Big Trades Day Event Planned Here Saturday

The calendar says Saturday, June 21, will be the longest day of the year, and it means more time for trading at Snyder's big Trades Day event.

It will be the second such event to be held here by the Snyder Chamber of Commerce Merchants' Committee, and once again, the downtown square will be the scene of the day's activity.

Snyder merchants are planning big sales, both inside and outside their buildings on that date. In addition, area residents who have items they wish to sell or trade are being invited to bring them into town and set up shop on the square.

Howard Limmer, chairman of the merchants' committee, said that space for these offerings will be available on the parking facilities at the courthouse. Thus, it will not be necessary to rope off any streets as they did last year.

"We should have plenty of room for everybody," said Limmer.

If there are some late comers who can't find space on the courthouse parking lots, they may use sidewalk space in front of buildings which will be closed on Saturday. These include professional offices, etc.

People throughout the area are invited to participate by bringing in items for sale, which may include fruits and vegetables and other edibles, or garage sale-type items. And, of course, shoppers are invited to tour the square.

Last year's Trades Day was considered a complete success and the merchants' committee hopes the 1980 version will do equally well.

Thought Setback For Bani-Sadr...

Top Iran Guard Resigns

By The Associated Press
Commander Abu Sharif of Iran's revolutionary guards resigned today, apparently under pressure from Ayatollah Ruhollah Khomeini. Sharif was appointed recently by President Abolhassan Bani-Sadr, and the resignation was seen as another setback for the president, who has been struggling to assert his authority ever since his election less than five months ago.

The resignation letter, quoted by Iran's official Pars news agency said Sharif wanted the revolutionary guards corps "to be an arm to the deprived of the world in furthering the Islamic revolution of Iran. Unfortunately monopolism of power and sectarianism and existing tendencies prevented us from this goal. Any possibility of continuing the work was curtailed. I had no choice but to resign."

The resignation came the day after Khomeini told 3,000 revolutionary guards who marched on the U.S. Embassy in Tehran where some of the 53 American hostages have been held for the past 227 days - that there might be traitors among the guards corps.

Khomeini said he would appoint a representative to inform him of developments within the guard's ranks. The guards have been criticized for not cooperating with the armed forces and not obeying the orders of the revolutionary courts.

You should identify those causing chaos. You should hand them over to the revolutionary courts." Khomeini strongly condemned any deviation from the principles of Islam and any form of what he called "opportunism and clique mentality," telling the guards: "You overthrew the shah's criminal regime, but the enemy is not defeated completely and supporters of Satan (the United States) are plotting against you."

Within the past week, Khomeini has announced a "Cultural Revolution" to eliminate all remnants of the regime of the deposed shah, and has demanded that non-Moslems be purged from the state-run radio and television networks, the primary voices of his regime.

Khomeini's latest crack-down on non-Moslem allies in the revolution came less than a month after he tried to purge leftists from the universities in a move that spurred a week of bloody rioting. More blood was spilled last Thursday when Moslem hardliners attacked a rally of 100,000 Iranian leftists at a stadium near the U.S. compound.

When the crowds swept toward the embassy, revolutionary guardsmen in the streets and Moslem militants in the U.S. compound opened fire with automatic weapons, killing five and injuring about 300, the Iranian media reported.

The rioting underlined the rift between Khomeini's Moslem militants and the leftist factions that united with him to topple Shah Mohammad Reza Pahlavi's government 16 months ago.

Cubans Balk At Eating Lunch

EL PASO (AP)—About 60 Cuban refugees angered by sluggish government relocation processes briefly balked at eating lunch until officials reassured them their cases would be heard, immigration officials said.

The Cubans quietly finished lunch after Robert Lally, acting chief at the Immigration and Naturalization Service processing center, told them the government eventually will decide if they can stay in the United States. INS officials said Monday.

35 Wounded By Police

SHERMAN OAKS, Calif. (AP)—Comedian Richard Pryor underwent surgery today to remove burned skin that covers the upper half of his body and has caused him to contract pneumonia, hospital officials said.

Dr. Jack Groosman, one of the specialists treating Pryor at Sherman Oaks Community Hospital, said the surgery is aimed at removing as much of the dead skin as possible.

Carter Greet's King Hussein

WASHINGTON (AP)—President Carter greeted Jordan's King Hussein today, stressing that there is "a great deal in common" between the United States and Jordan but acknowledging differences about the best route to peace in the Middle East.

Chief among those differences is Hussein's refusal to play the role Carter envisioned for Jordan in the Camp David accords between Israel and Egypt.

The disagreement about Camp David is so deep that State Department officials told reporters before Hussein's arrival that they were under no illusions that the king would change his position after meeting with Carter.

Instead, they said, the president simply hoped to reopen the dialog with Hussein that has been disrupted by the trauma of Camp David.

Both leaders chose to emphasize the positive in their public remarks at a White House arrival ceremony.

"This friendship between the United States and Jordan has been tested in crisis and it has withstood all tests without damage," Carter said.

He praised Hussein for his "enlightened rule" and for his "commitment to progress" while working at the same time for the "preservation of the traditional values of his people."

