Basin economy has pluses, minuses

By GARY OTT City Editor

During the past week all three major networks were in Midland filming footage for national programming.

But it wasn't necessarily good news.

As oil prices continue to decline, the Permian Basin economy becomes more and more uncertain. So much so, in fact, it has become national news. A nervousness has filled many corporate boardrooms here. Business leaders repeatedly use the word "caution" when discussing the short-term future. In short, the local economy has become the number one topic on the coffee shop circuit.

Still, there is guarded optimism. with plans slated for this year, those expectations would seem realistic.

Much was accomplished during the past year. Some examples:

The opening of a new obstetrical wing at And, with the progress realized in 1985, along Midland Memorial Hospital, a major part of the $15-million expansion program at MMH.

Major expansion began at Midland Regional Westwood Village, on Midland's sparsely retailed southwest side, completed Phase II of a proposed three-phase expansion project, adding an additional 27,500 square feet to the shopping

The Holiday Inn Country Villa added a 20,000 square foot convention center.

 A new elementary school was added to the west side of town.

At the same time, plans for the future continue to move forward.

gan administration, questioning the 'credibility and legitimacy" of Philippine President Ferdinand Marcos' election, said Saturday it shared the concerns of rebellious military leaders demanding his resignation.

In its strongest anti-Marcos expression since a bitterly-contested Feb. 7 presidential election, the White House issued a statement blaming Marcos' party for fraud "so extreme as to undermine the credibility and legitimacy of the election and impair the capacity of the government of the Philippines to cope with a growing insurgency and a troubled

The administration stopped short of endorsing the rebellion by Defense Minister Juan Ponce Enrile and deputy armed forces chief Gen. Fidel Ramos.

But it said their denouncements of Marcos "strongly reinforce our concerns' about the Marcos

'Many authoritative voices in the Philippines have been raised in support of non-violence." the statement said. "We support these voices and expect them to be respected. We also support resolution of the issues involved by all the people of the Philippines as quickly as possible."

The statement quoted extensively from Enrile and Ramos, who in announcing their break with Marcos said they were acting on behalf of the Philippines people.

"They called on him to step down because his government no longer has a popular mandate," the White House said.

Uppermost among administration goals is to foster stability in a country that has been a longtime ally and bases, but has been beset by econom ic woes and a growing anti-American guerrilla movement.

The statement, issued under the name of the White House principal deputy press secretary Larry Speakes, was approved by Reagan earlier in the day, according to White House deputy press secretary Edward Djerejian.

Reagan, spending the weekend at his mountain retreat in Camp David, Md., approved the statement after a conference call with his national security advisor Adm. John Poindexter, Secretary of State George Shultz, Defense Secretary Caspar Weinberger, and chief of staff Donaid T. Regan, Djerejian said.

The statement noted that Ambas sador Philip Habib, the U.S. diplomatic troubleshooter Reagan sent to meet with Marcos and opposition leader Corazon Aquino, "will report promptly on his return" from the

The statement quoted Enrile as saying, "We want the will of the people to be respected. I believe that the mandate of the people does not be-long to the regime."

It quoted Ramos as saying, "It is my duty to see that the sovereign will of the people is respected. I am bothered by my conscience. Spokesman Djerejian refused to say whether the statement amount ed to a call from the United States for Marcos to step down.

'Read the statement," he said. "It's all there.

Meanwhile, the State Department on Saturday issued a travel advisory urging Americans to postpone non-essential travel to the Philippines "due to unsettled conditions."

Benjamin Hooks, executive director of the National Association for the Advancement of Colored People, who spoke here Friday in a meeting sponsored by the Midland Negro Business and Professional Women's Club, was quoted in a Saturday story in the Midland Reporter-Telegram as saying: "We kill live niggers and worship dead ones.

they are leaders in local congregations of the Church of Jesus Christ of Latter-day Saints. Those roles have brought them face-to-face with numerous Midland families and their reactions to the sudden belt-tightening by companies. Johnson and Hales serve as bishops, or ministers, of separate wards (congregations); Griffin serves as president of a West Texas region stretching from Big Spring to Alpine; and Bushman serves as a counselor to Griffin. Midland has about 1,100 church members, the men said.

THERE HAS BEEN more unemployment among the members, they noted. But "as we see people lose jobs, their friends have rallied around and helped them find new jobs, maybe not in their same field," said Bushman.

Of those losing jobs, the men said few are making any attempt to leave Midland. "People here want to stay in Midland. They have good friends, there's a good school system. Our people have found jobs. They stay here and look for opportunities," said Johnson. Sometimes, they take jobs not in their field or they settle for one with less pay.

The men agreed Midland's economy has weakened since January. "But at the same time you have to look at what's happening to the rest of the country," said Johnson. "Peo-ple going back to Utah have found the economy there is much weaker than they thought. Although the economy is weak in Midland, this is a Mergers among major oil companies in the past two years may have resulted in some layoffs at the time, but also may have strengthened Midland's position for the future, according to the men. In those mergers, offices in other cities, such as Dallas and Tulsa, were closed or re-duced while the offices in Midland were upgraded and resulted in employees being transferred here.

Oilfield's effect on state budget nothing new

This time Gov. Mark White does the talking. He calls on agencies and universities to trim spending by 13 percent, enough to keep the state in the black until January. White's proposal, which does not have the force of law, brings two questions to mind:

White is optimistic that agencies will respond and refuses to answer "what-if" questions to the contrary. Rudd says that with both Lewis and Lt. Gov. Bill Hobby backing it, White's request carries more weight with the agencies than the Houseonly warning of 1984.

"This time it's going to have a bigger impact," Rudd says. "With the lieutenant governor signing on, ... they can't run to Hobby" and ask the Senate for help against the House.

Seniority system helping blacks make political gains, Crocket says

BEAUMONT (AP) — Democratic Rep. Mickey Leland of Houston is one of eight black congressmen who are now committee chairmen, a Michigan congressman says, noting that blacks are finally reaping the fruits of a seniority system that long frustrated their efforts.

Rep. George W. Crockett, a Demo-cratic congressman from Detroit, spoke on black politics Friday night on the final day of a weeklong Black History Observance in Beaumont.

"Blacks for years were opposed to the seniority system" when veteran Southern congressmen and senators controlled key committees, the Florida native said.

"We've come full circle," he said. "We're very much in favor of the seniority system now, because if you're black and if you get elected and you keep your nose clean and keep your hands out of the till, chances are you'll be re-elected over and over again and build up

Leland is chairman of the Select Committee on Hunger.

Crockett, 76, a retired judge elected in 1980 in a district that was 71 percent black, said seniority has helped congressional liberals and moderates hold the line against Reagan's conservative allies.

Representative calls 'embargo' on newspaper

EL CAMPO (AP) — U.S. Rep. Mac Sweeney, R-Texas, of Wharton is one first-term Congressman in Washington who would like to have a little less home town publicity.

He has declared a news "embargo" against the El Campo Leader-News, a bi-weekly in his native Wharton County, because of what he called the newspaper's "flagrant abuse of editorial privilege.

Since November, Sweeney's office and the newspaper have been embroiled in a dispute that Sweeney said stems from news articles and editorials deliberately slanted againt

The congressman said he has ordered his staff not to have anything to do with the Leader-News until it displays "more responsible journalism," the Bay City Daily Tribune reported. Chris Barbee, managing editor of the Leader-News, said the blackout went into effect last November after his editorial, entitled "Mac Sweeney: Leaving Something to be Desired. appeared on the editorial page of his newspaper In the Nov. 6 editorial, Barbee chided Sweeney for a number of "mistakes" he said a politician with the experience Sweeney claims to have shouldn't have made.

Sweeney said the editorial implied he was a racist and a liar

"I took him to task over these things because there are too many people in Washington now who are not honest," Barbee told the Bay City newspaper. "I believe our responsibility is to separate fact from fiction and that's what we're going to do.'

Sweeney said those charges are just more examples of a long list of lies and fabrications formulated by Barbee to discredit him. If these allegations had any truth to them, some of the other 62 newspapers in his 22county congressional district would have "picked up the cause as well."

STATE

Crockett is a member of Foreign Affairs and Judiciary Committees and the Select Committee on Aging. He said top priorities for blacks in this election year are to increase their numbers in Congress and regain the Senate Democratic

Nearly all the current black congressmen represent predominantly black districts, but he said he hopes more blacks will win this year. Five of 15 black candidates this year are rated as having excellent chances, he said, and he hopes more whites will vote for blacks.

"Virginia, of all places, almost the cradle of the Confederacy in Richmond, elected a black lieutenant governor. I think that's a sign that maybe at long last we're beginning to move away from the color syndrome in politics," he said. "Black issues" also affect poor people generally, he said. "There are far more poor whites in this country than black people," he said.

The civil rights "revolution" of the 1960s happened because after World War II America felt pressure from the rest of the world to uphold its democratic principles, he said.

'America recognized it was on trial with respect to its constitution and its precepts, and I think we're still on trial in that regard," he said. He added that world opinion is important to Americans.

"Even South Africa cares about world opinion," he said. But Crockett said the lack of blacks in foreign policy positions in the Reagan administration has hurt America's standing in world opinion.

"We've retrogressed so far in this administration from the progress we made in the Carter administration."

SELL AS-IS OR UPGRADE?

Should a homeseller rehab for extra profit before placing his home on the market? There are strong arguments pro and con on this subject.

An experienced agent can offer constructive suggestions on upgrading as part of the total marketing effort to help sellers realize a maximum return on their housing investment. On occasion, a situation may exist where rehab expenses would exceed a seller's budget and the seller should decide to sell the house as-is.

Also, a seller may find that the cost of improving the home will end up costing a lot more money than the increased market price would bring.

Major improvements in a home, just for the purpose of getting a higher selling price is an "iffy" situation. Final costs almost always outstrip original estimates as do time estimates and extreme living inconvenience. All in all, it's usually a better practice to price the home in the condition it is presently in except for cosmetic improvements and let the buyer make the

The bodies of Jack Joseph Carlin and his wife, Martha, both 63, were found late Thursday on the bottom deck living room floor, The Kitty Carlin, moored in the Houston Ship Channel, said Harris County Sheriff's Detective Mike Parinello. Both had been shot in the chest.

According to Steve Hardin, economic development director with the Midland Chamber of Commerce, said, "China is now offering golden opportunities for people in the petroleum industry. We need to get our foot in the door."

That's at least a part of the reason why Midland might not be as drastically affected by the current crisis as first suspected.

Still, the uncertainty of the oil business has not stopped Midlanders from enjoying, and in many cases spending, their money on top-flight entertainment.

On the cultural side, local organizations flourished. The Midland-Odessa Symphony, Ballet Midland, Midland Opera Theatre and Midland Community Theatre all experienced outstanding seasons during the past year and have already announced formidable plans for the remainder of '86.

HALES SAID HE was told of one major oil company that would be consolidating here and as a result would need support personnel. Griffin said Erde Exploration as an independent firm has offices in Tulsa and Houston, but most of the exploration comes out of the Permian Basin area. Johnson worked for Superior when it was taken over by Mobil. Superior had a strong geological staff here, and Mobil adopted that company's system. "They saw we could do a better job of managing their prospects here. Most companies have recognized they watch their costs closer here. The cost of finding oil and gas is lower here than anywhere else in the United States, and we're still finding oil and gas here.

"At this point, our company is moving ahead," said Griffin of Erde Exploration.

This church, as are many other denominations in Midland, is working with their members to ease the pain of being laid off. It may differ from others, however, in that members are taught how to be prepared for economic downturns by implementing savings plans and keeping a year's food supply on hand.

Hales related the case of one church member who survived cuts at his oil company. He had been ready for the layoff. But some of the others who weren't ready found themselves without a job. 'This man looked around him at others in the office. There was one man who had spent every dollar he earned as fast as he earned it; another man had done some planning and knew his family could adjust; another had gone out and found a different job."

LAYOFFS IN A company stir up stress, apprehension and concern for all employees, including those who are retained, according to Hales. The church members, said Hales, "are there to help them work it out."

"We know the ones on sandy foundations and it's seldom we are caught by surprise," said Johnson. "While we probably see more of it happening today, we don't see as much of a cyclical event. We say You need to live off a budget, and here's how to budget."

When someone does lose his job and requests help, these church leaders look at the family's resources, according to Griffin. "What can you do to help yourself?" is the first question asked

"We make sure the house payments, utilities and food are taken care of," said Johnson of members who don't have the financial resources to continue while the husband is unemployed over a long period of time. And the church will give assistance, but the members are expected to pay it back, either in money or through work at the church.

Members also maintain an employment network, and this has helped some who have been laid off to find other work, according to the four men. During a monthly visitation in all homes, members are asked about job opportunities, and these are relayed to an employment specialist, Hales said.

Staying in Midland isn't an attitude reflected among only the adults. Between the four men are 23 children who are involved in various schools and extracurricular activities. The economic problems are concerning some of them. Hales said his daughter asked if they would be staying in Midland.

Midland and the previous nine in Detroit - Hales said he's seen ups and downs in the automobile industry. To him, the current situation in Midland is no different than Detroit's economic cycles. And in both cities citizens and businesses have had to make adjustments. "In banking you have to do that. If the prices are a lower dollar amount, you look at the cash flow. Businesses are seeing what they can do now to cut expenses and increase cash revenue."

Although gasoline prices have fallen below the $1 a-gallon mark at the pumps, Bushman said his business has decreased. "My business depends on oil company cars. No longer is a car assigned to an individual; now it's a pool car."

But these times will pass, the men believe. 'There's one guy who's been here and said he's seen it (economic tides) three times. Each one is a 10year cycle," said Bushman.

When the economy might stop its downward slide is something even experts can't predict. But the four men expressed hope the Saudis might be changing their attitude by refusing to flood the market with more oil

"We pray for oil prices to go up," said Hales, "but also for people to use wisdom in how they approach their personal and financial affairs.

BUDGET

lated that the budget crunch might crush White's re-election chances, those close to the governor say he might be able to use the political season to his advantage in forcing agency cooperation. According to that argument, White's appointees comprise a majority on almost every state board and commission. Out of fealty to White and aware of his ticklish political situation, those boards and commissions will order their agencies to obey.

The second question - can it be done — begs for a simple answer but has none. Calling it the "magic of the proposal," White says agency heads and university presidents can use their expertise to find 13-percent worth of fat in their budgets.

The directors of two of the state's biggest spenders - the University of Texas and the Department of Human Services — aren't at all sure they can save all the muscle. "It will harm our (faculty) recruiting, no question about it," says UT Chancelor Hans Mark.

DHS Commissioner Marlin Johnton says he's not sure if he can chop 13 percent - about $270 million for the welfare agency — "without getting into program money."

Other critics point to the fat elimination legislative budget writers supposedly undertook during the 1985 session. "It sounds to me like (White) is talking out of two sides of his mouth," says Gary Hughes, executive director of the Texas State Employees Association, who suggested White call a special legislative session to allow lawmakers to decide where to cut.

"Any state agency director who says he can do what the governor wants without a loss of services, you have to wonder what he told the Legislature last session."

THE BLOODY 1985 session will look like a checkers match in comparison to 1987, however.

Even after factoring out the possi-bility of starting $1.3 billion in the whole, budget writers will have to cut services or boost income by just $700 million to stay even. Without re-writing state law that directs manda-tory increases in highway and education finances, the spending gap jumps by another $2.1 billion. Allow-ing for population growth and infla-tion adds $1.3 billion.

Look for a classic House Senate tax increase. He and Appropriations Committee Chairman Rudd predict "severe cuts" in state services, a new philosophy of government. Hobby, sticking to the old philosophy, sets the tone for the Senate. The economic upheaval that Texas is experiencing means real hardship for our citizens," Hobby says. "These services are needed more than ever to help people through the hard times that we hope will be very short in duration.' State tax receipts, to some extent, reflect the health of the Texas economy. Hard times for state government flow from hard times for much of the rest of Texas. Bullock's newest numbers show that the economy will grow, but much more slowly than he predicted last summer. Total personal income, for example, will average $224.5 billion during fiscal 1986 and 1987, growing at an annual rate of 4.5 percent. However, Bullock's people say, the oil price slide will reduce personal income by $26.7 billion — 5.6 percent — from what it could have been over the two

William Barret Travis, the amo, Feb. 24, 1836

SAN ANTONIO (AP) — It was not as if the defenders of the Alamo had no warning of the doom that swaited them that February day in 1836.

When Mexican Gen. Antonio Lopez de Santa Anna arrived in San Antonio Feb. 23, bent on crushing a rising rebellion among Texans, he hoisted a blood-red flag.

Such a banner was a traditional Mexican symbol of no mercy and no

The defiant Texans inside, led by Col. William Barret Travis and Col. James Bowie, responded with a volley of cannon fire.

Thus, the stage was set for a 13-day siege of the Alamo, ending in the deaths of all 188 defenders.

The battle also served to set the stage for Texas' military victory at San Jacinto, where the battle cry was "Remember the Alamo."

The historic battle, a cornerstone of Texas history, will be relived and morated during two weeks of celebrations, ceremonies and Activities begin Sunday and come to a climax March 6 with a live reading at dawn of a historical account of the fall of the Alamo that occurred 150 years ago on that day.

Another highlight of the celebration will be March 7 in Bracketville, Texas, where the famed movie "The Alamo" was filmed. A re-enactment of the battle will be staged there.

Among the stories to be remembered countless times in the coming weeks will be the legend of Travis rallying his troops.

Travis is said to have unsheathed his sword and drawn a line on the ground before his battle-weary men. Travis told his warriors the Alamo was a deathtrap and there was no hope of victory. He challenged those prepared to die to cross the line to Every man, save one, crossed the line. Bowie, who was ill with typhoid-pneumonia, asked that his cot be carried over it. The next day, Santa Anna, who had gathered 4,000 troops, began an early morning attack that ended with the deaths of all the Texas

Santa Anna, who lost 600 men in the siege, ordered the bodies of the Texans burned.

A brochure on the Alamo, pre-pared by the Daughters of the Re-public of Texas, says Santa Anna minimized his losses by saying, "It was but a small affair."

Teachers say, 'Shove the Gov'

AUSTIN (AP) - Hundreds of shouting, sign-waving teachers gathered on the Capitol lawn Saturday to claim the 1984 school reforms are "grossly unfair" and to blame Gov. Mark White for getting them passed.

"Shove the Gov," read a sign in the front row of a rally sponsored by the Texas Teachers for Respect and Responsbility.

"No More White Lies," said another sign.

Doug Ward, a junior high school

English teacher and coach in Monahans who is chairman of TTRR, led the enthusiatic crowd in a chant: "No more insults day after day, Mark

Ward said those at the rally had registered from 164 different Texas schools, some of them driving all night from the Panhandle to appear. A number came in chartered buses.

'Let the governor know we are tired of being political scapegoats for him," said Mickey Porter, English teacher at Wheeler. Ward said the organization left a list of their complaints on the door of the governor's office one day this week and that the only response was 'someone tore them off the door." Ward's detailed criticism of the school reforms included: — The new appointed 15-member State Board of Education has only two members with classroom experience.

The competency test required of already-certified teachers is an insult. "Two weeks from now they can require a new test, maybe a urine test, or a lie detector test, or a blood test, anything they want," he said.

The career ladder for teachers is not adequately designed or funded.

- It is wrong to remove the power of the University Interscholastic League to regulate participation in

"Teachers for Respect and Responsibility," a new teacher's group, rally on the south steps of the Capitol in Austin Saturday after noon, voicing their dislike for Gov. Mark White and teacher competenextracurricular activities and substitute the controversial no-pass, no-play provision.

"We feel that because of the education reform bill the state is headed toward education of only the elite,' Ward said.

What this governor has forced on the children and educators of the state of Texas has been grossly unfair to thousands of students," Ward

"And his stubborn refusal to even the slightest modification to the educational reform package is an insult to the judgment of people who have spent a lifetime in education," he

"If we are truly trying to return to the basics, let us do the same in our state government. Let us return to the day when elected officials listened to the general public for guidance and did not pass laws arbitrarily based on some special interest groups' lobbying efforts.'

STATE IN BRIEF

Racism alleged at UT

AUSTIN (AP) - A former black student leader at the University of Texas said the latest in a series of assaults on him is part of a scheme by racists to intimidate blacks and prevent them from expressing their views on campus.

FBI agents were investigating an attack of Randy Bowman by two white men wearing Ronald Reagan masks and carrying a pistol who allegedly tried to throw him from a window.

Bowman and others claimed the attack was designed to prevent the Black Student Alliance from speaking out on issues such as UT investments in companies operating in South Africa and recruitment and retention of minorities at the university.

William Cunningham, UT president, said he sought help from the FBI on Friday after a request by Bowman, who told authorities that the two had entered his eighth-floor dormitory room and tried to throw him from a window. An FBI spokesman in Austin said the agency will be able to take part in the investigation because of a possible violation of Bowman's civil rights. The spokesman said the FBI will work with the UT Police Department in the investigation.

The Texas Department of Mental Health and Mental Retardation filed the plan Friday with U.S. District Judge Barefoot Sanders of Dallas The plan has no provisions for closing state institutions.

But a proposal filed with the court by David Ferleger, attorney for the plaintiffs in the suit, did suggest closing a state school in Austin, Denton or Fort Worth.

"We are not looking at closing a school," said Toni Hunter, an assistant attorney general who is representing the department in the lawsuit. "There are other schools in the state that are older and might be more appropriate to close than Austin State School.

The state's implementation plan states the state's mentally retarded would be placed in community homes at the rate of 100 a year. Officials said it would take about seven years to place residents who are eligible for community home

Pilot not authorized

CORPUS CHRISTI (AP) - The former commander of the Corpus Christi Naval Air Station was piloting one of three helicopters in unauthorized maneuvers that left three men dead, the Corpus Christi Caller-Times reported.

Capt. É. Earle Rogers II was relieved of his command and disciplined for his participation in the maneuvers before the October crash that also injured three others, the newspaper reported Friday.

A Navy source who supplied the information called the discipline "administrative" but declined to elaborate, the Caller-Times said.

Questions arise on NASA management

WASHINGTON (AP) - The search washington (AP) — The search for causes behind the explosion of space shuttle Challenger has raised new questions about both rocket hardware and decision-making by NASA management. And this past week, perhaps inevitably, the probe burst into the political arena.

Members of a presidential investigating commission plan to resume gating commission plan to resume public hearings Tuesday and Wednesday to report on material they gathered when members fanned out to various space agency and industry locations last week.

Attention focused on both the potentially damaging effects of cold weather on the crucial rubber-like Oring seals joining segments of the shuttle's rocket boosters and the unheeded concerns of engineers.

Investigators want to know the sequence of events that led to a launch recommendation by Morton Thiokol, makers of the rocket boosters, and the "go" decision by NASA. And they're asking who within NASA knew there was an engineering dispute over the wisdom of a launch under the unusually cold conditions

Here's a look at some of the big questions that remain: - If a veteran engineer at Morton Thiokol warned it was too cold to launch, why did NASA go ahead?

Morton Thiokol ultimately recommended launch of the shuttle despite opposition from Allan McDonald, who was the company's ranking engineer on launch day at the Ken-nedy Space Center in Florida. A team of NASA managers considers all the information up to the min-ute of launch, and NASA officials say engineers at all levels are heard through the agency's chain of com-mand. Jesse Moore, departing head of the space shuttle program, said all members of the top management team have to be unanimous to go ahead with a launch.

The presidential commission said Moore and two other top launch offi-cials were not told of the debate about whether cold weather posed a Investigators have since learned that 15 Morton Thiokol engineers unanimously recommended against launch, but that the approval of company Vice President Joe C. Kilminster was forwarded despite those objections.

- How much pressure did NASA managers put on Morton Thiokol to put aside those engineering reservations and recommend a

was transmitted from Kilminster in Utah near midnight before launch day. It listed some of the problems that could result from the cold but didn't reflect the opposition of Morton Thiokol engineers.

Members of the commission have been in Huntsville, Ala., trying to de-termine whether officials at the Marshall Space Flight Center there pressured Morton Thiokol engineers to recommend launch, according to National Public Radio has reported the head of the rocket booster program at Marshall argued with Thiokol engineers who thought the launch should be postponed until temperatures — 38 degrees at launch time — climbed into the 50s. The network said Lawrence Mulloy asked Morton Thiokol officials in conference telephone call: "My God, Thiokol, when do you want me to launch, next April?"

— How far up NASA's layers of management was it known that there were serious engineering reservations about a launch and concern that cold weather could harm the crucial seals?

Even after his bosses at headquarters in Utah approved launch, Morton Thiokol engineer McDonald persisted in his objections.

After acting NASA administrator William Graham appeared before a Senate committee last week, Sen. Ernest Hollings, D.S.C., said he had asked Graham whether there was evidence Morton Thiokol opposed the idence Morton Thiokol opposed the launch, and Graham replied, "No sir, the evidence is the other way." Graham had cited the launch-eve memo recommending launch. But Hollings cited McDonald's opposition and called for Graham to resign and for the Senate to conduct its own investigation into the accident. Sen-ate republicans refused to go along. What is the future of NASA nagency?

NASA Administrator James Beggs is on leave because of a criminal indictment stemming from his previous post at General Dynamics. Graham, a newcomer to NASA, became acting director and now faces an un-leadership? Who will run the certain future. There has been speculation that the White House is looking for a "white knight," someone different and perhaps an old hand, just as former EPA director William Ruckelshaus returned to the Environmental Protection Agency when it was under siege.

Some possible candidates are former directors James C. Fletcher and Thomas O. Paine.

Morton Thiokol eyed alternatives to O rings

WASHINGTON (AP) - The manufacturer of the space shut-tle's solid rocket boosters, realizing the disaster that could result from an in-flight malfunction, had been evaluating 43 ways to seal the segments of the rocket even before the Challenger blew

Documents drawn up by Morton Thiokol indicate that if NASA is required to replace the seals before resuming shuttle flights, the program could be grounded as long as 27 months.

The documents have been turned over to a presidential commission investigating last month's shuttle disaster. The panel has been focused on fears that the seals do not work effectively in cold temperatures.

Data presented to NASA last August detail problems with seal erosion and recommend that efforts to solve the problem "continue at an accelerated pace."

At an October meeting of aerospace experts in San Diego, Calif., Morton Thiokol representatives asked for help from other aerospace companies in solving problems with the rubber O rings.

The company has known since 1982 the possibility for failure of the O rings. The devices are designed to seal the joints between the four pieces of the 150-foot rocket and prevent hot exhaust gases from escaping. The information on options to the O rings was prepared last August.

According to the documents, Martin Thiokol's options included a range of configurations, among them plugging part of the gap be-tween the casing segments with wire mesh, adding a third O ring, or adding a locking feature to join the segments more securely.

According to recorded minutes of its San Diego presentation, Morton Thiokol said it was working on improvements to the seals but solicited recommendations for new seal designs.

Commission investigators have been interested in the effect the cold launch temperature — 38 degrees, colder than for any of the 24 previous launches - might have had on the resiliency of the O rings.

Moreover, temperature readings indicate the suspect right booster rocket may have been much colder - perhaps even below zero — due to either a small leak of supercold hydrogen from the adjacent shuttle fuel tank, or from breezes blowing past the tank onto the booster.

GM trial on faulty brakes rolls to halt

WASHINGTON (AP) - Roughly two years, 4,000 exhibits, and 15,000 transcript pages after it began, a trial is about to end on the government's charges that General Motors sold 1.1 million cars knowing that they had unsafe brakes.

At issue is whether GM sold its 1980 X-cars — including the Chevrolet Citation, Buick Skylark, Oldsmobile Omega and Pontiac Phoenix when it was aware that their rear brakes could lock up too quickly during stops, causing cars to spin out of

About 700,000 to 800,000 of the 6year-old cars are still on the roads. Lawyers for GM and the Justice Department are due in federal court Tuesday for final arguments. The non-jury trial before U.S. District Judge Thomas Penfield Jackson hasn't been in session since last May, but lawyers for both sides have been taking depositions, crafting thousand-page summaries of evidence and even writing up proposed final orders for the judge.

"It's hard to believe we are still here, involved in this case," says GM counsel James Durkin.

The closing arguments give each side a chance to offer Jackson their best parting shots.

"The challenge is to capsulize this versy into a two-hour presentation." Durkin said.

Flood evacuations continue

ROBBINS, Calif. (AP) — A levee bulged and began leaking Satur-day, forcing the evacuation of about 400 people in flood-ravaged northern California, but a breach in another levee a few miles to the north was sealed and thousands of refugees returned home.

An explosion in a natural gas pipeline along the Bear River just to the north blew three people into the water. Two were quickly rescued and hospitalized with burns, and a search was mounted for the third man, officials said.

Preliminary estimates set damage from floods and landslides all across northern California after nine days of torrential rain at $225 million or more, according to the state Office of Emergency Services. That figure did not include the latest levee breaks that had chased more than 26,000 people out of their homes.

In all, about 38,000 people had to evacuate across northern California during the series of storms.

Saturday's evacuees were forced out of this town along the Feather River about 30 miles north of Sacramento by a weak spot in a levee along a separate channel, the Sutter Bypass.

Tom Mullins, a spokesman for the emergency services office, said the bulge originally was about 100 feet long, then grew to 400 feet and began leaking a 4foot-wide spout of water.

The water poured into a canal adjacent to the bypass, about three miles east of town, and crews set to work to plug the gap.

He said helicopters and private vehicles carried refugees to evacuation centers, while trucks rumbled through the downtown area with dirt and boulders to shore up the weakened area.

Robbins Postmaster Ron Verstraeten, 33, said he cleaned out the post office but "I'm going to stick around to help the community all I can. It's real tight-knit. Everyone is running around helping everyone. It's fantastic."

Several miles to the north. about 26,000 people had been driven from their homes Thursday night when the Yuba River breached a levee and flooded 28 square miles around the towns of Linda and Olivehurst. About 13,000 returned home Saturday, but high water continued to keep thousands of area residents out of their homes, the emergency services office said.

The body of a 61-year-old Linda man was found Saturday in a car at a neighbor's house, authorities said. The man, whose name was not released, apparently died after trying to flee when the levee broke, police said.

The 150-foot gap in the levee was sealed by repair crews hauling rocks from a quarry 30 miles

Motive eludes FBI in Tylenol case

WHITE PLAINS, N.Y. (AP) — Two weeks after a poisoned Tylenol cap-sule killed a woman, investigators are stymied by what they call a crime without a motive.

"Right now, it's like looking for a needle in a haystack," said FBI spokesman Antonius Genakos, whose agency is still working to solve the 1982 deaths of seven people in the Chicago area from cyanide-laced Tylenol capsules.

Diane Elsroth, 23, of Peekskill, about 45 miles north of New York City, took two Extra-Strength Tylenol capsules at her boyfriend's home in Yonkers on Feb. 8. Two days later, medical authorities determined she had died of cyanide contained in one of those capsules.

A second bottle containing poisoned capsules was found three days later in a Woolworth's store, just blocks from the Bronxville A&P where the fatal bottle of Tylenol was

The death and the discovery of the second bottle led to a nationwide warning against use of Tylenol cap-sules. The manufacturer, Johnson & Johnson, later decided to stop using capsules entirely and to make Ty-lenol only as solid tablets and caplets or in liquid form, a move that could cost the company $150 million.

An FBI official said Saturday it was unlikely that the capsules were doctored at the two factories where they were filled and packaged. "But we still haven't ruled anything out," said FBI spokesman Lane Bonner.

No one has been charged with the 1982 Chicago deaths, which led Johnson & Johnson to implement a $100 million program to safeguard Ty-lenol, using a triple-seal system to resist tampering.

Bob Fletcher, a spokesman for the Illinois State Police said the tampering may have been a motiveless

"Someone may have done it simply from the desire to demonstrate his ability to be cleverer than the cops," Fletcher said. "The first time it was easy. The second time, it was more challenging. It's like a higher level of chess.

Congress rings up $9.29 million travel tab

WASHINGTON (AP) — Traveling members of Congress, who like visiting warmer climates in winter months, cost taxpayers at least $9.28 million in 1984-85, a watchdog group reported Saturday.

In a report entitled "Flights of Fancy," Congress Watch said sena tors, representatives and their aides spent $4.96 million on overseas trips in 1984, an increase of 36 percent from amount calculated by the group's previous report covering

Congress Watch, part of the Public Citizen organization founded by Ralph Nader, said travel costs totaled $4.32 million for the first nine months of 1985 - or at an annual rate of $5.76 million. The report was compiled from official travel expense records published periodically in the Congressional Record. Complete records covering the final three months of 1985 have not yet been published. Europe was the favorite destination while countries in warmer climates were popular destinations for House members during winter months, the report said.

Nancy Drabble, Congress Watch director, said the actual cost of foreign travel is higher because the published records are sometimes incomplete and at best disclose only the price of transportation and per diem but not related expenses incurred by the State and Defense departments.

It probably is double when you include all costs," said Ms. Drabble, who urged Congress to take up legislation introduced by a handful of members to require a more detailed disclosure of travel costs. "The 36 percent jump in the tab...is hard to explain to taxpayers when the rest of the government faces the massive Gramm-Rudman budget cuts," she said in a statement. Travel by House members accounted for $8.23 million of the $9.28 million reported in the 21-month-period Congress Watch studied. This included $118,331 for an 11-member entourage headed by Speaker Thomas P. O'Neill, D-Mass., to spend five days in Ireland last March "to celebrate St. Patrick's Day

"Unfortunately, such junkets are not unusual," the report said. "While senators and representatives are often called upon to perform diplomatic and ceremonial duties abroad, the sheer number of legislators taking part in these activities appears excessive.

The report said that 63 of the 100 senators and 261 of the 435 representatives made at least one overseas trip during the 21 months.

WASHINGTON (AP) — The nation's governors attacked President Reagan's budget Saturday as "a oneway street" that shifts responsibilities to the states without providing the money to pay for them.

A report called "Federalism and the States 1986," said the governors agreed that "reducing the federal defeat the same than the same that the same than the same than the same than the same than the deficit must be a very high priority," and they renewed their call on the administration to consider defense cuts and tax increases as steps toward that goal.

The report was made public by Tennessee Gov. Lamar Alexander, chairman of the National Governors Association, the day before the forwinter meeting.
With Reagan calling for a compre-hensive study of welfare programs, the governors repeated their opposi-tion to what they called "attempts to shift the current federal costs back to states and localities under the guise of federalism."

TYRE, Lebanon (AP) — Israeli troops began withdrawing at noon Saturday from some of the south Lebanese villages they have been combing for six days in a search for two of their soldiers captured by Shitte Meelem contracts. ite Moslem extremists.

Columns of Israeli tanks, armored personnel carriers and buses full of soldiers were seen heading south from a U.N.-policed sector into an Israeli-occupied security zone north of the frontier.

The movement came after Timur Goksel, spokesman for the 5,500-man U.N. Interim Force in Lebanon, or UNIFIL, denied Israeli claims it had scaled down its operation in south Lebanon and withdrawn from most of the raided villages.

The sources said nine Katyusha rockets landed in northern Israel's eastern panhandle around Kiryat Shmona. The Israeli army said there were no casualties or damage. Israeli Chief of Staff Lt. Gen. Moshe Levy told Israeli television Friday that Israel had withdrawn its troops from much of south Lebanon as a result of a development during the course of the searches." He did not say what the development was. U.N. officials and Lebanese security sources have estimated 1,500 Israelis with tanks, helicopter gunships and armored vehicles have been searching for the missing men and their captors.

The soldiers were captured by Moslem extremists Monday during an ambush in Israel's self-declared security zone in southern Lebanon. Their abductors, from the Islamic Resistance Front, which is dominated by the pro-Iranian Hezbollah (Party of God), claimed to have killed one of the Israelis, but no body has yet been found. Levy stressed that the search would continue as long as necessary, and that Israel had no timetable for withdrawing its troops. Goksel said he had no information about major military activity today, but he said 15 men were rounded up during a search of four villages

The villages were Chaqra, Kfar Dounine, Braachit and Deir Kifa, within the U.N. zone, north of Israel's security belt.

Security sources in the south said machine gun and tank cannon fire echoed from Kfar Dounine, head-quarters of the U.N. Ghanaian peacekeeping battalion, at dawn Saturday.

The sources, speaking on condi-tion of anonymity, said the firing came after three Soviet-made Katyusha rockets were fired from north of the Litani river, at an Israeli position in the village of Froun inside the

Mandela calls halt to rumors of his release

JOHANNESBURG, South Africa black nationalist leader, and Mande-(AP) — Nelson Mandela does not expect to be freed from prison in the coming weeks or months and wants speculation on the matter to cease, his daughter said this weekend.

Witnesses meanwhile said on Saturday that police wielding clubs charged a house in which about 70 funeral mourners were gathered in Atteridgeville, a black township near

Police said white civilians in a car shot two black pedestrians in the legs in the town of Krugersdorp near Johannesburg Friday night. The po-lice appealed to the public to help them trace the assailants.

Seven other blacks were injured overnight in stonings, firebombings and clashes with police around the country, a police statement said. Zindzi Mandela, daughter of the la's wife Winnie visited him Friday in Pollsmoor Prison in Cape Town, where he has served 23 years of a life sentence for plotting sabotage.

Widespread rumors this month had speculated that the 67-year-old Mandela would be released in connection with the East-West prisoner exchange that freed Soviet dissident Anatoly Shcharansky.

But Zindzi Mandela said Friday night, "There is nothing new," and added that her father said he wanted the speculation to stop.

Mandela organized the armed wing of the African National Congress in the early 1960s in an effort to overthrow the white-led govern-ment. The outlawed ANC is still the main guerrilla organization fighting apartheid.

gation policy through which 5 million whites govern South Africa's 24 million blacks

Zindzi and Winnie Mandela flew to Cape Town with Gen. Olusegun Obasanjo, Nigeria's former military leader who is here with a Commonwealth team investigating South Africa's racial unrest, the South African Press Association reported.

'Purification' of Soviet Communist party expected at Gorbachev-headed congress

MOSCOW (AP) — The 27th Communist Party Congress that opens Tuesday will be the finale to act one of Mikhail S. Gorbachev's cleansing of party ranks and will ratify what is accounted to be party ranks and will ratify what is expected to be the biggest shakeup ever of the Central Committee.

Since becoming party secretary-general in March, Gorbachev has rejuvenated the ruling Politburo, shuffled more than two dozen ministers, and cut deeply into the legions of high party functionaries.

His shakeup, which the official newspaper Pravda says "is not a purge, but a purification," also has spawned an unprecedented debate about party privilege, tenure, elections and patronage.

"There has never been such a critical atmosphere before a congress...(it's) very critical by Soviet standards," said Soviet historian Roy Medvedev, an observer of party politics for 30 years.

The congress plays at least two important political

It provides an ideological foundation for foreign and domestic policy that will be cited in future speeches, newspaper articles and decrees. _ It officially ratifies the makeup of the party Central Committee. Most of the current members were appointed under the late leader Leonid I. Brezhnev. A congress also can ratify changes in the Central Committee's secretariat, where promotions and retirements have left vacancies, and even within the Politburo itself, the top governing body. Such changes often are rumored but never announced in advance.

Brezhnev was the leader at the last congress, in 1981, and named a Central Committee with 319 voting members, only 13 percent of them newcomers. Western embassies estimate that about 30 members have since died and 110 to 130 were retired or demoted, leaving vacancies to be filled at the coming congress.

There were no congresses during the brief tenures of Yuri V. Andropov and Konstantin U. Chernenko.

By now, Gorbachev's leadership has decided who will be on the new Central Committee. Unless membership is cut, a turnover of 50 percent or more seems certain. Although the Politburo has ultimate power, the Central Committee played a role in ousting Premier Nikita S. Khrushchev in 1964, a lesson no Kremlin leader can forget. A loyal Central Committee also is important because it includes the heads of lower party bodies that carry out directives from the top.

After the congress, Gorbachev could start a second round of changes in regional and local party bodies, an enormous task since many of those jobs became semi-autonomous sinecures under Brezhnev.

So far, Gorbachev has added four new full members to the Politburo, removed three and shunted Foreign Minister Andrei A. Gromyko to the largely ceremonial Forty-three of the more than 80 ministers and State Committee chairmen have been shuffled, with 25 of them retiring. Gorbachev also combined five agencies into an agriculture "superministry," eliminating 3,200 jobs in Moscow.

Medvedev said 5,000 to 6,000 jobs have been eliminated in the staffs of the Central Committee and Council of Ministers. Gorbachev must do more than shuffle names and portfolios to make real changes.

Newspaper articles and readers' letters even have criticized the "nomenklatura," officials who use special stores, hospitals and restaurants, travel in chauffered cars and get the choicest apartments.

WORLD in brief

Israeli factions vie for activist Shcharansky

JERUSALEM (AP) - Israel's political parties are subtly courting Anatoly Shcharansky, the freed Soviet human rights activist, even though no one knows his political leanings.

The 38-year-old Shcharansky, released Feb. 11 from nearly nine years in Soviet prisons, is seen by some as a way to inject new life into a gallery of all-too-familiar faces in Israeli politics.

The Herut Party, core faction of the right-wing Likud bloc, says it will invite Shcharansky to be a star attraction of its national convention. Likud has been in search of charismatic figures since Menachem Begin retired as prime minister in Septem-

The Labor Party of Prime Minister Shimon Peres has appointed a liaison officer to Shcharansky, according to the pro-Labor Jerusalem Post newspaper. "Shcharansky's fight for freedom may in fact be beginning now," wrote columnist Yoel Marcus of the newspaper Haaretz, chiding the politicians for overeagerness to be seen with Shcharansky

The jostling began as soon as Shcharansky stepped off the plane that brought him to Israel. Leaders of both parties were at the airport to embrace him, in what the papers later called "the Shcharansky festival."

Mexico needs debt help

MEXICO CTTY (AP) - President Miguel de la Madrid said Mexico will open talks next week with international bankers to ask them to share in the sacrifices the nation is making to pay its $96.4 billion foreign debt.

De la Madrid, in a nationally televised speech Friday night, said the government cannot impose still more austerity measures to make up for all the revenues lost because of falling oil prices.

"No one is obliged to do the impossible," he said.

The president, who had been meeting for two weeks with his Cabihet to work out a fresh strategy to deal with the price cuts, made no mention of calling a halt to interest and principal payments on the debt.

"We don't want confrontation but realistic and honorable cooperation. We want to continue being serious and respected members of the international community, but this attitude gives us the right to objective and fair treatment," he said.

"The net effect of the loss of petroleum revenues cannot be made up solely with a greater external indebtedness by flows of new credit. It would bring us to an interminable vicious cycle," the president said.

Five Iraqui jets downed

TEHRAN, Iran (AP) - Iran said it downed five Iraqi jets and repulsed enemy attacks inside southern Iraq on Saturday, as government leaders gathered to honor 46 people killed when an Iranian plane was shot down by Iraqi fighters.

State-run Tehran television said Iranian troops killed or wounded 1,000 Iraqi soldiers in fighting north of the Iraqi port city of Faw, which Iran captured during its 13-day-old offensive. Inside Iraqi-held territory on the Faw peninsula, however, Iraqi Maj. Gen. Maher Abdel-Rashid told AP reporter Mohammed Salam that his forces and two other Iraqi columns were advancing from three direc-tions toward Faw.

Lesotho ministers freed

MASERU, Lesotho (AP) - Three senior Cabinet ministers in the government deposed by a military coup a month ago have been released from jail, the government announced Saturday.

It said former Foreign Minister Vincent Makhele, former Information Minister Desmond Sixishe and former Rural Development Minister Francis Matholone were freed Fri-

STATE

Sunshine prevailed over most of the state Saturday as a dome of dry, polar air centered over North Texas. Gulf moisture overran the polar airmass and combined with an upper air low to give scattered patches of light rain across southeastern Texas from Halletsville and North Houston to near Lake Sam Rayburn.

Widely scattered showers and thunderstroms roamed coastal

The high pressure brought northerly wind at 10 to 20 mph to the eastern half of the state. The High Plains and Trans Pecos had light, variable breezes.

Temperatures climbed mostly into the 60s. Under a cloud cover in the lower Rio Grande Valley, Brownsville recorded 54 degrees. Parts of southwestern Texas reached 70. At 3 p.m. Laughlin Air Force Base near Del Rio had a 71.

The forecast for North and West Texas called for mostly clear skies through Monday. Highs should range from about 60 in the Panhandle to near 80 in the Big Bend, with lows Sunday night from the upper 20s to 41.

South Texas should be sunny Sunday and partly cloudy Monday, with highs from the 60s to near 70 and lows in the 40s and 50s.

More widespread snow and rain fell Saturday over the Northwest. while locally heavy rain soaked parts of the Southeast.

Rain was reported from extreme northern California to western parts of Oregon and Washington and rain, with snow at higher elevations, fell across northern parts of the Plateau and Rockies. Locally gusty wind caused blowing and drifting snow in the mountain passes of the Northwest.

Communication key to success, educator says

By JULIE HILLRICHS Staff Writer

ODESSA Parents are involved in their children's education whether they want to be or not, language arts consultant Patricia Koppman told about 150 members of the Permian Basin International Reading Association Saturday. Still, she said many parents hesitate to discuss their children's progress with a teacher.

Parents often worry, "If I ask a question or express an opinion or concern, will the teacher think I'm not a good parent or think I'm trying to make trouble?" the San Diego native said. "The important thing is to ask questions.'

Ms. Koppman, educator, author and reading expert, is a specialist in parent/teacher relationships and a past board member of the International Reading Association. She has authored several articles and books including the parent/home component of the reading program for Ginn and Company educational publishers of Dallas.

Her presentation at the University of Texas of the Permian Basin included suggestions parents can take to encourage learning in the home, questions they should be asking teachers, and how to develop closer bonds with teachers to increase communication.

A recent survey of more than 200 teachers indicated that parents can be of most help by letting the child know he/she cares about learning; spending time talking with children; reading, talking and listening to the child; limiting the time children watch television; supporting the school's educational program; creating an atmosphere in the home that encourages learning; and looking for the child's strengths and weakness.

Ms. Koppman has developed a pro-gram entitled, "Techniques for Information Exchange," to help teachers and parents form bonds. The techniques include parent/teacher conferences, classroom open house, home/school bulletin, meetings of parent groups, parent/teacher notes and telephone calls.

"A conference is an opportunity for a parent and teacher to share the positive things that both see in a child and discuss ways to help the child. We grow from positive comments, not negative ones," she said.

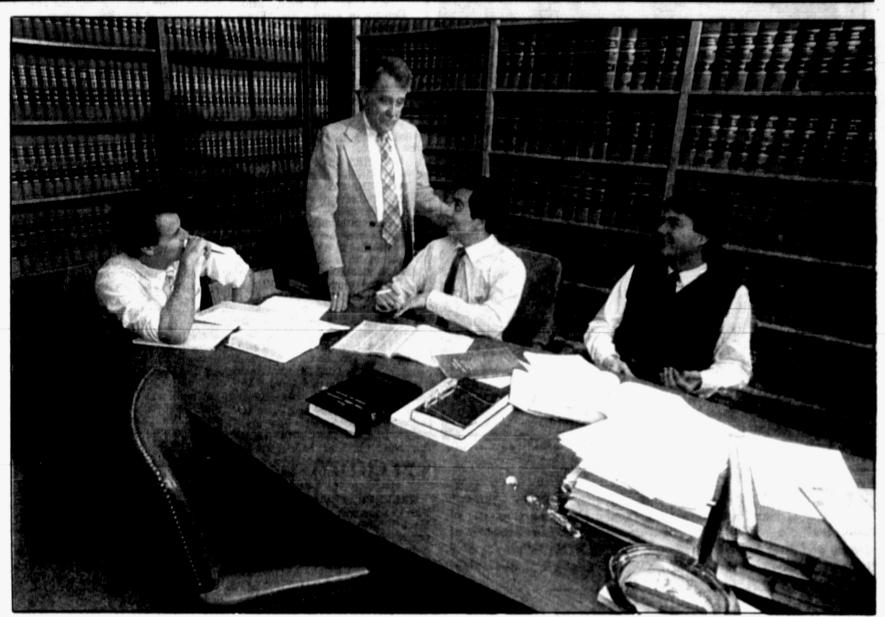

"No child cuts his teeth at the same time, no child speaks the word 'father' at the same time, no child walks at the same time that other friends or brothers or sisters walked.

"The important thing is that a child is learning, regardless of rate. Teachers and parents must avoid discouraging a child that is learning at a slower rate," she said.

According to Ms. Koppman, an observant parent is often the first person to notice whether his/her child has a reading problem. They also play a central role in correcting the problem.

"The reading process begins in the home and the parents need to become involved in it," she said. "We came to a point in the (1960s) when parents weren't parenting and we blamed the schools when our children failed

"Not even the best school or teacher can do it alone. Schools must provide the structure or methods for teacher/parent teamwork. The home environment is the most powerful single factor in determining how well a child can do in school,

It was ticket to cultural exchange

By MARK LEWIS Staff Writer

San Antonio may have had Prince Charles Friday, but Midland had Flesh for Lulu. Unlike the prince, the four members of this British rock'n'roll band weren't touring Texas to help celebrate the state's sesquicentennial. They were just passing through.

In fact, they were just passing through at 88 mph, which brought them to the attention of Department of Public Safety Trooper Art Dearo.

Midland was rapidly receding in the rear-view mirror of their rented Cutlass Supreme when Dearo pulled the band over about 4 p.m. Friday on Interstate 20 several miles east of town. He brought them back to the Midland County Courthouse office of Justice of the Peace Robert H.

What followed was a true cultural exchange.

"They seemed like real nice young men," commented Pine, who fined them $50 and introduced them to Sheriff Gary Painter.

Finding themselves face to face with a real, live western sheriff, the Britishers promptly brought out a camera and took a picture.

Dearo and Painter, equally intrigued, took their guests down to the office of Sheriff's Lt. Clayton Mc-Kinney to show them off.

"What kind of music do you boys play?" McKinney asked. Rock'n'roll, he was told, "But we

To the Sheriff's Office employees, the four rockers with their British accents, black-leather pants and bizarre hair styles seemed like something from another world. To the band members, the lawmen with their West Texas accents, badges and cowboy hats seemed like something out of a John Wayne movie.

McKinney's office was quickly converted into a kind of cross-cultural twilight zone, with everybody taking turns posing for photographs with each other. The band members seemed genuinely delighted when asked to autograph several Polaroid shots taken by Sheriff's Investigator Sue Rudie.

McKinney grumbled good-naturedly about having his office "invad"English, if you don't mind," said

The group was traveling from Phoenix to Atlanta, where they were scheduled to perform Saturday

Flesh for Lulu is a band that will leave you wanting more," wrote a Los Angeles critic last week when the band played the Roxy, a club on the Sunset Strip. He described them as a post-punk band reminiscent of the Kinks and "dangerous art rock ers in David Johansen vein. Their critical reception in Midland was more restrained.

"Nice beat, easy to dance to — I'd give them an 85," said Sheriff's Sgt. B. John McDaniel.

Actually, the band's instruments were in a truck somewhere between here and Atlanta, so they had to decline the sheriff's invitation to sing for their supper. He gave them a Sheriff's Office shoulder patch anyway, and they passed out promotional photos and "Flesh for Lulu" buttons.

Then, declining Painter's offer of a meal in the county jail, the band hit the road for Atlanta.

Alcohol can affect unborn

By RON GILMORE Staff Writer

Dr. Alfred Karickhoff, of Odessa's Medical Center Hospital, recalled the first time he encountered Fetal Alcohol Syndrome (FAS) — a combination of birth defects, mental retardation and low birth weight caused by the mother drinking during pregnancy. "It was in 1975," said the medical director of MCH's "I went into the nursery and Special Care Nursery. "I had a mother bring in a 'funny the smell of booze was everylooking' kid. The mother was tipsy at the time. I didn't where. My first thought was know what was wrong until which nurse is drunk?' But it later. I was reading some FAS literature that had just wasn't a nurse. A baby was come out and said, 'My God. That's what this kid's got." born drunk."

Although Karickhoff and other medical professionals have not seen a problem with FAS - thought to affect one in 750 births - Karickhoff believes there could be in the future. "Quite frankly, I'm surprised," said the recent transplant from the San Francisco area. "In the time that I've been here I have not seen any FAS. But I have no doubt we will see it. I understand there is a fair amount of alcoholism in this area.

Karickhoff said that he had treated a couple of women "who were certainly candidates."

FAS and its less severe form, Fetal Alcohol Effects (FAE), have recently been targeted by medical associations as growing concerns, said the

"IT'S ONLY BEEN within the last 10 years that FAS has been identified and seriously looked at," he said. "And it's only been within the last year that both the American Association of Pediatrics and the American College of Obstetrics and Gynecology have taken a very strong position. Now there are big signs in doctors' offices."

FAS, which can leave an infant with severe birth defects, must include three distinct symptoms before it can be diagnosed, according to Clearview's medical director Dr. Joe Wolpmann.

and stunted growth before we know for sure we've delivered a FAS baby," he said.

'If it's just one or two of the symptoms — usually in milder form — it's probably FAE." Wolpmann works with Clearview's chemically-dependent patients, but had a private general practice for years during which he delivered "about 1,500 babies." The statistics on the syndrome's widespread presence are startling.

A recent report from the Texas Commission on Alcohol and Drug Abuse, cited FAS as the "third most common cause of mental retarda-tion" following Down's syndrome and spina bifida.

More than 228,000 FAS people were alive as of 1980 in the U.S., said the report, and their health costs were estimated at nearly $1.8 billion. Estimates by the Public Health Service and others indicate that FAS occurs in 1 in 750 births (although Karickhoff reported 1 in 500 in the San Francisco area) and the incidence of FAE births were 10 times that rate at one in 75.

THE REPORT elaborated on the three symptoms Wolpmann cited. "FAS describes the...severest form of impairment which includes central nervous system deficiency (mild to moderate retardation, small heads, poor coordination, and hyperactivity in childhood); growth deficiency (failure to thrive — usually a failure to 'catch up') and facial characteristics (small eye openings, short, up-turned nose, flat or absent nose, receding jaw, thinned upper lip and poorly formed ears)."

Others may have heart abnormalities, joint, kidney and skeletal defects and abnormalities of the external genitalis.

The commission estimated that 50,000 newborns were impaired by both FAS and FAE last year alone.

While the figures and results of the disease itself are shocking, most in the medical profession find comfort in one aspect of the syndrome — it doesn't have to happen.

I'm calling for change in phone use

As you have probably figured out by now, there are a great many things in this world that irritate me, but one that consistently ranks at or near the top of the list is talking to telephone answering machines. Simply put, I detest being placed in that position and unless my message is of historic significance it does not get related to a machine. Call me strange, but I prefer conversing with humans. When I say something I want a response, be it a laugh or merely a grunt, but definitely not a recorded beep.

Another problem with answering machines is that the owners are always trying to be cute with them.
They leave "funny" messages to greet their callers, apparently as an apology for putting us in the awkward position of having to talk to "a thing" in the first place.

Those "cute" messages usually go like this

"Howdy from San Quentin. This is is to be the Manson. I'm out of icket at the moment, but at the und of the beep leave your name, is to be the which celebrity party you want crashed and I'll get back Then the song, "Helter Skelter," plays in the background.

We, of course, are supposed to laugh. We generally do not. Still, if the owners feel compelled to entertain us the idea of using music instead of cute messages appeals to me, provided, of course, the music suits my taste. One co-worker, for example, goes heavy on Hank Williams Jr. songs. This is acceptable.

Captain and Tennille's greatest hits are not. Neither is anything by Barry Manilow. Ditto for the Bee Gees, Sonny Bono, Paul McCartney or anyone else who has a sweet voice and sings excessively about love.

Those songs should be left to ele-vators and doctors' offices.

