Diversification, coalition keys to future

EDITOR'S NOTE: The last in a series, this segment deals with the need to diversify the Midland-Odessa economy and steps that have been taken to date to capitalize on the potential strengths of the two cities.

By FRANK TROMBLEY Staff Writer

In the year or so since the deepest part of the economic downturn, cooperative efforts have been launched to seek new industry that would diversify the Midland-Odessa area economic bases and reduce dependence on the oil industry

Although efforts of the Midland and Odessa chambers of commerce have yet to induce any major industries to relocate in the area, efforts have resulted in establishment of the University of Texas of the Permian Basin Center for Energy, Technology and Economic Diversification. which will be built on land between Midland and Odessa donated by the Scharbauer family, and a satellite office of the Beaumont Bid Resource of such opportunities. In the latter part of 1983, early 1984, an effort was launched by a group of media executives, known as The Bridge Company or the Media Coalition, to promote cooperation between Midland and Odessa, utilizing the "We're Better Together" theme. Midland-Odessa newspapers, radio and television stations donated about $1 million worth of advertising to the campaign, which pointed out some of the interests common to both cities and potential benefits from cooperation

In addition to the aforementioned. there also have been cooperative economic development efforts between the chambers of commerce of Midland-Odessa, which cite the size of the combined county populations and availability of a viable labor

Combined households in 1985 in the Midland and Odessa MSAs total about 86,000, with per household share of retail sales estimated at about $25,000 and per capita share of retail sales of nearly $8,600. The two counties saw retail sales increase nearly 33 percent between 1980 and 1981, lose about 31.1 percent between 1981 and 1983, and gain nearly 10 percent from 1983 through 1984.

During the six-year period from 1980 through 1985, the combined populations of Midland and Ector counties increased about 27 percent. from slightly more than 198,000 to more than 252,000. The combined households increased more than 24 percent from nearly 69,412 to more than 86,000 in the same period.

In 1982, at the request of the Midland City Council, the Texas Research League (TRL) undertook a study of city government with particular emphasis on growth-created problems facing the city TRL commissioned Drs. Stanley Arbingast and Robert Ryan of Austin to do the actual study and they examined Midland's demographic and economic growth and prospects for the future

THE STUDY CONCLUDED with the observation that "many demographers subscribe to the thesis that when a city reaches a certain size and certain stage of economic development it tends strongly to be stable in size and fairly immune to the danger of rapid decline. The phenomena is called "critical mass," and is generally thought to imply once a city or area reaches a certain population level demand and supply achieve a point of equilibrium where, in effect, the city or area becomes selfperpetuating

However, Arbingast and Ryan explained what the theory, or premise. really means is 'that the existence of a large population concentration represents an economic endowment in human resources that attracts in dustrial development from outside

David Thayer, newly-appointed Bid Resource Center director, says response to the new facility "has been very encouraging," that it appears area business people are cogently aware of the problems of being near-totally dependent on a single industry and are actively seeking ways to diversify their operations.

Thayer believes the Bid Pesource Center can be instrumental in efforts to diversify the Midland-Odessa industrial base by helping area businesses successfully submit bids to provide goods and services to the world's largest purchaser the United States government.

Thayer sees the Bid Resource Center, the UTPB research center and the West Texas International Trade Forum as being complementary to each other, in that all seek to provide opportunities for diversification that would ultimately strengthen the economies of Midland-Odessa.

Animal park won't be like closed zoo

EL CAMPO (AP) — Fire swept ablaze when firefighters responded

By RAMONA NYE Staff Writer

A Midland animal park can be operated without city funds, says the organizer of Hands of Life, a non-profit organization attempting to repopulate Cole Park with West Texas animals. "I think it's possible," said Vicki Kelley from Hands of Life.

However, the planned park will not resemble the city zoo that closed in 1976 after a bond issue for its relocation and renovation failed, Mrs. Kelley says.

Most of Cole Park's cages will be replaced with environmental settings for the animals, Mrs. Kelley says. And only animals indigenous to West Texas, such as quail, raccoons, elk and coyotes, would populate the park.

"It's not just a whim that we want to put animals out there in these cages," said the former Columbus, Ohio, zoo volunteer. There are different ways to enclose an animal without putting them behind bars.

MANILA, Philippines (AP) — President Ferdinand E. Marcos took an early lead over challenger Corazon Aquino today in the official canvass by the National Assembly of last week's presidential election. In a brief television appearance, Marcos deplored the violence that has marked the election, and pledged to "honor, without reservations, the people's verdict at the polls and to extend our hand in conciliation to those who have contested the election with us."

Mrs. Aquino, who has claimed victory, requested that Marcos step down until the election is resolved, to "diffuse some of the swelling political anger in our country." "He is presently perceived at home and abroad as having unfairly deployed the full resources of the state to snatch victory at any cost," the 53-year-old challenger said.

Four hours into the count, Marcos led by 3,758,013 votes to 3,140,290, or 54.5 percent to 45.5 percent - a margin that has held steady since the counting began earlier in the day.
Marcos' vice presidential running

Pilot, others held on gun charges

CORPUS CHRISTI (AP) — An Eastern Airlines pilot and three others were being held today in the Nueces County jail on firearms possession charges after their airplane, bound for Guatemala, was seized in South Texas, authorities said.

Federal agents said they found two unregistered machine guns aboard the $1 million 1981 Cessna Conquest when they made the arrests at Brooks County Airport in Falfurrias early Wednesday.

A handwritten flight plan to Guatemala was also found on the plane, but the plan had not been filed with the Federal Aviation Administration, said A. D'Wayne Jernigan, head of the U.S. Customs Service office in One of those arrested was Gerald J. Merchan, 45, of Miami, who first told a federal magistrate he was a commandant with Eastern and later said he was a pilot. "He does work for Eastern Airlines and he is a pilot. I can't go into any further detail other than that," said Glenn Parsons, a spokesman for Eastern Airlines in Miami said today.

Jernigan said the plane landed at the Brooks County Airport at about 3:30 p.m. Tuesday for refueling. The U.S. Border Patrol received a report of a suspicious plane and dispatched two agents to investigate, the Corpus Christi Caller-Times reported.

When agents checked the registration number with U.S. Customs officials, they found it was a bogus

The four men were arrested at 3 a.m. Wednesday after returning to the airport from a Falfurrias motel.

The others arrested were identified as Douglas R. Carro, 31, of Paim Springs, Calif., Juan Jose Morales-Andrade, 29, of Guatemala City; and Jorge Aristizabal-Archila, 28, of Bogota, Colombia.

Merchan and Carro were charged with possession of an automatic fire-arm and Morales and Aristizabal were charged with possession of machine guns. All four were held without bond pending a detention hearing scheduled for this afternoon, said U.S.

Magistrate Eduardo de Ases. The plane was carrying two UZI, 9mm submachine guns valued at $1,000 each; one Berreta 9mm pistol valued at $350; one Heckler & Koch 9mm pistol valued at $500; 588 rounds of 9mm ammunition valued at $128; seven clips valued at $40; and $14,481 in U.S. currency. Jernigan said the firearms were found inside suitcases.

During a hearing before de Ases Wednesday, Merchan disclosed that he is a pilot with Eastern. He also said he owns a South Lake Tahoe, Calif. hotel, two condominiums and three photo finish and video stores in Florida.

Carro said he owns a flight school in Thermal, Calif., while Morales said he is an unemployed pilot.

Aristizabal said he is unemployed. Morales and Aristizabal both said they were in the United States on tourist passports.

However, $250,000 is too much money to put in the Cole Park location, says the founder of the former Midland Zoological Society.

Roy Kimsey started the zoological society and served on the zoo's board of directors. He also backed failed bond efforts to relocate and renovate the old zoo.

"If $250,000 to $300,000 is raised, I think it could be toward a more modern zoo," Kimsey

"The reason I wanted a new zoo is to get it out of the Cole Park location and get it out of the southeast side.

"The Cole Park location is not an idealistic location. People on the north side of town don't like to cross that part (southeast) of town to get to the park," he says. The park is about four miles east of the city off Cloverdale road. Kimsey says a $20,000 feasibility study conducted before the zoo closed suggested the park's relocation between Midland and Odessa off Interstate 20 and U.S. Highway 80. The study also suggested renovating the antiquated zoo. "I think it's only logical. It takes a tremendous amount of people to support a zoo. You've got to appeal to the greatest number of people you can appeal to," Kimsey says.

But the study made recommendations for a "full blown" zoo, not a small animal park, Kim-

The city granted an 18-month lease to Hands of Life on Jan. 28 to use the park. "The city is not committed in any way with any dollars. These people are committing them-selves," says George Logan, director of Parks and Recreation. If fundraising efforts fail during the next 18 months, Hands of Life must renegotiate for an extension. However, if the group doesn't raise the money in 18 months, they probably won't ask for an extension, Mrs. Kelley says. Logan said the proposed animal park would be "good use of existing land."

"I think the Hands of Life people have the opportunity to make something very, very nice

Lee lacocca loses advisory post

WASHINGTON (AP) - Lee Iacocca, one of America's best-known businessmen, has been fired for only the second time in his life, and the man who did it says it was because Iacocca had a conflict-of-interest problem while heading a commission to restore the Statue of Liberty.

Iacocca is still chairman of Chrysler Corp., the company he rescued after being bounced as president of Ford Motor Co. in 1978. It's his unpaid job as chairman of the government's chief advisory committee on the Statue of Liberty restoration that he lost.

Secretary of Interior Donald P. Hodel said Wednesday he fired Iacocca because the budding author and television celebrity would not resign from the commission to concentrate on his more important, better-known and conflicting job as chief of the restoration project's fund-raising foundation.

"The secretary's statement was off the wall and in clear contradiction of the facts," Iacocca said in a statement issued in Detroit.

"I resent any inference on his part of conflict of interest. The truth is that the secretary is in conflict with his own charter. This is a grab for four years worth of contributions by the American people," Iacocca said. He deferred further comment until a news conference today in

Informed of the "grab" accusation, Hodel said: "It is truly incredible and suggests that perhaps Mr. lacocca does not understand that it is the foundation of which he is chairman and chief executive officer that controls the money.... It is obviously an agitated remark, or a remark intended to mislead others."

As head of the private Statue of Liberty-Ellis Island Foundation, Iacocca has raised $231 million for the restoration of the statue and immigrant landing grounds in New York

Viewing restoration from atop the scaffolding around the statue in this 1984 file photo is Chrysler Corp. Chairman Lee Iacocca, Iacocca, who had headed both the Statue of Liberty-Ellis Island Foundation a fund-raising group — and the advisory commission on restoration Wednesday was fired from the commission.

His dismissal from the advisory commission has no effect on lacocca's position as head of the foundation, and Hodel told reporters at a news conference he hoped Iacocca would stay there. lacocca was replaced as commis-

It was only when Iacocca tried to get the other dual members — Avedisian and Simmons — to chose between one job or the other about two weeks ago that he realized he should make Iacocca himself choose one,

In a letter to Iacocca on Jan. 30, Hodel said "because of the key role you have played in the foundation's success to date, it seems that your continued personal attention to the affairs of the foundation must take precedence.

Iacocca, however, rejected requests that he resign from the commission when he met Hodel on Feb. 4 and again on Monday, Hodel said.

Teen to be tried as adult in Christmas Eve killing

ABILENE (AP) — A 16-year-old has been certified to stand trial as an adult in a Christmas Eve killing in which the victim was allegedly frightened from his home and stabbed in an alley.

Police claim Gilbert Grimaldo said he scared Andrew Davis, 34, out of his garage apartment by throwing bricks through several windows and then held him down while another man stabbed him to death.

"If there was a reason, they haven't told us," Assistant District Attorney Melissa Annis said Wednesday. "It was a senseless, pointless

After reading a statement allegedy signed by Grimaldo and hearing two police officers testify, District Judge Bill Thomas ordered Grimaldo bound over for grand jury consideration of the murder charges.

The defendant remains in Taylor County Jail in lieu of $25,000 bond. Also charged with murder in the case is Richardo Vinnie "Ricky" Hernandez, 22. He also remains in county jail in lieu of $25,000 bond Wednesday. Hernandez's trial is set for March 10, Ms. Annis said.

Police detective Jay Hatcher said
Davis' body was found in an alley about 11 p.m. on Dec. 24.
Hatcher said Davis had "numerous stab wounds in the back, a large cut on his chin, and a large puncture wound in the throat area."

A pathologist said Davis died of "multiple stab wounds," Hatcher

Juvenile Officer Roston Dunman said Grimaldo and his mother came to the police station voluntarily on Christmas Eve morning.

Dunman said the youth gave him the written statement after both he and Justice of the Peace Samuel Matta had advised him of his rights, including the fact that he could be certified to stand trial as an adult because he was over the age of 15.

Court-appointed defense attorney David Thedford argued there was no evidence that Grimaldo intended to kill Davis nor that he stabbed him. but Ms. Annis contended Grimaldo became a party to the murder when he scared the man out of his house and held him while he was being

Man accused in deaths of parents, young niece

HOUSTON (AP) - A Houston man is accused in the deaths of his parents and 12-year-old niece, who were found stabbed to death in their northeast Houston home, authorities

Gerald Bernard Block, 28, who was found hiding in a kitchen closet in the slain family's home, was arrested Wednesday and held without bond, authorities said.

His parents, Jeff Davis Block, 62, and Anna Lee Block, 56, were found in their blood-spattered home early Wednesday along with their granddaughter, Mytra, police said. The victims had multiple stab wounds and their throats were slashed, homicide investigators said. Police said no weapon was found.

Authorities believe the victims had been dead for about two days when they were discovered, Harris County District Attorney George Lambright said.

Under a new state law, Block is charged with one count of capital murder but is accused in all three slayings, said Lambright.

