Reese names top three

Three people have been selected to represent their peers in the Airman of the Month and Junior Officer and NCO of the Quarter competi-

A1C Nancy M. Gillian, Accounting and Finance; TSgt. Timothy W. McQuitty, Life Support; and Capt. Roger D. Emmick, Hospital Primary Care, are the three honorees.

Airman Gillian is charged with maintaining the

In her nomination letter, Airman Gillian was cited for her ability to perform with a minimum of supervision, her help in training new people and for filling an NCO's position after the loss of a supervisor in December.

In her off-duty time, the award-winner has completed three years toward her degree in Business Administration, participates in the honor guard and serves on both the Protestant Fund Council and Protestant Parrish Council at the base Chapel.

Sergeant McQuitty was lauded for his expertise in supervision and leadership, the key roles of an NCO. He is directly responsible for the supervision of 13 individuals in his job as NCOIC of Life Support.

Additional duties taken on by the NCO of the Quarter include squadron On-the-Job Training monitor and Income Tax Representative. He also serves on the Unit Advisory Council.

Student Squadron Commander, Maj. Eugene A. Bardal, said of Sergeant McQuitty, "I can confidently look to him for answers to the most complex problems. He expects no special favors for his performance and makes no excuses; just gets the job done."

Captain Emmick, in his job as charge nurse of the Primary Care Clinic, plans and organizes all nursing service activities for all clinic areas. These clinics see a total of 6,000 patients per

He also promotes in-service education programs to keep nursing service personnel current in new techniques, equpment and safety measures, while assigning and supervising nursing service personnel. The Junior Officer of the Quarter affects the medical care of all Reese people in his capacity as evaluator of quality of nursing care.

As an additional duty, Captain Emmick is the Health Education Coordinator, providing methods to patients in how to maintain their health through preventive medicine. His twin jobs as chairman of the Health Education Committee and director of Continuing Medical Education bring him into constant contact with both health care providers and patients.

In 1972, as a civilian nurse, he worked as a

He served in Vietnam as a Naval Medical Corpsman.

Hostages voice thanks to AF

Washington (AFNS)-In a message released at West Point, NY, Col. Thomas E. Schaefer, Lt. Col. David M Roeder and Capt. Paul M. Needham, the three Air Force officers held hostage in Iran, conveyed their joy in being home and their appreciation to the Air Force family. They wrote: "Yesterday in Newberg, N.Y., after a beautiful flight aboard 'Freedom Zero One' your fifty-two friends scored their own touchdown on super Sunday. Today, as we bask in the euphoria of family reunions, we fondly remember another family - the Air Force - that has played such an important and thoroughly professional role in our transition from captivity to actual homecoming.

"We request that you accept for and pass on to the Air Force family, our sincerest thanks and warmest affection. Each and every one of you has underscored the justifiable pride we all have in the Air Force blue we are again privileged to wear after fourteen and one-half months as hostages."

Signed: Lt. Col. Dave Roder, Col. Tom Schaefer, and Capt. Paul Needham-Returnees.

The thrills of rodeo type action come to Reese May 10 as the base joins the Texas Boys Ranch and Texas Tech in sponsoring a non-rough stock rodeo as part of the Open House entertainment. The rodeo will include crowd pleasing events such as cow milking, steer saddling, cow chip tossing and pepper eating. The Air Force SDIIS Thunderbirds are scheduled as the main attraction for the Open House. (U.S. Air Force photo)

Police represent command

Congratulations! Our Security Police division, through individual effort and teamwork have been selected as one of the ATC finalists to compete in the USAF Security Police Outstanding Small Unit Award for 1980.

At times in the Air Force our guardians of peace, who keep a constant vigilance on our resources and property, fail to receive the praise and recognition they deserve. Their dedication and genuine concern in serving the Reese community is very apparent. Whether it is a call to help a small child find its way home, or to serve as a friend to someone who is in distress, they are always there to "protect and serve."

This past year, through the help of you the community, 47 percent of stolen or lost property was recovered by the Security Police. As you know, they rely heavily on each one of us to assist them in reducing crime on the base. I challenge each one of you to become personally involved this year by reporting any suspicious activity to the Security Police at Ext. 3400. Remember, you do not have to reveal your identity. Let's make 1981 a year in which we support our peacekeepers to the fullest extent possible.

Our peacekeepers give people their first impression of Reese. Their attitude, personal appearance, military bearing, and professionalism mirrors a picture to all who enter and leave Reese. The picture these men and women mirror in the minds of all those they contact is one of pride in themselves, their uniform, the United States Air Force, and their country. And all those entering or leaving Reese feel a special pride also. Their dedication has made them a superior "Ambassador" for our base.

