Mark Reveals Vet Was Buddy Woman's Son Killed in Korea

Sanches then remarked that the "best friend he ever had was a boy from Lubbock" who was killed while they were in Korea. Hardly able to conceal her feelings, Mrs. Kinser started asking questions. "He was Cpl. Tommy Fowler, a barber," Sanches related. "We were on patrol when the Commies shot him. I was the first one to him, but he was dead when I tried to help him up," he recalled. Mrs. Kinser then told Sanches about her son, that he had the nickname of "Tommy" and that he had sent her snapshots of himself and some of his Army buddies. Sanches then asked about some of the pictures, describing details as to different groups and locations where they were made. He also recalled that Cpl. Fowler was looking forward to his 19th birthday on March 21, 1951. After fighting in Korea and being discharged, he told Mrs. Kinser he went to Lubbock in an effort to locate the family of his buddy but was unsuccessful in finding anyone by that name. He has promised Mrs. Kinser he would send photographs he has at home in Laredo of Cpl. Fowler and himself and others in their unit while at the front in Korea. Mrs. Kinser, deeply religious, feels that Fate has had a part in answering her prayers that she might find someone who was with her son during his last days. And although there is grief and remorse in re-opening wounds caused by war taking her only son, Mrs. Kinser is deeply grateful that her prayers were answered. She hopes that her experience may encourage others to retain their faith and "keep praying, because some day their prayers will be answered if they will only keep faith."

Former Weinert Man Drowns In Lake Phantom

Boby Leon Kreger, 20, of Abilene and a former resident of Weinert most of his life, drowned in Fort Phantom Hill Lake Friday evening, July 7. He dived into the water, presumably for a swim, and Cupps went for help when his friend failed to come back to the surface. The body was recovered about 35 minutes later. Attempts to revive the victim with a resuscitator unit failed. Kreger and Cupps were both employed by Lone Star Gas Co. in Abilene. A verdict of accidental drowning was returned. Funeral for Mr. Kreger was held Saturday afternoon in Elliott's Chapel of Memories in Abilene, and burial was in Cedar Hill Cemetery in that city. A native of Weatherford, Kreger had lived in Weinert most of his life. He graduated from Weinert High School in 1959. He married Pat Logan in Weinert Oct. 11, 1960. Members of the Rotary Club heard an interesting discussion of the pending Omnibus Farm Bill and the farm program in general, at the noon luncheon meeting Thursday when Loyd Feemster, secretary of the Agricultural Stabilization and Conservation Committee was guest speaker. The ASC official defended the farm program as not a subsidy for the farmer but a measure to protect farm prices and income. He declared farmers were the least subsidized of any occupation or business. Directly or indirectly, every line of business or industry is subsidized, he stated. The speaker was introduced by Tom Barfield, program chairman. President R. A. Weekend Rains Here Measure Up to 6 Inches

Rains of near-cloudburst proportions Saturday afternoon and Sunday dumped more than six inches of rain on some parts of Haskell and this immediate area, flooding streets and washing roads badly in some places. The heavy downpours also provided an avalanche of runoff water which drained rapidly into Lake Stamford to send the level above the spillway for the first time in the lake's history. With 1414 feet above sea level the overflow mark, the lake had a reading of 1414.90 Tuesday at noon, it was reported from the Paint Creek Power Plant of West Texas Utilities Company. Saturday's rainfall ranged from 2.32 inches in North Haskell to 4.10 inches in Southwest Haskell. Heaviest rain apparently centered on Haskell, with other parts of the county reporting from one-half to one inch. Sunday's rain measured here at from 2.00 to 2.30 inches, was generally heavy over this area, ranging up to 3.54 inches at Aspermont. The heavy rains will result in some damage to farm crops, particularly late cotton, most farmers think the benefits will exceed losses, especially if clear, hot weather follows the rains.

Customer Savings

"My location was one of the best in town. I had a line of goods well suited to the local needs. I had the lowest markup in town. I just didn't get enough business."

These are the comments of a small city dry goods merchant who recently closed his store, relates Editor Cal Snyder in The Denver City Press, who continues:

He added that he kept his prices low by saving on advertising. In fact, he did no advertising at all before his closing-out sale. He thought he was passing the savings from not advertised items on to his customers.

Actually the retailer had fallen into a trap which slams shut the doors on many merchants. He was making an error in logic and arithmetic which was cheating his customers and himself.