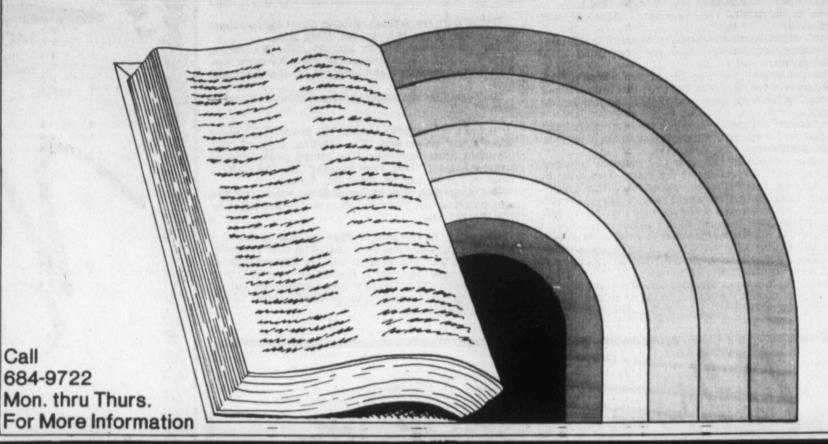

The bodies were found by Rev. W.O. Greene, a friend of the family, Greene said he went to the Block home Wednesday morning and was concerned because he had been unable to reach the family.

Greene, who has known the Blocks for 30 years, said the couple adopted their granddaughter when she was Jessell Turner of Houston remains in the Harris County Jail after being charged with slaying Yellow Cab driver Charles Hunter, 37, jail spokeswoman Linda Beason said Wednesday, Hunter was shot once in the chest about 12:30 a.m. Monday in northeast Houston.

He also is charged with aggravated robbery with a deadly weapon, attempted capital murder and driving with a suspended license, investigators said.

Turner was assessed an $800 bond for the driver's license charge, but denied bond on all the other charges, officials said.

Carter: Central America needs talks, not guns

MEXICO CITY (AP) - Former President Jimmy Carter, ending a five-nation Latin American tour, expressed optimism about a peaceful settlement to the Central American crisis and urged negotiations rather than military aid.

"There are opportunities to negotiate a peaceful settlement in Nicaragua and El Salvador that have not yet been explored," Carter told a news conference Wednesday.

The ex-president, accompanied by his wife, Rosalynn, visited Venezuela, Costa Rica, Nicaragua and El Salvador before arriving in Mexico Tuesday. He met with both government and opposition leaders, as well as with labor and business groups and Roman Catholic Church leaders, throughout the tour.

Civil wars are going on in Nicaragua and El Salvador.

"In all of my conversations with the opposition, I found their responses to me quite different from what I had heard about them," Carter said. "In every case their actual desires or demands or opinions are much more moderate and reasonable than their opponents had been led to believe."

Earlier Wednesday Carter met here with the leftist leaders of El Salvador's Democratic Revolutionary Front, the political arm of the Farabundi Marti National Liberation Front, known by its Spanish initials as the FMLN.

The FMLN, a coalition of five guerrilla armies, seeks to overthrow the government of President Jose Napoleon Duarte. About 60,000 people, a majority of them civilians, have been killed in the 6-year-old civ-

The leader of the Revolutionary Democratic Front, Guillermo Ungo, told journalists that Carter was with a realistic spirit.

Carter, following his meetings, also told journalists he supported a Central American negotiated settlement laid out by the Contadora Group — Venezuela, Mexico, Colombia and Panama - over increased military outlays.

"I personally have made it clear that our nation should rely more on the support of the Contadora process as an alternative to increased military aid for the Contras," he said.

Slippery situation

he problem really isn't funny at all, but tell a West Texan that a small, slippery water snake may hold up construction of Stacy Reservoir and you're sure to elicit a chuckle or two. Not in pleasure but irony.

Already the Fish and Wildlife office in Albuquerque, N.M. has voiced concerns that Stacy Reservoir, to be constructed southeast of Ballinger to provide water for Midland and much of the rest of West Texas, could endanger the Concho River water snake, which was listed in the Federal Register in January as a candidate for classification as a threatened species. That's not funny in itself except for what it implies.

Any West Texan who's done any degree of hunting or fishing along any of this state's rivers or lakes likely will find amusing the thought that a water snake could be threatened by an impoundment that would only guarantee more water, likely more snakes and probably more "cover" (i.e. - protection and food supplies) for the reptile.

On the other hand, anything is possible and in the interest of protecting the West Texas environment as far as is deemed reasonable, the public hearing the New Mexico Fish and Wildlife office is seeking no doubt will serve the best interests of all current and future West Texans.

the water snake already has cost the Colorado River Municipal Water District $15,000 and likely will cost more is a distasteful aspect of the interest in protecting the environment. But the cost certainly would increase dramatically if the snake's fate became the focal point for a controversy that would delay construction of the Stacy project. All too frequently it seems good intentions go awry in matters where the environment is concerned and the struggle becomes twisted into one in which the "environmentalists" square off against the "rapers of the wilderness." History is full of ample conflicts that illustrate in such situations nobody wins.

When reason prevails, though, everyone involved can give a little and come out with most of what they want. In this case that would be a reservoir as quickly as possible and reasonable protection for the endangered snake. Already the CRMWD has offered to create artificial feeding grounds for the snake outside the lake basin and, interestingly, another water snake threatened by the construction of Possum Kingdom lake has been found to do well in the lake environment.

Compassion has its 'strings'

is soldiers within sight of Kuwait of re-igniting some highly flammable people, I here-with recur to the subject of the black family, because some of my critics are practicing a perverse form of "compassion." Their "kind-ness" has a severe cost. It dehumanizes some blacks by denying that they have the capacity for responsibility, and hence for moral choice. In depicting them "compassionately," as toys of fate, it causes their personhood to disappear.

Recently I wrote praise Bill Moyers' CBS documenta-"The ry, The Vanishing Family Crisis Black America." which deals with the causes of statistics like these: Nearly 60 percent of all black children are born out of wedlock. Half of all black teen-age girls become pregnant. Many of the resulting "families" are hardly families and rarely are self-supporting. About half of all black children are partially supported by government

I said: Civil-rights struggles of the 1950s and 1960s, struggles against institutional barriers to blacks and for material amelioration for blacks, are largely irrelevant to today's catastrophe. Ameliorative programs are necssary but are doomed to be overwhelmed if the family, the primary value-generating institution, collapses. Such alleged government failures as "failure to enforce the Voting Rights Act" are peripheral to the point of inconsequence regarding the social pathologies Moyers named Timothy, the unmarried and unconcerned father of many children. I said, and say: Timothy is not a mere anecdote, he is a paradigm of those persons whose sexual irresponsibility produces misery but who feel little of the guilt that changes behavior. One reason they feel little such guilt is that they have been taught by reflexive "civil rights" rhetoric that they are mere passive victims, absolved by the all-purpose alibi of white racism" from all responsibility for their behavior.

Moyers highlighted a person

Now come two columnists who buttress my argument with their objections to it. Ray Jenkins is white. Carl Rowan is black. Both ask: Why such lack of compassion for Timothy from George Will who has a son, Jonathan, with Down's syndrome? Have Jenkins and Rowan considered the logic of their "compassion"?

Down's syndrome is a genetic defect, present from conception, involving varying degrees of mental retardation and physical abnormalities. Jenkins says Timothy "is as much a victim of fate as Jonathan." Rowan says I am compassionate when commenting about afflictions like Down's syndrome, "but Will's compassion and knowledge turn to meanness and ignorance" - the light touch is not Carl's specialty when he writes about another handicapped youngster, a ghetto lad

Hold it right there. "Youngster"? "Lad"? Rowan's exquisite sensitivity to racial insults would cause him to have an apoplectic seizure were any white person to refer to any black man as a "boy." Yet Rowan calls Timothy a "youngster," a "lad" - Timothy who is 26 years old, who in the eight years he has been eligible to vote has caused eight pregnancies and says he had "a lovely time" doing so. 'Youngster"? "Lad"? A more apposite noun is: "man." The great proclamation on plac-

years ago was: "I am a man." It cut to the heart of the matter, the denial of the full personhood of blacks. Today people who think like Jenkins and Rowan demonstrate, unwittingly, and in the name of "compassion," that there are many ways to deny personhood. The essence of personhood is an irreducible element of responsibility for one's choices and Timothy, having grown up in a social setting of material deprivation and moral underdevelopment and narrow horizons, is indeed somewhat a product - a victim, if you prefer-of bad circumstances. But consider the damage done by thinking of him, and telling him to think of himself, as just as much a "victim of fate" and "handicapped" as a child with a retarding genetic defect. Is it not obvious the harm such "compassion" does to the thinking of whites and self-esteem of blacks?

I say again: The Timothys are more of a menace to black progress than the Bull Connors were because only political will was required to remove the Connors. I now add: Another menace to black progress is the "compassionate" portrayal of such black men as utterly passive victims, as no more to be judged than infants — as less than men.

Again, the dignity of personhood is related to the capacity for responsibility in making moral choices. Persons with Down's syndrome do not lack that capacity.

Some people who advertise their "compassion" should suspend their self-congratulations long enough to consider this: Black Americans should be spared the condescending 'compassion" that portrays irresponsible black men as not really responsible because they are not really

Since then, the NRA has been working hard - and with obvious success - to track down more signatories for the discharge petition. Part of its lobbying effort, as usual, is to call on its membership for grassroots pressure on individual members of the House. A Jan. 24 mailing reported that 158 (the figure had grown to 166 when we went to press) atures had been collected, and told NRA members bluntly:

"If your congressman doesn't sign the discharge petition on the 'Fire-arms Owners Protection Act,' he's not working for gun and hunting rights in America. It's that plain and

ART BUCHWALD 'Smoking gun' points to firms

Thursday, February 13, 1986 Midland Reporter-Telegram

he tobacco companies are fighting back against the steady drumbeat of anti-cigarette propaganda. According to The Wall Street Journal, Philip Morris has launched a vigorous campaign prevent discrimination against smokers. The tobacco company says antismoking zealots are harassing smokers and violating their civil rights. A Philip Morris spokesman also maintains that when it comes to reporting the smoking story, the media are grossly unfair to the tobacco interests and support the "fringe element in the country today bent on modifying Americans' behavior to conform to their own interpretation

I wish the spokesman had said "some of the media" because I believe that anybody in this country who wants to smoke should be allowed to do so. I refuse to be lumped with zealots or members of the fringe element. While I am a bornagain ex-cigar smoker, I would never take sides between those courageous people who have given up smoking and the weak, miserable wretches who are still addicted to this filthy

The newspaperman's job is to be fair and impartial on any political issue, whether it is tobacco or Colonel Khadafy

So I will first deal with the arguments in favor of smoking. Most people who smoke are walking time bombs waiting to go off, and the cigarette is the only thing to keep them from self-destructing. The country does not have enough mental institutions to take care of all the neurotic people who would have to be committed if they weren't permitted to smoke. Smokers are among our biggest taxpayers. Through cigarette taxes they support schools, sewers and the hospitals they check into when they get sick from smoking.

Smoking contributes to the nation's economy. Cigarette addicts will spend their last dollar for a pack of smokes rather than throw it away on bread or mill One of the most telling health arguments in favor of smoking is that more women are doing it now than ever before. They wouldn't if it weren't safe, because women smokers are not dumb. The more anxious people are about lighting up, the more they are bullied by nonsmokers who will not tolerate smokers in the same room. These nonsmoking zealots justify their rudeness by claiming they become dizzy from the fumes. This is a joke. It is a known medical fact that tobacco smoke cannot do any more physical harm to a nonsmoker than a

The biggest fear of the tobacco companies is that if the nonsmoker is permitted to persecute the smoker today, he will persecute diesel trucks tomorrow and Consolidated Edison smokestacks next week. So the prosmoker is fighting not just for his own rights, but the rights of everything that smokes in America.

glass of warm water from the East

Now let's be fair to the other side. The nonsmokers are made up of wimps who sit around all day waiting for a smoker to pull out a cigarette. They are intolerant, selfish people. When asked why they object to someone enjoying a few puffs from the filter tip, all the nonsmoker can come up with is a weak, "I have asthma," which is no reason at all.

Besides the wimps, a large number of nonsmokers are reformed puffers, who gave up the weed and now want everyone else to do the same. These people are unbearable because they not only ask smokers to put out their cigarettes but spend a half-hour telling them why they are no good. So there you have it, the two opposing sides, each with their own truth: one composed of smoke worshippers, the other always praying for fresh air.

We, as Americans, should have tolerance for both - the side that believes in a long life, and the side that couldn't care less. No one has a monopoly on truth. The only thing we can all agree on is that the tobacco companies are not in business for our health.

These cowards who hide behind sheets and burn crosses are not witches or Christians, but this chain of madness back to civil war times is broken and it is indeed time to celebrate.

It is also a time to honor the American, who more than anyone else, lifted the consciousness of this nation out of some of the ignorance found in Galatians, Chapter 5, verses 19-21, and recommended by Hermena Dodson, to condemn this man, Dr. Martin Luther King, and those who would

Dissident has minor heart problems, doctor says

JERUSALEM (AP) — The doctor who examined Anatoly Shcharansky today said the Jewish human rights activist has minor heart and neurological problems caused by severe malnutrition during nearly nine years in Soviet jail and labor camps.

Cardiologist Mervyn Gottesman, head of the team of doctors that examined Shcharansky for three hours, said the noted dissident was suffering from a small heart lesion and a tremor in his hand but did not require any immediate treatment except rest and gentle exercise.

When he was arrested and jailed in March 1977, Shcharansky weighed 165 pounds. Gottesman said Shcharansky weighed 75 pounds after his last hunger strike in 1985.

But Shcharansky said the Soviets fed him so well in the last two months in preparation for his re-lease that he gained 22 pounds.

