

Sen. Tower opens applications for academies

WASHINGTON — Senator John Tower (R-Texas) today announced his accepting applications from Texas students who wish to compete for his nomination to the nation's four service academies.

Potential candidates must be between the ages of 17 and 22, unmarried and United States citizens. High school seniors should specify whether they wish to attend the Air Force Academy at Colorado Springs, Colo.; the Merchant Marine Academy at Kings Point, N.Y.; the Military Academy at West Point, N.Y. or the Naval Academy at Annapolis, Md.

"The four service academies offer cadets and midshipmen outstanding educational opportunities,"

Tower said in making the announcement. "In return, these young men and women commit themselves to serving as leaders in guaranteeing our national security."

Interested seniors may obtain an application from Tower's Dallas office at 1100 Commerce, Dallas, Texas, 75242. Academy applicants should provide a completed application form, a high school transcript (complete through the student's junior year), SAT or ACT scores, rank in class and three candidate evaluation forms. (The evaluation forms will be sent to the student upon return of the application. Additional letters of recommendation are not required.) The deadline for completing the academy application is Dec. 15.

Now serving his fourth term, Senator Tower is chairman of the Armed Services Committee and is also a member of the Budget Committee and chairman of the Housing and Urban Affairs Subcommittee. He is also chairman of the Senate Republican Policy Committee, and now ranks second in seniority among GOP members of the Senate.

Immunization clinic vaccinates 200 in hepatitis outbreak

By TSgt. Bill Miller
NCOIC Public Affairs

The immunization clinic, awash with persons seeking inoculations against the local infectious hepatitis outbreak, has inoculated more than 200 persons since Monday, according to hospital officials.

The outbreak apparently began more than a week ago in Peoples Restaurant, a fashionable and relatively new restaurant located on Lubbock's south side at 50th Street and Avenue Q. News reports in the Sunday Avalanche-Journal stated at Peoples manager Ron Johnson had voluntarily closed the facility to cooperate with city health officials in their investigation.

By Wednesday, the count of hepatitis victims had reached some 65 across the city, and officials believe it will rise even further.

The Reese hospital had admitted only one person for the disease as of Wednesday, but ran completely out of stocks of vaccine, gamma globulin, over the three-day weekend following the announcement. Emergency stocks of the vaccine were shipped in from Cannon AFB, N.M., near Clovis; and from Sheppard AFB, Texas, in Wichita Falls. Reese has since replenished its stocks and is "looking good", said Capt. Richard Maddox, hospital administrator.

By Tuesday morning, the hallway outside the immunization clinic at the base hospital was literally filled with people awaiting immunizations. Public health officials had warned that anyone having patronized Peoples Restaurant during the past two weeks or who had been exposed to the Type-A hepatitis should receive the serum. Reese medical technicians had inoculated some 226 persons by Wednesday afternoon — this on top of the base-wide flu shot program now Wednesday.

Dr. Anthony Way, director of public health in Lubbock, noted in the Sunday A-J story that one problem with a hepatitis outbreak is that victims spread it to others without knowing it because the symptoms take a while to appear, usually about two weeks.

The hepatitis involved in this local outbreak is Type-A hepatitis, mildest of the three types of the disease and rarely fatal, but still a dangerous condition and not one to be taken mildly.

Dr. Louse Nannini, quoted in the A-J, said that "the biggest problem with hepatitis in addition to the other symptoms (nausea, fever, abdominal pain and diarrhea) is that it is a very debilitating disease and can take several weeks to recover from." The disease is a viral infection that damages liver cells.

Anyone eligible for care at the Reese hospital who exhibits hepatitis symptoms or who suspects that he or she may have contacted the disease should visit the immunization clinic. An initial screening will be done there to determine if the gamma globulin inoculation is necessary.

GEN. ANDREW P. IOSUE, commander of Air Training Command, hangs the Air Force Outstanding Unit Award streamer on the 64th Flying Training Wing flagstaff in a ceremony here last Friday.

The 64th FTW and its subordinate units were among a number of ATC units receiving the award. SrA. Vernon Putnam of the base Honor Guard served as standard bearer.

