A NEW ERA FOR TEXAS

There is certainly some gratification and satisfaction to be felt in the fact that Dan Moody will be the next governor of Texas.

Without hesitancy the people of Floyd County placed their confidence in the youthful Attorney General's ability to guide the destinies of the state government at least for the next two years. Their vote of confidence reached a total of 1,627.

Probably of more significance than any other development in the political world was the stamp of defeat placed on "Fergusonism" in the Democratic primary last Saturday.

The story told in actual figures probably means the end of power insofar as Jim Ferguson and Texas politics are concerned. It signifies that the most powerful and most spectacular politician the state has ever known has at last tasted the bitter dregs of the cup of a stinging defeat.

Dan Moody is popular among his co-workers at Austin. He is liked by the newspaper men working at the Capitol, he holds their friendship and respect and to them he is just plain "Dan"—their friend.

Texas has selected Dan Moody and in him they have chosen wisely. A new era is dawning with a new leader. Time will tell.

CULL THE CHICKENS

To many farmers a hen is just a hen; no more, no less. They do not seem to realize the importance of culling their fowls and of the added value of registered birds.

During the month of August the average flock needs to be culled about eleven per cent, poultry authorities say. As a general rule, the first hens in the flock to molt should be sold, and the last to molt should be kept for breeding.

A consistent layer molts late and grows new plumage fast.

STRIVING FOR PERFECTION

In the rush and excitement of election night possibility of error in obtaining results entered at every phase of the work.

The Hesperian has made every effort to give the people complete box returns as correct and complete as possible at the earliest moment. Some of the boxes will not be official until the check is made by the election officials. But everything as seen as carefully tabulated as limited time would allow.

Figures of all things are about the most difficult to get absolutely correct, especially when taken over telephone in a number of instances.

Tabulated box returns run this week are practically correct, although they are not official. Errors will creep in, so do not criticize too harshly if you discover a mistake.

Jumbo Jiggers

Cecil Cope, with the Lockney Beacon, about half-way promised one of the Jigger boys last week that he would pay the city a visit soon. If Cope will let it be known that he is coming, some one will likely bake a cake.

I want to take this means to thank each and everyone who supported me in my candidacy for County Clerk. It has been my pleasure to meet many people and I have endeavored to make friends of all with whom I have met.

AN APPRECIATION FROM MISS ANNA SIMS

The very courteous treatment I had from people in all parts of the county in the first primary race for county clerk, makes it appropriate that I say "Thank you" to each and everyone, both to those who supported my candidacy and those who thought best to support some other candidate. Especially do I thank those friends who actively assisted me in my first race.

Since unofficial returns of the first primary indicate that I will be in the run-off primary August 28th, I take this occasion to ask you again for your vote and influence. It is my plan to see as many voters as I can. If I fail to see you it will be for lack of time. To those voters who do not know me personally I want to ask that they investigate my record as to efficiency and courtesy in serving the public. I have worked for the public sixteen years and believe I am right when I say that those whom I have served longest as teacher, bank clerk or saleslady are the ones who are supporting me most cordially in the belief that I can and will give the taxpayers the kind of an administration of the clerk's office they are entitled to have.

Miss Anna Sims,
Candidate for County Clerk, Floyd County.

TO THE VOTERS OF PRECINCT 1-4 FLOYD COUNTY

I want to thank you for the encouragement and loyal support given me in my campaign for Public Weigher. The result of the Primary was very gratifying and I feel very grateful to you. You have shown confidence in me, and in return I feel it my duty to give you as efficient service as I possibly can.

I also want to thank my good opponent R. C. Covington for the clean and gentlemanly campaign he made. I consider him as a good friend and an honest straight forward gentleman.

Hoping I may be of service to each of you in the future, I thank you all.

MRS. MAUDE MERRICK EXPRESSES HER APPRECIATION TO VOTERS

The very fine vote the taxpayers of Floyd County gave me in the first primary, lacking only 26 votes of being as great as the vote of both of my opponents, according to unofficial returns, makes me feel very keenly the confidence thus expressed, and for which I take this means of expressing heartfelt thanks.

As I will be a candidate in the run-off primary I am seeking your further suffrage on August 28th. I feel that I can fill the office to the satisfaction of the taxpayers; I feel that I am qualified for the place; and I need it.

Any support or help you can consistently give me in the majority primary will be heartily appreciated, and I want you to know that I will do my very best to make you a good officer if you see fit to elect me as your treasurer.

Mrs. Maude Merrick,
Candidate for County Treasurer, Floyd County.

TO THE CITIZENS OF FLOYD COUNTY

I wish to express my thanks for the good support given me in the July Primary, and thank you in advance for any help given me from here out. I will say that if elected Sheriff I will pledge myself to do my best to give the County a fair administration.

I will do my best to be impartial and will try to be efficient and have efficient and courteous help. So if you are interested in helping me win don't forget to vote August 28th.

Sincerely yours,
P. G. Stegall.

A GOOD DRUG STORE

The first essential of good business is courtesy. Courtesy consists of promptness, and friendliness, amid a cleanly attractive atmosphere. The modern life is hurried, the Ideal Store remembers, by responding with prompt and efficient service, making a pause, for a drink, prescription, or shopping; a relaxation. There is music, good pictures, and cozy corners. Such creates confidence, that we receive the best for our money; and that states the other essential a complete stock of standard merchandise, where substitutes are not suggested, such a store is worthy of the slogan, "Got-everything" and is indeed, a Good Drug Store.

Fine Results Obtained In Blanco Club Garden

On Tuesday afternoon of this week the Blanco Club women met at the home of Mrs. D. R. Badgett, their special garden demonstrator, for a community vegetable show. Four ladies of the community took part in the exhibit, showing about twenty different varieties of garden products raised in a spring garden.

Makes Remarkable Report
Mrs. Badgett's individual report was indeed a remarkable one, the judges said. By using the fertilizer it has enabled her to have the earliest garden she has ever had, attributed to the fact that the fertilizer warmed the ground during the cold damp weather in March. Twenty different varieties of products were planted in March and April, carrots and spinach being the new vegetable this year. By May 1 the Badgett family was enjoying the fresh potatoes, peas, beans, beets and by the middle of May, onions.

Perhaps the most amazing thing of the whole experiment is the yield of potatoes, more than five times as much being produced on the fertilized plot as on the unfertilized. Included in Mrs. Badgett's report were these figures: six bushels of onions, 300 cabbage heads, some weighing as much as nine and one-half pounds, 1000 beets many weighing two pounds, 1000 carrots, nineteen gallons of green beans, twenty-five gallons of English Peas, thirty gallons of cucumbers, 10 gallons of black eyed peas, eighty head of lettuce and many of the vegetables such as okra, tomatoes, butter beans, pumpkins and just beginning to bear.

Cans Own Vegetables
To date Mrs. Badgett has canned eight quarts of English Peas, sixteen quarts of krait, eighteen quarts of beet pickles, forty-five quarts of cucumbers and has supplied her neighbors with fresh vegetables.