Hussein, in his response, said the people of Jordan and the United States "share a common vision...Regardless of the differences in terms of outlook regarding the route that we take to achieve that objective, we do believe very much in the firm commitment of both our governments to the same goals," he said.

Q—When and where did the biggest earthquake in the U.S. occur? Was it the San Francisco quake of 1906?

A—The San Francisco quake may well be the best known, but not necessarily the biggest. It resulted in some 500 deaths, but they were directly caused by fires started by the quake. The biggest tremor known to have hit this country occurred in 1811 and it affected five states—Kentucky, Tennessee, South Carolina, Ohio and Missouri. A series of three quakes shook up this area for two months and the biggest is said to have hit 10 on the earthquake scale, which is as high as it goes.

Plans Moving For July 4th Celebration

Plans are moving along for the annual July 4th celebration.

Clubs and organizations planning to participate in the event this year are scheduled to pick up their supplies of tickets Friday at the Chamber of Commerce office.

The various organizations may nominate candidates for July 4th Queen this year and the winner of the honor will be determined by ticket sales.

This will be the first time for the celebration to have a queen. She will be crowned in Towle Memorial Park on the evening of July 4, just prior to the big fireworks display.

Plans also are being made for the annual July 4 parade which will take place in the park immediately following the opening ceremonies at 9 a.m. July 4.

Sinkhole Still Gobbling Earth

KERMIT (AP)—More earthen chunks fell victim to the insatiable appetite of the West Texas sinkhole while oil company officials outlined plans to fence the expanding crater.

Three more chunks of land - one the size of a car - dropped into the yawning pit over the weekend, and authorities say cracks appeared about 150 yards outside an oil tank farm.

"We've found cracks about 150 yards from the tank farm," said a Winkler County Sheriff's spokeswoman. "This would indicate the ground in this area is very unstable and eventually may drop into the crater."

An oil well owned by Petro Lewis Corp. was capped with cement when the crater came within 300 feet of it. A number of Shell Oil Co. tanks also are nearby but were not yet in any immediate danger.

Ms. Moore estimated the abyss measured about 250 yards by 400 yards.

"It looks kind of like a sloping swimming pool," she said. "You cannot throw a rock from one side to the other."

Officials at ARCO, which owns the land, planned to erect a fence around the sinkhole this week, she said.

And the number of officers on sinkhole duty will be reduced to one around the clock, she added.

33 Principals In Dallas Reassigned

DALLAS (AP)—Dallas school Superintendent Linus Wright Monday announced a major reorganization, including the reassignment of 33 principals.

Wright said he intends to hold principals "directly responsible" for the amount of learning in individual schools, with achievement test scores to be the key criterion.

The shakeup also encompasses several changes in the district's central office staff, he said.

"We want improvement in instruction, and the best way to measure whether we're getting it is through achievement tests," Wright said.

Wright's announcement, during the first day of a conference for DISD principals and administrators, followed the release of scores on the new Texas Assessment of Basic Skills test - which showed DISD students scored well below average in basic academic skills.

"It's very easy to excuse our less-than-thrilling showing on our problems - a concentration of children of low socio-economic levels and what have you," Wright said. "But the truth of the matter is that we are not doing as well as some of our urban counterparts."

"For too long in public education, we've acted like if students don't learn, it's their fault."

He said many studies have shown that "if a school is going to change for the better, it has to start with the principal."

To that end, Wright said 33 principals from all levels would be shifted for the coming school year. Two will be demoted, while the remainder will go to schools "where we believe they'll fit in best."

"We'll be placing our strongest leadership where we have the greatest problems," he said.

He said the central office changes will put "more people out in the field...so they can work directly with teachers and principals."

The changes will reach the top administrative levels, he said.

New accountability procedures - including better evaluation of employees - will pinpoint who is responsible if students at a particular school are not learning, Wright added.

The SDN Column

It had been a long time since we had encountered a good snake story.

Murray Anne Ray, chamber of commerce secretary, broke the string over the weekend. She was on a mission of dedication to her job when the incident occurred: While Bill Warner, chamber manager, was away on vacation, she decided to go by the office Sunday afternoon and spruce up the place. During the course of her efforts, it became necessary to empty a wastebasket.

No, there wasn't a snake in the wastebasket. But when she opened the back door of the chamber office building on the way to the dumpster, a three-foot bullsnake, who had apparently been waiting on the threshold, slithered into the building.

The reptile took refuge behind a refrigerator that stands adjacent to the back door of the building. Fortunately, Murray Anne said, her husband had accompanied her to the office that sizzling Sunday afternoon and he dispatched the snake without incident.

"What would you have done if Jim hadn't been there?" we asked.

"I'm not sure, but I would have killed that snake somehow," she assured.

So, take heed, because the reptiles are on the move. It has always been our opinion that if a bullsnake can put in an appearance, so can a rattler, or any other variety.

We are told that only four poisonous species of snakes reside in Texas—the rattlesnake, the cottonmouth (moccasin), the copperhead and the coral snake. Unfortunately, to most of us, a snake is a snake, and our respect for them is considerable.

We also are told that whenever we encounter a snake, the reptile is as wary and as anxious to depart as we are, but we have never been certain that this is so.

metrics are coming

If it hasn't happened to you yet, it will. Gasoline for 36 cents a liter.