I am proud of their selection and ask each of you to continue to give them your full support. I am sure they will be selected as the "Best in the Air Force"!

Spot check

I am inquiring why, in front of the BX, there are no spots for handicapped personnel. To me, it seems that handicapped personnel should have precedence over ranking officials.

Your concern for the welfare of the handicapped is very admirable. We do have parking for the handicapped by the BX. We have a barrier free curb and a reserved parking space located on the corner of E Street, which gives the handicapped access to the front of the BX (building 15). In addition, we have reserved parking in the rear of building 15 that is also barrier free.

Uniform reflects workman's pride

Editor's note: The following article on wear of the utility uniform was originally published in the June 1978 Roundup and was submitted by Col. Richard Pierson, then deputy commander for maintenance. Look for other articles in coming weeks on military customs, courtesies, history and uniforms. Coincidentally, this week marks the 32nd anniversary of the blue Air Force uniform.

Put yourself in this situations:

One bright morning you wheel your ailing, multi-thousand dollar automobile into your friendly auto repair shop. You are met there by a young mechanic wearing a greasy baseball cap, a faded, frayed, grimecovered uniform, and a pair of dirty work shoes in obvious need of repair. Would you question his professional ability? Or would you excuse his appearance because of his "dirty work"? Would you wonder about the organization that allows such an individual to represent it? Or would you justify their actions as an effort to hold down costs and consumer prices? Most importantly, would you feel good about the safety of your "pride and joy" after this mechanic releases it?

Now let's change the scene slight-

One bright morning a pilot wheels his ailing multi-thousand airship into the chocks. He is met by a young mechanic wearing a greasy baseball cap, etc., etc. How do you suppose this pilot feels? Think he might have your same misgivings about individual and organization professionalism? If you were the pilot, would you wonder about the final "airworthiness" of your machine?

Now the fact may be that the auto mechanic is the best in three states; and the Air Force mechanic may be the best in his business. But their unsightly and unprofessional appearance creates the opposite opinion in the average "driver". Like it or not, a person's appearance greatly affects the opinions and perceptions of those who observe and work with that person.

Can you see how this fact of life has a bearing on the flight line mechanic at Reese? Most of us are pretty careful about the care and wear of our blue uniform. But, many of us are less-than-professional when it comes to our green work/utility uniform: Our fatigues! While the discrepancies noted above on our young mechanic are not commonplace at Reese, I have observed each of them fairly recently. They indicate to me a lack of full understanding by young airmen concerning the relationship between appearance and professionalism.

As the Deputy Commander for Maintenance, I am confident that all our flight line crew chiefs and technicians are professionals. They possess the training, experience, and judgment to accomplish the mission. However, if I were forced to make a similar determination based primarily upon the professional appearance of our fatigue-wearing personnel, I am not so confident that all would be picked as professionals. Yet, aircrews, visiting dignitaries, and other base personnel are daily required to make the same judgment.

Far too many fatigue uniforms are cared for like the old faded blue jeans we save to work on our cars. They are not kept cleaned and in good repair. This is obviously wrong! A portion of the monthly clothing allowance is intended to help maintain the fatigue uniform as a good-looking and essential part of your military wardrobe.

The mechanic's fatigue uniform is as distinctive as the pilot's flight suit. It identifies a team member directly involved in the Air Force mission. A person who is doing an extremely difficult and extremely important job. For this reason, if for no other, the fatigue uniform should be properly worn, with pride and professionalism. To do less shows insufficient respect for the maintenance mission — and those who labor so earnestly at that mission.

I request that each fatiguewearing member of the DCM team treat his work uniform as if it were his blue uniform. Before you leave for work, give it a critical look and ask yourself — Is my uniform neat, clean, and in good repair? Does it still fit properly? Are my patches, name tapes, rank insignia properly attached? Ar my boots cleaned, blacked, and in good repair? Is my cap proper and clean? Do I know the limit for wearing fatigues off base?

And most importantly, — do I look like the professional that I know I am?

I firmly believe that professional appearance promotes professional performances. People expect more from you when you look professional. And you make that extra effort to live up to their expectations.

Firefighters blaze through inspection

Fire Department officials expressed pleasure this week over the results of the Aircraft Crash Rescue Field Assistance and Evaluation Team findings.

According to the evaluation report, all functional areas of the fire department were reviewed with overall good results.