In addition to her work in the garden, Mrs. Badgett has 400 chickens, 300 being raised this year. At the same time she has sold $240.21 worth of eggs, $64.00 worth of hens and $40.00 worth of cream.

Mrs. Badgett's garden while considered one of the best was not the only one in the county for an unusual amount of interest is being created in the State Garden Contest sponsored by Miss Bass, County Home Demonstration Agent. In each community where there is a woman club there is special Garden Demonstrator who has made an interesting experiment with the Nitrate of Soda fertilizer. Each woman has one-half acre in her garden and this was divided into two equal parts.

On one plot twenty-five pounds of the fertilizer was used, the other being unfertilized. Each plot was prepared exactly alike, planted with the same vegetables, each one given as much water and worked as the other. "In other words it was purely a new experiment," Miss Bass said to see how the soil of Floyd County reacts to this commercial fertilizer. This fertilizer with instructions on how to use was sent free to each of these demonstrators.

In order to create more interest in the garden project it was planned in the beginning to have two special meetings, one in the spring and one in the fall, at which time the club ladies might see the demonstration garden and also have a community vegetable show. Each woman bringing to this meeting as many varieties of vegetables as she has in her garden. Spring gardens here will compare favorably with any in the state, according to Miss Bass.

EITHER OF THREE THINGS WILL HAPPEN

Before a man of 35 now reaches the age of 65, one of three things for certain will happen:

1. He will be a disabled man; or,
2. He will die; or,
3. He will be an old man.

What then, with these three facts before you, are you doing to offset them? If you become disabled within the next 24 hours, or even within the next year, how are you fixed financially?

If you should die tomorrow, or die next year, how about the future for your wife and children?

If you live to be an old man, will your savings be sufficient to tide you and your family over?

KINDNESS

So many people need it; so many people yearn for it.

The habit of kindness will drive the habit of anger out of the soul, if it is only given a chance.

Kindness costs nothing; is not hard to obtain, and yet it is a "scarce article."

Cultivate the doing of all possible kindnesses, and the result will be a kindly attitude of mind.

No matter how tiresome the task; no matter how burdened through toil, kindness rests the soul, makes the mind work better and softens the soul.

This is the only plan to overcome evil, and is a positive cure for "blues," "grouchiness" and "anger." Try the plan out.

Mrs. S. Y. Carter and children, of Abilene, are visiting friends and relatives here this week.

MUSIC OF AMERICAN INDIAN. CRUDE AND PRIMITIVE, BUT IT HAS AN UNUSUAL CHARM

While the music of the American Indian is not, as often suggested, a part of American folklore music, it is nevertheless the oldest form of musical expression known in America.

Existing before the coming of the white race, it was crude and primitive and barbaric when first heard and crude and primitive it has remained, in spite of the influences of the Jesuit missionaries and the secular forces of civilization.

But the charm of Indian music surpasses its musical content, and has long challenged the greatest composers to the harmonizing of its thin, sweet melodies and insistent rhythms. Edward MacDowell, greatest of American composers, based his "From an Indian Lodge" on an original Indian theme.

Thurlow Liencrance, who has lived among the Indians and has been formally adopted into a tribe and given an Indian name, has contributed many rare and interesting songs based on legendary and actual music of the red man. Each song is carefully annotated and the music seems entirely logical to the experience.

Charles Wakefield Cadman has composed much music in the Indian "mood." Frankly measuring the reactions of this vanishing race to the familiar emotions of the usurper, Cadman succeeds in expressing a delicacy of sentiment and heroic strains with unflinching emphasis and charm. But Cadman's music is, nevertheless, Indian music translated from the Indian as he is into the Indian he is believed to be.

Music of Worship.
For the Indian music differs from all other music in that it is essentially music of worship, save in the instances of mourning or love-making, and the fiery urge to make war against an enemy.

The Indian worships nature, every phase of which, to his mind, represents a manifestation of "the Great Spirit." The first Indian whose chance blow against the hollow trunk of a tree believed that the "voice of the forest" spoke to him as an entity, a soul malignant or beneficent. And he worshipped that voice and endeavored to reproduce it in his rituals.

The first drums were made of hollow logs, covered with the skin of a wild animal, and beaten with a club padded with skin. Other forms of the drum were the skulls of enemies, with the tops cut off and replaced by membranes of animals. On this he made horrible, but satisfactory music to his victorious ears.

Likewise the Indian who listened long to "the voice of the rain" strove to conciliate this force of nature necessary to the growing of crops and preservation of the lives of his people by making rattles of dried turtle shells, strapped together over dried beans, or the claws of animals.

"The voice of the feathered spirits," represented in the songs of birds, was reproduced by the means of flutes, the first being two pieces of rounded cedar fastened together to form a tube and blown in at one end. Thurlow Liencrance has made a collection of Indian flutes which will be preserved by the Nation. Many of them are made of cunningly wrought woods, and from stone, laboriously bored out and carved in intricate patterns.

"The voice of the wind" is fittingly represented in the shrill or deep-toned chanting of men and women, while to the silent deities, the sun, moon and stars, the Indian has dedicated ritualistic chants at once impressive and awe-inspiring.

The Navajo Indians have passed down through the ages a series of invocations to the rising sun which possess dignity and exquisite tonal value. These have been carefully collected, and Charles Wakefield Cadman is now arranging them in form for solo, chorus and orchestra.

Visit to Snow Deer.
While at Taos last summer the writer paid a visit to Snow Deer, a famous Indian artist, whose paintings are being eagerly collected by connoisseurs from all parts of the country, in search of a drum which possessed a "history" and Snow Deer promised to procure it.

A fragment of an Indian song recently heard sung at an Indian fair in Santa Fe was thoughtlessly hummed. Picking up a small drum, made of a discarded cheese box, over which a skin was stretched, with thongs of leather serving as "hand holds," Snow Deer said:

"That is a most sacred song, but sometimes men of other tribes sing it as a drinking song in derision of those who use it only in the kiva!"

(The "kiva" is a sacred house of the Indians, dug deep into the earth like an inverted cone and entered only by means of a long ladder.)

Snow Deer, tapping the drum lightly with his fingers, then sang under his breath a song in quick rhythm with words which sounded as follows:

"Hi yo, wit se nah O
Hi O wit se nah O
Hi O O O O
Hay ne hi ne nah!"

Inside the tiny pueblo the eyes of the watchful Indians gleamed like agates. From the low opening, out across the valley, through which a creek runs at mad pace to the four-storied pueblo where many Taos families live like bees in a honeycomb, on the flat roof a slender Taos woman, wrapped like an Egyptian in a long black shawl, stood motionless, silhouetted against a crimson sky.

Express Emotions.
The Indian song depends largely upon pitch for its understanding. In the "love calls" the pitch is slightly flattened to express emotional excess. In the "war songs" the music is sharpened as the song and dance take on intensity, until it finally becomes a series of "yips" or animal-like cries, which are indescribable.