Don't change retirement system to save money: Gen. Gabriel

WASHINGTON (AFNS) — Attempts to reduce federal spending by making radical changes to the military retirement system would be false economy, according to Air Force Chief of Staff Gen. Charles Gabriel.

In a letter to the Chairman of the Senate Armed Services Committee's subcommittee on Manpower and Personnel, General Gabriel said the threat to change the system has already undermined its future value as our No. 1 incentive.

Pointing out that the military retirement system cannot be compared with private-sector pension plans, the general said a military career requires unusual demands on its members and their families that are not asked of people in civilian jobs.

"The difficulties of service life are underscored by the fact that even with the perceived advantages of the system, only 13 percent of our people will accept the demands of the way of life long enough to qualify for military retirement...."

General Gabriel credited the current retirement system with preventing the experience drain of the 1970s from being "more catastrophic in terms of reenlistment and retention."

"Our people give us the best years of their lives and in turn have this right to expect that we fulfill our commitment to them by providing long-term security through the military retirement system.

"It is my strong personal conviction," the general added, "that the retirement system is our principal means to assure a youthful, dedicated military establishment.

"Any changes," he concluded, "should keep this fact clearly in mind and honor our commitment to those who are presently serving. Further (the changes) should be made only if they contribute to this proper and historic objective for our forces."

He's tired of bigotry

By SSgt. Rick Kron
Little Rock AFB, Ark.

"I saw a bigot on the sidewalk today," a fifth-grader at a base elementary school wrote on a definition test. On the same type of test, Pam, a third-grader, wrote, "My uncle has a prejudice."

Adults may easily get upset with these statements, but they shouldn't because most children live in a wonderful world of innocence and make believe.

The fifth-grader, in his definition, was referring to a beetle and Pam thought prejudice was a mustache.

Youngsters have no knowledge of bigotry and prejudice — two of the biggest problems in personal relationships — until external sources, unfortunately, teach them.

Chris, a 10-year-old, thinks bigot is a huge machine. Thinking a bigot is an animal with four big legs, classmate David wrote, "That furry bigot got out of his cage."

A number of youngsters thought bigotry was a big tree. Using that idea, a third-grader wrote, "Get off my bigotry!"

Other interesting bigotry definitions were a big bird, a type of meat, a lock and a bad name. Nine-year-old Chuck wrote, "A big bigotry is coming," referring to a large storm.

An animal, of strange and various designs, was a popular answer for prejudice. "There is a prejudice in the woods," wrote Jimmy, another third-grader.

Definitions for prejudice included a judge, a lawyer, twins, a pregnant lady, a place for kids and being a new person in the neighborhood.

Some youngsters' sentences actually came very close to the truth, even though the definitions were nowhere near the real meaning of the word.

Celinda, a cute buttoned-nose girl, wrote, "They are going to get prejudice tomorrow." Unfortunately most youngsters will develop prejudices. It may not be tomorrow or the next day, but it will happen. It's a shame too, because Celinda was talking about people getting married.

Susan, a third-grader, defined bigotry as a plant like a weed. It is like a weed. Bigotry, if not controlled, will infest and spread through people just like crabgrass or ragweed.

Adults are the authoritative figures who children learn from. But when it comes to personal relationships and dealing with prejudice and bigotry, maybe adults should learn from the young and innocent.

Little Brent Gardner had the right advice for everyone to heed, although he was referring to politics when he wrote, "I'm tired of all this bigotry."

Military power essential to avoid destruction

By Gen. James P. Mullins
Commander, Air Force Logistics Command

Gen. James P. Mullins, commander of the Air Force Logistics Command, in an address to the Dayton (Ohio) Chapter of the Air Force Association, Aug. 11, 1983, detailed some of the reasons why we're here and the things we defend. He said:

"Without doubt, warfare represents the greatest failure of humanity today — indeed, it constitutes an indelible stain on the fabric of human history. Names like Waterloo, Gettysburg, Bataan or Normandy all point to the bravery of man — but they also remind us of the savagery that can develop from conflict — that can so characterize human behavior. Indeed, in many respects, the record of our species is not one of human conflict alone — it's also one of animal ferocity, and in many cases, unspeakable atrocities.