Shcharansky, convicted of spying for the United States, was freed Tuesday in Berlin in an East-West exchange and flew to Israel. He has joined his wife Avital, whom he had not seen since she left the Soviet Union the day after their 1974

Shcharansky "went into prison in 1977 in prime physical condition. I think his prime condition gave him the basis to survive 403 days he spent under very, very strict conditions, Gottesman told reporters at the Hadassah Medical Center in Jerusalem.

He was referring to the days Shcharansky spent in solitary confinement, in a cell that the dissident facilities, no heat and little food. Gottesman said Shcharansky also conducted two hunger strikes, of about 110 and 92 days each, during which he was periodically force-fed with a rich fluid of eggs and milk pumped into his body through a tube. He said the force-feeding caused Sheharantiv's heart to receive and then conduct a news conference. Shcharansky said Wednesday he expected his 77-year-old mother would join him within a month. He he was released. In Washington, the U.S. State Department said the Soviet Union had indicated Mrs. Milgrom and other relatives of Shcharansky would be allowed to emigrate to Israel, but did not elaborate. Mrs. Milgrom told The Associated Press in Moscow that officials of the Soviet visa agency had denied any knowledge of an order to grant a visa to her or her elder son, Leonid.

Shcharansky, convicted in July 1978 of spying for the CIA, told Israel radio Wednesday that he dreamed about coming to Israel -

New rulers close Haitian paper, arrest mayor

PORT-AU-PRINCE, Haiti (AP) -Haiti's new rulers shut down the government newspaper, announced the arrest of the capital city's mayor and said they may consider confiscating the property of deposed President Jean-Claude Duvalier.

The six-man National Government Council Wednesday ordered the paper Le Nouveau Monde closed "for reorganization," but did not say when it might be reopened.

Other newspapers, some of which had been pro-Duvalier but privately owned, continue to publish. The military-civilian council took power Feb. 7 when Duvalier, "president for life" since inheriting the title from his father Francois Duvalier in 1971, fled to temporary exile in Police said they arrested the capital's mayor, former army Col. Frank Romain, Tuesday night and that he was in protective custody. Neighbors said a convoy of police vehicles whisked him off as a mob was threatening his home. Romain is suspected of having close ties to the Tonton Macoute, Duvalier's hated and feared secret

"He will be treated like any other Macoute," a police source said.

The new government has disbanded the Tonton Macoute. Many of them were killed by vengeful mobs following Duvalier's departure, and others are in custody, including the woman who headed the organization for more than 15 years, Rosalie "Madame Max" Adolphe.

The new government's justice minister, Gerard Gourgue, said Wednesday the new leaders have not yet decided whether to put her on trial.

It also was undecided about whether to seize whatever property Duvalier left in Haiti, he said. "This may be done, but not yet...it may be the subject of an administrative in quiry," Gourgue told The Associated

The family fortune has been estimated at $400 million, but there is no sign how much of that Duvalier had with him, had put in foreign bank accounts, or may be left following his departure.

Where Duvalier will finally settle appeared to be in question again today. France has said he cannot remain there.

In Monrovia, Liberia, the government said in a statement today it had not offered asylum to deposed Haitian dictator Jean-Claude Duvalier but would consider any formal request made by him.

President Samuel Doe's press secretary, Patrick Kugmeh, issued the statement to clarify a report by the official Liberian News Agency Tuesday that quoted Foreign Minister Joseph Bernard Blamo as saying Liberia would have no reservation in granting Duvalier asylum if a request were made.

Today's brief statement said, "Liberia has not offered political asylum to former President Duvalier, but the foreign minister of Liberia said, 'Liberia will consider the matter if Mr. Duvalier was to make a formal request.'

No other country publicly has indicated willingness to accept Duvalier, who is staying at a resort hotel in eastern France after fleeing Haiti last Friday. Earlier today, the British Broadcasting Corp. quoted Liberian Information Minister Carlton Karpeh as saying in an interview that his government had not offered Duvalier asylum and had received no request from him to do so. French Foreign Minister Roland Dumas said Wednesday that Liberia informed France it was willing to accept Duvalier and that the deposed ruler's future would be re-

Lt. Gen. Henri Namphy, a career army officer who heads Haiti's new ruling council, has promised a "real" and working democracy," a new constitution and national elections for a president and legislature.

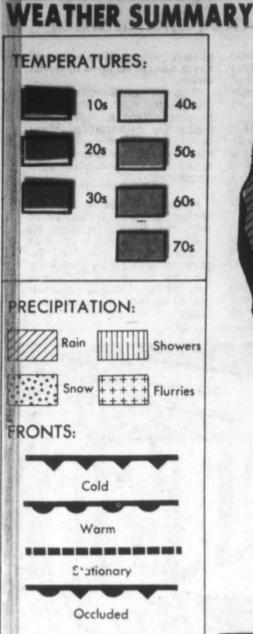

Justice Minister Gourgue said the new government still is trying to or-ganize, and that it is too early to discuss dates for elections and a new constitution.

He also said it has not been decided when political exiles might be allowed to return, saying "the internal stability of the country has to be assured before addressing that question. Thousands of high school students shouting "liberty" marched through Port-au-Prince Wednesday after-noon to the gates of the National

Some chanted "Enough, enough of Cineas," a reference to Alix Cineas, a member of the government council sometimes criticized for his closeness to Duvalier.

STATE Drizzle and fog reduced the visibility to less than a mile in the lower Rio Grande Valley this morning, while light snow and fog was reported in the Texas Panhandle.

A travelers advisory was posted for a time early this morning for the Panhandle and South Plains because of the dense fog, which began to dissipate after dawn.

Skies were mostly clear over East Texas, the Permian Basin and the Trans Pecos, with cloudiness reported over most of the rest of the state.

Recruiting ordeal ends for high school football stars

By TERRY WILLIAMSON Assistant Sports Editor

Hundreds of high school football players, including five from Midland, inked their names to major college scholarship offers Wednesday, ending an ordeal for both coaches and prospects alike.

Probably no one felt the sting of the recruiting pressures more than Midland Lee All-State guard Jake Young, who finally cast his lot with Nebraska less than 24 hours before

"It's been a busy time," said Young, the 6-foot-five, 233 pound of-fensive lineman. "The phone was always ringing. There were a lot of times when I felt like I needed to hide somewhere."

Young was wooed by "10 to 12" major colleges and was one of the most sought after lineman in the "Things became a little easier as I narrowed down the choices, but I ended up where I really wanted to go. I have a lot of respect for all the coaches I visited with. When I made my decision, all of the schools were happy with the choice I made and wished me luck," said Young, who Nebraska plans to use at either center or guard. "I'm grateful that I had this opportunity, but I'm glad it's parents than the players. Just ask Young's parents, Barbara and Jake. "It's like someone died at our house today. The phone stopped rin-ging," said Barbara Young, "At first, all of this was a real honor, but Jake wouldn't stay at home to take the calls that were for him. There were calling all the time. "And then in the middle of it all. the mid-court thing happened at (Texas) Tech and that added even more calls.'

reporters, TV stations and coaches

While on a recruiting trip to Texas Tech, Young made a mid-court shot during a halftime promotion to win $2,000. He bought a program that had a lucky number in it and from those numbers, the chance at the half court shot was given. The NCAA later ruled that no recruit could receive money of any kind while on a recruiting trip.
"I think I should have just stayed in my seat or at home on that one, said Young. "That caused a lot of attention that I didn't need.'

Mother Barbara and father Jake did a lot of the phone work for their

"I missed out on a lot of it because I was at work," said Jake, the father. "But when I came home in the evenings, the phone was turned over to me because my wife had had it by then. Still, I'm glad we had the opportunity to get some calls.

MIDLAND LEE Jake Young, OL, Nebraska Terry Young, DB, New Mexico Tuey Rankin, QB, Texas Tech David Almand, TE, Air Force MIDLAND HIGH Phillip Speight, OL, Houston

Young is still thankful for his experience at Lee and the opportunity he had to play for the Rebels. "I wouldn't be where I am now if it wasn't for Lee. I had one of the best coaches in America with David Browning. If he can do this for me, he can do it with anyone. I'll always be grateful for that."

The other Midland athletes weren't as widely recruited as Young, but choices had to be made.

Lee quarterback Tuey Rankin chose Texas Tech to add to the family's Red Raider tradition. Rankin's father Yippie played at Tech as did his grandfather Walter and uncle David, Walter Rankin was on Tech's only Cotton Bowl team.

'For some reason, I always thought Tuey was going to choose Colorado, but I'm happy for him. It's hard to get West Texas out of your blood," said Yippie.

Tuey says he chose Tech because "they offered me a chance to also play baseball and Colorado didn't have a baseball program." That adds to the family tree at Tech since Yippie also played baseball at Tech.

That means that Judy Rankin is going to have to make some more trips to Lubbock to see her son play.

I had the feeling there were going to be a lot more trips to Lubbock whether Tuey went there are not," said Judy, a great athlete of note in her own right. She set LPGA history by becoming the first woman to win $100,000 in a single year on the LPGA tour. "I'm happy with his choice because we always felt that Tech is a good school and we were confident that he could be happy

Even before the end of the season, it was no secret that Lee tight end David Almand wanted to play his college football at the Air Force Academy. However, a problem came up quickly when he got his nomina-tion to a service academy — the Naval Academy.

"What I really wanted to do was play football at Air Force. Navy wasn't all that interested in me. Anyway, about three weeks ago I found out that I had a nomination to Air Force and things worked out for me," said Almand.

David's stepfather, Tim Winder, said, "We took David to the Air Force Academy a few years back, but he didn't seem too interested in it then. I think it will be a great education for him. I really believe in it."

Air Force is considering moving Almand to the defensive line instead of tight end

It didn't take long for Midland High tackie Phillip Speight to choose ouston's Cougars.

"I talked with three other schools (UTEP, Eastern New Mexico and Cal-ifornia), but I visited Houston and knew that's where I wanted to be. I've always wanted to play in the Southwest Conference and Houston has given me that chance," said Speight, the 6-foot-4, 230 pound lineman who was already decked out in University of Houston cap

"I think Houston is a consistent team. They've been in the Cotton Bowl three times and seven bowl games since 1962 and have had only one losing season during that span. It was the best school for me."

Lee defensive back Terry Young chose New Mexico over West Texas

"I always thought I would play college football, but I always pictured myself playing for teams like SMU, Baylor or Oklahoma. I never thought would go to New Mexico," said Young.

"But Albuquerque is a nice town and I feel like I fit into their program. It was fun and exciting to play in District 4-5A — and tough. The playoffs were real exciting. I won't forget those things.

And it will be hard to forget these Midland names. Signing day is only the first small step.

"But that is not the reason we

A&M's Sherrill, Bears' Teaff ace recruiting 101

By DENNE H. FREEMAN AP Sports Writer

Rating the Southwest Conference football talent recruiting war Wednesday was easy when you're looking for first and last places.

The Texas Aggies won the top spot easily although they lost super running back Harvey Williams of Hempstead to Louisiana State. The Aggies can pay Harvey back next year when they open with the Tigers in Baton

Southern Methodist gets dead last by default. The NCAA said the Mustangs couldn't give away any scholarships this year because of numerous recruiting violations in the past. SMU gets 15 next year if it's good. Here are my ratings on the 1986 schoolboy signing day in Texas: TEXAS A&M — Coach Jackie Sherrill gets an A. Only Williams' escape east marred the day. Although the Aggies were the defending Cotton Bowl champions Sherrill still had to battle NCAA probation rumors. He did an admirable job of defending the Aggie cause. He said he was in 21 different cities in two and onehalf days over one stretch. His hard work showed in getting the best passer, the best receiver and the best center in the state.

BAYLOR — Baylor Coach Grant Teaff gets an A-minus. He calls it "the best defensive class" he's recruited. He also got three of the best quarterbacks in the state and without a doubt one of the most exciting receivers in Greg Anderson of Odessa Permian.

TCU - Coach Jim Wacker gets a B plus. The Horned Frogs beefed up on both lines of scrimmage. Another amazing performance by Wacker considering the chaos the Horned Frogs went through last year and the impending action by the NCAA because of the TCU slush fund established before Wacker came aboard.

ARKANSAS — Coach Ken Hat-field gets a solid B. The Razorbacks heaval of five fired assistant sacked every important player in the state and raided Oklahoma for the top quarterback. Hatfield has the Arkansas players going to Arkansas

TEXAS TECH - Coach David McWilliams gets a C plus in his first try as a Red Raider recruiter. Tech did a good job in West Texas and signed their first Lubbock Estacado player in 13 years.

TEXAS - Coach Fred Akers gets a C minus. Bluechip linebacker Duane Duncum was the shining star of a so-so crop for the Longhorns, who are trying to overcome the up-HOUSTON - Coach Bill Yeoman gets a D. The Cougars got several good players but overall their crop is a big mystery. Quarterback Michael McDade of Hempstead has potential some three years from now which is about the best you can say for this

RICE - Coach Jerry Berndt gets a D minus. Now you know Jerry how tough it is to recruit on Old Main. SMU - Coach Bobby Collins doesn't get a report card. But he does have an impressive looking walk-on crop.

Academic integrity $2.5 million richer

By MICHAEL GOODWIN N.Y. Times News Service

ATLANTA - A federal jury ruled here Wednesday that a University of Georgia instructor had been dismissed illegally in retaliation for op-posing favored treatment for athletes. The jury awarded Jan Kemp more than $2.5 million for lost wages, mental anguish and punitive damages

"It's a victory for academic integrity," said a smiling Kemp moments after the verdict. "I was interested in widespread therapeutic reform, and I think it can be brought about now."

She and her lawyer, Hue Henry, said they were pleasantly surprised by the amount of the award.
"It's like being in the wheel of fortune and winning the big prize,"

Kemp said.