No merchant ever passed on savings which came from lack of advertising. The non-advertiser may think he is saving. But in penny-pinching he neglects volume and net profit.

When advertising increases volume, sales costs, storage costs and waste decrease. Overall profit increases, and lower prices to the consumer follow.

The retailer who thinks he is favoring his customers by not advertising should ask himself: Which retail stores throughout the nation are selling at the lowest prices?

He may find the answer quickly. The stores which operate successfully on the lowest margin of profit are those which advertise the most.

Less Flexibility, More Economy

The Defense Department spends half of the national budget, $42 billion, points out the Ellsworth, Wis., Herald. Half of that is for the procurement of goods.

One provoking figure is that 56 per cent of the $21 billion spent on materials is being handed out by military officers to industry without competitive bidding. Since 1947 Congress has been recommending that the system of awarding contracts without competitive bidding be abandoned save in extremely rare instances. But the practice continues.

You can't blame the military for wanting it to continue. It makes things "more flexible." It's also one of those reasons you'll waste a long time for a tax reduction.

The Heart of A People

The following editorial is reprinted from People to People Digest:

"At what level may the real relations between nations be assessed? At that of formal protocol? Or in the spontaneous action of a single obscure citizen?"

"Official relations are governed by usage and tradition, whereas the heart of a whole people may reveal itself in the actions of one individual."

"Such was the case recently in Japan. The individual was Katsuchi Maeda, a simple farmer. Mr. Maeda is a wise old man who has spent 69 years close to the soil. Tending his cherry trees, he experienced the difficult years of the war, the dislocations and readjustments following, the rapprochments between his own people and those of the United States. Time brought changes that pleased him, and he was filled with gratitude at what he called the generosity of the American people toward their erstwhile enemies. He wished in some way to express his appreciation."

"One day Mr. Maeda made a trip to the American Consulate at Nagoya. There he offered to the American people something dear to his heart, seventeen unique 'weeping willow' cherry trees, which he had developed through 50 years of effort and experimentation. The trees were his masterpiece. They were not for sale at any price. Who can place a value upon an affair of the heart? But to the people of America as an expression of the feelings of a Japanese farmer, they were free. Today they stand on the grounds of the Consulate in Nagoya, living testimony of the trust of one people in another."

A neighboring editor tells us of the time when, short of both time and material for his weekly editorial column, he had his linotype set the Ten Commandments which were run with-out comment.

After the paper was published, he received a letter which read: "Cancel my subscription, you're getting too personal in your editorials."

For a while last spring, Claude Ashley was pessimistic about prospects for his maize crop due to lack of rain. Then, when moisture came in ample time, and the maize headed out into what promised to be a bumper crop, Claude had worries from another source.

Sparrows by the hundreds—then thousands—started dropping out of the skies for a brief stop and meal, dining on Claude's young maize.

Talking with a friend, W. D. (Shorty) Rogers of Spencer Lumber Company, Claude declared he honestly believed every English sparrow in town was a regular diner in his maize field. It seems to him that the peaky birds loaf around town until they get hungry, then organize mass flights out to his maize patch.

He's hoping now that the rains will slack off and the ground will get dry enough for him to harvest at least a part of the crop. He'd like to be able to save at least half the maize.

Unquestionably, sparrows do cause heavy damage to gardens and field crops and despite all efforts to exterminate them, the small feathered pests seem to increase in numbers.

It is hard to reconcile today's sparrow population with the recorded fact that their first invasion of Haskell County was during the winter of 1895-96 when a flock of six English sparrows was noted here.

Until the heavy rains Saturday and Sunday, members of the Haskell Country Club felt like someone had placed a jinx on them.

Notwithstanding the fact that June was one of the wettest months in years, all the rains that month steered clear of the golf course area. As a result, the large lake on the grounds caught less than two inches of water.

Water from the lake is used in irrigating the golf course, and although the supply in the lake had not dropped to the danger point, some good rains on the lake watershed would have been welcome.

Until the rains last weekend, concern had reached the point to where Carl Anderson, Loyd Feemster and R. C. Couch Jr., were seriously considering promoting something on the order of a modified Hopi Indian Snake Dance to relieve the situation.

When what is now the golf course lake was built some 50 years ago (1900-11) it was one of the largest man-made reservoirs in this immediate area. It was originally planned as one of the attractions of a recreation park for the people of this section and was reached by a street car line from Haskell.

The spot proved popular for several years but finally went into decline. But the lake remained, to become a "hot" fishing place during the spring and summer and a haven for ducks and geese during the winter months.