"The history of civilization has developed around one indisputable fact: man has always tried to better himself at the expense of his fellow man. That's because we all share common needs for survival, comfort, power and achievement; yet the resources available to satisfy these needs are limited. There is only so much food, only so much energy and only so much wealth. But mankind's desire for these resources has no such limit. And without an endless supply of these resources, the absence of conflict is not likely...

"Desire, violence and death — these have always been part of the human condition — these have always resulted from the inevitable conflicts of life — and these, more than anything else, democracy must deal with effectively if it is to survive. That's why I believe strong military power is absolutely essential — not to have the means of destruction; but rather, to have the means of avoiding destruction...

"I believe the inevitable conflicts of life, coupled with inherent savagery of man, form a harsh reality we Americans must face if our democracy is to survive.

"Historically, man has dealt successfully with this reality in one of two ways — either by making himself impregnable against the savagery of others; or by having the capability and will to inflict unacceptable damage on these adversaries should they attack. The first approach, that of impregnability, has included moats around castles or walls around cities — and, for a time it worked well enough. But as weapons technology advanced, such approaches to self-defense became less effective. Indeed, the day an enemy developed a cannon which could destroy a city's wall, the wall ceased to be a reliable defense.

"The second approach to self-defense — that of having the capability and will to inflict unacceptable damage on an enemy, forms the concept of 'deterrence.' Deterrence has also been around a long time, but unlike walls and moats, it hasn't been overtaken by modern weapons technology. If anything, it has been enhanced — for as technology developed, man's ability to project his power and inflict unacceptable damage on potential adversaries also increased."

We're finding our own problems

By Gen. Charles A. Gabriel
Chief of Staff

Most of us by now are familiar with the attention and publicity that is being given to the exorbitant cost growth in some of our procurements. What those same stories don't often tell is that it is the Air Force and Department of Defense who are finding the problems and correcting them. What has been done so far is good — but we still have a way to go.

A recent survey by the DOD Inspector General concluded that too much emphasis is placed on processing the paperwork and too little attention is given to the nature of the procurement action. It that's the case, it's no wonder the cost of a screw or a bolt can increase 1,200 percent over a two-year period. Fortunately, we have a few people around like SSgt. Charles Kessler of the 552nd Aircraft Generation Squadron at Tinker AFB, Okla., who began asking questions when he learned that the cost of a 40-cent plastic cap for a navigator's stool had increased over $1,100. Probably a lot of others recognize excesses like this but are just "killing the action" — moving the paperwork as fast as possible.

What can be done about it? We need to get everyone who is involved in the resupply process to recognize that we're all responsible. This isn't limited to the procurement agent or the maintenance officer. It involves the secretary who types the purchase request or the mechanic on the line who orders the part. We also need to create an atmosphere where questioning or challenging the system constructively is encouraged. We can't afford the "let's not make any waves" attitude by supervisors that promotes waste and inefficiency. We need to encourage people both to do and to think — and this applies to every area that makes our Air Force go.

Recognition to those who uncover ripoffs — as we did in Sergeant Kessler's case — is well deserved and will continue to move us in the right direction.

We've got to take time to listen to others

(ATCNS) — Whenever a friend or subordinate tells you of a problem he or she is having, do you really listen or are your thoughts wandering?

A problem which may seem like a molehill to you might seem like a mountain to someone else. A good example of this touched my life last year.

A 46-year-old foreman for a large company approached his boss, the plant manager, with a problem. The problem had already broken up the foreman's marriage — he was an alcoholic.

The foreman asked his boss to be put into a rehabilitation program immediately.

With the holidays approaching, the plant manager thought it could wait until after the first of the year so it wouldn't "mess up" his work schedule.

Three weeks later, just a week before Christmas, the foreman shot and killed himself.

If the plant manager had taken the time to stop and listen and try to understand the problem, the foreman might be alive today.

As friends and supervisors, we should listen to others. Don't just go through the motions. If people come to you with a problem, try to put yourself in their place.

While the example of the foreman is extreme, it is very true. For you see, the man was my father.

3rd St. & Sylvan David Huisinger, Pastor 885-2438

A FEW WEEKS AGO, a caller asked why the field maintenance squadron didn't change over to winter hours (8 a.m. to 4:45 p.m.) like most of the rest of the base.