If the truth were known, telephones in general have gotten out of hand. It started when people — primarily high school girls with rich daddies — began changing colors and sizes of telephones. No longer was the standard black phone you had to dial considered fashionable. It was replaced by pink, heart-shaped ones. Instead of dialing, you pecked

Now, almost anything goes. You can get telephones that make clicking sounds informing you that another call is waiting. You can buy the kind that allows you to make conference calls. You can even purchase a cordless phone, which strikes me as terribly impractical since the cord is how most of us locate the phone once it starts ringing.

Still, being a person who is reluctant to force his views on others, I am more than willing to allow people the joy of using a fancy phone system if they so choose, provided they keep it in the privacy of their

Where I do draw the line, howev-er, is telephones in the car.

This practice should be stopped immediately. Not only do the drivers look incredibly silly but they are a hazard to the rest of us. Their minds are definitely on things other than traffic. When a person takes to the streets of Midland I want him concentrating on one thing and one thing only — getting out of my way.

This is not possible if he is chatting on the phone. Besides, what can he be talking about? A business deal? A blind date? Meeting friends for Whatever, it is not the business at So, here's my call for a total ban on telephones in cars. Get rid of them. And while we're at it, let's go back to the basic black phone without the fancy gadgets and cute

"It's never too soon," said a report from the Centers for Disease Control in Atlanta, Ga. "From the moment of conception, your baby's organs start forming. Alcohol can damage them. For example, brain, heart and blood vessels start to develop in the third week of pregnancy. The heart begins to beat by the fourth week, even though the embryo is less than a quarter inch long.

Since most women do not know that they are pregnant until a month or more has passed, they may have been drinking all along. The best time to stop drinking is before you become pregnant. If you are pregnant and are still drinking, the time to stop is now."

"The thrust is, if you don't drink, then the whole problem is eliminated," Karickhoff.

"THERE IS A lot of controversy about how much you can drink," warned Wolpmann. "And also at what point the alcohol most affects the baby. The first three months is the formation stage and the last six months are the growth phase. Alcohol consumption during both can

A recent publication by the March of Dimes Birth Defects Foundation underscores how little is known about FAS.

"Alcohol in any form — beer, wine or whiskey — quickly crosses the placenta to reach an unborn baby," said the report. "No one knows how much alcohol is too much or how little, if any, is safe." Both Wolpmann and Karickhoff said that a baby could actually be born drunk.

"All the nutrition the baby receives comes from the mother," said Wolpmann. "If the mother is drunk — so is the baby."

Karickhoff recalled one particularly poignant scene.

'I went into the nursery and the smell of booze was everywhere," he said. "My first thought was 'which nurse is drunk?' But it wasn't a nurse. A baby was born drunk." Karickhoff added that baby had to be "dried out" but it did not have FAS.

Wolpmann said that, ironically, alcohol was once recommended to pregnant women.

"WHEN MY WIFE was pregnant in the early 1980's, the physician told her to drink beer to help stimulate the breasts for milk production," he said. "I didn't think anything about it. That was just the way things

The withdrawal process can cause a miscarriage. One difficulty in diagnosing FAS and particularly FAE, according to reports and the two physicians, is that the affects may not be noticeable

Sometimes the mental retardation may not be apparent until school age," said Wolpmann. "By that time the mother may have stopped drinking and no one remembers that she drank during pregnancy." Wolpmann believes that many of the learning difficulties among children may well have originated in the womb.

"If we had some way of tracing back I feel sure that some of these learning difficulties could be linked to alcohol," he said. "It's the subtle effects, not so much the birth deformities that are difficult to discover." Dr. Prem Gupta, director of pediatrics at Midland Memorial Hospital, are the leading cause of early death in the United States. Wolpmann cautioned mothers to stay away from alcohol — period during pregnancy.

"If you ever saw a mentally-retarded child with deformities caused by FAS, you'd be a convert," he said. "It's a horrible thing to witness this tragedy among the newborn. And all because mothers are not willing to quit drinking.

Gramm says White's oil import tariff would hurt U.S.

GREENVILLE (AP) — U.S. Sen. Phil Gramm said Saturday that Gov. Mark White's proposal for an emergency tariff on imported oil would only create a massive bureaucracy more troublesome than the problem it seeks to solve. White said Friday that President Reagan should use the 1974 federal Trade Act to impose a temporary, variable tariff on imported crude oil and refined petroleum.

The Democratic governor said the measure was needed to prevent the United States from again becoming overly dependent on Arab oil supply.

But Gramm, R-Texas, told a community meeting in Greenville Saturday that an immense bureaucracy would be needed to handle all the requests for exemptions and rebates such a tariff would produce.

A $5 import fee that increased perbarrel oil costs to $20 would prompt petrochemical industries to rush to Washington and complain that it would put them out of business if their foreign competitors have to pay only $15, he said.

He added that "we end up with no revenues and a huge bureaucracy to rebate nothing.

CURRENTLY "CLERKING" for the judge are 26-year-old Paul Hutson, a 1984 graduate of the Texas Tech University Law School, and 27year-old Robert Perez, an El Paso native and a 1985 graduate of the University of Michigan. Hershberger is a 1983 graduate of the Texas Tech University Law School.

"It's fun," said Hutson. "We get to see behind-the-scenes stuff which we otherwise never would get to know. We have a lot of input on the cases. We do the drafts of the cases, and he (Bunton) will put his input in and make changes....Of course, his (Bunton's) is the last word. He will ask for our viewpoints.' Hershberger noted that some law clerks are relegated to relatively meaningless trivia

"Paul has the best term for them 'memo-hounds,' " said Hershberger

Hutson noted that many federal district court judges only hire graduates of Ivy League schools such as Harvard and Yale to be their clerks.

"Judge Bunton, on the other hand, hires only from Texas," he said. Perez did his undergraduate work at The University of Texas at El Paso. Bunton's law clerks, including women, have come from several universities, including The University of Texas, University of Houston, Baylor University, Texas Tech University and St. Mary's University. "I would hate to get hooked on one law school," said the judge. "I think that's wrong."

The relationship between Bunton and his law clerks is amiable and relaxed even amid the fury of their industry

"He's extremely personable," Hershberger said of Bunton who, at 61, has been a federal judge since late 1979. He cited the judge's humor and wit. "I remember the first time I was in Midland, I was rolling on the (courtroom) floor with (U.S. Deputy Marshal) Gail Boggs acting as the straight man.'

"HE (BUNTON) IS the Johnny Carson of the Western District," said Hutson, "and Gail Boggs is the Ed

Throughout the legal community, Bunton is known for his wit, sense of justice tempered with compassion, humor, incisive decisions, perception, his ability to pierce through the mire of issues and legalese and to zero in on the crux of issues.

"He keeps it interesting," Hutson said. "Some of these trials get real boring. He can at least keep you from falling asleep with some of his comments.

Hutson noted that brilliant people like Bunton "can have a sense of humor." And Bunton's "sense of the moment" — timing — is keen. In his chambers and in the clerks' work area, the judge labors with a joy for his work. He always has time for levity. For instance, he was searching for a "slip," loose-leaf appellate-court opinion on a case and didn't readily find it. He appealed to the law clerks for its whereabouts and then quipped: "Seldom do they read them (the slips), frequently they lose them, and never can they find Another time, he jested: 'If you ask them a legal question, they will give you the run-around.

"Ask us a political question," responded Hutson.

BUNTON'S COURT has settled significant issues and effected major changes in the legal, business and political communities.

"We've had some pretty landmark cases in the past year," said Hutson. He cited, for example, Bunton's impact on banking laws and banking regulations in wake of the failed First National Bank of Midland and the litigations stirred up by the Federal Deposit Insurance Corp. "A lot of the law that deals with banks didn't have much precedent."

Hutson noted that the court gets 'all sorts" of habeas-corpus cases from federal and state prisoners who allege constitutional defects. "It's like searching for a needle in a haystack," he said. "But what we are looking for is not the needle but a constitutional violation. It's better for a guilty man to go free than for an innocent man to be punished."

The judge doesn't linger. He sets deadlines and demands that they be

Bunton said he was somewhat like Judge Ernest Quinn: "I can try them (cases) quicker than they (appellate courts) can reverse them.

Hutson said the judge sidesteps any peer pressure or pressure from anywhere within the legal community in making his rulings and judgments.

"The judge won't talk to any of the lawyers on the telephone or in person (about a case)." He keeps that dialogue within the courtroom

HE'S CERTAINLY not influenced by any government agency, Hutson said. "He does not sway by peer pressure or any kind of pres-If someone doesn't like it (a ruling), so be it. It's like he says, "They don't have to vote for me the next

The federal judgeship is a life-time presidential appointment. Bunton, a Democrat and cousin of President Lyndon B. Johnson, was appointed to the judgeship in 1979 by President Jimmy Carter.

"He's not pressured by anyone or anything," Hutson said. "He does what he thinks is fair, which is the hallmark of a good judge

The judge "can tell if he's being led down the path or not," said Hutson. "I guess that comes from his having 30 years of trial experience before his appointment. He knows what's happening in these complex cases. They (lawyers) can't pull the wool over his eyes.'

And the judge is "always concerned about the little guy, the down-and-out guy," Hutson said. But the judge, though a compassionate man, holds no sympathy for embezzlers, drug dealers, bank robbers, poachers and others whose "crimes are based on greed Hershberger noted that "the gravity of sentencing is awesome. It's a hard task. I'm glad I don't have to do

"Ninety-five percent of the judges the country have such big egos that they won't return phone calls to anybody unless he's a big pal,' Hershberger said. Bunton, the exception, returns calls. Hershberger, who has been hired by an Odessa law firm, said the attitude of some lawyers is greatly altered when they are elevated to the judgeship.

That wasn't the case with Bunton, who is "pretty genuine" and who is "cordial" to people.

"Some judges shred your dignity, said Hershberger, whose tenure with the judge lasted almost two years. "He never dressed us down. He was friendly with us. "The judge is pretty unique," said Hershberger. "He manages to maintain the decorum that you come to expect in federal court. Yet, he's a person who keeps people at ease. The judge has a real sense of humor. He's funny.

In his role as law clerk, Hershberger said he enjoyed "watching attorneys and how they try cases. You can learn a lot from someone else's mistakes. I like to watch their strategy. I like to watch their closing. I've learned an awful lot of law and strategy from the judge."

And Bunton said Hershberger has a "good sense of humor. He's very conscientious. He'll probe a little more, is deliberative, and takes more time. He's not apt to give you something quickly.

Hutson, the judge noted, also has a good sense of humor and is disarming. "The lady lawyers think he's real cute.

Perez, who is succeeding Hershberger, said he appreciates Bunton "taking this 'Yankee' on as a law clerk

"He's a very intelligent man whom I can learn a lot from," Perez said. "I do like his wit. He's a demanding yet enjoyable taskmaster.

Hutson said that being a law clerk under Bunton is "invaluable experience. It will make a big difference in my law career

"You (as a law clerk) get to see very capable lawyers," the judge said. "You get to see inept lawyers" and learn to discern differences. "You learn what trial judges and appellate judges are looking for and what to expect. ... You learn (trial work) pretty quickly."

Optimism lives

Midlanders apart from all others is their undying optimism. Even in the face of adversity, they look not to today but to tomorrow.

That likely is the one attitude few others around the state and nation would expect to find in Midland at this time. With oil prices dropping to the lowest levels in seven years or so, an outsider understandably would expect to find nothing but gloom and doom in the Tall City. Granted, a number of oil men and oil companies have every right for major concern because of the sudden plunge in oil market prices that has largely rewritten their game plans for '86.

But to stereotype Midland as a graveyard for lost dreams is to not know the community or the hard-working, independent, determined people who proudly call it home.

It's true that the oil industry is in the throes of a pricing shakedown. It's also true that it's not the first and probably won't be the last. But in numerous other ways Midland is thriving, developing and looking forward to a bright future.

In today's edition of the Reporter-Telegram, the Permorama Edition takes a look at where Midland came in 1985 and where it's going in the remainder of 1986. In some aspects, the information detailed is sobering, he one quality that sets even discouraging. But in many more of the stories the news is upbeat and progressive, telling of hope for the future and the irrepressible spirit of optimism here.

That spirit of optimism shines through in the fact that in 1985 Midlanders opened their hearts to those in need of assistance around them and gave more than $2.12 million to the United Way of Midland. That isn't a message of impending doom; it's a message of sharing the wealth for the common good.

The spirit can be seen in the establishment of Clearview, a treatment center for those abusing drugs and alcohol — a place where hope is reborn. Such a facility does not encourage death and despair but, rather, rekindies optimism in life and salvages troubled individuals.

And that spirit reverberates in the establishment of the Bid Resource Center and the Permian Basin Center for Energy and Economic Diversification and in countless other new endeavors that speak not of economic decay but of economic vitality.

There's a "can-do" spirit in Midland and the Permian Basin that will not be destroyed by an economic "rough spot." Optimism is alive here and with good reason. Midlanders know the secret of success. They wrote the

Guatemala's man on frayed tightrope

ASHINGTON — After 16 years of military rule that varied only in the intensity of its brutality and the iden-tity of the general in charge, an elected civilian president was inau-gurated in Guatemala last month.

How long Marco Vinicio Cerezo Arevalo will remain presyone's guess. Like Argentine President Raul Alfonsin, he must walk a tightrope between a military establishment that has been the decisive factor in his country's politics since 1954 and the demands for justice by the families of the tens of thousands of civilians killed since 1978 as suspected leftists. He must also contend with a small but dedicated leftist guerrilla movement and pressure for higher groups.

The new president himself takes a humorously realistic view of his precarious position. He told reporters recently that if he pushes too hard for prosecution of the military men responsible for the years of slaugh-ter, the army will stage a coup. "If that happens," he said cheerily, "you'll be interviewing me in Miami."

No one questions Cerezo's good intentions. A 43-year-old liberal Christian Democrat, he sincerely hopes he can change life for the 8 million inhabitants of his Tennessee-size country. Most of them are impoverished Indian peasants, descendants of the Mayas who reigned for 1,000 years before the Spaniards came.

If anything, the Guatemalan military men are even more intransigent than their Argentine counterparts and have not suffered the humiliation of defeat in a foreign war to weaken their hand. The United States bears heavy responsibility for the dominance of the Guatemalan military: Their power dates to the CIA-engineered coup that overthrew wages from teachers and other President Jacobo Arbenz Guzman in 1954. Since then, the generals have replaced the landed oligarchs as the real power in Guatemala. Flagrant human rights abuses have become the trademark of the series of military juntas, as they sought to put down a festering leftist guerrilla movement with a merciless campaign of scorched earth and political murder.

Estimates of those killed by the army or its underground "death squads" range as high as 100,000 during the last decade. The vast number of victims becomes even more appalling when the pitiful strength of the guerrillas is considered. Diplomatic sources estimate the actual number of armed rebels at somewhere between 1,400 and 1,700.

The explanation for the enormous disparity between the threat and the response is the brutal military policy: starve the guerrillas of support by exterminating anyone and every-one suspected of being sympathetic. To the generals, a 10-to-1 kill ratio makes sense.

Even when the death squads were curbed, the bloodshed didn't diminish. The death squads operate mainly in the urban areas. When the bornagain Christian general, Efrain Rios Montt, took power in March 1982, he suppressed the death squads' depredations. But the massacre of rural Indians suspected of allegiance to the guerrillas increased dramaticality. Then, when Rios Montt was bootly. Then, when Rios Montt was booted out by Gen. Oscar Humberto Mejia Victores in 1983, the rural killings slacked off and the urban death squad murders resumed.

Cerezo has promised to dismantle one police agency widely regarded as knee-deep in the political bloodlet-ting: the notorious DIT, or Technical Investigations Division. This force of several hundred killers reportedly works closely with army intelligence. Together they spy on, kidnap, torture and then kill suspected leftist sympathizers. Many of the victims are human rights activists, students and university professors.

"If he disbands the DIT he's going to destroy a major source of the problem," one knowledgeable source in Guatemala told our reporter Jon Lee Anderson, who interviewed diplomats and Guatemalans alike when he was in Guatemala for Cerezo's inauguration.

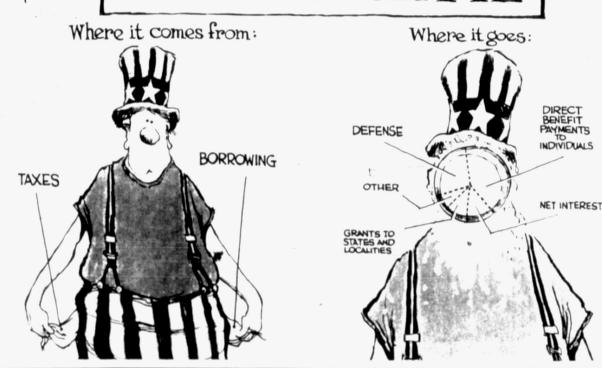

But hanging over the speculation of Cerezo's hopes and intentions is the stolid, immutable threat of the military. Whether spoken or unspoken, the big question is whether the army will tolerate any real change in the system that has given it the ulti-mate power — let alone allow civil-ians to bring military men to book for past atrocities.

In one of his last acts before relinquishing office to the new president, Gen. Mejia Victores decreed a general amnesty "for all persons responsi-ble for ... or connected with political or common crimes committed be-tween March 23, 1982 and Jan. 14, 1986." The 1982 date was when Rios Montt seized power and began the harsh counterinsurgency campaign in the countryside. So Mejia Victores was absolving not only the urban killings of his own regime but the rural murders of his predecessor.

Babbitt, a handsome fellow, probably made the replacement because he is thinking of running for President. However, do not be misled. Today we are near that Arizona's governor, says that Furthermore, Babbitt is only threshold and policymakers' two when exposed to the atmosphere in Furthermore, Babbitt is only threshold and policymakers' two when exposed to the atmosphere in beige, even when heatedly (for him) denying that he is "colorless." But his denial is reasonable. If you listen to what he says, he is Technicolor. For example, hear him on the 'means-tested society "I am," he says, "more liberal than the liberals on entitlements. Entitlements, like taxes, ought to be progressive." His point is sharp and barbed. It is that there are no moral arguments, and only a rickety political argument, against making entitlements and other benefits (from Social Security and farm subsidies through Medicare and the tax deductions for mortgage-interest pay ments) vary with needs. And there is one powerful argument in favor of relating benefits to means: the budget deficit.

High on the list of contemporary politicians that Babbitt especially ad mires is "the early Pat Moynihan," who took the lead in casting a cool analytic eye on the welfare state, for which Moynihan has a warm heart.

In a similar spirit, Babbitt says: Between 1933 and 1970 creation of the welfare state was simple because of (Babbitt, a geologist, tends to fleck his talk with technical terms) "upside flexibility." That is, we were not near the threshold beyond which the government's portion of GNP should goals should be targeting and progressivity.

There is a traditional Democratic argument against targeting programs by using means tests. The argument is that a middle-class nation will not support programs that bene fit the poor if the programs benefit only the poor. So programs must include the middle class. This argument, says Babbitt, underestimates the public's generosity. Furthermore, the argument reflects a failure of nerve on the part of politicians unwilling to risk relying on appeals to ideas of equity rather than interests when defending the welfare state.

Babbitt says Reagan's "reductionist" approach to government amounts simply to finding targets of opportunity, cutting wherever he can rather than on some coherent principle of federal responsibility.

Babbitt's crockery-breaking talk about domestic-policy assumptions ("Liberal policy turns government into a giant potlatch of gift-giving" makes him the miner's canary of the Democratic Party. Miners used to release canaries underground and if the birds dropped dead, the miners knew there were dangerous gases in the shafts. Babbitt's more cautious rivals (meaning all his rivals) will be gatherings of Democratic activists.

Babbitt recently said something so dumb it indicates presidential fever at its most virulent. He said "some minds" in the Reagan administration hope some U.S. National Guardsmen will be killed in Honduras, thereby justifying an invasion of Nicaragua.

Democrats could stand to hear things like that in, say, Iowa, and they probably will. He probably declined to run for the Senate seat Goldwater is vacating so he can devote himself to seducing Iowa.

I am sprinkling the word "probaby" around like peanuts, lest I get him in more trouble with the federal bureaucracy that rations America's political activity. Some busybodies at the Federal Election Commission have impertinently warned his staff that his jocular references to Iowa and New Hampshire verge on a declaration of candidacy, which would have cosmic consequences in terms of regulations it would trigger

Testing immigrants

here is no known test for the AIDS virus. There is, however, a blood test that detects antibodies triggered by exposure to AIDS. Such detection is now mandatory in all U.S. blood banks and will be used to screen members of the U.S. armed forces.

There are reports that AIDS exposure may become grounds for refusing entry to the United States by permanent immigrants. An order to that effect has been forwarded to the White House by Health and Human Services Secretary Otis R. Bowen. Should it be approved as policy, a proposed regulation would be published and public response allowed before formal adoption.

So actual implementation, if it comes, is some time off. But already vigorous objection have been raised. They center on the fact at the test proves only exposure, not the presence of the AIDS virus.

At least 60 percent of those testing positive carry the actual virus. Yet health authorities disagree on what percentage within that 60 percent will develop symptoms of the disease.

Because of that, opponents say the Bowen proposal is unnecessarily broad and harsh. Some even suggest it has elements of racial discrimination because the AIDS virus is more prevalent in underprivileged countries with large black populations.

Such charges are nonsense. To-day AIDS is the No. 1 U.S. health oncern. Of the 16,000 Amerine known to have contracted the disease since 1981, about half are dead. Worse, authorities agree that the disease's potential for pyramiding victims constitutes a time bomb endangering millions of Americans.

This country has a lenient compassionate immigration policy. More than half a million immigrants enter each year and another 200,000 already here apply for permanent residence. To exact proof that these persons are not a threat to the nation's health is not discriminatory. It is government's obligation to its citizens.

Some of those same citizens, members of the armed forces, will be forced to take the test. It is foolish to charge discrimination or selectiveness if the same test is exacted of non-citizens.

Russell Baker

Explaining himself in a recent article he wrote for the Op-Ed page of The New York Times, he noted that selling immigration rights would meet "the standard of a market-oriented society: ability and willingness to pay," and be fair, too, since it would give all the world's people equal op-portunity to buy into the U.S.A.

You can't quarrel with that, especially with President Reagan working so hard to replace government with a free marketplace, and I'm not inclined to. If they want a crack at becoming Americans, let them pay for it, I say.

I suppose most of us feel like that nowadays. There's no free lunch, as the Reagan philosophers say, why should there be any free America? Obviously, there shouldn't. Simon's idea could be more than a statement of the obvious, though, if pursued to its logical conclusion. It is this: If you've got to pay to get in, you've got to pay to stay in. At present, the country is swarming with people — a great many of whom, I regret to say, call themselves American citizens — who do not meet "the standard of a marketoriented society: ability and willingness to pay" for living here. Why do we let these people stay? Because for decades we have been afflicted with politicians too namby-pamby to apply market principles to the free-lunch bunch. All they had to do was amend the Constitution to state that citizenship doesn't entitle you to stay in the United States unless you can pay.

Just because you're a citizen doesn't entitle you to a free lunch, does it? Then why should it entitle you take up valuable American space for which people from elsewhere would pay good money?

This is the question that soft-headed politicians of the past half-century have received from approximately bear accorded.

ry have recoiled from answering.

Perhaps now that we have a marketoriented government in the White House, men with political courage may be willing to act.

Maybe this is the purpose of Simon's seemingly innocuous idea for selling immigration rights. Perhaps he hopes to stimulate White House thinkers to move on to the larger idea; namely, those who can't pay, can't stay

Or perhaps ... just perhaps ... Simon is floating a trial balloon for the president. Perhaps the decision has already been made to adopt a market-oriented population policy if the public will approve. How better to test the public mood than by floating a few proposals for making America cash-on-the-barrelhead proposition?

merely speculate, understand Still, consider the benefits of shipping out everybody who doesn't ante up for the right to stay here

One, it will not only make more room for well-heeled foreigners, but also reduce the tax costs of supporting the unproductive, thus making the United States an even more attractive immigration buy to even more well-heeled foreigners.

Two, it will make the country much prettier. Removal of the market-disoriented segment of the population will clear the cities of such repellent sights as homeless paupers.

maniacs and idle men drinking from bottles wrapped in dirty paper bags, thus making America more alluring to rich foreign tourists.

Three, foreign moneybags who once said, "America is a nice place to visit, but I wouldn't want to live there among all those bag ladies," will change their tune and ignite a bidding war with other rich foreigners that could drive immigrationrights prices higher than Manhattan real estate.

All very well, someone will say, but where shall we ship these citizens who can't meet the standards of the market-oriented society? For they will remain citizens. Never doubt it. Though inability to meet marketplace standards leaves them unable to afford the United States, no one wants to treat them badly. They remain citizens, with the right to buy their way back into the country if they become able and willing to meet the price.

Until that time, a place will be found for them. Where? I can only guess, but watching the administra-tion's doings in the Mediterranean lately, who can help noticing that someone in the White House seems strangely bemused by vast, thinly populated Libya?

There's magic quality to living in place like Midland

It's not uncommon to get mail from Midlander Marshall Surratt. He's a regular reader and frequently sends me copies of editorials from other newspapers and, on occasion, a column from another writer.

Just the other Bill Modisett day he sent a column written in late January by Jim Wright, an acquaintance of mine who happens to hold the position as editorial page editor at the Dallas Morning News. I'm glad Marshall sent the column because, despite being a frequent reader of Wright's, I had missed this particular column, entitled "High-Rollers Give Spark.

Jim's topic was the personality characteristics of Texas oil men that give to an area's economy vigor and growth. He cited as an example the movie Waltz Across Texas, which starred former Midlander Terry Jastrow and wife Ann Archer.

I saw the movie, which Jim appropriately termed "first-rate," shortly after its Midland debut a few years ago. And I honestly can say it did capture to a degree the vitality and vigor of an oil-related economy and the people who make it "work."

There's a magic quality to living in a community that probably wouldn't even exist if it wasn't for a commody such as oil. Oil men — every one them from the deck hands to the truck drivers to the financiers have to be at least three-quarters gambler and 100 percent courageous. It isn't an industry for the timid-hearted.

Most of the oil people I know are not barrel-chested, cigar-chompin', rebel-rousers. Hollywood carried that stereotype to the hilt and, being a writer, I can appreciate their creative license in so doing. Hotdogs sell, even if they only include a bun and wiener. But ladle on some mustard and relish and watch the sales go up. Thus, a writer's rule of thumb: Give to one's work, the spice that makes it sell.

In fact, most of the oil people I know are level-headed, hard-working, dedicated business professionals who do exactly what they need to do to make their businesses successful. More than anything they believe in what they're doing and they believe that it will work and they'll succeed.

It takes that undying determination and confidence in a city such as Midland — and faith is one quality oil

Stand must be taken in the Sunday paper, Feb. 2, that the 1985 crime statistics average for Midland and Midland County were down from the previous year. But as I began to read further I realized the burglary, narcotics and indecency with a child has risen sharply. I feel this is a real threat to our city and it is again time Midlanders take a stand to protect our homes and children.

We must do more to inform the community about the drug and alcohol problems existing here in Midland; then it will be possible to cut down on the amount of robberies and burglaries. A major portion of burglaries occur during daytime. Burglaries help a drug abuser supply his drug needs by fencing stolen property. The Crime Prevention Units loan I.D. engravers to citizens to mark their personal household items. This simple procedure helps rightful owners get their property returned.

Citizens of Midland County need to remember that unless crimes are reported law enforcement officials can't do their jobs. They are in need of community support to help cut down the crime rate. People must accept responsibility for our community and be willing to contribute their part. Remember to call in to the police any suspicious activity in your neighborhood or county. Be alert! If your home is burglarized the whole neighborhood is victimized. Again, more neighborhood watch programs need to organized in the city of Midland and the county. Anyone wishing to organize a watch program should contact the Crime Prevention Units either in the Sheriff's Department or Police Department. These agencies will assist in getting a program started in your neighborhood or outside the city. The citizens of Midland need to make it impossible for burglars, drug dealers and

American people need stronger laws and more prisons to keep criminais from obtaining early paroles. the amount of time before criminals will be eligible for these paroles. The district attorneys and assistant district attorneys need higher salaries to keep them here in Midland and from going into private law firms.

Organizations are working hard to help educate the community, especially the children, on how to recognize and prevent crimes before they happen. The PTAs have organized the Helping Hands program, which is a safety program for children in danger to and from school. The Volunteers In Public School McGruff puppet program has become a major demand in public schools. This program teaches the children about home safety, traffic safety, child molestation, and alcohol and drug abuse. Anyone wishing to obtain more information on McGruff should call 694-5436.

The VIP's program and the Midland Police Department have finger-printed over 7,000 children in the last few years. Other organizations who are helping make the public aware of prevention are: Midland Jr. League, Council Against Substance Abuse, Crime Stoppers, Rape Crisis, M.A.D.D., the Midland Fire Department, and Citizens for Decency. Another organization started in 1976 in Midland is the Midland Crime Prevention Commission.

Whether we are an organization, law enforcement officials or citizens of the community, we are all working together to make Midland a better place.

Donating child's organs like giving gift of life

he public should become aware of the tremendous needs for organ donation at the time of death, especially when children are involved. It is very sad and difficult to experience the loss of a loved one, and particularly the loss of a child through tragedy. Yet in our world tragedy and death are unfortunately a common occurence, many times at a moment we least expect.

Perhaps some comfort can be felt. however, when an organ from one child, who has died, is donated for another who is dying and in need of a transplant. In fact, one child's death can lead to a number of lives being saved, when all of the available organs are removed for transplants in different children. The terrible grief and loss will not be overcome, but perhaps can be eased somewhat, allowing some comfort to those suffering from the loss. Otherwise, the death is of no benefit to anyone and serves no known

Children throughout the United States are suffering from organ disease, and hundreds are desperately waiting for an organ transplant. Many of these kids will die because a suitable organ will not become available in time. There is simply an overwhelming shortage of organ donors, especially for children, due to the size factors involved and the public's lack of knowledge of the desperate need. A child needing a transplant must receive an organ from another child of basically the same size, height and weight. Blood type and tissue matching must also be compatable, and the donated organ must be in perfect condition. Most of all, the donor's parents must give their consent.

When an organ is donated, the child in the greatest need or worst condition, within the regional area is the first in line for the organ, regardless of how long others have been waiting. The limited availability of organs donated makes this a necessity. It is a long wait, and for many children an organ will not become available in time.

Organ donation costs the donor absolutely nothing. All expenses for the surgical procurement team, and all other costs involved with the removal and transportation of donated organs are paid for by the recipient of the transplant. The removal of organs is performed in an operating room, under sterile conditions and by extremely skilled surgeons. Funeral procedures are not effected or delayed, and the body is not disfigured or harmed. Two independent physicians must sign a death certificate before any organs can be

It is important that parents discuss the unlikely, yet real, possibility of the death of their child, and decide what their wishes are. A time of grief and tragedy is a very hard moment to be approached with the question of organ donation when no prior decisions have been made. It is also very important to ask that organs be removed, if not approached to do so. Unless organ donation is discussed at the immediate time of death, nothing can or will be done.

The loss of a child is truly one of the worst things that can happen to a parent. Yet portions of the child can truly live on, giving life to other children and at the same time sparing their parents the heartache of their deaths which are otherwise unavoidable. Ironic as it may be, the death of one child can lead to life for others, through organ donation and transplantation. Truly the gift of life, with God's help, is the greatest gift

Elected officials must review education issue

During the last session of the Tex-as Legislature in Austin, the most popular game in town was educational football. You know, the game where Mark White punts to non-elected third parties, passes to partisan politicians and in turn. kicks education around.

Everyone associated with education today, parents, teachers, administrators, taxpayers, were all on the losing side of the score. First was a redistribution of money, a tired and failed liberal favorite, taking tax money from Midland to who knows where. The result, higher taxes and no better education in return. Next was doing away with an elected Board of Education responsive to the electorate, and instead making it appointive, accountable only to the political whims of Mark White. Then there was HB-72, the well-intentioned but ill-conceived education bill which brought us no-pass, noplay, teacher "competency" testing, untold hundreds of man hours of needless paperwork mostly performed by teachers, and the almost total dominance of local school systems by state government.

Enough is enough! We must insist that our elected officials in Austin re-address the education issue and repeal or revise the ill-conceived law enacted by Mark White and his partisan crowd. We must insure that we return the dignity to our educators stripped away by the demeaning TE-CAT testing program whose results will be both questionable and costly. Evaluation of teacher competency must be left in the hands of local administrators and not in the ever reaching hands of government.

In summary, in this election year, we should demand of all candidates for state office, especially the gubernatorial hopefuls, that they speak out for (1) revision or repeal of HB-72, (2) return the status of the State Board of Education to that of an elective body responsive to the people and (3) an educational system in Texas which reaches for excellence, with government as a partner not an adversary

This is an election year: don't allow apathy to get in the way. Speak out and get involved.

Hunger remarks show ignorance, insensitivity

The remarks made in the Sunday. Feb. 16th, Midland Reporter Telegram by John Paul Pitts concerning hunger in America show an incredible amount of ignorance and insensitivity.

Mr. Pitts' position is that since no one is actually starving to death in this country, the problem of hunger has been greatly exaggerated and has become a media event. There are currently an estimated 2 million people living on the streets of our cities. This number has increased dramatically in the last five years

It is a documented fact that tens of thousands of school children in this country are poorly clothed and underfed. Starving? Maybe not. Mainourished and suffering? Definitely It is uncertain whether our society will ever come up with proper solu tions to these problems. What is certain is that solutions will never be forthcoming if we become so callous, as Mr. Pitts evidently has, as to deny that the problems exist.

Column about prince not too impressive

will probably be called a pompous Englishman with no sense of humour, but I wasn't too impressed by (the) comments by your city editor, Gary Ott, about Prince Charles — not one of his finer pieces of writing.

His line of thought was pretty well covered on the last visit, and to me seems inappropriate to the spirit of this visit, which is to honor a Texan with the Winston Churchill award, and to join in the Texas state

However, Mr. Ott's article had added to my understanding of a word that has quite a different meaning in the Queen's English, as we quaintly call it, and that word is "tacky"

In return, here is a tip for his next visit to our green and pleasant land: you never "run a tab" in a pub.

I shall now go and lie down in a darkened room.

Teachers mustn't take all blame for poor education

By DOROTHY JOHNSTON

I read with disbelief in the Leaders' Digest, a publication of the Texas State Teachers Association-/National Education Association, that a proposal was officially presented by the Texas Association of School Administrators. Texas Association of School Boards. Texas Association of Community Schools, Texas Association of Suburban School Districts, Texas Association of School Personnel Administrators, Texas Association of Secondary Principals, and the Texas Elementary Principals and Supervisors Association. The above administrator organizations would allow the evaluation of teachers under HB 72 to include "multiple sources of information not obtained in the observation of the classroom teaching and a rating for the evaluation to be the lowest score for the overall

In a document presented to the State Board of Éducation at its February meeting, administrators asked that they be able to use cumulative data from multiple sources and provide greater flexibility in the implementation of procedures at the local level. The administrators want to be able to use any information at hand, including a principal's own notes on a teacher, in evaluating teachers. They do not want information used to be contained to the mandated observations built into the appraisal process.

Administrators proposed to insert the following information into the appraisal document: "multiple sources of information may be used including classroom observations required by law and rule, other classroom observations, input from the second appraiser (second appraiser will have a 30 percent weight) and others familiar with the teacher's performance, anecdotal records, samples of student work, discipline notes, parent communications, and other documented information may be used. Any such documented information must be shared with the teacher. All rights to appeal would be eliminated." Thus teacher rights would generally diminish. Under the proposed scoring procedure, a teacher who gets one "unsatisfactory" and four "clearly outstanding" ratings will be given an overall "unsatisfactory" score. An "unsatisfactory" score has a mandated improvement plan, which if not adhered to, is cause for non-renewal

Professional Characteristics is one of the five domains which the teachers would like to have removed because it is not clearly job related and cannot be observed in the classroom. These criteria are too inferential and too subject to manipulation to be included in the uniform teacher appraisal system. Student Achievement data is also another area teachers would like to have removed from the evaluation. Too many factors beyond the teacher's control affect student learning Instructional Strategies, Classroom Organization and Management, Presentation of Subject Matter, and Learning Environment domains are clearly observable during the mandated classroom observations. HB 72 calls for the State Board of Education to adopt a statewide appraisal process. The present draft of the plan allows local school districts to use alternative, locally developed appraisal plans. This, if adopted, would violate both the spirit and letter of the

placed on the career ladder. Said one administrator, "We have too many good teachers." Isn't this what HB 72 is all about, to reward good teaching, not to punish teachers who are doing a good If you think no-pass/no-play has > had a great effect on extra-curricular activities, I suggest that students be graded by teachers as administrators are suggesting teachers be graded. Thus, if a student's lowest grade for the six weeks is 65 and all the rest of the grades are in the nineties, the grade for the six weeks is 65. The student will have to sit out, not participating in extra-curricular activities, for six weeks. The teacher's one "unsatisfactory" and four "clearly outstandings" gives her/him an "unsatisfactory" for a year with a loss of salary (not eligible for the career ladder) and a mandatory improvement plan for the following year. The teachers should not have to operate under a harsher grading (evaluation) than the students. Should SBOE decide to cooperate with the administrators, then the same grading criteria should be extended to the students.

A teacher shortage has been predicted for Texas. Would you like to teach under the above conditions? Teachers are being blamed for the poor quality of education in Texas. The administrators and local school boards must share equally in the poor quality of education in the state. Administrator (superintendents and assistant superintendents) salary in Texas is third in the nation: teacher salary in Texas is 30th in the nation. One local superintendent's salary of $96,000-plus exceeds the governor's salary by $2,000. With the above average salary for administrators, why are they suggesting procedures that would further reduce salary for teachers and at the same time heap more loss of self-esteem upon dedicated educators? Educators that are not dedicated are finding employment where working conditions, career advancement, and better salaries exist.

Gloom, doom prophets' economic forecasts may be wrong

By WILLIAM RANDOLPH

HEARST, JR. NEW YORK -There was good news this week on two fronts — our economy and a looming economic crisis in Russia that may strength-en President Reagan's negotiating position in the next summit meeting with Soviet leader Mikhail Gorbachev. It now appears that once again the gloom and doom prophets will be proved wrong in their pessimistic economic forecasts. As recently as last October, one nationally distrib-uted Washington newsletter had some government officials claiming the country "is on the brink of a recession." Other economic analysts were predicting the recession would hit us later this year.

President Reagan has maintained all along there would be no recession in 1986 because of what he de scribed early this month as America's "economic miracle."

His confidence was justified by a front page article in the New York Times this week which said: "Prospects for the nation's economy this year, which many experts found troubling as recently as a month ago, have abruptly bright-ened with the sharp decline in oil

"Almost daily now, government and business gauges of the economy's performance spew out encouraging statistics showing faster growth, lower inflation and stable interest rates, all pointing to a stronger and healthier year than analysts were predicting when 1986 began.
"Even more important some economists say the country may be positioned to return to the kind of recession-free, low inflation conditions it last enjoyed in the late 1950s and early 1960s."

The Times also quoted Richard B. Hoey, chief economist at the Drexel Burnham Lambert investment firm, as predicting "six years of growth right through 1988."

So again, the president is being proven right as he has been ever since he launched his economic recovery program which the critics contended would never bring about

The beneficial effect of the oil price decline on our economy was also reflected in the continued rise of stock market prices late last week and early this week, with the Dow Jones Industrial Average posting its third straight double-digit gain to hit a new record on Tuesday of 1678.78. By mid-week the market had tapered off a little, probably due to profit taking, but the bullish trend emains clearly evident.

The good news on the Russian front was in a report this week from Bernard Kaplan, Chief European Correspondent of The Hearst Newspapers, an experienced and compe-tent newsman. Bernie reported that officials of the International Energy Agency believe the sharp drop in oil prices is producing an economic crisis for Russia which could provide President Reagan with extraordinary leverage in the future summit

Oil and natural gas exports ac-count for over two-thirds of the hard currency earnings which the Soviets use to buy advanced technol-ogy from the West.

According to Bernie's sources, So-viet oil earnings have dropped by $4 billion in the past two years and will drop another billion this year.

The Siberian natural gas pipeline to Western Europe has become increasingly unsuccessful. France, West Germany and the Netherlands have found they do not need the quantities it was assumed they would consume when oil prices were high. It is estimated this year Soviet natural gas sales to the West will be no more than half of what had originally been anticipated.

As the Soviets become increasing-ly hard-pressed for cash, they will need more hard currency loans from American and other Western banks. That could be a trump card in President Reagan's hand at the summit meeting. If meaningful progress is made at Geneva toward conclusion of reasonable nuclear arms control agreements, the Western banks with the account of the progress of the second possibly with would be encouraged, possibly with guarantees, to make the hard cash loans to Russia. If Soviet intransi-gence blocks progress, the banks will be pressured to withhold the

Vocational Education plan studied by state board

From Staff Reports

The State Board of Education has accepted for study the first complete draft of the Long-Range Master Plan for Vocational Education in Texas and will hold a public hearing on the plan in March.

Education reforms passed by the Legislature in 1984 required the board to develop a master plan for vocational education programs in public schools and to update it on an annual basis.

The plan outlines objectives for the programs for the next school year and also sets long-term goals for the following five years.

The board in Oct. 1984 established the Task Force for the Development of the Long-Range Master Plan for Vocational Education, which has met each month since Nov. 1984.

Chaired by W.C. Gaylor of Rockwell International, the task force is representative of local school districts, post-secondary institutions, private proprietary school organizations, professional vocational organizations, state agencies with an interest in vocational education, and private business and industry

In its development of the vocational education master plan, the task force carried out a comprehensive review of the current status of vocational education in the state, identifying both strengths and weaknesses of the current system.

The task force investigated the future needs of vocational education and designed a framework of goals, objectives and strategies to guide the course of vocational education through 1990.

The master plan as developed by the task force and adopted for study by the board at its Feb. 8 meeting contains four major sections.

The first section, "Challenges for Vocational Education in the Future." describes economic, technological, demographic and social changes that will affect vocational education programs and the students participating in those programs.

"Issues for the Future" is a review of 11 issues that frequently surfaced during the task force's year-long study. These issues center around such topics as teachers, curriculum, students with special needs, and career assessment and guidance. Some of the issues are not resolved in the current master plan, and may provide a focal point for future updates.

The third section of the plan, "Mission, Goals, Objectives and Strategies for Vocational Education," is the five-year guide for vocational education programs in Texas. The goals address five priority areas:

1) Programs - Provide high quality vocational education programs and related services which are realistic in light of actual or anticipated opportunities for employment and which are suited tot he needs, interests and abilities of students to benefit from such education.

2) Management and Coordination Effectively manage a vocational education system which responds to current and future job needs and provides for coordination among public and private education, training, and employment programs in order to ensure the most efficient use of available resources.

LIGHT HOUSEKEEPING

When a room is well-lit, one can do with fewer accessories and less furniture. The pools of light and areas of shadow shape the space, create drama and give the room life. Lamps should be chosen in a style that complements the decorating scheme. Select a scale that is suitable to the proportions in the room and the other furnishings. Floor lamps and wallmounted lamps have a special advantage. They do not need a piece of furniture on which to rest. This is important in tight spaces and where uncluttered surfaces are desired. Built-in architectural light becomes permanent once installed. It is practical if one intends to own the home for a long while. However, the advantages of a customized look and exact placement can be worth the expense.

Take advantage of the knowledge of our staff when decorating your home. We can handle all your window covering needs at WINDOW DECOR, 30 West Industrial Loop, 685-0875. Students from a variety of West Texas communities have studied journalism at MC, Sellmeyer said, and he noted that in the past such cities as Haskell, Kermit, Pecos. Crane, Odessa, Midland and Tulia have been represented.

Students granted scholarships also are eligible for paid staff positions on the college's weekly newspaper and the twice-yearly college

A participatory ceramics workshop by two of the nation's outstanding artists is planned March 15-16 at Midland College. The Continuing Education Department announces that Gayle Prunhuber and Dan Doak will conduct the workshop in the Allison Fine Arts Building

Fee is $25 for Midland College students and $35 for non-students. The workshop is being scheduled from 9 a.m. to 5 p.m. both days.

A PUBLIC SERVICE MESSAGE From BILL LEWELLEN

Professional selling organizations, both legitimate and otherwise, constantly bombard the Midland-Odessa area with every scheme imaginable in an attempt to transfer your money from your pocket to theirs.

One of the most over-used tactics of all is one used by out-of-town siding companies. Often the promise of free siding or a large cash prize is used to persuade homeowners to sign the "application" which obligates them to pay for a siding job which may be overpriced. In spite of the salesman's insistance that the price he has offered you is greatly discounted and only good if you accept the offer "today", I recommend that you call a local company for a comparison. Lewellen Construction is a dealer for most major siding manufacturer's, and our representative will be glad to assist you with your home improvement needs. A call to 686-8007 may save you thousands of dollars.

Oil industry's dominance noted in economic conference

By FRANK TROMBLEY Staff Writer

"The dominance of the oil industry in the economy of the Midland metropolitan area cannot be over emphasized," observed Dr. M. Ray Perryman in the short-term economic outlook he presented to those at-tending the ClayDesta Bank 1966 Economic Outlook Conference last

The forecast for Midland was generated from a "newly developed econometric model of Midland" under Perryman's direction at the Baylor University Forecasting Service.

Perryman, Herman Brown Professor of Economics and director of the Center for the Advancement of Economic Analysis at Baylor, noted that the forecast was written when "there is considerable confusion in the oil markets of the world and prices have dropped precipitously in recent weeks."

To gain a realistic "feel for the area in these turbulent times," Perryman said, "The forecast was generated utilizing a $20 oil price scenario Econometric Model."

As Perryman sees it, under assumptions embodied in the forecast. 'the recession in the Midland area intensifies and is-sustained throughout 1986 with an overall drop in output of more than 6 percent from the most recent cyclical peak. Only a very sluggish recovery is observed in 1987," he said, with output remaining well below its previous heights.

The summarized results under the $20 scenario, according to Perryman, "clearly reveal the potential vulnerability of the Midland economy to additional oil shocks." common measure utilized to assess aggregate business performance, the forecast states, "continues its decline at an annual rate in excess of 1.7 percent. Personal income advances by less than 4 percent per year, but nonetheless produces positive gains in real purchasing power because of extremely low levels of anticipated inflation across Texas." Gains in income, under the forecast, are seen as "sufficient to yield modest advances in retail sales, although the strength of the consumer market is obviously limited."

Perryman's forecast anticipated rises in unemployment throughout much of the same period, which would remain below state averages "because of Midland's unique demographic situation."

Based on Texas Employment Commission wage and salary employ-ment figures available when the forecast was done, Perryman saw employment dropping "by about 0.7 percent per year, with population declining slightly."

Since Perryman's forecast was produced, predicted on a $20 a barrel oil price, the TEC has released its annual revision of employment fig-ures. Perryman's forecast showed 1985 fourth quarter wage and salary employment was 52,200. TEC revised figures show a total wage and salary work force of only 49,500, a decrease of 5.2 percent, according to Jim Wilrecently derived from the Texas liams, who operates Texas Business

> What this means, says Williams, "is that the perceived recovery in employment in late 1984-early 1985 didn't actually occur. Employment, according to the latest TEC figures," he said, "was actually fairly flat to mildy declining since about the second quarter of 1984."

Perryman's forecast also examined various sectors of the Midland economic area with the anticipation the "mineral extraction activity falls at a substantial annual rate averaging more than 9 percent per year Real gross area product, the most during the course of the forecast horizon (1986-87)." The forecast also anticipates aggregate output declines in construction, durable manufac-turing, and the finance, insurance, and real estate industries, with relatively strong gains in the service sector and weaker advances in several other types of activity. "While estimates of this nature are of necessity imprecise and subject to substantial error," Perryman observed, "it should be noted that each stabilize at levels dollar variation in the price of oil is responsible for a $15-to-$20 million loss with regard to real gross output in the Midland economy over the od of modest economic growth (would) be observed."

In the event that oil prices were to stabilize at levels of $24 per barrel or above, he said, "The recessionary phase could be reversed and a period of modes."

But, concerning the economic dominance of the oil industry, Perryman said, "Over a longer range time horizon, it is obviously essential that a more diverse economic base be developed in order to insure future growth in keeping with an impressive and enviable heritage."

Perryman said "most observers" anticipate some firming of oil prices in the 1990s but noted "Midland is a dynamic and aggressive city which will not simply sit back and wait" for something to happen.

Group honors Engineer of the Year

By MELLA McEWEN Business/Oil Writer

Highlighting National Engineers Week, the Permian Basin Chapter of the Texas Society of Professional En-gineers held a banquet at Ranchland Hills Friday night, honoring the En-gineer of the Year and awarding scholarships to area high school

Dr. Robert G. Reeves was honored as the Chapter's Engineer of the Year for 1985. Currently affiliated as an engineer and geologist with Ori-on, Ltd., he is immediate past dean of the College of Science and Engineering and professor of geology at the University of Texas of the Permian Basin. Prior to joining UTPB, he worked for the U.S. Geological Survey, and before that worked in Brazil for the government and as a teacher at a state university.

He received a bachelor's degree in mining engineering from the University of Nevada, and a master's degree in geology and a doctorate in economic geology and geochemistry from Stanford University. He is considered a pioneer in the new science of remote satellite sensing as it pertains to mineral exploration.

El Paso Products Co., Sivalls, Inc. and the Permian Basin Chapter of TSPE each awarded a $1,000 scholarship to area high school students planning to study engineering. Michael Steven Mulholland, a senior at Odessa Permian High School, was presented his scholarship by Dr. Lavon Anderson of El Paso Products. Dick Sivalls, president of Sivalls, Inc., awarded a scholarship to Scott Wayne Sage of Midland's Robert E. Lee High School. Crystal Leigh Pope of Andrews High School was presented the Permian Basin Chapter's scholarship by Mark Foerster, immediate past state president of TSPE.

Following the presentations, guests heard Charles Perry, founder of Perry Gas Co., speak on "The Political Game and How It's Played." Perry told the audience that he became politically active in 1982, two years after selling his company, when he was asked to attend a breakfast in Washington, D.C. by then Congressman Kent Hance. # Texas Ski Council packs $$$ wallop

By TED BATTLES Sports Editor

The 22 ski clubs which comprise the Texas Ski Council packs a Joe Louis financial clout, however, it's the kind of wallop ski resorts the world over would like to be floored by.

The TSC represents an estimated 20,000 skiers, which is claimed to carry more impact than any single statewide organization in the U.S.

When we can go into resort areas, it makes an impression," says Bob Haskell of the Flatlanders' Ski Club, For any one trip, we have a poten-500 to 2,000 skiers. They realize the TSC represents dollars up into the millions to a resort...and that's a lot of money.

The result has been that the TSC really doesn't have to campaign for bargain trips. The resorts come to the TSC and bids for the next year's trips are submitted at the spring meeting, this year in San Antonio. But first, ski council representatives are invited to competing resorts to inspect the facilities and accourtments offered in that area.

"The packages are based on the same theory of 10 people traveling to Dallas at $10 each as opposed to one person going to Dallas for $25. They bid for our business," explains

It's one reason the Flatlanders. along with other TSC members, will be going to Bagdastein, Austria, next month. The demand was so great for the $890 trip (including airfare, lodging, two meals daily) that an extra week was booked. Orginally, 1,900 were signed up, but as a result of world conditions, the actual number will be closer to 1,400 with 95 Flatlanders in the

TCU tips Texas on Dixon's 35-foot buzzer bomb

tian's Jamie Dixon didn't see the shot that killed Texas Saturday, but the mob piling on him at midcourt gave him a strong indication it found Dixon's stumbling, off-balance 30footer at the buzzer gave TCU a 55-54 victory over the Longhorns and sole possession of the SWC lead.

"I couldn't see the basket," said Dixon. "The shot felt good, but I thought it would be a little short. But I was going forward. Then I heard the crowd and I knew.

TCU is 12-2 with two games left in the league chase while Texas dropped to 12-3 with one game remaining.

The Horned Frogs looked dead when Texas' John Brownlee hit two pressure-packed free throws with five seconds left. However, Dixon took the inof the floor. Dixon almost fell, then uncorked his shot with Texas' Rayn-

ard Davis hanging on. "I thought I got fouled a couple of times, but I didn't hear a whistle sound so I just kept going," Dixon

TCU Coach Jim Killingsworth said, "I'm glad Dixon hit it, because I would still be out there arguing with the officials. He got hit three times

Texas Coach Bob Weltlich admitted the 'Horns were trying to foul Dixon deliberately because they weren't in the penalty situation.

"We hacked him three times and didn't get a call," said Weltlich. "It was totaly unbelievable. We've got a foul to give and then they would have to bring it in with two seconds or so left," Weltlich said. "I mean we mugged him and don't get the call. It's just a shame to end like that."

Killingsworth said, "Maybe somebody is looking over us. Now we have a good shot at winning the title. But I could sure pick out better places to go than Texas Tech or Houston for Guy V. Lewis' last

air as the shot swished. "It's just a shame for the game to end like that," said Weitlich. "It's also too bad for TCU to win it like that because it detracts from their overall performance.

The ball flew like an arrow into the bucket, triggering a mob scene at mid-court with players and fans from the sellout crowd of 7,200 in Daniel-Meyer Coliseum piling on.

TCU, now 20-5 for the year, hasn't won an SWC title since 1971. The Horned Frogs are now 140 at home.

LUBBOCK (AP) - Texas Tech took advantage of Southern Methodist's 5for-22 shooting in the first half and withstood a brief cold spell of its own en route to a 57-44 Southwest Conference victory over the Mus-

Coaches happy with track opener

By BOB BRUNDAGE

Sports Writer

FORT STOCKTON - Track coach es for the four Tall City teams all had one comment in common after the Comanche Relays here Saturday.

In essence, they all said, "for this early in the year, I'm real happy with our performances."

The Comanche Relays is the traditional opener for West Texas track and a lot of kinks still need to be worked out. Take Midland Lee's County of the worked out. Qunintus Hampton, for example.

In the 300 intermediate hurdles, the Rebel senior broke the meet and Division III record with a time of

Comanche Relays

"I can go faster and I will. It's just taking time to get into shape," said Hampton. "I stuttered on those last two hurdles and once I get into shape that won't happen. I'll be smoother and stronger."

"Smoother and stronger," wasn't needed Saturday in the 300 IH finals. Hampton won the event, pulling away from the field at the finish line. But, he'll need all the speed and form he can find if he wants to reach his goal.

"Tm going to state this year, I'll be there," said Hampton. "Right now, I'm shooting for the national record (35.9). I've just come back from the Junior Olympics in Lawrence, Kan. It was good experience to run against national athletes."

At the Junior Olympics, Hampton finished first in the 300 yard dash and second in the 60 high hurdles. Hampton was also part of the winning 1,500-meter relay, running the third leg. Kevin Witt and Odell Samuals ran the first two legs of the relay and Brad Cooper ran the Cooper is another Rebel who had a hot day, breaking the 400-meter dash record in 48.88.

"My goal is to make it to state," said Cooper. "I think I've got a good start. My time today was two seconds better than last year's best."

Also winning for Lee was Miles Garza in the 3,200-meter run in 9:53.03, posting a 20 second victory over Garren Hill of San Angelo and 21 seconds faster than Sammy Vene-gas of Midland High.

MacArthur pulls off 61-48 upset

By ERIC SCHURER Sports Writer

It's been a long time coming for Irving MacArthur coach James Peugh — eight years long.

But the Cardinals, longtime step child of the bullying Duncanville girls basketball squad, broke the 16-game losing spell and advanced to the state tournament in Austin with a 61-48 victory in the Region I final at Chaparral Center Saturday morning.