Watching the Indians perform the Apache war dance (forbidden except in exceptional instances) and hearing the wild, fierce syllables rising to falsetto, one feels his hair rising involuntarily from the scalp and suffers a sort of vicarious scalping in sensing the morbid emotions of the forefathers to whom the music came not as a diversion, but a foreboding.

The Indian almost never sings without dancing, and never before spectators. That the Indian mother sings her lullabies and that the lover plays his plaintive "love calls" on a flute we know from accurate account. But even the songs of mourning, sung by the women alone, are slow, veiled accents accompanied to a dismal series of movements or steps.

When a dance is about to begin in the street of an Indian village the signal is given from the kiva by raising a pole on which is hung feathers, skins of animals and sacred emblems of the tribe. The musicians carrying the drums come first, and take their positions. Then the warriors, with the women of the tribe (each woman walks two paces in the rear of the men) march in orderly procession to the beating of the drums. Beginning with a deep, guttural note, endlessly repeated and very resonant, the song is taken up by one drummer and then by others, until the selected chorus fires the dancers into movements which quicken into frenzied pounding on the earth with the bare feet and the rattling of turtle shells tied under the knee joint.

Perhaps hearing the drum beats from an Indian village during the progress of an Indian dance, which begins early in the morning and ends at sunset, often find their nerves becoming rasped and frayed with the insistent rhythm until they literally fly from the sound of the music. This reaction is quite involuntary, but so well known that Eugene O'Neill employs it with terrible effect in his play, "Emperor Jones." The association of drum beats and heart beats can not be explained except in terms of race consciousness, dating back to a time when man lived in physical terror of his life.

Picture Writing.
The effort of the Indian to preserve his life story in the form of "picture writing" obtains in music as in other ceremonies and experiences. But it can not be overlooked that the songs thus preserved are practically all "pleasure songs," which deal with a love theme. This theme may inspire the singer merely to express his adoration of a given subject, or again to perform heroic combat in order to win the object of affection.

Such a song has been selected as an illustration to Henry R. Schoolcraft's "Information Respecting the History, Conditions and Prospects of the Indian Tribes of the United States." The characters include the form of the singer and depict him beating the magic drum: seated in the secret lodge; winning the hand of his beloved; separated from her by water between the island on which she stands and his abode; his magic power reaching her heart while she sleeps, and his naked heart surrounded by an island of love.

A song of combat is represented by four symbols, first, the sun, source of light and knowledge and indicative of vigilance; second, the warrior pointing to the heavens and the earth, signifying power and dauntless prowess; third, hidden behind the moon, symbolic of secrecy and craft, and, fourth, the warrior, personifying Venus, called the Eastern Woman or Evening Star, who is his guide and a witness to his heroic deeds.

HOME, EVEN WITH DRAWBACKS, MORE TO BE PREFERRED THAN PLACE IN WORLD OF BUSINESS

(Mamie Folsom Wynne, in The Dallas News.)

The "monotony of married life" is the plea on which many wives base their determination to take a fling in the business world. There, they feel certain, is where thrills are forthcoming.

Such a woman may not need the money she commands for her services. She obtains work, not because she needs it or is particularly fitted for it, but because she enlists the influence of those able to help her. And sometimes others who need the work more are displaced in her favor.

The wife who frankly admits that she wants a change from the humdrum reality of married life confesses that the rose-leaf of romance has crumpled and that the privilege of making a home for the man who loves her brings no thrill but only dull dissatisfaction.

Sometimes wives who are also mothers make the same decision. One young matron admits disillusionment: "I was terribly romantic and madly in love with my husband when we married. Our baby came the first year. He is now old enough to attend school. Our house is small and easily kept."

"My husband is away from home all day, and sometimes works at night. He is tired and indifferent to the house when he comes home and never wants to go out. I have no social graces, for I was a business girl before I married. I want a job. If I can't get my old job back, I'll get a new one. I want the thrill of feeling that I am a part of a big business, with a nice pay check coming in. I feel stifled by the four walls of home. So I'm going back to work."

She will doubtless get the coveted job for she has fine qualifications and years of experience. But she can not find someone to exchange places with, for no one can take her place in her own home as wife and mother.

Someone will become the paid caretaker of the house and the child, or she will impose on her nearest of kin to look after the little boy. He will grow up without the intimate contact of his mother. The home will get the cold, forlorn, neglected look that many such houses wear.

And perhaps her husband will grow even more indifferent, feeling, as he surely will, the sense of defeat which comes with the knowledge that he failed to make his wife in her home surroundings.

But she will have exchanged the "monotony" of home-life for the monotonous round of office and shop. Instead of being the boss of the entire works, she will have one or several giving orders to her. Business rules are often harsh and inelastic. Ask even the most successful business woman if this is not true.

Romance must be fed on sentiment to keep it fresh and glowing. Newlyweds often talk themselves out in the first months or years of married life, leaving no hidden reserves to pique and attract interest.

When all the mysteries are revealed and all the phases of personality tabulated, then husbands and wives face boredom with each other and themselves. They yawn, they look about, and seek a new thrill. But the woman who sees life aright finds her greatest thrill in her own home.

DIDN'T 'TRIM' THE INDIANS

Peter Minuit Swindled When He Paid $25 for Manhattan, is Charge.

From the New York Herald-Tribune.

Poor Peter Minuit was swindled by the Indians when he paid sixty guilders, or $24 for Manhattan Island in 1626, said Tunis Bergen, former president of the Holland society, at a recent celebration of the three hundredth anniversary of this purchase, staged by the Greenwich Village Historical Society.

Far from being a great real estate bargain, the purchase of Manhattan Island, according to Mr. Bergen, was just a "gesture" on the part of Holland to acknowledge that the Indians had prior claims on the land.

"There is too much jesting about the purchase of Manhattan Island," Mr. Bergen said. "This $24 Minuit paid the Indians was really much more than the island was worth."

Mr. Bergen said that $24 in 1626 was equivalent to $2,000 today. He said that the 20,000 acre tract included in the sale was a barren waste, unutilizable and full of stagnant ponds.

"The Indians," he said, "were paid in metal knives they had never seen before, in beads and wampum which they could use. No, that was no great bargain for Minuit. Five cents an acre would have been generous."

Judge James P. Davenport, chief clerk of the grierster's office, hall of records, was another to insist that the transaction was unsavory.

"The Indians who sold Manhattan Island to Peter Minuit," he said, "had no title to the land. They were a small tribe of about 150, and they had their wigwams where the city hall is located today. How did they have clear title to all of Manhattan?"

Dr. Neil Van Aken's attitude was that, swindle or no swindle, New York "is mighty prosperous today." He said that first exports from New Amsterdam consisted of 853 other skins, eighty-one skins, thirty-six cat skins and thirty-four rat skins. The actual value of Manhattan today he placed at 17,000 million dollars.