Years ago, part of the lake dam gave way after a torrential rain, and this reduced considerably the amount of water impounded. The portion of the dam which remained, however, creates a fair-sized reservoir sufficient for all needs of the golf course.

Automation has about taken over in the field of hay baling, a summer farm chore which always came during the hot test period of summer and required a lot of manual labor from sun-up to dark. A baling crew usually consisted of five or six men who worked in an atmosphere of dust and ticklish chaff and straw which left a thick coating on sweaty clothing after a few hours.

Today, the entire job of baling, from cutting, raking, and baling, is handled by machine. One or two men can do twice the work or more in an 8-hour day than was done by an old-time crew and teams working from sun to sun.

However, such a mediocre farm job as hay baling had its moments of excitement, its hazards, and dangers.

For instance, let the old boy who was "tying out" get his finger caught in a block of hay in the press and you'd hear some yelling and choice language that could be heard for miles before the team operating the press could be stopped.

Then, there was no telling what might be forked up with a lift of hay and thrown into the press. Rats, grass snakes and rattlers and the ever present tarantulas, skunks, too, have been known to bed up in daytime in a rick of hay curing in the field. They resented being disturbed and there was no point at all in baling the hay anywhere around the spot where Mr. Skunk had gone in to a tantrum.

Snakes and tarantulas, however, "spooked" more baling crews than anything else, and for good reason. An angry tarantula can leap several feet and the first thing a mad tarantula wants to do is to attack the nearest moving thing. And although they are not as poisonous as once believed, the fear-some overgrown spiders can scare a man half to death without even getting its fangs into him.

And there have been instances when men have been bitten by rattlesnakes after the reptiles had been imprisoned in a bale of hay.

Back in about 1935 or '36, Bill Bolin, a cowboy on the X Ranch was working with a hay baling crew on the X's Rose Ranch east of Haskell.

Bill was loading the hay on a truck as it came from the press. Unknown to the baling crew, a rattlesnake had been pressed in a bale of Johnson grass. The head and a small part of the snake's body was protruding. When Bill picked up the bale, he was bitten on the hand but didn't notice the snake, thinking he had brushed his hand against a piece of wire or tough straw.

Luckily for Bill, when he began to feel faint a few moments later and his head swelled, a man baling crew happened by telephone and led toward Haskell. The man was administered for several days, but covered.

Pharmacist Cliff had a quantity of his place near the known of several "ed" and killed in feeding cattle, like that shows up, well be discarded. No matter how well et and scattered stock will touch it.

A Haskell man the ranch as Bill's cause of an experience several years ago. As he tells it, he was taking turns staying side of a man suffering lingering illness. He became worse, and his family and neighbors drove to the ill man, it being to stay with him night.

As they got out and started into the patient's room, years old, with the announcement: "You fellows set up tonight. The kicked the bucket minutes ago."

July 23-29 Set As Farm Safety Week in Texas

The period from July 23-29, already proclaimed by President Kennedy as National Farm Safety Week, has been designated as Farm Safety Week in Texas by Governor Price Daniel.

In his official memorandum, the Governor said, "The nation's economy is dependent upon the continued well-being and progress of our State's agricultural population. Accidents from farm work cause needless suffering, distress and loss of life each year among our rural families."

A vigorous farm accident prevention education program will be conducted during this week by the Texas Farm Bureau, the Texas Farm and Ranch Safety Council, the Texas Agricultural Extension Service and the Texas Farm and Ranch Safety Council, the Texas Agricultural Extension Service and the Texas Safety Association.

"I urge all Texas farm families to increase their vigilance against needless accidents and further encourage interested organizations and individuals to participate in this program."

Opening of Dove Season Probably Will Be Sept. 1

The Texas dove season in 1961 probably will be about the same as last year, according to H. D. Dodgen, executive secretary of the Game and Fish Commission at Austin.

P. B. Uzzell, assistant director of wildlife restoration, returned from Washington this week where he attended a dove conference. It was agreed at this conference with the U. S. Fish and Wildlife Service that a 60-day season could be set in Texas. Opening date of the North Zone is expected to be Sept. 1. Opening of the South Zone will be decided by the Commission.

The bag limit probably will be 15 per day or 30 in possession of mourning doves.

There is strong indication, according to Dodgen, that the white winged season in the Valley will be set to open Sept. 8. Whether or not it will be a three or five day season is still open.