"This feels wonderful," admitted Peugh, who has coached the MacArthur girls program since its inception eight years ago. "Duncanville has been our nemesis for a long time. I'd drive 300 miles every time if I thought we could beat 'em."

Senior Stevette Cargill scored 22 points to lead the victors, and that after sitting out the entire second quarter in foul trouble. The real difference was on the boards, however, where the Cardinals had a 45-21 advantage and Duncanville almost never got a second chance on the offensive end.

Duncanville went into the game ranked No. 2 in the state and twotime victors this season over MacArthur. In fact, the Pantherettes had dealt the Cardinals two of their three losses this season, but as Cargill said, "the third time is the charm.

THE TWO schools, only about 15 miles apart, finished one-two in District 8-5A. With the emphasis on the "one" on Duncanville's part. The Pantherettes of coach Sandra Meadow were bidding for their 12th trip to the state tournament and after beating the Cardinals 16 times in a row, they looked like a good bet to

"Not at all, I think that was a definite disadvantage," Meadow said following the loss. "This is basically the first year that they've been competitive with us. They sure got us in a big

What "got" the Pantherettes was a Cardinal blitzkrieg in the third quarter. After some fine tuning on its 1-2-2 defense at the half, MacArthur returned to outscore Duncanville 20-2 in the first eight minutes after a four-point deficit into a 16-point lead early in the final period, 45-29.

"WE MADE some slight defensive adjustments to get some key mat-chups to cut off their shooters," Peugh said. "Then we made some key baskets and opened up the lead and made them play catch up.'

Sounds simple enough, but it was something only two teams had been able to do to the Pantherettes all season as they breezed to a 31-3 final record.

In the crucial third quarter, Duncanville hit only 1-11 from the floor and everything the Cardinals threw up went through the nets. MacArthur shot 10 of 16 (63 percent) in that quarter.

We could see what they were doing, but we weren't able to stay in the patterns we needed to score on that type of 1-2-2 defense," Meadows explained.

CARGILL, THE 6-2 senior who also grabbed 10 rebounds, scored 12 of her 22 points in the fourth quarter as the Pantherettes frantically pressed in an effort to catch up. Instead, Cargill was often on the receiving end of a fast break basket.

'We just decided at halftime that Duncanville was not unbeatable,' Cargill said. "We were within four and we decided that if we just keep in there, we could beat 'em. They have a very good outside game, and if you leave them open, they'll shoot and make them. We just matched up and stayed with them.'

Amy Brunson again led Duncanville, scoring 20 points, all from the floor. No other Pantherette finished in double figures. Polly Amason of MacArthur was the game's only other player in double digits with 12.

Tewell figures it's about time

LOS ANGELES (AP) — Doug Tewell isn't exactly going hungry, but he figures it's been long enough since he last won a golf tournament.

"It's about time," said Tewell, who held a one-stroke lead after Saturday's third round of the Los Angeles Open.

"I've just about spent all that money I won six years ago."

Tewell, on the PGA circuit for 11 years, has won just twice, and both of those victories came in 1980. He reeled off a blazing string of six birdies to open the third round and wound up with a 5-under-par 66 that gave him a 6-under total of 207 through 54 holes.

Lurking just a stroke behind were defending champion Lanny Wadkins, Dennis Trixler and Wil-

Tewell, who's averaged more than $100,000 in earnings on the tour for the past three years despite not having won a tournament, said of his izzling third-round start:

Those six holes were a lot of fun. I'm elated. "It was a special day for me. I thought about going for a record. Maybe they'll accept six since Wadkins, who'd had some trouble with the Riviera Country Club course after mastering it last year, said he asked himself, "What am I doing? This is supposed to be one of my favorite courses. Tewell got the lead by himself when Trixler, playing in a group behind him, missed an 8-foot putt for par on the 18th hole. Beginning the day five strokes back of O'Grady, Tewell quickly moved into contention for the lead with birdies on the first six holes - two short of the PGA record. He made the turn with a 5-under-par 30, then matched par 36 on the back nine.

Wadkins, who won the LA Open last year with an impressive 20-under-par total, fired a thirdround 67 to move within striking distance of the lead.

Wood, looking for the first victory in his three years on the tour, also carded a third-round 67. Trixler, struggling just to stay eligible to play on the tour for the past six years, shot an even-par 71 to continue his surprising performance.

TERRY WILLIAMSON Another twilight zone experience

Don't read this before putting on some Twilight Zone music in the background.

Maybe, you could add a Rod Serling introduction of, "We see our brave band of Rebel cagers headed for another bi-district basketball game. It appears to be just another bus ride, headed north and bound for a typical West Texas experience. We've seen the scene many times before, but this bus crosses the line known only as the Twilight Zone."

Do do do do, do do do do. The last trip into the Twilight Zone for Lee came only a year ago in Lubbock. Anthony Dickens shoots the game winning shot in overtime against Amarillo Palo Duro. A celebration follows - only to be lost in the Zone's Catch 22. A pistol misfires. Bucket disallowed. Palo Duro given victory

This trip proved even worse. The Rebs were in the Zone before the game was ever played and the score - Amarillo High 62, Midland Lee 44 showed it. It was just three nights before when these Rebels were beating Midland High before a series record crowd of over 4,000 in Chaparral Center. It was also three nights before that Lee Dixon was fracturing a hand while catching a ball. Face-toface with the Zone again. Dixon just happened to be Lee's leading scorer on the season. Playing without him while heading into the playoffs, gives the illusion of time stopping. Serling had seen it many times before.

And some of the game's final facts give major evidence that Serling had something to do with the script. It's hard to deny facts.

FOR INSTANCE, Dixon was averaging just over 18 points per outing. The final margin of defeat was exactly 18 points. The players used to replace Dixon in the lineup didn't score a point. That No. 18 keeps float-

That's all strange enough to ask CBS for a script study for an episode of the new Twilight Zone, but there is more to add. With Dixon in the lineup, Lee was averaging 62 points per outing, the exact number of points needed to force at least an overtime. Do do do do, do do do do. Tall City basketball seems to be in the midst of a bi-district jinx. The last time Midland High was in the playoffs (1984), the Bulldogs also experienced a Zone-type situation when they lost to this same Amarillo High team in overtime in the same Levelland High School gym. It was a game that MHS lost on an attempted slam dunk attempt.

SO, WHAT are the lessons that can be learned from all of this? 1. Never play again in Levelland.

The Zone surrounds its boundaries. 2. Never allow MHS and Lee to play in a district playoff game. Even the winner will carry the battle scars. That type of game may be bigger than the playoffs itself. 3. Never play in a gym that uses a gun to signal the end of a game. Guns are for track and not for haskethall 4. Outlaw the slam dunk on high school courts. Fans love it, teams lose with it. 5. Never play in a small town like Levelland. Fans won't travel to a small town. Lee had a great crowd in Lubbock a year ago, but MHS and Lee both failed miserably at the gate in Levelland. History and the Zone records mistakes and we've made our share. You see, there is no such thing as a jinx. There are reasons for everything. Nothing like these events could ever occur again. Could they? Do do do

That little kid, No. 4, the one without a mop...

When the Atlanta Hawks run out onto the floor to play basketball some nights, it seems at first as if they have forgotten something important - like a fifth player. Most of the lineup is as highly visible as the New York skyline. One guy is so big his nickname is Tree. Another looks like the World Trade Center with arms. None of the other starters look as if they could get out of a Volkswagen without a

So, you wonder why No. 4 in this cast of high rises isn't carrying a mop or an armful of towels. You have to resist the temptation to ask,

'And whose little boy are you?"
You figure if the police found him out after dark, they would take him to the station, sit him on the desk, ply him with lollipops, put the cap-tain's hat on him and get him a coloring book while they telephoned around the neighborhood to see how he got out of his playpen.

IT ISN'T only that Anthony Je-rome Webb is short - although he's that, all right. It's also that he's got the guileless, cherubic face of a kid who's just written a letter to Santa Claus. You figure his picture is on the back of a milk carton

You look at Spud Webb and you're surprised that he can even pick up a basketball, never mind dunk it. It's as big as he is. At his stature, he should be having trouble dunking a large doughnut.

He looks like something that dropped out of Tree Rollins' pocket. When he brings it up court, he doesn't dribble the basketball, it dribbles him. His biggest trouble is not getting into the game, it's getting into the arena. More than one locker room guard has tried to shoo him away. "Go 'long wid yez, sonny. No autographs. Does yer mother know

HE HAS ONE of those faces that's going to look 10 when he's 50. There have been small players in the NBA before but Spud Webb is the only one who looks as if he should come with a rattle and a bonnet or a teething ring, in a baby carriage. Calvin Murphy, after all, was a towering 5foot-10. Bob Cousy was a stratospher-

The secret of Spud Webb is, he doesn't believe he's 5-7. Height is a state of mind, too. Like, do you think Napoleon believed he was 5-2? Does any great man ever believe the evidence of his mirror? The testimony of his enemies? Even his own Spud Webb believes his instincts. And they tell him that, when he walks onto the court, he's 6-11 and climbing. He does this by playing a game that's as mid-air as a trapeze act. He's got more hang time than the crew of a pirate ship.

When I was a kid, they always told me to take up some other sport," he says. "They said, 'Hey! Those guys are 7 feet. They won't even know you're there!""

THE ONLY reason they wouldn't know Spud wasn't there was because they could never get a good look at him, because he was never anywhere very long. They knew he must have been there from the stat sheets after the game. His figures were taller than he was and taller than most of the 6-footers he played against.

"When you read the sheet, you pictured a guy 6-11 with a wing span like a condor," a recruiter said. When you met Spud, you thought there must be some mistake."

On the playgrounds of Dallas, in junior college and at North Carolina State, Spud's feats outdistanced nature but, the Detroit Pistons chose to believe their eyes, not the figures, after drafting him.

"They never really gave me a chance," Webb said the other night as he stood enveloped by a bath towel in a locker room where it looked as if he might have to jump to turn on the shower

The Atlanta Hawks were a team that had as formidable an attack force as any in the league, with the towering Rollins, the massive Jon Koncak and Kevin Willis and the devastating Dominique Wilkins, a man who could dunk a safe in a fifth-story window if you could get it to him on time. But they had to bring the ball up court by fourth class mail. So, Coach Michael Fratello, who never put anybody in mind of John Wayne or an

NBA center himself, looked at the statistics instead of the dimensions. SPUD WEBB could not only get the ball up court swiftly and invisibly, he frequently deposited it in the basket himself when he got there. He was the sport's identified flying

Still, when he won the slam-dunk contest at the All-Star game, a lot of people reacted as if there must be something wrong with their sets - or their eyesight. But others remembered how Anthony Webb had come by his nickname - it's a corruption of the word sputnik, as the Russians called the first little artificial satellite.

When you can jump 42 inches straight up from a standing start, and chin yourself on air, you only need about 66 other inches to work with. From now on, whenever a guard stops the Atlanta Hawks at the door, and spots the one who looks like something off a Christmas tree or who looks as if he should have a Mouse hat on, he opens the door wide and says, "Come right in, Mr. Webb. I assume these oversize guys are all with you!"

Midland to host '87 Men's National softball play

Midland makes its pitch for 1987 Men's National Softball Tournament during weeklong meeting in Baltimore. District Commissioner Freddie Ezell, right, at podium, makes given out to delegates at the convention presentation while Susie Hitchcock, left, waits her turn to speak. The Texas flags were pint sized replicas of the one being held by Ms. Hitchcock.

By TED BATTLES

Sports Editor

Midland landed its third national softball tournament when the Tall City was awarded the 1987 National Men's Class A tournament Sept. 4-5-6-

The event will bring 55 to 80 teams and $132,000 into Midland.

Representing Midland at the weeklong meetings in Baltimore were Susie Hitchcock, Holiday Inn Coporate Sales manager, and Freddie Ezell, ASA District 26 Commissioner.

The cities we were bidding against were Dothan, Ala., Duluth, Minn., Gadsden, Ala., and Savannah, Ga.," Ms. Hitchcock said.

The Midland team contributed small Texas flag favors to delegates, a Do Not Disturb door labels which cautioned "While I'm Dreaming about the Most Fantastic Tournament Sige, Midland Texas."

"We didn't go to the elaborate lengths of some of the other bidders," says Susie. "We just promised them West Texas hospitality, the kind they wouldn't find any place else. And we promised great motel

Ezell agreed, "We offered friendly people...what we were doing was selling the City of Midland" and as far as Ezell was concerned, it wasn't all that tough.

"Those people from the north-Ohio, New York, Pennsylvania and even California, just like people from Texas. That's why we made such a big hit. Hospitality was the foot in the door, but the clinching argument was the the softball facilities Midland has to offer.

We convinced them that we had the facilities to handle such a tournament." said Ezell. "We had 11 diamonds to offer in our Parks and Recreation Bill Williams complex in Hogan Park. That was a big selling point. "When the ladies came in here a week in advance for a national tournament, they found they had plenty of fields for practice. That's something they hadn't found at other tournaments. It proved a big selling Ezell added, "Two years ago we were still building the complex. Now we are ready and preparing for the tournament will be simple compared to what it would have been two years ago.

The Midland Softball Association and the P&R will begin readying the diamonds for the national tournament after the current season is

"But there really won't be a lot to do," says Ezell. "Our biggest task will be getting information on motels and accommodations to our visitors.

And it will be a profitable venture for Midland in that respect, "The turnover is estimated to be $7for $1." The 1985 tournament was held in Birmingham, Ala., and the 1986 tournament was in Jacksonville, Fla., which puts Midland in fast company,

Fifty-two teams played in this year's event, but with the addition of two teams from each of the 16 regions, Ezell estimates the number could spiral to 70 or 80 teams...which would mean non-stop softball for

As a warmup, Midland will host two big tournaments this year. The State Men's Class C Slow Pitch will be held here Aug. 8-10 and will bring $96,000 to the city. The Bi-Area Women's Class B Regional Slow Pitch, involving six states, is scheduled Aug. 29-Sept. 1 and will mean $72,000 to the Tall City's economy.

Johnson scans new Rebel faces

By BOB BRUNDAGE Sports Writer

The 1986 version of the Midland Lee baseball team has a new look. No, head coach Ernie Johnson isn't preaching new baseball theories to his troops. He's just looking at a lot of new varsity faces.

In 1985, the Rebels were a senior-oriented team, heavily laden with experienced juniors from the year before. This year, they're nearly all gone, leaving only two full-time returnees for Johnson to work around: Pitcher George Matta and center fielder Tuey Rankin. Matta was Lee's winningest pitcher a year ago with a 9-3-1 record and a 3.22 earned run average. He pitched 50 innings in 15 games. Matta helped pitch Lee to a 20-8 overall record and the Rebels' third straight District 45A second place finish at 12-2. Abilene Cooper won the title with a 13-1 record. RANKIN, WHOM Johnson considers a potential tournament pitcher, is the only returning every day starter, playing in all 28 Rebel games. In 103 at bats, Rankin led the Rebels with a .340 average, scored 22 runs and drove in 15. He and two triples, but was mostly a singles hitter with 30 one-baggers. Rankin was also one of Lee's better runners, stealing 17 bases.

hit with some power, collecting three doubles

Behind Rankin and Matta, there is very little varsity experience.

"Honestly, at this point, we don't have any strengths," said Johnson. "We don't have any real weaknesses, but there are no strengths. In all of our early scrimmages so far, everybody is playing like sophomores. We don't have a lack of ability, it just isn't showing yet.'

IN FACE, Johnson believes his team has a lot of potential talent this year and a lot of players would have more experience except for the high level of talent on last year's team. These guys who were playing junior varsity last year are good athletes who just had a lot of real good athletes ahead of them," said

As far as varsity experience, six players (other than Matta and Rankin) were on the varsity roster of which five saw limited action: Jason Logi, Chad Jordan, Raul Pena, Jay McCarty, Terry Baxter and Scott Smith, who didn't see any varsity playing time. Baxter, a senior pitcher/outfielder, is expected to fill the role of No. 2 pitcher behind Matta. Last year he made appearances in five games. In 15 innings, the right-handed hurler allowed four earned runs for a 1.87 ERA. He didn't get a decision in any game.

At the plate, Baxter was 1-for-2. Of the remaining four, Logi, a junior catcher, had the most at bats with 10, but he was productive, batting 400 with five runs scored, an rbi and stolen base.

Pena and Chad Jordan each hit .375 and McCarty hit .125 (all from eight at bats). "We're not going to have a great ball club this year, not as good as last year and we were a second place team then," said Johnson, who also admitted any other year a 12-2 record would have won. "We don't have enough pitching and enough experience. Our success this year will depend on how well the kids handle their preperation and mature and you never know how that will come along." If things are to work out for the Rebels, Johnson sees hitting as the potentially strongest part of their game, with a little more power than a

"We'll maybe have more power than last year," said Johnson. "Jason Logi is capable of hitting the ball hard. He's strong and he's going to be a good hitter

Tuey is going to hit the ball hard, but he's not hitting well right now. He's not a home run hitter, he doesn't swing the bat that way. Everything he hits is a line drive. "Several others have the chance to be good hitters, Danny Jordan, Chad Jordan, Terry Baxter, Raul Pena...We've got a bunch of really good hitters. If everybody comes along, we won't have an easy out in the lineup. "If we can get those guys on the bases, we do have some who can run and we should be able to score some runs," said Johnson. "The two things we have the potential to develop are no easy outs and team speed.'

ON THE mound, Matta and Baxter are the only two real pitchers Johnson has to work

"We're real shallow on the mound," said Johnson. "Michael Brown, if I had to name someone now, would be my third pitcher. But, he's really an outfielder. We needed a pitcher last year on junior varsity and he did a good job, mostly in relief because he's got a strong arm and pretty good control."

Though he doesn't expect his team to be as strong fielding as they were a year ago, Johnson doesn't see it as a weakness either "Because we do have quickness and speed, we can be a good defensive team," said Johnson. 'We've got pretty good arms everywhere."

In this year's district race, Johnson sees Abilene Cooper as the team to beat with Midland High and Abilene High a strong second and third and "off the top of my head, Permian." Other coaches around the league aren't counting out his Rebels.

The Rebels open their schedule on Tuesday when the host Lubbock Coronado in a doubleheader starting at 5 p.m. at Angels Stadium. On Friday, the league teams will gather in Odessa for the Pre-District tournament. Lee will open the tournament against Abilene High at Perm-

Federal farm bill could bring many benefits for sportsman

The federal farm bill signed by President Reagan in December could provide many benefits for Tex-as Wildlife.

Ron George, federal farm program coordinator for the Texas Parks and Wildlife Dept., said 14 million acres of highly-erodible croplands in Texas are eligible to be removed from production under the Food Security Act of 1985.

"Land owners who choose to participate in this program must take eligible land out of production for 10 years and plant vegetative cover to prevent erosion. This has tremendous potential for wildlife, especially in the western half of the state," said

Farmers will enter the voluntary Conservation Reserve Program on a competitive basis and will receive annual cash payments. they also will receive 50 percent cost-sharing for planting specified types of plants.

"Harvest of the cover through grazing or mowing will not be allowed, but hunting and leasing the land for hunting will be allowed," according to George..

spoons and speck rigs for trout and reds. The long, thick floating crank-baits have been catching some real trophy fish around the rocks in the Upper Laguna Madre and over the sand spots and holes in grassbeds in Aransas, Corpus Christi and the Upper Laguna.

James Dailey of the TPWD says, "the lures are usually fished slowly on the surface. When you jerk the line, the lure dives and is allowed to float back to the surface. The best colors are silver with variations of gold sides and black or blue backs."

Cycling great exercise

No better way to stay in shape

By CHRISTINE ERB Centre Daily Times

STATE COLLEGE, Pa. (AP) — In December, it was a Santa Claus hat stretched over his bicyclist's helmet, a miniature Christmas tree on the back of his bike, and tinsel strung through the tire spokes.

At Halloween, it was a long robe and wig, as "Snow White" rode to work in costume. But most days, it's just John Blankfield in cycling

Since last spring, almost every morning has found him riding his bicycle from his home in State College to work at the Rehab Hospital outside Pleasant Gap. By now, people recognize him on the way, honk their horns and wave. Fellow workers can gauge how early or late they are by the point at which they pass BLANKFIELD, 26, says it's just a great way to stay in shape. It's a round trip of 16 miles, and between the daily rides and the long trips, Blankfield estimates he's put 5,000 miles on his bike since spring.

The ride to work and back is usually uneventful, he said, marred only by the occasional trucker who lets the trailer behind drift off the road or deliberately swerves close to him. But his touring trips are anoth-

"I took a trip to Niagara Falls in June, and did some visiting in Pittsburgh on the same trip," he said. "That was the weekend of the tornadoes, and I was camping in it. I didn't know there had been tornadoes until the next morning.'

A BICYCLE trip in October to Williamsburg proved "interesting," he said wryly. He took the Mount Vernon bicycle path to avoid Washington, D.C., traffic and crashed the bike on a slippery wet wooden

With his damaged bike at his side, he tried to hitch rides along Route 1, but on the local road no one was going more than a few miles at a stretch, "and at that rate I would have needed a hundred rides." He tried hitching rides on Route 95, but state police stopped him to say it was illegal. So he and his bike boarded a bus, to the consternation of the driver, for the next 70 miles to Richmond.

"Things break, things get bent, and you just find a bicycle shop." THIS SPRING, he and a friend plan to bike across the country to Seattle, taking a few months' leave of absence. Blankfield now rides an all-terrain bicycle, with stronger rims and wider tires, which is slower but safer than a racing bicycle. He always wears a helmet, he said, and stressed that anyone buying a bicycle should buy a helmet at the same time. And

"Speaking as both a bicyclist and a physical therapist, head injuries are no fun," he said. Several patients have gone in and out of the rehab hospital in his two years there because of head injuries sustained while riding a bike.

"I think bicycling is a great sport," he said. "You can see some really cool scenery around here. You see things at 20 mph that you don't see

Ski season makes strong comeback

By TED BATTLES Sports Editor

Just when it seemed the ski season was history, the storms began in Colorado and New Mexico and if it seemed deserted around West Texas last weekend, it was because everybody had headed to the slopes.

As one Albuquerque man skiing at Taos described it last weekend, "I came up here last weekend after that 35-inch snow and no one was here. I'd never have come up this week if I'd remembered that this was a holiday (President's Day Monday) weekend. I'd have known it would be crowded." Crowded was putting it mildly Taos Ski Valley was close to its 4,500 shut off limit and crowds queued at almost every lift. At some lifts, hot cocoa was passed out to rebellious skiers, not used to such lines at TSV.

However, with a little enterprise, one could usually find a no-wait line, usually the one-year-old triple on the backside of the mountain...at least Saturday.

Although no snow fell in the village, a snow storm swirled around the Mount Wheeler-Kachina Peak area for two days, which caused problems Sunday.

With five inches of fresh snow Sunday morning, the lifts were a few minutes late opening and the Kachina Basin was off limits for an hour and a half until the snow slide and avalanche areas were made safe.

And later in the day, the top of the mountain was a whiteout as snow continued to fall and winds whipped off the slopes in stinging gusts. Still, snow-starved skiers weren't complaining. It had been early December since the last sizeable fall and the slopes had become hard-pan, icy and threadbare in the interim.

The good news spread as far south as Ruidoso and Ski Apache, where Midland's Richard Blackwell, who caught the old Sierra Blanca resort between weekends...really the only time to go, reported, "That 71 inch fall made skiing great...and no lift

Red River had some of the best snow around, but the community run, family-oriented resort was having trouble getting the word out with all the attention focused on TSV. Santa Fe. Ski Apache and the southwestern Colorado areas.

One lift rider, either a holidaying meteorologist or, perhaps, housewife, explained the secret to Taos'

"We get snow here any time it rains in Reno or San Francisco. Somehow the weather swings down this way and suddenly veers north.'

If the forecaster is right, things should get better in northern New Mexico before they get worse.

Perhaps the best thing about a February trip to the slopes there was nary a hint of those migraine, cluster, sinus headaches that seem to go with this time of the year.

Our groceries will be cheaper than the supermarket where you shop now, regardless of where you shop! If you live in Crane, Midland, North Crowden, Scharbauer City, Kermit, Goldsmith, Penwell, Monahans, Andrews, Notrees, Midkiff, Royalty, Grandfalls, Wink or points inbetween — we promise it'll be worth your time to drive to Odessa and shop in our store.

"Four different groups made bids for our business on this one," says Haskell, "Holidays of New Jersey, Pro Tours of Austin, Austria Ski marketing and another group. All proposed various trips to Austria.

"But we are getting proposals from all over, Utah, Canada—Banff, Lake Louise, Whistler-eastern Canada, the Cascades, Vermont, Tahoe. I understand a group from Switzerland is going to be at the spring meeting this year, but I have a strong feeling we'll wind up a in Lake Louise or Banff. They are offering a real strong program for us. They want us and the political situation is against another European trip," Haskell prophesizes. The TSC starts asking for bids early in the year. Three or four TSC sanctioned trips are taken each season. This week the TSC is spending a week in Crested Butte, Colo.

When the club views the trip presentations in the spring, they have been thoroughly screened in committee so that only the most attractive remain. "So we just see the best," says Haskell, "Yet, it's still a two-day affair.'

Just how big is the TWC operation in a season. Club figures for 1984-85 show that $122,013 was spent on 93 chartered buses and 3,479 people spent $709,032 with the airlines.

"We produced 18,477 pillow nights and spent $823,910 on lodging," the report continues. Breaking down those nights, 13,9452 were condos' pillows, 4,530 were lodge or hotel. That totaled $650,878 in condo accommodations and $173,032 in hotels and lodges. The average rate per night per person was $44.60.

Ski trips through the council to-taled 4.229 and gross dollars spent with Clubs was 1,834,246 and the TSC sanctioned trips in 1984-85 were Texas Ski Week at Copper Mountain; Winter Shootout at Steamboat, Fall Round Up at Vail and Final Show

Down at Big Sky.
In addition to the TSC trips, the Flatlanders Ski Club arranges for trips for its members, such as Taos last week end and the Spring Break trip to Purgatory March 29-April 5.

The nice thing about the Texas Ski Council's Joe Louis sock is that it makes resorts subjected to the numbing effects feel good all over.

Chaps face Western

MC to end home season

Basketball fans have their last chance to see the record-setting Midland College Chaparrals play at home Monday night. The Chaps entertain Western Texas College at 7:30 p.m. in the Al G. Langford Chaparral Center.

With just two games remaining in the conference season, the Chaps captured their fifth conference title in the past six years with a heart-pounding 55-49 win over Odessa College Thursday night. That gave the Chaps a 28-0 season record and 14-0 in conference play. Their lead over second-place South Plains College is three games with just two remaining. South Plains hosted Odessa at Levelland Saturday night in a make-up game.

The Chaps have eclipsed the 25 straight wins by the 1981-82 NJCAA championship team and could tie the all-time team win streak of 29 established when the 1982-83 team carried on for four more wins at the start of the season beforing losing. Sophomores Eddie Frazier, Ricky Grace, Derrick

Lewis, and Tony Wright will be making their last home appearances Monday night. And the Chaps know they'll have their hands full with WTC, the third place team in the conference with a 10-4

When they met the first time in the Odessa College Tournament semifinals, the Chaps escaped with a 77-76 win and had to pull another of the furious rallies to win 99-81 in Snyder.

Conference action ends for the Chaps in Clarendon Thursday night. The Chaparral games are carried on KCRS Radio, 550AM.

Some regular events and a few special activities are planned to help fans salute the 1985-86 team. Following the game, the team will remain on the floor to sign autographs of individual and team photos to be given away as fans enter.

THE EVENING starts at 5:30 p.m.with a rematch of an earlier game between the Midland Booster Club and local news media. In their first contest, the Boosters defeated the media, although the Boosters average 43 years of age.

One lucky fan also will be selected to use a new 1986 Pontiac Grand Am from Friendly Pontiac for three months. Registration ends soon after the game begins. The winner must be a licensed adult with proof of insurance...Kent Oil's Big Shot contest offers a chance for some fans to make shots for prizes. The grand prize for making a shot from mid-court still hasn't been won, so that shot will be worth 600 gallons of gasoline Monday night...And two fans get to compete in the Cash Scramble sponsored by Vista Savings. Each contestant tries to pick up as many dollar bills as possible in 30 seconds, with remaining money going to the one who picked up the most. Monday's game also is "Private School Night" with students from Midland's various private and church schools admitted free. "We had all we could handle against Odessa, but the players get the credit for keeping their poise in the last few minutes and working so hard to get the turnovers," MC coach Jerry Stone said, adding "And we even hit our free throws when it counted." Stone noted that WTC and the Chaps could be matched up again. "We've played Odessa four times, South Plains three times, and this will be the third meeting with Western Texas," he recounted, "And it's possible that we could play any of them one more time."

SLATED for March 6-8 in Snyder, the Region V Tournament brings together the top four finishers from the Western Conference and the Eastern Conference. The brackets match No. 1 against No. 4, and No. 2 against No. 3 from opposite conferences, which means Midland will face the fourth place finisher in the Eastern conference in the first round

Midland and South Plains are in the tournament, Western Texas should finish third. But Odessa and New Mexico JC are battling for the fourth spot. OC still faces road games against South Plains and NMJC and, with its loss to Midland, has an uphill

The Region V winner must play a first-round NJCAA tournament game against the winner of Region XIV, which is projected to be San Jacinto of Houston. Two years out of three, Regional winners must play a first round game with the winner advancing to the NJCAA Tournament in Hutchin-

A Weekly Advertising Section About Apartments, Condominiums, Deuplexes, and Real Estate In The Permian Basin Produced For And In Cooperation With The Real Estate Industry.

icture This..

Imagine this: a comfortable ranch-style home seated on five acres of land sectioned in one acre tracts fenced and cross-fenced. With a large barn boasting a private office, half bath, two bays with overhead doors, five covered stalls and covered storage for hay, a roping arena and an acre of winter wheat, all quietly nestled just minutes away from downtown Midland.

Housing affordabilty index breaks the 100 mark for first time since 1978

above the 100 mark in December. At 101.0, the December 1985 index meant that a family earning the median income had more than enough income to qualify for a mortgage covering 80 percent of the medianpriced existing home that month, association analysts said.

The index last topped 100 in December 1978, said NAR President Carl E. Wallace.

"This is encouraging news for America's homebuyers, homesellers, the real estate industry and the many other segments of this country's economy that benefit from a strong housing industry," Wallace said. 'More than half the nation's 63 million families can now afford to purchase a median-priced home, which was $74,800 in December, and millions more can afford homes a Realtor from Moraga, Calif., said. Half of the resale homes in December sold for prices less than $74,800 and half sold for more than

"While affordability conditions are not as favorable now as in the early 1970s when the index was above 150, the situation has improved greatly from the early 1980s when the index had sunk to less than 70," he said.

The 1.1 percentage point November-to-December improvement in the index from 99.9 was the seventh consecutive monthly increase. The index increased 1.4 percentage points in June, 1.0 point in July, 2.1 points in August, 3.2 points in September, 0.4 point in October and 1.2 points in November.

Wallace noted that the affordability index for resale homes improved 13.3 percentage points last year from the December 1984 level of 87.7. The 1985 improvement was the largest annual increase ever recorded in the 15 years for which the association has calculated the index. Wallace attributed the improved affordability conditions to lower mortgage interest rates, modest home price appreciation and continuing improvements in family

The interest rate used to compute the index fell to 11.14 percent in December- the lowest since August 1978, when it also was 11.14 percent.

The interest rate is reported by the Federal Home Loan Bank Board and reflects the average effective interest rate on loans closed by major lenders for previously occupied homes in the first week of each month. Both fixed-rate and adjustable-rate mortgages are included.

The December index meant that a family earning the median income of $27,940 per year had 101.0 percent of the income needed to qualify for a $59,800 loan-a mortgage covering 80 percent of the median-priced re-

The index showed that the typical family in December could have afforded a $60,400 loan, representing a mortgage covering 80 percent of a $75,500 home, which was $700 more than the December median-priced resale home. About 51 percent of the resale homes sold in December were priced at or below $75,500, the association reported.

Based on lending standards set by the Federal National Mortgage Association a family needed $27,658 to qualify for a mortgage on a typical resale home in December. However, at $27,940, median family income that month was more than $250 above the qualifying income. Fannie Mae lenders require that principal and interest payments by a borrowers making a 20 percent down payment consume no more than 25-28 percent of yearly gross family income. The National Association of Realtors calculates its index based on the assumption that a borrower devotes 25 percent of family income to principal and interest payments.

Monthly principal and interest payments on a $59,800 loan would have been $576 in December, 24.7 percent of median family income.

Last month, the association reported that the improved affordability conditions in 1985 resulted in the existing single-family home sales market's best year since 1978, with a total of 3.216 million resales

"Yuppie mortgages" and 15-year mortgages are new alternatives

By CHET CURRIER AP Business Writer

right home mortgage these days can be just about as complicated as choosing the right house

Several years ago, mortgages with adjustable interest rates joined the conventional fixed-rate loan as a common means of financing the purchase of a dwelling.

Since then, there have been a couple of prominent new entrants: Fixed-rate mortgages that call for repayment over 15 years, rather than the standard 30. Loans, sometimes called "yup pie mortgages," on which payments are made every two weeks, rather than once a month.

And, as always, the interest rates and other terms available on any given type of mortgage may vary widely from lending institution to lending institution. Each type of financing has its advocates. The fixed-rate loan provides a measure of certainty for the future, and the hope that the burden of paying it off will get lighter as the years pass and your income increases

Some borrowers with variablerate mortgages have had a special reason to enjoy the decline of interest rates in the past few years, as it has lowered the amount of their regular payments.

gages are touted as a means of paying off your obligation more quickand thus saving substantially on the total interest you pay "Most important, you'll own your own home free and clear 15 years sooner," proclaims one bank that remenu of mortgage offerings.

Financial advisers with no particular axe to grind say the choice generally comes down to your own personal financial situation and preferences.

Obviously, young first-time buyers squeezing their savings dry to get into the housing market may well lean toward the proposition with the lowest available monthly payment.

By the same token, a middle-aged couple with a sizeable income might opt for a mortgage with a fast repayment schedule so that it will be over and done with by the time they plan to retire.

Whatever your situation, experts in personal finance say, you should not forget in your comparison-shopping that mortgage interest on a personal residence is fully deductible on your federal tax return. The government, in effect, pays part of that cost for you.

For that reason, any calculations of net interest savings afforded by a given mortgage deal should be done on an after-tax basis.

Know your real estate

By CAROLYN NICKELL

Question: I've been told that my mortgage has in it an "alienation clause." What is this and how will it affect the sale of my home? Answer: An "alienation clause" refers to a provision in a note and deed of trust or mortgage which allows the lender to exercise or waive his option to accelerate the payment date under certain circumstances. More commonly known as a "due-on-sale" clause, this is one of two common types of acceleration clauses, contained in most notes, which makes the entire amount of unpaid principal and interest become immediately due and payable upon default or transfer (sale) of the property.

An acceleration clause is a lender's optional privilege and must be stated in the loan instrument. When so stated, the lender can approve or disapprove of a buyer wishing to assume the loan, the lender can charge an assumption fee, or demand an increase in interest rate. FHA and VA loans do not contain this cluase; conventional and owner-financed loans may or may not. Read your loan papers carefully.

With over 1,800 square feet of useable living space, the home has a country feeling throughout with a used brick exterior and a deep circle drive leading to the front entry.

Just inside, a modest entry with one mirrored wall above a cushioned "conversation" bench warmly greets guests.

Through a wide opening to the right, entertainment is made easy in the combined formal living and dining room. The low-hanging crystal chandelier gives luster to the creamy yellow tie-back full length pleated drapes with matching cornice board, olive sculptured shag carpeting and patterned wallpaper decorating one wall of the room.

large comfortable family room (top right photo on the cover). A handsome brick fireplace stretches to the multi-beamed cathedral ceiling with Spanish lanterns. On each side, windows with dark wood shutters onlook the back lawn. Deep wood panelling and matching carpeting exude a feeling of warmth for the entire area. A door leading to the fenced backyard and covered patio givers further access to the barn and arena area.

Almost as a part of the family room is the kitchen and breakfast area. Featuring an almond tile look floor, the all electric kitchen has a contemporary feeling with pastel peach walls and matching patterned wallpaper. A long bar/buffet easily serves guests in the adjoining break-fast area. Bay windows donned in full length drapes with a matching cornice board beautifully compli-ment the patterned wallpaper in the durable taupe carpeting. A with the matching utility caris decorated in tiny floral-pat-rage door openers and a holding tank for the home's water well.

Just off the kitchen is a small workroom, perfectly lighted for a sewing room, with matching carpet, a muted patterned wallcovering on one wall and white sheer gathered curtains on the full length window. Beyond the other end of the kitchen is a convenient utility room with a deep sink and several cabinets, featuring durable taune carpeting.

To the left of the entrance hall stand the bedroom areas. In the long carpeted hallway leading to these resting places are two large coat closets with shelves in each for offseason clothing storage. In each of the guest bedrooms

paper decorates the walls about the double vanity with a golden brown counter, linen cabinets and tub-/shower combination, all beneath recessed lighting. In the expansive master bedroom

stark white carpeting easily compuments the padded wall decorated in a navy blue patterned material. A large walk-in closet is secluded behind a matching padded door reveals many storage shelves for multiple useage. Matching full-length drapes with baloon shades and white sheers don the windows of the room to complete the lock. In the master bath, antique fixtures, matching carpeting and navy blue patterned wallpaper are illuminated by a long vertical glazed window decorated with white mini blinds. An elongated toilet, single vanity and brass-edged shower give this room a plush but compact convenience.

Listed by Regency Realtors for $190,000, this estate is a lovely "country escape" for any Midlander.

Because these homes are foreclosed properties, they're priced for quick sale.

As you can see, this means a very good deal for you. In fact, you can probably afford an extra room. Or two.

Or maybe a bigger lot. Or a better location. So look over the list; call the real estate broker listed. But hurry. If you've been looking for the best possible deal in a home, don't overlook a foreclosed home.

When babies are born too soon

Special Care Infants' logo, above, shows the actual-size footprints of a little girl named Trisha, who was born at 23 weeks gestational age. Normal pregnancies last 40 weeks. Trisha weighed 17 ounces at birth. Today she is a healthy 2-year-old.

Mary Underwood, left in above photo, with Ryan, 5, and twins McKenzie and Corey, 16 months, and Diana Journy, right, with 22month-old Patrick, are co-founders of Special Care Infants, a support group for parents of high-risk babies. All four of the children pictured were born prematurely and spent their first few weeks of life in a neonatal intensive care unit. he birth of a baby should be a joyous occasion, but for the parents of babies born with special problems, heartache may outweigh the joy.

Last year approximately 60 local families — an average of five each month — had babies requiring a stay in Midland Memorial Hospital's neonatal intensive care unit, according to Carol Matthews, R.N., head nurse at MMH's nursery.

Parents of premature babies can be devastated by the too-early birth of their child, said Diana Journy of Midland, mother of a son born prematurely. "It is such a shock, a feeling of pain."

The Journy's son Patrick was born on April 29, 1984, four weeks before he was scheduled to arrive. He weighed 4 pounds 1 ounce at birth.

"The first thing you think is your child is going to die. You don't know there is a survival rate for these babies and it's pretty high," said Mary Underwood of Midland, who has three children born early.

The Underwoods' 5-year-old son Ryan was born eight weeks early on May 21, 1980, and weighed 4 pounds 10 ounces. Four years later, on Oct. 7, 1984, twins Corey and McKenzie, 16 months old, arrived eight weeks before their scheduled due date. Corey weighed 4 pounds 3 ounces at birth, and his sister weighed only 3 pounds 14 ounces. All three were cared for in a neonatal intensive care unit and all three were on respirators.

Fathers of premature or sick babies experience the same pain the mothers feel, the women said, and the couple needs each other in a special way during this time. "You have to be strong for each other to help each other through it," Mrs. Journy said. "My husband flew in the plane with the baby to Fort Worth. That's not standard — we were fortunate there was no co-pilot that night."

About half the premature babies born at MMH are sent to other hospitals, said Ms. Matthews, although "since we moved up here (to the new labor/delivery/nursery area), to the larger unit, more babies are staying here rather than being transferred out."

MMH's neonatal intensive care unit has five incubators, instead of the two available in the old unit, Ms. Matthews said. In the NICU, "we can give them oxygen, give them mechanical respiration support — that's a ventilator — ... we can monitor heart rate" and rate of respiration, blood pressure, temperature, and a new machine can help measure the oxygen saturation in the blood, "so we don't have to draw quite so much blood."

Premature babies often stay for weeks in a neonatal intensive care unit. "They say you can usually plan on taking your child home on your due date," said Mrs. Journy. Patrick was in the hospital for four weeks.

Because she and Mrs. Underwood had both experienced the shock and pain of too-early births of their children, the two women realized other parents in the same situation needed a support group to help them through this difficult time.

Special Care Infants, the group they founded last fall, is designed to give support to parents of babies who need special care at birth, whether or not the babies are born prematurely. Funded by the March of Dimes, the organization works with area parents both while their babies are in the hospital and after the infants go home. "We do not collect dues from members," Mrs. Underwood said. "We survive on donations and the March of Dimes.' Parent Care is the national support for these parents.

Currently the local group has members from about nine families, and represents about 14 special needs babies, who now range in age from 6 years to 8 months.

According to the booklet "Your Premature Infant," published by Ross Laboratories, seven out of 100 babies born each year in the United States are premature, and in many cases the cause of these early births is unknown.

"One of the problems with living in Midland is that these babies are usually transferred to Fort Worth Children's Hospital or to Lubbock General," said Mrs. Journy. "(Some) parents have a hard time seeing their babies" because the hospitals are so far from home.

The Ronald McDonald House in Fort Worth is a boon to many of these parents, she added.

In the Fort Worth hospital, parents are allowed much interaction with their babies, she said. "They are finding in studies that if you can get the parents involved with their babies, the outcome is better and the will to live is much stronger. They recommend if you can't be there, you send a tape of your voice so the nurses can play it" for the baby.

"With high-risk babies, there is a greater risk of abuse, statistically," Mrs. Journy said. "They have found if you can get the parent involved with the baby, the risk of abuse goes

THE RELATIONSHIP between the neonatal intensive care unit's nurses and the parents is a vital one, the mothers said. "The nurses can really help you by getting you into the nursery and letting you touch the baby and letting you hold the

The first goal for their newlyformed support group is to "offer emotional support to other parents who are going through this. We hope to provide a preemie packet for the mother" to take home from the hospital, Mrs. Journy said. Included will e a list of terms and various information. "To some extent we would like to be able to provide preemie diapers to the ones who can't afford it. formula...'

Premature babies may be released from the hospital after showing steady weight gain, taking all their own feedings by themselves and holding their body temperature in an open crib, the mothers said, but even after going home the babies may have special needs.

"If a baby is healthy with no infections and all he is here (MMH) for is just to grow, depending on the pediatrician, he can go home when he is about 44½ pounds," Ms. Matthews said. "Some doctors still like (the babies) to be around 5 pounds. It depends on how strong they are and how well they are feeding."

Some babies are sent home on respirators, some have eye problems if a baby has been on a ventilator, one of the first things they do before they go home from the hospital is the eye doctor checks" the baby's vision, said Mrs. Journy

Sudden Infant Death Syndrome is more common in premature babies than in full term babies, she said. These tiny babies are usually tested for sleep apnea — temporary cessation of breathing during sleep — be-fore they leave the hospital. "If they find he does have apnea, he will go home on a monitor.

Premature babies can be breastfed, but the woman must use a breast pump, the mothers said. Nurses and doctors feel it is much healthier for the babies, especially when they are in the hospital, and the mothers feel like they are doing something important for the child's health, the two women added.

After the baby comes home, breastfeeding can still be difficult because premature infants must be nursed more often that full-term babies, and "you have to be careful you don't get rundown." Stress can affect a mother's milk.

COST OF A PREMATURE baby's intensive care has been estimated at $1500 per day, with the cost of progressive care estimated to be $500 per day, the mothers said, which is 'just for the bed and care, not for any special care." Some families' medical bills have climbed to as much as $250,000.

MMH charges $121 per day for an open crib, $247 per day for intermediate care incubator, $310 per day for intensive care incubator and $184 per day for an isolation crib.

Insurance usually covers most of the cost, but uninsured families can have premature births, too. Medicaid may help pay medical bills for these families, and some hospitals, such as the one in Fort Worth, save intensive care beds for babies of indigent families, the women said. The hospitals "try not to turn babies away."

About 25 percent of the mothers who give birth at MMH are indigent,

Listing symptoms not unhealthy

From Wire Reports

Writing down one's symptoms, psychiatrists used to say, means the patient is sick not in the body but in the mind. It's "almost a sure sign of psychoneurosis," one leading text-book said. But no more.

An Alabama doctor who observed 900 patients over four months found that the list-writers were no more or less neurotic than those who didn't. They may be "anxious, even dis-traught." Dr. John F. Burnum wrote in The New England Journal of Medicine, but they also "are seeking clarity, order ... and control."

Burnum said his observations should help prevent doctors from dismissing patients' concerns as "neurotic" because they are written down, a practice he considers insensitive and dangerous. "Patients are free to write lists, to mime or sing their concerns," he wrote. "Medical care turns on communication.'

Silverware etiquette evolves

NEW YORK (AP) - Bringing your own silverware to a dinner party, or washing your hands at the table would certainly be a no-no with Emily Post. But centuries ago doing just that was considered well-mannered. reports Kae McCulloch, fashion director of the Jewelry Industry Council.

"It's quite fascinating to trace the beginnings of mankind's first usage of the knife, fork and spoon," Ms. McCulloch said of her research on flatware and silverware. She notes that mankind's first eating utensil, the spoon, is also the first one babies

"Early man used shells as spoons, and knives did not appear on the table for a long time, for they were used to hunt with, or for self-defense against predatory animals and enemies," she savs.

During the Middle Ages, most travelers carried their own knives and spoons, for hosts of the day did not furnish them. Two knives were used one to impale the meat while it was being cut with the other. Meat was then eaten with the fingers, necessitating the use of ewers filled with delicately scented rose water, and basins to wash the hands in.

Sharp knives were a cause for concern, and it was a nervous Louis XIV who outlawed pointed knives at meals, and caused dinner knives to be made with blunt ends.

"The Italians were credited with popularizing the fork in the 1400s, but it was a Greek princess who brought a two-tined gold fork to Italy in 1071," Ms. McCulloch says history reveals.

The popularity of the fork was slow to spread through Europe, especially in England, where it was considered effeminate. In the New World, however, it was popularized by none other than George Washington, who proudly and permanently displayed his silverware at his Virginia mansion.

"Family silverware is treasured, and handed down from mother to daughter, preserving the beautiful patterns of yesteryear," Ms. McCulloch points out.

Through the years, she explains, silverware patterns have reflected the art trends of the day, ranging from elaborate rococo designs to simple sculpted lines. The current trend in silverware is toward a modified traditional look, and in size resembles Continental silver - about an inch longer than usual. This is because of the popularity of larger dishes in today's tableware.

"Silverware, be it expensive ster ling, more modestly priced silverplate, or practical stainless, all incorporate tasteful designs and quality workmanship in a wide choice of patterns to cater to every lifestyle, Ms. McCulloch says.

Friends can be 'good medicine'

Copley News Service

Think of it as insulation against disease. Or reinforcement of emotional stability. Friendship: the forgotten link in a healthy lifestyle. "Friends Can Be Good Medicine," proclaims the California Department of Mental Health in its campaign to promote total well-being.

And the statistics mount: ■ People who isolate themselves from others have two to three times the risk of early death, regardless of whether they smoke or exercise regularly.

■ Terminal cancer strikes isolated people more often than those who have close ties with others. ■ The rates of mental hospitalization are five to 10 times greater for divorced, separated and widowed people than for married people.

■ Pregnant women without supportive relationships have three times the number of complications as do pregnant woman with equal stress but stronger personal relationships.

The above findings, in separate studies, led the California Department of Mental Health to encourage people to put a premium on friendship in 1982.

DR. ROBERT Taylor, who analyzed the department's research, has publicly stated that personal relationships are no less a component of total fitness than nutrition and

Now comes Berkeley, California based psychotherapist and author, Lillian Rubin, Ph.D., with a book -'Just Friends: The Role of Friendships in Our Lives," Harper & Row, $15.95, — that identifies friendship as "the most neglected social relationship of our time.

We are, she said, a society in need of a friendship fix. Maybe even a social rite that will formalize our interpersonal relationships.

Something to destroy once and for all what she calls "disposable relationships.

A mobile, impersonal society where the computer is king, divorce is rampant and the family unit is much less defined creates this need, insists Rubin. Her contention: People who need people - and acknowledge it - are among the healthiest people in the

Basically, friends fill roles that help us realize our potentialities, the 61-year-old New York native said. Different friends fulfill different needs - some intellectual, some emotional. It can fill the gaps in a marriage, giving you, as one of the 300 people Rubin interviewed for the book told her, "some of the other things that you don't get from the particular person you love."

ONE DISCOVERY Rubin made from her research was that there is an enormous difference between men and women in the way they relate to and the values they place on friends.

While women seek intimate, selfrevealing relationships with other women, men tend to be more distant and detached. They are more reluctant to confide in friends, more afraid of showing weakness and expressing doubts and insecurities.

Women expect more and give more," said Rubin. "They're more demanding about friendships and are more easily disappointed. Women could learn to modify their expec tations of their closest friends, and not feel so betrayed and abandoned. "And men could learn to be less

But, said Rubin, we may be dealing with a "fragile male ego" that is a carry-over from adolescence when the male was forced to establish his independence from his mother.

In order to establish his masculinity, said Rubin, a boy "must relinquish his identification with his mother

In doing so, he sets boundaries "that circumscribe not only his relationships with others, but his connection to his inner emotional life as

A girl, on the other hand, experiences no such break from her mother. Relating to a woman friend is a logical continuation of her early identification with her mother, said

COMPOUNDING THIS lack of intimacy in male friendships, Rubin insisted, is "homo phobia" — a reluctance to be perceived as a homosexual.

"Heterosexual men," she said, "have definite anxieties in the presence of homosexual men that women don't seem to have in the presence of lesbians.'

Another factor: competition.

Competition starts among men, said Rubin, when they compete with their fathers for the mother's attention. And it is stronger in the upper, more professional levels of society. Conclusion: The Ph.D. from Yale may be less able to relate to a male friend than your high-school-educated hard hat. "Relationships between workingclass men," offered Rubin, "can be intense, binding and extremely deep. But in two men I interviewed who worked together and played sports together, best friends, one didn't tell the other when his wife had an affair. Why? "Guys don't talk about things like that,' he told me."

Continued Rubin: "Here in the United States, where we have a freer choice about whom we can confide in, men are likely to be more emotionally open with women than with

IT'S A logical extension of their early relationship with their mother. With a woman, they are less frightened of being vulnerable.

Two-thirds of the men I talked to couldn't name a best friend, but most who did named a woman. And most married men called their wives their best friends, although their wives were able to name best friends other than their husbands.

"Best friends are very common among women. Three-quarters of them, single and married, could name one.

Sports mates and work mates are often high on the list of men's friends. And, acknowledged Rubin, they satisfy certain emotional needs. But when it comes time to commiserate, to seek solace for a painful emotional setback, men rarely confide in such friends. They're more likely to generalize," said Rubin. "Instead of saying they are distraught because their wife left them, they will say something like, Women these days; I just can't figure them out,' and they will wait until they pull themselves together before saying anything."

Younger men, offered Rubin, seem to be struggling more consciously with the issue and trying harder to cultivate meaningful relationships with friends.

The more educated male often expresses a liberal attitude toward riendships, he acknowledged, yet his actions betray his insecurities.

AS WOMEN become more assertive and competitive in the work place, do their friendships tend to be ss enduring?

"Women who work and have families have less time for friends," pointed out Rubin, "but they are careful about maintaining friendships. Even if it's a 20-minute phone call at 11 p.m.

Which brings up another point. Perhaps Rubin, in her rush to judgment, is too quick to question the depth of most male friendships. A 36-year-old university professor tells her in "Just Friends"

"I think the women's movement and all the talk about men not relating to each other is a crock. I don't think they understand about the kind of connection men get from the kind of sharing they do. There's a tremendous amount of vulnerability and intimacy when you're out there playing tennis or basketball together

Family participation can provide the encouragement you each need to ness. Together, you can set individual fitness goals, make plans to reach them, and, ultimately, help each other stick with the program. A well-planned and balanced program will let each family member pursue individual exercise as well as join in group activities. (If you are not accustomed to vigorous exercise or are seriously overweight, you should check with a physician before starting any fitness program.)

For a practical approach to family fitness, read these suggestions from Better Homes and Gardens.

· Remember that a balanced fitness program aims for total wellness. That means you should emphasize good nutrition, stress management, adequate rest and weight control as well as exercise.

· Start a family fitness log. In it, list each individual's goal, plus the family's goals. Losing weight, reducing the risk of heart disease, conditioning for a competitive sport, alleviating emotional stress, feeling and looking better, improving family relations and even just having a good time are all goals you might set. As you work into your fitness program, record progress toward those goals in your log.

· Keep a separate page in the log for each family member's statistics. Note starting weight and resting heart rate, and update those statistics each week. If losing fat is a goal, measure waist and hips each week. (A skinfold caliper is an excellent, easy-to-use tool for measuring body fat.) · Chart each person's heart rate two minutes after finishing a workout. As your fitness improves, your heart will recover from work and return to its resting rate faster. Work into your fitness program gradually to reduce the chance of sore muscles and injury. For example, if you are beginning a running program, alternate jogging and walking each block or so, gradually eliminating the walk. Work out only 20 minutes per session at first. For the first few weeks, keep your heart rate closer to 70 than 85 percent of the maximum rate.

 Win the cooperation of the entire family from the start. Select activities together that everyone can enjoy or at least try to do. Encourage everyone in the family to be flexible and to participate in each other's favorite sport or exercise activity.

· Join a family fitness center or a Y. Get advice from the professionals on the staff. (Ideally, should have degrees in physical education, exercise science or sports medicine.) Even when you go as a family, you can each choose your own exercise.

· Let each family member be your fitness leader for a week, choosing the week's activities with the approval of the others. Keep track of leaders and activities in your fitness

· Vary activities so that no one gets bored. Swimming, bicycling, jogging, canoeing, backpacking, crosscountry skiing, skating, aerobic dancing and vigorous walking all provide excellent exercise. Brisk walking is safer and more comfortable than jogging. It's especially good exercise for those who are older, have been sedentary, or have muscle or joint problems

· Ask an experienced person to show you what to do and how to do it the first time you try an activity Check with the staff at a community education or recreation department, Y, fitness center or sporting goods store for advice on where to take lessons from a trained instructor.

· Consider setting up a home exercise center in the spare room, basement or garage. Talk with fitness experts and visit several sporting goods or department stores to get ideas on equipment to include in your exercise area

. Think of fitness as family entertainment. Instead of going to a movie, for instance, head to the Y or fitness center, or make hiking and picnicking a daylong event. · Set specific days each week for your activities. Most people work out on alternate days or three times a week. It's best not to work out more than five or six times a week. The chance of injury is greater with a higher frequency of workouts. · To help prevent soreness later. include a warm-up and cool-down time in each workout. During the warm-up, stretch, do light calisthenics, then ease into the most strenuous exercise. Cool down by slowing gradually, and stretch out when you finish exercising.

 Know what to do in case of an emergency. Learn CPR and the basic of first aid. Watch for the symptoms of hypothermia in winter and heat exhaustion in the summer.