Three exercises were conducted during A-shift: major live training fire, T-37 crash rescue egress with two crewmembers and a structural fire simulated in a hangar with 12 aircraft inside. A-shift personnel were lauded for their knowledge of vehicle capabilities and limitations, and their speed in fighting the fires.

On B-shift the three exercises consisted of a three-story dormitory fire, a T-38 crash rescue egress and a night live training fire. Rescue crews, according to Overall, the inspection team pointed out the efficient organization of the department, even though their manning is below the Air Force average. In addition, the base fire loss record was deemed "commendable," with only six reportable fires in the last four years. The evaluators pointed out the outstanding public relations and educational programs provided by the fire department as the reason for this low loss record.

The building which houses the department was praised for its clean and neat appearance, in spite of budget constraints restricting repairs to recreational

The 1958th Communications Squadron was presented with the Air Force Recruiter Assistance Program Quarterly Commander's Trophy at the Wing Staff Meeting Jan. 14.

A record 293 points, the highest accumulation of points within one quarter in the history of the program on Reese AFB, was accumulated by the Squadron. This was largely due to the professional efforts of Amn. Cynthia Audrey, AFRAP volunteer of the month for Novmber 1980, who submitted a large number of lead referral cards throughout the quarter. TSgt. Rick Dorsey (1958 CS AFRAP representative) who visited Lorenzo High School and gave an AFRAP presentation also helped buildup the impressive points. A1C Irene Larios who works in the 1958 CS Message Center assisted Sergeant Dorsey with this presentation.

Sergeant Dorsey is a 1963 graduate of the local high school and volunteered for the visit. He stated, "In order to have a productive AFRAP Program, there are three major ingredients. First of all the commander must have an aggressive program to motivate his personnel. Second, the AFRAP Representative must have dedicated and professional backing, support and hard work. Third, the unit must come up with new ideas which interest the young people of the local communities. The 1958th Communications Squadron has all these ingredients and the result is this trophy.

The closest competitor for the trophy was 3500th Resource Management Squadron, which amassed 172 points.

In all, 197 lead referral cards were submitted during the last quarter (Oct-Dec). Of these, only three were returned for additional data) incorrect address, under age). This was the best quarter ever experienced

VITA aids taxpayers

Reese is participating in the Volunteer Income Tax Assistance Program. VITA provides assistance to military and other taxpayers when they are preparing their federal income tax

The heart of the VITA program is the "V", the volunteer. Reese's VITA volunteers, also known as Unit Tax Representatives, participated in a two-day training program conducted by the Internal Revenue Service early in January. This training was designed to show unit tax representatives how to help taxpayers prepare the "short form" 1040A, or the "long form" 1040.

Topics presented during the training sessions included itemized deductions, sale of homes, moving expenses, and other subjects that the VITA volunteer would encounter with an ordinary military taxpayer. More specialized tax problems such as a business' tax liability or depreciation of rental property are beyond the scope of VITA and are best referred to a specialized tax preparer or accountant. Nevertheless, the training received by the unit tax representatives prepared them to answer the usual questions a military taxpayer would have about his federal income tax return.

assistance, should collect and organize the financial records he will need to prepare his tax return and obtain whatever income tax forms are appropriate for his return before he sits down to talk with the unit tax represen-

W-2 forms, moving expense records, and receipts for child care expenses are examples of records most taxpayers use when they fill in their income tax return. The VITA volunteer will need to look at these records to give the taxpayer advice about deductions and credits the taxpayer is eligible for.

Tax information must be put on the appropriate federal tax form. Obtaining tax forms is extremely easy for taxpayers to accomplish, as the IRS makes tax forms available through many channels. For example, the IRS mails tax forms to persons who filed a tax return last year. Federal tax forms can be picked-up at United States Post Offices, and the Base Legal Office also has a supply of commonly-used federal tax forms. In addition, taxpayers can order tax forms and instruction books from the IRS by using the order blank contained in the 1040 instruction book, or by calling, tollfree 800-492-4830.

With his financial records and the appropriate tax forms in hand, the taxpayer is ready to talk with the unit tax representative. The VITA volunteer will review the taxpayer's records with him, provide advice and assistance in preparing the tax forms, and research various tax publications to learn the answer to unusual federal tax questions. In the event that the unit tax representative is unable to answer a taxpayer's question, he will make a Legal Assistance appointment for the taxpayer at the Legal Office.

