

FULL HOUSE GREET'S McDERMOTT MINSTREL

Antics of Burnt Cork Darkies
Get Warm Applause Friday Night.

McDermott Post's American Legion Jubilee drew a capacity house at the Andrews Ward Gymnasium Friday evening of last week, and proved a mirth-provoking event, the antics of the burnt cork dark face entertainers being greeted with laughter and applause in generous portions.

With J. C. Gilliam, interlocutor, handling the event in rapid-fire fashion and all hands carrying their parts through with skill and more than ordinary attention to detail, there were no dull moments, the two-hour program being gone through in two hours flat, with none of the tiresome waits and delays many times incident to local talent presentation.

The program consisted of gags largely with local people at the receiving end of the jokesters' sallies, dancing choruses, ensemble singing choruses, and the warblings of the male quartet. Two comedy skits, one in dark face by Mrs. P. LeMasters, and another by Homer Eubank in clown make up added to the variety of the program.

Good orchestration, also by local talent, added greatly to the program. J. L. Clark directed the evening's show, giving much time and effort to it. He praised the talent, and declared the presentation much more clever than he hoped for.

Following is the cast of characters for the jubilee:

Mr. White, Interlocutor, J. C. Gilliam
Aunt Jemima, Mrs. P. LeMaster; It, Homer Eubank; Mr. Barnum, Luther Fry; Miss Jolly, Mrs. Jack Henry; Mr. Dennis, Frank L. Moore; Miss Josie, Mrs. A. W. Orchestra Omar Johnson, piano; Oddie Johnson, banjo; Tom Goslee, drums; Raymond Berry, cornet. Miss Ruth Collins accompanied the singing numbers at the piano.

Support given the minstrel from all portions of the public was highly gratifying to the members of the cast and to the officers and membership of McDermott Post in general. A very creditable program was well patronized by business houses, professional men and candidates for office.

SUGGESTIONS FOR CONTROL OF GARDEN INSECTS GIVEN

College Station, Texas, March 13.—The Texas gardener and truck farmer are warned to keep a sharp look-out for the insect foes of the new spring vegetables by J. F. Rosborough, horticulturist of the Extension Service, A. & M. College of Texas. The two classes of insects that do most damage to vegetables are the biting insects and the sucking insects, and these can be controlled if the work is done thoroughly.

Biting insects feed upon foliage and may be exterminated by spraying or dusting plants with arsenal mixture. Arsenate of lead and Calcium arsenate are the more desirable insecticides because of the small amount of free arsenic. If Paris Green or London Purple are used as a dust or spray on vegetables their strength should be weakened by mixing with hydrated lime or flour. The formula for mixing arsenate of lead for killing biting insects is two pounds arsenate of lead, two pounds hydrated lime, fifty gallons of water. When used as a dust, two pounds of arsenate of lead should be mixed with fifty pounds hydrated lime. A nicotine sulphate dust mixture is effective in killing sucking insects. For this mixture one pound of nicotine sulphate is mixed with twenty pounds of hydrated lime. The mixture should be carefully mixed, adding the nicotine slowly to the lime during the mixing process. The dust should be applied when the air is calm.

50 Years of De Laval Service and now the best of all... Cream Separators

Since Dr. De Laval invented the first continuous discharge centrifugal cream separator in 1878, De Laval Separators have always been in the lead. Practically every detail of separator construction has been De Laval originated. As these features have been imitated, further improvements have been made.

Each De Laval has in its day been the leading separator. As a result more than four million have been sold. They are used in every country of the world, and there are practically as many in use as all other separators combined.

Now the 1928 "Golden Series" De Laval Separators mark another step forward. They are the crowning achievement in 50 years of service to the dairy industry.

They are the most complete, efficient and beautiful cream separators ever made. They are all that could be desired for in such a machine and must prove a source of profit as well as profit to every owner.

The best way to judge a new "Golden Anniversary" De Laval machine is to see one, and better still to try it side-by-side with any other separator.

We will appreciate an opportunity of demonstrating our "Golden Series" De Laval to you.