Music helps health

King Features Syndicate

One autumn morning a few years ago, 24-year-old Teresa Banyon lay on a delivery table at the University of Kansas Medical Center, straining to give birth to her first baby. From 10 feet away, a special therapist was already piping an unusual anesthetic into the delivery room - music.

Teresa was having trouble pushing the baby out. Then, as her labor pains sharpened, Teresa signaled to her music therapist to raise the volume on the music.

To the lilting of flutes in the bac ground, with the lights turned down low and her husband at her side, Teresa gave birth to 8-pound, 10-ounce Hillary Banyon. Through the whole delivery, the music was an essential element in keeping Teresa calm enough to deliver the child in relative comfort.

The music gave me complete confidence," she says. "I felt really exhilarated, as if I'd just gone running for a long time. I never lost control."

Now a mother of two, Teresa Banyon at that time was a volunteer in a one-of-a-kind music therapy program for expectant mothers at the Kansas City hospital. Like Lamaze, music therapy is an alternative birthing method that encourages women in labor to do without drugs. even though medication is available as needed.

About 150 women have delivered babies to music under this five-yearold program. The approach routinely lowers the amount of anesthesia required and even shortens labor. One mother actually sang throughout her delivery

Co-founder of the program is Dr Sterling Williams, a silver-haired obstetrician/gynecologist and, incidentally, a member of the Civic Chorus of Kansas City

Dr. Williams hatched the idea of applying music as an anesthetic after rehearsal one night with the chorus. He was so tired from delivering babies all day that he had planned to skip the rehearsal. Instead, he went ahead, singing with colleagues for hours on end, and discovered afterwards that he was exceptionally relaxed. Intuition told Dr. Williams that perhaps music could also be channeled towards relaxing women in labor, just as dentists play background music to take your mind off your toothache and mask the hum of the dreaded drill.

Mrs. Marshall H. Fox

Playing music is a technique for diverting attention, for getting women to focus on something other than discomfort and pain," he explains He now plans to try music therapy with cancer and post-operative patients as well.

Doctors worldwide are gradually discovering that music therapy the systematic application of rhythm, melody, harmony, tone and pitch - has vast potential to benefit both mind and body.

Researchers have found that music can be valuable medicine — as a companion to traditional treatments for many serious conditions, including cancer, stroke, high blood pressure, alcoholism, drug addiction, angina pectoris, asthma, insomnia, headaches and tension.

For now, music therapy is most widely accepted as a treatment for troubled minds. A study conducted in England showed that mental patients in a hospital wing adjacent to a chapel where daily hymn singing was heard happened to recover faster than those in a distant wing. Autistic children, lost beyond the reach of spoken language, often respond to music when all other efforts at contact fall short. Under the music therapy program for expectant mothers at the University of Kansas, women in the last six weeks of pregnancy spend six hours with therapists and select music for a personal tape recording to play when they are learning guided imagery and breathing relaxation exercises. The six sessions are conducted

Surgery technique saves patient's blood, money

Los Angeles Times-

Washington Post News Service

More than 85 percent of the blood lost following open heart surgery can be recovered and returned to the patient, surgeons at Fairfax Hospital in Northern Virginia have said.

The new technique, called cardiotomy reservoir chest drainage, pumps hemorrhaging blood from the chest cavity, through a filter and back into the patient. In the first 13 months of use, the hospital cut the average number of units of donated blood from 3.8 to 0.5 per heart surgery patient.

This saved 1,729 units of blood, worth about $243,000, said Aaron G. Hill, head of the Fairfax program.

"A lot of the impetus for this came from blood shortages, like the one we're having now," Hill said.

DEAR ABBY

Closet dropout wants education

By ABIGAIL VAN BUREN

DEAR ABBY: I am a high school dropout who has been married to a very prominent businessman for four years. I'll never know how I got so lucky.

I want to finish high school and take some kind of job-training courses. I enrolled in some night classes once, but I never went because I'm too embarrassed to let our friends know that I never finished high school. It might even be damaging to my husband's career if it became known. My verbal skills are fine, but I am not really educated. When friends ask me why I don't have some kind of job, I don't know what to say. Without a high school diploma, I can't get the kind of job that would be expected of me in our circle of friends. There must be other people who are in the same position. What should I do? — CLOSET DROPOUT

DEAR DROPOUT: First, get over the idea that it's a disgrace to be a dropout. It's not. Circumstances have prevented many from graduating from high school with their peers. Fortunately, you can pick up where you dropped out without embarrassment. There are adult education classes (nights or days) at your local college. You could even hire a tutor to teach you at home. You're smart enough to know you need more education. Now be brave enough to get it. And good luck.

DEAR ABBY: I realize that women don't like being looked at solely as sex objects, but do women know that men don't like being looked at solely in terms of how much money they have?

I am unemployed and have very little money, and I am tired of being turned down by greedy women. I am 34 years old, fairly good-looking and I am still valuable, even if I am broke. — WILLIAM IN BUTLER, PA.

DEAR WILLIAM: Obviously your self-esteem is intact. My hat is off to you. However, all men do not look at women solely as sex objects; neither do all women evaluate men on the basis of their pocketbooks. Please don't tar all women with the same

DEAR ABBY: Can a person who is 5 feet 10 weighing 370 pounds fit into an airplane seat going overseas? Thank you. — BIG IN FLAGSTAFF

DEAR BIG: In some airplanes, a coach seat may not accommodate you, but if you go first class, you should have no problem. It's not your height and weight, it's your girth that could ground you.

DEAR ABBY: My wife and I want a divorce and see no reason why we should hire a lawyer. There are no children involved, and we have no property or money to fight over. So what do we need a lawyer for? Or can't we get a divorce without one? ENOUGH IS ENOUGH IN MARYLAND

DEAR ENOUGH: You can obtain a divorce without a lawyer. This is called a court appearance "pro se' (or "for self"). You will need a copy of a divorce complaint form. Most stationery stores carry them. If you cannot find one, you may be able to get one from the court files by paying for photostating it.

My sources cite an old legal maxim: "A lawyer who represents himself has a fool for a client." This may apply equally to non-lawyers.

I am not recommending a do-ityourself divorce; I'm simply letting you know that you have the option. Me? I would hire a lawyer and pay him - or her - for what he or she knows. Would I lie to you on George Washington's birthday?

(Do you hate to write letters because you don't know what to say? Thank-you notes, sympathy letters, congratulations, how to decline and accept invitations and how to write an interesting letter are included in Abby's booklet, "How to Write Let-ters for All Occasions." Send your name and address clearly printed with a check or money order for $2.50 and a long, stamped (39 cents) self-addressed envelope to: Dear Abby, Letter Booklet, P.O. Box 38923, Hollywood, Calif. 90038.)

Mystery formulas cause allergies

By ERMA BOMBECK

I'm a pushover for any product that promises to take 15 minutes off

My bathroom sink is lined with vials and bottles of mysterious formulas pledged to tighten up my face, remove chins, take away lines and eradicate wrinkles. They are made from some of the most unlikely potions known to man: turtle oil, roots of a cactus... and mud from the Dead

They all have something in common. They all cost a fortune, will last forever and will bring out every allergy in my body

The hygroscopic salts that were to reduce stress and revitalize my skin cells as I soaked in the tub made me sneeze for three hours.

The abrasive scrub that was to remove all my dead skin and leave me with the texture of a newborn's behind made me itch like a hound dog to problems at birth

Women in East Harlem and the South Bronx in New York City who were frequent cocaine users were 10 times as likely to have stillborn babies as women who did not use drugs, said Nesprin Bingol of New York Medical College in Valhalla. Babies born to cocaine users were searchers say.

The miracle cream that was to erase three children, an unpaid orthodontist bill and 10 extra pounds from Christmas from my face made my eves swell shut. At first, I thought it was just a coincidence. Then I began to question how come I wasn't allergic to Supp-Hose, glasses or ointment for chapped lips, but only things that improved my looks? The message was quite clear. God does not want me to remain young. He wants me to grow old as He has something in mind. I wish I knew what!

Non-aging sex symbol is definitely not a possibility. I figured that out for myself. When I saw Elizabeth Taylor and Joan Collins with eye make-up I figured a little color on my eyelids and a thin pencil line under them wouldn't be threatening. Wrong. My eyes turned red, my lids swelled and I looked like I had spent the entire night drinking with the Australian army

The only thing I can figure is I'm being singled out to become a symbol of the struggles of America... like the Statue of Liberty. In my face will reflect the hopes and dreams of the tired and oppressed. The frontier mother who gave birth on her lunch hour... the women who put equality above themselves... who toiled in the textile mills with Norma Rae... who fought against the evils of society with Carrie Nation.

Yeah, that's probably it. I will be the universal face the world will respond to. "Didn't I see you at Appomattox?" they will say. "Didn't you used to be Barbara Frietchie?"

Whatever, I have been given a 'sign" that is my destiny, but I can't help thinking, what would it hurt to give nature a little boost? After all. even the Statue of Liberty gets a sanding job every hundred years or

She reported her findings at a meeting of the American Society of Human Genetics. A similar study reported in the New England Journal of Medicine by researchers from Northwestern University found that cocaine users had higher rates of spontaneous abortion than non-users and that cocaine interfered with the brain functions of the infants, who were less able to respond to stimulation. The Northwestern study also found four women who immediately after injection of cocaine had onset of labor and a tearing of the placenta away from the uterus, a condition that often results in infant death. That study did not find lowerthan-average birthweights among the children of cocaine-using Another disagreement between the two studies was that Bingol did not find increased rates of spontaneous abortion in the cocaine users, as the Northwestern researchers did. Bingol said her study could not determine whether infrequent use of combination known as a "speedball."

Bingol mentioned two possible ways in which cocaine could be affecting fetuses: The shrinking of blood vessels, a known effect of cocaine, could be limiting the supply of oxygen-rich blood to the fetuses of the cocaine-using mothers, and the loss of apetite that accompanies cocaine use could mean that the fetus-

Possible treatment found for cold

Los Angeles Times-Washington Post News Service

A violent sneeze carries a rush of rhinoviruses out of the nose as the cold sufferer grabs a tissue to get some relief. It doesn't help much.

Instead, thousands of viruses impregnate the tissue. Hundreds more pass through it and lodge on the cold victim's hand. Unknowingly, the vic-tim smears viruses around the house on table tops, pencils, glasses. Each virus can survive the harsh environment outside the human body for hours until it catches a ride on the next passing hand. A spouse clearing the breakfast dishes picks up a spoon richly contaminated with rhinovirus. Some rub off.

An itch brings that hand to sleepy morning eyes and with a rub a few viruses are deposited on the eye's moist membranes. There, tears will carry the invaders down a passageway from the inside corner of the eye to an inner chamber of the nose.

Finally, the rhinovirus reaches the nose's susceptible cells. Quickly, the invader commandeers the metabolic machinery of the invaded cell and produces hundreds of new viruses. Then, in a great lethal rupture, the invaded cell dies and releases new viruses to spread the infection.

In 36 to 40 hours, the symptoms begin: runny nose, scratchy throat, coughing. The cold has claimed another victim.

COLDS AFFECTED more than 70 million Americans in 1982, according to the National Center for Health Statistics. But the total may be higher, and one Cleveland study estimates that people suffer an average of six colds a year, with children suffering as many as 12 colds a year.

There is no effective treatment to shorten the duration of a cold, nor is there a vaccine to prevent it. Colds are caused by more than 200 different viruses, making a treatment for all of them extremely unlikely.

But scientists from Virginia and Adelaide, Australia, announced what appears to be the first effective drug to prevent a cold: interferon. Application of a few squirts prevents symptoms of a rhinovirus infection 80 percent of the time. However, since rhinoviruses cause only 30 to 40 percent of all colds during the year — the rest are caused by another 100 different kinds of virus the interferon treatment was able to prevent other family members from becoming infected only 39 percent of the time.

"It clearly is not the cure for the common cold," said Dr. Frederick G. Hayden from the University of Viriginia School of Medicine and director of the study. "What this study demonstrates, for the first time, is two things: It is possible to prevent the transmission of rhinovirus colds in the family setting. Short-term use (of interferon) during exposure to a cold is effective in reducing the risk of developing an infection, and is generally well tolerated."

"This (report) takes interferon a step nearer to being a drug for patients," said Dr. Thomas Merigan, an interferon researcher at Stanford University Medical Center. "It is an important step because it has shown that interferon may really have a usefulness for patients with a cold."

BUT GOOD news is mixed with "One of the disappointing aspects of the study was that (interferon) did not protect against influenza virus or other related viruses," Hayden said. And the protection it did pro-vide against rhinovirus lasted only as long as the interferon spray was being used. Unlike a vaccine, interferon does not provide long-lasting immunity to a virus.

The world first learned of interferon in 1957, when British virologist Alick Isaacs and his Swiss collaborator, Jean Lindenmann, announced the discovery of a family of proteins, produced by virtually every cell in the body, that could "interfere" with the ability of many different kinds of viruses to infect nearby cells. In some ways, interferon, which is a part of the body's natural immunological defenses, is like an air raid siren. When a virus invades a cell, it induces the infected cell to produce interferon. The interferon leaks out and spreads to uninfected nearby cells. It warns those cells that viruses are nearby and stimulates them to produce a group of proteins often referred to as "antiviral proteins," which protect the cell from the virus. The exact protective mechanism of those proteins remains unknown.

Until the mid-1970s, interferon research was limited by the protein's scarcity. That changed when the American Cancer Society paid several million dollars for small amounts of interferon to test in cancer patients.

Because of that interest, emerging biotechnology companies chose interferon as one of their first

NEW AVAILABILITY allowed researchers to test interferon's ability to stop colds, influenza and other infections. There were two basic approaches: use interferon to treat inections, or use it to prevent them.

In experiments on volunteers, the Virginia researchers showed that interferon reduced the weight of nasal mucus production by 25 to 50 per-cent and reduced viral shedding when given 28 hours after rhinovirus was squirted into their noses, but before symptoms actually appeared. But the interferon treatment "did not have much effect on the symptomatic illness," said Dr. Jack M. Gwaltney Jr., head of the division of epidemiology and virology at the University of Virginia School of Medicine. Several researchers believe that interferon — or any antiviral drug — never will be very effective in shortening the symptoms of a cold once they appear because by the time symptoms appear, it's too late.

"The whole cycle of infection is very short," said Stanford's Merigan.

We have to get in there early. After the initial infection, it takes about 36 hours for the first symptoms and highest concentration of virus, to appear. That also is the time the victim is most contagious. "In three days, from the moment the symptoms appear, the concentration of virus is falling due to normal defenses," said Merigan.

Dear Dr. Solomon: My husband comes from a broken home and there are times when he simply drinks too much. Is it possible that the two things are connected. Are there any other things that might give some idea as to whether a person is going to have trouble with al-cohol? — Mrs. V.M., Tampa, Fla.

By DR. NEIL SOLOMON

Dear Mrs. M.: A broken home has been reported to be a risk factor for alcoholism, although it should be obvious that many people who come from broken homes do not turn to alcohol. Other risk factors include drug use, heavy cigarette smoking, a spouse who drinks alcohol, and the person's occupation (for example, truck drivers). Certain personality traits, such as impulsiveness, rebelliousness and low self-esteem, have also been associated with heavy

Dear Dr. Solomon: I was an overnight guest at the home of a friend, and she warned me that one of her children is a sleepwalker. Would you please tell me how common this is and what can be done about it? Does the person know that he is sleepwalking? — Ms. D.U., Montpelier, Vt.

Dear Ms. U.: From five to 15 percent of children, and less than five percent of adults, sleepwalk. The incident usually lasts less than 30 minutes and the person does not remem-

Hypnosis has been used to treat sleepwalking, with the patient learning to wake up as soon as his or her feet touch the floor. Psychotherapy may be helpful if stress is a factor.

Dear Dr. Solomon: I have met a number of people who have diabetes but who do not take insulin. Can you give me some information about the treatment of people who have this form of diabetes? — Edna, Trenton,

Broken home linked to alcoholism

Dear Edna: About 80 percent of all people who have diabetes have a form called noninsulin-dependent diabetes. Of these, as many as 90 per-cent may be obese, and their condition generally improves if they lose weight.

If weight loss is not successful in cotnrolling the diabetes in these patients, oral agents may be used. And if the combination is not effective, insulin may be recommended.

Dear Dr. Solomon: My husband has angina, and he says that all he has to do is stay calm and not do any heavy work. Is that all there is to it? I would feel better if you could give me some specific types of activity that a person with angina should try to avoid. — Mrs. G.W., Dallas.

Dear Mrs. W.: Anything that makes the heart work harder may result in an anginal episode. In addition to emotional upset and heavy work, other common events include heavy meals, walking uphill, walking in very cold or very warm weather or against a strong wind, and sexual

Dear Dr. Solomon: It seems to be pretty well established that breastfeeding is good for babies. But I have also read that whatever a mother takes in is going to be found in her milk. What does this mean in regard to people who take drugs or who drink too much or who use coffee or smoke? Can they breast feed? Mrs. Q.P., Winston-Salem, N.C.

Dear Mrs. P.: Dr. James S. Marks, of the Centers for Disease Control in Atlanta, recommends against breastfeeding by drug addicts or drug abusers, or by women who take lithi-um or certain other drugs. In general however, women who smoke or drink coffee are able to breast feed.

According to Dr. Marks, there is relatively little evidence that nicotine or caffeine that is transmitted through breast milk has a serious effect on the baby. Of course, caffeine does have the potential for making an infant jittery and for interfering with his or her sleep.

A woman who drinks to excess does put her child at risk of consuming a large amount of alcohol through the breast milk. I would hope that these women would be able to change their habits for the sake of their children.

Finally, I would urge every woman for whom a drug is being prescribed to inform her physician that she is breast-feeding. The physician would then be in a position to advise for or against continued breast-feeding.

For Elizabeth, Augusta, Ga.: According to Dr. William M. Michener, of the Cleveland Clinic Foundation, a young child who has acute diarrhea should be fed at least every four hours. Furthermore, breast feeding is generally well tolerated and should not be discontinued.

LIFESTYLE Travel

Sunday, February 23, 1986 Midland Reporter-Telegram

Text and Photos By Lawrence Budd

The Reporter-Telegram's epic trek from Mexico to Canada pushes northward through Oregon in this fifth installment of a special six-part series on hiking the Pacific Crest Trail.

From his campsite along the rim of amazing Crater Lake, top, writer Lawrence Budd watched the sun rise. A deer's sudden movements nearby served as his alarm clock that morning.

Left in the wake of a volcanic collapse thousands of years before, Crater Lake, center, stands out to Budd as the most wondrous sight in his 2,600 miles of hiking along the trail. The deepest lake in the United States, it is 7,000 feet above sea level.

A series of waterfalls, bottom, marked the final miles in Oregon along the lush Eagle Creek Trail.

After 1,600 miles and nearly four months, California was left behind with little fanfare.

The Southern Pacific land through which the trail passed was being systematically logged and grazed, leaving once-forested ridges barren and abused. Herds of cattle, noisy logging trucks, buzzing chainsaws and falling trees crowd my memory of entering Oregon.

Two days later, I hiked off Mt. Ashland and had dinner at Callahan's, a restaurant celebrated along the PCT grapevine and noted in the guidebook for its ample portions and prohiker attitudes.

After a wonderful meal and two-day celebration of my progress in the nearby city of Ashland, I returned to the hike.

Walking along more forested ridges past developed lake areas brought me to the Sky Lakes Basin, a collection of small, shallow lakes at high elevations. Through much of Oregon, I chose alternate trails other than the PCT, which invariably kept to the high ridges and away from water.

Beneath beautiful Stuart Falls, I camped with a group from the First Baptist Church of Coos Bay, Oregon. One of them fixed my stove as I told tales of my wanderings.

They were the first "section hikers" — groups of Oregonians crossing Pacific Crest Trail in annual trips along successive sections of the trail, rather than undertaking the entire length at one time — I met.

THE NEXT DAY'S hike carried me up to Crater Lake, which proved to be everything I'd been waiting for and more. In my experience, only the Grand Canyon has rivaled its impact as a natural wonder.

The presence of such a large lake at 7,000 feet was beyond my comprehension. It is also the deepest lake in the U.S., attaining depths of nearly 2,000 feet in places.

According to one theory, it was formed when a 12,000-foot volcano collapsed thousands of years ago, leaving a crater that filled with water.

After studying this wonder for two days, I walked to Mt. Thielsen, where I met two more groups of section hikers. A scramble up the side of this 9,182-foot volcanic leftover opened up views south into the recesses of Crater Lake, as well as splendid looks at Mt. Shasta, more than 120 miles south and Mt. Jefferson, almost as far to the north.

Father Andrew and Chuck (as they were known to everyone on the trail) reappeared at my camp by Thielsen Creek and I hiked with them, mostly along the old Oregon Skyline Trail, to Odell Lake.

Each morning's hike for my religious companions was preceded by communion. Despite the fact he was limping badly from the hike's wear and tear, Chuck insisted on a short jog before breakfast every morning.

Topics of discussion ranged from religion to the quantum theory as we hiked through pine forests, before we separated at Odell Lake, near Highway 58 at Willamette Pass.

WHILE WAITING FOR a college friend who was to join me for the Three Sisters Wilderness, I passed time with Steve and Roland Werner, Canadian brothers headed south on the trail. Steve had only recently finished high school. Roland, probably 10 years older, was a practiced traveler.

My friend, John Luhta of Cincinnati, Ohio, found his way to Odell Lake and we headed toward the Three Sisters, a trio of peaks marking one of Oregon's most popular wilderness areas.

Just as we dropped out of forest cover and spotted the South Sister for the first time, the weather began to turn bad. Arising the next morning from our spot near Sisters Mirror Lake, which was heavily populated with Labor Day weekend campers, we hiked the long expanse of Wickiup Plain, enjoying spectacular views of the South and Middle Sisters, other peaks and natural wonders.

Rain hit and we hiked to Obsidian Falls, soaked and miserable. Luhta pondered hiking out to escape the discomfort, but I convinced him to hike on. We pushed through dense fog up a lava ridge to Minnie Scott Spring. Luckily, the only two other campers there were headed out the next morning to Portland, where my friend needed to be

I struck out alone early the next morning, intent on hiking 26 miles to Santiam Pass.

'Walkable' cities listed

Los Angeles Times-

Washington Post News Service

Perhaps the best way to get to know a city, both quickly and well, is to explore it on foot.

This is most enjoyable in cities — whether in this country or abroad — that are graced with a reasonably compact city center, interesting and attractive structures, fine parks and inviting shops and cafes.

Among the world's most walkable big cities:

big cities:

San Francisco. The climbs in this city of hills can be arduous, but each new summit offers marvelous views of the sea, and along the way you'll pass the elegant boutiques of Union Square and the intriguingly aromatic cafes of Chinatown.

■ New York. The tourist's Manhattan is easy to negotiate on foot, and every step of the way is a sometimes funny, sometimes sad but always interesting street show. Take your pick: the classy shops of Fifth Avenue; the honky-tonk hubbub of Times Square; the "noshing" delis along the streets of the Lower East

■ Venice. A pedestrian's dream city, where the streets are free of motor vehicles, the water views enchant, and a short walk from almost anywhere will take you over an arched bridge to a pleasant cafe, a beautiful church or a hidden piazza. See Piazza San Marco and the Ponte di Rialto, certainly, but also get lost in the quiet, charming neighborhood of Santa Maria della Salute, the lovely baroque church across Ponte dell Accademia

■ Copenhagen. An attractive seaside city of easy-going people, it de-lights with colorful streets, flowerfilled parks, storybook palaces and very sophisticated shops. Walk the famous pedestrian-only shopping street, the Stroget, which begins near Tivoli Garden and ends about three-fourths of a mile later at Kongens Nytorv, the city's largest square.

■ New Orleans. The French Quarter is compact, historic, full of fine shops, cafes and restaurants, and is as lovely as it is lively. Stroll Bourbon Street for jazz or rest on a park bench watching the busy Mississippi River scene.

■ Vienna. The inner city looks almost forbiddingly elegant and formal, as perhaps befits the old capital of the Hapsburg empire. But don't steps will take you to Domgasse,

Hikers built Salt Lake City

Los Angeles Times-Washington Post News Service

SALT LAKE CITY - Salt Lake City was built by some of the more prodigious walkers in American history. So it seems altogether fitting that a visitor to Utah should take a walking tour of this fascinating religious and commercial center In the winter of 1846 the first of the Mormon pioneers set out from southern Illinois on a 1,200mile flight from persecution that took them across snowy plains, burning deserts and the towering Rockies to this beautiful natural

Over the next two decades some 80,000 more Latter-day Saints made the same formidable trek to reach this city and the geographic soul of the Mormon faith — Temple Square, a central 10-acre plot that resonates with a rich spiritual feeling reminiscent of the Vatican and the Wailing

On our walking tour we'll pass many reminders of those hearty Mormon pilgrims. But we'll also have a chance to eat some Concrete, visit a department store with the initials "ZCMI," decipher the most complicated system of street addresses anywhere and learn why landlocked Utah, 600 miles from the nearest ocean, has decided that its state bird should be the sea gull.

So strap on your jogging shoes and slather on the sun cream (you can get a mean burn on these bright Indian-summer days at 4,400 feet), and let's get going.

If you get tired, we'll rest on a bench and gaze up at the rugged peaks of the Wasatch Range, which frame the eastern approaches to the city.

YOU'LL NOTICE immediately that Salt Lake City seems larger than life to a walker. It was planned that way by Brigham Young, the "American Moses" who led the Mormon pioneers on their long westward trek, and who laid out their new city at the edge of the Great Salt Lake.

At his order, each block at the heart of the city is 1-7 mile long - about twice as long as the normal city block. And the major downtown streets, designed so that Brigham Young's ox-drawn carriage could make a 360-degree turn without running up on the sidewalks, are each as wide as a six-lane avarease.

To begin our tour at the beginning, we'll set off from the intersection of Main Street and South Temple, the site of an imposing three-tiered statue honoring Brigham Young and the first pha-lanx of Mormons to arrive.

"The entire company and out-fit," the memorial plaque notes, "consisted of 143 men, 3 women, 2 children, 70 wagons, 1 boat, 1 can-non, 93 horses, 52 mules, 66 oxen, 19 cows.

Just behind us rise the six imposing spires of the enormous, gray-granite Salt Lake Temple, the sanctum sanctorum for the 5.5 million members of the Church of Jesus Christ of Latterday Saints. Standing tall and proud atop the highest spire is a statue of the angel Moroni, his golden trumpet gleaming in the midday sun.

Almost any day of the year the grounds of the temple are alive with blushing brides in lavish gowns who have come to the temple to be married — not just "till death do us part," but rather, ac-cording to the Mormon faith, for all eternity.

The temple is not a church. (Indeed, it is closed on Sunday). Except for the wedding parties, it is open only to members of the church who come for special religious observances.

THE NON-MORMON, however, is welcome anywhere else on the lushly flowered expanse of Temple Square. We can take any of six different guided tours offered at no charge by church volunteers. We can walk through two different visitor centers explaining various aspects of the faith, including a depiction of Jesus Christ's visit to North America, the most important event in the Book of Mormon.

Just behind the high temple is the huge, round Mormon Tabernacle, home of the famous choir. Visitors are welcome at the choir's Sunday-morning-broadcast concerts, and at the weekly rehearsal each Thursday at 8 p.m. Directly across from the south gate of Temple Square we come to Crossroads Center, one of the two big underground shopping malls at the very heart of this

There we will find another Salt Lake City exclusive: Nielsen's Frozen Custard, the best soft-ice-cream emporium I've come upon in a long career of soft-ice-cream eating.

Nielsen's offers a delicacy that should not be missed — a thickly spun concoction of custard and flavorings called "Concrete."

Just across Main Street from Crossroads Center is the "ZCMI" — that is, Zion's Cooperative Mercantile Institution, which Brigham Young set up in the 1860s as the West's first department store.

Today it is a grand old store in the manner of Garfinckel's or Marshall Field's, and a perfect spot to buy a Salt Lake City souvenir.

BACK IN the Temple Square itself is an array of statuary, including the well known sea gull memorial. This commemorates the moment in 1848 when a host of sea gulls arrived here just in time to devour the horde of grasshoppers that was destroying the Mormon pioneers' first crop.

The providential coming of the gulls assured the Mormons enough food to get through the winter. In gratitude, the church erected a shining statue of two sea gulls on the square, and the State of Utah decreed that the sea gull would be its official state bird.

To me, though, the most moving statue on Temple Square is the Handcart Memorial. This larger-than-life image depicts one of the thousands of early Mormon families who were too poor to afford a wagon for the long journey from Illinois to Utah. Undeterred, the men strapped themselves to handcarts and literally pulled their families and goods all the

The statue captures perfectly the devout faith and the sheer grit that propelled them over mountain and plain.

Walk along Calle Ocho in Miami's Little Havana like foreign tour

By EDWARD CODY

Los Angeles Times-Washington Post News Service

MIAMI — The name Miami evokes palm trees, sunny beaches and a long row of pastel resort hotels, at least for many travelers. And the image is accurate, of course, for Miami

When winter gets too long and bitter up north, pale visitors still show up here with swimsuits and suntan lotion, seeking warm Caribbean rays as they have since early in the century

The Beach is actually a long island, however, lying just offshore in Biscayne Bay. On the mainland, where most of Miami lies, the sun is the same, but the rest has been changing in recent years at a remarkable pace.

Miami has grown prodigiously, and much of the swelling has to do with immigration. Perhaps nowhere is the impac of new immigration on the United States more obvious to visitors - because nowhere is it more concentrated - than in the streets of Miami.

Immigration here means mostly Cubans, who have streamed into the United States since Fidel Castro took over their homeland in 1959.

So many have found a home in the Caribbean atmosphere of Miami that over half the city's 350,000 residents are Hispanics. Dade County, which envelops Miami, calculates more than 40 percent of its 1.8 million people are Hispanic, overwhelmingly

The result is a distinctly Latin flavor in city life. That flavor is evident the board rooms of towering banks, where most of the deals are with Latin America; in the lobbies of downtown hotels, where most of the clients are Hispanic business travelers; and in the city-center shops, where most of the customers are Hispanics on shopping sprees.

But nowhere is it more evident than along Calle Ocho, which used to be 8th Street, or the Tamiami Trail leading to the Everglades, until it evolved during the 1960s into the central artery of Little Havana.

THE GROWTH of Miami's Cuban population has spread Latin accents throughout the city by now. But the district called Little Havana is where the phenomenon first became evident 20 years ago.

Like San Francisco's Chinatown, Little Havana is where the foreign dimension of Miami is most concentrated and most enjoyably visible. A walk along Calle Ocho cutting through Little Havana can be a walk into another country, where the signs are in Spanish, the restaurants and coffee shops are transplanted from Cuba and the merchants and shoppers have the Latin instinct for friendliness and hospitality.

A business traveler with time on his hands or a winter sun-seeker grown tired of the beach can spend a easant half-day walking up and down Calle Ocho. Depending on the time of the year - summer is hot, winter delightful - and on how energetic you are after lunch — Cuban food is delicious, but Jane Fonda would not approve — I would recommend covering from about 7th Avenue into the high 20s or low 30s.

Admittedly, the district is not as quaint or compact as European neighborhoods, but it is authentic. and the hike is worth it.

ONE INTERESTING place to start is the El Credito cigar factory, just up from 10th Avenue. Ernesto Perez Carrillo and his 15 employees, with Caribbean tobacco grown by other exiled Cubans, roll premium smokes there in the same manner Ernesto's father used back in the Havana suburbs.

Ernesto, 34, took over the Miami shop from his late father four years ago and willingly shows visitors around. He himself has been in the trade since he was 19, so he knows what he is talking about.

The quality of his cigars, marketed nationwide under several brand names, seems like a foregone conclusion once you have smelled the factory. For anyone with doubts, Ernesto recommends the Crown Imperial, an imposing 9-inch cigar that retails for $2.25 and makes a Churchill look stubby

If the sight of people working creates hunger, and lunchtime is on your mind, doubling back four blocks from El Credito to the Malaga restaurant at No. 740 is the next

Cora Mendez, known as Dona Cora by her waiters, runs a pleasant Spanish establishment with a clear Cuban accent. You can sit in the Salon Don Pacheco, named after the doctor who worked with Muhammad Ali in his prime, or in the Salon Dona Cora, named after the 65-year-old owner and spirit of the place.

When the weather is cool enough, diners also sit in the courtyard next to a drooping fig tree. Dona Cora brags first about her Spanish paella But local Cubans give highest marks for their island's own arroz con pollo, a chicken and rice casserole. For those who can wait to eat, however, Calle Ocho offers numerous little cafes where hearty Cuban sandwiches and everyday Cuban cuisine are served at bargain prices. In sandwiches, the most popular are Sandwich Cubano and median-oche, both versions of toasted hoagies. In cooked foods, look for masitas de cerdo, fried pork chunks, or cerdo asado, roast pork. NEARLY EVERYTHING will be accompanied by rice or black beans or fried plantains, or all three. Mixing the white rice and the dark beans makes what Cubans call 'Christians and Moors.' Locals tend to spread their business around. They might have a picadillo, or spicy ground meat over rice, in one cafe, then move to another to order a guava or mango batido, the fruity Cuban version of a milkshake, then walk on to a third cafe to buy a cafecito from the sidewalk through a vending window.

Like many other Hispanics, Cubans cannot resist making something sound more attractive and less imposing by adding "-ito," the Spanish-language diminutive.

So cafe, thick, rich and sweet, becomes cafecito. In this case, the habit contributes to accuracy as well. Miami's Cubans generally drink their thick brew in thimble-sized paper cups containing about three sips of coffee.

One of my favorite stops is Casablanca, on the corner of 23rd Avenue. Not only are the food and coffee good and the service friendly, but the site also is distinguished by a large mural depicting life-size Calle Ocho characters, with open-necked guayaberas and gold medals, alongside cartoon characters such as Su perman. Peanuts characters, for example, can be seen looking up and asking, "Que pasa, Calle Ocho?"

Another place worth visiting lies just below 20th Avenue. It has no name that I ever saw, but it haphazardly combines a laundry and drycleaning establishment, a cafe where elders gather to match anti-Castro tirades and a used bookstore.

ON SOME corners, local entrepreneurs sell shish kebab or chicken. roasted on sidewalk barbeques. Others offer fresh mangoes or whatever other fruits are in season. The sidewalk business picks up markedly during Carnaval de Miami, when the city celebrates its Latin American personality. Next year's observances are scheduled for March 1-9, with Calle Ocho turning into an extended block party March 9. The vendors and their customers also multiply on Jan. 6, when Little Havana celebrates the Epiphany with a parade down Calle Ocho in honor of the Three Kings.

Encouraged by a southbound hiker, I pushed on to the Santiam Lodge, which is managed by a Presbyterian alliance.

The list of characters also boarding at the lodge that night included Father Andrew and Chuck, another priest who intended to hike with them to the Washington border and a Portland couple who had recently begun a walk across America.

I saw the last of my spiritual friends near Rockpile Lake in the Mt. Jefferson Wilderness. Father Andrew was to be honored for his 25 years of monastic life at a party in Cascade Locks before they crossed into Washington.

Spurred by fears of winter hitting before I could make the Canadian border, I pushed on at a faster pace.

After spending that night in full view of majestic Mt. Jefferson, I hiked into Jefferson Park, a mixture of colors, blue lakes and trees in the shadow of the peak named for the Declaration of Independence's

AGAIN, THE weather turned threatening and I camped gratefully in a shelter on Breitenbush Lake inside the Warm Springs Indian Reservation. After picking up more food at the Olallie Lake Ranger Station, I walked through cold and rain for two days before coming to large Timothy Lake, inhabited by campers

Jim and Loucille Gieler, a couple from Portland, welcomed me into their camp near Little Crater Lake — actually an unusually large arte-tian spring — and fed me civilized

A bit nauseated the next morning from the previous night's overeating, I walked to the Timberline Lodge. Perched almost 6,000 feet above sea level on a ridge of mighty Mt. Hood, this lodge is a monument built 50 years ago by and in memory of the Works Project Administra-

Mt. Hood, 11,235 feet in elevation, is partially covered in snow yearround. From the lodge, the trail covers more than 18 miles in rounding this giant mountain. I hiked in cold, wet weather past Paradise Park and off its side.

MY LAST day of hiking in Oregon was mostly on the scenic Eagle Creek Trail, which follows this creek past numerous waterfalls nearly to the Columbia River Gorge. As rain pelted tiny Cascade Locks, er. I hiked down its main street and into a shelter in the town park. I expected to catch up with Keith Jones and Jeff Sauer, my old hiking town sitting on the Columbia Rivbuddles, here, but was amazed to find one of "the California Boys." Four months had passed since we had parted ways in the San Gabriel Mountains in Southern California and there were many new tales to be shared.

The month I spent hiking across Oregon had been therapeutic, until the rains hit. The terrain had been gentle, the scenery splendid and the pace slower. But Washington would mean a return to a 20-mile per day pace in hopes of beating winter to the Canadian border.

Next Sunday: Washington and the end of the trail.

Frequent flyer program abuse targeted by IRS

Hearst News Service

The business traveler who converts bonus mileage accumulated in airline frequent flyer programs to personal use now has more to worry about than a choice of destinations. Such travel is a primary target this year for the Internal Revenue

"The IRS is cracking down on abuses of deductions claimed by businesses and, more particularly, on individuals who don't report the fringe benefits those businesses pass along," said IRS spokesman Larry Wright. "When you consider the frequent flyer programs, the personal use of (company) automobiles, the use of company facilities, the use of company equipment, machinery and so forth, there's no question at all that it is a high area of abuse." In order to rejuvenate sagging revenues in airline passenger travel brought on by higher fuel costs and competition spawned by deregulation of the airline industry, many carriers instituted programs awarding mileage coupons to frequent fly-ers — coupons that could be turned in for bonuses ranging from free coach tickets for flights within the United States to first-class travel for two to anywhere in the world.

"Persons flying on company business and using the bonus coupons for personal travel — vacations and so forth — are required to report that on their income tax (under mis-cellaneous income)," says Wright. The way they determine how much to put down is the fair market value of the ticket at the time the trip was made. I am told that one of the comments frequently coming in from the airlines is, We tell the people when we give them the ticket how much it's worth. It's their responsibility to report it — don't put the burden on our head."

DOES IT WORK? Apparently not, according to the IRS.

"The problem for us is to enforce it, because there's not a lot of information that's available to us right now," Wright says. "We're seeking some method to be able to verify and match the information filed by individual taxpayers to be sure that they are, in fact, reporting the income." Legislation has been introduced in Congress by Rep. Harold Ford, D-Tenn., that would require airlines to report to the government the names of passengers who participate in frequent flyer bonus plans.

Meantime, the national IRS office, Wright said, is collecting comments from the airline industry, from individual businesses and from individuals "and formulating a regulation which will require either the airline or the business - or both - to account for these frequent flyer perks that are delivered for the personal use of their employees."

Failure to report could result in additional taxes and penalties ac-cording to the facts and circumstances of individual cases. If the tax examiner feels there is fraud involved, penalties plus interest could result, in addition to payment of the original taxes, Wright says.

The so-called crackdown involving

The so-called crackdown involving the frequent flyer issue is not a recent development, but goes back to the beginning of the program.

"Historically," Wright said, "we've been precluded from doing anything with the fringe benefit issues because Congress just flat-out said we don't want you doing anything with the fringe benefits. We were going at it hot and heavy when Congress at it hot and heavy when Congress passed the legislation that kept us from engaging in those particular is-sues. It's only recently that the legislation that put that moratorium in place expired. So what's happening now in the Internal Revenue Service is we're gearing up to attack the issues again."

HOW MUCH TAX revenue is being lost to the government as a result of taxpayer failure to report fringe benefits as income?

"I don't know of any studies and therefore we wouldn't be able to answer that question," Wright said.

SAVE AN ADDITIONAL $100 A CABIN ON 4 & 7 DAY CRUISES

"But assuming an average of $1,000 a year for business people in free air-line travel is transpiring, you get some kind of an idea of the unreported income." That translates into $1,000 times the 4.8 million members reported by United, American, PSA and Pan Am — or a boggling $4.8 billion in tax-able income, if those 4.8 million use their bonus awards.) Do IRS members themselves par-ticipate in frequent flyer bonus programs?

"It's grounds for being fired if you were to accept something like that," Wright said. "Most people in the Internal Revenue Service fly on a government contract rate, anyway, and you can't participate in some of these programs if you're on this special government rate. In the IRS, the code of conduct says any benefits you get like that you've got to turn them back over to Uncle Sugar so you can dole them out to some other government traveler who's on official business."

American tourists' visits to Europe may decrease

By MICHAEL CARLTON Los Angeles Times-

Washington Post News Service

The 1980s have been like a fairy tale for European hostelers, restaurateurs and everyone else involved in the tourism business — a fairytale that could have been written by Denmark's Hans Christian Andersen or Germany's Brothers Grimm. In the first five years of this decade tourism from America to Europe has increased more than 50 percent. Last year, nearly 6.6 million Americans flew or floated across the Atlantic to visit with one or more of the member countries of the European Travel Commission.

Like Cinderella placing her foot in the glass slipper, Europe had found the perfect suitor — an American with his strong dollar and the willingness to spend it.

THIS YEAR, HOWEVER, there is evidence that the slipper may shatter, that the American and his dollar may turn into a pumpkin, that Cinderella may have to return to the drudgery of her stepmother's

Hermann Krueger, director of the German National Tourist Office and chairman of the European Travel Commission, thinks Europe may see still another increase in American tourism in 1986 — "As much as six percent" — but his is a minority

Two factors — the falling strength of the American dollar and the specter of international terrorism - may intrude on the European fairytale this year.

Travel Weekly, this country's leading travel trade publication, reported recently that 48.7 percent of the nation's travel agents had clients who either switched destinations or cancelled their travel plans because of last year's terrorist attacks on travelers. The survey further indicated that 86.7 percent of all travel agents surveyed predicted that terrorist incidents would affect their international business this year.

European destinations most often cited by travel agents as being affected by the fear of terrorism were Greece (62 percent), Italy (34 percent), Western Europe (33 percent), and Mediterranean cruises (32

GREECE IS EXPECTED to be particularly hard hit, with luxury hotels in Athens (those favored by Americans) suffering "a 20 to 30 percent loss," according to Apostolos Doxiades, manager of the posh Grande Bretagne hotel. Doxiades went on to forecast that American business could pick up dramatically by June if there are no more terrorists

"Every incident takes about six months to get over," he said, a sentiment echoed by Germany's Kruegar, who was even more optimistic saying "in three months people will forget. In the past two weeks alone have increased bookings significantly." SECURITY AT THE Athens airport, pinpointed by President Reagan as unsafe, has been beefed up significantly, he said, and is now "as good as any airport in the world," a statement backed up by former Travel Weekly Aviation Editor Bob Davis, who recently toured the the airport.

"The authorities do appear to be ready to prevent terrorist incidents at the airport, and it has passed the inspection of security experts from the International Civil Aviation Organization, IATA (International Air Transport Association) and the Federal Aviation Administration," he Kruegar, in discussing airport security throughout Europe said, "We can only reassure travelers that our airports are the safest in the world. even safer than FAA standards.'

He pointed out that of the 6.6 million Americans who visited Europe last year "only 10 were killed in terrorist incidents." Joseph Hallissey, chairman of the American Society of Travel Agents added "I don't want to belittle the lives lost in recent terrorist acts, but those numbers, compared with the numbers of people killed every day in our large cities or on our highways by drunken drivers, are really quite small. If people become afraid to travel, then the terrorists win."

CRUISE LINES, still smarting over the reaction of the hijacking of the Italian liner Achille Lauro, are moving their operations from the Mediterranean to safer locations like Scandinavia, the Orient and Alaska.

Already Royal Cruise Line, Royal Viking, Princess Cruises, Ocean Cruise Lines and Sea Goddess Cruises have cancelled or altered their itineraries in the Mediterranean.

Arthur Rodney, president of Princess Cruises, said his firm was pulling out of the Meditteranean because "with the current situation creating the tremendous lack of booking we had to make the move (from the Mediterranean to Alaska)."

Despite the concern about terrorism and the falling dollar, Europe will still be a popular destination for Americans in 1986. As the memory of the hijacking of TWA Flight 847 fades, as thoughts about the terrorist attacks at airports in Frankfurt, Vienna and Rome become misty with time, as the hijacking of the Achille Lauro is forgotten, Americans will once again pack their bags and head for Europe.

PLANTS IN THE HOME

Rejuvenate violets in spring

By ELVIN McDONALD

Dear Elvin: About a year ago I received a small hanging basket of the trailing African violet called 'Vi-olet Trail.' It has bloomed almost nonstop in the east-facing window over my kitchen sink, but now has bare stalks for several inches up from the soil and no signs of new buds. Does it need special fertilizer or is repotting in order?

A. Georgene Albrecht, a Pennsylvania indoor gardener who is unusually successful with trailing African violets, says that late winter or spring is the ideal time to propagate and rejuvenate these normally pro-lific bloomers. She considers 'Violet Trail' one of the best for basket culture. Here is her routine:

1) Make cuttings having at least three mature leaves. Remove bottom leaves and insert in fine horticultural vermiculite. Moisten well with lukewarm water. Cover with glass or plastic to prevent wilting. Constant warmth, around 70-75 F., encourages

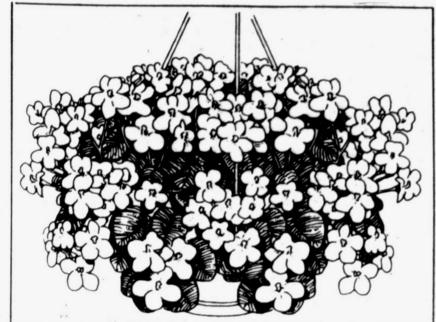

2) Plant five rooted cuttings in an 8- or 10-inch basket. Select a basic peat mix with vermiculite. Baccto and Pro-Mix are excellent. Add chunks of dampened long-fibered sphagnum moss for water retention with good drainage. Top-dress with Osmocote 14-14-14 timed-release fertilizer pellets and finish with a layer of long-fibered sphagnum moss, letting it extend to cushion the edges. 3) Early pruning is essential for success with large trailers such as 'Violet Trail.' When the cutting has four mature leaves, remove the growing tip. Branching will occur at each leaf axil. When these branches have three mature leaves, remove

A trailing violet planting made ac-cording to these directions will remain vigorous for a year with only occasional grooming to remove spent leaves and dead flower stalks. Maintain temperatures between 60 F. and 80 F. Keep soil constantly moist using water within eight degrees of the air temperature. In addition to the timed-release fertilizer pellets, fertilize once a month with an organic (seaweed concentrate or fish emulsion) or water-soluble fertilizer (Schultz-Instant, Peter's 12-36-14, Ra-Pid-Gro or Plant Marvel).

Finally, Georgene notes, "Trailing African violets are very floriferous, therefore, they need a fertilizer rich in nitrogen to prevent leaf loss or premature yellowing. Underfertilization and inadequate light are the most common mistakes.

(All the answers to what makes African violets bloom are in my basic notebook sheets, which now include two pages devoted entirely to the trailers. For your set send $1 cash or $1.25 check handling charge and a long SASE with "A.V." written on the back flap to Elvin McDonald Reader Service, 225 E. 57th St., New York, N.Y. 10022.)

Q. I want to establish an indoor garden of miniatures. What are the names of some nurseries that sell little plants?

A. Miniatures are widely distributed and can often be found at local nurseries. The catalog (available for $2) from Kartuz Greenhouses, 1408 Sunset Dr., Vista, Calif. 92083, is the most notable source I know because dwarfs (under 12 inches) and miniatures (under 6 inches) are indicated in the keyed cultural guide given for every plant listed.

Q. I am rooting, or at least attempting, a cutting of Leea coccinea. If successful, what care does it need in an indoor garden?

A. You asked about a plant I have often recommended for indoor gardeners, but have never actually grown myself. I purchased one last spring, only to discover it was radermachera, not leea! Research tells me to situate leea in or near a sunny window where temperatures range betwen 60 and 75 F. Pot in a mixture of about equal parts soil, sand and peat moss; keep evenly moist.

Q. Last summer I bought a hibiscus planted in a 2-gallon can. Outdoors it bloomed nearly every day. Before frost I brought it inside and now, during the course of winter, nearly every leaf has fallen. The wood is bendable, however, and seems to be alive. How can I revive

A. Hibiscus needs tropical warmth and an abundance of strong sunlight in order to grow and bloom indoors. During a season when these conditions cannot be provided it is best to keep the growing medium on the dry side and withhold fertilizer. If possible, put your hibiscus where it receives direct sun at least half a day, such as in a window facing south. When light temperatures stay above 60 F., rising to 70 F. or more by day, more water can be applied. At the approach of spring, begin fertilizing. At first, use a balanced fertilizer such as 20-20-20, but as leaf growth becomes active, switch to a blossom-booster formulation such as 15-30-15. If leaves that are otherwise healthy appear yellowgreen between the veins, use an acid fertilizer such as MirAcid.

Indoor hibiscus often host tiny spidermites on the leaf undersides; shake a branch over a sheet of white paper and if any dark specks fall and begin to move, you will know that mites are present. Spray with insecticidal soap every five days.

17th century garden discovered

New York Times News Service

BACONS CASTLE, Va. - Archeologists working here have discovered an English-style Renaissance garden dating from 1680 with a central broad walk of sand, the earliest documented formal garden in Last June, in the excavation of what was assumed to be a 19th-century garden, test holes turned up a concentration of 17th-century pottery shards, wine-bottle fragments and seals. The distribution pattern of artifacts under the sand paths was uninterrupted, and the archeologists realized that the fragments could have been deposited only at the time of construction. They had found a second, older garden.

According to Nicholas M. Luccketti, state archeologist for the Commonwealth of Virginia's Division of Historic Landmarks, who has been been involved in the project since its inception, "What we found is the largest, earliest, best-preserved, most sophisticated garden that has come to light in North America."

The garden, an arrangement of six rectangular planting beds and outlying brick garden pavilions, covers an area larger than a football field. It is adjacent to Bacon's Castle, a 1665 high-Jacobean manor house that is itself the oldest datable brick house in the country.

Deborah Nevins, a landscape historian and adjunct assistant professor at Barnard College, said: "The remains of the garden at Bacon's Castle may prove to be one of the most significant recent discoveries in garden history.'

BACON'S CASTLE is 12 miles south of Williamsburg across the James River at a village in Surry County called Bacons Castle, without an apostrophe. The dig was a joint venture of the Association for the Preservation of Virginia Antiquities, which acquired the house and 40 surrounding acres from the estate of its last owner in 1973; the Garden Club of Virginia, which provided more than $100,000 for the final stages of the project this year and last, and archeologists from the Commonwealth of Virginia's Division of Historic Landmarks.

A visitor walking along the central axis of the garden, which is 360 feet long and 196 feet wide, has a sense of the grandeur of its plan.

Dr. William M. Kelso, the resident archeologist at Monticello, first saw the garden from a helicopter and said, "It was similar to a bird's-eye view of a great English country house estate, and I had the impres-sion I was looking at an active working garden, as if a veil had been removed after hundreds of years."

Luccketti compared the garden's configuration to that of an early 17th-century English garden, such as the one once at Wilton near Salisbury, England, designed by Isaac de Caus in 1615 for the Earl of Pembroke.

CATHERINE HOWETT, a landscape historian and authority on southern gardens, who teaches at the School of Environmental Design of the University of Georgia, said: "The English Renaissance tradition that the Bacon's Castle garden represents was the dominant model for the high-style gardens that persisted in the South well past the middle of the 19th century. This garden's discovery dramatically illustrates the importance of landscape archeology to the restoration of historic landscapes.

Middleton Place near Charleston, S.C., laid out in 1741, formerly was considered the earliest documented American landscaped garden.

Bacon Castle's six raised rectangular beds, three on each side, measure approximately 90 feet long by 74 feet wide and are separated by a 12-footwide central walk on the north-south axis and 8-foot-wide paths on the east-west axis. All of the paths, including the 10-foot-wide perimeter path, were of compacted sand. Bordering the sides of the garden are additional 6-foot-wide planting beds.

A foundation uncovered east of the garden may have been a small frame structure with a cellar used in connection with garden maintenance — fragments of 17th-century horticultural bell jars were found in the area. And finally, like the garden at Wilton, there is evidence of an arbor along the eastern perimeter nath.

It will be several months until soil samples sent to the University of Pennsylvania for seed and pollen analysis reveal the specific flowers

THE PERIOD OF THE garden coincides with the increasing prosperi-ty and political influence of the plantation's owner, Maj. Arthur Allen, a native-born colonial. Built by Allen's father, who had come from England, Bacon's Castle, with its Flemish gabled ends and triple-diamond stack chimneys, is already an important architectural landmark. The name is derived from its use as a refuge dur-ing Bacon's Rebellion in 1676.

Exploration of the site began in 1983, based on evidence of a 19thcentury garden taken from an 1844 property survey and from a plan made in 1935 by Richard P. Hankins, who lived at Bacon's Castle in the 1860s. Hankins's spidery drawing showed four rectangular planting beds divided by crosswalks — a memory, reduced in scale, of the great garden found beneath it.

There is no record that Allen, who was a wealthy merchant-planter and a speaker of the House of Burgesses, ever visited England, but the garden's style would have been adopted by native Virginians who had the means to emulate English ways. "It was an intentional statement on Allen's part to reproduce an elaborate garden and stylish house," said Bruce MacDougal, executive director of the Association for the Preservation of Virginia Antiquities.

Water hyacinth weed does valuable job

By MARIE HAMMOCK

Hearst News Service Water hyacinths are among our most maligned plants. It's true they are "aquatic weeds" of the pestiest sort, cursed by farmers and fishermen alike, who plot generic herbicide by importing just the right insect predator. But water hyacinths have a redeeming feature - they absorb heavy metals, including selenium, from the water in which they're growing - and that alone makes them candidates for "most valuable plant of the year" in an age of toxic waste.

The problem with water hyacinths is that they reproduce so readily: They're the "rabbits" in the world of weeds, and releasing them into the "right" watery habitat can be absolutely the "wrong" thing to do. Left alone, they'll make entire rivers unpassable, as they block out light and use oxygen in the water so that other life forms are destroyed including the fish, (and thus the livelihood of fishermen.)

Society studies one plant family

Hearst News Service

There's a new plant society being organized to study, grow and enjoy the rare and edible fruits of just one plant family — the plant family bota-nists call the Solanaceae. The society is called Solana Enthusiasts by its founder, John Riley of Santa Clara, Calif. It's a non-profit, education group for exchanging information and seed material.

Strictly speaking, "solana" is not formal botanical usage, but who cares if the darned things taste delicious?

This is a pretty racy plant family, that includes the mandrake and other plants of dubious reputation. However, the produce department of any supermarket would be bare without some other members, which include potatoes, tomatoes, peppers, eggplants, etc. And in Central and South America there are a some botanical cousins with names like naranjilla or pepino, that are popular local foods.

Solana Enthusiasts are people who are interested in the edible varieties, many of them delicious but rare, because nobody's ever bothered to grow them as a commercial crop.

Therefore they're unknown.

On the shadow side, the family has a number of members that are either toxic or narcotic.

Riley's big project, however, is the seed exchange. For $2, members can purchase a minimum of four packets of different seeds, none of them common garden vegetables. Riley includes a seed list in each newsletter.

Membership in Solana Enthusiasts currently $3, which is basically to wer Riley's postage costs. For fur-er information on the new society of its publications, write to Riley.

And water hyacinths have to be handled. kept out of rice fields, for instance, or they can reduce the crop substantially.

So our aquatic weeds do need to be managed properly, preferably in a limited space, and harvested occasionally. The problems are: What space? When do we harvest them? What do we do with the harvested product?