Georgia, including a doctorate. After the verdict, she hugged her mother, Margie Hammock, and announced she was throwing a party. She also said she would give 10 percent of the award to her church in Watkinsville,

"I tithe," she said, still smiling. The defendants in the case were Virginia Y. Trotter, the university's vice president for academic affairs, and Leroy Ervin, the assistant vice president in charge of Georgia's developmental studies program, in which Kemp taught remedial English from 1978 until she was dismissed in 1983.

"I'm surprised at the verdict and disappointed," Trotter said. Ervin said, "The verdict surprised me."

They stood solemaly on either side of their lawyer, O. Hale Almand Jr.,

Kemp, 36, has three degrees from in the hallway outside the courtroom as Almand said a decision had not been made on whether to appeal. Almand is a private attorney who was hired by the university to represent Trotter and Ervin. The award was divided as follows:

$79,680.95 to compensate Kemp for lost wages; $200,000 for mental anguish and $1 for loss of reputation. Trotter, identified as the second-most powerful official at the university, was assessed $1.5 million in punitive damages, and Ervin was assessed $800,000 in punitive damages.

The verdict did not deal with Kemp's request for reinstatement, which she can now put to the presiding judge, Horace Ward. Also, the judge will rule on how much, if any, Georgia must pay in fees to Kemp's

SAN FRANCISCO (AP) - Willie Mays will bring San Francisco Giant uniform No. 24 out of retirement in two weeks, putting it on for his return to baseball as a spring training instructor with his old team.

"We've got a shot at it. I think we're going to do it," Savage said of his hopes to end the drought. "We're not giving up on the season. We're going to win one or two games, and next year we're going to come back and surprise a lot of people."

Don Cooksey, who took over as cocoach with Savage after this year's loss string reached 25, believes the key to Friday's games is "to play good, inside ball against them. They've got a big man in the middle.

"They've got a good shooting guard. The reason we lost to them in the last game was we got beat on our own offensive boards," he said. "This is a good, good bunch of young men. They've got a lot of desire, and I think they're improving."

Penguins snap 16-game skid against Caps

After a few years of frustration, it was payback time for the Pittsburgh Penguins against the Washington Capitals.

"I felt we would play well, but to blow them out was a bit of a surprise," Pittsburgh Coach Bob Berry said Wednesday night after his team NHL routed Washington 8-1 and broke a 16-game National Hockey League winless streak against the Capitals.

Dating back to Oct. 14, 1963, the Penguins had gone 0-15-1 against the Capitals.

"It was one of our finer two-way efforts," Berry said. "We skated, we worked, we got the breaks and we outplayed them for 60 minutes."

LONDON (AP) - The U.S. dollar, already trading at a sevenyear low against the yen, plunged further against the Japanese currency today and also fell against European currencies. Gold prices drifted lower in light trading.

MARKETS Posted oil prices dropping; could go lower

By JOHN PAUL PITTS Business/Oil Editor

The rush to cut posted oil prices continues among major purchasers, as Koch Oil Co., a major purchaser, lowered its posted price for West Texas Intermediate to $18 per barrel today. Crude purchasers predicted prices could go even lower.

Airlines to benefit from falling oil prices

DALLAS (AP) - Airlines, like most companies in the transportation industry, are keeping an eye toward falling crude oil prices.

However, officials at four Texas-based carriers said they have not yet seen lower fuel bills. "It's not having a dramatic impact yet," said Mark Osterberg, vice president of finance and control at

We don't know how long it will be until we see it and we don't know how long it will last," Osterberg said Wednesday.

American Airlines spokesman Al Becker said some airlines would benefit from lower fuel bills more than others. Airlines organized since deregulation, he said, have lower labor costs than older carriers. Because newer, low-cost airlines spend proportionately more on fuel than labor, their costs - and ticket prices - will drop more than those of older, established airlines, Becker said. The practical, day-to-day effect is that it (falling fuel prices) benefits them much more greatly than it does American," Becker said. Osterberg agreed that the oil-price drop will have a bigger effect on Braniff than on American. "A drop in fuel prices should have a bigger impact on us with respect to unit costs," he said.

Braniff filed for bankruptcy in 1982 and reorganized under Chapter 11 of the U.S. Bankruptcy Code. Because it was reorganized after deregulation, it is in the category Becker characterized as a low-cost Charlotte Goddard, spokeswoman for Southwest Airlines, said she did not know whether lower oil prices would help new, low-cost airlines at the expense of older, established carriers. She said all airines will benefit from lower fuel prices, but that Southwest might suffer because many of its customers work for the energy industry.

"Prices may come down, but traffic might, too," she said, explaining that much of the carrier's business comes from oil businesses on the Gulf coast and in Oklahoma. The oil price drop has hurt energyrelated businesses

Goddard said fuel is Southwest's greatest expense, followed by labor. She did not know the percentages

American's biggest cost is labor, which accounts for 38 percent of the airline's expenses, Becker said. Fuel accounted for the second greatest portion of carrier's expenses, at 23 percent Braniff's greatest expense is fuel, which accounts for 30 percent of the carrier's expenses. Osterberg said. He said labor is the second-largest expense, at 20 percent.

Goddard said Southwest has some of the characteristics of both an older, established arrline and of a new, low-cost airline.

'It's not established in the sense of Delta or American," she said. "But it's not a carrier established since deregulation." Like newer airlines, though, Southwest spends less on labor than do older

'We're just going to have to fasten our seat belts and ride this thing out for a few months," said Bill Kleine, president Permian Corp. "There's a lot of oil out there and stocks are building. We're in a world market now. The only thing refiners on the coast look at is the cheapest barrel."

Kleine said it was his opinion that the continuing low prices would be short-term in duration: "The Saudis are flooding the system to get their share of the world market. Once they get the attention of other oil exporters, I am confident, they will work to bring the price of oil back

Harry Spannus, executive vice president Permian Basin Petroleum Association, said the declining prices could force some operators in the Permian Basin to shut-in wells. "It is different for each operator, depending on his debt, overhead and need for cash flow," said Spannus, "but at some point when it becomes unprof-itable to produce a well many may opt to cease production. Most of our large independents will weather this price crunch, but many of the smaller ones, working on narrow margins of only a few dollars a barrel may have to take Chapter 11. It is a situation that will affect everyone banks, service companies and oil

Crude oil buyers offer little comfort. Two Permian Basin crude buyers who asked to remain annonymous speculated that we had not seen the bottom on prices yet, because of a continuing downward pressure on the posted price throughout the week. Said one: "It's going to be a different oil patch for awhile. I think posted prices for March will be in the $15-$16 range." Some analysts have predicted that the price for oil could go to $10 before it bottoms out.

The declining market has caused ARCO to announce it would slash planned 1986 capital spending by a third to $2 billion, cutting deeply into its allocations for oil and gas exploration and production. Arco said it might increase the budget if the market improved. Amoco earlier in news reports offered that it might also curtain capital spending as a result of price declines

While the price declines are viewed as a disaster in the Permian Basin, other areas of the nation see it as a windfall. Lower oil prices are expected to keep inflationary pressures from building up even if economic growth accelerates, analysts

Pipelines' open access deadline postponed

WASHINGTON (AP) - The Federal Energy Regulatory Commission has postponed the deadline by which natural gas pipelines have to decide whether to open their lines to all producers, including those offering cheap gas.

The commission voted 3-1 Wednesday to move the deadline from Saturday to July 1.

The more companies that decide to open their lines, the more widely available cheap spot-market gas can be. Few have opened their lines so

The pipelines and trade associations that asked for a delay made "a too early; that "we are going to be creating disruption in gas markets without any offsetting benefits," said Commissioner C. Michael Maeve, who voted with the majority. The dissenter, Charles G. Stallon said, "Anytime we impose a deadline there will be disruptions."

refuses Texaco bid to disqualify judge

AUSTIN, Texas (AP) - The Texas Supreme Court has refused to disqualify the state district judge who upheld a jury decision that could cost Texaco $10.5 billion.

Without writing an opinion, the high court Wednesday overruled Texaco's claim that Judge Solomon Casseb Jr. was not qualified to hear

Casseb presided over the final eight weeks of the complex, 44month trial of Pennzoil Co.'s lawsuit against Texaco. He affirmed the jury's $10.5 billion award in December. adding $600 million in interest and saying more interest would accumulate at the rate of 10 percent

The trial ended in November when jurors held that Texaco deliberately interfered in a merger agreement between Pennzoil Co. and Getty Oil Co. before Texaco acquired Getty in 1984.

On Jan. 27, a Texaco request to disqualify Casseb was rejected by Judge Thomas Stovall Jr., presiding judge for the administrative district that includes Houston. Stovall appointed Casseb to the case in October after the original trial judge, Anthony Farris, became ill. The Supreme Court on Wednesday rejected Texaco's request to force Stovall to conduct a hearing on the company's attempt to have Casseb disqualified.

Casseb was appointed as a "retired judge," but Texaco said he had not served enough time as a judge to qualify as a retired judge.

permit pipelines to make special deals for carrying cheap spot-market gas to large industrial customers who could threaten to switch to oil while permitting those same pipelines to deny similar gas to customers without the ability to switch, such as distribution companies serving homes and businesses in a particular area.

The commission last fall ordered pipelines to choose what they would be - open access carriers, transporting gas for anyone who would pay transportation fees; or traditional pipelines as the sole suppliers of their customers with their own gas and able to exclude other gas from their lines.

Customers of a pipeline chosing open access where permitted to reduce, during the next five years, the amount of gas they must take from the pipeline under existing Flaws found at the South Texas Nuclear Project could put the $5.5 billion plant behind schedule.

Flaws at nuclear plant could slow production

HOUSTON (AP) - Flaws discovered during a federal inspection at the South Texas Nuclear Project could put the $5.5 billion plant near Bay City behind schedule, a Nuclear Regulatory Commission official said.

But Graham Painter, spokesman for Houston Lighting & Power Co., the managing partner in the project, said correcting the problems won't delay the projected loading of nuclear fuel in June 1987 or the start of commercial power generation in December 1987.

James M. Taylor, director of NRC's office of inspection and enforcement, wrote to HL&P saying the agency is concerned with the timeliness of some of HL&P's planned corrective actions.

The NRC noted HL&P already had acted to correct some of the problems found among hardware and design control. The problems stemmed mainly from weaknesses in the plant's construction program, according to an NRC inspection report released Tuesday by HL&P, the managing partner in the project. Painter said the company hasn't been told whether any punitive action, which could range from an order to fix the problems to a fine, will be taken. Among the problems cited in the inspection report was one involving the design control of motor-operated valves. Another concerned poorly designed circuit breakers that could have faulted or inadvertently interrupted power circuits.

District judge dismisses Spindletop lawsuits

BEAUMONT, Texas (AP) - A state district judge has dismissed two lawsuits in which 2,800 people sought a share of the Spindletop oil fortune by claiming family ties to deceased wildcatter James Meadors.

Judge Joe Fisher fully accepted the Nov. 1 recommendation of U.S. Magistrate Earl Hines that he dismiss the suits, filed against some of the nation's largest oil companies, because the would-be heirs waited more than 70 years before seeking

The order Fisher signed late Tuesday dismisses the suits filed last February by Jewell Robbins of Lexington, Ky., on behalf of 430 possible heirs, and one filed last May by Mary Allen of Cincinnati, leader of about 2,800 people claiming kinship to

A similar lawsuit dismissed by Fisher earlier is on appeal to the 5th U.S. Circuit Court of Appeals in New

All three lawsuits allege the named plaintiffs are descendants of

Meadors, and that a 1911 deed officially filed in 1931 gave Meadors a one-eighth interest in lands that are part of the famous Spindletop oil

"This court also finds that the reasons plaintiffs offer for their 73-year delay in filing suit are insufficient and will not prevent dismissal of these causes," Fisher said. But the plaintiff's attorneys said their clients did not have "constructive knowledge" of certain facts that might have led them to assert their

Oil glut may be altering nation's global priorities

Los Angeles Times -Washington Post News Service

WASHINGTON - When Secretary of State George P. Shultz pre-sented his opening testimony on for-eign assistance to the House Foreign Affairs Committee in February 1963, he spoke of the "vital" importance of the Persian Gulf to "the economic and political security" of the free world. To make the point, he presented a color-coded map showing U.S. aid recipients in blue, the Soviet Union and its friends in red and pink, and a big gray arrow — "Persian Gulf access" — stretching across North Africa and the Middle East to its target in the center of the strate-

Three years later, on Feb. 5, Shultz presented a fresh interpretation of the U.S. world view in his opening presentation on the same subject to the same committee. This time he did not mention the Persian Gulf or even the Middle East, except in reference to the problem of interna-

Shultz's remarkable omission is one of many signs of changing times brought about by the oil glut and the headlong tumble of petroleum prices from a high of $34 a barrel of crude oil in 1981 to a current spot price of about $16. This new era, which promises an economic boon to many oil-consuming nations and economic woe to many oil-producing na-tions, is altering the United States' global priorities. When Middle Eastern oil producers seized control of the internationers seized control of the international energy market and quadrupled oil prices in 1973, and when the fall of the shah of Iran in 1979 led to redoubling of oil prices and long lines at American gas stations, the Persian Gulf was transformed into a top priority for American policy-makers.

THE UNITED STATES had re-lied first on Britain and later on Shah Mohammed Reza Pahlavi to police this faraway part of the world on behalf of the western allies and Japan. Suddenly the allies' security interests were in jeopardy, and there was no one besides the United States was no one besides the United States to assume the responsibility.

The ensuing sense of crisis led to unprecedented U.S. activism in Middle East politics, the wooing of key Arab countries with enormous sales of sophisticated arms, warnings to the Soviet Union that a U.S. "vital interest" existed in the Persian Gulf and creation of a U.S. military force whose mission was to intervene swiftly and effectively in any future emergency to secure the oil fields halfway around the world.