The French can claim the distinction of having the shortest surname in the world. It is "O," and is quite common in Paris. A Madame Theresa O was for many years the proprietress of a Parisian cafe. "O" is also the name of a village in Normandy, and the chateau is occupied by the Marquis O! Next shortest surname is Irish. "Ek;" this is also found in Sweden. An explorer, well known in his day, was named John Ek, and one of his descendants, named Eda Ek, could probably claim that she had the shortest name in the world.

Of towns with short names there are "A" in Sweden and "U" in the Chinese Province of Honan. There is also, in another province, a village with the name, of "Y." In Europe there are several rivers named "Aa," but the palm, geographically, must be given to "Y," a small bay in the Zuyder Zee.

In England there are many three-letter names, but in the church-yard round a ruined Dorset church there are gravestones erected in memory of several members of a family named "It." This name was either changed or the family has died out, for none hear it today.

REALLY AREN'T YOU A BIT NERVOUS?

You are down town on business or shopping, you aren't quite sure whether you left the stove shut off or open, and the fire siren sounds. You'd be nervous if you had insurance but you'd perhaps be more so if your all was tied up in that home and you had no protection from fire loss.

You may think you'll take the risk—others have—and some had had no losses—but the best argument is that the cautious business man does not take his own risk—he makes some good company responsible.

If your home or business isn't insured against fire we'll be glad to talk over the matter with you—or if you need additional insurance we'll be glad to advise with you.

WITH THE CHURCHES

THE FIRST CHRISTIAN CHURCH

Frank LeRoy Davis, Pastor
We had a great prayer meeting last Wednesday night. The attendance was the largest since we came here. When the invitation was extended there were three came forward and confessed their faith in Christ and two of them were baptised the same hour of the night. In all we baptised five that night, and will have several to baptize this week at prayer meeting.

Let's make the prayer meetings more interesting until all will feel that if they miss they have been hurt and there is that much of the spiritual life has been robbed.

Next Lord's day the S. S. will begin at 9:45 and preaching at 10:30 the subject of the morning sermon will be: "No Place to Stand." The Endeavor will meet at 7:30 and Miss Ethna Green is the leader. "Wise and Unwise decisions" will be the topic. Preaching at 8:15 and the subject will be: "Life's Decisions."

Owing to the rain last Lord's Day night the Juniors did not meet to organize the society. They will meet next Sunday at 6:30, and effect an organization of the children between the ages of 7 and 12. Be sure to come on time children.

The roads and weather permitting we will preach at Mayview right after S. S. next Sunday afternoon. Those around there are invited to be present and enjoy the services with us.

Remember there is a standing invitation to the public in general to attend any and all of the services at the little church with a big welcome.

Young People Meet

The young people will meet Friday August 6 at 6 o'clock at the court house lawn where cars will be waiting to take them to the canyon, for a program and supper. Come early and be sure to have your memory verse as we will continue the counting and memory verses. For those that refuse to serve on the program two points will be taken from their side. Be sure and respond when asked to serve on the program.

After the following program supper will be served:
Leader—Lee Wilkinson.
Scripture—Short talk by leader.
Song—"Wonderful Words."
Reading—Sudie Miller.
Quartette.
Story Hour—Continued story. First installment by Roy Baker—Last installment—Geraldine Massie.
Original Story—Dan Jenkins.
Ukelele Music.

The following Committees have been appointed by the President to arrange for the next meeting:
Theatre Committee, Chairman, Ted Borum, Hazel Massie, and Geraldine Massie.
Entertainment Committee (for two weeks only), Thyra Eubank, Mrs. J. B. Bartley.
Program Committee, Inez Paschall, Ethna Green, Roma Swain.
Transportation Committee, Jeff Welborn, Lee Wilkinson, Loraine Britton, Lucille Meachum, Dessie Walker, Ruth Jenkins, and Belva Solomon.

Sand Hill Club

The Sand Hill Home Demonstration Club met last Wednesday, July 21 in the home of Mrs. W. E. Miller, we were to have met with Mrs. J. T. McLain, but Miss Bass thought this the proper time to put on the garden or vegetable show. Mrs. Miller being the contestant in the garden contest we thought there would be the proper place to meet. There were twelve club members present and several visitors.

Miss Bass with the aid of the women arranged the vegetables in a very attractive way and the pictures were made. Mrs. Miller's products were first arranged and picture made; then the products brought by other women were added. We had altogether forty three varieties, all vegetable products. Mrs. Miller surely does grow a variety of garden, and the fertilizer has proven to be a wonderful help in producing more and better quality vegetables.

After the show a business meeting was held, roll call was answered with a good suggestion to help in the fair; we are beginning to work now making and planning for our club exhibit and to help in the community booth also. We are proud to say we are sending out resident to the short course, the contestant and presidents from various clubs will leave about Saturday or Sunday. We know that Mrs. Hanna will enjoy the trip and we will enjoy seeing and hearing her when she returns. We won't have any meeting the first Wednesday in August but want everybody to come the third Wednesday in August. Miss Bass urged us to have one good lively meeting while she is on her vacation. The fair will be near at hand by that time, and we want to all work and do our best to help win some of those prizes.

We will meet with Mrs. Frank Probasco August 18, and the subject laid down in the book is "Ethics"; but very likely we will talk fair more than anything else. Everybody come, let us know what you want to do to help us.

Pleasant Valley Club

The Pleasant Valley Club met with Mrs. W. C. Hubbard July 23. There was only one absent at the roll call. There were many visitors, and we are glad to say that the number of members is growing rapidly.

Everyone enjoyed the demonstration on "Ices and Beverages," probably even more because the various dishes were served.

The next meeting, which will be a special, will be at the home of Mrs. Ferguson Thursday July 29. The president will demonstrate along the line of fancy packs for pickles. This will be of great help to those preparing pickles for the fair.

Our club has organized just recently. Demonstrations along the line of things for the fair must be made as soon as possible, so the members may be at work. Most of the members chose their work for the fair, and began soon afterwards to meet the requirements.

Don't forget the date for the special meeting, and be on hand to learn more about canning.

LAUGH THEM AWAY

Maybe you're not going to get away to the cooling watering places or up into the mountains where the blankets feel good at night. Maybe you are going to stay right here all the summer. You have been a bit covetous of the chap who is whetting his knife for a trout fishing in the hills or the neighbor who has been building a camping outfit for his motor trip in Canada.

Why? Why should those of us who are going to stay here every day this summer be losing our nerve by coveting the other fellow's lot? He can't be a whit happier at the beach than you can at home—not a bit. He'll laugh there—you laugh here. He'll whistle to the birds in the swaying trees of some distant forest—we'll whistle to the birds in our own backyard.

And he'll come home with boasting pride about his sunbun, etc.—and we will show him some good tanned muscles from the same kindly sun. If the blues get after you this summer while the rest of the folks are away, just laugh and whistle and make them all sorry they missed what you enjoyed while they were chasing their beautiful rainbows far, far away.

Instead of standing around the soda fountains grumbling about the hot sunshine, we should all be truly thankful that we have had such wonderful weather for cotton and corn during the month of June. The farmers have been praying for this weather they stay up at night to see how much the cotton has grown when daylight comes. This is a wonderfully fortunate tonic for farmers who have striven so faithfully this year to make a crop and help get our business back to a high level by fall.