We had hoped the answer would come from the city of Hercules, Calif., which a few years ago had installed a sewage disposal plant using water hyacinths to collect the mineral content of the effluent. Unfortunately, it didn't work as well as expected, and has been abandoned. City Engineer Peter Bekey told us:

The plant was supposed to handle 300,000 gallons of waste a day, but it could take only 200,000 gallons, and had trouble doing that much

Such systems have been effective, he noted, on a smaller scale (say, for 35-unit housing development) and where there was not much fluctuation in the amount of sewage

Water hyacinths have been used in Florida, too, for water purifica tion purposes. Certainly they seem like prime candidates for establishing a relatively "passive" water purification system, if a little research money were spent on them.

Botanically, water hyacinths are Eichornia crassipes, named for a Prussian minister, J.A.F. Eichorn, and alluding to the stem structure, which is swollen and porous and keeps the plant afloat (crassipes means, in effect, "fat foot.") They're natives of the tropical jungles of Central America, and south into Brazil. But being "carpetbaggers" among plants — one that takes advantage of unsettled conditions water hyacinths have found their way northward and have become naturalized in the southeastern U.S., in Texas, and in Hawaii. Personally, I think the blossoms are rather pretty. They're spikes of a soft, lavender-blue, and the topmost petal has a spot of yellow in the cen-

Old cards collected

Associated Press

Victorians took very seriously the millions of calling cards they made, bought, and sold

Calling cards, a catchall term for friendship, visiting, mourning, hidden name, and other types of cards from the 19th century, are still plentiful today, says Country Home magazine. They were often saved because of their sentimental value and the ease of storing them. Calling cards were the size of today's business card or smaller.

Some had simple greetings such as "From a Well Wisher" or "With Fond Love to Thee." Although a few were relatively plain, most calling cards were embellished with at least one and more often several symbols, such as clasped hands, nautical settings, rural scenes, or hearts, birds, and flowers.

Other cards were heavily embossed, hand-printed in curlicued calligraphy, or decorated with a profusion of delicate themes.

Sold today for about $1 to $10 per card, their main value is in their evocation of a bygone age, one in which family, religion, friendship, and the amenities of afternoon visiting defined the perimeters of a sheltered world. They can be found at flea markets and estate sales, in bookstores and second-hand shops, or through antiques dealers who spe-cialize in small collectibles or in ephemera, a collectors' term for paper goods.

The calling card had been used by the English and French for 100 years before the Americans adopted it. Its popularity was so rampant here, though, that by 1850 it played an important part in the social scene.

Rare and valuable cards dating from 1800 to 1860 were usually hand-drawn in black and white or handcolored, and signed in elaborate script. A popular style was that of a bird with a huge, sweeping wing on which the donor could sign his or

Oil import tax remains matter of industry contention

Energy associations, politicians, oil producers split on the issue

By JOHN PAUL PITTS Business/Oil Editor

Will a tax be imposed on imported crude oil? That remains the $64 question in the oilpatch. It also remains an issue splitting the industry.

Such a tax say oilmen would immediately elevate the price of domestic oil to the price of the imported oil plus the tax. One tax widely suggested is a $5 per barrel tax on imported oil, which if added to a $15 per barrel price for imported crude oil would amount to $20 per barrel. Domestic production, which is pegged to the world price, would immediately increase to $20 per barrel.

While the Permian Basin Petroleum Association has gone on record as favoring an oil import fee of $5 per barrel on crude oil and $10 per barrel on imported products, many oilmen in the area are not convinced an import tax on crude oil and petroleum products is the right prescription for an ailing oil industry. A Reporter-Telegram survey conducted this week revealed that two out of three independent operators still do not favor an import tax, despite the threat of disaster hanging over the industry, which has come as a surprise to both proponents and opponents of import tariffs.

The Independent Petroleum Association of America which has opposed import fees or taxes on crude oil since 1983, voted again at its February Executive Committee meeting to continue its opposition to import fees, despite heat from some quarters of the industry and the fact that the posted price of oil has slipped below $20 for the first time in six

THE ISSUE even divides Texas in the Senate, where there is normally unity on oil matters. Senator Phil Gramm, remains opposed to an import tax, saying it would be a bureaucratic nightmare, full of exceptions, and would require about 40 percent of the revenues generated just to operate the mammoth bureaucracy in charge of administering and collecting the tax. Senator Lloyd Bentsen, on the other hand, is the sponsor of an oil import tax.

Among the candidates for Governor of Texas, Republican hopeful Tom Loeffler endorses an import fee, but only with much reservation: "Dropping oil prices will mean more tough times for the oilpatch. In the past, I have voiced concern over the imposition of oil import fees and I still have those concerns. The House Ways and Means Committee, which is certainly no friend of the oil and gas industry, could slap us with an offsetting tax or we could be looking at price controls and allocation schemes reminiscent of the 1970s.

"However, with the price of oil falling like a rock, our options are somewhat limited. Congress will have to take a look at an oil import fee. I only hope that such a fee will be levied as responsible and equitably as possible.

Kent Hance and Bill Clements, however, are less reserved in their support of such a fee. Said a spokesman for Hance: "He has supported

■ DISASTER AND CHAOS could be averted in the energy industry with the restoration of stable and more equitable prices for crude oil.

■ AN INEVITABLE failure of some oil firms could be eliminated by the restoration of more favorable margins and increased activity.

■ PROBLEMS with oil banks could diminish with more favorable and stable oil prices.

THE DEFICIT could be reduced through import tariffs and or

Survey reveals little support for import tax

"If we support the fee, it would be with extreme reluctance," stated Glenn Brandt, president and chief executive officer with Flag-Redfern Oil Co. He said he's afraid that the government would view any import tax enacted now as a favor to the industry, and in time would want another tax on domestic production. They won't remember that, when crude prices were going up, a windfall profit tax was enacted. Now, when crude prices are falling, the government won't repeal the windfall profits tax.

Scott Sheffield, president of Parker & Parsley, said that while a fee would help the industry in the short-term, in the long-term, the industry would be hurt. "It's more important to remove the windfall profits tax and deregulation on old gas, and to remove negative aspects of the tax reform bill," he said.

One local producer, Jim Henry of Henry Petroleum, said he opposes a fee, because of the possibility of a ability to compete in the world new windfall profits tax on the producer, and a new giant bureaucracy But he does favor an oil import quota. "I am for an import quota similar to the ones we had in the 1980s to protect the energy industry. It would be easier to administer, and it wouldn't have the bureaucracy. We did it before, we should be able to do

Joseph I. O'Neill, said he would favor an import fee if it were applied to all imports, without exception, such as Mexico and Canada. "But since that won't happen, I'm against

On the other side of the coin, proponents are no less passionate, in their support of an import tariff.

"What's going on now with oil prices will kill the domestic industry if we don't do something," asserted Perry Bolger, president of Brazos Petroleum Co. and president Permian Basin Petroleum Association.

Bill Aikman, manager of Aikman Brothers, said the fee would help prop up the domestic industry. On EIMPORT TARIFFS on petreleum products don't work according to historical experience. Moreover, they only generate more complex government involvement in the free market, forcing capital investment in refining oversess and failing to prevent U.S. dependence on foreign course.

House Speaker Thomas P. (Tip) O'-Neill Jr., D-Mass., opposes an import fee and has said repeatedly that any tax increase proposal would have to come from the president.

New England's historic opposition to oil import fees was underscored on Feb. 6 when nine of the 12 senators from that region signed on as sponsors of a resolution by Sen. Clai-

Three nationally-known economists on Feb. 6 told the Senate Finance Committee that an oil import fee would bring in relatively little revenue, wipe out some of the economic benefits of declining oil prices, and be an ineffective way to aid domestic oil and kindred industries.

Oil import fees will have national, worldwide implications

Los Angeles Times — Washington Post News Service

Although the Reagan administration has vehemently opposed any tax increases, higher taxes on energy have been debated in Congress in recent months. With Gramm-Rudman requiring $50 billion to $75 billion — or perhaps more — in some combination of spending cuts and tax increases for fiscal 1987, energy tax revenues look to many like an easy way to narrow the gap. With the collapse in oil prices, energy taxes may soon take on even more

The falling spot oil prices spell big trouble for financially weak oil-producing countries such as Mexico, Venezuela and Nigeria. Ironically, those countries will probably produce more, not less, oil in reaction to these lower prices. They desperately need the foreign exchange generated by oil exports to service their huge international debts. And with lower oil prices, they need to export more oil to maintain their foreign exchange revenues. However, the additional oil production and exports will result in bigger world surpluses and still lower prices.

A DISEQUILIBRIUM situation for lower prices resulting in more production, leading to still-lower prices, etc., could develop rapidly. How low prices can go is anyone's guess, but even the low marginal cost of producing oil — no more than $2 to $3 per barrel in the Middle East — is not necessarily the lower limit.

We already see in the case of copper that when countries depend on one commodity almost exclusively for their foreign exchange earnings, they will produce and sell it even if

If current low spot prices in the $15 range persist the oil industry will face severe financial strains as this lower price spreads beyond the spot market to more and more transactions. Furthermore, effects will soon extend to other oil-price-related areas: natural gas, the energy development and service industries where Global Marine has already filed for bankruptcy, oil equipment and sup-plies and Texas real estate.

the prices received don't cover their

Oil created a magnificent skyline in Houston, but many of those lovely "see-through" office buildings they are completely empty, so you can see right through them — would only sell for about one-half their replacement costs on the basis of today's rental and occupancy rates. Only hope has prevented a price collapse, and hope could disappear with the oil-price nose dive that has already occurred.

IT GOES without saying that the Federal Reserve will do whatever is necessary to bail out the Texas banks and other energy lenders, dumping money out of airplanes if required. Nevertheless, there is a distinct risk that bank depositors, after seeing a number of failures, will ask, "Who's next?," withdraw their funds in anticipation of further failures, and in the process touch off a collapse of confidence in the financial system. That risk would be avoided, however, by putting a floor under domestic energy prices, and that may become increasingly attractive as Washington realizes the potential danger. Of various techniques to ac-complish this, interest might center on an import tariff on crude oil and on an import tariff on crude oil and petroleum products, which would simply be the difference between the old, higher world oil price and the lower, current price. For example, if the old price used were $29 per barrel and the current price were $19 per barrel the tariff would be $10 per barrel. At $17 per barrel, the tariff would rise to $12

The attraction of this tariff is that it would not only put a floor under U.S. energy prices but would also divert revenues that previously went to foreign oil suppliers to the U.S. Treasury. Each $1-per-barrel collected would net the Treasury about $2 billion a year, so a $10-per-barrel tariff would increase federal revenues about $20 billion annually, a handy sum at a time of Gramm-Rudmanrelated pressure to cut the budget

FURTHERMORE, that would be essentially a free tax on energy consumers. Consumers would not see a higher price at the gasoline pump; they would only fail to see the lower

As Washington more and more un-derstands the depth of the financial crises that could result from the oilprice collapse, an import tax on crude and oil products may gain widespread support in Congress and even in the administration. Of course, it would be sold to the voters under the banner of self-sufficiency: We will not let a temporary oil-price decline wreck our energy industry and make us further dep dent on those undependable Middle East types. The revenue-raising as-pect could provide lots of frosting on the cake in Washington's eyes.

Unfortunately, the cake would end up tasting very bitter because of the detrimental effects on U.S. industry of maintaining oil prices above world levels. Although Canada and the North Sea oil producers might also put floors under domestic energy prices for similar reasons, the rest of Europe and certainly Japan as well as South Korea, Taiwan and other newly industrialized countries would not. They have no domestic energy to protect; Japan produces less than 1 percent of its primary energy.

CONSEQUENTLY, U.S. industry, especially sectors that use petrochemicals as feed stocks — or raw materials — would be at a considerable competitive disadvantage in relation to industry in countries enjoying the lower world oil price.

Actually U.S. industry is already at a sizeable disadvantage vis-a-vis Japan. Lacking energy resources, Japanese industries have emphasized en-ergy efficiency much more so than those in the United States.

For example, the chemical indus-try in Japan spends 2.3 percent of its output revenues on energy while the U.S. producers spend 4.8 percent, half again as much. A $10-per-barrel difference in the oil price between the United States and Japan would more than double that already wide difference of 1.6 percentage points for the chemical industry.

In total industry, the United States now consumes almost twice as much energy per unit of output as Japan (2 percent vs. 1.1 percent), and a $10per-barrel price difference would add another 0.7 percent, almost doubling the disadvantage. These numbers measure energy use for both fuel and feed stocks, and the competitive problems for feed stock users would be even more acute because their energy costs are so much greater as a percent of their revenues.

FOR EXAMPLE, the U.S. petrochemical industry spends 19 percent of its revenues on energy-based feed stocks, about the same as in Japan. A $10-per-barrel price difference would put the U.S. industry at more than a 6 percent additional cost disadvantage, more than the average pretax earnings of the industry. American history, which already has immense problems with international competition, would suffer even more output and employment losses if it had much higher energy costs than many European or Far Eastern countries.

Industries, such as plastics, that depend heavily on petrochemical feed stocks, would literally depart from our shores. Then, rather than produce plastics in the United States with American labor, the manufacturing would be done elsewhere where feed stocks were cheaper and the finished plastic resins would be exported to this country.

Of course, Washington could attempt to keep up with the process by taxing the energy content of the imported resins, but that would only drive further stages of production and employment overseas. Where would it end? With the imported plastic resins? With the imported telephones made from those

IMPORT TARIFFS, then, would put a floor under domestic energy prices and prevent severe financial problems for the energy sector, but would put U.S. industry at an additional distinct international cost disadvantage.

What are the alternatives? One is to simply accept the likelihood of financial problems for the energy industry and assume that the Fed can contain them. That could prove to be a very high-risk approach, however. Perhaps more feasible would be to support the energy sector by maintaining domestic energy above world levels through import tariffs - but only on energy used by consumers, not by industry.

he said. "Some in the oilpatch think that Congress can wave a magic wand and save the oil industry, but I can assure you Congress could care less about the domestic oil and gas industry.

Scoggins said any import fee would only reflect Congress's lack of love for the oil industry. "When the Treasury Department recently came up with a list of measures for achieving a revenue neutral tax reform plan, one of the plans called for an alternative windfall tax proposal which would give Treasury half of any corresponding increase in domestic oil price increases brought about as a result of an import fee on

HE ADDED: "There are many in Congress now who don't think it makes any sense to put a tax on imported oil, unless one is also placed on domestic crude.'

A case in point is Sen. Lawton Chiles, ranking democrat on the Budget Committee, who recently chided New Mexico Senator, Pete Domenici for proposing an import fee, saying it was just a "backdoor way" for the oil industry to hang on to something they had lost.

"There is a real danger to giving the government another toe hold in our industry," said Scoggins. "Once they get it they will never let go. The federal government does not give up taxes and revenues once they get their hands on them. The government is already frustrated, because the windfall tax provision is not bringing in expected revenues, and it would love to have something like an import fee to offset those losses."

To be sure falling oil prices have taken their toll on federal revenues. The windfall profits tax is operational only above $22 per barrel, and for each dollar of decline above $22 the government loses 72 cents, compared to 28 cents for the oil and gas operator. Below $22, the government gets nothing but the normal 15 corporate tax, but the oil operator loses 85 cents for each drop in oil prices. For that reason, some oil men have secretly expressed satisfaction in the fact that the government no longer gets a portion of their production. Perhaps, too, that is why Sen. Lloyd Bentsen is expected to offer a floor price of $22 in his proposed impor fee bill.

IN SUPPORT of Bentsen's proposed bill, PBPA President, Perry Bolger commented: "The subject is very controversial; there's an almost gut-like reaction to it, but as far as I know, I favor the fee. What's going on now will kill the domestic petroleum industry if we don't do something, and then it'll be just like the

Bolger said those who oppose tariff want to let the free market reign and for the government to stay out of it, but added that there had never been a free market and the government had never been out of the oil

He said that if we killed the domestic petroleum industry, we would be back in the grasp of OPEC. Bolger said there were aiready severe strains on the energy business as a result of low oil prices, as reflected by lower rig counts, pared budgets and deferred projects. "This will shut-in wells, decrease exploration, reduce domestic production."

Wallace seeks U.S. security via import tax

From Staff Reports

Texas Railroad Commissioner, Mack Wallace, has taken a strong stand for import tariffs, citing national security as a primary reason.

Testifying recently before a U.S. House Budget Committee in Dallas, Wallace told the committee that it didn't make much difference what is done about the president's 1987 budget "if we don't first take swift action to extricate this nation's energy base from its current nose dive into subjugation under the direction of foreign governments."

Wallace, who has spoken out in favor of oil import fees for more than a year, urged the Committee to recommend imposing a sliding tariff on imported crude oil products targeted at an agreed-upon price. Although revenues from such a fee could reduce the country's budget deficit, Wallace said the greater value would come from "stabilizing America's ability to produce our natural resources.

We will have declared to the world that we consider the exploration and production of our energy needs to be absolutely essential to our national security," he said.

The Commission's senior member urged the Administration and the Congress to enact what he called a "national security" tariff as an emergency measure to send a clear signal to other producing countries that the U.S. would shore up its domestic capability and protect its reserves.

Wallace said that although the president's proposed budget claims to reorder national priorities, energy needs are scarcely mentioned. "I consider such an omission alarming, to say the least," he said. "We are losing the 'energy war' by default." The Commissioner outlined disturbing trends in the nation's energy statistics saying: "I am convinced we are witnessing an approaching tragedy with staggering consequences that threaten not only our economic stability but our national security as

According to Wallace, drilling activity in the U.S. has fallen to 10-year lows with drilling permits in January down 13 percent from a year ago, new field wildcat permits down more than 28 percent, and other exploratory permits for the month down more than 30 percent from January 1985.

The railroad commissioner said imports of crude oil and products, on the other hand, are creeping upward, now standing at five million barrels a day, or roughly 30 percent of the nation's needs. According to Wallace, the U.S. has spent a staggering $549 billion since 1972 for oil and oil products imports.

These numbers are unacceptable to me," said Wallace, "especially at a time when our own government is also considering increasing taxes, in the guise of tax reform, on our energy explorers and producers."

Wallace told the committee mem bers the nation faces acutely depressed drilling activity and with it certain return to the decline and dependency of the 1970s.

"In this economic war for energy," he said, "I believe that if action is not taken now and Saudi Arabia or an other foreign is permitted to continue to manipulate production levels and price, the first casualty in this world-wide scenario will be the United States followed by Britain's North Sea fields."

Wallace noted that 75 percent of the world's crude oil and products is produced by governments, not oil companies, making the production of oil and gas an instrument of foreign policy tion, saying the economists "just nailed the coffin shut."

In addition to Heinz, five other Finance Committee members -- all from the energy-consuming Northeast - are among those most vehemently opposed to an import fee.

"Why tax home heating oil in places that get the 30 to 40 below zero weather in order to finance. this long list of corporations (beneficiaries of tax loopholes)?" asked committee member Dave Durenberger, R-Minn. He said he told Packwood he was "96 percent" against the import fee.

Texas Republican Sen. Phil Gramm opposes an import levy, parting company with Bentsen, Sen. David Boren, Long and other senators from oil-producing states.

Gramm shares the fear expressed by the Independent Petroleum Producers Association and others that Congress would not stop with an import tax but would soon slap it on domestic oil as well.

Tax of any kind goes against the grain of Gramm's free-market philosophy. "A tax is a tax is a tax," he is fond of saying. "It slows down the economy Gramm's press secretary, Larry Neal, said "regional concerns" have not been worked out to the senator's satisfaction. "It means something in West Texas and something completely different on the Gulf Coast and something else to the border." Economists warn an oil import fee could further devastate the Mexican economy. Gramm asks whether it could mean yet another devaluation of the peso or a new wave of illegal immigrants.

Rep. Tom Loeffler, R-Hunt, a candidate for Texas governor, whose district covers much of the Oil Patch, concedes that an import fee could "strengthen oil prices for the short term." But he has reservations: Any fee must include imported petroleum product; must guard against harming Gulf Coast petrochemical industries; and must not increase the existing windfall profits tax. Partly because of the difficult questions raised by the oil import tax proposals, support is growing for the idea of an expanded federal gasoline excise tax or an across-theboard energy tax to raise federal revenues and encourage conservation.

Rep. Anthony C. Beilenson, D-Calif., on Feb. 4 introduced a bill (HR 4117) providing that the gasoline tax, now 9 cents a gallon, be hiked by 2.4 cents for each dollar that the price of oil declines below the Jan. 1 price of $27 a barrel.

Beilenson, assuming revenues of $1 billion per penny, said his legislation would raise $24 billion a year if the price of oil was $17 per barrel.

Rep. John F. Seiberling, D-Ohio, is chief sponsor of a measure to increase the gasoline tax by 10 cents a

Rig count spiral continues in Basin, US

The rig count continued its downward spiral, both locally and nationally, falling at a rate comparable with the past month's decline. The Basin count fell another 14 rigs, to 218; the U.S. count dipped a hefty 120 rigs, to record a low 1,376 tally.

Despite the falling figures, Ector County manged to gain four rigs, creeping back up to ten, while Midland County slipped one, to nine. Martin County declined by three, leaving only seven rigs at work there and Gaines County dropped four figs, falling to six.

Nationally, Texas posted a 29 rig loss, Louisiana fell by 11, and New Mexico slipped five. The totals in those states, respectively, are 443, 227 and 47. Virtually every state lost activity, except Pennsylvania, which gained a rig. Canada also posted a seven rig advance in their count.

A year ago, the Basin rig total stood at 322; the U.S. count one year ago was 2,162.

Industry future termed strong, viable

The U.S. and the world will probably progress from today's condition of more than adequate petroleum supply to the brink of renewed shortage said Petroleum Information senior vice president J. Tom Dougherty today. In remarks at the company's annual review of petroleum industry activity, Perspective '86, Dougherty also said, "A strong, viable and rewarding future lies ahead for the oil industry but improvement of today's situation will not be rapid. Dougherty pointed to the 1990s as a "time of great opportunity" for the petroleum industry. "The opportuni-ty will be more widespread," he as-serted, "because of the great damage done to the entire industry by the takeover-merger-restructure convulsions of the early 1980s."

"Other entities not now of worldscale stature will have to be developed to offset the loss of capability oped to offset the loss of capability to the financial piracy of the 1980s," Dougherty predicted. "This and the efforts of the damaged entities to heal themselves, defines opportunity for the currently viable smaller entities within the industry."

In reviewing 1985 drilling and production, PI noted that domestic crude and condensate production increased for the fourth consecutive year. Daily average oil production by domestic producers was an estimated 8.96 million barrels. Conversely, gas production in the U.S. declined for the fourth time in five years. Natural gas produced in the US was an estimated 49 billion cubic feet per day, down 5.7 percent from the 1984 daily average of approximately 52 billion cubic feet. Drilling for oil and gas in the U.S., according to PI, declined about 20 percent in 1985. At the end of the year 52,663 wells with official 1985 completion dates had been recorded.

PI expects the final 1965 total will approximate 66,000 wells while the expected 1964 total will be about nearly 81,000. At the end of the year, PI figures showed 823 new fields had been re-showed 823 new fields had been reported discovered in the U.S. The percentage of those wells that were successful was 14.8 percent. The 1984 success rate was 17.6 percent for new field wildcats.

Texas, the perennial leader in U.S. drilling, again ranked first as to wells completed in 1985, with 19,192 reported by the end of the year. Oklahoma, Kansas, Leuisiana and California followed in that order. The top two geologic provinces in domestic well completions for the year were the Permian Basin in west Texas and southeastern New Mexico, and the Gulf Coast Basin. They had

6,574 and 5,636 well completions re-

OILFIELD SALES

Special techniques used to please the 'shopper'

By RAYMOND BASS

The shopper is one of the customer types seen most frequently in the oifield today. This is the person who is looking for the lowest cost possible, irregardless of quality of service, experience, or special features. In many cases, this person is experiencing a great deal of pressure on him from his superiors and thus he is striving hard to play one salesman against another in order to obtain the lowest possible price. To deal with the shopper effectively, it is important to show him how it is in his best interest to purchase now. In many cases the salesman will have to have a reason for the shopper to make a buying decision. If there is a specific date by which the sale must be completed in order for the shopper to gain a certain benefit or avoid a loss, this might be one way to get the customer to make a buying decision now rather than shop around. Especially if the price from your supplier is increasing on the 15th of next month, there is an inducement to offer some type of inducement for the customer to make that decision today. Another helpful technique is to offer some type of inducement if your customer buys today. For instance, the sales man can say, "If we firm up this order today, I'll absorb the transportation costs," or "If we can square away all the details by Friday, I can assure you of our most experienced crew. After Friday, I really won't be able to guarantee them for you."

The shopper will write down to cost figures you give him, including transportation charges, discounts, and anything else with a dollar sign in front of it. Then he will get on the phone and call your competitor and see if they can beat your price. If they can he'll be right back on the phone to you within the day to see if he can't get your price down a little

Many shoppers want to know that they are getting a "special deal" or a 'discount." They'd like to know that they are getting something extra and are quite proud of their reputation to negotiate a lower price. One way to deal with the shopper is to suggest that you would like the op-portunity for a "last look." Meaning that, if at all possible, you would like an opportunity to make one last bid and see if you can beat your competitor. Many shoppers will remember this and will be more than happy to give you that last opportunity at the

Business leaders drum up support for TSTI

Seventy state business leaders will hit the road this year to generate industrial support and financial assistance for Texas State Technical Institute, according to Wayne Westerman, vice president of End Devices, Inc. in Midland, and director of TSTI Development Foundation, Inc.

The state of Texas is experiencing a changing industrial base." Westerman says. "Quality trained technicians are needed now and in the future. And a major effort must be made to increase the training capacity of the state if it is going to remain competitive."

For the next ten years in Texas there will be 160,000 new jobs opening every year. Of these 160,000 jobs, 20,000 to 40,000 will be technical positions. In 1984, TSTI graduated 3,300 regular program students and 11,600 in special projects and continuing education. Two new Extension Program sites were added in 1985 to the four already in existence and 1984 enrollment was 9,300.

Even if TSTI could quadruple its enrollment to 36,000 by 1990, it could only train about 20 percent of the technicians still needed for new industry in Texas, not including the retraining of workers forced to leave old industries that are in decline.

Six of each 10 new jobs created in Texas are created by companies employing less than 100 people and having little or no technical training budget. TSTI works with industries to match job skills to existing job markets and industry needs.

The 70 business leaders make up the Development Foundation, the spearhead of the 1,300 Texas corporations and businesses which supply 1,500 industrial advisors forming the Industrial Advisory Committee to the state's technical education system, Texas State Technical Institute. Industry donates the latest in manufacturing, laser robots, and other types of equipment to train individuals - frequently in the hope that these graduates will specify their equipment in their new technical jobs in Texas industry

Midland firm helps develop gas-driven pump

Aplex Industries, Midland, collaborating with Arrow Specialty Co., Tulsa, recently developed gas-engine driven/pump systems which provide both engine and pump protection, and which can safely start and stop the engine/pump units in response to supply tank water level head switch, and which monitor all significant operating signals.

Aplex recently shipped a portable, housed pumping station to Daniel Energy, Inc. for service in Loving County At this location, a plentiful supply of sweet natural gas is available. But sources of electricity at the site are distant and expensive to provide. Daniel Energy desired a completely automated station, using two triplex pumps with complete automatic shutdown features to permit unattended automatic operation of this salt water disposal station.

Engines are started automatically, warmed up, and clutch engaged, starting the pump on signal from high salt water level and are stopped, clutch disengaged on the low level. The unique Arrow "Auto-Start" System, with programmable time sequencing of these functions also provides automatic shutdowns for any malfunction of an engine, or its starting system.

Included in the pumping station is an automatic pump controller which sends stop or start signals to the Arrow "Auto-Start" Systems, developed for Aplex by Superior Controls, Odessa. The pump controller affords automatic shutdown by reason of any pump malfunction, including high or low discharge pressure, etc. and sends signals to the correct

All electric systems, including lighting of the station, are 12 volt D.C. provided by the engine generators and batteries. No A.C. voltage is employed, making this the first such pumping station of its type in West the other hand, he is opposed to a tax on petroleum products, "which does nothing for the industry."

One producer who personally op-poses the fee, said he believes a fee will be enacted. "While I think the free market is the place for the price to be determined, I believe pressures from political forces, foreign policy, banks and industry will force the government to enact a fee. Therefore, the free market won't have much influence. There are too many other factors at work," commented John Dorn, regional vice president of Forest Oil Corp.

Ted Collins, president of HNG/InterNorth, on the other hand, supports a fee but thinks it's a political impossibility.

However, a number of those interviewed, who preferred not to comment, might reasonably fall into the category of those who just don't know. The i sue is not only volatile but complicated, with positive and negative aspects on each side. "I don't really know what an oil import fee means. It could mean a lot of different things. I guess it depends on how it's applied," noted George Pauling, division manager for Samedan Oil Corp, who hasn't found it easy to take a stand. "I see good and bad on both sides," he said. "My view is it's a two-edged sword. The industry needs less help, but also less government and taxes. I'm just not sure what is the best way.

Beilenson told National Journal a gasoline tax increase was preferable to an oil import fee because the latter "would result in inexcusable windfall profits for domestic producers, who would raise the price of their oil to match the higher price of imported oil.

"Thus, almost three-quarters of the higher price of oil products would go to domestic producers, instead of to the U.S. Treasury, where ALL the proceeds of a gasoline tax would go.

That scenario is exactly the reason the oil import fee wins support from the Texas Independent Producers & Royalty Owners Association, two other producer associations in Texas and the Kansas statewide association.

lick. "Just one more," says the photographer. Click, click. "That's it. Perfect. Smile." The camera is almost stuttering as it trips off shot after shot of the trim short-cropped blonde in a wisp of a green silk pants suit. And obediently Anne Murray, who is used to cameras, smiles one more

The Canadian-born singer with the husky voice has enough awards to jam the wall shelves of three homes - two in Canada and a Florida condominum. During her career she has picked up four Grammys, 23 Junos from her native country, three American Music awards, three Country Music Association Awards, nine gold albums, two platinum and one triple platinum.

Still Anne Murray isn't satisfied. She makes that very clear as she relaxes, arms spread along the corners of a beige couch.

Just two floors below us is one of the busiest crossroads in the world: 42nd Street. Ms. Murray -with a megawatt smile and a slightly cleft chin that beams determination - is in New York to launch her new "more contemporary" album on love, "Something To Talk About." It's meant to change her image. But why? What's wrong with success? Ever since Morna Anne Murray - the only daughter of six children born to a Nova Scotia mining town doctor and his nurse wife - started moonlighting in small local clubs, her early music lessons have been paying off. First, soloist with Canadian Broadcasting Company's "Sing-Along Jamboree;" then, her blockbuster "Snowbird" recording which rocketed to the top of both pop and country-western charts in 1970, sending Anne Murray into orbit. With a candor rarely seen in celebrities, she adds, "What I've been singing in the past is mostly just too soft for today's market. The people out there," she nods toward the crowds scurrying to lunch just below our window perch, "are not going to play me unless I get a more contemporary synthesized sound - which is what I have on this record...And," she nne Murray has something to talk about these days. "I was having gold albums and No. 1 country hits," she says, her husky, low voice soft, yet determined, over the phone. "It's kind of hard to look a gift horse in the mouth." But for this Canadian singer, the "ballads and lush arrangements" that she became well-known for are "just not what's happening now." Thus, her new album, "Something to Talk About," reflects change for Miss Murray.

"It's a very synthesized sound; it's all machines, kind of cold-blooded really, but I'm very pleased with the album. I worked with three producers, and I've wanted to do this kind of thing for about five years."

Songs from her latest album as well as hits from the past will form the framework for her Tuesday performance at Midland College's Chaparral Center. Tickets for the 8 p.m. show, priced at $13.50, may be purchased at Chaparral Center and Endless Horizons, Midland and Odessa.

"The new album and the approach to that is really what the tour is about. The album is really an attempt to get back into the Top 40 radio pop. Historically, my tunes have crossed over, but the way music has gone, I was left behind for a little

Her plans don't include staying there; she doesn't "want to be limited to one market.

"People tend to categorize me as a country singer. That's right, when I'm singing a country song. But I can do a lot more. I want to stay contemporary. I want to be around in this business for a long, long time. And you can't do that and get to a whole lot of people singing just country music."

Besides, Miss Murray says, "I think my audience is ready for the change. I've been working up to it for the last couple of albums, and I don't think it's going to turn anybody off. the vocals are way up front, you can hear every word that

When Miss Murray was growing up in Canada, she "never thought of singing as something youdo for a living. It was sort of an accident that I wound up doing it. It wasn't anything I planned, that's for sure.

Once before, she changed directions - retiring briefly in mid-career, during 1975, to marry Canadian TV producer Bill Langstroth and raise two children. "I felt like I was banging my head against a wall," she remembers. "I had a hit here, a hit there. Then a year went by before I'd have another hit. That's not the way to success. You need to get on a roll. I had to sit down, take a good hard look at not only my career but my personal life. Get it all together."

Shortly after William was born, Ma. Murray realzed she did want to go back to work. "But," she rins, "I also had a great sense of relief. I had my first baby when I was 31 and didn't know if I could have children. I was starting to worry. Now I know I can have kids and, time permitting, have more."

Adds Ms. Murray, 40, 'It's funny, I felt a kind of do anything. And then everything started to really who in turn had been named after a favorite place of her father's, Tallulah Falls, Ga.

She was raised primarily by an aunt, since her mother died shortly after she was born, and was known for uncontrollable tantrums as a child. She eventually found an outlet for that excess energy in acting.
At the age of 16, after winning a local beauty contest, she left home to become an actress in New York. She got a bit part in a Broadway show and followed it with feature parts in the plays "Squab Farm," "Footloose," "39 East," "Nice People," "Everyday" and "Danger," among others.

However, she sensed that she would never become a star on Broadway, so she went to London in 1923 determined to become a sensation there. She did, instantly, in a show called "The Dancers," and followed it with "They Knew What They Wanted," "Fallen Angels" and "The Lady of the Camellias." Soon women all over England were copying her mannerisms, her hairstyles, her

She scored a later success onstage in "Private Lives" and on-screen in "Lifeboat." Her last film was the dubious "Die! Die! My Darling."
Ms. Bankhead was known for her flamboyant, often shocking, behavior, for bouts with alcohol and cocaine and for a deep passion for baseball, specifically the New York (and later San Francisco) Giants.

She married once, in 1937 to actor John Emery — the story goes that she saw him in a summer playhouse production, went backstage, kissed him and married him days later. They divorced in 1941. She died in 1968 in New York at the age of 65 from pneumonia, complicated by emphysema, and was buried near her sister's house in Rock Hall, Md.

'Delta Force' toys with history

"Docudramas" - fictionalized film accounts of real events, such as "Fatal Vision" or "The Atlanta Child Murders" — have often been strongly criticized as distorting the truth for dramatic effect

Forrest while presenting it all as "based on actual fact." With its new movie, "Delta Force," Cannon Films goes beyond - or beneath - ordinary docudramas. This film is a "pseudo-docudrama." It starts out by recounting a real incident - last spring's hijacking of TWA Flight 847 from Athens to Beirut — but then giving the story a utterly different ending.

"Delta Force's" hijacking starts out looking all too much like one of the old "Airport" films, mostly because it has the usual not-toostellar "all-star cast" seen in those films. Joey Bishop, Lainie Kazan, Martin Balsam and Shelley Windeorge Kennedy plays a priest.

A feeling of deja vu sinks in as it becomes clear that the story is a thinly fictionalized account of the TWA hijacking. The plane follows the same route, a U.S. Navy diver is beaten and killed, a blonde stewardess character played by Hanna Schygulla is obviously based on real-life TWA heroine Uli Derickson and the film even precisely copies the memorable shots of the plane's captain speaking to reporters with a hijacker's gun to his head.

So far, this is fairly standard docudrama procedure. However, "Delta Force" then changes the ending. Rather than freeing the hostages through negotiations, the film lets actor Chuck Norris charge in, weapons blazing, with a U.S. Army anti-terrorist unit.

Luckily for the fictional American commandoes, the normally teeming city of Beirut (actually, the film was shot in Jaffa, Israel) is strangely deserted when they attack, so they only suffer a single fatality.

This action-fantasy's approach is somewhat like that of 1984's "Red Dawn." "Red Dawn," an even more far-fetched film than "Delta Force," had American teen-agers battling a Russian invasion of the U.S.

In "Red Dawn," U.S.-U.S.S.R. re-lations were simple; a Soviet paratrooper lands in your backyard, you grab your deer rifle and blow him away. It's much simpler than trying to to understand thermonuclear megatonnage, strategic arms limitation treaties and other complex geopolitical issues.

"Delta Force" similarly simpli-fies a complex situation. Instead of handling intricate negotiations, trying to sort out the multi-tude of Lebanese factions and dealing with the tortured history of Beirut, Norris just grabs a machine gun — along with the everpopular rocket launcher - and mows down any Middle Easternlooking person who gets in his

Interestingly, a made-for-television movie looking at the fateful TWA hijacking through the eyes of Ms. Derickson is currently being planned. While such docudramas certainly have their weaknesses, the planned TV-movie almost has to be more realistic and honest than "Delta Force."

"Delta Force," rated R for strong language and considerable violence, is now showing at the UA Cine IV.

'Quicksilver' fast but it doesn't shine

"Quicksilver," a film about big city bicycle messengers, has its shining moments, but they haven't much to do with the story and they speed by very quickly. At the start of the movie, star Kevin Bacon is a young, confident (to the point of arrogance), hotshot options trader.

Mr. Hot-Shot manages to not only lose everything he has, but also manages to squander all his parents life savings in a single bad deal.

For some reason (the movie is annoyingly vague on this and many other things), he decides to become one of those bicycle couriers, a job that - based on his coworkers' apparent IQs — requires a lot more agility than brains.

For a bankrupt guy who is supposed to have dropped out of the rat race, however, he still lives a fairly chic lifestyle. His rich, beautiful girlfriend is some sort of a ballerina who attends art openings, he wears New Wave-ish outfits carefully tailored to look super-casual and his huge warehouse apartment could have almost come straight out of "Flash-

Bacon's rather shallow character isn't so much turning his back on big business' cut-throat competitiveness or society's greedy materialism as he is on adult

He discourages people from de-pending on him for anything, at least until a new girlfriend — a fellow bicyclist who replaces the ballerina - runs afoul of a nasty drug dealer.

All of which leads to the real reason for "Quicksilver's" existence — to show off lots of pretty bicycle stunts. The movie is padded with MTV-style bike-dance video bits that have virtually nothing to do with the story.

The racing and chase scenes though, are easily the best things in the film. Rookie director Tom Donnelly, who also wrote the sharp screenplay, makes good use of tracking shots - sequences filmed with a moving camera to show the riders zipping wildly through heavy, snarled traffic. These sequences are often flashy enough to make one temporarily forget that most of 'Quicksilver" is dross rather than

Parker: It's 'dumb' to knock 'Spenser' scripts

By MICHAEL DOUGAN Hearst News Service

Traditionally, authors love to howl about how Hollywood abuses their flawless stories. But Robert B. Parker just pulls his checks out of the mailbox and smiles.

Knocking film and TV producers who alter original material simply "seems dumb to me," said Parker, whose popular series of novels about a private eye in Boston form the basis for ABC's Tuesday series "Spenser: For Hire." "It also seems sort of uncivil to me. Nobody who sells their book to filmmakers does it with the expectation that they re going to improve the book. Frequently, they make a mess of it.

What's more, said Parker, "I have no evidence that making lousy movies from good books hurts the book. I've never been worried that they would mess (my story) up because if they messed it up, they would mess up their own television series and my books would remain as they are.

'It makes life simpler. You take their money and you give them your book and you go your separate Rather than go his separate way on the Spenser series, however, Parker signed on as a consultant. He jokes that the producers wanted him under contract because "it prevents me from bad-mouthing the series on Parker now spends "a lot of time in Los Angeles script-doctoring. I read all the scripts and comment. They are not required to act on my comments. Sometimes they do:

sometimes they don't." Though the tales seen on the series are not identical in tone and spirit to his novels, Parker believes "they make good television. They are two very different mediums. I go on this equation: book plus television equals television.

Still, Parker seems frustrated by the vagaries of the television business, in which success or failure are often defined by something other than quality. "Spenser" almost died in its original Friday time slot. where ratings are dominated by NBC's "Miami Vice."

"I don't have to worry about that in novels. I don't have to worry about whether or not my novel is going to be placed next to 'Miami Vice' in the racks.

The scripts aren't any better (since the show moved to Tuesdays); the acting isn't any better. The only change is that we're placed opposite somebody we can beat."

Indeed, "Spenser: For Hire" has made considerable gains on its chief competition, NBC's "Remington Steele." Parker seems pleased, but not excited.

That's essentially a business arrangement, and I am as unemotional about it as I am about most business arrangements," he explained. "Life goes on. I make enough without the show, so my interest in it is not profound. That's their 'Spenser.' It's a good 'Spenser,' but it's not my Spenser

He said mysteries are fashionable only "because there's a lot of people who write well who are doing it these days. I think that when we fade away, if we're not replaced by other good novelists, the genre will

Kathleen Turner may return to Broadway

By ENID NEMY

New York Times News Service

NEW YORK - Nothing has been signed, but there's a good possibility that Kathleen Turner will be returning to the stage soon. Ms. Turner, who appeared in several Off Broadway productions before achieving movie stardom in such films as "Body Heat," "Prizzi's Honor" "Romancing the Stone" and "Jewel of the Nile," has indicated her interest in "The Widow's Blind Date," by Israel Horovitz

"It's a play that reflects this generation and we need more plays and actors that do that," said Frederick Zollo, who will be producing, possibly with Edgar Lansbury and Joe

The three-character drama, about a woman who was gang-raped in high school and returns to her hometown to find that two of the men who took part haven't changed their ways, was first produced at the Gloucester Stage Co. in Massachu- when he was spotted. He was impressetts. It played in Boston and Los Angeles in 1984, and closed in Paris last month after touring France for almost a year.

Still open to question is whether the play will get on the boards this spring, or wait until fall. Also uncertain is whether it will be on Broadway or off. The more immediate concern is the search for a director and the two male stars.

NEW YORK - If you're a youngster in Texas, with heroes like Paul Scofield, Robert Donat and Michael Redgrave, what's the next step? For Peter MacNicol, it was enrolling at the University of Minnesota, because his heroes all came out of repertory and he figured that the repertory theater in Minneapolis, the Guthrie, might discover him. It did.

MacNicol, now in "Rum and Coke" at the Public Theater, recalled that he was playing a 65-year-old in "The Birthday Party" at the university sive enough to be asked to sign on as a full member, rather than as an intern, after graduation

From then on, MacNicol's career was a succession of the unexpected. When he came to New York, he figured he wouldn't get into "Crimes of the Heart" because he was too young-looking, but he did, and when he read for the part of Stingo in the movie "Sophie's Choice," he knew he wouldn't get that. Stingo is 6 feet 2 inches; MacNicol is 5 feet 7 inches.

"I stacked Kleenex packs and paper towels inside my shoes," he said. "When I sat down, there was a hint that all was not right because my pants shot up to my knees. Alan Pakula must have known — God love him for not saying anything." Well, actually he did say something - still, MacNicol got the part.

"I'm always getting roles I'm wrong for," he concluded. "And they most often push my career ahead.

"I got on. The reaction for the show was so good that I kept getting offers when I was teaching to go here and go there. I decided to take a year off teaching and give it a shot. I never looked back."

Miss Murray's first album was for a small Canadian company, her second contained her first single and the song which was to send her to the top, "Snowbird."

"I don't think anyone expects their first single to be a hit. I just got so busy. I had an exclusive contract with CBC in Canada. I was on the road; I was all over the place. I was a semi-regular on the Glenn Campbell Show - CBC waived the exclusivity for that.

"I don't think I was ready. I was all confused. I was looking for management. I didn't know what the hell was going on."

When Miss Murray didn't have another hit for 21/2 years, she learned that "people forget you pretty quick." She also had another experience which taught her a lesson. She had a "follow up" to "Snowbird," which was written by the same song-writer, called "Put Your Hand in the "Capitol wouldn't release it. They said it didn't sound like me. I don't know how they knew, they'd only heard one thing.

"I just figured they must know what they were talking about; they'd been in the business a long time, and I'd just had one hit. Turns out I knew more than they did in that respect. Six months later a Canadian group called Ocean had a hit with it ('Put Your Hand in the Hand')."

The 24-year lull gave her time to get herself together. "I was out learning my craft. I didn't have a hit record so I wasn't exactly in demand.

One of the major turning points in Miss Murray's life came when she temporarily walked away from her career to marry and begin a family.

"I finally had a focus for what I was doing, and I finally had a home. I was traveling all those years, and I'd come home but it really wasn't home. I think of home as a family.

Another major turning point occurred in 1978 when "You Needed Me" "totally revitalized" her career. Today, Miss Murray travels seven or eight times a year for a maximum of two weeks at a time. Although her children feel that is "too much," she points out they don't know how much other performers travel.

Miss Murray says the most enjoy-able aspect of the music business for her is cutting an album because "it's real exciting; it's a very creative ti-me." Then, without pausing, she says, "But I do like the live shows, too. I have to admit that, except in Las Vegas, where you have to do two shows a night, which I hate. I don't play it at all anymore, but that's not to say I'll never do it again. "If I didn't, I wouldn't be disappointed. It's a real grind. The money's so good you can't turn it down sometimes. Actually, it's the three hour wait between shows. What do you do? Watch TV? When you're used to having your family around and you're alone, it's not terrific. I'd rather do one nighters any time.'

MCT's second production of the season will open Friday and run through March 15 in the Mabee Fondation Theatre Two at Theatre Midland, 2000 w. Wadley Ave.

Marsha Norman's Pulitzer Prize winning "Night Mother," features Thelma Cates, played by Marilyn Bassinger, and her daughter Jessie, played by Jeannie Summers. Set in the home which they share, the play is presented in one 90-minute act. It involves Jessie's decision to kill herself and her attempts to justify this decision to her mother.

Although the play centers around the subject of suicide, it is written without sentimentality or hysteria and brings with it a sense of hope and even dignity.

Ms. Norman has said, "The daughter represents so many people in the world who have left without even a note. So often they leave behind a tremendous sense of guilt and pain on the part of the survivors. 'Night, Mother' is an effort to rewind the clock and argue it out with them." The box office has already opened to members and will open to the general public Monday. Hours are 10 a.m. to 5 p.m. Monday through Friday. Call 682-4111 for reservations.

Each painting shows the whole process of her enjoyment in baking, decorating, and displaying the cookies. On a watercolor background, the cookies are painted in oils to give them a 'frosting-like' appearance."

Ms. Wolfe also paints Indian corn, loves the festive colors of Mexican art and enjoys primitive molas depicting children.

Her work will be on display until March 22.

Q.-My partner and I have frequent discussions about how best to get into the auction after the opponents have opened the bidding with one no trump. What do you recommend and why? -A.R., Buffalo, N.Y.

A.-We are old fashioned enough to believe there is nothing wrong with a tried and true method: an overcall of two spades shows spades; two hearts shows hearts: two diamonds shows that suit; and the same goes for two clubs. It is easy to remember and can cause problems for those who are geared to defend against all sorts of conventional overcalls.

At the same time, we appreciate \( \) does not come up all that often. the arguments in favor of some two-suited method of overcalling. When your opponent opens one no trump, he holds close to half the deck himself, so chances are that any overcall you make is more likely to be based on distributional values than high-card strength. Under those circumstances, an overcall that shows two suits at once has much to recommend it.

The simplest method of twosuited overcalls is Landy: an overcall of two clubs shows at least nine cards, and probably ten, in the major suits. It's major drawback is that that particular combination to know which is his partner's second suit, he bids two no trump to ask his partner to name it. Usually, the anchor suit will be at least five cards long, so the overcaller's partner can sign off in that suit with a three-card holding.

With only a doubleton in the anchor suit and a weakish hand, responder bids the in-between suit, i.e., one no trump-two clubs (show-

No matter which of these methods you use, an overcall of two no trump is always unusual, showing the minor suits. If you had the values to bid two no trump naturally. you would have doubled on no

'Charley's Aunt' will be staged

ODESSA — Brandon Thomas' com-edy "Charley's Aunt" opens Friday at Permian Playhouse. The production is set to run through March 15.

Cutrain time is 8 p.m.

The complications which result from a young man masquerading as a maiden aunt have been written and rewritten in countless plots since the first opening of "Charley's Aunt" before the turn of the century. The original, however, retains its freshness and spontaneity.

A series of burlesque situations, the Thomas comedy, set in the 1890s, revolves around an Oxford student's wealthy aunt from Brazil who fails to arrive in time to chaperone two young couples at a party. Charley's aunt is therefore impersonated by another energetic young student.

The complications that result from

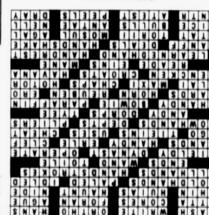

Charley's "aunt" scampering through the halls of Oxford, clad in a flaxen wig and ill-fitting skirts, and being wooed by a couple of dignified gentlemen, may not be refined, but have been found hilarious by audiences all over the world. And the hilarity increases when the real aunt unexpectedly does arrive and is introduced to "herself."

"Charley's Aunt" was first performed in London in 1892, and chalked up 1,466 performances in its four year run. It has been revived here and abroad since, at one time having 40 professional touring companies playing it throughout the

In the current presentation, Scott Richard Klein plays Lord Fancourt "Babbs" Babberly, the Oxonian who poses as Charley's aunt. Kent Smith and Albert London are seen as the young men, Jodi McElligott and Shawn Cole are the young women in need of chaperoning, and Kelly Kirksey plays a third girl. Arwayne Bishop and Michael Schleuter portray the two elderly gentlemen and Priscilla Green plays the real aunt. Kerry Pell rounds out the cast as

Falling into place

By LANA CUNNINGHAM Assistant City Editor

A jigsaw puzzle can consist of hundreds of tiny pieces. Separately, each means nothing, but when interconnected into an adjacent piece, and another and another, it finally forms one large picture.

That's the state of Midland today. Just as it takes most people many hours to construct a jigsaw puzzle, it takes many months and years to build the economic picture of a city. First one piece fits into the next, then comes another. Occasionally a few pieces drop out, but more are found to fill the hole.

Projects that had been slowly forming for months finally popped into place during 1985. Pieces like the Bid Resource Center and the Permian Basin Center for Energy and Economic Diversification. And to find the pieces which can fill the remaining holes in the puzzle will take that same kind of spirit that typefies a Midlander — a risktaker, a creator.

THE ECONOMY, DESPITE all efforts to diversify, is "totally based on the petroleum industry," said Steve Hardin, economic development director with the Midland Chamber of Commerce.

The resources — human and mineral — are all geared toward the petroleum industry. In these of using those same resources.

ments — with its government contracts never done better in its history in the Permian

"If we can continue to think with the local resources we have, there will be growth," said Hardin. And the more non-petroleum related industries that are brought to Midland, the easier it will be to survive the economic downturns. "ClayDesta Communications is an excellent example. They saw a need and it has been successful," he said.

THE PETROLEUM INDUSTRY isn't the ONLY industry in the world, said Hardin and he believes residents need to learn that lesson. "We need to look beyond here and see what other industries there may be.'

Just beyond Midland's city limits is a world market — a market that to date has been largely untapped for petroleum products and services. It is the international market which may fill a gap in Midland's puzzle.

China, said Hardin, "is now offering golden opportunities for people in the petroleum industry. We need to get our foot in the door.

One toe is on the threshold. Midland has set up contact with the Chinese petroleum industry and last spring that country's senior consultant along with a group of Chinese oilmen visited the Permian Basin. With their current drilling technology

MISD board laying groundwork for new classrooms

By JULIE HILLRICHS Staff Writer

Just as the Midland Independent School District completed construction last year on the last of five elementary schools approved in past bond elections, its trustees are laying the groundwork for more new schools and classroom additions to existing schools.

MISD will need 231 additional classrooms during the next eight years, according to an independent study on enrollment and classroom

Results of the study show 27 classrooms should be in place by the beginning of the 1986-87 school year, 31 classrooms in 1987-88, 81 classrooms in 1988-89, 35 classrooms in in 1989-90, and 22 classrooms in 1991-92.

District officials say the figures are the result of continued growth in enrollment and legal requirements that limit the maximum class size to 22 in grades three and four. The 22to-1 class ratio already is in effect for kindergarten through second grade.

MISD "may have to consider a mix of temporary portable buildings combined with the construction of permanent facilities" if enrollment peaks by the mid 1990s, according to Dr. James Mailey, advisor to the Board of Trustees.

The Board already agreed to purchase portable classrooms for use next year. In addition, trustees will consider proposing to voter a bond election to construct new schools and additions to existing schools.

The Ruth Cowden Scharbauer Elementary School officially opened its doors on Sept. 3 with a total 467 students to help alleviate some of the overcrowding.

Located in the new subdivision of the Scharbauer Ranch west of Holiday Hill Road between Andrews Highway and Wadley Drive, the school is similar in design to Quanah Parker and Santa Rita Elementary

The 52,000-square foot building cost MISD about $2.5 million and was paid for with funds approved by Midland voters in a bond election held in April 1982. In addition, MISD approved renovations to two of its three junior high schools.

The $1 million expansion and renovation of San Jacinto Junior High School was completed in September. Monies from a 1982 bond issue were used to finance the project.

The San Jacinto project included the construction of a 10,400-square foot administration and classroom addition located on the north side of the existing classroom area between the auditorium and cafeteria. The entrance to the new administrative offices now serves as the main entrance to the school. The previous administrative offices also were remodeled to provide additional classroom space as well as a book and conference room.

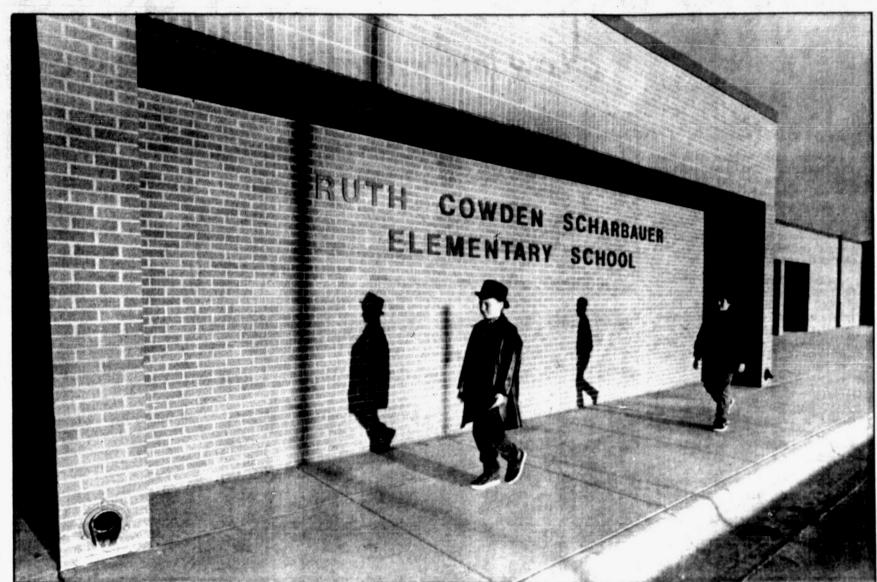

In addition, the plans included a 1,440-square foot addition to the existing band hall, treatment of all exterior windows with insulation and stucco to prevent leaking, replacing light fixtures, creating 14 additional staff parking places in an area located west of the kitchen and resurfacing the existing parking lot.

At Alamo Junior High School, construction currently is underway on new administrative offices and other remodeling projects.