THE TRUTH WILL MAKE FREE MEN AND WOMEN

"Ye shall know the truth and the truth shall make you free."—St. John, 8:32.
In this day we are seeking the truth as never before. At least they are doing it in material things, in the search for new facts of science. More generally than ever before, perhaps, are they also seeking the truths of philosophy and religion, although no man would be hardy enough to say that men of today are delving more deeply into these mines of human knowledge than have great men of ages past. The modern world has paid remarkable heed to the command, "Seek ye the truth." But it has taken the promised reward as a thing of rather general good. That the "truth shall make you free," has been accepted as a metaphor, meaning broadly that enlightenment and advancement will come to those who find the truth. But we need not take the term in any such general sense. We can apply it much more literally. As a matter of fact men have been set free from bondages of all sorts only as they have gained possession of the truth. Serfs have been serfs, not because there were masters over them, but because they had not learned the truth that one human being is of just no divine or natural power has decreed that one man shall be the chattel of another.
Populations have labored under the tyrannies of such despots as Nero, not because there were men strong enough to bind them and coerce them, but because they lacked the truth that the Neros of the world are wrong and unnecessary, that their ascendancy over great masses of people is repugnant to all principles of right and humanity. Thus have all tyrannies and despotisms been built—on the ignorance of the people. Social systems of appalling injustice have flourished—on the ignorance of the people. Give the masses of men and women light, the truth, and the thralldom of all sorts is broken, bonds are rent asunder, the people are freed. The truth has made them free. But the thing is not all in the past. We have not yet found all the truth, and we are not yet entirely free. There are economic bonds to be broken, there are mental bonds to be broken. Everywhere should the search for truth be fostered; nowhere should it be hampered. For men not only are made free by finding truth; that is the only way they are made free.

THE LAND OF FETES

Switzerland has more fetes each year than any other country of its size. There are more than 2,000 including local festivals in honor of local saints and heroes, whose names and exploits belong to a legendary past.
Thus the country people come into Geneva to take part in the fete of St. Gervais, as they have done from time immemorial. And they dance in the streets to the raucous music of the raucous music of the hurdy-gurdy while the merry-go-round and the cheap-jack add to the gaiety of the scene.
But the most attractive fetes are those held in honor of the children. One of the prettiest of these, called the Festival of Youth and Gladness, includes all young people between the ages of 6 and 19, who walk in a colorful procession to a hilltop, there to sing chants in honor of their native town and country. Boys and girls alike are dressed in white, the girls carrying garlands of flowers, while the tallest of the boys form a guard of honor with "hallebeards and arbaletes." About 8,000 persons take part in the procession each year.

TO THE VOTERS OF FLOYD COUNTY, PRECINCT NO. 1

This is to notify you that I have decided to withdraw from the race for county commissioner.
My reason for taking this step is as follows:
The majority of you will remember that the wife and mother in our home was called away in death two years ago. When I entered the race for commissioner it had not then occurred to me how much I might be kept from my children in rendering this service to the county, should I be elected. After carefully considering this matter from every point of view I am thoroughly convinced that my first duty is to my children, and that I cannot afford to make the home sacrifice that will be necessary to fill the office acceptably, should I be fortunate in securing the nomination.
I have no other motive in taking this step. I am not afraid of my campaign in the least. I appreciate all that my friends have said and done for me, and I hope that no one will feel unkindly toward me, for I believe if you are able to appreciate my situation that you will see that my first and foremost duty at the present time is to my home, and my motherless children.
My prayer is that I may always be worthy of the confidence and respect of my friends. Again thanking each and all for any words of encouragement that have been given in my behalf, I am,
Respectfully yours,
W. T. Rogers.

DISCOVERED

When at Menthe, France, we were assigned to the 30th Division and found among the erstwhile mountaineers a host of stories dating back to the days of the hickory shirt. The boys used to love to tell this one on the top sergeant who before the war lived in typical mountaineer shiftlessness some forty miles from a railroad, and the same distance from all the advantages of civilization as we know them. To his cabin there came one day a peddler who carried in his pack many things our young mountaineer had never seen, among them a hand mirror.

"How did you get hold of that?" cried the Tennessean. "That's a picture of my dad."
The peddler did not explain, but when the mountaineer bought some other things he gave him the mirror and it became his most valued possession. Each day he looked at his father's picture and locked it carefully in a chest showing it to no one. Then one day his wife came across his keys in the pocket of his extra overalls and as she had long wished to know what it was he concealed, opened the chest with the key and found the mirror.

"So," she muttered as she looked into it, "so that's the old hag he's chasing around with, is it?"—Southwestern Ambassador.

OPINIONS UPON WHAT GIRLS SHOULD WEAR CHANGE WITH YRS.

The flight of time brings many changes, but in nothing are these changes so marked as in the opinions and ideas as to what girls and women should wear and what they really do wear as time passes.

Here is an extract from the Suncock, New Hampshire, Times printed in December, 1868, giving directions as to what girls should wear. Following this extract is a poem from the Wyoming Mountaineer in which a bachelor poet sighs for a "girl not undrest."

The New Hampshire opinion upon girls' apparel is this:

"How should our girls be dressed in winter? In the first place, make a waist of canton flannel; let the sleeves be long. Make a pair of drawers of the same material, long enough to reach the top of the bootee, and button them upon the waist; then flannel garments made in the same way except the drawers; they should be finished with a band and buttoned just below the knee. Next the hoops (if they must have them, but girls are much better without them) and over them a warm, light skirt. Lastly, the dress, which should be of a woolen material, made with long sleeves lined with strong cotton. Strong boots with heavy soles and warm, thick, woolen stockings. When she goes out she should wear a warm sacque and mittens."

