is called the "cut-off score."

With selection completed, all promotion-related data is sent to local personnel offices. Commanders then notify their selectees, usually two days after release of the list by AFMPC. Following one last verification of data, score notices are released.

Aerial highways cover 500 miles

by Lt. Col. George D. Wilson
Chief Operations Division

Reese Undergraduate Pilot Training operations are conducted in training areas covering approximately 15,000 square miles of West Texas. That's roughly equal to the combined areas of Massachusetts, Rhode Island, and Connecticut.

Navigating to and from these areas is accomplished through various instrument departures and recoveries, creating over 500 miles of aerial highways. The establishment and design of these areas, departures and recovering rest with two airspace officers, Capt. Jack Flynt and Robbie Linn, within the operations complex.

Reese currently operates in 43 training areas located in five Military Operating Areas and Air Traffic Control assigned airspace within an 80 nautical mile radius of Reese. Area operating altitudes range from 10,000 to 39,000 feet above sea level. Additionally, Reese aircraft utilize two low altitude training routes at altitudes from the surface to 5,000 feet above sea level.

Reese T-38 and T-37 aircraft have average mission speeds of 450 knots and 230 knots, respectively. A typical mission would cover a total distance of up to 600 miles, or approximately the distance from here to Dallas and back.

Establishing training areas, departures and arrivals requires a great deal of cooperation and coordination between the Air Force, the local civilian aviation community, and various Federal Aviation Administration agencies. Training areas must comply with Air Force specifications for size and altitude as well as fit within the confines of FAA assigned airspace. Departures and arrivals must utilize altitudes and headings which assure separation from other departures, recoveries, established traffic patterns, training areas and airways.

As if that weren't enough, the rising cost of jet fuel necessitates that all departures and arrivals be via the most direct routing and utilize altitudes that take best advantage of jet engine operating efficiency. If a departure could be shortened by just one mile, a yearly savings of 5,000 gallons of fuel could be realized.

Depending on the location of the airspace involved, a Letter of Agreement (LOA) will be negotiated between the various using and controlling agencies establishing specific procedures and responsibilities when operating in, to, and from the assigned airspace. Reese has entered into LOAs with Fort Worth, Albuquerque, Denver and Minneapolis Air Route Traffic Control Centers as well as Lubbock, Amarillo, Midland, Roswell and Cannon Approach Controls for Reese UPT operations.

As you can see, there is a great deal of paperwork and leg work prior to the UPT student receiving the radio call "Cleared Bravo High."

Smokeout draws nearer

According to a recent report on "Adult Use of Tobacco" in the U.S.A., released by the National Clearinghouse for Smoking and Health, nine out of 10 smokers have tried to quit smoking, or would try if they could find an easy way to do it. Unfortunately, they continue smoking even though at least seven out of 10 are worried about how cigarettes affect their health.

The American Cancer Society has launched an attack on this difficult habit with the Great American Smokeout, a lively campaign to get Reese smokers to pledge a single day without cigarettes on November 20. The goal of this activity is to focus attention on the very successful quit-smoking clinic programs that have sprung up in the last few years.

In addition to the one-day Smokeout sponsored by the Cancer Society, the Health Evaluation and Risk Tabulation program at Reese is encouraging smokers to extend their no-smoking campaign over a three-day period following the Smokeout.

HEART is offering "Butt Out" buttons to those who pledge to do without cigarettes for a portion of the campaign. The HEART program is unrelated to the American Cancer Society Smokeout, except that coincidentally fall on consecutive days.

A clinic program can help, especially for the seriously addicted smoker who doesn't feel able to quit on his own. Their value is largely in the psychological help and reinforcement found in a group situation.

Through the help of a trained moderator who has quit smoking, and group discussions of smoking problems, each clinic member attempts to change his behavior.

"Ultimately, quitting is a matter of wanting to badly enough," said Smokeout organizer SrA Michael Bell. "There are powerful social forces at work to trip up the would-be ex-smoker."

Sturon topples 54th

Taking advantage of a second chance, the 64th Student Squadron upset the previously undefeated 54th Flying Training Squadron last week to capture the intramural flag football championship, 22-21.

Sturon got its second shot at the 54th when their October match was ordered replayed from late in the first half because of a protest. The protest was lodged over the game officials handling of a penalty. The 54th had taken the lead on a last-second play before intermission and went on to win 14-13.

At first, it appeared that the rematch would be a repeat of the first game. The 54th scored again on the replay of the protested play and went in at half up 7-6.

But this time Sturon's second-half offense was much more active. Sturon took the kickoff and marched 60 yards for a touchdown. The final 40 yards of the drive came on a scoring pass from Larry Taylor to Jim Best. The extra point made it 13-7.

The league's top receiver, Paul Williams, gave the lead back to the 54th as he hauled in a 30-yard strike. The extra point made it 14-13.

Sturon again drove downfield against the defending champs, hitting short passes over the middle to Best. The drive stalled on the 54th's 20-yard line, but; Sturon's Don Sadlowski came on to kick a 37-yard field goal and Sturon regained the lead, 16-14.

But the 54th, winner of 36 straight intramural games heading into the title match, scored on William's second touchdown grab of the day to go back on top by five points.

Moving from their own 20-yard line, the Sturon gridders marched 60 yards in five plays for the winning score. Scotty Baldwin hauled in a five-yard touchdown pass from Taylor with less than one second remaining in the game.

The win gave the title to Sturon although both teams ended the season with identical 10-1 records. The Sturon victory not only snapped the 54th's three-year hold on the intramural crown, but; prevented the squadron from sweeping all four of the major team sports this year. The 54th had already claimed the intramural basketball, volleyball and softball titles for 1980.

In other loop action, Resource Management picked up a pair of wins, defeating Air Base Group, 18-0, and the 35th FTS, 7-6. The Civil Engineers and the 35th each received a forfeit win from Supply last week.