That period of activism has now ended; the American approach to the region is again typified by passive diplomacy. Evidence of the change is easy to find:

In the first three years after the 1973 oil crisis, Secretary of State Henry A. Kissinger visited Saudi Arabia 13 times. In contrast, Shultz in 3 1-2 years has visited the kingdom only twice, in April and July 1983. There have also been markedly fewer visits by other top U.S. officials.

INVESTOR'S GUIDE

Brokerage firms hold dividends to earn interest

By BILL DOYLE

Q. For several years, I have had an account at the local office of a well-known national brokerage firm. Although my investments are not large, I do depend on the income from them. The brokerage has never sent me my dividends on time - always at least 10 days to two weeks

When I questioned my broker about this, he said brokerage firms hold up prompt payment of money to customers so that the firms can earn interest for themselves. He also said, if I demand interest on my money from the date it was due, he has to pay that interest out of his own pocket.

Why is this allowed? It just isn't right and I would like to know why it goes on, if there is any honest answer.

A. The first half of your broker's reply was an absolutely honest answer. All too many brokerage firms hang on to customers' money until customers kick and scream. While your money is at the brokerage it has been credited to your account and is in a "free credit balance." The firm can use it to earn interest, which you never

The second half of the broker's answer is of questionable validity. My suspicious mind comes up with the thought that your broker is playing on your sympathies by suggesting it would cost him money if you demand interest on your money his firm is

Some brokerage firms might get away with that. But they would run the risk that your broker and others handling customers accounts would pull up stakes and move to different brokerage houses taking their customers with them.

It's obvious you leave your stocks with the brokerage firm in "street name" - registered in the brokerage's name. If you want to receive each dividend on its payment date, you should order your broker to have your stocks registered in your

Then, the stock certificates will be sent to you and the companies in which you own stock will mail dividend checks directly to you.

If you want to stay with the street name arrangement, you should order your broker to have the dividends sent to you immediately after each payment. That might take a couple of days.

However, many brokerage firms send out dividends and other cash in customers' accounts only once a month. If you run into that roadblock, you can transfer your account to a more accommodating brokerage firm.

Q. After encountering many long delays in receiving dividends from stocks my brokerage firm holds for me and similar delays in receiving payments for stocks I sold, I wrote two letters to the Securities and Exchange Commission. Five months passed before I received a letter from the brokerage house and my problem was corrected.

The letter did not explain why the envelopes containing my checks were postmarked three to five days after the checks were dated. Would the SEC follow up on these items and correct every one? Or, must I complain each time?

A. The SEC is not authorized to be a collection us agent and does not perform that function for investors. However, when that federal regulatory body looks into investors' complaints, brokerage firms usually straighten up and fly right.

By mailing checks three to five days after they were dated, your brokerage has the use of the money involved only for those days, but also until the checks clear the bank on which they were written.

The SEC has warned brokerages not to use "remote checking" - the process of paying customers with checks written on faraway banks. Based on your letter, your brokerage seems to have found another way of profiting on the "float" from uncashed checks.

If you can back up your complaint with photocopies of the dated checks and the postmarked envelopes, the SEC would probably crack down on that brokerage.

However, you can't expect that federal agency to "make you whole" for previous late check deliveries. You have to take each gripe to the brokerage

PRIORITIES -

From the 1973 Middle East war through the signing of the Israeli-Egyptian peace agreement in 1979, the United States under Presidents Richard M. Nixon, Gerald R. Ford and Jimmy Carter was the driving force of the Middle East peace process. But, except for one brief sortic into the world of Mideast diplomacy with his September 1982 peace plan, President Reagan and his senior aides have let the Middle East countries themselves set the pace in the drive for regional peace, and the pace has been sluggish.

pace has been sluggish.

In 1978 and 1981, Carter and Reagan committed their prestige and political resources in all-out struggles in Congress for approval of major sales of military aircraft to Saudi Arabia and other Mideast countries. The presidents won the day in Congress after two bruising battles with Israel and its friends in Congress. But in 1985 and 1986, with fewer law-makers worried about oil supplies and large numbers backing Israel, Reagan saw little chance of winning approval for more modest arms sales to Saudi Arabia and Jordan; he gave up without a major fight.

The "Carter doctrine" enunciated in January 1980, the month after the Soviet invasion of Afghanistan, threatened a direct U.S. military response to attempts "by any outside force to gain control of the Persian Gulf region." It has lapsed, at least in U.S. public statements. In contrast, the "Reagan doctrine" of 1985 and 1986 is a declaration of support for anticommunist "freedom fighters" in a variety of third-world conflicts with no hint of direct U.S. military involvement and no connection to the Middle East.

The Rapid Deployment Force, since renamed the Central Command, was established in March 1980 to back up the commitment of the "Carter doctrine". While the Reagan administration continues to build up this force, it has yet to develop the logistical base or the unrestricted access to the region that planners say are essential to fulfillment of its mission.

■ A final index of the fading concern about energy security for the United States is the administration's decision to stop adding to the Strategic Petroleum Reserve, which was once a high priority program. After spending $16 billion to fill Texas and Louisiana salt caverns with nearly 500 million barrels of oil — enough to meet U.S. needs for about four months in an emergency — the administration's proposed budget for fiscal 1987 includes no new funds for further purchases.

A NUMBER OF elements underlie these shifts in emphasis, but there is little doubt that the dramatic change in the world oil scene is In 1977 the United States was importing four out of every 10 barrels of oil consumed in the domestic economy, and 2.8 of every 10 imported barrels originated in the Persian Gulf. Saudi Arabia, the largest single source of U.S. imports, was supplying more than 1.3 million barrels per day via a vast armada of oil supertankers stretching far across the Last year, according to government data, the United States was still importing about three of every 10 barrels of oil to turn the wheels of industry and the nation's automobiles and trucks. But its dependence on Persian Gulf nations had plummeted to less than half a barrel of every 10 imported. Saudi Arabia supplied just 93,000 barrels per day, only 7 percent of the level of eight years previously.

Realizing the dangers of reliance on a faraway and volatile part of the world, the United States set out to reduce its dependence on Middle East oil. Increased energy efficiency and new reliance on alternative types of energy have made it possible for imports to drop while the economy picked up, and the growth of oil production in almost every other area of the world including Mexico and the Alaska slopes has further reduced U.S. dependency on the Middle East. At the same time, a new network of overland pipelines from the Persian Gulf to the Mediterranean and the Red Sea has lessened the danger from a blockage of tanker traffic through the Strait of

"We've gone from a period of extreme vulnerability and dependence to a situation of much greater security," said E. Allan Wendt, deputy assistant secretary of state for international energy and resources policy. "Now with oil prices dropping, there is a temptation to be complacent."

BUT WENDT IS one of many specialists who warn that today's situation may not last. "Probably," Wendt said, "the industrialized world will be much more dependent on Persian Gulf oil in the 1990s than we are today." That is because most of the world's untapped oil reserves are in the Persian Gulf. They are the resource of last resort as other sources of petroleum are slowly depleted and world consumption rises in the years ahead.

"The United States and the West alternate between panic and complacency," said James R. Schlesinger, who has served as secretary of energy and secretary of defense. "If we are a barrel short worldwide, we talk about shortage; if we are a barrel over, we talk about glut."

Schlesinger said the "perceived

Schlesinger said the "perceived importance" of the Persian Gulf and Middle East has decreased more than has their real importance. "We are still dependent on those areas, but not to the degree we were befor-

William B. Quandt, who was National Security Council staff specialist on the Middle East under Carter, said: "We are seeing some of the consequences of the perception that oil is no longer as strategically important to us as it was." Among other indications, he said, is "the unwillingness of the United States to take the extra step in the Middle East peace process. This reflects the precept that no vital interest is at stake. People have a hard time convincing themselves why we ought to bother."

Zbigniew Brzezinski, the national security affairs adviser who popularized the notion of an "arc of crisis" centered in the Persian Gulf and who was a prime mover behind the "Carter doctrine, said "the strategic dimension hasn't altered that much" for the United States. He noted that key U.S. allies, including Japan and Western Europe, continue to be highly dependent on Persian Gulf oil even though the U.S. dependence has been reduced. (Japan imports 60 percent of its oil from the gulf, Western Europe about 25 percent.) Brzezinski said that "the glut, like what preceded it, is likely to be transitory, and then it is back to higher prices."

The sudden changes in America's relationship with the gulf have left their scars on both sides. The 1970s was the first time since the United States became a great power that the country found itself so painfully dependent for a vital resource on other nations, and — it seemed to many — forced, almost at gunpoint, to adopt a political agenda imposed from the outside. For independent-minded Americans it was bitter medicine to swallow, and many in government and private life are happy to be free of it.

on the Arab SIDE there is deep disappointment that the U.S. courtship has degenerated to what is called "mutual indifference" by Mazher A. Hameed, a Saudi specialist in U.S.-Arab security relations based in Washington. "Today there is absolutely nothing in the pipeline of the relationship to the United States that has any value to the Arab Gulf," Hameed said. While gulf oil producers are weighing their security needs over the next five years, he added, "the United States is saying, 'Count us out. We can't do very much right

Under the pressure of falling prices, the relatively rich oil-producing nations of the gulf have lost their dominance over the Organization of Petroleum Exporting Countries (OPEC) cartel, which is now crumbling before their eyes. The collapse of unity among producers amounts to another advantage for consumers seeking to avoid dependence on any individual or group of united suppliers.

say. Interest rates are partly determined by judgements of how prices will behave in the future.

Amid renewed confidence about inflation and interest rates, stock prices resumed their upward march. The Dow Jones average of 30 industrials reached a record close Wednesday for the fourth time in five sessions. Wall Street's best known trading barometer rose 7.11 to 1,629.93, exceeding the record close of 1,626.38 of Monday and wiping out Tuesday's slight decline.

"The mood of the market is such that the overwhelming sentiment is there's plenty of room to go," said Steven Smith, who follows the oil markets for Data Resources Inc., a business research firm in Lexington, Mass. "The prices are off the cliff. They haven't run into any hard fundamental barriers."

In spot and futures trading, crude and refined petroleum prices fell for the third straight day Wednesday because of new figures that showed oil stocks had risen sharply with no sign that producers were cutting back output.

There were fresh indications Wednesday that producers would increase output and cut prices. Egypt, not an OPEC member, announced a $3-per-barrel cut to less than $20 for all blends, the fourth reduction announced this year.

nounced this year.

Earlier in the week, non-OPEC producer Venezuela reportedly gave its state oil company authority to quickly change prices and output. Norway's state-run Statoil said some of its wells could pump profitably at $3.50 a barrel, indicating the Norwegians are girding for a showdown.

Continental, Texas Air report 1985 earnings

HOUSTON (AP) — Continental Airlines posted a $60.9 million profit for 1985, its largest annual profit ever and up from earnings of $50.3 million for the previous year.

The Houston-based carrier reported Wednesday a fourth-quarter loss of $30.86 million, compared with a profit of $14.5 million in the October-December period a year ago.

Meanwhile, Texas Air Corp., the parent company of Continental Airlines, announced Wednesday a fourth-quarter loss of $31.6 million, compared with a $11.3 million profit in the same quarter a year ago.

For the year, however, the Houston-based holding company reported earnings of $90.98 million, the highest in its history.

Congressional candidates disagree on major issues

By LANA CUNNINGHAM Assistant City Editor

The five Republican candidates for Congress from the 21st District agreed on one thing in their presentations Wednesday before the Midland County Republican Women's Club luncheon — incumbent Tom Loeffler has been an outstanding congressman for this area and they all want to follow in his footsteps.

However, the candidates' "shoe sizes" varied according to their shades of experience and their stands on major issues, such as an oil import Appearing for the first time jointly before a crowd of about 130 at the Ranchland Hills Country Club were Mayor G. Thane Akins, Van Archer of San Antonio, Henry Gandy of Kerrville, Lamar Smith and Jeff Wentworth, both of San Antonio.

Akins and Gandy said the oil import fee is a possible option to fight the plunging oil prices but there may be some problems incurred with it, Smith and Wentworth favored the fee and Archer was against it.

G. Thane Akins

The Republican from Midland said

on imported oil to stabilize the problems being caused in Texas and locally by dropping oil prices. But he noted it could backfire by raising the price on American products and reducing sale of these to foreign countries. Gandy said placing such a fee on imported oil might translate into another tax on domestic oil. "We need to repeal the Windfall Profits Tax because we're not making profits off oil right now," he said.

SMITH SAID if the import fee can't be passed then Congress should put a floor on the price of oil. "Conners must not become hooked on cheap foreign oil. Consumers are in for a short-term joy ride. If the price plummets further, we aren't going to have any consumers left," he said.

Archer, in stating why he doesn't support an oil import fee, said "pro-tectionism has never worked. It might help the price of oil domesti-cally for a short time, but cause more harm in the long run. We need decontrol" of oil and gas. The import tax, he added, would bankrupt Mexi-co. "In the end, you'd help Japan and Western Europe more.

Wentworth defined his stands as being for a balanced budget amend-ment, giving the president line-item veto power, examining closely the Grace Commission report for ways to cut spending and supporting the freedom fighters in Central

Midland Jaycess donate $1,000 to statue restoration

By RON GILMORE Staff Writer

Local officers of the Midland Jaycees did their part to help restore the Statue of Liberty Wednesday evening when they presented the national leader of the organization with a check for $1,000.

Ken Zimmerman, national president of the Jaycees, stopped off in Midland as part of a 96-city, 48-state "Liberty Tour," designed to raise more than $500,000 for the renovation. 'We've been in a motor home for more than a week," said Zimmerman to area representatives of the charity-oriented organization. "To date we've raised $167,000 in cash plus numerous state organization pledges, some of them amounting to more than $40,000."

Major stops along the route include Chicago, Minneapolis, St. Louis, Dallas, Houston, San Francisco, Philadelphia and Boston. Zimmerman will be stopping in Dallas following his brief lavover in Midland.