We checked with the maintenance people, who said that this management policy remains consistent with the belief that shift changes should occur before the flying schedule begins to prepare for preflight discrepancies and pilot standbys. The caller complained that we're still in the dark at 7:30 a.m., when the FMS shift begins, and that's true, but sunrise and possible takeoffs from October through February are never later than 7:30 and, in March, we return to 7 a.m. takeoffs.

As you can imagine, it becomes a management nightmare supervising different show-times for members of the same shifts. However, as the FMS branch chiefs discussed some time ago, those workers who have special problems — such as car pooling — can report at 8 a.m. if the Maintenance Supervision people determine this is appropriate.

WE ALSO RECEIVED CALLS commending the work of three sections on base: the security police, the optometry clinic and the base library.

I appreciate these calls. This base if full of concerned, hard-working people who are doing the best jobs they can, and, in most cases, under less-than-optimal working conditions. It's good to know that their efforts are noticed.

WE RECENTLY RAN A call concerning the employment of blacks in management positions under Civil Service. A follow-up call challenged the answer given in the paper; specifically, stating that the example used of blacks in management positions — the director of the Child Care Center — was not a civil service employee at all, but a non-appropriated funds employee. The caller went on to say that he thought a representative, presumably from the civilian personnel office, should visit shops on the base where blacks are employed in order to discuss their problems.

Unfortunately, this caller was misinformed about the status of the Child Care Center director. She is indeed a civil service employee, supervising a facility that is operating through non-appropriated funds. To restate what I said earlier about such positions: They are filled using an impartial, automated system governed by regulation, drawing from lower Civil Service echelons on base. We feel this guarantees fairness.

Additionally, each section chief will visit his or her section during the fiscal year to answer questions and discuss problems. I recommend that this caller and others discuss their problems and then contact our CPO staff, Ext. 3801, or even use our inspector general system (Major Gene Uptegraph, Ext. 3409, is the wing inspector).

I would like to close by making sure I haven't given the wrong impression here or in earlier articles. We have numerous front-line supervisors, in the civilians, NCO, and senior officer ranks who are black. But they aren't in these positions just because they are black. They're there because they've performed well and earned their promotions. We have a solid affirmative action program and I'm committed to it, but we will not arbitrarily put people in certain positions based solely on their race, sex or religion. We promote qualified people with due consideration to our affirmative action program. I want to promote our top-quality people and will not tolerate discrimination that prevents it.

ONE LAST NOTE: I wish to express my sincere thanks to everyone involved with our fine operation. Last week, Reese was again recognized during the ATC Commanders Conference. As you know from last week's Roundup, we won the ATC Best Base Appearance and Best Officers Club awards. Also, General Issue was very complimentary of our base and especially our people on his visit last Friday.

Again, my hat's off to you, because its the people of Reese who really continue to make our successes possible.

Flu shots being given

It's time for our annual flu shots again and Reese personnel should follow this schedule in getting their shots:

- Today from 2 p.m. to 5 p.m., Hospital Squadron;
- Oct. 21 from 2 to 5 p.m., 35th FTS;
- Oct. 26, 27 from 7 a.m. to 5 p.m., all personnel at the Mathis Recreation Center;
- Oct. 28 from 8 a.m. to 4 p.m., 64th Student Squadron.

Everyone getting shots is reminded to bring their shot records.

Fatigue wear changes Nov. 1

Beginning Nov. 1, fatigue shirts must be worn tucked in. Until that time, the shirts may be worn either in or out.

FMS slates blood drive today

A blood drive, sponsored jointly by the 64th Field Maintenance Squadron and United Blood Services of Lubbock, will be held today in Hangar 52 from 1 to 6 p.m.

Persons having taken gamma globulin vaccine for the recent hepatitis outbreak are deferred from giving blood for six months.

EEO staff adds counselor

Mitzi Hallgarth, formerly of the base family housing office, has been appointed to the base complaints activity office, announced Harold M. Corbin, Chief Equal Employment counselor.

Complaints are not processed within the civilian personnel office, nor by members of the Affirmative action staff, Mr. Corbin stated. Rather, they are handled by the complaints activity staff, who report directly on the base commander.

Questions concerning complaints should be addressed to Mr. Corbin, Bldg. T-91, Ext. 3148.