The $800,000 expansion and renovation includes a new administration addition, remodeling of existing of fice space, energy-saving window treatment, a concrete plaza and additional staff parking.

Funding for the project was provided through voter-approved bond monies. Project architect is Yandell & Hiller Inc., engineers, architects and planners of Fort Worth. General contractor is Rose Construction of

The Ruth Cowden Scharbauer Centennial Elementary School opened its doors in September, 1985 with a total of 467 students.

Center to unite scientists, businessmen in commerical ventures

By JULIE HILLRICHS Staff Writer

Plans to develop a Permian Basin Center for Energy and Economic Diversification moved closer to reality last fall when the University of Texas System Board of Regents and area leaders pledged support to expand the scope of petroleum-related ventures currently in Midland-Odessa.

Initial development of the Center, to be located at the intersection of State Highways 1788 and 191 midway between Midland and Odessa, was provided by a cooperative effort of Odessa and Midland families and businessmen. It will bring together research scientists and business people to develop new knowledge and improve existing products for commercial ventures.

Jess Hay, chairman of the Board of Regents, said the center would be administered by the University of its resources would be drawn from other institutions in the UT System. The center also would serve as host to a variety of other university centers, institutes, bureaus, laboratories and special units.

The Board pledged its support to the Center when it accepted a $500,000 planning grant from the Odessa Industrial Development Corporation, and a $250,000 grant from the Ellen and Bill Noel Distinguished Chair for Energy Research. The donations will cover faculty salaries, initial development and operational expenses of the center.

In addition, the Board accepted a 165-acre tract of land, valued commercially at more than $4 million, from the Scharbauer family of Midland. The center will be constructed

The Permian Basin center, described as "a third such cooperative thrust," will be designed to aid the gion "by the application of research and research participation," Hay results, commercialization of technological developments, introduction of new technologies and various other entrepreneurial activities," Hay

UT Regents completed agreements with two other communities interested in furthering high technology development with the UT Stystem during the past two years. Plans were completed in June. 1984 to establish an Institute for Biotechnology in association with the San Antonio Health Science Center. The Board also completed agreements in August 1984, to establish an Advanced Robotic Research Institute to be affiliated with the University of Texas at Arlington. "In each case these communities recognized the importance of high technology programs to their future economic/business development and recognized also the importance of said Construction of the 10- to 15-year project will not begin before the spring of 1987, according to UTPB President Dr. Duane Leach.

Hay said, "We are extremely grateful to the leadership of both communities (Midland and Odessa) for their commitment to this proposed joint venture and to the Odessa Industrial Development Corporation for providing the seed money to enable us to move the concept to a reality.

When these arrangements are complete, we believe they will prove tremendously beneficial to the economic diversification of this mineral-rich area that has been a primary source of wealth to The University of Texas System and the State of Texas in general," he added

John Landgraf, president of the Odessa Chamber of Commerce, said and plans to do whatever is necessary to bring this into a reality The Center "will go a long way to help encourage the relationship being toward economic diversification tween Midland and Odessa and improve that the two cities can work together" and "demonstrates the need and the interest for the University in this area," he added

Sesquicentennial Mass slated

SAN ANTONIO (AP) — Texas 13 Catholic dioceses will mark the state's Sesquicentennial with a special Mass and celebration in San Antonio in April, church officials said.

What we want to do is celebrate the rich heritage of the church in Texas and look forward to the next 150 years of the church's life," said Brother Richard Daly, executive director of the Texas Catholic Conference.

Archbishop Patrick Flores will be the principal celebrant at the Mass on April 6, and newly appointed Bishop John McCarthy of Austin will deliver the homily. Daly said as many as 20 diocesan, auxiliary and retired bishops and an audience of 5,000 are expected at the celebration.

The event will start with a dramatic presentation at 1:30 p.m in Municipal Auditorium, with the Mass immediately afterward

ECONOMY-

To assist in the international efforts, the chamber and city officials are attempting to get Midland Regional Airport established as an international port of entry with foreign trade zones.

'It will fit into the international scheme of things," Hardin said. "Costs will be involved, but the benefits will outweigh the costs.'

Midland also is designing a piece of the puzzle that could fill a large our long-range future. We must gap — the Superconducting Super Collider project which is expected to cost $2.8 billion. The city of Midland has put $25,000 into a pot along with the cities of Odessa, San Angelo and Big Spring to see this Department of Energy project located between the Tall City and Garden City

And one of the central pieces in the puzzle has to be The University of Texas of the Permian Basin, according to Hardin. "That is critical to maintain that school. We have to maintain an institution for higher education.

The glue to putting all these puzzle pieces together will be the "creativeness of the people in Midland...people taking advantage of a situation and using creative thinking and applying it to the resources here," Hardin said. "That will pull Midland through the good and bad times.

Our commitment to controlling the cost of electricity is paying off. We haven't said much lately about all the things we're doing to keep the cost of electricity as low as possible. That isn't because we haven't been working hard. We have been, and it's that hard work that gets the job done.
You pay less for the electricity you use than many people in the United States, which is an important factor contributing to the economic growth of the area. We've accomplished this with strict cost-control management; with low-cost strategies for meeting future needs; by making maximum use of lower-cost Texas lignite coal for generating fuel; and by taking advantage of current market conditions to lower the cost of natural gas fuel.

Meeting the electrical requirements of one of the fastest-growing areas in the nation, while holding down the cost of electricity to attract new industry and jobs to our area, requires planning, commitment and plain old Texas hard work. That's how we're doing the job.

Auto dealers expect good sales in 1986

Low interest rates helped boost car sales in '85

By SUSAN LINDSAY Business/Oil Writer

Downsized automobiles and attractive financing helped boost automo-bile sales in the Permian Basin during 1985, and auto dealers expect equally good sales in 1986.

The nation's major car dealers whittled interest rates down to 7.8 percent in 1985, causing new interest in the domestic market.

Jack Sherman, president of Jack Sherman Chevrolet, said Midlanders showed particular interest in Chevrolet's new line of smaller cars manfactured by both General Motors and Japanese automakers. These cars include Spectrum, Sprint and

The dealership had a 10 percent increase in their car and truck sales over 1984. "I think the incentives helped to persuade people to buy new cars," he said. "I believe the American public still has a love affair with their automobiles."

Sales for Friendly Pontiac, Chrysler, Plymouth jumped 25 percent over 1984 sales. About 35 percent of all sales were for pickups.

"I guess people are still buying pickups because there's a lot of room out here," said Andy Houghton, sales manager. Other big movers for the dealership were mini-vans and Trans said Neil Florer, vice president sales for Rogers Ford. "The trucks come with cassette decks and plush interiors. About 55 percent of all our sales are these types of vehicles.

And the trucks sold were "fancy,"

He said another big mover has been the Ford Taurus. "It was Motor Trend's car of the year. There's not been anything so big since the Mustang," he said

The Taurus helped boost Roger's Ford sales 15 percent for all three lines the dealership carries. Ford

Attractive financing options helped boost automobile sales in the Permian Basin during 1985. Although, trucks remained a strong seller, down-sized domestic models also sold well sales were up 5 percent over 1984 and Volvos were up 32 percent. The dealership also sells Volkswagens, but could not compare figures because they had not been selling Volkswagens two complete years.

Supply of Fords has been good, he "A lot of vehicles are on order said

400 new Fords are expected by the end of April. However, keeping a supply of the Buick Century and Park Avenue last year was difficult, said Odell Hicks. sales manager for Sloan Brothers

"They're selling faster than we can get them in. The Century can come with a new four-cylinder engine. This seems to be catching on real well," he said.

But, while other dealerships were enjoying good new car sales, Village Dodge saw an increase in used cars sales during 1985.

"Compared to 1984, new car sales were down 6 percent for us, but used car sales were up 30 percent," said Jim Morris, sales manager, adding that 1985 was the second best year in the history of the dealership.

Of cars sold during the year, 40 percent were trucks and the only remaining full-sized car, the Lincoln Continental, remained high.

Foreign car dealers also enjoyed a great amount of success during 1985.

Jim Galyean, sales manager for Dotson Datsun, said his sales last year were outstanding. "There's a larger demand at the current time for foreign products because of quality, workmanship and resale value."

Sales for Permian Toyota were up 245 percent over 1984 with much of these sales from repeat customers. said Kevin Karr, service manager. "If you have a good product and good people serving them, you can't go wrong," he said.

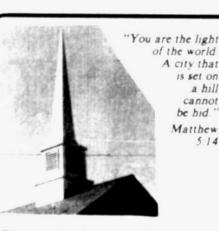

Dealers in Midland are skeptical about automobile sales during 1986, since oil prices have fallen, but overall expect a good year.

"If prices fall any more, companies won't be able to buy new vehicles I hope business will not have to drop said Florer.

"If oil prices stabilize, the automobile industry can do as well in 1986 as it did in 1985. Right now, I'm just hoping to have as good as year as I did in 1985," Houghton said.

Isolated off to one side of Loop 250 and constructed with tranquility in mind, Clearview, an alcohol and drug abuse treatment center, is a quiet refuge from the hustle and bustle of life across the Loop.

Blue skies and open ranch land greet the early morning eyes of the patients who spend — on the average six weeks to help ease them into a lifestyle free of chemical dependency, a problem estimated to afflict some 25,000 in the Permian Basin.

In a recent interview, Phil Lundberg, director of Clearview, appeared confident, but realistic about the facility's future.

'We've had some heart-tugging success stories," he said. "They are people who have begun to get control of their life and are moving more aggressively toward a healthier lifestyle.

'And then there are those who have left early before the medical treatment is completed," he acknowledged. "That's expected, but when it happens, it still hurts. We know what the program can do for them and to see them give up hurts.

Despite a few failures, Clearview's short tenure in Midland has already produced some results.

'We've had to make some adjustments but we have high hopes," said Lundberg. "Clearview is ahead of schedule financially. We budgeted for 11 admissions in October (the first month of business) and 14 for November. We've had 42 admissions so far." (As of Dec. 15). While the admissions slumped considerably during the holiday season — only a handful — Clearview is expecting business to begin booming.

Everyone in this field has a slump over Christmas," said Dr. Joseph Wolpmann, medical director. "December was real slow, but things are really starting to pick up now. It's going to snowball over the next three

While admissions are looking up, it may be awhile until the financial picture does the same.

"We're budgeted to lose $500,000 during our first year of business," said Lundberg. "You might say that we're just 'losing less.' The director added that the $3.4 million facility hoped to start breaking even by the end of the second fiscal year (July 1987) and to have a positive net worth late in the third fiscal year. During the first few months of business, Clearview has killed one program (music therapy), instituted another (outpatient program) and has made plans to more aggressively seek the adolescent chemical dependency market - with one whole wing devoted toward rehabilitation of the younger patient.

Still another area currently under consideration is the indigent population.

"The board has asked me to look into establishing an indigent policy," said Lundberg. "Our philosophy is if a person approaches us for treatment, we'll try to work out some way that they can receive treatment, even if they can't afford it. That's one advantage of a nonprofit organization — the bottom line isn't always the bottom line. Taking care of patients and meeting our responsibility to the community are our first concerns.

The board of Clearview consists of several representatives from the three groups involved in Midland Camelback Samaritan Group Inc., an organization formed from Camelback Hospitals of Scottsdale, Ariz., Samaritan Health Service of Phoenix, Ariz. and Midland Memorial Hospital.

Board members include locally, Ray Branson, president of MMH; J. Coley Cowden, chairman of the Palmer Drug Abuse Progam · West Texas, Paul Rae, oil company executive; Steve Thompson, an insurance executive; Dr. Daniel Vestal, pastor of First Baptist Church; and Donnette Williams of Families All Coming Together (FACT), a local support group.

Other board members include: board chairman Luther W. Goehring, vice president of Samaritan Health Service; vice chairman, Daniel W. Capps, chief executive officer of Camelback Hospitals; secretary-treasurer. Irene Andre, executive vice president of Camelback; and Clarence Teng, executive vice president of October's opening of Clearview was the result of several years of planning by area health officials to open a chemical dependency center.

Plans were first discussed in 1980 when a feasibility study was conducted by MMH. Original plans were to add 20 beds for chemically dependent patients as part of an expansion program. Those plans were changed when the oil boom of 1981 brought fears of bed shortages and a 50-bed, $3.4 million project was set for construction at Wadley and Tremont streets for the chemical dependency unit.

In 1983, the hospital board approved a plan for a 77. bed expansion at a cost of $15 million to MMH. That decision, coupled with competition from other groups also seeking approval of chemical dependency facili-ties, caused MMH to shelve the plans.

In early 1984, MMH began searching for a joint partner to develop the chemical dependency unit. A conceptual agreement with Camelback and Samaritan was reached in July and finalized Nov. 8, 1984, in Phoenix.

The 36,500 square foot facility was constructed on a 10-acre tract donated by the Scharbauer family near Loop 250 and Thomason Drive.

Parkview Hospital will see more changes in 1986

By RON GILMORE Staff Writer

Like most of the previous 21 years in Parkview Hospital's history, 1985 brought change.

A corporate buy-out in January, hassles with the Federal Trade Commission beginning in July, overtures of yet another corporate purchase of the hospital, a sudden offer by a group of private physicians and the multi-faceted ClayDesta Corporation and the finalization of that offer resulted in a name change finalization of that offer resulted in a name change (Physicians and Surgeons Hospital) and a facelift for the aging care center.

And the events did not stop with the end of 1985.

The opening of the first cardiac catherization laboratory in Midland at the end of January and plans to construct a $20 million-plus first-class, private hospital on the grounds of ClayDesta are bringing everincreasing change.

Currently, Physicians and Surgeons (P&S) is undergoing a "$600,000 to $800,000" facelift (cath lab included) with further plans to institute a burn unit "down the road," according to Dr. Tulsi Singh, chairman of the board for ClayDesta Regional Medical Plaza Development Corporation, P&S's parent company.

The year's events began last January when Hospital Corporation of America of Nashville, Tenn., purchased certain assets (Forum Group Inc.) from American Medical Centers (another Nashville group) which gave it title to Parkview.

Trouble started, however, when the FTC spotted a possible monopoly situation in the Permian Basin and in Virginia, where HCA also held interests and decided to investigate.

In May, Summit Health Ltd., a California-based health firm, stepped in to manage Parkview and negotiated with HCA to purchase the facility should the FTC rule in favor of divestiture.

On July 17, the FTC did, indeed, rule against the company and ordered HCA to divest itself of Parkview Hospital.

Less than one month later, CRMPDC stepped in with an offer of $2.75 million to purchase the hospital with plans to upgrade it for temporary use until the larger $20 million project could be completed.

While an agreement was signed Sept. 10 between HCA and CRMPDC, no official takeover could proceed without the OK of the FTC which dragged on until early December. The deal was finally closed Dec. 13 at MBank in Dallas after the three-month FTC scrutiny was Financing for the purchase was provided through the sale of Health Facilities Development Revenue Bonds issued by the City of Midland's Health Facilities Development Corporation and approved by the City Council in December. The bonds were purchased by MBank.

Members of the hospital's board of directors and corporate officers include Singh, chairman; Richard C. Liley, president; Bob Smith, vice president; Terry Tubb, vice president; Paul Latham, secretary; Louis Barkley, treasurer; P.V. Patel, Jerry Cochran and

While plans are proceeding to refurbish the hospital and break ground on the new facility, the sentiment among the medical community has been mixed on whether there is a need for additional bed space in Midland.

Still to be revealed by P&S are results from a feasibility study requested by CRMPDC last summer and conducted by Price Waterhouse.

Preliminary findings, however, revealed that additional beds are needed, due to statistics showing that "29.5 percent of Midlanders currently go out of town

Others, including Dr. Walter Parks, who serves on the board of directors for Midland Memorial Hospital and even the physicians' own general counsel have indicated that the need is not there.

Last August, Parks stated that "there are empty beds at both MMH and Parkview" and that "there is just not a need for any more." Jack Ladd, when discussing the two plans (75-bed and 120-bed) that CRMPDC was considering at the time, stated that "the money difference between the two is not that great, but there's a question as to whether there's a need for the extra beds." His statement came before any preliminary findings from the feasibility study, however.

Necessary or not, plans for Physicians and Surgeons Hospital continue, with a planned 1988 opening. Until that time, the former Parkview facility will serve as the physician's foothold in the community and a place to develop new services, such as the cath lab and burn unit.

The structure's fate in 1988, however, is still unknown although the corporation has hinted at plans to convert it into a rehabilitation hospital or support facility for the new hospital.

mar, Texas' second elected president, is looking much better these

Lamar, of course, has been dead for 126 years. But his 8-by-51/2-foot portrait which hangs in the Senate chambers in the Texas Capitol now has a healthy glow thanks to Calvert's Bob Norman.

Norman, a painting doctor with a fine reputation in the field of restoration, recently was commissioned by the Texas Legislature to refurebish several paintings of Texas heroes that hang in the Capitol.

Most of the time, Norman simply cleans the paintings that come to him. The process is analagous to giving a checkup. Occasionally, however, he has to perform extensive surgery when paintings have been damaged by fire, for example.

Norman's first Capitol "patient" was Jefferson Davis. To restore the Confederate president, the doctor had to repair two large holes which had been torn in the canvas.

He patched the holes, painted over the damaged area, and sent Davis home good as new. Next. Lamar and Thomas Jeffeson Rusk, one of the first two U.S. senators from the state, were referred to him.

While cleaning Lamar and Rusk, Norman made some startling

In the Lamar painting, he found a book in the background that had been painted out by an earlier restorer many years ago. Norman said it appeared the now-forgotten restorer either wasn't very good or was extremely lazy. Norman painted the book and some gold fringe he found at the bottom of a drape back into the portrait. "In restorting them you have to make sure you get it back like the artist painted it," he says. While cleaning the Rusk portrait, Norman discovered that part of the chair back had been repainted about four inches nearer the chair.

Before Norman starts to work on a patient, he studies the painting intently, trying to get a feel of how the painter viewed his work. Norman's livelihood rests on his ability to recreate exactly. He never paints original material for fear of developing a style of his own.

The plaza's art includes bas-relief sculpture which reflect scenes from Midland's past: expedition across West Texas in the 1800s, the vanishing Indians and bisons, ranching, the railroads, the discovery of oil and the growth of Midland, "the Tall City" on the plains.

The day and others to follow were teeming with excitement and merriment, as Midlanders celebrated the birth of the community.

Midland gained its beginning and impetus in the coming of the railroad through West Texas in the early 1880s. The community, a ranching and farmer center in its early development, suddenly boomed with the discovery of oil in 1923. We're going to have the best birthday party that anyone has ever had."

MRS. BASKIN LAUDED Midland and Midlanders. She noted that Midland earlier in the 1900s was billed as the "Queen City of the Plains" and was settled in part by Yankees and Republicans. "So, you see," she said, "a lot of United States President Harry S. Truman who once said, "Men make history and not the other way around.

CENTENNIAL Co-Chairman Linda Cowden Isbell noted that people of all ages, ethnic backgrounds and occupations were involved in Midland's celebration and that the Centennial's logo would be on memorabilia. The logo depicted an 1800s steam locomotive, tender, three cars and a caboose against the Tall City

In February, United States Vice President George H.W. Bush, a former Midlander, returned to Midland for a Centennial rally which turned into a "symphonic" production.

Men with pioneering spirits were encouraged not to shave and to grow beards. They were to resemble old-timers back in the yesteryears. Midland schools sponsored Centennial projects, and the Midland Reporter-Telegram sponsored an essay contest on the topic: "What I Like Most About Midland." # Deauville Mall expected to open early 1987

Sam's Wholesale Club one of mall's stores

By JOHN PAUL PITTS Business/Oil Editor

Construction on Deauville Mall could be under way by June 1, with an opening in early 1987, according to Steve Black, President Deauville Corp. Black reports that about 50 percent of the complex is already

"We are looking forward to getting started on our construction and becoming a vital member of the community in Midland," said Black.
"Our commercial tenants are also looking forward to entering the retail market in Midland."

Black said construction on the 350,000 square-foot first phase of the mall complex which will feature a number of nationally known retailers would get underway no later than June 1, but construction of the second phase of 100,000 square feet was still undetermined.

"Much will depend on how the leasing activity goes," said Black. "If all goes well we could start the second phase at the same time. If not, it will be at a later date.'

Black said his firm still had confidence in the economy but the downturn in the oil business was making the Deauville Mall a harder sell: "Many of the people up north don't really understand what is happening in Texas. They just read the headlines and assume that all of Texas is a devastated area."

Sam's Wholesale Club, a discount subsidary of Walmart Stores, has announced that it plans to open a 106,000 square foot facility in the Deauville complex that will front on Highway 191 and have room to add an addditional 30,000 square feet. Black said Deauville was also negotiating with several other free-standing operations for space in the complex which will be located at Loop

Construction on the wholesale club will begin this spring and will employ 115 full time and part time employees when completed. The high-volume club will sell top-quality, name brand merchandise on a cash-and-carry basis to members only. Members will consist of licensed small businesses and employee groups. It will join 23 other wholesale clubs around the country. The first Sam's Wholesale Club, opened in Central Oklahoma in 1983.

"I wish we could get things to move faster," said Black, "but a lot of things have to come together in an operation like this before it becomes a reality. At any rate, I am confident that Deauville Mall will be open at this time next year."

When completed the mall will have 485,000 square feet of leaseable space that will be dominated by seven anchor stores and a food mall that will also feature several restaurants

Two of the announced anchor stores were Federal Electronics and House Wares. The 27,500 square-foot Federal Electronics store has been described as an "adult Toys-R-Us" featuring a wide variety of electonics for adults. The House Wares is a 20,000 square foot store, featuring china, crystal, and other table and home decor. Other anchor stores expected to sign for the mall will contain approximately 25,000 square feet each. Deauville could not comment on possible tenants for the mall, although an apparel store, general merchandise store and national theater chain are negotiating"

Chairman Tom Gordon said earlier that he thought Midland was a good location for another mall, because the Deauville complex would bring retailers to town that were not already in Midland.

Plans are still on for the construction of Deauville Mall with groundbreaking scheduled for this summer and completion by early 1987.

Mervyn's: Midland 'still good place to do business'

By JOHN PAUL PITTS Business/Oil Editor

Major retailers are coming to Midland and bringing jobs with them, making up for jobs being lost in the petroleum industry. Two retailers, Service Merchandise and Mervyn's, soon will open stores in the new Midland Plaza, located on Loop 250 and Midkiff, behind the Courtyard at Midland Park.

Mervyn's will occupy 75,000 square feet of space in Midland Plaza, while Service Merchandise is building a 50,000 square foot store.

"We feel that the market in West Texas warrants our opening the Midland store, and we are happy to be expanding into that area," stated Service Merchandise's Ron Janik, human resource manager for the Midland area. And a Mervyn's representative said that, despite the recent downturn in the oil and gas industry, Midland is still a good place to do business.

Kathy Blackburn, Mervyn's public relations manager, said Mervyn's chose to locate its 150th store in Midland, because of a number of positive market factors determined after an extensive marketing survey.

Ms. Blackburn said Mervyn's had never closed a store and did a very thorough demographic study of an area before it opened a new store. She said the department store chain considered a whole package of factors, and economy was just one of them. She explained that an area can have a good economy and not the right demographic mix for the national chain.

'Midland was attractive for several reasons, including its people, growing economy, excellent location and current retail market," said Ms

She said the study indicated Midland met Mervyn's requirements as a primary target market. "Three out of four of Mervyn's customers are female and the typical customer is a working mother in her mid-thirties with a combined family income of $30,000," she added.

Ms. Blackburn said Midland was a young town with a median age of 28, well below the national average. In addition it has an above-average family size, and a good demographic Mervyn's also looks for a strong economy, and Ms. Blackburn said Midland's position as a regional business center made the community fit the bill. Said Ms. Blackburn: "Despite oil and gas industry downturns of several years ago, the economy ong signs of future growth as evidenced by continuing commercial construction. Also, the county's unemployment rate has been consistently lower than both state and national averages, offering another reason for optimism.

Ms. Blackburn said Mervyn's did a long hard look at the history of Midland and found that it had been here for a long time and had survived many booms and busts, and was confident it would weather the current storm over oil prices.

Midland Plaza's leasing agent: Mall 70 percent full

By MELLA McEWEN Business/Oil Writer

Nine months after construction began, the 202,000-square-foot Midland Plaza retail center, located on Loop 250 east of Midkiff, is preparing to open its doors.

According to Dode Harvey of Don Harvey Commercial Properties, leasing agent for the shopping center, Midland Plaza is about 70 percent leased, and the center has prospects to lease another 10 percent. "We should be up to 80-85 percent leased within the next 90 days," he predicted.

Russ Beckner, vice president of development for Dean A. Beck and Associates of Los Angeles, general partner in the development agreed. "The leasing program is going nicely, and we expect a continual inflow of tenants through Christmas. We expect to be, for all intents and purposes, full by Christmas."

Harvey attributed the leasing program's success to the two anchor stores, Mervyn's and Service Merchandise. "Mervyn's and Service Merchandise plan to do over $25 million in sales during 1986," he stated.

'We've done what's necessary to be successful," Beckner said. "First, we have an excellent location. Between the mall and Courtyard and North Park across the street, Midland Plaza will be right in the city's retail area. There's a tremendous amount of retail in the area. Second, we have two national tenants that between them have a full range of merchandise."

The primary reason some local shopping centers are empty is they didn't have the large retailers that would draw in the people," Beckner commented. 'We've brought in two large retailers that do a lot of business, and will draw people to the

According to Beckner, Beck and Associates decided on Midland because "the people were there, and they had the income that would justify the investment on our part to provide the goods and services, and the long term prognosis was for a good economy. Certainly people are con-cerned about the oil and gas industry, because you're in it. Looking from the outside, we see fluctuations in the oil business, but we know the demand and need for oil and gas won't become

He added that, while Midland has too many shopping centers, and it is unlikely they will all be filled with tenants, "We felt if you discounted the shopping centers in the wrong locations or lacked the major draws, the area was under-retailed. There wasn't enough good solid retail to support the demand.

Midland Plaza is owned by Midland Plaza Associates, a Texas limited partnership with Beck and Associates as general partner. The center was designed by Allen and Walker of Dallas. Paige and Wirtz of Lubbock served as general contractor, with West Texas Consultants of Midland serving as civil engineers.

Midland is in a downturn and that is cause for concern, but a lot of areas are in downturn situations. We are confident Midland will not only survive but grow," she added

Besides demographics and economy, Mervyn's also looks strongly at locations that will be accessible to as many people as possible, and determined its location in Midland Plaza, off Loop 250 would offer excellent access for all of Midland County.

Mervyn's is usually the major retail advertiser in communities where it is located and, in order to serve customers responding to sales, the company needs a highly visible and accessible location eaid Me Blackburn.

The final indicator determined by the retail chain is the competition of the existing retail market. Mervyn's competes in each market with all retailers who sell soft goods, but fills a unique niche in that it offers name brand merchandise at popular pricing. "We fill the niche between the local department store and the national merchandisers like Sears and Penney's," she said. Ms. Blackburn said Mervyn's saw a need for a family department store, providing exceptional value through a balance of quality, price, fashion and customer service.

Service Merchandise concentrates on giftware and houseware, offering brand name merchandise at reduced prices. The company recently purchased the H.J. Wilson stores in Lubbock, San Antonio, San Angelo, Amarillo, Austin, Dallas and Houston.

The new Mervyn's in Midland is part of the corporation's aggressive plan to add 27 stores in 1986, according to Ms. Blackburn. "A dynamic company needs a dynamic community, and in this respect Midland wins with flying colors," she said.

In the past five years, Me has outpaced the department store industry, increasing revenues at a compound rate in excess of 25 percent a year. The company posted sales of $2.1 billion in 1984.

The Midland Mervyn's is expected to employ about 225 with an annual payroll of $1.6 million. Service Merchandise expects to create 100 to 120 new jobs by the time it opens in mid-

We are looking for a long future in Midland, Texas," Ms. Blackburn

Leasing has begun on Midland's newest shopping center, Midland Plaza, a 202,000 square foot facility on Loop 250 east of Midkiff. Construction is almost complete on the project, and the developers have great expectations for the new

Resource Center established to obtain government contracts evident by population growth

By FRANK TROMBLEY Staff Writer

Combined efforts of the Midland and Odessa chambers of commerce, the Private Industry Council of the Permian Basin have resulted in establishment of Permian Basin Bid Resource Center.

The primary purpose of the Bid Resource Center is to help develop the economic vitality of existing businesses in a 17-county region of the Permian Basin by helping them obtain contracts with the world's largest purchaser of goods and services: the U.S. government

The new Bid Resource Center, located in Grand Slam Village on LaForce Boulevard at Air Terminal, is the first satellite of the National Bid Resource Center in Beaumont.

David S. Thayer, recently named director of the new facility, is a business consultant and former director of planning for El Paso Products Co. in

In announcing Thayer's appointment, Midlander Hank Henry, bid center board chairman, said the center will nurture ways to bring economic diversification to the Permian Basin by giving existing industries and opportunity to seek a share of a market for goods and services estimated in excess of $165 billion

As to what the Bid Center can mean to area businesses, Thayer noted that since the Beaumont Bid Center opened in 1983, local companies have reaped benefits from 105 government contracts worth some $25 million, which saved some 140 jobs in the Beaumont area and created 250 new jobs.

Thayer described the successful bidding on government contracts are applicated.

ernment contracts as a complicated process and said a primary mission of the Bid Center will be to guide participating area businesses through the complex federal bid process and help prepare successful bids. One of the ways the Bid Center plans to simplify the complex bid process is by profiling area businesses, matching their products and services with available government purchase contracts. Thayer says response by area businesses has been overwhelming, that the staff "has all it can handle." He pointed out that area businesses can participate in the Bid Center program and it will cost nothing until an actual contract to provide goods or services is awarded. "There is no speculative expense on the part of businesses," Thayer said. "No fee is charged until after an actual contract is awarded.

Thayer termed the response "very encouraging" and said area business people are "looking for ways to diversify," to lessen dependency on oil industry-

Prior to the opening of the Bid Center, Steve Har-din of the Midland Chamber of Commerce said, "The potential for the Permian Basin is tremendous, it has been extremely gratifying to see businessmen from two communities working together for the better-ment of the area."

Noting the success of the Beaumont Bid Center, Hardin said, "This can be used not only as a job-retention tool but as a job-creation tool." He observed that government contracts are not limited to manufacturing projects, but also include legal, accounting and geological services.

Citing three instances of contracts awarded to Beaumont area businesses, Hardin said, an oilfield equipment company started making jet engine parts, a janitorial service won cleaning contracts on U.S. Air Force Bases in Georgia and Florida and a plant nursery secured a contract for the upkeep of landscapes in federal parks and along federal

According to Thayer, for every $1 spent on bidding contracts at the Beaumont Center, companies in the area have received $103 in new contracts.

Funding for first year operation of the Bid Resource Center, about $95,000, is to be provided by the Odessa Industrial Development Corp., the Midland Industrial Development Corp., the Private Industry Council, City of Midland and County Commissioners. After the first year, funding will be provided from fees assessed successful bidders. All profits over and above operating expenses thereafter are to be plowed back into community economic development programs.

Bid Center operations will be guided by an 11-member board of directors, with Henry serving as chairman. Other members include: Joe Kloesel, Midland business consultant; Jim Brown with the City of Midland, Ron Schwisow with Teraco Inc., Midland; Roy Allen, Murphy & Rochester, Odessa; Odessa TESCO manager Bill Griffin; Don Williams, Western Tank Co., Odessa, West Texas Consultants, Odessa; Dave Cox, National Furniture Exchange, Odessa, John Foster, KMID-TV; and Larry Briley, Motion

Midland-Odessa differences

By FRANK TROMBLEY Staff Writer

The terms "white collar" and "blue collar" are often used to describe the socio-economic characters of the cities of Midland and Odessa A prominent Odessan, asked if he objected to the use of the terms, said he didn't particularly like them, but the terms "accurately describe" the differences in the economic makeup of the two communities.

Probably nothing better demonstrates differences between Midland and Odessa than examination of growth patterns of the two cities from 1980 through

In keeping with the "blue collar" nature of Odessa -Ector County as a whole — growth followed jobs and many of the jobs created during the so-called boom, especially oilfield drilling and service area and manufacturing jobs, occurred in the Odessa-Ector County area. This caused the population to burgeon in the county. When the economic downturn set in with a vengence during the last half of 1982, the populations of Odessa-Ector County began to diminish, with the greatest loss occurring among those residents living outside the Odessa city limits.

Midland's growth appears to have been considerably more stable, according to a three-month study by the Reporter-Telegram.

Indications are that the populations of the city of Midland and Midland County both grew steadily during the boom and continued to increase even during the economic downturn, with Midland finally overtaking Odessa, estimates indicate, by 567 residents.

At the end of 1985, according to Reporter-Telegram estimates, Midland's population had climbed to 102,208 and Odessa's appeared to have settled in at 102,641, a difference of about 0.5 of 1 percent.

Indications are the population outside Midland's city limits did track the economic downturn, but those losses were more than offset by gains within the city limits, though some of those gains may have been realized through annexation by the city.

In 1980, the U.S. census showed Midland County with a population of 82,636 and Ector County with 115,374. The Reporter-Telegram study indicates the population of Ector County climbed to nearly 142,000 in 1982, while Midland County's population was estimated at slightly more than 105,300 at that time.

As of December 1985, it appears Ector County's population has declined to slightly more than 132,000, while Midland County's has risen to just under an estimated 120,000, with the continuing growth indicated within the Midland city limits.

Midland and Odessa have moved closer together in other areas too. In 1980, Texas Employment Commission figures show the Midland County labor force num bered 51,900 and Ector County's was 64,200, a difference

During the so-called boom, Midland County's labor force rose to 65,400 and the Ector County labor force climbed to 76,800. As of the end of 1985, Midland County's work force was 64,400, according to the TEC, and Ector County's was 67,300, a difference of only 2,900. Reporter-Telegram estimates indicate the combined population of the Midland-Odessa area at the end of 1985 was about 252,000, with a combined labor force of about 131,700, whoich represents about 52.2 percent of the total population.

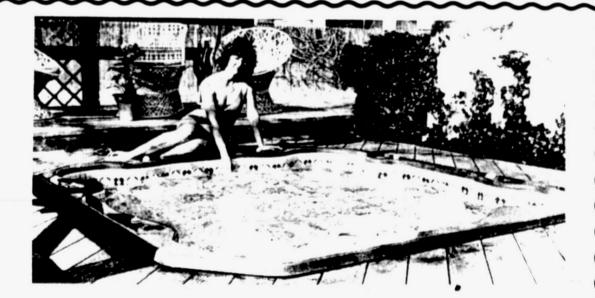

Combined Midland-Odessa households were estimate ed at 85,879 in 1984 and combined retail sales totalled nearly $2.2 billion.

Vista Saving's Midland branch to be in full operation by March 1

By MARK LEWIS Staff Writer

These may not the best of times for either the energy business, the Midland real-estate market or savings-and-loan institutions in general, but try telling that to Danny V. Jackson of Odessa's Vista Savings.

"We're hoping to be in full swing by March 1," said Jackson of Vista's new Midland branch, now being constructed in front of Skaggs Alpha Beta on the northeast corner of the intersection of Loop 250 and Midkiff

Most savings-and-loan institutions depend heavily on the housing market, which in Midland depends heavily on the oil-and-gas industry, which is currently in a slump.

But Vista has been finding ways to make money despite such daunting economic conditions, and Jackson sees nothing foolhardy about expanding into Midland at this time. In fact, "We're looking to acquire another branch in Midland," he said.

Petroplex's drive-through 'faster' service

From Staff Reports

From the perspective of downtown Midland, cars moving north on Big Spring Street appear to be heading right into Petroplex Savings. It's only an illusion, of course - the street veers left before it gets to Dinero Plaza, where the savings-andloan institution is located.

But if one of those cars makes a quick detour to the right a few blocks south of Dinero Plaza, it can drive through Petroplex Savings, which recently opened a new drive-through motor bank at 710 N. Big Spring, across Kansas Street from the Central YMCA.

"It's just a convenience factor for our customers," said Betty Seay of Petroplex Savings, which opened in June 1982 and put its name atop Dinero Plaza in February 1984. The S&L concentrates on consumer-oriented business and has current assets of about $185 million, she said.

The motor bank has three lanes for cars, with tellers on duty from 7:30 a.m. to 6 p.m., Monday through Friday. There's also a 24-hour automatic-teller machine and night depository, according to Ms. Seay.

Customers have responded "real well" to the new drive-through facility since it opened earlier this month,

"It's just for faster service," she said. "It's a convenience."

Petroplex Savings is a member of the Federal Savings & Loan Insurance Corp., according to Ms. Seay. "It is home-owned and operated, with all local directors," she added.

"We're a relatively small, aggressive financial institution. We've been very profitable in the last 18 months," he said. "We're trying to go out and compete for the consumer-oriented, residential-type business." Established in 1959 as First Savings of Odessa, the company now has assets of about $180 million. It changed its name to Vista a year ago. "We have four branches here in Odessa, the new one in Midland and two branches in the Dallas area,"

Even though he said the Midland housing market is more overbuilt than Odessa's, Jackson expects more activity here than in Odessa in the near future, especially if the energy industry doesn't rebound soon. But in order to participate in the Mid-land market, he said, it was neces-sary to build a branch in Midland.

Though Odessa is only 20 miles away, Vista has found that the psychological gulf between the two cities is much greater when it comes to doing business.

"I really have to be in Midland to do business in Midland," said Jackson. "The two cities have very distinct and different business said.

The current slide in oil prices makes things more difficult for Vista "We're a real-estate-oriented lender, so we will be impacted," Jackson said — and the trend toward banking deregulation also poses problems for S&Ls.

"No question the industry's had a lot of problems," he said, but despite predictions that the larger financial institutions will eventually consume the smaller ones, Jackson doesn't agree that bigger is necessarily better.

"I don't think that's best for the industry," he said. "We're small but we're profitable."

Though Vista expects "to compete straight-up with banks in the near future," its emphasis will be on consumer-oriented loans, rather than commercial loans. We're not going to be an energy lender, for example," Jackson said.

"We would like to be able to get the consumer's business That means loans for things like houses, home improvements, cars and college tuitions, and services such as checking and savings accounts. Eventually commercial loans also will be available at the Midland branch, but not right away, Jackson

Midland gets 'status boost' with TEC's regional office

By MELLA McEWEN Business/Oil Writer

Midland got a status boost in 1985 with the relocation of a major state office to the city.

In an attempt to make operations more efficient, the Texas Employment Commission moved its regional office from San Angelo to Midland, with the new Midland location opening Oct. 1, 1985.

While the move brought only three TEC employees to Midland, it did serve as a status boost for Midland, and local officals are hopeful it will act as a catalyst to attract additional regional and state offices to Midland.

'It's been very beneficial for the staff to be centrally located," said Velma Burkham, director of the region, which extends from El Paso in the west to San Angelo in the east, Lamesa in the north to Pecos in the south. The move also proved to be economical, with Midland's central location and proximity to good air service enabling the office to slice traveling expenses, according to Burkham.

"We're funded mostly through the federal unemployment tax paid by employers on payroll taxes. As a government body, we have the responsibility to be cost effective, and we're always looking for ways to be more cost efficient," Burkham stated.

Ed Miller, former manager of the Midland TEC office, now at the El Paso office, estimated at the time the move was decided, that the move could save $12,000 a year in travel expenses and salaries. You can be in El Paso in an hour by plane, drive to Lamesa in about an hour, and Pecos in just over an hour. The furtherest place is San Angelo, and that's a two-hour drive," he noted.

In San Angelo, the regional office was housed with the local office, and the move helped both offices by easing overcrowding, enabling them to perform their jobs better. The regional office is an administrative entity that helps supervise the local offices, Burkham said. "We do not directly serve the public."

The move was discussed for several months and met with some controversy as San Angelo officials opposed the move. However, the three-member Texas Employment Commission voted 2-1 in late August to move the office. And Burkham is pleased with her new home. "It's worked out well. We're pleased to be in Midland.'

Dam construction to begin May '87

By RAMONA NYE Staff Writer

In a current science fiction article, major corpora-tions that used to be based around the search for oil, turn to a farflung exploration for water on Mars. In a way, Midlanders have come close to this vision by approving of a contract to buy water more than 150 miles away at Stacy Dam.

Not that the city's current water sources are close.

with the Paul Davis Field falling 30 miles northeast of Midland, Lake Spence about 100 miles east and an untapped reservoir of underground water at the T-Bar about 70 miles west.

The purchase of water at Stacy Dam, cleared by a popular vote on Aug. 10, signifies a trend many parched West Texas cities are facing. As they rapidly deplete the natural underground reservoirs around them, most of these cities are having to search further and further to find water to buy.

Stacy Dam is expected to start supplying Midland by the early 1990s through a 150-mile westward pipeline.

Odessa, Big Spring and Sweetwater elected to become member cities of the Colorado River Municipal Water District and owners of the dam located 25 miles southeast of Ballinger. Midland, San Angelo and Abilene became customers with each buying 16.54 percent of the dam's yield and each paying for 16.54 percent of the dam's construction.

On Aug. 10, about 12.5 percent of the eligible voters in Midland turned out to accept a $2.70 per month water rate increase. Approved by 97.4 percent of the voters, the increase will pay for Midland's share or $11.1 million of the dam's construction.

Additional water rate increases will probably follow after two more elections. More rate increases are needed to pay for construction of the 150-mile pipeline and to build a treatment plant to purify dam water. The expected rate increases stemming from these construc-tion projects has not been estimated, said Brent Payne, assistant director with city utilities.

The city's current supplier — the Paul Davis Field — pumps about 8.5 million gallons of water per day into Midland to meet the city's 20 million gallons per day demand. Lake Spence provides about 11.5 million gallons per day.

In 1991 when Stacy water is projected to start flowing through the city's faucets, the demand rate will range from 20 million to 24 million gallons per day. Stacy will supply about 12.5 million gallons per day or 45 percent of the city's water. About 13.5 million gallons per day or 55 percent of the city's water will continue to come from Lake Spence.

The Paul Davis field will be held in reserve for peak summertime demands to extend it's life and T-Bar's water will remain untapped, Payne said.

The T-Bar underground reservoir is estimated to contain about 670,000 acre feet of recoverable water reserves. Half of the 300,000 acre feet of water in Paul Davis remains to be tapped, Payne said. About 325,851 gallons of water equal one-acre foot.

Meanwhile construction of the dam - originally scheduled to begin in May 1987 — may be delayed by its threat to the existence of the Concho River Water Snake, an endangered species.

The river district is expected to go before the U.S. Fish and Wildlife Service on March 10 in Albuquerque, N.M., to prove that the dam will not endanger the snake. District general manager Owen Ivie, said his agency will contend that the endangered snake can survive on

Although the reservoir is a rechargeable source of water along the Colorado river, it too will run dry. The expected life of a reservoir is more than 100 years, Ivie

After the Stacy Dam reservior is depleted, "that's it for West Texas," Ivie said. Stacy Dam is the last water surface reservoir remaining in West Texas, he said.

Once Stacy and underground reservoirs are pumped dry, West Texans will have to begin doing three things, Recycling sewage water, a practice used in part by El Paso, will have to be considered. Cities would reinject the treated sewage water into their underground water basins. The technology of purifying effluent sewage water is close to being perfected, he said.

Although astronauts use this method for drinking water, a big psychological hurdle will have to be overcome before cities can start recyclying water this way,

Cities will also have to search further for undeveloped ground water.

And finally, water will have to be imported from other states such as Oklahoma and Arkansas, he said. Canals would be built to transfer water to one site and then it would be piped to West Texas cities.

East Texas man hopes to see Halley's again

AMELIA, Texas (AP) — George Smith got up with the chickens to watch Halley's comet when it zoomed across the sky back in 1910, scaring the daylights out of many people.

The comet came so close that the Earth passed through its tail and many people thought the world was coming to an end.

Smith, then a 10-year-old East Texas farm boy living in Troup, was thrilled, but not worried. "I remember it very well," Smith says. "Early in the morning I looked in the southwest. (The comet) was just as bright and beautiful as anything I ever

"The main base of it was larger than a dinner plate and from each side of it there was an orange light. It had a tail that ran out five or six feet." The comet was visible for 14 days, Smith says. He says his family was able to watch it without telescopes or binoculars. Although the comet didn't worry Smith and his family, a meteor that struck a few miles away frightened some residents, he said.

Smith, now 85 and a retired farmer living in the Amelia area, says he hopes to see the comet again. You have to get away from the haze and the city lights," Smith says.

This time Smith says he will use binoculars. The comet's brightness depends on how close it comes to the sun and Earth. In 1910, it came within 14 million miles of the Earth. In April it will come

Last year was like Indian Summer warm, pleasant, few ups and downs, stable. The economy began to look like it might take a notch upward.

But with January came the dismal winter - plunging oil prices, layoffs, fear about the future in the petroleum industry.

After treading lightly through 1983 and 1984 with its minor economic problems, Midlanders began to put their feet down more firmly during 1985. Retail sales were up, car sales were up, the housing market was up. Not much was down except possibly housing prices and interest rates.

"Midland fared better than many other places in Texas and the nation," commented Steve Hardin, director of economic development with the Midland Chamber of Commerce.

ONE OF THE UNDERLYING reasons for those warm months is the business that brought winter back to the Permian Basin - the petroleum industry. While companies were consolidating their people to streamline operations, Midland seemed to be the place where they brought their employees after closing offices in other cities. That meant filling up a small portion of the vacant office space and many vacant houses left by the boom years.

Said one Realtor of 1985, "I've never had a better year." And 1986 may be even better. ARCO is moving 150 families from its Denver office to Midland in a plan to close down that Colorado business location. Marathon recently upgraded its Midland site to a regional office. Mobil, too, is moving some more families into Midland.

"Midland will continue to benefit from its regional headquarters aspect," said Hardin. But in the uncertain times, they could just as easily withdraw, he added. "We as a community need to boost them. We have been fortunate so far."

In the past year, Midland's population nudged the 100,000 mark, meaning more people to buy goods and services. As a result, more shopping came to town. More stores opened up in areas such as Midland Courtyard, and construction began on the adjacent Midland Plaza that will feature Mervyn's and Service Merchandising.

Plans proceeded on Deauville Mall, a shopping center planned for highly traveled intersection of Loop 250 and State Highway

Nothing — not even rain or snow or ice stopped the work or flights at Midland Regional Airport where the parking lots were being redesigned and expanded, a new street system unfolded and snow and ice removal equipment were unloaded. And, somewhat quietly, the preliminary work continued on a new Air Park facility at a site northeast of the city. Environmental studies have been completed and architect's drawings have been submitted.

"Last year was pretty optimistic," said a Midland businessman. "We built 400-plus new homes and that's a good positive sign. The numbers of school children indicate the city was still growing.

BY THE TIME DECEMBER came, people were in an upbeat mood and this was reflected in their shopping habits. It was the time to give, and give they did as retail shopping improved.

But January came and so did the problems. Said the businessman of Midland's economic climate after the "cold front" hit, "It's about like the weather - cold and cloudy and a little bit dismal."

The same climactic factors that brought together an optimistic feel in the air in 1985 are clashing to bring in that dismal weather the petroleum industry. Prices for crude

Manor Park's new health care services 'a dream come true'

By RON GILMORE Staff Writer

With the "new smell" still lingering in the air of the recently com-pleted Mabee Health Care Center, residents of Trinity Towers Manor Park, a residential community for senior citizens, have ready access to medical and nursing services.

The center opened in December and was the highlight of the year for the expanding community con-structed along West Loop 250. Dedication ceremonies were Feb. 16.

The 36,500-square-foot center provides an infirmary, personal care, custodial care and nursing services for all residents of Manor Park and marks the residential community's transition from a non-medical facility to one able to handle residents with special needs. Residents of the center also are provided with around-the-clock medical attention, security, meals and recreational activities

According to Bill Saxton, those residents in need of medical care were transferred from the parent Trinity Towers complex to Manor Park in December.

"It's really a dream come true," he said at the Nov. 22 grand opening. "Especially when the health-care residents are anxious and excited. It makes it all worthwhile.

The 60-bed personal health care unit was constructed adjacent to the central facility which houses a chapel, library, gift shop, beauty/barber shop, exercise room, dining room and more.

Saxton explained the medical care system at Manor Park.

There are three levels of care." he said. "Personal, custodial and nursing. Personal care is that very gray area between independent retirement living and needing care. It is for people who need to be told to take their medication, for example."

Manor Park, a residential community for senior citizens, above, expanded in 1985 adding another phase of construction and the new Mabee Health Care Center. Left, Trinity Towers, a residential retirement facility, began undergoing changes in 1985 when many residents moved to Manor Park. Further changes are in store for the facility in 1986.

"Custodial care is when they actually need to have medication administered and nursing care is when they are more or less bed-ridden," he

"Custodial and nursing care patients are both under doctor's

Both custodial and nursing patients were transferred from Trinity Towers to Manor Park where there are also eight beds for personal care. According to Saxton, the third floor where those beds were located at Trinity Towers are being remodeled and made into residential rooms, with the second floor as "the personal care area.'

Both Trinity Towers and Manor Park...have an infirmary for shortterm convalescence.

Manor Park is a self-contained residential community for people age 62 and older. Construction of the community began with $6 million in donations.

The final stages, expected to be completed in seven to 10 years, will result in a $40-million project with 416 retirement homes and a 150-unit apartment complex constructed on

Donations for the construction of the facility were provided, in part, by the J.E. and L.E. Mabee Foundation of Tulsa, Okla., and by other individuals. General contractor was HBF Construction of Midland.

A prospective buyer must be more than 62 years old to live in the community. The buyer may choose between the spacious townhouses ($72,500 to $109,000), the garden homes ($35,750 to $94,500) or a condo in the Wallace Building (prices begin at $34.250)

The townhouses are very much like living in your own home," said Saxton. "They each have a private entry way and a two-car garage.'

The garden homes are six cluster units with a common hallway and laundry facility and are located closer to the activities area than the townhouses are. The Wallace Building units are connected to the activity area, chapel, dining room and the health care center.

Each unit within the walled community is equipped with a strobe light on the exterior that the occupant can activate by remote control. The light lets passersby know that the resident needs aid. Also, a light goes off in a central control area to let medical staff know where assistance is needed

"If someone is out on their patio in back of their unit and they fall or hurt themselves in some way, they can call for assistance by pushing the control that they 'wear,'" said Saxton. "A lot of planning went into this project.'

According to Saxton, Manor Park serves a useful purpose among its elderly residents.

'The general concept of Manor Park is that of a continuing care retirement center," he said. "The person who moves in may not need any health care, but as those needs change, it is available to them.'

GROWTH-

"You look at the first week in January before the price started breaking," said the businessman, "and there was a lot of optimism. Now, I don't know if it's pessimism, but it is a cautious feeling.

Coupled with that oil price plunge is an air of uncertainty over the Tax Reform Bill. The House has passed HR 3838 and certain provisions have put bond issues on hold throughout the state — even those connected with the statewide water plan approved in November. Some oilmen complained that if only they had a definite tax package and knew where the industry stood in the area of taxes, they could proceed with

The tax reform package also caused city officials to put a proposed $10.8 million city bond issue on hold until November to give them time to see what happens to Mid-

Problems in the petroleum industry - which constitutes much of this city's business - could easily affect others, such as the banks which made loans based on higher oil prices, according to Hardin.

Residents are bracing for a "hard winter" this year: Some have stopped buying large-dollar items, some are switching to higher-paying jobs if they can be found.

And church leaders are telling their members to be ready for the numbers of people who will need help this year.

"Everybody is very cautious right now," said the businessman. "They just want to see what happens.'

Caution is what more of them wish they had used during the heat of the last boom that exploded in the early 1980s. One sign hanging in a businessman's office reflects that thinking back to those "warmer days."

It says, "Please God. Give me one more boom and I promise I won't blow it this time.

Claydesta system outstrips expected sales goals in '85

DEANNA J. NEAL Business/Oil Writer

When Midland oilman/entrepreneur Clayton W. Williams Jr. decided to enter the lucrative and highly competitive long-distance telephone business, he had no idea of the scope of the business venture he was about to undertake.

ClayDesta Communications is a company that, within a year, has become three times larger than it was anticipated to be when the operation began in December 1984.

The company met its 18-month sales goal in only seven months, and with a continuation of direct phone sales and outside sales, the firm hopes to double the number of connections in 1986, according to Ron Hughes, director of sales for ClayDesta Communications.

THE COMPANY, WHICH grew from its original five employees in 1984 to 370 in just one year, attributes a good portion of its sales success to its advertising campaign which features owner Williams in a series of Texas-style television commercials.

ClayDesta's use of traditional sales strategies including outside sales, telemarketing and direct mail have enhanced their success, according to company spokesmen.

Timing was a critical element in the successful marketing effort of the company as an estimated 4 million-plus lines convert to equal access in ClayDesta's market areas. Equal Access has forced residential and commercial subscribers to choose their primary long-distance telephone service.

To carry the long-distance traffic between market areas, ClayDesta has begun construction of a state-of-the-art digital microwave system. The ultimate completion of its three-phase construction program will give the company the ability to originate and terminate calls throughout the state while interfacing with other carriers to complete calls worldwide.

"OUR ULTIMATE GOAL," said Hughes, "is to become the largest, fully digital, long-distance network in Texas, serving all 17 LATA areas in the state"

ClayDesta already has service in many Texas cities. ClayDesta has about 25,000 customers in the Midland/Odessa market, almost 18,000 in Austin, about 10,000 in Amarillo and another 10,000 in Abilene, Lubbock and San Angelo. Additional sales offices are scheduled to open up in February 1986 in Waco/Temple, Bryan/College Station and San Antonio.

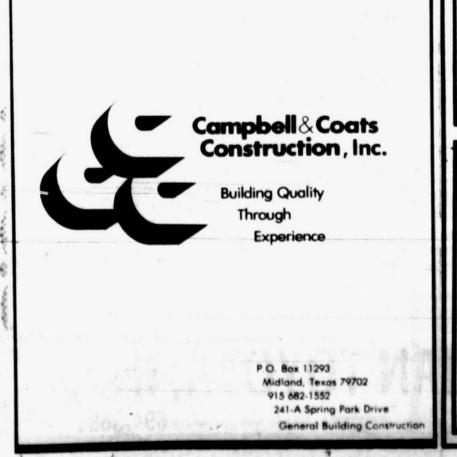

February 1986 in Waco/Temple, Bryan/College Station and San Antonio. Another boost to ClayDesta Communications' operations is the recent purchase of Fiberline, Inc. of San Antonio, a marketer of fiber optics facilities for private-line voice and data transmissions.

AS A RESULT of the acquisition, the firm has in place a digital network to Houston and San Antonio, immediate access to a full array of private-line and long-distance services, and an immediate increase in its network's capacity as well as long term expanded capacity.

network's capacity as well as long-term expanded capacity.

1985 also marked the beginning of another spinoff for Williams. This, perhaps his most successful to date, is his 21st spinoff.

The company has entered the lucrative telemarketing business, a $60 billion industry that continues to grow and according to Hughes "is the trend of the future." The marketing department is involved in conducting political surveys, marketing surveys and fundraising campaigns.

Gulf Building face-lift creates Claydesta Center

By MELLA McEWEN Business/Oil Writer

Rather than build a new office facility, Clayton Williams Jr. made do with what he had and remodeled his Gulf Building into the ClayDesta Center Downtown. When the dust settled on Oct. 23, 1985, downtown Midland had a bright new office building and ClayDesta National Bank had its fourth full-service banking facility in Midland.

"1985 was an expansion year for us, with our two new facilities," noted David Jones, president of Clay-Desta

He added that bank officials are pleased about both the level of new business generated at the downtown bank and the positive feedback from existing customers who are pleased with the new location.