Zimmerman, who began the journey Sept. 20, said he hopes to make a check presentation to Lee Iacocca, chairman of the Statue of Liberty-Ellis Island Centennial Commission at the end of the tour in late March. Iacocca, while still serving as chairman of the foundation, was fired from his other position as head of the foundation's Advisory Commission this week for a possible "conflict of interest." The Advisory Commission decides how the funds will be spent.

Zimmerman said he had met lacocca at an earlier Jaycees meeting in Indiana and "looked forward to working with him.'

The national president stated that while the $500,000 the Jaycees would be contributing was just a drop toward the goal of $230 million, he hoped it would help.

Zimmerman added that Midland was chosen as a stopping site for the tour because of its geographic location and the "good job that local Jaycees had done

"We contacted the state president (David Hicks of Austin) about the direction we were headed and where the Jaycee development was particularly strong," he said. Zimmerman said that Midland's group was recommended after hearing that they were trying to double their membership. "The membership is a reflection of how well a chapter is doing," said Hicks, who flew in to meet Zimmerman. The state president estimated bers. There are 240 chapters statewide with a total of 13,500 members. Jaycee officers on hand for the meeting were enthusiastic about Zimmerman's visit.

This is the first time in more than 15 years that a national president has visited Midland," said Jim Beck, a vice president.

are not exactly your school heroes." Triana, who hosts the radio show "Coming to Terms" (heard locally on KRIG), addressed the group today at a 7 a.m. meeting held at Clearview, which is partially owned by Camelback. The facility is opening its new adolescent wing Monday. Another seminar is scheduled in the future, according to Clearview spokesman Cathy Clayton.

We mailed out invitations and the response was so good that we're going to have to hold another one in Triana discussed why youths have chemical dependency problems, how to spot them and what to do once they are identified. The speaker told the group that by the time most students get into the upper secondary grades, it's often too late to prevent

"I DON'T MEAN to upset anyone but junior high and high school is too late," he said. "By the seventh and eighth grades, the kids have already made their decision. Grammar school is where it begins."

Triana cited statistics from a 1980 survey conducted by Xerox's Week-

The survey said that 25 percent of all third graders feit pressure to drink or to smoke dope," he said. They feit that is what adults do and they wanted to act like adults."

The survey also indicated that 50 percent of seventh and eighth graders were experimenting with chemi-cals while 74 percent of senior high students have at least tried alcohol.

Triana blamed the rising adolescent drug abuse problem on the ex-ample set by adults.

Look at adults," he said. "We have 12 million adult alcoholics. Onesixth of all adults are on some form of tranquilizing medication (Valium, Librium, muscle relaxants, opiates.) The kids are just reflecting us."

Triana also cited a chemical deendency problem among senior citzens as an influence on youths.

'Approximately two million grandmas and grandpas are hooked on booze or drugs. These are their grandparents," he said. "Is it any wonder our kids are on drugs today?

Triana discussed several factors which he believed contributed to the problem including the "I want it now" society, an increase in the number of single parent families (by the year 2000, 50 percent of all households will be single parent) and a lack of identity among youths.

Board: Catoico duchess can't be crowned because she failed course

By JULIE HILLRICHS Staff Writer

A high school senior will be prohibited from participating in the annual Catoico Court festivities here this weekend because she failed a course last semester, the Midland Independent School District Board of Trustees ruled unanimously Wednesday.

Midland High School senior Heidi Hewett was elected Catoico Court duchess by her classmates last December and was to participate in the spring coronation Saturday. But school board officials ruled during a public hearing that Miss Hewett is ineligible because she failed one course during the third six-week grading period and earned an unsatisfactory conduct mark in another.

The board concurred with school administrators who said Miss Hewett failed to meet the "general qualifications" documented in the MHS Constitution. Those qualifications state that students elected to office must earn "grades of 70 or above for all grading periods" during the first Catoico Court, designed to present the seven young women who most represent MHS and its ideals to the student body and community, is a MHS tradition. The court is elected by the student body in the fall semester preceding the spring coronation.

Miss Hewett's attorney Mike Cunningham maintained during the hearing that the qualifications established in the MHS Constitution were "ambiguous" in that the Catoico Court "is not a tenure office" similar to Student Council president.

"How can an honorary office have a tenure position?" he asked. "You elect them in the fall and they are presented in the spring. Cunningham said Miss Hewett's case is not a no-pass, no-play issue. The controversial no-pass, no-play rule prohibits students from participating in extracurricular activities if they fail a course. Catoico Court is not considered an extracurricular activity.

He noted, however, that the teen has been "publicly embarrassed" because she was "stripped of the honor after the fact.'

But trustees, following a 20-minute executive session, ruled the MHS Constitution "is not ambiguous."

Trustee Ron Britton said the board reached the opinion that the constitution is specific in mandating that 'all elected candidates must maintain standards during their tenure of

The constitution also clearly states that members of the Catoico Court and their escorts are "subject to same the general qualifications" of those who hold elected office, Britton said.

Cunningham assured the board that Miss Hewett and her parents would not file suit to stop the Catoico festivities on Saturday. The student may appeal the decision to the Commissioner of Education within

He noted, however, that the family is considering "other options" in addition to the TEA appeal.

Midland High School senior Heidi Hewett, right, listens as attorney Mike Cunningham, left, attempts to convince the Midland Independent School District Board of Trustees that the teen should not be prohibited from participating in Catoico Court festivities this weekend. The board ruled unanimously Wednesday that Miss Hewett is ineligible to participate in the coronation because she failed a course last semester.

Now, if there is no urgency or dread afoot, mornings can be glorious. And I, as you, have experienced some memorable times at dawn: a cowboy breakfast but with no prospect of working the range, an awakening to a wondrous sunrise on a mountain peak at Fort Davis, a leisurely breakfast in a friendly cafe, a hearty meal to prepare for a day of river rafting or hiking, listening to the rainfall on a tin roof, and sleeping.

Mornings, indeed, can be a joy if they are enjoyed for the moment. I've had a few. But the spoiler comes when

The secret, which is quite obvious but not so easy to master, is to enjoy the only life we have — now, the present moment. And with that in mind, I've thought, "If that's all there is to that, why trudge on?" But I'm an optimist. I'm convinced that better moments, built on the now, will evolve if only I have faith and take action on that faith. Otherwise, why wait around? Hope is the

The speaker cited one example. "I asked one child what his nationality was and he said 'I don't know. When I found out the child had Belgian, French and Dutch backgrounds, I asked the mother why she hadn't told the child. She said, 'It doesn't matter, he's American.' Still another problem, said Triana, is the fears that youths have today. "The biggest fear among boys to-day is nuclear holocaust," he said. "The biggest fear among girls is that their parents will divorce before the girl finishes high school."

A stable home life is yet another problem, he said.

"Kids need to be able to form commitments," said Triana. "How do you expect them to do that when Momma or Daddy has been through three Other causes are families that move too frequently, problems with confronting sexuality and the lack of a proper "value system."

'It's not enough to just tell the kids what's good and bad for them," he said. "You need to 'walk the talk' and live the values.'

One major factor in children with chemical dependency problems is sexual abuse in the home.

Troubled youths are usually reflective of a troubled home," he said. "These are kids who are patsys for drugs. It makes them feel good — makes the pain go away."

Triana told of one situation he encountered.

"I had a problem with a 7-year-old girl and I set her down to discuss what was wrong," he said. "She said I want to tell you two things. First, tell my mommy that I don't want to drive in the car with her boyfriend while he is holding a beer and smoking a cigarette. And second, tell her I don't like taking showers with her boyfriend.'

Triana added that often parents don't want to admit there might be a sexual abuse problem, even when confronted.

Study: State income tax 'poor' solution to problems

By STEVE LEVINE

Reporter-Telegram Austin Bureau

AUSTIN - A state income tax "is the worst of all taxes" and a poor choice to solve Texas' fiscal problems, concludes a Texas A&M University-sponsored study released Wednesday.

Supporters of a constitutional amendment to prohibit personal or corporate income taxes in Texas said they will use the research as ammunition to help move such a measure through the Legislature next year. One of those supporters, Rep. Bill Ceverha, R-Richardson, asked A&M's Center for Education and Research in Free Enterprise to conduct the Texas is one of six states with no personal income tax and one of four with no corporate income tax.

Melvin Greenhut, alumni distinguished professor of economics at A&M and author of the research, advocates spending cuts rather than any new taxes to make up for possible revenue shortfalls. "If tax increases in Texas cannot be avoided.' he writes, "imposing an income tax would be a horrible mistake."

Increasing the sales tax rate, Greenhut argues, could raise sufficient revenue without damaging the state's economy. He cites three main

 Because an income tax eats into workers' take-home pay, it reduces their incentives to become more productive and the amount of disposable income they may choose to in-only on items they choose to buy, they can avoid paying that tax by investing, rather than spending, that money. That investment contributes to economic growth.

· Those states with a high rate of growth in real per capita income during the 1970s tended to have a lower per-capita tax rate than those with slower growth rates. Companies looking to relocate cite the level of state personal and corporate income taxes as the fifth and seventh most important factors respectively in deciding where to move.

Svetozar Pejovich, director of the Center for Free Enterprise, called Greenhut's work "a scholarly study" whose "conclusions are supported by research, not based on philosophical, ideological or political positions." Pejovich presented the work to a press conference in Greenhut's absence and claimed that those who term a sales tax regressive - meaning it hurts poor people more than those with higher income - are incorrect. The Texas sales tax, Pejovich said, does not tax housing or food, which are the main expenditures "of those who are poor." The sales tax eats up 2 to 4 percent of the annual income of people who earn less than $10,000, according a nationwide study on tax burdens. But someone over the $30,000-a-year mark pays only 1.5 percent in sales

Citing support from House Speaker Gib Lewis, Ceverha predicted "we will have no problem" moving a constitutional amendment prohibiting income taxes through the House next year. He said he expects opposition to come more strongly from the

Gov. Mark White and his three Republican opponents - former Gov. Bill Clements, former Congressman Kent Hance and Congressman Tom Loeffler - all say they support such a constitutional amendment. If that amendment passes the Legislature and receives voter approval, the state could impose an income tax only by passing another amendment to the constitution.

"This way we will lock in the fact that the people will have the vote," Ceverha said.

He proposed that the state cut programs rather than raise taxes at all. Ceverha discounted claims that Texas must make up funding for programs - such as job training and student loans - just because the federal government wants to cut back on that funding.

Cat causes problem for tire company

EL PASO (AP) - A stray cat tripped off the burglar alarm at a tire store so often the City Council revoked the company's permit to have police answer the calls.

Noel Wheeler of The Tire Cotold the City Council Tuesday that he and his workers tried everything they could think of to catch the cat, without results. On the advice of Police Chief Bill Rodriguez and his deputy, Joe Mess-er, the City Council told Wheeler he will have to purchase a new permit at the penalty price of $100.

The city code calls for the revocation of a burglar alarm permit after seven false alarms. Police received 14 false alarms in December, then revoked the company's permit, Messer said.

U.S. Savings Bonds

U.S. Savings Bonds now pay market-based interest rates like money market accounts!

Hold your Savings Bonds for five years and you automatically get the market-based rates which change semi-annually, the first of May and November. Plus, you get a guaranteed return! You'll probably earn a lot more—but never less than 7½%.

With both money market rates and a guaranteed return, Savings Bonds make a great investment. And Bonds are still a great way to keep America strong.

Savings Bonds are easy to buy, too. Purchase them at most banks and savings and loans, or through the Payroll Savings Plan where you work. For more U.S. SAVINGS BONDS Paying Better Than Ever 1-800-US-BONDS.

Market-based rates apply to Bonds purchased on and after 11/1/82 and held at least five years. Bonds purchased before 11/1/82 and held at least five years pare lower rates.

Ex-prime minister goes prime-time

LONDON (AP) — Former Prime Minister Harold Wilson, in his acting debut, played him-self in a TV drama series.

The 69-year-old politician, now Lord Wilson, was filmed Wednesday presenting an award to a journalist in "Inside Story," about a takeover battle for a London newspaper.

The actors' union Equity initially objected to his appearance, saying the role should be played by one of its members, but later relented The series' producer, John Rosenberg, said Equity accepted last week "that in the interests of realism it was necessary that the awards presentation should be made by an important public and political figure, instantly recognizable, like Lord Wilson."

Wilson was twice Labor prime minister from 1964-1970 and 1974-1976.

varotti will perform for the first time at the Colon Theater in 1967, giving a benefit concert and appearing in "La Boheme," the opera house's director says. Theater, and will perform five other nights. "The people are going to throw themselves from the balcony," he said. "The Colon is a place where, when people love a performer, they really love him.

And they show it." LONDON (AP) - Novelist Doris Lessing has won the W.H. Smith Literary Award for "The Good Terrorist," a book about left-wing militants living in a London commune and a woman, Alice, who considers herself a committed revolutionary. The $5,680 award, first given in 1969 by Britain's largest news agent and bookstore, is given to a Brit-ish or Commonwealth author whose book has made the most outstanding contribution to English literature in the previous year.

Ms. Lessing received the award Wednesday. The book was published in September.

LOS ANGELES (AP) - Comedian Robin Williams stalled lunch for about 300 homeless men when he appeared at a skid row rescue mission seeking support for "Comic Relief," a group trying to raise money for the nation's homeless.

accompanied Mayor Tom Bradley, smiled Williams and waved

Wednesday as the homeless men waited patiently for the news conference to end so they could receive a free lunch at the downtown Union Rescue Mission. "Comic Relief," a non-profit organization of actors and comedi-Bradley ans, is sponsoring a three-hour comedy show March 29 at the Universal Amphitheater that will be broadcast live on Home Box Office,

"We're sort of becoming the Live Aid of comedy," Zmuda said, referring to concerts in Philadelphia and London to benefit African famine relief.