Ceremonial whites now available

Persons wishing to order the new ceremonial white or blue uniforms may do so by special order through the military clothing sales store. Deliveries are taking from six to 12 weeks.

Mandatory wear dates for majors and above is March 1984.

The service dress uniform, shade 1598, can be converted to the blue ceremonial uniform at the base laundry.

Leadership School slates grad'n banquet

A graduation banquet honoring NCO Leadership School Class 84-A is scheduled for the Windmill Enlisted Open Mess at 6:30 p.m. Oct. 27.

Guest speaker for the event will be CMSgt. Coy K. Martin, senior enlisted advisor for the 71st Flying Training Wing at Vance AFB, Okla., and former senior enlisted advisor for the 64th Flying Training Wing at Reese.

Commanders, first sergeants, spouses, supervisors and all other interested persons are invited to attend. The menu will include filet mignon, green beans, baked potato, tossed salad, rolls, coffee, tea and wine.

Dress for the occasion will be mess dress for officers and mess dress or semi-formal uniform for enlisted personnel. Civilian guests are invited to wear business suit (men) and appropriate dress (semi-formal) for women.

Reservations are required. Contact SrA. Brian L. Denny at the Professional Military Education Center, Ext. 3635 or 3147, by Thursday.

Bowling center opens

The bowling center will open for league and open bowling Monday at 11 a.m.

Dining hall kitchen gets facelift

Beginning Monday, people who eat at the Wing Dining Hall will notice their menu selection has been reduced. The reason for the reduction is due to the facility kitchen undergoing remodeling. Which will last about three weeks. All meals will be served at the normal times. If there are any questions, contact MSgt. New or TSgt. Rendon at Ext. 3495.

Air University welcomes ideas

MAXWELL AFB, Ala. (AFNS) — Air University Review, an open forum journal, has a continuous requirement for ideas from Air Force members.

"We're interested in innovation ideas concerning doctrine, strategy, tactics and related defense matters," said Maj. Earl Tilford, associate editor. "Articles concerning such issues as the role of Soviet airpower in the Pacific, or Asian perceptions of the United States in the post-Vietnam era, would lend themselves well to the publication," he said. "We're looking for articles written from a broad perspective."

Air Force members with ideas they'd like to share with Air Force should send their manuscripts to: Editor, Air University Review, Bldg. 1211, Maxwell AFB, Ala., 36112. Authors should include a biographical sketch, including information on present and previous assignments and educational background.

Early releases offered

(ATCNS) — Air Force members whose dates of separation fall between Dec. 13 and Jan. 2, 1984, may request separation any time during that period under the service's Christmas Early Release Program.

Requests will be denied only in cases where the commander determines the early loss would have a critical and adverse impact on the unit's mission capability.

Air Force Regulation 39-10, the governing directive for airmen separations, also automatically excludes certain groups of airmen from Christmas early release eligibility. These include:

- Guard and reserve members serving on initial active duty for training or who have been involuntarily ordered to extended active duty tours.

- Airmen serving in formal probation or rehabilitation program.
- Airmen who are already being processed for involuntary discharge.
- Airmen who are under investigation or on international hold.

• Airmen awaiting trial, the result of trial, or the outcome of the appellate review of a conviction by court-martial.

• Airmen separating under the PALACE CHASE program.

Members interested in applying for separations under the early release program should contact the CBPO customer service center, Ext. 3276.

Babies brainier than we thought

Studies of babies show they learn from the moment of birth much more than previously thought. Still, the emphasis is the all-important role of caregiver to an infant. Feed the baby, love it, but talk endlessly to it, play games with it and show it what is happening in the world. Warmly cared for infants learn more and this care is vitally necessary for emotional and intellectual growth. — Time, Aug. 15, 1983

Handicap doesn't slow him down

by Fred A. Flewellen
Chief, Equal Employment Opportunity

During the month of October outstanding handicap workers will be recognized for their performance and contributions; the Air Force will nominate top handicapped workers for the Outstanding Handicapped Employee of 1984 award. Jose A. Galindo Jr. of the 64th Civil Engineering Squadron has been nominated to represent Reese for the award.