More than 6,000 service stations in 46 states now sell gas by the liter instead of the gallon. The prediction is that soon at least half of all gas stations will switch.

If you're normal, you have just let out a groan. Having the metric system shoved down our throats is a pure pain. Who wants to remember that one gallon is 3.785-liters to know at 36 cents a liter is equal to $1.36 a gallon?

Every survey on the subject has shown that Americans despise the idea of switching to the metric system. Meters, grams and liters may be simpler and more scientific than yards, ounces and quarts, but we don't like them. It doesn't bother us one bit that we are the only nation in the world except for Burma, Brunei and Yemen that has not converted.

But like it or not, we're going to convert. Congress voted that it is U.S. policy that we switch (gradually) and has set up a U.S. Metric Board to oversee it.

Well, on what probably will be the first big test of metrics in this country, the board wasn't even notified.

The American Petroleum Institute, the trade association for the oil companies, and a task force of retailers and weights-and-measures officials put together a voluntary three-year plan for converting the sale of gasoline to liters. The plan is being promoted by the American National Metric Council, a business group with about 1,700 members. The council didn't even submit its plan for approval to the official Metric Board on grounds the board is too poorly organized at this point to bother with.

Thus, the oil industry is going ahead with conversion to the metric system and ignoring the government agency that is supposed to control the process.

Ironically, the agency was the originator of the idea to switch. Last year gas prices started shooting up over the $1 level, and most gas pumps couldn't handle the extra digit. The Metric Board said it would investigate the possibility of selling by liter instead of gallon as a remedy.

The immediate cry came from consumer groups who complained that a penny increase per liter translates into almost a 4-cent-a-gallon increase and that consumers could easily be hoodwinked by unwarranted price hikes.

The industry council got around that complaint by incorporating consumer groups into its planning. Thus its voluntary plan now says that service stations that switch should provide charts showing customers how to compare the price per liter with the equivalent price per gallon.

Esther Peterson, President Jimmy Carter's consumer adviser, went along. She said the industry's plan is a good one and should be adopted widely to avoid consumer skepticism and confusion.

The industry has found that it's easy for a station to switch to liters. There is an initial two-week period of adjustment with some consumer hostility but few problems after that.

Martha Duggan, of the American National Metric Council, says it could be that consumers accept the industry's argument that they buy gas by the dollar, not the gallon, anyway. Of it could be, she admits, that consumers are "so numb" about the price of gas, they just give up.

If the industry is right in its findings so far - that Americans will give in and accept gas by the liter as inevitable - there is a good argument that we will eventually just give in and buy by the kilogram, measure by the centimeter and travel by the kilometer.

At least that's what the U.S. Metric Board likes to think.

parading the tapes

Biographers of the F.D.R. years record the concerted effort which he made to discredit his predecessor.

After the election was over, and long after Franklin Roosevelt was securely entrenched in power, his administration continued to pillory Herbert Hoover.

Every city slum was nicknamed "Hooverville," the inventor of depression, the enemy of the people, the tool of the devil.

So thoroughly did Franklin Roosevelt discredit Hoover in particular, and Republicans in general, that he insured for himself an unprecedented four terms in office.

Eight years after Watergate, the assassins of Richard Nixon stand over his politically prostrate form and from their smoking guns continue to pump bullets into the remains.

This business of parading White House tapes around our nation to satisfy the blood lust of the carnivores is barbaric.

If your faith in our Executive Branch of government was shaken by Watergate and if your faith in our Congress was shaken by Abscam - that is nothing compared to the disillusionment you would suffer if you could know the extent to which our nation's highest courts are intimidated.

The Supreme Court is unlikely to be influenced by cash bribery but it covers before its critics on social issues.

The lopsided news media in Washington, D.C., keeps these highest jurists off balance - to the left.

There can be no other conceivable justification for authorizing the public dissemination of confidential presidential documents.

Significantly, there has been no extensive waiting in line to enter one of the 24 listening booths provided at the National Archives.

Nonetheless, these tapes which Mr. Nixon concedes he should have destroyed - which were used as evidence in the trials of Mitchell, Haldeman and Ehrlichman - will go on the road. The carnival will visit Atlanta and Boston, Chicago and Denver, Fort Worth and Kansas City, Los Angeles and Philadelphia, Seattle and elsewhere.

Significantly, also, the obscenities which had been deleted from earlier editions of these tapes have been reinstated. This can only be intended to promote a larger audience for the tapes in the same.

But again, more significant than this judicial travesty is what it presents: The susceptibility of our highest court to the contemporary tide of social pressure.

robert walters

WASHINGTON (AP) - If an epitaph now must be written for George Bush's bid for the presidency, let it be noted that he campaigned with a measure of distinction, honor and integrity seldom seen in politics.

The Bush campaign was a class act in a vaudevillian show crowded with performers who couldn't match his accomplishments, talent or perseverance.

With the exception of Ronald Reagan, Bush was the only candidate in the contest for the Republican presidential nomination to emerge victorious in any of the primaries or precinct caucuses.