VITA is designed to assist taxpayers prepare their federal income tax returns. Those taxpayers who must file a state income tax return in addition to their federal return should get the appropriate state tax forms and instructions from their state, since the state forms and rules are not available through any of the channels mentioned.

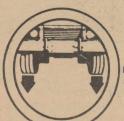

The Legal Office has the names and addresses of the various states' income tax agencies, and will be happy to make these addresses available to taxpayers who request them.

Career advisor gains new administrative aid assistant, SSgt. Clarence Mays, will be more visible around Reese in coming days. A new program to reduce the administrative workload of base career advisors and enhance their visibility and effectiveness as retention counselors has been approved by Air Force personnel officials.

The test program, announced earlier this month by Headquarters, Air Force Manpower and Personnel Center, will be effective Feb. 15.

It involves separating consolidated base personnel office career assistance units into two new functions. Most administrative responsibilities presently held by base career advisors will be transferred to CBPO special actions clerks.

Sergeants Zielinski and Mays will report directly to CBPO chief, Lt. Col. Edward C. Priest, and will place greater emphasis on conducting career planning. They will also expand their counseling role by providing broader, more personalized counselings and briefings.

By John C. Morehead Safety Manager

Christmas is over and gone as are many of the toys received during the festive period. It seems that some of our youth have found another toy which they find amusing. They are playing in, around, and on top of trash dumpsters.

Besides the health hazards associated with playing in dumpsters, the safety of our youth is of concern. Innocent play can be turned into tragedy if a small one is closed inside a dumpster. On several occasions some of our youth have been seen jumping from one dumpster to another while dumpster lids are propped

Dumpsters serve in many ways, our yards are cleaner, there are less flys when lids are kept closed, their size helps on larger items to be disposed of, but folks, those dumpsters are not safe for your kids to play on.

New boss New Accounting and Finance Officer, 2nd Lt. Lonnie Royal, accomplishes one of his more pleasant jobs, counting money. Lieutenant Royal will fill the position until the arrival of Capt. Kurt Brandt, tentatively scheduled for late April. (U.S. Air Force Photo)

New finance officer takes charge Sunday

The keys to the Reese cashbox will change hands Sunday as 2nd Lt. Lonnie G. Royal officially assumes his new job as Accounting and Finance Officer. He is currently deputy in that position and will replace Capt. P.H. Davidson.

Lieutenant Royal ironically came to earth in the Air Force after a number of years "testing" the other services. The Lawton, Okla., native applied for Marine Corps Platoon Leaders Course (the equivalent of the Officer Training School) after completing four years of Army Reserve Officer Training Corps in college.

Only one month after his selection, he was notified of selection to advanced Army ROTC in summer camp at Fort Riley, Kan. After completing the program in 1971, he returned to civilian life and first entered the world of money working for a finance corporation in Oklahoma City.

Discovering after several Force."

similar jobs that the military offered more responsibility and opportunity for advancement, Lieutenant Royal enlisted in the Air Force in 1975 and was an honor graduate from basic training. He attended Accounting and Finance Tech School and was assigned to Offutt AFB, Neb.

In January of 1976, he began attending Cameron University in Lawton under the Bootstrap Program and completed his college education with a bachelors in business management and mathematics. In September of 1979 he was selected for OTS, graduating July 1, 1980 and receiving his orders to Reese.

Lieutenant Royal characterized his unusual military career by saying, "It took me a long time to decide on the Air Force, but it's been worth it. Getting into a position of this nature fulfills one of my lifelong goals. I wouldn't be close to it yet if not for the Air Force."

ROTC lowers age limit

A new public law has raised the age limit for individuals applying for Air Force ROTC scholarships through the Airman Scholarship and Commissioning Program. The law has also enabled some active-duty applicants to apply for Air Force ROTC two-year scholarships as part of the Airman Early Release Commissioning Program.

Previously, to receive the scholarship, applicants had to be able to be commissioned before reaching age 25 on June 30 of the calendar year of commissioning. However, Public Law 96-357 now allows scholarship applicants, who have served on active duty in the armed forces, to exceed the age limit by a period equal to the period served on active duty, but only if the person can be commissioned before reaching age 29 on June 30 of the calendar year of commissioning.