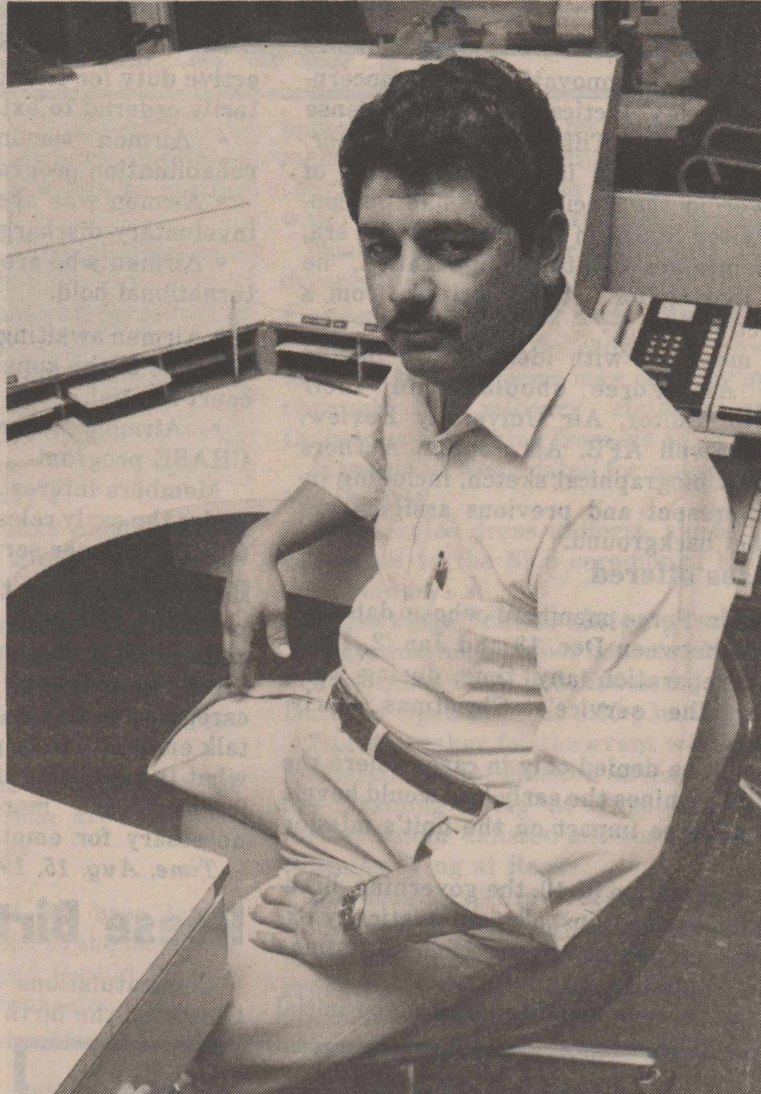

Mr. Galindo, who lost his legs at the end of his second tour in Vietnam, has compiled an impressive record of achievement.

He began working at Reese in June in the civil engineering squadron as a work scheduler.

Being curious I struck up a conversation with him. As we talked I thought "this guy is really something". I wanted to find out more about him and I began to talk to his friends and coworkers.

Mr. Galindo served in the 173rd Airborne Division and did two tours in Vietnam. On April 12, 1970, near Phu Cat, he stepped on a booby trap. He lost both of his legs and was sent to Fort Sam Houston, Texas, for therapy. Being "just one of the fellows" he decided to become involved in various activities.

Presently Mr. Galindo is an official with knights of Columbus, coaches little league and men's softball and has taught Sunday School. He also is a service worker with the Littlefield Chapter of Vietnam Vets of America. On a recent trip to Washington D.C. he lead a parade with Gen. William Westmoreland representing the VVA delegation from Littlefield.

Mr. Galindo also coordinated the Littlefield celebration for Fiestas Mexicanas 1983.

As part of his recreational interests, Mr. Galindo enjoys fishing, hunting and being a coach for a bowling team. In addition to his busy schedule, Mr. Galindo also is involved with various civic duties.

Currently he lives in Littlefield with his wife and two daughters.

Man's best friend; dooper's worst enemy

By SrA. Nanette Grumbly
Public Affairs Specialist

Two enlistees, who recently arrived at Reese, are unlike any other on base. In fact their job description, housing and pay are unique. They are considered man's best friend, but in this case they didn't come to Reese to make friends. They have one job — to detect drugs.