Bush accomplished that feat no fewer than seven times in Iowa, Massachusetts, Connecticut, Pennsylvania, Michigan, Puerto Rico and the District of Columbia - despite the fact that Reagan, a presidential contender for more than a decade, has become almost a living legend in the Republican party.

Indeed, one of Bush's failings was his inability to develop and articulate a coherent rationale for his candidacy as an alternative to Reagan's bid for the nomination.

Personality differences also worked to Bush's disadvantage. Reagan successfully projected an image of a likable, charming man while Bush too often was perceived as tense and uneasy.

But on matters of substance, Bush's positions were the product of a sophisticated thought process. A fiscal conservative and a national security hawk, he nevertheless was difficult to pigeonhole philosophically because he came down on the liberal side of various domestic social issues.

Reagan, on the other hand, offered little more than the politics of nostalgia - the unfulfillable promise to return the nation to the supposed glories of the 1950s when the federal government was benign, the post-war economy was booming and the United States was virtually unchallenged as a military superpower.

Moderates traditionally have fared poorly in primaries, and Bush's problems were compounded because he was forced to play the role of the ideological man-in-the-middle, trapped between the conservative Reagan and the liberal Rep. John B. Anderson.

While Anderson was laying the foundation for an independent presidential campaign and Reagan was peddling stale nostrums, Bush was offering sensible proposals - but logic and common sense never have been especially saleable commodities in presidential campaigns.

If others are to be judged by the friends they make, politicians can be assessed by the staffs they assemble. Attracted to Bush's cause were many of the most able and talented people in contemporary politics - campaign manager James Baker, political organizers David Keene and David Sparks, press aides Peter Teeley and Susan Morrison and scores of others.

On the strategic level, Bush's great strength and great weakness was the decision to place most of his political eggs in two baskets - Iowa and New Hampshire, the states where the selection process began early in the year.

That strategy succeeded beyond even Bush's expectations in Iowa, where he was catapulted ahead of everyone else in the crowded field after winning that state's precinct caucuses. But he never fully recovered from a devastating loss to Reagan in New Hampshire.

The ensuing months were difficult for Bush, as Reagan methodically picked up delegate support, widened his lead and forced other opponents to abandon the race. But Bush carried on the fight while displaying courage, persistence and grace under pressure.

"Nobody ever said it would be easy," he joked on more than one occasion, "and nobody was right."

Bush's campaign ended as it has been conducted - with honor and dignity, devoid of complaints or recriminations. Perhaps the greatest compliment that can be paid to him is that he consistently was - and remains - a professional.

small city malls

EL SEGUNDO (AP) - The weary retail areas of smaller cities often can be rehabilitated with shopping malls, says the man who has built more of them in downtown areas than anyone else.

He gets results. Some of his big-city centers have outdrawn Disneyland by up to 80 percent. Fox Hills Mall, a large center opened several years ago in Los Angeles County, has drawn 19 million people a year.

On a lesser scale, says Ernest W. Hahn, an entrepreneur whose name is associated with some of the largest, most innovative, and successful malls, smaller cities have relatively equal possibilities.

Hahn, the intense, 60-year-old founder and chairman of Ernest W. Hahn Inc., which owns and operates 25 retail centers, is building 11 others and has 21 in the planning stage. He says three things are essential.

First, a city must be accessible to the entire market, including the surrounding towns, by means of superior streets or freeways or both. And then it must provide plenty of free parking.

The third requirement is where dreamers are separated from realists. The developer must, he said, have a subsidy, perhaps in the form of a city agency buying up properties and "recycling" them for retail.

There is a good reason for the subsidy, says Hahn, and it becomes evident once the shopping center begins to do its work, drawing people into town, catering to them, and involving them in the community.

Hahn believes that much of "Middle America" cities with populations of as little as 35,000 but with trade areas of at least 100,000 can be improved by retail malls, aesthetically, culturally and financially.

He does throw in two caveats, however.

1. The older the city the denser the population is likely to be, and therefore the harder to build a mall that requires acres of space.

In some larger cities, their retail markets devastated by poverty, it might be impossible to construct and operate a mall profitably. The fewer social problems the better the prospects, Hahn says.

Utah, is largely free of them. The Ogden City Mall, to open this fall, typically will include name department stores, Bon Marche and J.C.

Pennéy among them, along with 124 shops and restaurants.

The 23-acre site demonstrates a concept that Hahn strives to achieve: though the mall is self-contained, some of its stores also line the main street of the business district. It mingles.

The same concept was sought in other middle market cities, such as Pueblo, Colo., Greenville, S.C., Billings, Mont., and most recently in a just-approved development in Palm Desert, Calif.

my turn

by john dunnam

I've got another item to add to the "you know your are getting older when..." list. You know you're getting older when you start enjoying family reunions and homecomings.

Seems like just yesterday that such things were un-bearably boring but at the extravaganza at Fluvanna this weekend it was really nice to see the old crowd again. I made it a point to pat all the kids on the head and say "Gosh, I haven't seen you since you were this high." I remember how I used to hate that.

What is embarrassing at such occasions is to have a familiar face come sailing up calling you by name and you not having the foggiest notion of what theirs might be.