And here is the present day dachelor poet's lamentation:

Backward, turn backward, O Time in your flight!
Give us a maiden with skirts not so tight;
Give us a girl whose charms, many or few,
Are not so exposed by too much peek-a-boo;
Give us a maiden, no matter what age,
Who won't use the street for a vaudeville stage;
Give us a girl not so sharply in view;
Dress her in skirts that the sun won't shine through.
Then give us the dances of days long gone by;
With plenty of clothes and steps not so high;
Oust turkey-trot capers and butter-milk glide.

The hurdy-gurd twist and the wiggletail slide;
Then let us feast our tired optics once more
On a genuine woman as sweet as of yore.

Yes, Time, please turn backward and grant our request
For God's richest blessing—but not one undressed.

Mr. and Mrs. Guy Bradley, of O'Donnell, Texas, were here for a short time the latter part of last week visiting relatives and attending to business. They also visited for a short time with relatives at Plainview while in this section.

The quantity of hay, silage, and grain to feed to dairy cows will depend largely upon the condition and production of each cow. All cows do not produce the same quantity of milk and butterfat; consequently, they should not be given the same quantity of feed. Economical feeding usually demands that cows be fed liberally. Under most circumstances during the winter when cows are in milk and largely on dry feed they should be given all the roughage that they will eat readily, and the grain ration should be adjusted according to individual production.

Three Of The Aspirants In Race For Senatorial Honors In Texas.

Thomas L. Blanton

Alvin M. Owsley

Tom Connally

In the sweepstakes for honors in the Senatorial race in Texas this year on the Democratic ticket are some of the more prominent political personages of the decade. Pictured above are three of the six aspirants. Of the number Blanton is at present congressman from the Abilene District, Owsley is a real colonel who won his spurs in the World War and was elected president of the National American Legion organization in 1926, and Connally is congressman from the Waco District. None of the three pictured have ever been defeated for a coveted honor heretofore.

WELSH LANGUAGE DYING OUT

From the Living Age.
The Welsh language, according to present indications, lies on its deathbed, although a bitter struggle is being waged to keep it alive by artificial respiration. The Welsh language report, recently published, was obviously intended as a stimulant, for it deplored the present tendency, and made numerous recommendations to nurse the language back to health and vigor. The committee found that just as many persons speak Welsh today as did fifty years ago, but provincial pride is bruised when, as the report states, "the Welsh girl, during the time of courtship, thinks that she shows a greater delicacy in speaking English."

Many persons speak both Welsh and English, but it is feared that the former language is the less respectable, and we observe the same philological phenomenon than prevailed in England when French became the fashionable language rather than Anglo-Saxon.

With the rapid growth of means of communication and with the world becoming smaller every day, a petty national language has little chance of survival. Tourists are said to have brought English to the very heart of the Welshman. The rapid and wide distribution of English newspapers broke down another lingual defense, and the telephone contributed its part.

Then the British Broadcasting Corporation succeeded in thoroughly alarming the Welsh when nothing but English language programs were put on the air. The committee feels that "it is rather a pathetic comment on the position of Welsh in its own country that the only regular Welsh program is that given once a week from the Dublin station by the Irish government."

LEAGUE HAGGLES OVER TRIFLES

From L'Europe Nouvelle, Paris.
Translated for the Kansas City Star
The last day of the recent council meeting at Geneva was wearisome, exasperating and occasionally dramatic, plainly showing the sort of atmosphere in which the League of Nations has functioned since the entry of Germany. In spite of Herr Stresemann's efforts to adapt himself and his conciliating speeches, his mere presence distorted perspectives, unbalanced proportions and emphasized the spirit of maneuver at the expense of international co-operation.

The impression left was that the principal task before the League of Nations from now on was to procure satisfactions, reparations and compensations for Germany by removing the obligations of the treaty of Versailles. German interests are suddenly assuming exaggerated importance and thrust problems of more general interest into the background.

On the other hand, while the council sessions are assuming the appearance of a Franco-German duel or tournament, there is a strong temptation for certain powers to intervene in this strange combat, to offer their services in the hope of remuneration, to exert their influence for or against a rapprochement and to tip the scales one way or the other—all of which recalls the traditional diplomacy rather than the more modern methods which have been perfect at Geneva in the last five or six years.

"They are using a club to kill flies," remarked M. Briand the other day. The remark seems apt. For instance, the Sarre affairs are really municipal council stuff. Whether to place the control of traffic in charge of 1,000, 800, or 600 men; whether these troops shall wear cockades or brassards, and the whole wide world is asked to interest itself in the reelection of a delegate who, with five others, is in charge of a territory with a population less than that of Marseilles or Lyons.