Assigned to Reese Sept. 12, "Bussey" as female German Shepherd and "Rikki", a male Golden Retriever, began training with dog handlers Sgt. Rod Allen and SrA. Robert Govoni, security police division, to become base certified drug dogs. The training is actually a continuation of 11-week drug detection school at the 3282nd Technical Training School of the Air Force Security Police Academy at Lackland AFB, Texas.

"In order for Bussey and Rikki to be allowed to perform their assigned duties they have been going through additional training to prepare for their base certification which will allow them to be qualified for our use in drug detection," explained Sergeant Allen. "This week both dogs will be tested by the base commander for their certification," stated Sergeant Allen.

Without prior notice the commander will choose one building on base where drug samples will be hidden. Once this is done the handlers and dogs will begin their search for the contraband. If successful, they will be certified and the handlers and dogs will begin actual searches at Reese.

Even though Sergeant Allen has been trained to work with bomb detection and patrol dogs, this is his first chance to work with a drug detection dog. Airman Govoni worked with narcotics detection and patrol dogs at his last assignment in Kunsan, Korea. Having their combined knowledge and experience both dog handlers will perform dorm, office and main gate checks.

"Airman Govoni and I will be working in rotating shifts. Along with working with Bussey and Rikki, we will also perform our normal security police duties," stated Sergeant Allen.

People have tried to fool the dogs by disguising drugs in plastic bags and glass jars, but narcotics dogs can't be fooled according to Sergeant Allen because of their keen sense of smell. "Drug dogs are trained on a find and reward basis. If the dog likes certain food or maybe playing with a ball, the dog will work with great effort in order to receive his reward," explained Sergeant Allen.

The military began training dogs for drug detection in 1971. Only recently though has Air Training Command employed the dogs for their efforts to catch drug offenders.

German Shepherds have been a long-time choice by the military for their use as narcotics dogs because a Shepherd can adapt to any climate and is easy to care for. This choice though, has not eliminated various other types of breeds being selected. Dogs being considered for training are checked for aggressiveness, alertness, if they have a fear of guns, and if they are medically sound. If they pass they begin training and will be trained for patrol, bomb or drug detection.

SGT. ROD ALLEN, security police, and "Bussey" perform a random vehicle check for drugs. "Bussey" uses her keen sense of smell to find drugs hidden in vehicles.

NCOA Chapter seeks Special Olympics volunteers

The Windmill Chapter of the Non-Commissioned Officers Association is seeking 60 volunteer workers to help with the Lubbock Special Olympics Bowling Tournament.

Volunteers need to be 18 years of age or older and can be dependents, active duty members, civil service workers and friends.

The bowling tournament will be held Oct. 22 from 11:30 a.m.-5 p.m. at the Brunswick Bowling Lanes in Lubbock, Texas. Volunteers will be either working as scorekeepers or bowling "helpers."

Texas Special Olympics is an on-going program throughout the year. The program provides friendship, activities and entertainment for handicapped people in the community.

Anyone who would like to be a volunteer for this worthwhile program can contact SSgt. Rick Rook, Ext. 3568 or Laura Kirby, 747-8881.

Project Stork open to more than just first child

Family Services is happy to announce that, beginning this month, it is expanding its Project Stork program to include all babies born to military members E-3 and under.

The program, which began three years ago, has until this time been limited to the first child born to these families.

Beginning with babies born Oct. 1, 1983 all children born to E-3-and-under families will be eligible to receive a package from the Family Services Center. Cards are available at the base hospital maternity ward and at the Family Services Center, located in Bldg. 6100 across from the main gate.

After the birth of the child, all that is necessary is that the military member fill or a simple form on the index card provided, have the card signed by the individual's first sergeant or squadron commander, and return the card to the Family Services Center Monday through Friday from 9 a.m. to 3 p.m. and the package will be available.

For more information on the packages that are available, please contact Family Services at Ext. 3305 during office hours. Ask for Shirley Olimb, coordinator; or Maria Tabor, Project Stork Chairman.

Packages for first babies are different in make-up from those being given to subsequent babies and details are available when you call.