"People ask what comedy has to do with the homeless," Williams said. "What did music have to do with starvation?"

Among those participating in the show, which will feature Williams, Whoopi Goldberg and Billy Crys-tal as hosts, are Joan Rivers, Sid Caesar, Jerry Lewis, Carl Reiner, Joe Piscopo, John Candy, Richard Dreyfuss and Michael J. Fox.

BEVERLY HILLS, Calif. (AP) - Paul Newman, who's been nominated seven times for an Oscar but never got one, will receive an honorary Academy Award for career achievement, the Motion Picture Academy has announced.

The Academy also said Wednesday that pioneering actor Charles "Buddy" Rogers has been voted the Jean Hersholt Humanitarian Award, and that composer Alex North, who has been nominated 15 times for an Oscar, would get an honorary award at the 58th annual Academy Awards show March 24.

Newman, 61, an actor, director and producer, was nominated six times for the best actor category for "Cat on a Hot Tin Roof," 1958; "The Hustler," 1961; "Hud," 1963; "Cool Hand Luke," 1967; "Absence of Malice," 1961; and "The Verdict," 1983. He was nominated as producer for "Rachel, Rachel," a 1968 best picture nominee in which he also directed his wife, Joanne Woodward.

"It is an honor long overdue for one of the screen's most versatile and dynamic performers," said Mo-tion Picture Academy President Robert Wise.

Rogers, 82, starred in both talking and silent films, including "Wings," the Academy's first best picture. He married actress Mary Pickford in 1936, and they became Hollywood's reigning couple at the fabled Pickfair mansion.

North, 74, was nominated twice in 1951 for scores for "Death of a Salesman" and "A Streetcar Named Desire." His other nominations for best original score include "Viva Zapata," 1952; "Unchained Melody" and "The Rose Tattoo," both 1955; "The Rain Maker," 1956; "Spartacus," 1960; "Cleopatra," 1963; "The Agony and the Ecstasy," 1965; "Who's Afraid of Virginia Wolf," 1966; "Shoes of the Fisherman," 1968; "Shanks," 1974; "Bite the Bullet," 1975; "Dragons-layer," 1981; and "Under the Volcano," 1984.

NEW YORK (AP) - The New York Philharmonic and the Juilliard Orchestra played together Wednesday night, with Zubin Mehta conducting a first-ofits-kind concert that had the intensity and life usually reserved for opening nights and gala evenings.

Juilliard president Joseph W. Polisi said the performance marks the beginning of a collaboration between the Lincoln Center neighbors, the Juilliard School and the Philharmonic, hopefully marked by annual joint concerts.

In the first part of the concert, half the Philharmonic players came on Avery Fisher Hall's extended stage and sat in every other chair. They were joined by half the Juilliard Orchestra for Weber's overture to "Der Freischutz."

After bows, the student players left and were re-placed by the other half of the Juilliard Orchestra for Schubert's "Ninth Symphony.

After intermission, everybody in both orchestras came on for four instrumental excerpts from Wagner's "Gotterdammerung."

"Next fall Zubin Mehta will be working with our orchestra," Polisi said during intermission

Butcher of the Balkans'

can be tried, official says BELGRADE, Yugoslavia (AP) — Andrija Artukovic, the 86-year-old man accused of complicity in the deaths of 700,000 people during World War II, is healthy enough to stand trial a justice official said

Artukovic, who had to be carried on a stretcher from the plane that brought him from the United States, faces penalties ranging from five years in prison to death by firing squad if convicted, said Predrag Matovic, assistant federal secretary of stand trial, a justice official said

Matovic declined to say when Artukovic's trial would begin or how long it could last.

Artukovic, in failing health, was flown here Wednesday from the United States, 36 years after Yugoslavia initiated an extradition request for the man known as "the Butcher of the Balkans." He is legally blind and is said to suffer from heart trouble and senility.

The government claims that Artukovic, who was Interior Minster in the Nazi puppet state of Croatia, presided over the killing of hundreds of thousands of Jews, gypsies, intellectuals and other people during Nazi rule in Croatia, which is part of Yugoslavia. Most of the victims died in the Jasenovac concentration camp, many slaughtered with sledgehammers and knives.

Activist's wife released

WARSAW, Poland (AP) - A Solidarity activist's American wife, who had been taken into police custody when her visa expired, was released Wednesday after she signed a statement agreeing to leave the country by Feb. 20.

Donna Sue Kersey, of Ashland, Ky., said in a telephone interview she had been "treated quite well" by police during her overnight detention in a jail in the southwestern city of Wroclaw.

Ms. Kersey, who has lived in Poland for four years but was denied a visa beyond last Nov. 3, said authorities at first wanted to deport her and her one-year-old daughter by Thursday on the grounds that her visa had run out. But they granted her a one-week extension. She said the director of the passport office at Wroclaw police headquarters told her that she could either appear before a misdemeanor court on charges of illegally staying in Poland or sign a statement promising to leave the country. Ms. Kersey, 32, has been married to Dariusz Olszewski since July 1984. Olszewski lost his job as a rescue worker at a coal mine because he had supported strikes protesting the December 1981 imposition of martial law that suppressed the Solidarity free trade union.

Group will sue over tunnel

CANTERBURY, England (AP) - A business group in the port of Dover says a British-French agreement to build a rail tunnel under the English Channel will ruin ferry terminal business, and that it will take the treaty before the European Court of Justice.

Dover Chamber of Commerce officials said Wednesday, following the signing of the Channel tunnel treaty between Britain and France, that they had launched a national appeal for $141,000 to finance a lawsuit against the tunnel.

Alan Stibbe, president of the group, said the aim of the legal action is to force Prime Minister Martin is to force Prime Minister Martin is to force Prime Minister Martin in the legal action is to force Prime Minister Martin in the legal action in the legal action is to force Prime Minister Martin in the legal action in the legal action is to force Prime Minister Martin in the legal action in the legal action is to force Prime Minister Martin in the legal action in the legal action is to force Prime Minister Martin in the legal action is to force Prime Minister Martin in the legal action is to force Prime Minister Martin in the legal action is to force Prime Minister Martin in the legal action is to force Prime Minister Martin in the legal action is to force Prime Minister Martin in the legal action is to force Prime Minister Martin in the legal action is to force Prime Minister Martin in the legal action is to force Prime Minister Martin in the legal action is to force Prime Minister Martin in the legal action is to force Prime Minister Martin in the legal action is to force Prime Minister Martin in the legal action is to force Prime Minister Martin in the legal action in the legal action is the legal action in the legal act

New debt plan proposed

JOHANNESBURG, South Africa (AP) — A new plan for settling South Africa's $14 billion debt crisis calls for extending a repayment freeze one year and making a token payment this year, South African bank-ers said Wednesday.

The proposal by Fritz Leutwiler, formerly head of the Swiss National Bank, will be the centerpiece of negotiations with South Africa's 29 major creditor banks at a meeting to be convened in London on Feb. 20. Leutwiler is mediator in the negotiations.

His plan calls for an extension of the freeze on repaying $14 billion in principal until March 31, 1987, the bankers said. The moratorium is due to expire on March 31 this year.

Jumbo jet fleet inspected

LONDON (AP) - Officials for British Airways say its inspectors will carry out detailed examinations on its entire fleet of 28 Boeing 747 jumbo jets after cracks were found in the front internal frames of three of the older aircraft.

The inspections of the front struc-tural frames will take about six weeks and will involve stripping the interior of the first-class cabins, a company Wednesday. spokesman

"It will take several days to check each aircraft. British Airways does not expect any disruption of its services," the spokesman said.

'Fresh' turkeys questioned

By SONJA HEINZE

Q. Would you please explain how "fresh" turkeys are sometimes held for a month in the supermarket? What preservatives are used on them when they have a date of some three or four weeks away? How safe are they? Wouldn't a frozen turkey be safer? B. Flanagan, Greenwich, Conn.

A. Donald Houston, administrator of the Food Safety and Inspection Service of the U.S. Department of Agriculture, states that he is not aware of any turkey processing firms that establish sell-by dates of more than 10 to 12 days beyond the processing of a fresh turkey.

The sell-by dates on whole birds takes place at the supermarket level. If your store is actually holding unfrozen turkeys for such a long period of time, you should voice a complaint to the management.

plaint to the management.

Department of Agriculture regulations do not permit preservatives to be added to fresh meat and poultry. If there is a basting solution that comes with the turkey, the ingredients must be stated on the label.

Turkeys in vacuum-packed bags last a little longer than those wrappings that allow exposure to air. Never choose a turkey whose wrapping is ripped. Federally inspected turkeys must be frozen within 72 hours and can keep for a year in a solidly frozen state.

solidly frozen state.

As an added precaution, don't select a turkey that is stacked above the refrigeration line in the case.

Q. When I bake Duncan Hines Blueberry Muffins, why is it necessary to rinse the blueberries before I add them to the batter? Edna Staats, New Brunswick, Texas

A. Suzette Michels, consumer representative with Procter & Gamble, manufacturers of Duncan Hines products, said that the berries, which are packed in their own juice, must absolutely be rinsed and drained for two reasons:

One, if you didn't rinse them, your muffins would turn out to be an atrocious blue, through and through.

Two, not draining them would add too much water weight to the batter, which contains leavening. With too much water weight, the muffins won't rise.

Q. Whenever I make chicken soup, an ugly foam accumulates on the surface of the liquid. What causes this? Should it be removed?

A. Part of the protein in the chicken tissue and bone marrow that can be dissolved by water causes this foam. Stephen Pretanik, director of science and technology at the National Broiler Council, tells us that the foam is certainly not harmful, nor need it be removed from the soup.

Most people remove it, however, because this tannish-gray material is unsightly and unappetizing, causing the soup to look dirty. If you leave it in, most of the foam will eventually find its way to the sides of the pot, where it turns into a sticky, brownish film. Removing the foam in its active state reduces scrubbing time later.

Q. The only vegetable my 4-yearold daughter will eat is asparagus, so I make them for her often even though they are so expensive. This is embarrassing to ask, but could there be something about this vegetable that would make her urine smell so bad?

A. In 1702 a Frenchman, Dr. Louis Lemery, wrote, "Asparagus eaten to excess sharpen the humours and heat a little; and therefore persons of a bilious constitution ought to use them moderately. They cause a filthy and disagreeable smell in the urine, as everybody knows."

In Harold McGee's book, "On Food and Cooking," the author states that until 1980 it was thought that an odorous substance called methyl mercaptan was excreted after eating asparagus by particular people who inherited the genes for this anomaly. They were called "ttinkers"

They were called "stinkers," Now it appears that anyone who eats asparagus excretes this odorous substance, but not everyone can smell it. Doesn't she like broccoli?

Newtons now more than fig

By LINDA ANDERSON

Remember the cookies of childhood? Not the homemade kind that only Mother could make, but the store-bought kind you loved but didn't get very often because Mother always preferred to make her own.

Fig Newtons cookies were among the ranks of longed-for storeboughts for many of us (although I was a little slower than most and didn't really like them until I was about 9 or 10).

Now, to suit the tastes of the 1980s, Nabisco has taken this old favorite and added different flavors to it. Newtons now come in apple, cherry and blueberry, too. (I can't get used to it — to me Fig Newtons was always one word, like Post Toasties.)

All us cookie-loving taste testers checked out Apple Newtons and Cherry Newtons for taste, price and advertising accuracy. We haven't tried Blueberry Newtons yet.

A 12-ounce package of Newtons of various flavors cost $1.99 at a local supermarket. (Prices at other locations may vary.) Store-bought cookies, like everything else, cost a lot more than they used to.

Ingredients listed on the label of Cherry Newtons included sugar (listed first, which means Cherry Newtons contain a lot of sugar), enriched wheat flour, vegetable shortening, dried apples (remember, these are Cherry Newtons), high fructose corn syrup (another form of sugar), cherry juice (finally!), natural flavor, artificial color (but no artificial flavor—says so right on the label) and lecithin, among other things.

Label advertising claims Newtons are made with real fruit, 100 percent vegetable shortening and the already-mentioned "no artificial flavors." A suggestion for serving Cherry Newtons a la Mode is listed on its label — "warm in your oven — and top with ice cream." We didn't.

Television advertising shows brothers trying to bribe their younger siblings for some Newtons, while the younger kid is hiding under the bed, eating the package of cookies and snickering.

Well, the taste test in our house didn't go quite that far. No one snatched cookies from anyone else, and no one hid under the bed and refused to share. In fact, the results were mixed.

The adult and one teenager thought the Apple Newtons were OK, but not all that great. The small children didn't like them at all. However, the Cherry Newtons went over like a celebration. Everyone who tasted them liked them, and the younger testers practically ate the whole box all by themselves. They even wanted some for breakfast.

We will probably buy Cherry Newtons again, but only once in a while — after all, sometimes Mother prefers to make her own.

Money lost, not pounds by schemes

WASHINGTON (AP) - Melting off extra pounds without going hungry is the dream of millions of overweight Americans, and the money they spend trying to accomplish that goal attracts the quacks as well as the conscientious promoters.

Advertising is awash in enthusiastic offers warns the Food and Drug Administration and the national Council of Better Business Bureaus.

Those two agencies have combined their efforts to produce a new warning booklet and guide, "Weight Loss Promotions," that may help people choose the right program or at least avoid being taken by a crook.

Copies of the report can be obtained by writing to the Council of Better Business Bureaus, 1515 Wilson Boulevard, Arlington, Va., 22209, or a local BBB office.

The FDA reports that it allows only two drugs to be used in non-prescription diet aids — phenylpro-panolamine, or PPA, and benzocaine with caffeine

PPA, related to amphetamine, is used to suppress appetite, and the agency is currently reviewing it to make sure it is safe and effective. It should not be used by people with high blood pressure, diabetes, thyroid or kidney disease, however. Benzocaine, the agency said, numbs the tongue to reduce the sense of taste. It is also under review.