Virge Willis told a story along those lines: A couple of old friends were chewing the fat when another man approached them. After glaring for a few seconds he said, "You're both a couple of sorry (-) Then, with a final scowl, he spat on the ground and walked off.

One of the men asked: "Who was that fella?" To which the other drawled this reply: "I couldn't place him but he sure recognized us."

And then there are the people you spot immediately. For example, I saw a lady walking arm-in-arm with this big ugly guy and being followed by a whole passel of kids. I had to confide to the guy sitting next to me that I was responsible for all those kids. He choked on his barbecue.

"Wait a minute," he finally sputtered, "she doesn't even live in this state anymore."

"What I mean, stupid, is that I drove the poor girl to it. Let me explain. I used to date her, see. Then I slacked off a couple of months so she would appreciate me more when I came back. The strain must have been too much because when I called up and asked for a date she began laughing hysterically."

"What is so funny," I demanded to know. She got a grip on herself and said: "I can't go out with you because I've already made plans for that night."

"So, no problem, break 'em."

"I don't think that would be fair to my finance. That's the night we're getting married." Then she broke out into another fit of that insane laughter.

Its tragic isn't it. I had no idea that losing me would send her off the edge like that. Just look over there at her smiling and acting like she's having a good time. You can tell she is all tore up inside. You know the only way she could stop herself from causing a scene when she saw me was to pretend she didn't even know who I was?

I thought the food was great but my friend said he had had enough and left me sitting by myself. As he excused himself I thought I heard him mutter something about me not being conceited or anything.

Of course not. I'm much too fine a person to be conceited. But sometimes I do wish I had been born rich instead of so darn goodlooking.

Here is another Gottlieb defense. This helped the Four Aces win a Vanderbilt match in 1935.

The late Howard Schenken made his normal led of the queen of diamonds and Mike played this deuce.

This play clearly told Howard to shift and Howard promptly produced the deuce of clubs. Mike's king scored over dummy's jack and now Mike cashed the ace of diamonds and led a heart. Howard's ace set the contract.

What was remarkable about the defense?

Nothing remarkable. Just experts at their best. The club shift at trick two was essential, but it was also essential to keep Schenken out of a squeeze.

If Mike shifted to a trump after cashing his ace of diamonds South could simply ruff his last diamond and play out trumps.

When South led the last trump, his three remaining cards would be a club and two hearts. Dummy's last four would be A Q 6 of clubs and king of hearts.

West would have to unguard his club to hold on to the ace of hearts.

Bring to a boil over low heat, stirring constantly. Remove from heat, cool, then refrigerate for 30 minutes. Stir in one 8-ounce container lowfat orange yogurt and cup shredded coconut. Makes 4 servings, only 145 calories each.

Thyme hair rinse. The French have a natural cure for dandruff—the herb thyme has mild antiseptic properties and can be effective in this hair rinse. Boil four heaping tablespoons thyme in two cups of water for 10 minutes. Strain and cool. After your shampoo and rinse, pour one cup of the thyme liquid over your head and massage well into scalp. Do not rinse.

Easy Blueberry Pie

By Ailfen Claire
NEA Food Editor

Fresh-fruit pies are a luxury that few of us enjoy in days. Making a pie isn't that difficult, however. And it is worth every extra loving touch.

Fresh fruits such as blueberries are at their peak now, which makes this the right time to prepare a Bretonne blueberry pie.

To save time, you can make the pie-crust dough ahead—during the weekend, for instance—and refrigerate. Or you can make several pie shells at once and freeze the extras for later use, separate them with layers of wax paper.

When you cut your favorite fresh fruits at a good price, all you then have to do is make the pie filling and pour it into the shell.

SHOWER—Mrs. Allen Wright was honoree at a baby shower recently held in the home of Mrs. Susan Chesser, 2205 43rd. Assisting with hostess duties were Janice Scrivner, Carolyn Fortune, Sandra West, Pat Wittie and Gayle Wittie. Juanita Fambro designed the honoree's corsage featuring floweret shaped baby socks. The table was centered with a straw basket holding an arrangement of green and yellow silk flowers. Refreshments of cake and punch were served to the honoree and guests.

BRETONNE BLUEBERRY PIE

1 quart fresh blueberries, rinsed and drained

3/4 cup sugar

1/2 cup water

2 tablespoons cornstarch dissolved in 2 tablespoons water

1 tablespoon butter

or margarine

1 tablespoon Courvoisier (optional)

1/4 cup slivered, toasted almonds

1 baked 9-inch pie shell

Vanilla ice cream

In saucepan, combine 1 cup blueberries, sugar and water. Bring slowly to boil. Cook 10 minutes or until berries are soft. Cool 5 minutes.

Puree in blender or food processor, or rub mixture through sieve. Return to saucepan.

Add cornstarch. Cook lightly over moderate heat until mixture is thick.

Stir in butter, then Courvoisier, if desired. Cool slightly.

Add slivered almonds. Combine with remaining blueberries, reserving 1/2 cup berries for garnish. Mix gently but thoroughly.

Spoon into pie shell. Refrigerate several hours.

Just before serving, garnish with small scoops of ice cream (use melon baller or teaspoon) and reserved blueberries.