Let's quit grumbling about the weather and join with our farmer brethren in real optimism over the bright prospects for a big yield of money crops this year.—Atlanta City Builder.

CARD OF THANKS

Heartfelt thankfulness for the good friends who so generously aided us during the illness and death of our wife and mother, prompts us to use this means of expressing our appreciation to the many friends and neighbors for their untiring kindness, help and sympathy.

Club Women Preparing Community Exhibitions

The Floyd County Fair is not only attracting attention among the men who are preparing the community exhibits, but every woman in the county who is a member of a Home Demonstration club is doing some individual work, according to Miss Bass, who states that she has never seen so much interest and real work on any one phase of club work as there is in the Fair.

The State Garden contest is expected to be a great help to the Fair as many of the products displayed will be entered in the individual and community exhibits.

It is believed that the Girls' Department will create equally as much interest since the first prize is a trip to the Dallas Fair. This premium will go to the girl who makes the best display of her own work such as sewing, cooking and canning.

GRIFFIN, CLEMENTS WIN DISTRICT RACES

Meade F. Griffin, of Hale County, with a majority of 358 votes, was the nominee for district attorney for the 64th judicial district, unofficial returns show. W. E. Huffhines, city, was second in the race.

J. G. Clements, of Plainview, has defeated Judge R. C. Joiner in the fight for the office of district judge. Early returns indicated a close race but Clements' lead was gradually increased with each succeeding report until his election seems assured.

The result of the races in Floyd County were as follows: Griffin 1,083 and Huffhines 777; Clements, 1,528 and Joiner, 1061. Practically every box in the district has been heard from.

Returns from all Floyd County boxes were not reported until late Tuesday. Fairmont was received Sunday and Sunset Tuesday, the delay having been caused by the impossibility of obtaining telephone connections with the election judges at those boxes.

SENSIBLE FOREST TAXATION

The next Oregon legislature will consider a bill exempting young, growing timber from annual taxation until it reaches the crop-harvest stage; the yield then is taxed as a product. Under the Coast climate conditions, a crop of timber may mature in from 40 to 80 years; for some purposes there would be considerable yield in thinning, in from 20 to 40 years. Most of the nation's timberland is in private hands. Private growers must grow the forests of the future, if they are to be grown at all. Manifestly, they are few who are able, or willing, to pay annual taxes on forest lands that will produce no crop for almost a century, a tax exemption must be made as a protection for the future, and for even the present, in saving watersheds and shade and health by means of trees. A good forest-tax law will be national boon.

Scientists have found that Marathon runners and other athletes who eat sugar and candy before exertion come through their races in better physical condition than those who run "unsweetened."

TEXAS DEMOCRACY'S NOMINEE FOR GOVERNOR ROSE THROUGH YOUTH OF TOIL TO HONORS

Dan Moody, the only son of Daniel J. and Nannie Robertson Moody, was born at Taylor, Williamson County, Texas, June 1, 1893. The father was a native of Kentucky, who came from Missouri to Texas, and located at Taylor in 1876. The mother, whose maiden name was Nannie Robertson, was a native of Tennessee.

She was a teacher by profession, and in 1886 engaged to teach in the Taylor high school where she continued teaching until her marriage March 27, 1890. Daniel J. Moody, soon after locating at Taylor, was elected justice of the peace, in which office he served many years; he was the first mayor of the town, and also engaged in the business of insurance and mercantile pursuits.

Parents Were Religious

Both parents were possessed of deep religious conviction, the father being a member of the Baptist church and the mother a Methodist. The father of the elder Moody was a pioneer Baptist preacher of Northern Missouri, and the father of Mrs. Moody, the mother of Dan, was a pioneer Methodist preacher of Tennessee. Dan, like his father, adheres to the Baptist faith, while his only sister, Miss Mary Moody, like their mother, is a member of the Methodist church. While Dan Moody is a member of the Baptist church, he has for nearly a year been a Bible school teacher of a mixed class of young men and women in the University Methodist Church at Austin.

He graduated from the Taylor High School at the age of fourteen, and in 1910 he entered the University of Texas, where he pursued his academic and law studies for the next four years. He began the practice of law at Taylor, in 1914; was elected county attorney of Williamson County in 1920; was appointed district attorney of the judicial district composed of Williamson and Travis counties by Governor Neff in 1922, before the expiration of his term as county attorney; was elected district attorney in 1922, and in 1924 was elected Attorney General of Texas.

Married At Abilene

Dan Moody was married to Miss Mildred Paxton of Abilene, Texas, April 20, 1926. She is the daughter of a pioneer Texas family, and was educated at Simmons College, Abilene, the University of Texas and Columbia University.

His father died when he was 15 years of age. The elder Moody had met financial reverses in connection with a partnership in a mercantile business and had sacrificed all his property to meet the firm's debts. In 1909 Dan Moody held a job as lineman and was initiated as a member of the Electrical Workers Union that year.

With money saved from his daily toil, he went to the University. When war was declared in April 1917, Moody volunteered for duty in the air service of the United States Army, but was rejected on account of physical requirements. His mother being an invalid and confined to her bed, he was placed on the deferred service list; but notwithstanding this, he enlisted in the Texas National Guard and was made second lieutenant in a Taylor company.

He resigned as second lieutenant and got the deferred service list removed, through the influence of Senators Culberson and Sheppard, and volunteered as a private in the United States Army, was sent to Camp Polk, at Little Rock, Arkansas, training camp for service, where he was at the close of the war.

He fully prosecuted the American Road Company road contract case and similar road cases. Circumstances growing out of those cases led to a widespread public demand that he become a candidate for Governor.

He is a thirty-second degree Mason, a Knight Templar, Shriner, Odd Fellow, Knight of Pythias and Woodman. The mother of Moody died in December, 1924.

TEXAS FARM BUREAU PLANNING SWEETWATER MEET AUGUST 12

The Texas Farm Bureau is planning to make the regional convener of that organization in Sweetwater August 12-13 a memorable one, and citizens of Sweetwater are preparing a royal welcome to all who attend, according to the Sweetwater Reporter.

Among the many items of exceptional interest that is to feature the program is an address by Walton Petzet, Washington, D. C., and well known in Texas as one of the leading authorities in Co-operative Marketing in the United States. A big parade the first day, with dinner for everybody at six o'clock has been planned.

From advance information there will be large crowds of Farm Bureau men and their families from thirty counties adjacent to Sweetwater. Camp grounds have been prepared, and arrangements completed for taking care of the crowds expected.

Several Bureau members will very likely attend from Floyd County.

MAKING PAPER WEIGHTS BUSIES FORMER KAISER.