Thus every little dispute is made an affair of state to set the governments of several great nations at loggerheads: when there is nothing to dispute over, something is manufactured to be nourished and injected with venom.

TWO MOTIVES IN MARRIAGE

Mary Roberts Rinehart in McCall's Magazine.

Men and women marry for different reasons and therefore companionate marriage is a man's scheme and wrong. The masculine idea is that traditional marriage has been the woman's game; her device to protect herself and her children. Companionate marriage, carefully analyzed, is a masculine solution of the problem of the young male, fighting his normal sexual impulses until he is able to marry. And it would solve his problem, very probably. But it will never solve the problem of the girl who has no such tempestuous urge, and who normally gives herself where she loves, and for life.

Practically always, the girl gives herself in marriage because she loves, and not because of any overwhelming sex urge. The loose hold of the companionate marriage, which solves the problem of the adolescent male, solves for her no problem at all. On the contrary, it puts the balance of power on the other side; it gives the young husband a club which may be wielded with extraordinary cruelty. Under such circumstances "mutual consent" becomes an absurdity and a tragic farce.

Companionate marriage is based among other things on the fallacy that the same motives actuate both men and women, boys and girls in marriage. The exact converse is true. Men marry for love and because the decent man wishes in sex life to be a decent one. Women marry for love and protection; their entire hopes are based on the permanency of both.

Their ability nowadays to support themselves notwithstanding, normal young women are even more pointed toward permanent marriage. Permanency in marriage is vital to them. To achieve this permanency they are ready to wait, and while a small percentage will fill in that waiting period with illicit affairs, the vast majority will do nothing of the sort. For every one woman who is using her new economic freedom as an escape from the old moralities, ten are happy busy with work and no longer find their sole preoccupation in sex.

Marriage, old-fashioned traditional marriage has not gone on the rocks. A vast majority of people still go to the altar determined to carry out their vows, and the words "till death us do part," in a vast majority of these cases are not only earnestly repeated, but solemnly lived up to.

MISTAKES WRITERS HAVE MADE

From the Washington Post.

The mistakes made by novelists have been often a cause of wonderment to the reader and of good natured laughter, also, for one loves to find, even among penmen and penwomen, an illustration of the truth of the maxim that "to err is human."

When Shakespeare gives a seacoast to Bohemia or Goldsmith places tigers on Erie's banks or Scott makes young Lochinvar's sweetheart do something impossible in the way of mounting a steed, the gentle reader, knowing the limitations of the mind of man, instead of gloating over such lapses, simply ignores them or passes them by with an indulgent smile.

Just now there is in England a disposition to drag into the limelight, in a spirit of light-hearted banter, various lapses of which novelists have been guilty, especially in connection with railroads and steam ships, though aeronauts, astronomical bunders and other "howlers" are not allowed to escape.

There is, for instance, the classic case of the account, given by Dickens in "Dombey and Son" of how Mr. Parker met his death an account of which various persons have grown gray in trying to understand. Then, in "In the Same Boat," we have Rudyard Kipling, usually most accurate in detail, starting two passengers from Waterloo station in London for the west of England on a night train and waking them up when the train is evidently on the Devon coast near Dawlish, while "southwards the sun rose mistily upon the channel." Now Dawlish is not reached from Waterloo, but from Paddington, and the sun rising "southwards" is certainly a remarkable phenomenon.

Blunders in history or in observation of country life are frequent. Thus, one of Katharine Tynan's stories, which is concerned with a mysterious fox, has for its hero a typical Irish squire of bygone days whose one great passion is for a pack of foxhounds, which is continually obtruded on our notice.

As the period is that of James I and as fox hunting was not invented as a sport till nearly a century later, the anachronism is evident. In a modern novel, on the other hand, Sheila Kaye-Smith, who specializes in the agricultural folk of Sussex, makes a farmer of today who has turned a rich bit of pasture land into a wheat field express delight at a yield of eight bushels to the acre. Eight bushels would mean, of course, almost failure. Anywhere from forty to sixty would have been nearer.

GOT NAME FROM FAMILY CREST

From the Pathfinder.
In Europe the name Rothschild signifies the same as Rockefeller does in America. It symbolizes wealth and big business. The founder of the Rothschild was Meyer Anselm, who was a money lender in Frankfurt, Germany. His sign was a red shield, which in German is "roth schild." In 1806 the Landgrave of Hesse, during the occupation of Germany by the French, entrusted Anselm with specie to the amount of about 1 million dollars. With this money Anselm traded and made a large fortune. After Napoleon fell the Jewish capitalist repaid the money. His sons took the name of Rothschild from their father's sign.