This kitchen-tested recipe make 9-inch pie.

Forced Kids' TV Advocated

WASHINGTON (AP)—The major TV networks have squandered their opportunity to voluntarily increase the amount of weekday children's programming and should now be forced to do so, say a host-of-citizens groups. They outlined their position Monday to the Federal Communications Commission as the deadline passed for public comment in the FCC's continuing inquiry into children's television. FCC staff officials, who estimated that more than 8,000 comments had been received, said they did not anticipate making a recommendation to the commission before fall.

"We can't see any other way beyond mandatory standards for broadcasters to serve the needs of children," said Peggy Charren of Action for Children's Television (ACT).

"The FCC's 1974 policy statement made clear that rules might be contemplated if there was no improvement," she said. "Broadcasters failed to do enough voluntarily and now we think it's past time to hold them accountable."

"It is abundantly clear that the commission can no longer honestly and rationally rely on industry 'self regulation,'" agreed the Washington Association for Television and Children, which filed comments on behalf of the American Association of University Women and several other groups.

Review To Check Micronaire Value

WASHINGTON, D.C.—Congressman Charles W. Stenholm was today notified of plans for a comprehensive U.S. Department of Agriculture review on the validity of micronaire (mike) readings as a market test, as well as a reversal in current policy regarding micronaire discounts for the 1980 cotton loan schedule.

"A reevaluation of the mike reading as a determination for discounts is perhaps the most important single piece of news for Texas producers since the discounts first began years ago," Stenholm said. "The decision to return to loan discount differentials based on the same formula used in past years instead of a formula which heavily penalized Texas producers for an unusual production year in 1979 is of tremendous immediate importance to Texas cotton producers."

Stenholm said the mike reading of cotton, which denotes the fineness of the lint, has caused some cotton mills to shun the fiber in favor of a coarser lint. "Extensive use of low mike cotton in spinning denims, however, has kept the market for such cotton constant. I would be quick to point out that this cotton is not even going into loan at present, but has been moving on the market," he emphasized. "I honestly believe an in depth study of the spinning characteristics of low mike cotton will show it is not an inferior fiber. That's what the market has been telling us or buyers wouldn't be moving it."

Stenholm said it would be almost impossible to determine the economic value of such a study, "but I can assure you that every cotton farmer in the Southwest who has faced a low-mike production year knows the importance of such a study."

The study was initiated after Stenholm led a group of other Texas congressional members, including Senators Lloyd Bentsen and John Tower and Congressmen Kent Hance, Jack Hightower and E. (Kika) de la Garza, in asking Secretary of Agriculture Bob Bergland to review the recently announced changes in the mike discounts for the 1980 loan schedule.

Congress Puts Okay On Synthetic Fuels Bill

By CLIFF HAAS Associated Press Writer WASHINGTON (AP)—Almost a year after Congress and President Carter decided the nation needed a crash program to develop synthetic fuels, House and Senate negotiators have approved a multibillion-dollar bill to launch the industry. Sen. Bennett J. Johnston, D-La., chairman of a Senate Energy and Natural Resources subcommittee on energy regulation, said the bill will accomplish more to ease U.S. dependence on foreign oil than has been done in the seven years since the Arab oil embargo.

In finishing months of work on the measure Monday, the conferees also directed President Carter to resume filling the strategic petroleum reserve, the U.S. stockpile of oil, at the rate of at least 100,000 barrels a day.

3 Suspects In Killing At Westbrook

COLORADO CITY—Three men have been taken into custody in connection with the Sunday night shooting death of Juacuin Cantu Jr., 35, of Westbrook.

Arrested and charged with murder were Antascio Gutierrez Sr., 54; Antascio Gutierrez Jr., 26, and Manuel Cantu, 29.

Authorities reported that Cantu had been shot once through the chest with a .38-caliber revolver, with the bullet exiting his back shoulder. Reports indicate the fatal shooting may have been the result of an argument over money.

Funeral services for Cantu have been set for 2 p.m. tomorrow at Kiker-Seale Chapel.

Last month, the negotiators approved the centerpiece of the legislation, a $20 billion, five-year program of loan and price guarantees aimed at building plants that could produce synthetic fuels.

Felony Charges

Felony drunken driving charges have been filed against Melvin L. Edwards and Jerry J. Trice. Edwards, 1002 33rd St., and Trice, 302 28th St., were arrested June 14. Both arrests were made by officers of the Snyder Police Department.

Johnston called the final produce a "cookie jar" that contains something for almost everyone, with provisions ranging from incentives for solar power to fossil fuel studies. Johnston predicted the measure will get easy House and Senate approval next week.

OBITUARIES

Although reported Monday at 3:30 p.m., the accident occurred May 31. Beriberi is a disease affecting the nervous system. It results from a lack of Vitamin B.

Team effort for asthma

By Lawrence Lamb, M.D.

DEAR DR LAMB Our 8-year-old son has asthma. It is worse in the summer and fall. He doesn't seem to have it in winter. Since this is the baseball season he wants to play ball with the other kids. I have been concerned about this because I know he has had asthma attacks caused by exercising or playing too hard. Is it dangerous for him to play ball?