The following account of the latest pastime of the former Kaiser appeared in a record issue of the Berlin Liberal weekly Di Welt am Montag:

"It is not true that the lord of the castle in Doorn occupies himself mainly in felling trees. The trees are cut down by wood choppers and the former monarch picks out some not too tough pieces of wood out of which to make paperweights, which he polishes and lacquers with his own hands. As is well known, in the old days every Prussian prince had to learn some trade, and the then Prince Wilhelm chose cabinet-making. Now the knowledge of this trade furnishes him with satisfying pastime.

"Every paperweight carries the 'W.' with the crown, and also a serial number. A foreign journalist stopping in Holland obtained one of these paperweights, numbered 15,000. In amazement he asked if Wilhelm II. really had turned out as many pieces as that. He was informed that the ex-Kaiser had a craze for numbers, which expressed itself through the use of big figures."

Road Commission Sets New Acceptance Rules

A minimum width of right of way of 80 feet with a maximum of 100 feet and over is one of the new requirements to govern the acceptance of all roads to be designated by the State Highway commission in their session being held in Austin at the present. Special instructions were sent to division engineers relative to carrying out the new regulations in Floyd and adjoining counties.

Special effort on the part of the County Commissioners Court, Chamber of Commerce and individuals to secure the designation of an extension of Highway No. 88 from Clarendon to Big Springs by the way of Floydada has not yet been heard from. Several designations have been made but to date this one has not been accepted.

Five requirements were enumerated in the resolutions passed by the commission and are as follows:

1. Location and a traffic count shall be made under the direction of the division engineer at the expense of the county along the shortest and most feasible route, eliminating all short turns and undesirable locations.

2. The division engineer shall make recommendations and provide a special route map.

3. Counties shall provide an eighty-foot right of way except where further improvements may require heavy fills, in which case the right of way shall be not less than 100 feet or more if necessary.

4. The road shall be graded sufficiently before acceptance so as to be reasonably maintained with machinery.

5. The designation must be properly bridged with a roadway width of not less than twenty feet on all bridges and twenty four feet on all culverts.

LOW-GRADE COTTON DEMAND ON INCREASE

An increasing demand for low grade American cotton, according to a report of the United States Department of Agriculture, is one of the outstanding developments in the cotton market situation with reference to the carryover of last season. Due largely to the climatic conditions prevailing last year much of the cotton produced was of an extremely low grade and constituted a large percentage of the large carryover of the 1925 crop.

Reports indicate that low grade cottons are going into many constructions of fabrics in which finishing qualities are not important. It appears also that there has been some blending of these low grades which were accumulated by manufacturers earlier in the season.

As a result of this activity and the fact that Northern and Southern spinners have ascertained through mill tests the extent to which low grades of cotton might be substituted for cotton of a higher quality, a native demand for low grade cotton has developed. One of the features of this development is the fact that owing to the large amount of waste of low grade cotton a greater consumption as measure in running bales results in proportion to the amount of yarn or fabric manufactured.

CAUSE ENOUGH

A camel has its limit of endurance as the old saw concerning the ultimate straw and the broken back will testify. Mrs. North also had her limit, which was finally reached when an argument, about which little could be understood, continued with unabated fury for two hours in the Smith household next door.

Calling to Willie Smith, who was playing in the back yard, Mrs. North asked the seven-year-old shining light of the warring Smiths:

"What is all the row about? Willie?"

"Oh, mamma put her cushion on daddy's chair and he sat down on it," replied the small lad.

"Why, that is no cause for such an argument, is it?"

"Sure it is! It was mamma's pin cushion!"

HORSES AN EXPENSIVE LABOR ITEM ON FARM

Increased emphasis placed on the reduction in cost of production as a means of adding to the profit of farming has brought the cost of horse labor under rigid investigation. In a recent experiment in Weld County, Colorado, it was found that the cost of horse labor differed widely, varying from 12c to 26c on the two farms which were considered typical of the twenty-five investigated.

In the first experiment the farm contained 325 acres and thirteen horses were required to do the labor. Each horse averaged 1,696 hours' work during the year, which was an equivalent of 170 days of ten hours each. The average of horse labor for this farm was 12c per hour. On another farm 120 acres six horses were maintained which worked a total of thirty-eight days of ten hours each during the year. The average cost was 26c per hour.

One reason which may be given for this wide variation in cost will be found in the average number of hours, which each horse was employed. Since horses must be fed even though they work but a fraction of each year, it follows that in order to cut down the cost of maintenance as much as possible they must be employed as many hours as possible. Possible economies which might be practiced include an increase of operations wherein the animal may be used to profit and the reduction of feed cost by utilization of waste lands as pasture and the use of stubble fields for grazing.

In cases wherein extra horses are kept on the farm in order to meet the peak loads of labor which occur at one or more periods during the year, tractor power may be used to advantage.

WHAT DALLAS CONSUMES AND WHERE THEY GET IT

Who feeds Dallas and where does the food come from? According to W. D. Goage of the Bureau of Agricultural Economics, United States Department of Agriculture, twenty-nine States and several foreign countries are required to fill the needs of the Dallas fruit and vegetable market. A total of 6,268 carloads arrived during last year, of which 4,816 were unloaded, which is an increase of 14.4 per cent over the number unloaded in 1924.

Of the twenty-nine States which helped satisfy Dallas' vegetable and fruit taste, 1,283 were loaded in California, or 600 more than those originating in Texas and unloaded at Dallas. Cantaloupes, grapes, lettuce, oranges, tomatoes, celery, lemons, onions, potatoes, and mixed vegetables make up the menu which the Golden State served Miss Dallas.

While California carried off allround honors from the supply standpoint, Texas came down the home stretch a winner in string beans, cabbage, carrots, grapefruit, peanuts, peaches, pears, tomatoes and spinach. In watermelons Texas made an impressive showing, scoring a total of 187 carloads, against a single founding which wandered in from Georgia.

With reference to other vegetables and the leading State from which they came, Washington led in apples, California in cantaloupes, Massachusetts in cranberries, California in grapes lemons, lettuce, onions and oranges; Louisiana in peppers, California in plums, Louisiana in sweet potatoes, California in celery, Idaho in potatoes, Arkansas in strawberries, Minnesota in turnips and rutabagas, California in mixed citrus and mixed fruits and Colorado in mixed vegetables.

SPOILING THE BABY!

Thousands of babies are being spoiled every day. Not by letting them have their own way, but by not letting them have their own faces. When you see someone with "stick-out" ears or a receding chin you may be almost certain the disfigurement was brought about during babyhood.

For some months a baby's bones are nothing but solid gristle, and very susceptible to the slightest pressure. The two chief factors in developing bone growth—it is assumed that baby is being properly fed—are sunshine and fresh air. Look at the next dozen babies you meet. In all probability half of them will have their chins swathed up. A case of good intentions—the cold air must be kept away from the little one's throat—but bad results, for it is this quite unnecessary swathing that causes receding chins.

A baby's chin should be left open to the sun and air as the rest of its face. If you deprive one leaf of a plant of sunshine it would be much smaller than the rest, and would take the position forced on it by whatever material you used to keep the sun away. That explains what happens to a baby's swathed and sun-deprived chin.