The renovated building has been well-received, although it is only 38 percent leased. "People like the building, but they don't want to make a commitment right now because of uncertainty over oil prices. They're looking to cut costs, not move," commented Bill Sandlin, general manager of ClayDesta Corp. "If oil prices stabilize, or there's an import fee enacted, then we'll see a lot

He noted that ClayDesta Corp., the real-estate arm of Clayton W. Williams Jr. companies, is negotiating three deals. "If those come through, we'll be up around 70 percent leased."

Built by R. Dumas Milner of Jackson, Miss., ground was broken for the Gulf Building in February 1959. Completed in early 1960, original tenants included James E. Peterson; Rauscher, Pierce Refsnes Brokers; Halliburton, Buffalo Petroleum Co., Gulf Oil Corp., and independents such as Jack G. Elam and C.L. Milburn.

Ten years later, Realty Income Trust of Providence, R.I., took ownership when the original owner suffered severe financial hardships. The building was sold to Crosley Building Corp. of Ohio in 1971, and to Clayton W. Williams Jr. in 1976.

Williams moved his growing company headquarters from Fort Stockton to Midland in 1974, settling into the Gihls Towers. He negotiated for the Gulf Building and, after settling a legal dispute with the First National Bank of Midland, now Republic-Bank First National Midland, took ownership and relocated.

In 1982, Williams was developing the ClayDesta Plaza project, and gave Gulf the opportunity to put its own building on 13 acres. The move gave the development a strong beginning. However, Gulf's move, plus Williams' relocation to first Petroleum Center and then the plaza, left the downtown building 5 percent leased.

On Sept. 18, 1984, Williams announced a $2.5 million overhaul of the 14-story building. Seven floors were gutted. Fire and safety systems, security and plumbing systems were updated, and a state-of-the-art elevator system was installed. The exterior was redone, the ground floor remodeled into a bank and an atrium, and all 14 floors made handicapped-accessible.

Final cost for the year-long project totaled $3.8 million.

Midland Memorial christens new obstetrics center

By RON GILMORE Staff Writer

Patients and visitors saw many changes at Midland

Memorial Hospital during 1985.

A new obstetrics center (including an intensive care unit for newborns), a new information desk and admitting area, new furnishings and new services were

The highlight of MMH's $15-million expansion plans, however, was the opening Oct. 28 of the new obstetrical (OB) wing, located on the third floor in the building's southwest corner.

The OB area has 37 post-partum beds as well as four well-baby nurseries and a five-bed neonatal ICU and one isolation nursery. Also included were eight labordelivery/recovery beds in which the patient can labor, deliver and recover all in the same room.

The area, now labeled the LDR Center, was previewed in a crowded but informative special tour on

The tour welcomed more than 500 expectant mothers and their husbands and others who were just curious about the new service.

"STORK DAY," as it was called by MMH, was an allday affair which showed participants every facet of the new obstetrics wing.

"We were expecting a maximum crowd of about 200 people and more than 500 showed up," said public relations director Cynthia Brust. Ms. Brust and other hospital personnel led the group through the hospital where they listened to medical officials discuss many aspects of the "world of maternity" from pre-natal presentations and Lamaze instructions to infant car-seat demonstrations. Also included were a style show for maternity fashions and a tour of the LDR area

Another part of the renovations at MMH included the admissions area and information desk.

MMH had been working on the new admissions area. now located on the north side of the hospital "since mid-July," according to manager of patient accounts, Mark Wheeler.

"The new admitting office is where the old business office was and the information desk is where the old admitting office used to be," he explained shortly after the changes were made in November.

JOAN ROBBINS, SUPERVISOR of admissions, admitted that at first "the general public got kind of lost" until the signs were put up informing them where to

The changes are an improvement, she indicated. 'We used to have to dodge each other in the old office," she said. "And now we even have an extra office and may increase the staff in the future.'

'Dodging' was a necessary survival skill in the old admissions office for staff members and patients who remember the small three-roomed point of entry near the Illinois Street portico. A small desk pushed out front greeted visitors who waited their turn to be admitted by staff members in the closet-sized offices which doubled as a hallway for the steady stream of employees making their way in and out of a back

At the same site today, however, visitors will find a large, four-sided, mauve-colored structure which serves as the MMH Auxiliary information desk — open on all sides and designed with a generous supply of drawers and storage areas for those staffing it.

"I HONESTLY DON'T know what we are going to put in all these drawers," said one volunteer when the information desk first opened. "But we love it. It's a much better location and it's much more visible to the

Prior to the new construction, hospital guests made their way to a congested corner on the west side of the lobby to ask questions of the auxiliary's "pink ladies."
The old lobby area also had a facelift with new furnishings.

According to spokesman Dale Miller, the renovations totaled "about $250,000."

"That's just a ballpark figure, but it cost about $200,000 for the construction and $50,000 for furniture," he said. Miller added that the changes provided the admitting area with 3,300 square feet and gave 2,200 square feet for the information area (including surrounding corridors.)

In addition to the LDR area, still another new service instituted in 1985 was the "Emergency Room Volunteer Chaplains Program.

Established since June, the program was the brainchild of MMH Chaplain Alan Williams.

"WHEN I FIRST came to MMH two years ago, I wanted to start this program," said Williams. "Before we had this, there was no one physically present in the E.R. for pastoral care, although I am always on call.

The program currently includes 18 volunteers "from all denominations" who must pass an eight-hour training course of four two-hour sessions.

The response has been positive both from the emergency staff and the patients and patient's families, according to Williams.

'We have received a lot of good feedback about it," he said. "When there's an emotional situation, the staff just doesn't have the time to deal with the family. This service frees them to do the job they're trained to do."

Midland Memorial Hospital expanded in 1985, adding more beds and a new Labor/Delivery/Recovery area. Also included was extensive remodeling of the admissions and lobby areas.

TI predicts continued upswing in area hiring

The economic downturn in the Midland-Odessa area has benefited at least one business by increasing the availability of potential employees

According to Texas Instruments plant manager Glenn Culhane, 1985 was a record year for the Midland-Odessa plant, where employment increased by a net of about 120 people from 1984.

Culhane said the military semi-conductor market was strong in 1985 and he expects this to continue in 1986, with the plant expected to add about 15 direct labor and professional people in the first quarter and a significant number of college and technical people in the third and fourth quarters, though exact numbers are yet to be determined. TI's recruiting is continuing on college campuses, he said.

rently contains about 400,000 square feet of space, he said, and indications are the facility will probably have to be expanded in 1987 to meet increased demands if growth of the military semi-conductor market continues

Culhane says TI's total work force has increased four-fold since 1980, with somewhat more than 1,000 employed in 1985.

Culhane described the current work force as the largest number of permanent employees the Midland-Odessa plant has ever had. He noted that when TI manufactured consumer-oriented computer products at the Midland-Odessa plant in 1977, the total work force swelled to a range of 1,500 to 1,800, but many of those employees were temporaries.

Regarding layoffs at TI plants an nounced within the last month or so, Culhane said those layoffs involved plants manufacturing products mostly for the general consumer

'Optimism index' shows upturn for small business

NEW YORK (AP) — Small-business optimism is up, suggesting that the late middle-age economic expansion has recovered from its bout with doubt and is likely to continue moving ahead for at least the next six

The upturn wasn't surprising, in view of other signs of growing economic strength, but it adds conviction to the feeling that the expansion, now in its 39th month, is destined to have an unusually long

Prof. William Dunkelberg, the Purdue University economist who maintains the optimism index for the National Federation of Independent Business, reported a sharp re-bound to 101.2 in January from 94.8 in the 1985 final quarter.

The index has an unusually good record of anticipating future events since its inception 10 years ago, and ter's decline a source of concern among some economists and busi-

Dunkelberg attributed the rebound to stronger capital spending and hiring plans, and to an improved assessment of the economy by the more than 2,000 respondents.

Federation members make up a cross-section of so-called independent concerns, ranging from proprietorships to companies with sales in the hundreds of millions of dollars (but still small compared to the top 1,000 companies).

Such companies employ about one-half the private, non-farm workforce and produce about 50 percent of the nation's gross national product, or total output of goods and this point of the expansion. Dunkelberg and colleagues designed the index a decade ago, basing it on responses to 10 questions from members of the federation. They calculate the reading on the basis of written responses, with 1978 arbitrarily said to equal 100, thus giving users a relatively recent year with which to compare On that basis, the first-quarter index is below the record-high reading of 110.3 in the first quarter of 1984, but up considerably from the previous quarter's 94.8, only the second sub-100 number in the past 12

The lowest index ever recorded 1981, when the economy was heading deeper into one of the worst recessions since the 1930s.

Readings are determined from responses to questions in three categories: general expectations, current status and spending plans.

In the first category tne questions concern expected business conditions, the climate for expansion, expected sales volume, and expected credit conditions.

The middle category consists of questions relating to current job openings, current inventory satisfaction, and changes in net earnings from the previous quarter. The final three questions relate to company plans to hire, to make capital outlays and to add to inventories.

Westwood Village capitalizes on retail-sparse southwest sector

DEANNA J. NEAL Business/Oil Writer

"Midland is overbuilt, but underretailed." That, according to Julie Lydon, marketing expert for Westwood Village Shopping Center, is what the people in Midland's business community need to understand.

1985 was a year that brought growing retail space to Midland Westwood Village, on Midland's sparsely retailed southwest side, completed Phase II of a proposed three-phase expansion project.

The second-phase building has added an additional 27,500 square feet to the shopping complex, bringing the total to about 110,000 square feet. When Phase III is complete, the center will have 130,000 square feet of retail space to offer residents on Midland's rapidly growing southwest side. There is no time frame, however, for completion of Phase III.

"The anchors at Westwood at this time are Safeway and Revco and we are working now to recruit one more strong anchor," explained Ms. Lydon. "We have had three new lessees in the last two months, and are having some very positive response from several other potential lessees." Victory Capital of Fort Worth, owner of the center, conducted a marketing survey which convinced them that the Westwood expansion was a practical and economical plan. "Looking at 1984 sales figures, Midland ranked higher than any comparable-size city in Texas, and higher than the entire state, as a whole."

The marketing study shows that retail sales in Midland increased 16.9 percent between 1976 and 1984, and during the first seven months in 1985, Midland showed a 15.7 percent growth rate - the highest in the state. "That is very, very healthy and very encouraging," she added.

Ms. Lydon maintains that retailers should be very interested in the market in West Texas, and particularly in Midland "Midland has gotten some bad press. People see oil prices unstable, and they steer away from Midland. If they could see the figures we have seen, they would know that the retail dollars are here and are being spent here.

Westwood is going all out to attract retailers to fill up their new space. They recently hired an on-site leasing agent and property manager. Yolande Owens.

Said Ms. Lydon: "We want Westwood to be a neighborhood shopping center. Those are the types of stores we are targeting in our marketing plan. We are beginning a very aggessive marketing plan to attract both customers and retailers.'

The center's location, once perceived as its greatest weakness, is proving to be its greatest strength. 'Again from our marketing survey, we are finding that this is a great location for us. Over 23 percent of Midland's population is within a onemile radius. There is no other major retail center in the area, and the retail buying power in that one-mile radius is $115 million per year.'

That number is achieved by taking the average income of the area's residents and deducting standard expenses. Whatever is left is usually spent on retail puchases and

We are very positive about the center and the viability of the market in Midland.

"We're not building for today's needs. We're building for two to five years down the road," said Jon Mathiasen, assistant director of aviation and administration.

Boardings at the Midland Regional Airport were down 2.5 percent during 1965 compared to 1964. And the airpark has gone from renting hangars to 300 planes during the boom to a hangar occupancy of 100 planes, Mathiasen said.

The bust has affected airline travel and hangar rentals, but Mathiasen said, "We feel that the economy will turn around

To prepare for the expected upswing, about $21 million has been invested in relocating Airpark and renovating the airport.

The regional airport's heating and cooling system underwent a $1.7 million renovation, which was completed in February.

The redesign of the street system to the airport and expansion of the parking lot is expected to be completed in May. The $15 million renovation was scheduled to be completed in October 1985, but was extended because of bad weather and additional contract work, Mathiasen said.

The renovated parking lot will have a drainage system and 2,000 additional spaces. A $250,000 renovation of the airport's leaky roof is 80 percent complete, with drawings made and bids expected to go out in April, Mathiasen said. The roof will be under construction for about 18 months.

Other airport changes include: Expanding the hall between the baggage carrousels and rental-car counters.

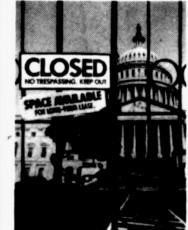

- Adding one baggage carrousel to give the airport three carousels.

 Adding two gates to the concourse to give the airport six — Bringing the building up to state and federal handicapped-access standards.

The airpark will be relocated 4 miles north of the city to a 2,659 acre site. The airport for private planes is being moved to allow development on the 600 acres it occupies. Concern about safety and noise levels around the airport also prompted the move, Mathiasen said.

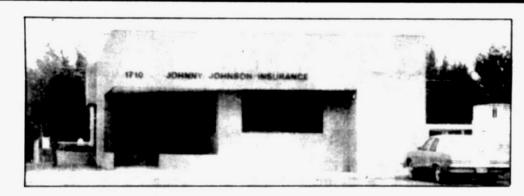

Airpark relocation is expected to be completed by September 1987. Drawings on Airpark's location north of Midland are being reviewed and construction should begin in July, Mathiasen said.

High Sky Children's Ranch stretches to serve needs of 'whole family'

By JULIE HILLRICHS Staff Writer

From January to December, 1985 signified a year of change for the staff and residents of High Sky Children's Ranch.

Formerly known as High Sky Girls Ranch, the facility located on 100 acres of land four miles northwest of Midland, changed names to High Sky Children's Ranch after it took a step in a new direction to house not only girls but their brothers as well.

"The board of directors looked very carefully at the need of the community and the Permian Basin," according to Executive Director Jackie Carter. The board decided admitting boys would allow the Ranch "to work with the whole family."

Founded in 1963 by private citizens, the ranch is licensed by the Texas Department of Human Services to care for 40 youths, ages 6 to 17. About 29 youths currently reside at the home.

The first four boys were admitted Oct. 1, 1985.
According to Ms. Carter, High Sky has four major programs designed to fit the varying needs of its

According to Ms. Carter, High Sky also plans to implement a physical fitness program to provide a variety of activities to meet the needs and desires of the youths. High Sky also experienced changes in staffing during 1965 when it named Ms. Carter its executive director, and William D. Clark to the associate director of development post, and Patricia Bogle as program director.

opment post, and Patricia Bogle as program director.

Ms. Carter began working at High Sky as a social worker in 1979 and became the home's program director in 1981. A former teacher at Midland High School, she attended Graceland College in Lamoni, Iowa, and in 1966 she was graduated from North Texas State University with a bachelor of arts degree. She received a masters degree in counseling from the University of Texas of the Permian Basin in 1982.

Clark formerly served as divisional director of planned giving in the Maryland-West Virginia division of The Salvation Army. His primary responsibility is in the area of fund-raising and estate planning.

Ms. Bogle began working High Sky as case worker in 1982. She formerly served as a case worker at San Angelo Center. A graduate of Texas Tech University with a bachelor of science degree in family relations, she has been employed in the field for 12 years. Her responsibilities include overseeing the four programs in place at the ranch.

Oldham Ranch offers retreat from alcoholism

HOCKLEY, Texas (AP) — Oldham Ranch rests at the foot of a dead-end rural road. With its one-room white chapel, placid lake and farmlands, it offers a retreat from the steady throbbing of metropolitan Houston nearly 50 miles away.

hearly 50 miles away.

The men who enter this retreat leave a dead-end street and start their real journey at the ranch gates—

a 90-day trek toward rehabilitation and a new start.

The 220-acre Waller County ranch falls under the wing of the Star of Hope Mission in Houston. For more than 15 years, the ranch and its staff have offered counseling and work for drug- and alchohol-dependent men ranging in age from 18 to 60. The ranch houses up to 32 men at one time.

George Illig, 50, has only a few days left at Oldham Ranch. The former industrial and commercial photographer was living on the streets of downtown Houston when he checked into the program nearly three months ago.

"In the case of somebody like me—alone in the world—they try to instill a sense of self-worth," says Illig. "This has been more valuable than I could have imagined. I have determined in my own mind that no matter how old they tell me I am, I'll simply work."

Illig's story is one he's heard repeated in a thousand different versions. He was a successful photographer on the East Coast, but he headed for the Sunbelt after his divorce. A portfolio and more than a decade of experience were not enough to get him a job in Houston. "I couldn't even get a job in a darkroom," Illig says.

Alcohol and street people became his whole world.

"It's a habit you develop," Illig explains. "I met some pretty nice people on the street."

Friends at the Star of Hope Mission on La Branch Street in Houston referred Illig to the Oldham Ranch rehabilitation program, where he has worked at the ranch's authentic carriage restoration shop.

He points to his bright blue eyes and says they used to be red. Still jobless and homeless, Illig says he'll return to a halfway house and start another search for work. "I have some nice tailored suits saved," he says.

Just a few hundred yards from Illig and the carriage shop, 22-year-old Hal Siegenthaler works on the Oldham Ranch hog farm. With 30 days left at the ranch, Siegenthaler says he wants to get on with his life. Unlike Illig, the younger man does not have a trade or career waiting.

"I like animals a lot," Siegenthaler says. "These pigs — they like me, too. I'd like to work on a farm."

He named his favorite pig Lisa, after his girlfriend.

A native of West Virginia, Siegenthaler joined the U.S. Army and headed for Germany right out of high school. He says he did OK — for a while.

"I got homesick," he says. "I gave them enough excuses to kick me

This is the second program he's been through, and he says he's been off alcohol for nine months. The Oldham Ranch is his reinforcement.

"This program will keep me from going back," Siegenthaler says. Counselor and chaplain Jesse Hart describes Oldham Ranch as a miniature community.

"It encourages the men to be responsible for each other," says Hart.

From their own ranks, the men elect a president, a secretary and monitors to govern the group. Community meetings often grow heated

Good ol' 'horse sense' plentiful in Midland

By BOB BRUNDAGE

Sports Writer

The horse, a dead mode of transportation for more than half a century, has a long history in Midland. Even longer than the city itself. How long? It's impossible to say.

Midland is located along the Great Comanche Trail, where the red man rode from hunting ground to hunting ground, village to village, long before the area was settled. It wasn't until 1849 that the first

It wasn't until 1849 that the first white man came through the territory, when Captain Randolph B. Marcy guided an 18-wagon caravan from Fort Smith, Ark., to Santa Fe, N.M. Oxen were used to haul the wagons and horses to transport some of the travelers.

The horse didn't have a long lifespan in West Texas as a means of transportation, but is still used today — to some extent — as a labor tool. Mostly, it has become a source of recreation.

midlander Rip Singleton has been a witness to the changes technology has brought to the ranching horse.

"A horse's role has changed a lot in the last 30 years or so," said Singleton, a Midland horseshoer and former ranch hand. "Instead of riding horses 25 or 30 miles, they put them in a trailer and haul them. Ranchers will load up their horses and take them to the back side of the range for roundups. They used to ride them to and from. I worked on ranches for 40 years and that's the way we did it.

"Cutting horses aren't used near like they used to be," continued Singleton. "Instead, they put the stock in a pen and run them down a chute. They used to go to the herd. They were all done that way. Now, mostly, they use a pen and chute."

Even Singleton's profession of horse shoeing has changed. "As far as shoeing is concerned, it's changed a whole lot," said Singleton. "Shoers now have a pickup they put everything on — forge, anvil, hammers, etc. — and go from place to place to shoe. People used to bring the horses to the blacksmith."

ONE OF the biggest recreational aspects of the horse is racing and there is a strong history of competition by Midland-owned horses in some of the biggest races in the country.

In 1957, Midland's Ralph Lowe enmust.

Midland 2324 W. Wall 683-748 1 tered a horse in the Kentucky Derby and Belmont Stakes. His horse, Gallant Man, was involved in a controversy in the Derby when jockey Willie Shoemaker mistook the sixteenth pole for the finish line and pulled up. By the time Shoemaker got Gallant Man back in stride, it was too late to catch Iron Liege, the winner by a nose in the tightest Kentucky Derby finish in 24 years.

A month later, Gallant Man and Shoemaker took an eight-length victory over Iron Liege at Relmont tory over Iron Liege at Belmont.

Two years later, Midland's Fred Turner entered Tomy Lee in the Kentucky Derby and once again a feating Sword Dancer by a nose.

Today, Midland is still involved in racing, its participants competing in races throughout the United States.
Close to home, there are often Midland horses vying for the All-American Futurity title at Ruidoso Downs, an event for two-year olds.

HORSE GAMES have long been popular. One of the most common is polo. In Midland, polo dates back to the 1920s and, though after a few years interest lagged, it is still going strong today.

The current polo grounds, the Midland Polo Club, was established 17 years ago by eight Midlanders who bought the land and leased it to the Polo Club for $100 a year. The lease is set up for 25 years and has an option-to-buy clause only on the contingent that the land be used exclusively for polo.

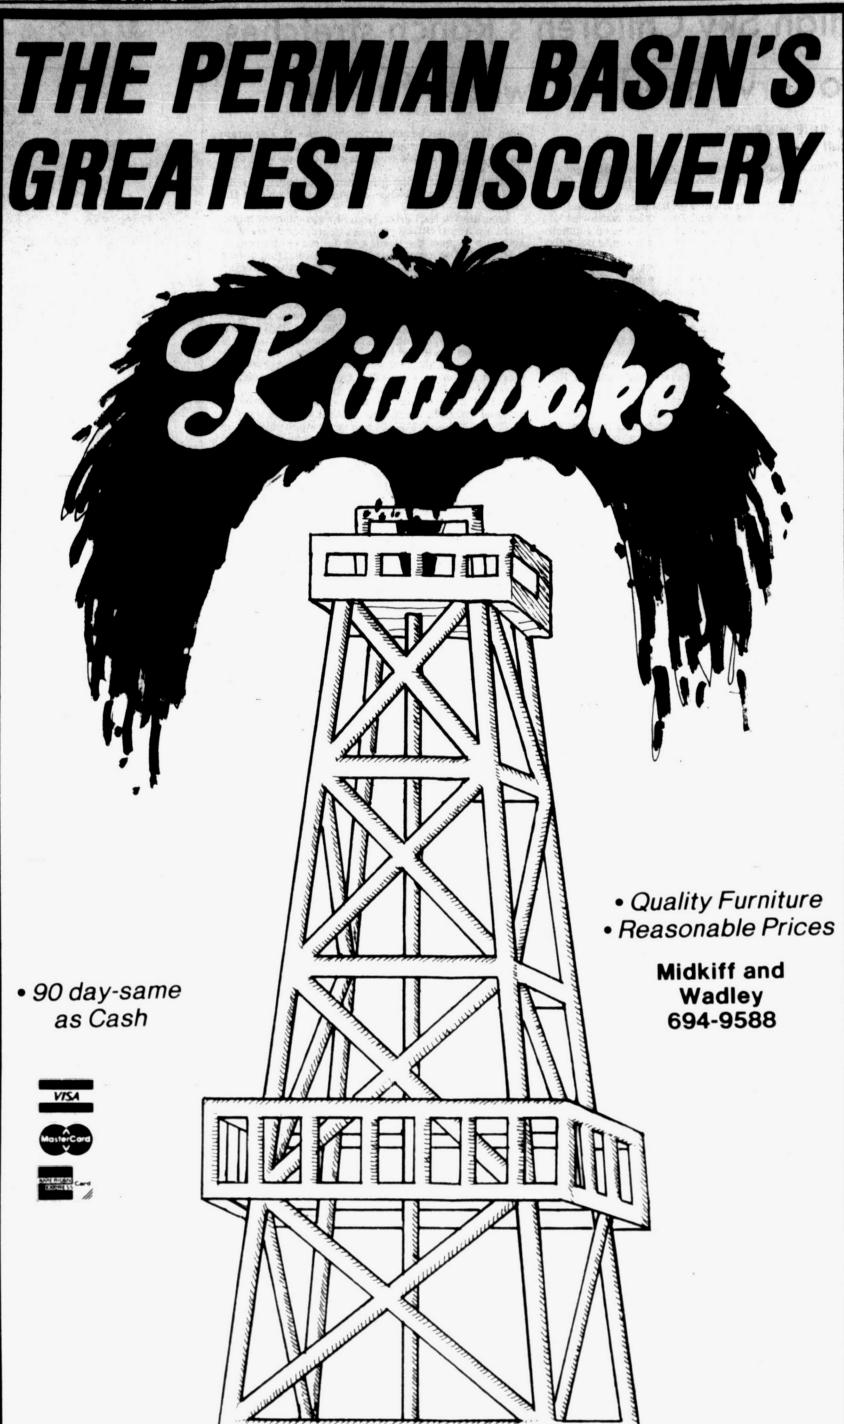

Some of the newer sports involving horses in Midland include hunting, jumping and dressage.

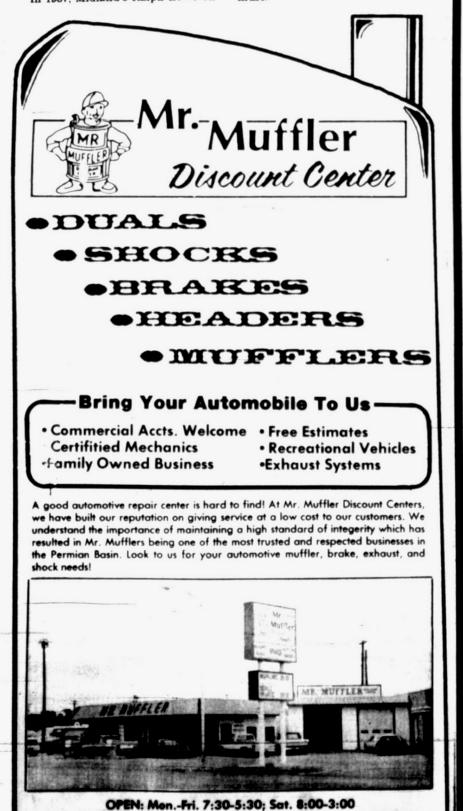

Hunting — A show class where the hunter (horse) is judged on a very smooth go (ride). The object is to take each jump exactly the same, very rhythmic and at the same pace. Style is everything.

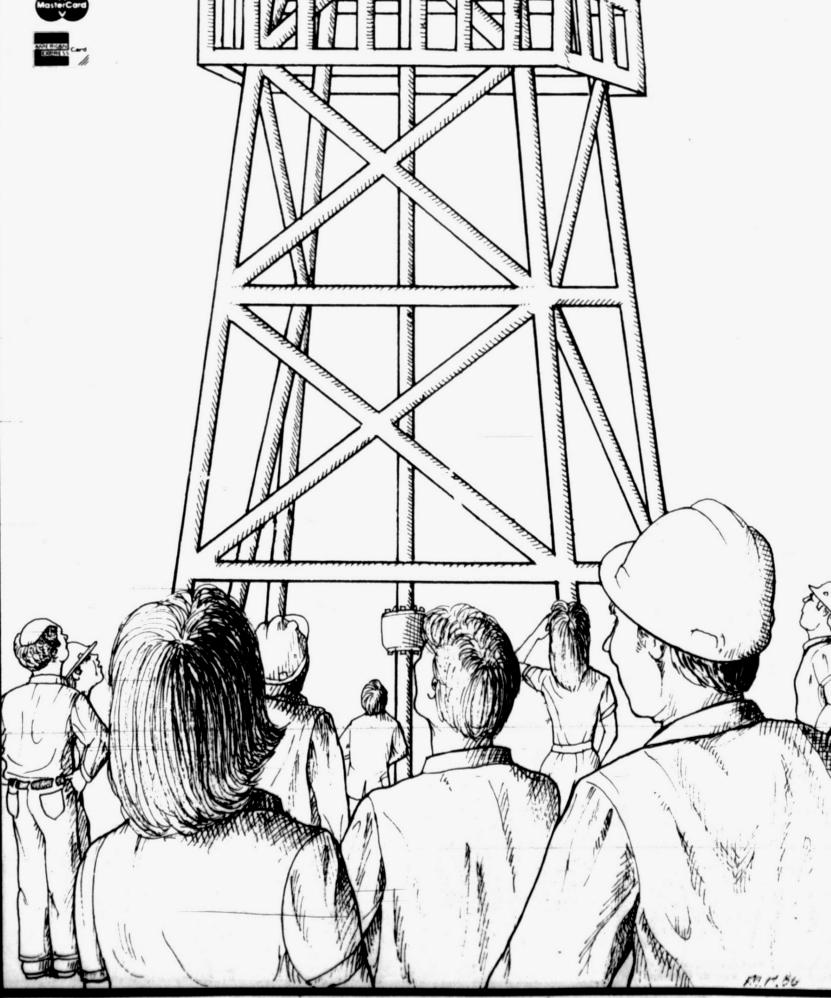

Jumping — For the athlete (horse), it doesn't matter how the horse gets over the jump as long as it doesn't knock down the bar. Ability to jump is the key.

Dressage (or English Riding) — is the harmonious development of the physique and ability of a horse. As a result, it makes the horse calm, supple, loose and flexible but also confident, attentive and keen, thus achieving perfect understanding with its rider. Control and training a must.

Center caters to conventions

By ED TODD Staff Writer

There's a Convention Center in Midland that's designed to cater to most needs imaginable on the plains of West Texas.

"We can pretty well do it all — car shows to concerts to conventions," Karen Fastuca said of the Holiday Inn Country Villa's Convention Center. Ms. Fastuca is the Holiday Inn's catering manager.

The 20,000-square-foot building near the Holiday Inn opened in November 1985 by Harper Construction Co. of Great Bend, Kan., and complements the spacious Holidome. Harper owns the Holiday Inns in the Midland-Odessa area.

The multi-purpose Convention

Center includes a carpeted 15,000square-foot ballroom, which can be partitioned into three 5,000-square-foot rooms for separate events.

"We've had a car show. We've had a couple of concerts" featuring Big Band leader Les Elgart and jazz drummer Buddy Rich, Ms. Fastuca said. "We've really not yet had a convention," she said. "The Convention Center was opened in November, and the winter months are not too busy with conventions."

The Convention Center's opening event was Clayton Williams' 200-Club Appreciation Dinner to honor security officers and law-enforcement agents.

Adjoining the facility are 1,300 parking spaces.

the Convention Center are served food prepared in the kitchen of the Holiday Inn Country Villa, built in 1980. Chefs can prepare the gamut—from hors d'oeuvres to gourmet-style banquets.

Enhancing the Convention Center is a carpet mural which depicts the history of the West Texas petroleum experience in 100,000 pieces of carpet.

"The artist worked closely with the Permian Basin Petroleum Museum and carefully detailed the events," Ms. Fastuca said.

The Convention Center can accommodate 1,500 people in banquet arrangement and 2,400 in a theater configuration.

Small town holds Saturday-night country music revivals

HOWE, Texas (AP) — A traveler wandering into town on Saturday night might wonder what sort of revival this is.

The 100-year-old church building blazes with light.

Its parking lot is packed with pickups and Cadillacs and Fords from 40 miles around.

A Hank Williams song, "Cold, Cold, Heart," drifts out the open door.
It's followed by an Ernest Tubbs number, then a Hank Thompson

There is a revival going on: a revival of country music.

"This is just something we wanted to do for people," said Cancil Kirby, creator of Howe City Limits.

The weekly three-hour country music program is now in its third The show, which is free of charge, is held from 7-10 p.m. on Saturday nights in the Howe Community Center, a former church building.

"We play all kinds of music," said
Kirby. "We have traditional country, modern country, gospel, western. Everything except rock." Kirby said senior citizens make up more than half of the show's audience. Average attendance, he said, is about 90, though one week, they attract more than 200.

"We ran out of seats for that show," said Kirby's wife Dorothy. "The mayor had to go over to city hall and get more chairs."

Kirby and his group, the Barr K Band, began playing for nursing homes in Sherman five years ago. Two years ago Kirby decided to stage a weekly show at the community center.

His band plays for half of the three-hour show, and a guest band plays for the other half. Guest bands travel from as far as Lewisville and Dallas to donate their music. "What we try to do here is have a comfortable, family atmosphere," Kirby said. "We're real informal. If you just climbed off a tractor, you can come like you are. Everyone feels at home

The community pays for upkeep of the building. Collection plates are passed during the program to collect donations for the coffee, cookies, cakes, and sodas that are served.

"We get people here from all over the countryside," said Kirby. "There are not a lot of activities in these small towns and this is something to do. We have older people come here who haven't gotten out of the house in 30 years except to go to church. "People come here because it's a family show. We don't allow any drinking or drugs, either by the entertainers or the audience."

The rule, he says, also attracts "We get a lot of groups who don't want to play beer joints. This gives them a place to play. And this is a great audience to play for."

Many of the bands are family groups, he said.

James Dillon is patriarch of one guest band, the Country Strings of Whitesboro. His group includes his wife, daughter, son, son-in-law and grandson.

Kirby's daughter, Kristy Hill of and everyone sang along on "Wings Howe, sings with her dad's Barr K of a Dove."

PERMORAMA

Holding our own

By JOHN PAUL PITTS Business/Oil Editor

Will the Permian Basin, as a result of falling oil prices, experience another economic bust and disaster similar to the one in 1982. Probably not.

Prospects are not all together glowing for the Permian Basin oil industry. To be honest, they appear downright dreary, and we can forget about expansion for several years to come. But, this is not to say the situation is hopeless. At this low point in price and activity, the industry may be stronger and more stable and secure than it has been in the past decade. The reason is a return to caution and lean, tight management.

Throughout most of 1985, declines in rig counts, completions and production were reported. It was forecast, and many operators and service companies, suspecting the worst, had hoped that things could remain flat in the Permian Basin.

"I will be satisfied if we can just hold our own," said one operator. But that was not to be the case. Shortly before the end of the year the worst happened, oil prices dropped precipitously from $27 to below $20 on the New York Mercantile Exchange spot market for crude, sending shock waves throughout the industry.

But as disastrous as the price drop was, it may not cause the damage it might have and activity may not be effected too drastically. That's because operators, not wanting to get caught in the rumored downward price spiral, had already prepared drilling budgets on lower-priced oil. According to a Reporter-Telegram survey, in-the drilling in the Permian Basin, were using an average price of $22 to calculate the economics of exploratory and development projects, while some had said they would drop as low as $18 per barrel to calculate the economics of prospects. "If it don't fly with $20 oil we won't drill it," said one lowing oil price drops that year. The prognosis is: continuing hard times, but no more disasters. The reason: conservative and prudent programs based on worse case scenarios; leaner more flexible firms with lower debt burdens; a trimming and shaking out of the industry ranks, leaving only the highly professional and skilled survivors in the industry, and a mind-set built on caution.

FROM 1976 TO 1981 oil prices climbed steadily, doubling from $3.89 in 1973 at the time of the Arab embargo to $6.74 the next year. It climbed by $1 to $3 for a period of four years, then in 1980 almost doubled again from $12.64 to $21.59. It jumped again in 1981 to $31.77, bringing it to its highest point. In the years of rapid price increases, most of the industry became hopelessly blinded to the possibility that oil prices might drop. The magic word was $50 oil. Most truly thought the price increases would go on forever and caution was thrown to the wind. The result was a disaster.

Caution, however, was restored after the shock of the bust was over and should govern the industry for decades to come. As long as the lesson of 1982 is remembered, the oil industry in the Permian Basin and elsewhere should fare much better. Those who did not exercise blind optimism during the boom, even when blind optimism was called for, have managed to keep their assets in tact.

Each year caution and the confidence of the oil industry that it can manage its own destiny through sound management, even in times of boom and bust, grows stronger and as it does, the possibility of another disaster grows dimmer.

When oil prices began to drop in 1982, an industry innundated with inexperienced oil operators began to panic and a great shakeout occured. But those experienced firms who had been up and down before and knew what had to be done on each swing are still around in the Permian Basin. They are still in business and still approving prudent drilling budgets. Prevailing now are the coolheaded and experienced who will not get caught by $20 oil or $15 oil, but if they do, they will know how to get out of the trap and the Permian Basin will roll on.

It seems only yesterday that the boom turned to bust, but 1986 marks the fifth straight year that January has brought a downward pressure on oil prices and the fifth straight year the industry has managed to rally back. Each year the downward pressure has resulted for the same reason: OPEC's inability to control members and production rates. That alone should be reason for optimism in the industry.

Oil, gas industry contracts in 1985 as local unemployment rate rises

By MELLA McEWEN Business/Oil Writer

The year 1985 was marked by a further contraction in the state's oil and gas industry, meaning slightly higher unemployment rate and a shrinking labor force for Midland.

Midland started the year with the Midland started the year with the unemployment rate jumping from 3.4 percent in December 1984 to 4.7 percent in January. After reaching a high of 5.4 percent unemployment in both July and October, the year ended with 4.1 percent unemployment.

"Midland saw a climate of belt tightening," summed up Bob Burke, manager of the Texas Employment Commission's Midland office, in describing the year's employment statistics. "While the unemployment rate has fluctuated and basically went down at the end of the year, the rate was still higher than 1984." According to TEC figures, the year's average unemployment rate for 1985 was 5.1 percent, up from 4.0 percent in 1984.

"The civilian labor force went down significantly, more than the unemployment rate, and that was a significant factor in employment," continued Burke.

According to 1985 statistics, the labor force — the number of people 16 years of age or older — had fallen from a high of 66,900 in December of 1984, to a low of 63,700 a year later. While this helped the total unemployment category fall from a high of 3,600 in July to 2,600 at year's end, the total employment category — the number of people actually working — also fell, from a high of 63,500 in January to 61,100 in December.

For the first time since 1970, the Texas unemployment rate surpassed the national rate in June, reaching a high of 8.1 percent in October, a full percentage point above the national rate. At the end of 1985, however, the state rate had fallen to 6.3 percent while the national rate remained stable at 6.9 percent.

Mergers and restructuring became the watchwords in analyzing employment and both had an effect on Midland employment. ARCO announced sweeping restructuring plans, and early in 1986 announced that it would move approximately 150 families from the Denver office to Midland. However, company officials warned that the local office could still face staff reductions.

Tiring of his takeover attempts, T.
Boone Pickens announced that he would turn his Mesa Petroleum into a limited partnership, and closed the Midland office. Also packing up and leaving the Tall City were Ortloff, DeltaUS, Gibsons and Sakowitz, among others.

Mergers also caused changes in the way Midland offices did business, and the Permian Basin watched as Gulf merged with Chevron, HNG merged with InterNorth, and Adobe Oil & Gas merged with Madison Resources.

As the oil and gas industry loses its prominence as the main industry in the Permian Basin, jobs in the retail industry are taking up the slack. Mervyn's, a highly promotional department store specializing in family apparel and soft goods, is in the final stages of completing its Midland store and hiring 225 new employees.

Anchoring the new Midland Plaza shopping center with Mervyns will be Service Merchandise, which offers brand name gifts and houseware at reduced prices. The retailer announced recently that it will hire between 100 and 120 employees for its new Midland store, to open in April.

While Burke said the retail jobs are good jobs, many higher-paying jobs in the area have been lost, which means a lot of workers are having to take jobs at a much lower salary. He noted, however, that "service and retail seems to be where the

The Midland Chamber of Commerce continued its efforts to bring economic diversity to the Permian Basin, and help make employment less susceptible to the ups and downs of the petroleum industry. "Midland and Odessa will always be the energy center of the Permian Basin. We can try to diversify, but we'll always be tied to oil. If we can lessen that dependence, we'll be better off," said Steve Hardin, director of economic development with the

The Chamber's efforts are beginning to pay off. This last December, the Chamber, along with the Odessa Chamber of Commerce, the Private Industry Council of the Permian Basin Regional Planning Commission, and the city of Midland, announced the incorporation of the Permian Basin Bid Resource Center.

The center is the first satellite of the National Bid Resource Center in Beaumont, which helps simplify and coordinate the bidding process for U.S. government contracts. According to David Thayer, director of the Permian Basin facility, the Beaumont center has brought in $30 million in contracts and created over 350 jobs.

"The Bid Resource Center is by far our biggest single effort," Hardin said. He also listed the University of Texas of the Permian Basin's planned Center for Energy and Economic Development as a project that could lead to growth and stimulation.

Attempting to stimulate international trade seemed to be a major project in the Permian Basin during 1985, with the West Texas International Trade Forum forming in the spring, hoping to stimulate international trade, particularly with Mexico. The Midland Hispanic Chamber of Commerce is also working toward developing trade with Mexico, and the Midland Chamber is establishing a Friendship City program with a Chinese city, hoping to enhance not only product exchange but cultural and educational exchanges as well, Hardin said.

He noted that some of the local petroleum firms have already begun to diversify themselves, with Dameron Petroleum a prime example. Dameron has formed Dameron Manufacturing, and makes power shovels for use in cleaning drainage basins.

"I think we're laying the groundwork for economic diversification down the line," Hardin said.

Ramada Hotels, the newest concept of the Phoneix, Ariz., based company, cater to the Weekday business crowd fitting between the more elaborate Ramada Renaissance Hotels and the lower-priced Ramada Inns

But Kathy McGuire, general manager of the Midland facility, believes business travel is not what it used to be as "occupancy rates are not up to par."

"Along with the rest we're not doing as well as we'd like," said Ms. McGuire. "And I'm afraid it will get worse before it gets better."

Midland was chosen as the site for the new hotel because of its high business traffic, partners Dennis and builded.

Ehlers and Hans Peter Jost said when plans for the facility were announced in 1983.

Market studies completed for the project showed better performance would be expected for the hotel in Midland than if it had been built in Odessa, the partners said.

The Ramada Hotel, located at 3100 W. Wall, suffered a year-long delay in its December 1983-scheduled opening but was "exceeding the expectations of its staff by providing full hotel service as well as convenience and accessibility," former general manager Paul Valerious said following the facility's opening in early 1985.

The delay was attributed to a difference of opinion between owner and builder which held up construction for more than a month.

The $8.4 million hotel equipped with 200 rooms, features 96 non-smoking rooms, three additional rooms designed for the handicapped and complete dining, entertaining, banquet and meeting facilities for more than 200 people.

Harry's Bar and Grill, the hotel's restaurant, seats over 150 people and offers steaks and seafood. A family style coffee shop with a "fast business breakfast" is also available.

Other features at the Ramada Hotel include an indoor pool with bar, whirlpool, sauna, exercise room and a game room. The atrium-style lobby features marble floors and leather couches.

The hotel employs about 75 people when operating at full capacity, said Ms. Hardy.

Some Mission Dorado residents straddle two worlds

Odessa, Midland County, Texas, is the proper address for about 70 families who live in Mission Dorado, the planned community that is rising from the prairie west of Midland Air Terminal, north of U.S. Highway 80 and south of Texas Highway 191.

About 2,200 acres of the community were annexed in 1982 by the City of Odessa at the request of HBF Corp. The entire 10,000 master-planned acres dedicated to Mission Dorado development was carved out of the nearly 40,000-acre Parks-Faudree ranch that straddles the Midland County-Ector County lines.

HBF Corp. has invested more than $40 million in the development since ground was first broken in 1981. Already constructed and in use is the $5 million Mission County Club with its 18-hole golf course.

Bakke said HBF Corp. has been "very pleased with the reception the Mission Dorado project has received." Responding to the desire of people seeking more room than

The residents of Mission Dorado pay municipal property taxes to the City of Odessa and county property taxes to Midland County.

Prior to 1985, people didn't have to think much about long distance telephone service. If they owned a telephone, they were part of the Bell

Then in 1982, a federal judge ordered the breakup of the Bell System, meaning U.S. citizens — Midlanders as well — would have to choose from among several competing long distance telephone companies or someone else would make the choice for them.

So far, nine long distance companies serve Southwestern Bell's Midland customers. Of these, eight advertise low rates, while AT&T emphasizes the quality of it's service. Besides At&T, the companies which compete for Midland's longdistance business include ClayDesta Communications Corporation, TransAmerica Telecommunications Inc. Midland-Odessa, Sears Dial "1" Phone Service, U.S. Telecommunications, GTE Sprint, LDS Metromedia Long Distance, MCI and American Express Expressphone.

ClayDesta Communications Corporation, the Midland-based company, was founded by Clayton Williams Jr. and began operations in December

In addition, the company offers discounts for calls up to $499 as well as other savings over AT&T rates. There are no monthly fees, minicharges or installation fees.

ClayDesta also provides customers with a traveler's card to make longdistance dialing more accessible and a 24-hour customer service center. The company charges in one-minute increments and bills directly.

TransAmerica Telecommunications Inc. Midland-Odessa, like its sister in company in Lubbock, is a home-owned and operated company. The company guarantees a 20 percent discount off AT&T rates, according to a company official. The "one-plus" service is accessible either by a rotary or touch-tone telephone. There are no monthly fees, minimum charges or installation fees and calls may be placed anywhere in the continental United

The company bills in six-second increments indicating each call.

Sears Dial "1" Phone Service, a subsidiary of MCI, offers "one-plus" dialing anywhere in the continental United States, Canada and 28 foreign countries. The company also offers 35 percent savings over AT&T rates and charges no monthly fee, minimum charge or installation fee. The service is accessible by rotary or touch-tone dialing. However, customers are required to possess a Sears credit card.

In addition, the company offers Sears Long Distance Service, similar to the Dial "1" Service. Requirements include a seven-digit access code, five-digit personal identification number and a touch-tone telephone. Also available is the Sears ong Distance Phone Card — similar to the AT&T Calling Card.

Customer service is available 24 hours per day and there are no minimum charges, monthly or installa-tion fees. A 30-day cancellation notice is required, however.

Midland 'fortunate' with 76.5 percent office occupancy rate

By SUSAN LINDSAY Business/Oil Writer

After years of scrambling for of-fice and retail space, homes and apartments during the boom, and then a bust period when real estate couldn't be given away, Midland's leasing economy leveled off during 1965 and is now neither the best nor worst of times. The Midland Chamber of Commerce Office Study revealed the occupancy rate for Midland's 6,732,832 square feet of leasable office space hovered at about 76.5 percent during

"This is really a pretty accurate number and we are fortunate to have that occupancy rate," said Mike Lewis, vice president of Sentry Property Management, Inc. "We haven't dropped to the level of many hardhit oil areas. Midland is faring pretty well, but things are still stagnant

Office rates averaged about $12 to $14 per square feet, and many of the newer buildings were only at 50 percent occupancy during the year.

According to the 1985 totals, the area with the highest occupancy rate in Midland was ClayDesta Plaza, located at North Big Spring and Wadley Avenue. The six buildings there posted an average occupancy rate of

The downtown area indicated a 77 percent average occupancy. The newer buildings in this area showed consistently higher occupancy rates than the older ones.

Office buildings located in other parts of Midland seem to have the hardest time during 1985, posting only a 69 percent average occupancy

Most brokers agree that intense building activity during the boom is the major cause of vacant retail and office space now

Retail centers in Midland showed a 65 percent occupancy rate for 1985, according to Chamber figures. By year-end, 2,483,574 square feet of re-tail space was available and an additional amount was under onstruction.

Regional centers showed a mixed occupancy rate for the year, according to information released by a study conducted by Stanford University School of Business. Midland Park Mall enjoyed a 95 percent occu-pancy rate for the year, while Dellwood Mall was only 45 percent occupied throughout the year.

Specialty centers, which comprise about 770,000 square feet of retail space in the city, averaged a 55 per-cent occupancy rate. However, this number may not present a true pic-ture, because Mission Square has been in foreclosure litigation since March 1985. The occupancy rate of the center averaged only 10 percent for the year, which pulled down the average considerably. Also, other shopping centers were built during 1985 and unable to post year-long

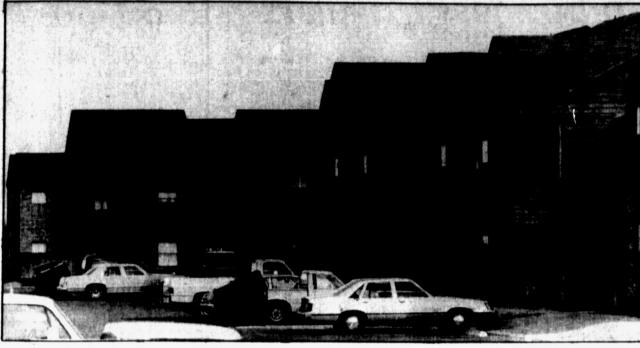

Community centers appear to have had the best occupancy during 1985, according to the survey. About 85 percent of these centers were occupied.

Russ Beckner, vice president Dean A. Beck Associates, a Los Angeles firm which is developing Midland Plaza on Loop 250, said Midland retail centers held strong in 1985 because indicators for the city were up, attracting new retailers and increased competition.

"At one time people may have had to travel to Dallas or some other place out of town to do their shopping, but not any more. Midland can now meet nearly all the needs of the shopper," he said.

Home sales were up in 1985 over the previous year. Last year, 1,338 homes were sold with a total dollar volume of $113.154.945. This compares to 1,140 homes sold in 1984 with a total dollar volume of units were classified as those renting for 50 cents per square foot and upward, professional units were those built after 1981 and family units those built prior to 1981.

Of the three classifications, fewer luxury units were available in 1985. Only 2,000 of this type existed, while 4,700 professional units and 5,300 family units were available.

The information revealed occupancy rates corresponded directly to this information. Sentry found a 92 percent occupancy rate in luxury apartments, a 87 percent occupancy rate in the professional group and an 85 percent occupancy rate in the family units. Garth said the reason apartments are filled up is because of an influx of people moving into the city during the past year. She has received about 30-35 calls per day at her location service. Of that number, 75 percent of them are from people moving into town, she said. However, Wanda Hayes, manager of the Hyde Park Apartments and secretary of the Apartment Managers Association, said that it would probably take three years before the Midland apartment market would see 100 percent saturation. Likewise, local brokers predict it will take three years to fill available Midland office and retail space based on normal growth. "Midland needs a new demand to fill the buildings, especially the older ones," said Dode Harvey, president of Don Har-

Midland's Master Plan revised during 1985

By RAMONA NYE Staff Writer

The city began to anticipate its future by putting together a master plan to help guide growth, but after five public hearings the Planning and Zoning commission found that revisions and additions were needed. A recommendation in the plan to add a middle turn lane to four-lane Garfield Street angered many residents and was struck out by a divided Planning and Zoning commission in January The city planning and development department said Garfield needed an extra lane to carry projected traffic increases. However, residents from the Concerned Neighborhood Group said adding an extra lane would ruin their neighborhoods by encouraging more traffic.

The residents won out with Planning and Zoning commission and advised developers to allocate ment document.

voting 6-3 to designate Garfield as a collector street. Garfield's collector status will not allow further widening except for a left turn lane at Golf Course Road. A recommendation to connect Garfield Street and Andrews Highway was also struck out. The plan still has to be adopted by the City Council before it becomes effective.

Drainage was ignored in the original draft of the master plan. But discussion of Midland's flooded street problems was added after a deluge of complaints.

"The city must take appropriate steps in order to see that additional flooding problems are not created. Two of the main alternatives to control this situation are to require more retention and detention basins...," the revised plan said.

The plan outlined natural playa kes around undeveloped Midland

tage district A heritage district would allow the city to preserve the design of existing structures, but not necessarily prevent Missouri from becoming a one-way street, said Sam Listi, assistant director of planning and development.

The commission also unanimously accepted a recommendation to find an alternative to the Louisiana and Michigan "problem" in 3 years "if

Bank officials expect growth in 1986 despite uncertainty

By SUSAN LINDSAY Business/Oil Writer

Despite economic uncertainty caused by recent plunges in oil prices, Midland bank officials expect the city's 11 banking institutions to grow in 1966 but it may take extra work.

Bank officials say they expect deposits and loans to match those posted during 1985, when bank deposits averaged $1,667 billion each quarter during 1985, while loans hovered around $839 million each quarter, showing loan demand has been flat during

"I think we'll have a repeat of 1985, which was a good year for the banking industry, considering the present economic situation. Loan demand was soft all year long. I expect it to stay the same," said Steve Landy, president of Texas American Bank.

"This year shouldn't be much better than 1985, but we don't expect it to be any worse," said Bob Craig, president of Western Bank. "I don't think oil prices will drop much more, but we'll have to watch them." Western's deposits averaged $89.9 million each quarter in 1985 and quarterly loans averaged $73.9

"Loan demand is flat right now. We have to do what the economy allows and respond to what the market does," said Billy Murray, controller for RepublicBank First National Midland. "We'll continue to make loans, but oil prices concern us. Lower prices will make it more difficult to do our business as best as we can.

Midland's largest bank showed quarterly deposits of about $701 million, while loans averaged $270 million each quarter. Ed Jones, president of Texas Commerce Bank said "1986 will be a good year if we don't have a major disaster and commodity prices don't fall any more. He said two-thirds of the loans his bank holds are related to oil and gas. "That means every 60 cents that we have is tied to oil and gas companies."

He added that his bank had average quarterly deposits of $44.7 million and loans of $23.3 million. Another bank president concerned with oil prices is David Jones, president of ClayDesta National. "We had a dramatic year in 1985 with tremendous expansion, but we expect a much quieter 1986. We're basithe strength to endure this wait-and-see period."

quarter, while loans were about $77.8 million. The key to 1986 will be sound loan practices, said UnitedBank President Don Jones. "We've been very careful with our loans and it has paid off. We haven't been lending money at $35 a barrel. We haven't been in business long enough to withstand a downfall in the market.'

Loans for UnitedBank averaged $52.3 million each quarter while deposits averaged $78.1 million. But, one bank which plans an aggressive attack on the market during 1986 is Midland American. "We're anticipating a 40 percent growth in 1986. We're hoping to reach $25 million in assets by 1986," said Steve Holt, vice president/cashier, adding that he plans to solicit more loans to new businesses

He said average quarterly deposits for his bank were $12.6 million and loans averaged $8.56 million. "Things aren't going to get worse, but they're not going to get better. Our goal is going to be rough to achieve, but it's an achievable goal or we wouldn't be working on it," Holt said. First City National Bank plans to continue its "Blitz campaign" in 1986, which was very successful when applied last year. "We intend to continue to tell Midlanders we want their banking business," said Bill Franklin, president.

Loans for First City averaged $260 million each quarter, while deposits were about $376 quarterly. Bob Gribble, president of Community National Bank, plans to push interest-bearing accounts in 1986. "Interest-bearing accounts and more deposits helped us to show an excellent growth in 1985," he Gribble added that Community's deposits averaged $24.4 million each quarter and loans were about $16.8 million.

Texas American plans to continue its "makeover" of office procedures and personnel during 1986. "We're planning to continue our work on the bank. We're bringing in new staff, reorganizing badly documented loans and reorganizing lending payments," said Landy.

Texas American showed quarterly deposits averaging $134 million and loans averaged $64.6 million. Security National had average quarterly deposits

Big business in Midland not limited to oil, gas firms — there's the FDIC

By ED TODD Staff Writer

Big business in Midland is not just the oil-andgas industry, which seems on the wane until an upturn in the economy once again turns petroleum into an economic gusher.

Stanley Clark

Big business is the Federal Deposit Insurance Corp., which moved into Midland en masse Oct. 14, 1983, when the 93-year-old First National Bank of Midland collapsed from the burden of soured loans and dropping petroleum prices.

FNB was the largest independent bank in Texas. At its peak, the bank had $1.8 billion in assets and $1.4 billion in deposits.

Earlier that year, the FDIC had moved into the Midland-Odessa area to protect depositors and to dispose of assets after the National Bank of Odessa and Metro Bank at Midland Regional Airport failed.