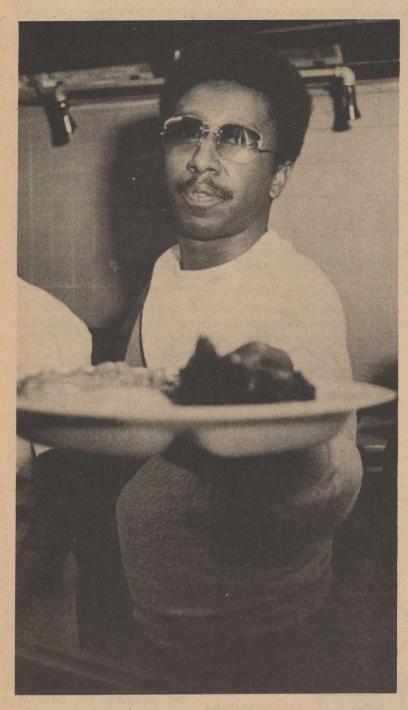

Present or prior military personnel who are pilot or navigator applicants must be able to be commissioned and enter undergraduate flying training before age 27 and-a-half, with an approved waiver.

The Airman Scholarship and Commissioning Program allows airmen to compete for AFROTC four-year college scholarships. If selected, an airman is released from active duty to enter a college or university and enroll in its AFROTC program.

The Airman Early Release Commissioning Program is designed for airmen who will be less than 35 years old when commissioned. Applicants for this program must be able to complete their bachelor's degree requirements within two academic years.

For additional information, concontact the Texas Tech Air Force Detachment 806-742-2143 and ask for Major Barrett or Captain Campbell.

Windmill: A place for us

Free food

SSgt. Willie Plummer dishes up free dinner for those who attend the regularly scheduled membership nights. This January repast featured barbecued spare ribs.

Waxing musical

Moe and Joe's Country Disco Show will be on hand to entertain club members throughout February. The pair are representative of the wide variety of entertainment offered regularly at the Enlisted Open Mess, including soul, country and rock.

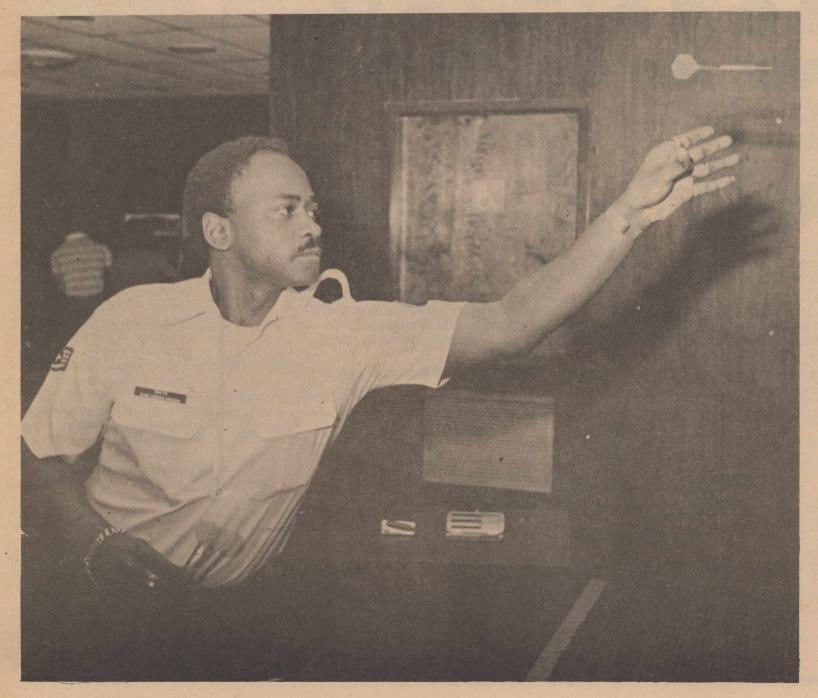

"All night discos, membership dues rebate, higher check cashing limits, draft beer at the bar, and basically just a better class of service and entertainment." These are some of the changes TSgt. Ralph Monger listed in the Windmill Enlisted Open Mess.

Sergeant Monger, the club manager, makes a good point for joining the club. "When you hand me your dues, I give back to you a coupon good for $3 off in the dining room. In addition, membership nights include a free meal. Basically, you can actually save money by joining the club."

The newly renovated club can also look forward to further improvements, according to the manager. Plans are slated to turn a portion of the lounge into an intimate dining room. This would allow better service to patrons on slow nights, plus giving Reese people somewhere to go with a romantic atmosphere.

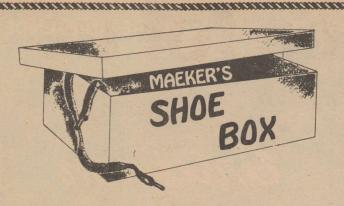

But the advantages to joining the club don't rest on just atmosphere, according to Sergeant Monger. More money savings are in store for members on two-for-one steak nights, free admission to regularly scheduled entertainment such as the discos and an approximate 10 percent discount on lunches.