"Stick-out" ears are often caused because mothers do not make a point of seeing that a little one, when lying in its cot or pram, is not pressing the back of the ear forward. Sometimes a restless child will move and get an ear quite doubled up. So soft, are the bones that it doesn't take long for a "stick-out" ear to develop. In nursing, too, baby's ear must be kept flat. And, of course, bonnet ribbons must not pull the ears forward.

It costs the states of the Union twice as much for education in 1923 as in 1918.

Germany has more than four million goats; goat cheese being a favorite dish there.

Local Interests Warned Of Cotton Flea Danger

Government Report Gives Description of Insects And Suggests Method of Riddance

Warnings to local cotton men against the threatened danger to the 1926 crop by the fleas that are making inroads on fields in East Texas have been sent out by the latest Government Bulletins. A. V. Haynes, one of the county authorities on cotton production, said in turning in a detailed description of the pests that gin men here would likely investigate the situation in the county at once. Crosby and Dickens counties are infested with the insects press articles say. The report, which was said to have been sent out in the bulletin reads:

"During the past few weeks, there has been a totally unexpected and unprecedented spread of damage to the cotton crop caused by what is known as the 'cotton hopper,' or the 'cotton flea.'"

The cotton hopper was first noted damaging cotton a number of years ago in a few Gulf Coast counties of Texas.

Injure Small Buds
"The hoppers, both adults and nymphs, feed principally in the buds and growing tips of the branches. The injury is to the squares when they are very small. As a result, the tiny squares die, turn a brown or blackish color and sooner or later drop from the plant leaving distinct scars.

These blasted squares though small and often very minute are easily visible to the naked eye and anyone who will take the pains to inspect the cotton when the squares are being developed and watch for this kind of injury should be able to detect the presence of the hopper in time to use control measures.

"The hopper is a very small insect, usually greenish in color, but sometimes rather yellowish but easily seen with the naked eye. When present in large numbers in a cotton field, the adults will readily appear like small white gnats darting among the plants whenever they are disturbed. Before developing wings, the hoppers are small green bugs, reminding one somewhat of plant lice. They remain on the plant and may often be discovered with their beaks inserted in small squares from which they extract the sap.

Abnormal Growth Sign
"In addition to the shedding of these squares, a very abnormal type of growth is displayed by cotton plants experiencing a severe damage. There is a decided tendency towards increased size and a rank vegetable growth. Furthermore, the plants become abnormally branched, with many small branches leaving the same joint, thus in many ways resembling what might be called a sucker growth. This produces a very unusual looking cotton plant, and the combined characteristics of abnormal branching, shortage of squares and presence afford the easiest means of detecting hopper injury.

"Cotton has been the subject of numerous experiments in the Texas investigations. Many chemicals were tried and it was soon found that the best results were secured at the lowest cost by dusting the plants with sulphur.

"The best material to use is superfine dusting sulphur; that is, a sulphur ground so fine that at least 95 per cent of it will pass through a 200 mesh sieve.

"The sulphur should be used at the rate of 10 pounds per acre and applications should be made under much the same conditions as those favorable for calcium arsenate dusting; that is, when the air is calm or nearly calm and it is thus possible to get the sulphur down among the plants. The question of whether to use sulphur must, of course, be answered by the individual farmer. The best that can be recommended is for the farmer to examine his cotton closely and if he finds any considerable number of the blasted squares present and notices the insects hopping and flying around the plants, it will probably pay him to dust. Under such conditions, an application should follow not more than four or five days later.

Sulphur Dust Dangerous
"Warning: When sulphur is used for dusting cotton for control of the hopper great care should be exercised to avoid contact of a flame of any kind with the dust cloud produced by the dusting machine, sulphur dust being highly inflammable. Should the dust cloud as it is expelled from dusting machine become ignited, there is liability of this flame reaching the dusting machine and causing explosion of the dust within the hopper which might result seriously to the driver of the machine, as well as to the animals. Under no circumstances should sulphur be applied to cotton with dusting machine, operated by a gasoline engine."

A FOWL AFFAIR

There was a chicken to be killed at the Desmonds' but Mr. Desmond, who was nervous, did not like to wring its neck, nor would he sever its head with an ax.

"I have it!" he finally decided. "I'll shoot it!"
So, armed with a gun, he took the chicken into the yard. Little Willie, anxious to be in at the death, followed. Some time passed and, as neither of the missing couple returned, little Willie's mother began to get anxious.

"Willie!" she called out, "hasn't your father killed that chicken yet?"
"No!" called back Willie. "It won't get in the way!"

POSTCARD PEEPS

Farmer Jenkins made his way into the village postoffice that was also the general store.

"Anything for me?" he inquired of the postmaster.
The other raked over the few parcels and letters, but found nothing.

"Don't see nothing," he said. "Did you expect something?"
"Yes," answered the farmer. "I was expecting a card from Aunt Jenny, tellin' me when she's comin'."

"Hannah!" called the postmaster to his wife. "Seen a card from Mr. Jenkins' Aunt Jenny?"
"Yes," came the prompt answer. "She's coming down on Tuesday!"

District Speakers Tell Of Office Importance

Presenting their individual qualification claims for the offices, the District candidates of six adjoining counties spoke at the District Court room Thursday night to a crowd that comfortably filled the room.

Most of the discussion was directed along constructive lines, the individuals pointing out the various phases, and the relative importance of the offices asked for.

The candidates spoke here during the last week of their campaign, and closed their itinerary with addresses at Plainview Friday night. Those who spoke here were: Judge R. C. Joiner; district Attorney, W. E. Huffhines, city, both of Hale County. Candidates for District Attorney, W. E. Huffhines; Meade E. Griffin, of Plainview; E. S. Rowe, of Littlefield; and C. D. Wright, of Silverton. In the race for District Attorney W. E. Huffhines, city, was the first speaker of the evening and Mr. Clements, candidate for District Judge, closed the discussions.

Judge Jeff D. Ayres acted as chairman of the political meeting.

ALL MEN ARE SALESMEN

No matter what your life work is, you are a salesman.

Preacher, lawyer, doctor, beggarman or merchant all depend upon the fundamental principles of salesmanship to be a success in any of their chosen professions.

Even the housewife, sweetheart or mother indirectly uses the same underlying principles of the salesman. All this being true, to know what these traits are is necessary and intensely interesting. After many years of contact with the public and the buyer, the salesman finally gets instilled into his system the following rules to make his life as a salesman a success:

1. Confidence in self.
2. Courage and enthusiasm.
3. Conscientious and dead in earnest.
4. Honest with self and others.
5. Systematic in work.
6. Unselfish and willing to serve.
7. A thorough understanding of what you are aiming at in life.
8. Have a plan or outline of life, then work the plan.
9. Become thrifty, lay aside for rainy day.
10. Being able to lay aside the unnecessary things of life.
11. Becoming better informed each day.
12. Cultivating the best and determining the worth while in life.