The FDIC rates among Midland's top 20 employers. It has a work force of more than 300 and a $20 million

"My goal this year is to collect $200 million in principal and interest," said Stanley Clark, currently managing liquidator for the FDIC's Midland Branch Office (Clark is resigning March 7). "I keep my operating expenses at 10 percent of that."

The FDIC's ultimate intent once it moves into a community, sets up assets through court proceedings Oil Co., Southwestern Bell Tele-

and other means is to get smaller and eventually to work itself out of business once most of the bank debts are settled. In the meantime, the FDIC in Midland seems to continue growing even as more and more petroleum-related businesses file for bankruptcy in federal court. Other businesses and individuals also are filing for bankruptcy.

"There's a whole bunch of big deals I think we are going to settle this year," Clark said.

Clark succeeded FDIC Liquidator Tom Procopio, who was assigned to Midland in the wake of the FNB's collapse. RepublicBank Dallas bought limited FNB assets and opened a new bank in October 1983 called RepublicBank First National Midland.

Early in 1985, Clark estimated the FDIC liquidation site would be in Midland for up to 10 years and that litigation would continue far beyond that. Since its move into Midland, the FDIC has "boomed" in business in a manner somewhat akin to the bank's rise in prosperous times particularly in the late 1970s and ear-

Among Midland businesses which are larger than FDIC are Exxon Company USA, the city of Midland, Midland Southwest Corp., Texas Instruments, TMBR Drilling, Compressor System Inc., and Midland Memorial Hospital, according to the Midland Chamber of Commerce. Those businesses each have 500 or more employees.

FDIC's Midland employment force between 250 and 500 workers — is on a par with that of RepublicBank First National Midland, Arco Oil & shop, and collects on loans and other Gas Co., Midland College, Marathon

Stores and Teledyne Exploration Co. Mobil Producing, according to the chamber. The FDIC was established in 1933 during the Great Depression to help end the banking crisis. It is an independent government agency which insures each depositor's account up to $100,000, makes loans to "troubled banks" to keep them from closing and makes loans to re-open closed

FDIC-insured banks. Nationwide, more than 1,100 banks now are considered as "troubled" financial institutions. Since most cities don't have FDIC branch offices, the Midland FDIC branch has sent teams to troubled banks elsewhere in the Southwest, Midwest and the Northeast.

The Midland FDIC office takes in three floors of One Petroleum Center, a six-story office building known as "the Emerald Palace."

During 1985 the FDIC collected $9.9 million at auctions of repossessed collateral, including oil rigs, from soured loans.

Clark said the Midland office has 372 "properties" for sale, but added that some of those are residential subdivisions. The Midland FDIC's holdings come to about 600 separate pieces of property if all the lots in the subdivisions are counted, he Clark's office sold 31 properties worth $2.9 million in 1984. In 1985, it sold 79 properties worth $7 million.

The FDIC later this year plans to hold a sealed-bid auction on about 20 pieces of property worth about $16 million, ranging from New Mexico ranches to homes and commercial and industrial property in the Odessa-Midland area

The long-awaited Pacific Texas Pipeline, when completed, will carry more than one million barrels per day of crude oil from Alaska's North Slope to Midland.

Pacific Texas Pipeline appears to be moving closer to reality

By JOHN PAUL PITTS Business/Oil Editor

The long-awaited Pacific Texas Pipeline that will make Midland a major oil terminal for Alaskan crude oil appears to be moving closer to

From a tanker terminal at the Port of Los Angeles, the 1,030 mile, $1.66 billion, Los Angeles to Midland pipeline will pump more than one million barrels per day of crude from Alaska's North Slope, thereby saving tankers eight days over the Panama

The project will prove a financial vitamin to many areas of Texas' economy, including Midland's. The pipeline will purchase more than $300 million in pipe from America's depressed steel companies, including U.S. Steel in Baytown.

Once under construction, more than 4,000 workers are expected to be employed on the pipeline, and once it's completed more than 100 of them will be employed in the maintenance and administration of the project. A number of those employees will be located in Midland at the firm's offices in ClayDesta National Bank Building and at its tank farm and motor pool four miles east of Midland. The 90-acre tank farm will have a 4 million barrel capacity when complete. Midland will also receive a substantial boost from construction of the project as workers move into the area and services are sold by local service companies to an initial leg of the pipeline, which starts from Midland.

Altogether there will be four spreads beginning at Midland, Los Angeles, the New Mexico-Arizona border and the crossing of the Colorado River in California. The spreads are expected to meet sometime in the first half of 1987, with the first oil being pumped through the lines by mid-summer 1987.

One of the most costly elements of the pipeline will be dredging and construction of a 115 acre island in the Port of Los Angeles at a cost of more than $70 million. A 75-foot channel must also be dredged in the harbor to accommodate the huge oil tankers. Oil will be temporarily offloaded to storage on the island and then shipped by pipeline to Midland. According to Cecil R. Owens, president of Pacific Texas Pipeline, the project has faced a long hard politi-cal battle. "In fact," said Owens, "it's been about 90 percent political and 10 percent technological and

Financing for the pipeline is being provided by a syndicate of banks, and revenues for the project will be derived from 12 oil companies who will share the use of the common carrier pipeline to move oil from the North Slope and California's off-shore fields. A transportation tariff will be set by the Federal Energy Regulatory Commission.

Owens said the major hurdle in getting the project launched was the California environmental guidelines and permit process, which has taken approximately five years of hearings and legislative process. The Los Angeles to Midland pipeline, which will be the only west to east pipeline from the West Coast, was originally the brain child of Sohio, but was dropped by that firm because of the extensive permit process.

But now it appears most of the hurdles are cleared with all the regulatory permits now issued or agreed upon in principle, and construction set to start in mid-1986. The Bureau of Land Management, which controls about 70 percent of the right-ofway on the pipeline corridor has accepted Pacific Texas' application and is expected to grant clearance

Midland wants to attract world's largest particle accelerator

By JULIE HILLRICHS Staff Writer

While the Department of Energy decides where it will build a $2.8 billion research laboratory that could lead to construction of the world's largest particle accelerator, four area cities are taking steps to attract the project to West Texas.

The Midland City Council recently approved spending $25,000 in a joint venture with San Angelo, Big Spring and Odessa to attract the Superconducting Super Collider project to West Texas

Midland Mayor G. Thane Akins has said the West Texas Chamber of Commerce is serving as the vehicle for the $2.8 billion project. A site be-tween Midland and Garden City has been selected. Geological drill tests have shown it fits the land requirements. The mayor said the site, along with designs of the magnets and technical aspects, allow the total construction costs to be half of what it would be elsewhere.

The Superconducting Super Colcomponents of matter and the origin of the universe, said Peter McIntyre, an associate professor of physics at Texas A&M University.

study by scientists from Rice University, Texas A&M University, the Uni versity of Texas and the University of Houston

The magnet, nicknamed "Super-Tex," is the predecessor of magnets that could be used to control the beams of particles in the proposed superconducting supercollider.

The supercollider would be a ring of cylindrical magnets that would guide beams of protons into a headon crash as they approach the speed of light, destroying each other and releasing smaller subatomic

McIntyre has said the Houston Area Research Center is competing with several other national laboratories for the federal project. Texas and minois are the prime contenders for the site. Illinois has the advantage, however, because a similar facility was built there about 20 years ago. Texas, on the other hand, has better terrain, he added.

But McIntyre said the Texas group is going ahead with its plans primarily because its version of the supercollider costs half as much for the

The consistency is in the style of music. It may be country or rock, but the style would not be offensive," said Station Manager Bill Gruber, who with Steve Horowitz bought the station for $600,000 from Stream Broadcasting of St. Charles, La., and changed the call letters to KODM.

Gruber and Horowitz moved to Midland from San Diego to establish their new format, which Gruber described as "a mass-appeal, contemporary format targeted toward women 25-49.

That left the former KUFO's younger, more heavily male audience with no hard rock station, but KUFO program director Mark Lapidus quickly moved down the FM dial to KBAT, which was languishing far down in the ratings with its country-

The former KIOF-FM changed its letters to KUFO because they were more memorable, according to that station's executives. "It's strictly a commercial ploy," Lapidus said at the time. "They're doing exactly what they did before" in terms of the music they play.

Meanwhile, on the AM dial, the venerable KCRS celebrated its 50th anniversary on Dec. 20, then promptly announced a program change from adult contemporary to country.

KCRS first broadcast on Dec. 20, 1935, at which time the closest radio stations to Midland were in San Angelo, Lubbock and El Paso. Owned by Clarence Scharbauer, it broadcast 100 watts from its West Wall Avenue station.

Originally called KRLH (the first station manager was Raymond L. Hughes), the station's call letters were changed to KCRS - for Clarence and Ruth Scharbauer — in 1945.

KWES-FM celebrated its second anniversary in 1985 as a top-40 station. KWES leads the local ratings race with about 25 percent of the overall market, according to one ratings survey. #### Odessa PBS station to begin broadcasting

By MARK LEWIS Staff Writer

Midland prides itself on its cultural amenit s, but the area has long suffered the absence of at least one crucial badge of artistic pretension its own public television station. That will change next month if KOCV-TV Channel 36 begins broadcasting as planned.

"We're planning to be on the air by mid-March," said John McCarroll, station manager for the proposed UHF station. "We're waiting for the FCC to give us final approval to build a tower on our campus."

KOCV will be broadcast from studios at Odessa College, which applied for a license several years ago be-cause grants were available to promote public television, and it seemed like "a logical extension" of the coltelevision-instruction program.

"It's not really a training facility," McCarroll said of the new station, which will have nine full-time and four part-time employees

KOCV will provide all the Public Broadcasting Service programming that local cable subscribers currently get on KERA-TV from Dallas, including such PBS favorites as Mas-terpiece Theater and the MacNeil-

Lehrer Report. "We will be a full-time member of PBS," McCarroll said. "The local cable operators have told us that they will pick us up. Besides the PBS programming. there will also be some locally produced shows, possibly including a weekly talk show. But McCarroll said it may be awhile before KOCV attempts any really ambitious programs of its own.

'In the beginning, we're going to be limited in what we can do locally," he said.

Odessa College is underwriting most of the $418,000 annual budget, though grants from organizations such as the Corporation for Public Broadcasting are expected to ease the financial burden. Eventually the station will also turn to that traditional public-television tool — the pledge week — to raise funds, but not right away, McCarroll said.

"We want people to get used to us and see what we have to offer," he

KOCV will fill a public-television void in West Texas, since there are no PBS-affiliated stations between Dallas-Fort Worth and El Paso, and between Lubbock and San Angelo, according to McCarroll.

KOCV's signal will reach east to Stanton, north to Andrews and south and west to the edge of the Caprock The station should be the first UHF television station in the area, but the second won't be long in following.

KPEJ-TV, Channel 24, is an independent station scheduled to go on the air in June to serve a 26-county area in West Texas and southeast New Mexico.

According to station manager Alan Barrows, KPEJ's programming will be family-oriented.

EDITOR'S NOTE: The first of a series, this segment deals with growth patterns of the Midland and Odessa area populations through the period of 1989-85

By FRANK TROMBLEY Staff Writer

What happened to the populations and economies of Midland-Odessa during the boom and subsequent economic downturn that continues. to afflict the two cities and Permian Basin area to varying degrees?

A more than three-month-long study by the Midland Reporter-Telegram indicates that, during the sixyear period from 1980 through 1985. the population of the city of Midland climbed ahead of the city of Odessa by about one-half of one percent, or cent. Growth in Ector counties closely that same time frame, County's population to slightly more than 105,000, But, from 1962 to 1983, as the bust deepened, Midland County continued to increase population, gaining an estimated 6,000-plus residents, while Ector County apparently lost slightly more than 4,700 people.

At the end of 1985, Reporter Telegram estimates indicate the population of the city of Midland stood at about 102,208, while the population of Odessa was almost 101,641. As 1986 dawned, estimates indicate Ector County's population was about 132,254 and Midland County lagged behind by just under 12,500 residents at about 119,816.

Ironically enough, part of the motivation for the Reporter-Telegram study was to determine how erroneous were federal and local estimates of city and county populations in the two areas. As it turned out, in most instances, the estimates developed locally don't vary dramatically from the estimates developed independently by the Reporter-Telegram.

These, too, had to be estimates of county populations. though the study did not so state The estimate for Midland was about 2.5 percent lower than the one developed by the Reporter-Telegram.

Chuck Bernhard, Greater Odessa Chamber of Commerce economic development director, took exception to the federal agency's 144,500 estimate, saying it appears the agency simply took figures from the 1980 census and 1982 estimates and did a straightline projection, not realizing that growth rates were distorted by boom activity and that they didn't take into consideration the economic

A leisurely pace

By DAVID LEE FORREST Lifestyle Editor

Midlanders can spend their leisure time looking at antique oil rigs at the Permian Basin Petroleum Museum or contemplating contemporary Southwestern art in the Museum of the Southwest, country-western two-stepping or listening to the symphony, and cheering on their favorite high school football team or playing polo.

A 1984 study by the University of Texas at Arlington's Institute of Urban Studies listed Midland as 13th among 52 Texas cities in recreational and cultural opportunities.

While not a spectacularly stellar showing — Odessa came in 12th — it did put Midland in the top third in the state.

Along with its museums — the Museum of the Southwest (which also supports the Marian Blakemore Planetarium's free star shows), the Permian Basin Petroleum Museum, the Nita Stewart Haley Memorial Library, the relatively new Fire Prevention Historical Museum and the Midland County Historical Museum — Midland also supports the performing arts.

AMONG ITS OTHER functions, the Midland Arts Assembly, an umbrella organization for the various arts groups in town, coordinates one of the biggest of the local performing arts events, the annual Celebration of the Arts.

The popular Midland-Odessa Symphony normally has between 75 and 80 members and is backed up by a volunteer chorale which has featured up to 150 voices for some works. The symphony also has two ensembles, the internationally-known Thouvenel String Quartet (which toured China last year) and the Lone Star Brass Quintet.

Ballet Midland, formerly the Permian Civic Ballet, kicks up its heels to show off the city's fleet

The Midland Opera Theatre has staged productions with local talent, such as last year's "Johnny Sneaky," and also brings professional opera touring companies, including the Texas Opera Theatre, to town.

Midland Community Theatre, celebrating its 40th anniversary this year, stages productions at Theatre Midland, 2000 W. Wadley Ave., and sponsors the annual Summer Mummers "melodrama" and comedy revue at the Yucca Theatre downtown.

Midland Community Theatre also shows a series of classic movies at the Yucca Theatre each year.

although MIDLAND still is not the best possible place to see many foreign movies or offbeat art films, the number of motion picture theaters has expanded over the last couple of years. There are now a total of 14 movie screens, including one drive-in and one theater specializing in Spanishlanguage cinema, here.

For those who prefer to see movies on a small screen in the comfort of their own home, the main cable-TV service here, Times Mirror Cable Television, features three 24-hour movie channels. The videocassette craze has also swept Midland, with pre-recorded tapes available for rental from most supermarkets in town as well as many record stores and other specialty shops.

Midlanders who enjoy people-watching more than movie-viewing can go to one of the local restaurants, bars or nightclubs. Nightlife ranges from country-western two-stepping at Dallas Nights through the very casual Budlow's live music on weekends to the trendy, upscale crowd at Garfields.

Health clubs, which some observers have dubbed the "single bars of the '80s," are also popular places to see and be seen at in Midland. There are more than a half-dozen fitness and weight-training centers, including many of the various YMCA locations, scattered around the city.

Many other people get their work-outs participating in sports activities. There are organized adult leagues for softball, basketball, soccer, bowling and volleyball. Tennis and golf are also popular outdoor activities which are showcased by such events as the Green Tree Country Club Pro-Am and the Masters Tournament.

Youths also have their own soccer, Little League baseball and girl's softball competitions.

HIGH SCHOOL AND Midland College sports teams receive great support. The Midland Lee-Odessa Permian football rivalry is, of course, legendary, with last season's match-up attracting national media attention.

The Midland College Chaparrals competed last year in the national NJCAA basketball tournament in Hutchinson, Kan.

Midlanders flocking to see their Texas League baseball team set new attendance records last year, after the Midland Angels replaced the Midland Cubs.

As is natural for a West Texas ranching area, many Midlanders are horse aficionados. Polo games and dressage competitions have been among the most popular local horse-related activities.

There are a great many clubs of various types in town, ranging from civic groups with broad goals, such as the Midland Jaycees and the Junior League of Midland, to special interest hobbyist groups, such as the Midland Gem and Mineral Society and the Midland Camera Club.

Women's groups have long been highly visible in Midland and are credited for such achievements as establishing and supporting the public library, the museums, the community theater and other local fine arts.

Finally, Midlanders have long combined their civic concerns with their need to have fun and thrown benefit galas. The Charity Ball, the Crystal Ball, Monte Carlo Night, the biennial Beefeater's Ball and the biennial Country Squires Picnic are just a few of Midland's traditionally black-tie fund-raising events.

Midland gained national attention in 1985 in football, basketball

By TERRY WILLIAMSON Assistant Sports Editor

By nature, the average Midlander feels a little isolated in his arid West Texas home, but that feeling may come from what outsiders perceive of the Tall City. As far as the world of sports is concerned, Midlanders really have no need for a feeling of

No matter what sport attracts your fancy, chances are you will find it in Midland, despite being stranded 300 miles in any direction from what outsiders would call a "real city."

And chances are that the sport you like will be of championship caliber competition in Midland. The Chicago Bears don't play any games here, but Jim McMahon isn't the only sports hero who can turn heads. Midland had its share of heros during 1985.

Just travel through last year's sports log, and you will get the idea. Titles or playoff berths were won in football, basketball, track, baseball, swimming and golf just to name a few, and some of those events gained national recognition.

The Midland College Chaparrals gained national attention in 1985 by making the second trip in the school's history to the national NJCAA basketball tournament in Hutchinson, Kan.

The search for the school's second national title ended in the Final Four loss to Dixie, Utah, 72-57, but the MC cage tradition grew by leaps and bounds.

Even high school football cap-tured the interest of the nation as the legend of the Midland Lee-Odessa Permian game grew to greater heights. History records that Permian won a 13-7 decision over Lee in that game, but it will long be remembered as the TV game. It is believed to be the only regular season game to be televised in the state and drew national notices from the likes of the New York Times, Time Magazine, the Washington Post and The Sporting News because KTPX-TV chose to televise this local event during baseball's National League Championship Series. Nowhere but West Texas is high school football taken that seriously.

Lee gained its third straight state football playoff berth in 1985, but failed to force another quarterfinal meeting with Permian after losing, 24-21, to Irving MacArthur in Texas Stadium, where the Rebels are 0-2. Lee and Permian had faced each other in 1983 and 1984 in the state's quarterfinals with each game drawing in excess of 30,000 fans in Lubbock's Jones Stadium.

Another key story came from Lee's two basketball teams. The boys won the District 4-5A championship, but suffered the school's most heartbreaking defeat in the bi-district round of the state playoffs.

In overtime against Amarillo Palo Duro, Lee's Anthony Dickens hit what appeared to be a game winning shot at the buzzer. A wild celebration followed before officials ruled that the shot was taken to late. Palo Duro won the game and eventually won a trip to Midland for the annual Region I tournament, another highlight each year for the Tall City.

The Lee girls bounced to an 8-0 start in 45A play only to end up in a second place tie with Midland High. The Lady Bulldogs then defeated Lee to gain the playoff berth. At least, things were kept in the Midland family.

It was also a special year in track as Lee won the 45A title in Sam Volpe's farewell season. Volpe, who coached Lee for 24 years, got an added farewell boost when Walter Jones became the first Lee athlete to qualify for the Region I meet in four Midland High had its share of great moments in 1985, winning the 45A boys swimming title and the girls golf crown. Lee won a playoff berth in baseball.

But high school and junior college sports weren't the only game in town. Midland had some highlights on other fronts as well.

Ron Streck, an up and coming golfer on the PGA tour, fired a 64 to win the second Green Tree Country Club Pro-Am. Boxer Robin Blake won a decision over Chile Medel in a nationally televised fight at Chapar-ral Center. And John McEnroe, the No. 1 ranked tennis player in the world, brought his exhibition tour to the Chap with a match against Vitas Gerulaitis.

The Texas League tradition continued in 1985, but under a new name. It was the year that the Midland Cubs became the Midland Angels, switching ties from Chicago's Cubs to the California Angels.

The Angels' debut was greeted warmly by Midlanders, setting an attendance record, but the results on the field were not quite as dramatic as the Angels finished with the worst record in the Texas League. Still, interest was so high in the Angels that a radio contract was reached for the 1986 season to broadcast all of its Individuals also made some nation-Individuals also made some national news during the year. Spud Webb, the dunking, 5-foot-6 phenom who helped lead Midland College to a national basketball title in 1982, became a professional when he signed with the Atlanta Hawks of the NBA.

And Webb wasn't the only small ball of dynamite that Midland put on the national scene. Tyrone Thurman, the former Lee football star, became a hero at Texas Tech as the smallest college football player in the nation—all 5-foot-4, 138 pounds of him.

And Midlanders were at play themselves during 1965. Midland has an extensive slow pitch program and hosted the women's national slow pitch tournament at its complex at Hogan Park.

Midland also has active programs in Little League, girls softball, soccer and tennis, which includes a Masters tournament every year. The City of Midland Swim team and the YMCAs have extensive competitive programs for those who like team

Midland Angels staff shooting for 150,000 attendance in '86

By TED BATTLES Sports Editor

Midland's Angels set an attendance record last year with a last-place club and the front office staff has no intention of resting on its laurels

Last year, the California An-els' first in the Texas League as a Midland affiliate, drew 127,836 fans to Angels Stadium in 66 dates, despite a ball club that did not live up to on-the-field expectations.

The box office success was due largely to the non-stop efforts of General Manager Bill Davidson, Director of Operations Matt Per-ry, and Donna Johnson, who joined the front office staff in mid-season.

There was a promotion going every night and the fans responded to the lure.

So what can they do for an encore after a year in which the old attendance mark of 124,144 in 67 dates back in 1983 was exceeded. Perry says the staff is shooting for 150,000, "Of course, a good ball club would help the cause,'

Last year, California came to Midland from the Eastern League, replacing the Chicago Cubs who had been here since 1972. The Cubs produced plenty of major leaguers, but only one pennant in that stretch.

With the nucleus from a California League team that had pro-duced the best won-lost record in duced the best won-lost record in the minor leagues in 1964, Califor-nia expected to field a top Texas League entry. As it turned out, it was a "not quite ready for prime time team" and officials admit they misjudged the quality of the Texas League.

"This year we are going for support from the surrounding communities," says Perry, whose club presents the only professional baseball between El Paso and, and Arlington.

"We want people from all over the Permian Basin to consider the Angels their team," Perry explains.

Another plus will be KUFO's broadcast of the Angels' games, home and on the road. It's the first time, outside of the spot weekend broadcasts of several seasons ago, that a Midland team will have its games aired. "Having the games on radio will be a tremendous plus for us," says Perry. And it will help with Basin promotion of the team. The way Davidson sees it, "As a regionally oriented station, we feel KUFO can provide excellent coverage for all Angel fans. We want everyone in West Texas to know what is happening at Angel Stadium."

But promotions will be the backbone of efforts to increase at-tendance. "Fans come to the game for more than just baseball," says Perry, "And we plan to give it to them.

There will be some giveaway nights, community, advertiser nights, the San Diego Chicken and the block-buster July 4 fireworks night. "We are also working on other promotions," Perry adds, "things that haven't been finalized as yet.

The home Texas League opener is April 18, but preparations have already begun. Midland Manager Joe Maddon reported with the California Angel pitchers and catchers in Mesa, Ariz., Feb. 21. The rest of the major league club reports Feb. 26. In March, Maddon will welcome his Midland ros-

Midland will soon have another six movie screens

By DAVID LEE FORREST Lifestyle Editor

While Midland boomed in the early 1980s, its motion picture theaters

In less than three years, though, Midland has gone from having just eight movie theater screens to a current total of 14 screens with yet another six-screen cinema planned.

This increase might even eventually bring a few foreign and art films

In mid-1983, the only two movie theaters open in Midland were the UA Cine IV and the Midland Park Mall Cinemas, both of which had four screens.

Older Midland theaters - including the local chain originally owned by the late J. Howard Hodge — disappeared in the early '80s as real estate values boomed, making it more profitable to sell the theaters than to continue operating them.

For decades, Hodge had owned or controlled every theater in Midland until his death at the end of 1976. The Hodge chain gradually shrunk until the last one, the Howard Hodge Cinema, closed in August, 1982.

In July 1983 the old single-screen Ritz Theatre downtown reopened after being closed in the late 1970s. It has since closed and reopened again and in its present incarnation, is specializing in Spanish-language films.

A year later, the old Texan Drive-In on West Highway 80 just west of Loop 250 opened. It specializes in that traditional drive-in theater fare — second-run double-features.

Later in 1984, General Cinema Corp., which owns the Midland Park Mall Cinemas, opened a new four-screen multiplex, the North Park Cinemas, just across Loop 250 from Midland Park Mall.

"We've been very pleased with the performance of our North Park theater," said Bob Winchester, GCC division manager. Having the new theater so close to the Midland Park Mall Cinemas has not hurt business at the older one in the mall, he said.

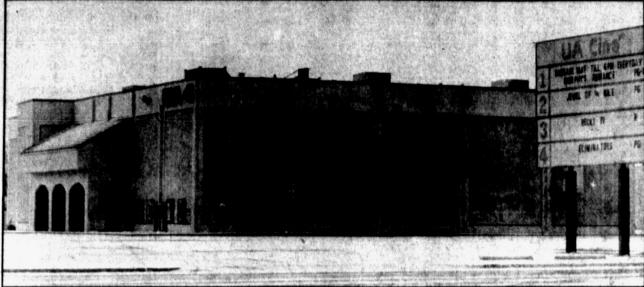

Despite their close proximity, the two GCC theaters don't actually compete since they never show the same films at the same time.

"They're performing very well," Winchester said. "That says good things about movie attendance in Midland.'

The widespread availability of videocassettes and VCRs has not really hurt the theaters' business, Winchester claims.

"Our research indicates that the video market, if anything, helps the theatrical market," he said, because VCRs "are causing an increase in production because there's that market after the theatrical market."

More films are being made since more investors are willing to invest money in movie-making, Winchester

Cody Bell/Reporter-Telegram

Three years ago, the UA Cine IV was one of only two motion picture theaters in town, but said, now that they have almost guaranteed extra income from cable-TV and videocassette sales after the movie is shown in theaters.

Steve Holder, manager of the UA Cine IV, 3207 W. Cuthbert Ave., was just as adamant on the subject of videocassettes.

"They're not hurting us at all," he said, because they encourage movie production. Holder said 1985 was not a "spectacular" year because "there was just no product."

"We anticipate a good year" in 1986, he said. His theater is also undergoing some "general clean-up work and remodeling" to make it a more pleasant place to see films,

"There's a lot of movies coming out. I see a definite big upswing, Holder predicted. In fact, United Artists Communications Corp. anticipates enough movie-going in Midland to build a sixscreen UA theater in the planned Deauville Mall on Highway 191 just

The almost 24,000-square-foot theater will seat 1,758, according to Tim Hinson, Midland-Odessa city manag-er for UA. He said one of the screens will be equipped with state-of-the-art THX multi-channel stereo sound, another will have Dolby stereo and the other four will have standard stereo sound systems.

Thus far, Midland movie buffs have not seen the recent increase in the number of movie screens - Midland's "screenage" — result in an increase in the number of art or foreign films (other than the Ritz's Spanish-language movies).

"When you get down to it, you have to make a commercial decision about what's going to sell the most tickets," Winchester said. "I don't know if we'd want to devote one of our screens to art fare. Even in big cities that's risky. With the screenage Midland has, you're just not going to have art films."

United Artists Communications Corp., however, is considering experimenting with foreign and art films at it's new theater.

"We've already talked about design nating one of the screens for foreign films and art films," said Hinson. 'We're planning on trying it and seeing how it works.

In addition to the commercial movie theaters, Midland Community Theatre also shows a series of "golden oldie" classics at the Yucca Theatre, 208 N. Colorado St., each year. Persons interested in seeing these films have to purchase a pass for the entire season, however, since no single admission tickets are sold

Sales, rentals of video movies 'booming' business

By LINDA ANDERSON Lifestyle Writer

Remember when going "to the show" cost less than $1? Remember when drive-in theaters dotted the countryside, and a whole carload of viewers could watch first-rate movies for $3 or less?

Well, like the song says, the times they are a changing — and the cost of movie-going is becoming more and more expensive.

Videocassettes and video tape machines can provide an answer to this problem. For the price of a blank tape — which can be as little as $5 and access to a videocassette recorder, movie fans can tape their own copies of movies off a television set. Or, if the desired movies are not being shown on TV, copies of popular movies can be purchased or rented at stores specializing in the trade.

Consumers who don't own VCRs can rent one for as little as $5 for a 24-hour period. Many major super-market chains offer VCR and movie rentals, along with film, batteries and chocolate candy bars. For those who want to buy their own machine, VCRs are available in many brands and with many options.

Sony's Beta format, while still available, is becoming less and less popular as more and more consumers go with the VHS format. Steve Alexander, a salesman with Electronic Service Center in Midland, said his store carries three brands of VHS but only one Beta.

He said reasons for customer preference may include the wider variety of movies available in the VHS format and that "it may be cheaper to record on VHS.

Charles Moore, owner of Audio Pro, agreed that VHS is the more booming business. McCarley estimatpopular style. "The reason consumers chose it originally was it would play" for six to eight hours. "Consumers want more for their money. and a longer playing time translates to more for their money.

Today's customers are choosing VHS over Beta because they are "interested in price first...they want a very inexpensive machine that will play back movies that they rent or their soap operas.

During the last few years the price of videotape machines has come down. Moore said some of the factors causing this reduction are changing technology - "they are becoming more complex but have less number of parts, which equates to lower prices" - and marketing of less-expensive Tiawanese and Korean models.

Supply and demand also results in lower prices, said Bill McCarley, a salesman with Folger's in Midland. 'More people are asking for them-.Technology has a lot to do with it,

Folger's sells and rents both machines and movies, McCarley said. We have over 2,900 different movies and titles...all VHS. We don't han-Customers interested in VCR machines have several types to choose from, including wired remote, wireless, two head or four head, stereo and hi-fi stereo, he said. The current favorite is hi-fi stereo system, which sells from $600-$1,000 For those with fewer demands and tighter budgets, an "all-round, basic VCR" can be purchased for as little as $249, he added, which is ideal for customers who only "want to watch movies and record one program per day rent movies from his store. Those who want their own copies of favorite movies will find them priced from $29.95 to $79.95 and up, he said. "Gone With The Wind" was estimated to cost $99.95.

Some businesses deal more in selling and renting videocassette movies than the machines. While it has VCR machines available for sale or rent, Movie Mania in Midland is "primarily a video store," said general manager Kip Crowther. "We rent The local company has four stores

First Blood Part II. VCRs have also been dropping in price during the last several years, but Crowther said he expects to see prices increase this year. "Our price went up this year. It's the first year since the industry opened up that prices when up.

Customers can rent VCRs at Movie Mania, but more people already have their own machines, he said. "We do rent VCRs, but not anywhere close to the poeple who already have them." VHS is the more popular for-

As for the future of the industry, Crowther said he expects to see "a lot of video stores closing in the next two years...I see a lot of people losing money because we are going through a period" of declining prices and market saturation. "Consumers aren't paying $4 or $5 for rental anymore. Last year more stores in the state of Texas went under" than had previously. "For the small independent anymore, it's really tough.

Sue Lee, owner of Southwest Video in Midland, rents both movies and VCR machines in her store. She said VHS format is the more popular, beating out Beta by a ratio of about 5-1. "There is a closed patent on Be-mat, by a ratio of about five to one, he added. ta," she said, which means the Beta format can only be manufactured by Sony. "Anybody can make a VHS machine...VHS flooded the market." Most of her business comes from movie rentals, although her store also does rent machines.

In movie rentals, "the newest stuff is always the most popular," Ms. Lee said. "They last probably three to four weeks, then (the customers) want another new thing." Current favorites include "Rambo: First Blood Part II. Some movies are popular all year "John Wayne rents real good in Midland," she said, "Clint Eastwood rents good, Western-types," as well as "Places in the Heart," "Ghostbusters" and the Star Wars movies.

Groups can rent facilities' auditoriums

By ELIZABETH EDWIN Lifestyle Writer

With the numerous events happening in Midland throughout the year, one of the first problems organizations or individuals seem to encounter is finding a location for their function.

The following is a compiled list of auditoriums open to the public for Alamo, Goddard and San Jacinto Junior High Schools; Lee and Midland Freshman High Schools, and most Elementary Schools: These schools also have auditoriums available for public rental, according to Stan Cobb, principal of Lee High School. The primary use of these facilities again is for school programs. The cost for public rental is $95 for commercial use and $55 for nonprofit use with a two hour minimum.

Elementary schools also have cafetorium facilities available for rental at a cost of $60 per hour for commercial organizations and $35 for nonprofit groups.

Lee High School: Lee High School is located at 3500 Neely. Any part of the high school can be used under contract, although some use requires approval of the School Board. To lease the facilities contact Henry Kitzman at 694-2551.

The primary use of all Lee High School facilities is for the school's scheduled programs Principal Stan Cobb said.

The capacity of the Lee's auditorium including balcony seating is 1,737. The auditorium is equipped with a stage and a complete lighting and sound system. If there are to be any alterations of the facility, there will be an extra charge negotiated in the rental contract. There will also be an extra charge for the use of an engineer and for custodial services beyond normal cleanup.

All rental rates are on the basis of a two hour minimum. The commercial rate for profit-making organizations is $160 per hour. The rental rate for nonprofit organizations is $90 per hour. There is an additional charge of $100 for pre-heating or cooling of the facility. The cafeteria is available for public use, when not being used by the school, at a rate of $125 for commercial use and $75 for nonprofit use per hour. There also is a $100 charge for pre-heating or cooling for the

these prices were established in February of 1964.

Under the school's regular rental contract the rental fee must be paid in advance, Cobb said.

Midland High School: Midland High School is located at 908 West Illinois. Any part of the high school can be used under contract by contacting Glenn Hixon at 682-7367.

The high school has priority use of all school facilities and student activities are usually planned a year in advance. The auditorium at Midland High School has a capacity of 1,800 and has a built in stage and public address system. It is used on a yearly basis for such functions as Community Concerts and dance studio performances.

Bookings can be made at any time for facilities not being used for school programs, but the sooner the reservation is made the better, according to Hixon.

The auditorium can be rented for $90 an hour to noncommercial organizations (nonprofit) and for $160 an hour for commercial groups (profitmaking). The use of engineers and custodians are included in the rental price. There is an extra $100 fee for use of the facilities on the weekend to cover heating or cooling costs. Prices to use other areas of the high school such as the gymnasium or a class room vary. Individual groups are allowed to decorate the facility.

All religious and political functions wishing to use any of MISD school's facilities are subject to the approval of the school board.

Chaparral Center: The Chaparral Center is located at 3600 Garfield on the Midland College campus. Priority use of the Chaparral Center is reserved for Midland College activities. Secondary consideration is given to the Midland Independent School District. School activities are usually booked a year in advance and any open days are available for public booking by calling Mike Stevens at 685-4584.

During the school year the center is heavily booked and reservations for space need to be made at least three to six months in advance, according to Stevens.

There are 4,741 permanent seats in Chaparral Center. For reserved concerts (with seats placed on the floor) the capacity is 6,253. Capacity for the festival format (floor used for standing patrons) is 7,500. There is 16,000 feet of exhibit space available. The Center can be set up for almost any format ranging from small theater to festivals to concerts, or even a

Most events at the center come self-equipped, but the Chaparral Center does have a public address system available at no extra charge. All setup and clean up are included in the cost of the rental.

The base price for an event such as a concert is $700 or 10 percent of the gross profit, whichever is larger.

ClayDesta Atrium: ClayDesta Atrium is located on 6 Desta Drive in ClayDesta National Bank. To use the Atrium contact Julie Faubel or Wendv Rogers at 688-3000.

The suggested capacity for the Atrium is approximately 1,000 for a stand-up event and approximately 500 for a sit-down affair, she said.

The price of the Atrium depends on the type of event that is being planned.

We have different price structures for different events, private parties, benefits, weddings or receptions," Ms. Faubel said. "Weddings usually start at $200; with the reception it bumps it up to $300 plus the cleaning fee.'

The cleaning fee is an average of $600. All tables, chairs, sound and lighting equipment and other extra must be acquired from an outside rental company. The ClayDesta Atrium does have a dance floor which can be rented at an extra charge.

There are no kitchen facilities and no cooking is permitted at the Atrium. Caterers must be used. Freestanding and table decorations may be used but all decorations must be approved.

There is no advance booking time required.

Hilton Inn: The Midland Hilton Inn is located on the corner of Loraine and Wall in downtown Midland. Jean Pierre Dousse is in charge of all catered and special events. The Hilton's phone number is 683-6131.

The Hilton offers a great deal of versatility. An event can be catered for two, 800 or any amount in between.

The grand ballroom has a capacity of 800 for banquet arrangements or 500 for a seated dinner. Sound equipment, a stage, televisions, video recorders, overhead projectors and many other facilities are available from the Hilton. Lighting for stage productions can provided by the Hilton at an extra charge or brought in by the user.

The grand ballroom rents for a base charge of $750.

The Hilton also has smaller meeting rooms varying in size. The average cost for a meeting room for 20 is $65 for the room with no food provided and $35 for the room with food provided (food is separate charge) Dousse said.

All setup and cleanup is included in the base charge except for the cleanup of decorations used by an organization. The decorations must be taken down by the group using the facility. As a general rule, the Hilton does all of the catering for events using its facilities.

Dousse suggested that reservations be made at least two weeks in advance and during peak times of the vear, even earlier.

Holiday Inn Country Villa: The Holiday Inn Country Villa Conven-tion Center at 4900 West Highway 80 is new to the Permian Basin. It was opened in October 1985 and is "the largest convention center in the Permian Basin," according to Nicki Dancy, regional sales director for Holiday Inn.

For rental of the Holiday Inn facilities, Ms. Dancy or any member of the Holiday Inn sales staff can be reached by calling 697-3181.

Meeting facilities at the Country Villa can accommodate from 10 to 2,400 people. Room rental for meeting facilities only (no food served) ranges from $50-$1,500, depending on the size of the room. If dinner is to be served, the base rental of the room is complementary and the meal is priced on a per person basis. "We pride ourselves in being very versatile. We can cater a simple meal or very very elegant dinner," Ms. Dancy said. Meal prices range form $7 per person to $25 per person.

All setup and cleanup is included in the base or per person price. Options such as microphones, lighting, risers for head tables and table decorations if desired are also included in that price. The only additional charge would be for projectors which the Holiday Inn has to rent. Organizations using the Country Villa are welcome to decorate the facility. For wedding receptions, wedding cakes and other specialty items can be prepared by the Holiday Inn staff or brought in from another caterer.

There is no required advance booking necessary, but reservations are taken on a first come, first serve Midland Center: The Midland Center is located at 105 N. Main. Kim Charles is in charge of renting the center and can be contacted by calling 682-6234.

The Midland Center can be used in a theater format with a capacity of 1,400 or in a banquet format with a capacity of 1,000. A full day rental of the center is $495 for commercial rate, with a 10 percent discount for nonprofit organizations. If the rental time desired is less than a full day, rental prices are based on pro-rated

The auditorium offers full lighting and sound equipment. It has been used for everything from quinceaneras to charity fund-raisers to concerts to trade shows. There are some additional charges Ms. Charles said, such as 50 cents a chair and 75 cents a table for setup in the exhibit hall.

The center also has five meeting rooms with a capacity ranging from 20 to 200. The largest room rents for $165 day and the smallest for $66 a day for commercial rates. Nonprofit organizations receive the 10 percent discount and less time is available on prorated basis.

No advance booking is required. Decorations may used by organizations. The center also has a list of approved caterers or the group may bring in their own food and nonalcoholic drinks. The Midland Center has a liquor license and must handle all alcoholic beverages.

Ramada Inn: The Ramada Inn is located at 3100 West Wall and the phone number is 699-4144. For reserving banquet facilities, contact Kathy Austgen, director of sales, or Tracy Movalson, representative.

The Ramada can accommodate from 20 to 200 persons in its four meeting rooms Ms. Movalson said, with a price range from $50-$200 per day. These prices include all setup and cleanup.

The Ramada has a microphone, podium, chalkboard and audio-visual equipment available, but projectors are at an extra charge.

Although there is not a required advance booking time, Ms. Austgen noted that the sooner the facility is booked, the better.

'We have people call to see if a room is open, and it may be when they call. But we tell them that someone could as soon as they hang up and book the room," Ms. Austgen said. "Basically we like to have at least a week's notice so we can send the orders to the kitchen and have everything arranged, but we have set up a meeting on a day's notice.'

All catering is furnished by the Ramada. The only exception is for weddings if the couple wants to bring in their own wedding cake, specialty cookies or wedding mints. Decorations may be brought in by organizations but must be removed. The Ramada will supply weddings with silk flower arrangements if they are Yucca Theatre: The Yucca Theatre is located at 208 N. Colorado. The theater has been used for events such as rock and gospel concerts, business meetings, auctions and pag-eants. It also has the capacity to show 16mm films Greg Elsner said. The capacity of the theater is 600.

It has full sound and lighting equipment for all events, but there is an additional charge for technicians. There is a three hour minimum for all rental rates. The commercial rate for meetings and rehearsals is $60 an hour. If the event will charge an admission fee, the rate is $80 an hour. For nonprofit organizations the rate for meetings and rehearsals is $50 an hour and if admission is charged for an event the rate is $65

"There also is a daily rate available which usually works out to eight hours of use for the charge of six hours," Elsner said.

Groups using the Yucca Theatre can bring soft drinks and food into the facility but all liquor must be handled by Yucca Theatre personnel. There is no set advanced booking necessary, "but the sooner the better," Elsner said.

Groups wishing to use decorations or props can bring them in to the theater. If excessive cleanup is necessary, there is an extra charge for custodial fees.

Young Men's Christian Association: The Central YMCA is located at 800 N. Big Spring. The YMCA will rent its facilities to nonprofit organizations only. Interested nonprofit organizations can contact Rowland Wong at 682-4144 for reservations.

The YMCA has numerous facilities available ranging from a nursery area a gymnasium and from a meet ing room for 200 to a swimming pool. Wong said rental of areas such as the gymnasium and swimming pool are very limited because the areas are in constant use by members of the Rental is on a space available basis According to the rental policy of the YMCA, groups using the building are required to do their own cleanup or pay an extra charge for custodial services. Chairs, tables, sound and light equipment and other extras must be gotten through a rental company. The YMCA does not have this type of equipment available for public use.

Food and decorations are allowed only in certain areas of the building according to the rental policy and must be discussed upon rental. Prices vary greatly for the area desired and the length of time the facility will be used.

Study ranks Midland fourth among 52 Texas cities

By LINDA ANDERSON Lifestyle Writer

Many residents feel that not only is Midland a nice place to visit, it is a marvelous place to live.

Those feelings now have a basis in fact. A quality of life study released in August 1984 by the Institute of Urban Studies at the University of Texas at Arlington, lists Midland as fourth-highest among 52 Texas

Eight criteria were used to rate the quality of life, or living conditions, in the various locations. Richard L. Cole, Ann Crowley Smith and Delbert A. Taebel, authors of the study, state in the preface that: "We seek answers to the following questions: Which Texas cities rate the highest in terms of public safety, economic opportunities, education, health and the environment, housing, transportation, culture and recreation, and politics?"

While Midland was listed as fourth-highest overall, its ranking in each category varied. In public safe-ty, Midland ranked 13th; in economics, second; in education, seventh; in health, 35th; in housing, third; in transportation, 41st; in recreation and culture combined, 13th (directly behind Odessa at 12th); and in polismallest city among the top five, ranked very high on the economic, housing and education dimensions." Among the cities of 50,000-100,000 population, Midland was rated first.

Economic indicators included unemployment rate; per capita income; percent of families with income below poverty level; percent employed in manufacturing; and percent employed in professional, managerial occupations. The study stated, "Midland's second place finish comes as no surprise to most economic observno surprise to most economic observers, and its ranking is largely attributed to its oil-based economy.'

In the study of education, Midland In the study of education, Midland scored high in terms of qualified teachers and low pupil/teacher ratios and high per pupil expenditures. "The highest incentive structure," the study stated, "the difference between salaries for teachers with a B.A. and an M.A. degree — is in Midland with a $5,177 difference..."

Tall City offers various fitness centers

By ELIZABETH EDWIN Lifestyle Writer

Spring's fashions are to be seductive and sculpted-tothe-body and will demand a terrific figure according to the February issue of Harper's Bazaar magazine. Because of slim-line fashions and a big emphasis being placed on staying healthy and trim, many Midlanders seem to be turning to exercise to lose those unwanted pounds and firm up those flabby muscles. Aerobics classes, jogging, walking and fitness centers have become popular ways to trim down, loose or gain weight, and tone-up or build-up muscles.

Aerobics classes are offered by most fitness centers as well as at several dance studios and figure salons. But many people seem to prefer the self-paced, self-disciplined aspect of jogging.

The Midland YMCA also offers a variety of exercise

The Midland YMCA also offers a variety of exercise programs for local residents.

Others prefer the working out with weights and therefore choose to belong to one of Midland's fitness centers.

There are over a half a dozen physical fitness health clubs in Midland offering a variety of services ranging from weight training to aerobics. Many also offer services including tanning beds, swimming pools, racquetball, massages and whirlpools.

"When a person comes to a fitness center they want attention. Whether they want to improve their body for their spouse or because they are going on vacation or whatever, they want to attract attention. They want to get attention from the people at the center, too," said Michael Price of Texas Fitness and Aerobics Center.

"When someone comes in, we will set up a program for them to achieve the physical goals they want. We go through the program with them as many times as they want us to. We work with the person one-on-one," Price said. "We teach them the proper way to use the equipment and what each exercise does."

But in order for the equipment to help a person tone or build, there must be an understanding that the weight machines can't do the job if dedication isn't included in the package.

"First," said Gary Maxfield, one of the owners of the Body Shop for Women and the Fitness Connexxion, "a person must realize that we can't control what they eat or how often they come in to work out or how hard they work once they get here. A person's dedication to the program we give them is up to them. What we can guarantee is that if one of our clients needs any help, all they have to do is raise a hand and someone will be right there.

"We can set up a program for body building or for just toning and body conditioning, whatever a person wants. But to see results, they have to put in the work," Maxfield said.

Each of the fitness centers offer personalized programs for their members specific needs. In other words, if a person is extremely out of shape and/or overweight, the program is designed to start slow and gradually increase the time and amount of exercise used.

The Body Shop for Women, 4400 Midland Dr., features Camstar and Paramount weight equipment, Olympic free weights and manual exercycles.

"The cardiovascular room is an area in which I think the Body Shop really stands out from the rest," Maxfield said. "We have electronic exercycles with color TVs, an electronic rowing machine and electronic treadmills. Each one is equipped with heart rate monitors and calorie counters."

The Body Shop also has an aerobics room with continuous classes either by a live instructor or on video tape and water-aerobics classes by instructor. The pool is 20 by 40 feet and is open for free-style or lap swimming.

There is also a whiripool, dry sauna, Turkish steam sauna, eucalyptus inhalation room, private shower and dressing areas, nursery facilities and a vanity area complete with blow dryers and curling irons.

Additional services — at additional cost — are lockers, Wolfe II tanning sessions and professional massages.

"We have the largest all-ladies facility in the state."

"We have the largest all-ladies facility in the state," Maxfield said.

Courthouse and Spa of Midland, 1012 Andrews Highway, has been open about four years and is now making plans to expand, Dawn Feola said.

"The nice thing about Courthouse and Spa is that we offer a little bit of everything," said Ms. Feola, who oversees the general operation of the club.

The Courthouse offers its members "a lot of racquetball," Ms. Feola said. The club also has full-scale aerobics classes and water-aerobics classes, Nautilus weight equipment, Karate classes and separate whirlpools and saunas for men and women.

Members can also receive private karate instruction and tanning sessions for extra charges.

The Courthouse also has a physical therapist, David Windsor, to help people who need special workout routines because of an injury or special weakness, Ms. Feola said.

Feola said.

Part of the club's activities include working with the Big Brothers/Big Sisters organizations with promotions and racquetball tournaments, exhibitions and clinics.

"A racquetball tournament can bring as many as 500 people and for exhibitions we bring in big name players. We brought in Marty Hogan who is number one in the United States," Ms. Feola said.

"We've gone the duration so we know we have a good club and plan to be around a long time," Ms. Feola said.

"I think Courthouse is at its best right now and we plan to make it better."

The Fitness Connexxion is in the same shopping center with the Body Shop and is its male counterpart.

The Fitness Connexxion has Camstar, Icarian and Paramount weight equipment, and Olympic free weights with a range from 10 to 120 pound dumb beils. In the cardiovascular area there are manual rowing machines, a Nautilus cyclone and electronic treadmills, exercycles with color televisions and horizontal bikes. There are also electronic rowing machines which can be programmed for the user to race the machine. These machines, like those at the Body Shop, are equipped with heart rate monitors and calorie counters.

The cardiovascular room also has a Stairmaster, a machine with moveable steps that can be programmed for the number of flights of stairs desired. This machine will measure heart rate and calorie output and give the user a complete minute-by-minute printout of how well he is executing the exercise.

A unique feature at the Fitness Connexxion is the Computerized Training Programming. It is only the third club in the United Stated to have this program and the only one in Texas, according to Maxfield.

The computer programs were designed by Larry Scott, a former Mr. America, Mr. Universe and Mr. Olympia; and Barry Jenkins, head strength coach of Brigham Young University. The master programming at the club was tailor-made for the Fitness Connexxion, Maxfield said.

The program works by entering the man's strength, weight, height, measurements and other vital statistics into the computer along with the physical goals desired, such as body building or toning. The computer analyzes this information and designs a exercise program for the individual according to recommendations by Scott and Jenkins.

The facility offers a dry sauna, Turkish sauna, eucalyptus inhalation room, whirlpool, private shower and

dressing areas and a vanity area stocked with blow dryers ar 1 personal items.

The Fitness Connexxion is the only all men's facility in Midland. It also offers, at extra charge, lockers, Wolfe II tanning sessions and professional massages.

The Body Shop and The Fitness Connexxion are members of the Association of Physical Fitness Centers and therefore any membership to one of these clubs entitles the member to a reciprocal membership in an affiliate club, which would be useful during a business trip, vacation or if you are relocated permanently.

The Midlander, 225 Corporate Dr., offers a wide variety of activities as well as memberships. There are 13 different memberships available including corporate, family and single, said David Lamkin, assistant director of racquetball at the Midlander.

The club is divided into three categories: tennis, racquetball and fitness.

There are eight individual outdoor tennis courts, four indoor tennis courts and 10 racquetball courts, two which are challenge courts. Barry Stephens, the head tennis professional at the Midlander, said the club offers tennis and racquetball tournaments, leagues and challenge leaders. There are no court fees. The tennis courts have a ball machine and the racquetball courts have a portable basketball goal for two-on-two basketball.

The racquetball courts are also used for Walleyball. "Walleyball is basically volleyball played on a racquetball court and you can use the walls to play off of," Lamkin said.

Exhibitions and clinics are also brought in from time to time. "We had the Peck brothers here not to long ago for a racquetball exhibition," Stephens said.

In the fitness area, the weight room has Nautilus equipment and Olympic free weights. All of the cardiovascular equipment is electronic and computerized, including treadmills, exercise cycles and a Stairmaster.

There are also manual rowing machines.

The weight room is continually staffed. A fitness program is set up for each member by the staff based on a Human Performance Center Test, which gives a non-medical analysis of your physical condition, Stephens said.

The fitness area also has an Olympic-size swimming pool for lap swimming, a track around the pool for jogging, men's and women's dry and steam saunas, eucalyptus inhalation rooms and whirlpools. Lockers are available for use during workout times or may be rent-

Workout uniforms and towels are also provided.

There are approximately six to eight aerobics classes taught daily, beginning at 6 a.m. with the last class beginning at 7:30 p.m. The classes cover all levels. At least three times a week the aerobics room is used for karate lessons.

Ski fitness courses are taught along with the use of Hydrogym equipment, which is worked by hydraulic Wolfe System Tanning bed sessions and professional massages are available at an extra charge. Also, any of the professionals at the Midlander can be hired for private instruction. The club also has a full nutritional bar and a Pro Shop.

There is presently a plan to build an indoor golf range for driving practice and to hire a golf pro for additional assistance, said Stephens.

"I have had people tell me there is not a nicer place in Texas, maybe one as nice, but not nicer," he said.

Texas Fitness and Aerobics Center, 3200 Andrews Highway, has been planning many changes recently. Formerly Golden Life Physical Fitness Center, the club was bought out and the name changed. Since that time the new owners say they have been working to gradually upgrade the facility.

"They are going about improvement slowly, but it should all be finished in about three or four months," should all be finished in about three or four months, Price said.

Some of the renovation plans include remodeling men's and women's wet areas — including dry heat and steam saunas, showers and dressing areas — acquiring new weight equipment and enlarging the workout area, Price said.

"If you know how to use the equipment properly, you don't have to have top-of-line machines to see results. "We have a mix-match of equipment," Price said, including machines by Nautilus, Paramount, Dynamic and Universal. The center also has some free weights, daily aerobics classes, lockers and nursery facilities.

"We like to give variation to our members' routines so they won't get bored," Price said. "We also try to instill in them the idea of total physical fitness."

The YMCA's main branch is the Central YMCA, 400 N. Big Spring, which offers co-ed, men's and women's facilities or separate health club arrangements, depending on the membership package selected. Judy Reuter, the YMCA's adult fitness program director, said she feels the Y has more variety and volume of classes to offer its members than other local health clubs.

"We have classes from 6 a.m. until our last class starting at 7 p.m.," Ms. Reuter said, "and there is such a wide variety of classes. We have very beginner classes, what we call our 'Low-impact' classes, which are non-jumping, all the way through very advanced classes."

The regular membership provides co-ed facilities for all fitness classes, Nautilus and Universal weight equipment and training, jogging track, lap and open swimming, open gymnasium facilities, handball and racquetball courts and dressing and locker rooms for men and women.

Individual memberships are available which entitle the member to use the Health Club facilities. In addition to regular membership facilities, Health Club membership provides separate total fitness workout areas for men and women, a complete Nautilus weight training circuit, sauna, steam room, whirlpool, sun room, individual lockers, dressing rooms and showers and laundry/linen service. It also includes three massages a week for women and one per week for men.

The YMCA also offers individual memberships for young adults ages 13-18 which includes the same facilities as a regular membership but the cost is less. For couples, the YMCA offers a price break. The YMCA also has Passport memberships which entitle the member to attend aerobics classes only.

The YMCA offers several programs with an orientation session at no charge.

"We have a weight management program, a smoking cessation program and a nutritionist on staff. In three to four months we will have a stress management program as well," said Ms. Reuter.

The YMCA also has fitness evaluations.

"A facility we have, that I don't believe anyone else in town has, is a Hydrostatic Weight Tank. It gives the most accurate count of fat percentage in your body by weighing you under water."

Other fitness evaluation programs include personal profiles for coronary risk, cholesterol, body composition, flexibility, pulmonary function, cardiorespiratory fitness and personalized exercise prescriptions.

There are several specialty classes at the YMCA including yoga, ski fitness and Aquactivity, a class combining aquaerobics and activities such as water polo, volleyball and swimming.

The YMCA also has locations at 901 Midland Drive in Alamo Center, 1600 E. Wall in Washington Center and 1509 Orchard in Park Center.