Will he have asthma all his life? I've heard that many children outgrow their asthma but I know some adult asthmatics who have had asthma all their lives.

It's hard to keep kids from playing and doing too much. Is there anything he can take that would help him lead a normal life without having those attacks?

DEAR READER It's hard for parents of children with medical problems to avoid being overprotective. The child with asthma is a good example. No one wants the child to have attacks, but it still isn't good for the child to grow up thinking he can't do this or he can't do that because of a medical problem. At school this often becomes a problem for the child, the parent and the teacher who supervises athletic activity.

No one rule applies to all cases but if the child is normal otherwise and has mild asthma, there usually are a number of sports he can do. Baseball or softball is a good example. Apparently, the asthmatic would have to vigorously exert two or three minutes before the exercise causes an attack. Softball allows the participant to do his thing and then rest before he does it again. The exercise that is most apt to cause an attack is one that must be sustained, like long distance running.

Your boy may have asthma on an allergic basis. If so, your doctor may be able to use allergy testing to identify the offending agents. Avoiding these agents is the best preventive treatment if that is possible.

I am sending you The Health Letter number 86. Asthma, to give you more detailed information. Other readers who want this issue can send 75 cents with a long stamped, self-addressed envelope for it. Send your request to me, in care of this newspaper, P.O. Box 1551, Radio City Station, New York, NY 10019.

As I mentioned in the Health Letter, I am sending you, about half of the children with asthma will no longer have it by the time they are adults. If an infant has both asthma and eczema in early life, he is much more likely to have asthma as an adult. Usually only 5 to 10 percent of children who have asthma will have severe asthma as an adult.

Not all asthma is on an allergic basis. Some people have intrinsic asthma. They have negative allergic skin tests and have negative blood tests that are usually positive in allergic asthma. The intrinsic form usually starts in adult life.

In the last few years Cromolyn, inhaled in a powder, has been used to prevent asthma attacks. It will not abort an attack that has already started, but if used regularly it can help prevent attacks, including those induced by exercise.

Parents of children with asthma who are worried about how much the child can do will be wise to have a mutual understanding with the teacher, the doctor and the child. It's a team effort.

Reagan Takes Hard Line On Country's Defense

By James Gerstenzang
Associated Press Writer
WASHINGTON, AP

One of these days, says Ronald Reagan, the defense path of the United States may cross the ascending path of the Soviet Union and the Soviets will be able to demand a U.S. surrender by telephone.

The next president must reverse this trend, he says.

This is Reagan's world view, and in his campaign, every foreign policy and defense issue is subordinate to it.

Guns vs. butter is one of the raging debates in Washington this spring. Reagan's view is crystal clear: his money is in guns. If the United States will be able to repel a Soviet attack, it must spend more now on defense, he says.

Reagan is running for president as a Republican and his campaign is likely to reflect the GOP's traditionally hard line on issues concerning national security and Soviet relations.

President Carter negotiated SALT II. Reagan is against it.

Carter is increasing defense spending. Reagan says the U.S. already is second to none, namely the Soviet Union, in military might and that Carter's defense increases leave the U.S. totally unable to match the Soviet buildup.

There is no indication how Reagan would turn a big increase in military spending.

Carter severed the U.S. alliance with Taiwan when he restored formal diplomatic relations with the Chinese communist mainland. Reagan says Carter sold out friends to appease a longtime enemy.

On the campaign trail, Reagan delivers harsh criticism of Carter's handling of the American economy. And he adds that he finds the administration's economic failure has been "nothing compared to what they have done to us in the international sphere."

"This administration came in and almost immediately dismantled and reduced what one president called 'the arsenal of democracy,' cancelling the B-1 bomber, the neutron warhead, the MX missile, the cruise missile, cutting in half the Navy shipbuilding program, until the window of vulnerability has been opened," Reagan said at a recent fundraiser in Beverly Hills, Calif.

Actually, Carter has not cancelled the MX or the cruise missiles, but he has delayed both programs.

"The Soviet Union continues the biggest military buildup that man has ever seen," Reagan said in Beverly Hills. "While we continue to decline as that window gets wider, our vulnerability is going to get wide enough so that they can deliver the ultimatum by telephone if they choose."

To counter this, he wants to develop a new generation of sophisticated military hardware, including something in the ballistic missile system, and the use of lasers to knock out enemy missiles.

"We must start, on more or less a crash basis, building up the armaments that have disappeared from our arsenal," he said. "We should build up our military defensively to the point that we will then be able to meet our responsibility to maintain the peace."

To improve military manpower, he favors a million-man ready reserve trained with the most sophisticated equipment and working under a realistic pay scale.

He opposes Carter's plan to register youths for the draft because "we don't have the manpower in the regular Army to train an army of draftees today. And he opposes drafting women."

"It is time for all of us, I think, to face the fact that registration in advance of the draft is not the answer, or even a peacetime draft," he said.

On specific issues: Had he been president when the hostages were seized in Tehran, Reagan has said, he would have given Iran about 72 hours to release them. He would have accompanied this deadline with a warning to Iran government that the United States would take action "and it would be very unpleasant" - if his deadline were not met.