Last year, the limit on white wings for the three-day season was 10 per day and 10 in possession. However, there was an aggregate possession of 30 doves, with not more than 10 whitewings.

Washington and "SMALL BUSINESS" BY C. WILSON HARDER

It is more than of passing interest that Luther Hodges, Secretary of Commerce, is talking quite openly of putting representatives of small business on the Business Advisory Council of the Commerce Dept.

As of this writing, this has not been done, but orders have gone out that sessions of this council shall be open to the press whenever a government man is addressing the council.

Some time ago the nation's independent businessmen, voting through the National Federation of Independent Business, requested that small business representatives be included in the Federal Reserve Board. This expressed intention of Secretary Hodges is along the same line.

For many years now, the Business Advisory Council composed only of executives of huge enterprises, have periodically sequestered themselves at some spot such as Sea Island, Georgia, and in closed sessions formulated economic policies for the guidance of the executive branch of the government.

But up until this time, no one in official position such as Secretary Hodges has pointed out fallacy of developing programs and policies from viewpoint of huge business alone.

After all, the bulk of American employment is afforded by small and independent business, and there are many great and profound differences between the viewpoints and the needs of the giant corporations and independent enterprise.

So many of these differences are so obvious that it seems almost ridiculous that the executive branch of the government, unlike Congress which set up the House and Senate Small Business committees, has never brought small business into these consultations.

For example, there is bound to be profound differences of opinion between the head of a huge corporation operating in many counties throughout the nation, and an independent company operating on Main Street and depending on sales through the Main Streets throughout the nation.

In addition, there is no mantle of infallibility deserved by Big Business.

Perhaps the best example of this fact is the way that Detroit slept while foreign built compact cars made huge inroads into the American market to the detriment of many people including their own dealers.

As a matter of fact, small business is always more sensitive to what is going on. After all, it makes sense. The more reserve cash either an individual or a business has, the less sensitive it becomes. But those who operate on limited capital must of sheer necessity have been aware of what is going on at all times.

Thus Secretary Hodges' desire to put small business representation on the Business Advisory Council, if put into action, could do a great deal to make Commerce Department an integral part of U. S. welfare instead of the vague, little understood, and ineffective bureau it has long been.

Cotton Root Rot Damage is Predicted

Rains that occurred during June will bring on a considerable amount of cotton root rot. If more rains occur during July and August, the amount of root rot will be greatly increased. This prediction comes from Harlan Smith, extension plant pathologist. He bases it on the amount of disease carry-over in the soil from last year. The disease occurs in all areas of the state except in the Panhandle, High Plains and sandy soils of East Texas.

It is known that the disease fungus lives in the soil for many years in the form of seed bodies or sclerotia. A minimum of 25 to 30 of these sclerotia per cubic foot of soil is necessary to cause disease. Due to the large amount of root rot the past four years, a high count of sclerotia is present in all infested soils, continues Smith.

When cotton roots grow close to the sclerotia in moist soil, the seed bodies of the fungus germinate and attack the cotton root. Within a few days large patches of dead cotton appear. The disease is nearly always more damaging on late than on early cotton.

Smith advises growers to start planning preventive measures immediately for the 1962 cotton crop. Deep plowing, 6 to 18 inches, with a mold board or disc type plow is recommended. In a few areas, because of the type of sub-soil, this will not be possible. However, deep plowing to as great a depth as possible will be helpful in reducing root rot the following year, he says. In order to effectively reduce root rot, it is necessary to have 10 to 14 days of hot, dry weather following the deep plowing.

Local county agents can supply copies of the publication MP-361 "Root Rot Losses of Cotton can be Reduced."

BLINDNESS FIGURES

About 30,000 new cases of blindness occur each year, according to M. Robert Barnett, Executive Director of the American Foundation for the Blind.

The Country Church

A distinctive feature of early America was its country churches. As people moved across the United States they took with them their belief in God, and wherever they settled they established churches. Often the communities had only one meeting place which was used by all denominations and each attended the meetings of the other.
It was in these country churches that many of our leaders of today received their moral and spiritual character which has enabled us to build our great America.
Many of these churches are disappearing from the country landscape, but there are still a few left. Pinkerton Baptist Church is one which has remained. Founded in 1891 it has served the surrounding area for 70 years, and if God wills, it shall continue its service for years to come.
Take your family for a short drive in the country next Sunday, and worship with the people of the Pinkerton Baptist Church six miles west of Haskell on the Haskell-Rule highway.
Marvin Mosley, Pastor