Check over the above "daily doxen." Allow 5 points on numbers 1 to 10, and 25 points on numbers 11 and 12 as perfect, grade yourself accordingly, and you will prove that you are either a big success or you will see how far short of the 100 per cent you are.

"Ma wants a package of dye, and she wants a fashionable color," proclaimed the fisher-woman's little boy. (The fisher-woman was a fisher-woman just because of the natty clothes worn in the open.)
"A fashionable color," repeated the druggist. "What does she want it for, clothes, or eggs, or what?"

"Well," replied the little boy, "the doctor says Ma has stomach trouble from eatin' too much bacon and trout, and she's got to diet. And Ma says as long as she has got to diet she might as well diet a fashionable color."

Each cottage will have its own piano, its own modern appointments. Prisoners will while away their time berrying, gardening, milking, churning butter, making dresses, hats. Rail Delegation Hopeful Of Quana Route Permit area it would serve directly and indirectly and the excellent connections it would give were stressed in arguments before the commission. It was declared by L. G. Mathews that the summing up of the arguments favoring the Floydada Extension of the Quana Line by Cecil H. Smith, was perhaps the most eloquent and concise address before the commission in the all-day hearing. Attaches of the commission in Washington and newspapermen familiar with the situation there hazarded the guess that decision in the entire rail construction program of the plains territory could be anticipated for sometime in October. Several members of the commission will go on vacations during the next few weeks.

Attention was called by Col. Massie in Washington before his departure for a visit in Virginia at his childhood home, to the fact that all the cases, including the 15-mile extension of the Santa Fe southeast from Floydada asked for last February, were now consolidated into one case and that when a decision was rendered, it would likely have far-reaching results in the entire region and for this reason was particularly anxious that the record be most complete as regards the Quana Extension and that no effort be overlooked that would give this route every consideration by the examiner who will review the case and the entire commission, before whom the arguments were heard.

BRUNK'S HAVE FEATURE SHOW AT TENT THEATRE TONIGHT

Playing before capacity crowds, Brunk's Comedians have been showing in Floydada since Monday night. The programs are well above the average for tent theatres, some of those who have been attending said. The productions have been well received.

This Thursday night the title of the play will be "The Lure of the City." It is one of the company's feature shows and to insure wide-spread interest a Charleston contest is to be staged between members of the local younger set.

A special merchant's matinee is to be given Saturday.

Jerry Barnes and his eight melody makers, a special orchestra, furnish the music for the performances.

The box office opens at 7:45 and the show starts at 8:30 o'clock. The tent is located on the Ralls road in the southwest part of town.

Brunk's are showing here under the auspices of McDermott Post, American Legion. "We are glad to have this excellent show here under our sponsorship," J. H. Reagan, commander of the local post said, "and we are glad to see our friends giving them such excellent patronage."

G. O. P. HOLDS FIRST PRIMARY IN HISTORY

Polling a total of 17 votes in Floyd County the Republican Party Saturday wrote another page into Texas' political history with their first official primary.

Although more of a matter of form, the election sets another criterion for interesting developments in the Lone Star State.

In the actual ballot voted at the two boxes, Floydada and Lockney, votes were cast for thirteen candidates.

Things took on a peculiar twist this year with the G. O. P. A split-up with leaders disagreed over issues. The result, summarized, was a party within the ranks resulted when two of the party with part of the adherents voting in one section for their preferred nominee and those in the other taking the second candidate, where two men were entered on the ticket.

In the race for governor, H. H. Haines, of Harris County and E. P. Scott, of Nueces County, were on the ballot, with the latter's name scratched insofar as the supporters in Floyd County were concerned.

Senator Wurzbach was the leader of one faction and Greager was the chief proponent in the other division. The Republicans in Floyd County placed their votes for Haines in the Governor's race and for Lindsey in the division for Superintendent of Public Instruction.

Seven votes were cast for each candidate entered on the ballot in Floydada and ten were turned in at Lockney, according to County Chairman E. E. Wells, who turned in an official report shortly after 9 o'clock.

There was no competition in any of the races with the exception of the Governor and Superintendent of Public Instruction sections. The winner who will enter the general election as the official G. O. P. representative will be the man who received the highest vote in the two factions.

NIXON-LOWRANCE

Tuesday morning at 10 o'clock at the home of Mr. and Mrs. W. C. Grigsby Olen Lee Lowrance and Miss Frances Nettie Nixon were quietly married in the presence of relatives and a few close friends, Elder J. J. Day officiating.

The bride was becomingly dressed in Navy Elizabeth Crepe with ton accessories. After the ceremony, the couple left for southwest Texas for a short honeymoon. They will make their home south of town on the Lowrance farm.

The bride is the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. J. F. Nixon of the McCoy community. She has many friends in Floydada, having spent the past two years here attending school and graduating with the class of '26.

The groom is the youngest son of Mrs. W. E. Lowrance of Starkey.

UNITED STATES TALKING TO MANY EUROPEANS DIRECT

Goes Over Heads of Governments to Make Debt Position Clear to People.

The American Government is talking to the people of Europe over the heads of their Government in order to get its debt position clear.

Much as the United States during the war talked to the German people over the head of the Kaiser the Government today is talking to the people of France and other European states to make clear that they have been misled by their politicians as to the true spirit and purpose of this country in debt settlements.

The latest direct word broadcast to Europe—and incidentally to the American taxpayers—came over the week-end in a letter from the Treasury pointing out that complete debt cancellation is impossible, but showing startlingly that virtual cancellation of actual war debts of France, Belgium and Italy has already occurred, leaving only post-armistice obligations to settle. This pronouncement followed another in which America flatly denied France had been given by America more lenient debt terms than any other nation (including Great Britain.)

These announcements, evidently sanctioned by President Coolidge and made in the name of Secretary of the Treasury Mellon, are the first moves in this line taken since Europe started its barrage of "shock" screams against this country.

Politicians abroad, especially the French, have never given her constituents an unbiased, frank picture of the debt situation, it is said by authorities here. They have been content to let their constituents believe America is a hard taskmaster.

Government leaders realize that the United States is probably the world's most unpopular money lender. They hope to check some of this enmity by showing that considerations of humanity have entered into debt settlements—and that there is no good reason when American taxpayers should pay Europe's obligations.

The first accounting was done by cutting notches in a stick. Then came two sticks called "tally," for both creditor and debtor. When the day of settlement came both sticks had to have the same number of notches. Tellers in banks were first known as tally officers.

L. L. COLLINS MARRIED JUNE 6 TO JACKSON, TENNESSEE, GIRL

Friends and relatives have learned just the past week of the marriage of L. L. Collins, manager of the Joe Bailey Mercantile Company, 22 miles southeast of Floydada, to Miss Glee Stanfil, of Jackson, Tennessee.

Miss Stanfil visited here as the guest of Miss Ruth Collins, sister of the groom, and with her grand-aunt, Mrs. G. L. Roy, but even close relatives did not learn of the marriage of the couple until recently, Miss Stanfil leaving shortly after her marriage for Wichita Falls to visit relatives.