Sergeant Monger wrapped up his comments by stressing, "This is not an NCO club, it is for all Reese enlisted people. We have a committment to provide service and entertainment that all of our people can afford, but the members are the key. The more members support the club, the more we can do for them."

Le

SSgt. Willie Mays relaxes after work with a game of darts in the club's casual bar. The recreation area also offers pool, pinball and wide-screen TV. Weekend check cashing is also available.

Controller strike could slow military air travel

WASHINGTON (AFNS)-Air travel could be shut down by 70 percent if an air traffic controller strike occurs in March, warns the Command here.

A nationwide strike or other Air Traffic Controllers Organization could reduce the number of cent, according to Federal Aviation Administration officials.

If this happens, air traffic control would be maintained by supervisors, non-participating controllers and other qualified employees.

AFopens office in St. Louis

WASHINGTON (AFNS)-A ninth military stateside-tooverseas gateway opened at Lambert-St. Louis International Airport when Military Traffic Management Command began operating a passenger assistance office there.

The military air traffic coordination unit assists military passengers and their families going to Yokota AB, Japan, and Osan AB, South Korea. Eventually, 63 percent of all Department of Defense passengers going to the Pacific area and Far East will go through St. Louis.

"This is one of the latest efforts being taken by Military Traffic Management Command to extend and improve its military passenger service with the goal of enhancing the quality of life for the military traveler," said Army Maj. Gen. John D. Bruen, MTMC commander.

Assistance includes issuing transportation authorizations and government transportation requests, temporary identification cards and passports, finding lost baggage, arranging, canceling or rescheduling reservations and emergency assistance.

"Our job is to solve any problems relating to military air travel and I urge all service members to take advantage of this service," said General Bruen.

The other gateway airports are at Los Angeles International; San Francisco International: Kennedy International, N.Y.; Seattle-Tacoma International; McChord AFB, Wash.; Travis AFB, Calif.; Charleston AFB, S.C.; and McGuire AFB, N.J.

A flight-priority system would be set up, based on the strike's impact. Getting first priority would be air traffic essential to Military Traffic Management national defense. Following that would be medical emergency flights, long-range flights-500 job actions by the Professional miles or more-and short-range flights-less than 500 miles.

Department of Defenseair traffic controllers by 85 per- sponsored passenger flights would be looked at as priority one. But, before air-travel passengers are booked, installation transportation offices would be asked to reschedule or postpone air travel when possible or divert all but mission-essential or emergency travel to surface transportation.

When DOD air travel is necessary, MTMC asks the following priorities be used:

-Acute emergencies, medical evacuees and emergency leaves.

-Urgent-deadline or essential missions, emergencies and temporary duty.

-Urgent-nature or important missions.

-All other eligibles, family members and non-DOD passengers.

Among the freed Americans arriving at the Air Force hospital here were three Air Force members: Col. Thomas E. Schaefer of Falls Church, Va.; Lt. Col. David M. Roeder of Alexandria, Va.; and Capt. Paul M. Needham of Bellevue, Neb.

The former hostages' freedom flight had taken them from Tehran, Iran, to Algiers, Algeria, where they transferred to two Air Force C-9 Nightingales.

Hood savors 'golden' win

Hood: Golden Masters champ

How sweet it is!

Jack Hood's triumph in the Golden Masters' division of the Texas State Racquetball Championships in Fort Worth last weekend wasn't the first state title for Reese's Morale Welfare and Recreation chief, but; he will savor the sweet taste of that victory for a long time.

Hood's 15-8, 15-12 win over Cid Ruffu not only brought the 57-year-old Pennsylvania the Golden Masters title, but; gave him a satisfying win over the man that had denied Hood the tournament crown two years ago.

"He's a difficult man to play," said Hood about Ruffu's unorthodox playing style.

Hood was able to defeat his old nemisis in straight games by attacking the backhand of the retired Air Force lieutenant col-

Although Hood's championship win brought home the silverware, it was his semi-final match that presented the toughest hurdle.

John Vohories had Hood down 14-12 in the first game before the former Senior Division champ was able to pull the game out, 15-14. Hood took the second game and the match, 15-11.

Hood's Senior title was captured on the same Fort Worth Athletic Club court in 1976. Although he could have played in the Masters Division at age 52, Hood chose to play in the tougher Senior Division (35-45-years-old).