So-called starch blockers have been popular recently, but the FDA considers these an illegal new drug. The ads claim that people using starch blockers can eat things such as bread, potatoes and pasta without absorbing the calories

Bulk producers or fillers are also popular, promising that the product swells in the stomach, producing a feeling of fullness and thus reducing hunger. Generally bulk producers are safe, the FDA says, but their value in reducing weight is not proven. Also, the FDA points out that despite any claims, no food has the ability to "burn off fat." Fad and novelty diets, often focusing on a limited number of foods, are often promoted regardless of the expertise, or lack of it, of their developers. Those that work do so by reducing calorie intake, the FDA says, but the limited food selections usually lead to boredom and failure to stick to the diet. Thus, they are seldom useful in maintaining weight loss. Diuretics have also gained some popularity recently. However, these products only cause loss of water by increased urination, and thus any weight loss is only temporary, the FDA reports. Body wraps, the agencies added, can also result in some temporary weight loss through fluid loss or perspiration - soon to be replaced by eating or drinking. supposed to be used to treat people with muscle problems - have also been advertised as means of losing weight. The FDA says there is no proof they work, and it considers the machines "misbranded and fraudulent when promoted for weight loss

Weight loss clinics vary widely, the report says. "Many clinics provide legitimate and valuable services to aid individuals wishing to lose weight; however, some clinics use questionable methods," the joint report states. People who want to lose weight probably she ild start with a visit to their physician, who can often determine causes of overweight, suggest diet and exercise programs, or refer them to a good clinic, dietician or nutritionist.

A major weight-loss effort should not be undertaken without consulting a physician, FDA says. It considers major, an attempt to lose 10 percent of body weight or more.

The FDA says any diet should be nutritionally well balanced with a variety of foods including dairy products, meats, poultry, fish, fruits, vegetables, legumes and whole grains.

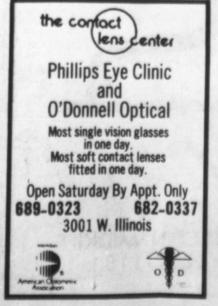

Be leery of any diet offering 800 calories per day or less, the agency said, or those promising weight loss of more than two pounds per week.

In addition to the weight loss report available from the Better Business Bureaus, the governments' Consumer Information Center has some booklets available that may be helpful to people interested in getting fit and losing weight. Available from the Center, Pueblo, Colo., 81009, these include:

-"Calories and Weight," a pocket guide with calorie tables for hundreds of popular foods; $2.25, item number 120P.

-"Fitness Fundamentals," a booklet on starting an exercise program and monitoring progress' $1, item

-"Walking for Exercise and Pleasure," discusses warming up and how far and fast to walk for best results' $1, item number 122P.

The study of teen-age female volleyball players revealed that 70 percent did not consume enough calories, calcium or iron. Their lack of nutrients did not result from a lack of knowledge about nutrition. Con-cern about their weight was the key factor. About 88 percent of the girls worried about gaining weight and 73 percent wanted to lose weight.

However, a third of their dietary choices were desserts, sweetened beverages, sugar, condiments and salty snacks. Rather than give up the foods they enjoyed, the girls in this study cut calories by avoiding the foods they liked less.

Baggage handlers face pending drug charges

WASHINGTON (AP) — Pending indictments against up to 50 Eastern Airlines baggage handlers for allegedly smuggling Colombian cocaine into Miami underscore the need for better internal security by the nation's major airlines, federal law enforcement sources

The sources, who spoke Wednesday only on condition that they not be identified, said the baggage handlers, working at the Miami airport, are part of a drug pipeline whose leaders are in Bogota, Colombia.

The Drug Enforcement Administration launched an investigation late last summer using undercover agents. The probe is expected to continue for several more months, and no arrests have yet been made. Eastern's management has cooperated with DEA in the investigation, the sources said, and federal officials believe no Eastern officials are involved in the smuggling. "We will...cooperate every way with the authorities to make certain that none of our airplanes or our employees are involved in that trade," Eastern Chairman Frank Borman said in an interview with NBC News. Contacted Wednesday night by The Associated Press, Eastern spokesman Mark Wegel said he had seen reports about the drug allegations but that the airline had no comment.

One federal source said, "We think there is a small cadre of handlers who are holding out baggage" at Miami to evade U.S.

Customs officials. Several law enforcement sources say the case calls into question the internal security procedures used by the airlines. The sources questioned hiring practices and the procedures by which luggage is conveyed from incoming airliners from South America through Miami customs. again at internal security procedures because of the latest probe involving Eastern, said William Jackman, spokesman for the Air Transport Association, an airline trade group. U.S. Customs officials seized an Eastern L-1011 on April 25, 1984, after three pounds of cocaine were confiscated from the plane. The aircraft was released only after the Miami-based carrier agreed to several security improvements aimed at cracking down on future cocaine

Last August, Eastern was fined nearly $1.4 million by the Federal Aviation Administration after more than 1,700 pounds of cocaine were found in the air conditioning compartments of two of the airline's jets flying into Miami from Colombia. The drugs were valued at $430 million.

As a result, the major airlines signed an agreement with the federal government pledging to become more vigilant in trying to stem the flow of illegal drugs into the country. Sources said agents have been working undercover at the Miami airport since last summer.

Frequently, handlers will hold baggage off of airport conveyer belts or keep it on an incoming plane until drug-sniffing dogs have left the area. The baggage handlers also have become expert at evading customs agents' spot checks of luggage coming off planes from Colombia, the sources said.

After getting by the customs checks, the cocaine in the luggage is loaded aboard domestic flights and flown to New York City and other East Coast points. According to DEA figures, one in five illegal cocaine shipments into the U.S. last year came aboard commercial airliners.

Safety of booster-rocket seals questioned

WASHINGTON (AP) — New concerns surfaced about the performance of safety seals in the space shuttle Challenger's booster rockets as a special presidential commission moved its investigation to the scene of history's worst space disaster. of history's worst space disaster.

NASA arranged to fly commission members to Cape Canaveral today for a two-day tour of the Kennedy Space Center, where all shuttle flights have originated and where Challenger lifted off on its ill-fated mission Jan. 28.

The trip comes a day after the space agency released an internal document showing that top officials at the National Aeronautics and Space Administration signed a waiver in 1983 that eased "fail-safe" performance requirements for the huge rubber seals that help join segments of the solid-fuel rocket boosters.

Speculation on the cause of the disaster that killed the Challenger's seven-member crew has centered on an unusual plume of flame that appeared in the area of a seam on the craft's right rocket booster several seconds before the explosion.

The documents showed that the primary rubber seal that helped join segments of the shuttle's rocket boosters was expected to work so well that NASA three years ago dropped a requirement that the backup seal work under all

The documents were made available to commission members during their closed session Monday, but were not discussed in a followup public session the following day. It is not known if the panel will raise the issue during its Florida visit, which includes meetings with NASA officials.

The three remaining shuttles — Discovery, Columbia and Atlantis are at the space center.

In announcing the two-day visit to Florida Wednesday, commission spokesman Mark Weinberg did not say when the panel will hold its next public hearing. The commission has 120 days to prepare a report to President Reagan on the accident.

Neither NASA nor the commission has yet suggested a possible cause for the accident, which occurred after 73 seconds of flight. Space agency spokesman William R. Lucas told a news conference in Washington,

"The cause is still an open issue." NASA rules require both a primary and backup system to be working on certain parts of the shuttle system, and booster seals fell into that category until a "critical items list" change request signed on March 28, 1983, by L. Michael Weeks, deputy administrator for space flight.

The effect of the change was to delete the requirement for the backup seal to work under all conditions.

In effect, the memo said, a backup seal was no longer an absolute requirement, since the primary seal was expected to work. Despite that, NASA engineers have said this week the backup seals have never been known to fail in the booster joints.

And the memo written in 1963 noted that in 18 tests of solid rocket boosters "no failures have been experienced."

But the memo also noted that if there was a failure of the seals, the result could be "loss of mission, vehicle and crew due to metal erosion.

cle and crew due to metal erosion, burnthrough and probable case burst resulting in fire."

The changed order was among a thick packet of documents released Wednesday that showed a history of concern with the large rubber Oring seals. The rings are designed to contain hot gases and flame pro-duced by the burning rocket fuel, and on some earlier flights, the inner of two rings was found to have Questions also have been raised about the effect of cold tempera-tures on the rings, and NASA official Lawrence Mulloy said at the news conference that issue was discussed thoroughly before the Challenger launch, which took place after several hours of sub-freezing temperatures.

Mulloy, director of the booster rocket program at the Marshall Space Flight Center in Huntsville, Ala., said that after scrubbing a launch Jan. 27 for reasons unrelated to weather, NASA engineers consulted with experts at Morton Thiokol, the company that manufactures the

"At that time no concern was expressed by the solid-rocket motor manufacturer or my people on the solid-rocket motor relative to the predicted temperatures" in the mid-0s, Mulloy said. Rather, the discussion centered on whether the shuttle could be readied for launch again in a short, 24-hour 'turnaround" time, he added.

That same evening, Mulloy said, Thiokol engineers reviewed NASA data on the effect that low temperatures might have on the rings. "The initial recommendation of the Thiokol engineers was that we should launch within our experience base - which was that the O-ring temperatures should be 53 degrees,

Ex-officer: Salvadoran-army death squads execute civilians

WASHINGTON (AP) - An ex-Salvadoran army officer says he personally commanded a "death squad" team in the early 1980s and witnessed El Salvador's U.S.-backed military execute civilians during a counterinsurgency sweep.

Former Lt. Ricardo Ernesto Castro said Salvadoran soldiers and po-lice routinely participated in death squad killings of suspected "subversives." He said he led four assassination missions, claiming about a doz-

"My company was thirsty, but the soldiers would not take water from one of these streams because of these kids' corpses," Castro said in a recent tape-recorded interview at his suburban Washington home.

Castro, who left El Salvador in mid-1982, is the first Salvadoran army officer to publicly state that he participated in death squad killings. He initially told his story to free-lance reporter Allan Nairn for an article in the current issue of Progressive magazine.

Castro, 35, said he was recruited to work with the CIA and served as a translator for an American who trained the Salvadoran military on interrogation techniques. He said the American trainer did not advocate torture, but suggested that suspects be kept "completely disoriented" by isolating them and employing psychological

During the early 1980s, the Reagan administration disputed many human rights charges lodged against the Salvadoran government. But in 1984, the Senate Intelligence Committee said the U.S. government had concluded that "numerous Salvadoran officials in the military and security forces... have been involved in encouraging and conducting death squad activities or other violent human rights abuses.

The administration now contends abuses have been brought under control, although private human rights groups say government forces still commit selective murders in the cities and use indiscriminate firepower in the countryside.

An estimated 50,000 civilians have died in the 6-year-

Castro said he came to the United States in mid-1982 to tell U.S. officials about the corruption and atrocities that many young officers felt were undermining prospects for restoring peace in El Salvador. After his appeals received little attention, he said he decided to stay here with his wife and three children. Castro, who is a Salvadoran citizen, said he plans to request political asylum in the United States. Working odd jobs to support his family, Castro said he did not tell his story earlier to avoid trouble with U.S. authorities, but finally decided the information should be made public.

Castro said political assassinations represented a policy established by the military high command. Death squads initially used army personnel, he said, but later government security forces, particularly the Treasury Police, took over.

"All the killings I know of were done by the armed forces," Castro said.

The former lieutenant said he would receive orders from his commanding officer to take a team of soldiers in civilian clothes and follow a guide, known as a "chanique," to the homes of suspected leftists.

Castro said the informer would identify the target and "we'd kill him right on the spot." Castro also said he witnessed the slaughter of unarmed civilians during the U.S.-trained Atlacatl battalion's march to the Rio Lempa on the Honduran border

FBI nabs Brinks armed robbery suspect

suspect remains at large in a $1.6 million armored car robbery that left a Brink's guard and two police officers dead, the FBI said after New York detectives capped a three-year, nationwide manhunt by arresting the alleged ringleader. Mutulu Shakur, 35, who had been on the FBI's Ten Most Wanted List since 1982, was arrested on a street corner Tuesday night when he tried to flee two New York City officers who "stopped him with a flying tackle," said Richard Bretzing, head of the FBI's Los Angeles office.

The detectives had been tracking Shakur in Los Angeles for about a month, Bretzing said Wednesday. With Shakur's arrest, authorities have in custody six of the seven radicals accused in the $1.6 million robbery of a Brink's armored car in Nanuet, N.Y., in October 1981.

Still at large is Cheri Laverne Dalton, 35, who has used the aliases Nahamda Abiodum, Nahanda Obafemi, Cheri Cotton and the nickname Flame, Bretzing said. The others, including three white radicals and a former Black Panther, were captured after the holdup.

Shakur was being held at the West Los Angeles police station pending a detention and bail hearing in federal court Tuesday. He was charged in a 1982 federal warrant with bank robbery, conspiracy to commit bank robbery and racketeering. No state charges ever were filed against him.

Military bases may close

WASHINGTON (AP) - Defense Secretary Caspar Weinberger says Congress can save money by closing military bases, but Sen. Gary Hart and others have lambasted Weinberger for naming bases in the districts of three powerful House Democrats who are critical of the administration's defense budget.

Weinberger, in a letter to the Senate Armd Services Committee made public Wednesday, said action on the three bases could be used to "determine the bases could mine the will of Congress.'

The three are a large section of Lowry Air Force Base in Denver, the Philadelphia Naval Hospital and the Army Materials Technology Laboratory in Watertown, Mass, located in the districts of House Speaker Thomas P. O'Neill Jr. of Massachusetts; Rep. William Gray, D-Pa., chairman of the House Budget Committee; and Rep. Patricia Schroeder, D-Colo., a member of the House Armed Services Committee.