He has not said what he would have done if Iran had ignored his ultimatum nor what he would do now to free the U.S. hostages.

He supports Carter's boycott of the Summer Olympic Games in Moscow. He also supports Israel. But neither subject has come up frequently or in great depth in recent speeches.

Reagan opposed the Panama Canal treaties, but says he would abide by them as president. Should Panama violate them, however, he would be ready to defend U.S. rights. He has not said how he would do this.

Reagan's experience in foreign affairs is extremely limited. Carter, too, was a novice in this area which generally dominates a president's tenure. Reagan recently appointed a 69-person advisory team on foreign and defense issues, and it elected, he says, he will aggressively seek the advice of foreign policy experts and the Joint Chiefs of Staff.

Under President Reagan, he says, there will be no more betrayal of friends and allies by the United States government.

"I Don't Care" Sometimes Means "Yes"

By Abigail Van Buren
1980 by Universal Press Syndicate

DEAR ABBY: Was I ever glad to see that letter in your column about the girl who would never say yes or no — she always said, "I don't care."

I had a very good friend who did the same thing. No matter what I asked her, she'd say, "I don't care." It used to just drive me up a wall.

Once I asked her if she wanted a cup of coffee, and she gave me the same old, wishy-washy "I don't care," so I said, "Well, I don't care either. Do you want a cup of coffee, or don't you?"

It was as though a light had turned on in her head. She said, very positively, "Yes, I would like a cup." I gave her a big hug and congratulated her.

Then she said she realized how stupid she must have sounded all those years saying "I don't care." She admitted that she was just shy and afraid she'd come across as too bold or eager.

Abby, print this for all those people who need to know that it's important to be positive and assertive. I have another friend who, when I ask how he is, always says, "All right — I guess." Next time he "guesses" how he is, I'm going to tell him to find out for sure and let me know.

DEAR DEBBIE: Much to my surprise, many readers wrote to inform me that in certain parts of the country, "I don't care" means "Yes." Read on:

DEAR ABBY: I can tell by your answer to that man whose girlfriend answered every question with "I don't care" that you have never been to southern Indiana.

The country children in Hoosier territory are taught to say, "I don't care," meaning, "I don't mind if I do." In other words, "Yes."

When we retired down here, a farm boy did some lawn work for me, and when I asked him if he'd like a cold drink, he replied, "I don't care." I was puzzled and looked at my husband. He said, "Go ahead and give it to him — he means 'Yes.'"

DEAR ABBY: I am at the end of my rope! I have a 7-year-old daughter who talks constantly. She's a good student, but at least two or three times a week I get a call from her teacher telling me that my child talked all-day and disrupted the class.

If the teacher isn't calling, she's writing me notes. Abby, I hate to punish my daughter for talking because I truly believe she can't help herself. This child talks from the minute she opens her eyes in the morning until she closes them at night. What's a mother to do?

DEAR MOTHER: Your daughter could be a compulsive talker. Have her evaluated by a child psychiatrist or psychologist. If she's compulsive she can be helped by therapy. Compulsive behavior of any kind should not be ignored.

DEAR ABBY: Shame on you for using that old joke about the nun who had a sex change operation. It represents a shocking departure from your use of original material. I thought you had more resistance.

Let me tell you another one: Question: "Why does electricity shock people?" Answer: "Because it doesn't know how to conduct itself."

Tanya Roberts Is New Angel
NEW YORK (AP)—New York actress Tanya Roberts will be the newest Charlie's Angel, television reporter Rona Barrett said today.

Pick the fuels electricity can be made from:

- coal
- natural gas
- oil
- uranium
- all of the above

"All of the above" is right. But these days two of those fuels — coal and uranium — cost less and are more plentiful than the others.

For many years we built plants to use natural gas and some oil to generate all your electricity. And we still have to use a lot of those fuels. But for over 10 years, we've been building plants that use lignite coal. Today, almost half of your electricity is made at lignite plants. And now, we're building a plant to make electricity with uranium.

That's good. Because at the end of this year our biggest contract for low-cost natural gas expires. The new gas and oil we'll have to buy will be much more expensive.

This means the cost of electricity will go up. But it won't be as high as it would have been if Texas Electric hadn't planned ahead. Our use of lignite coal and our planned use of uranium are ways we're helping minimize the increases in your electric bills.

By conserving, you can help save on your bills. To learn effective conservation measures, attend one of our free Operation Tightly-Up workshops. Call us for information on a workshop in your neighborhood.

Texas Gets Big Win...

Rangers Bloop By KC, 6-3

KANSAS CITY, Mo. (AP)—Hal McRae and Al Oliver, who between them have witnessed thousands of baseball games, saw something Monday night they had never seen before.

"And we may never see anything quite like it again," added McRae.

The Texas Rangers, trailing 3-0 in the ninth, put together eight singles, including a bunt and several bloopers, and scored every run after two were out to shock the Kansas City Royals 6-3.

"Off the top of my head, said Oliver, "I can't ever remember seeing anything quite like this. That was a strange game.

The first eight innings belonged to the Royals and starter Paul Splittorf, who held the Rangers scoreless on four hits until he tired and gave way to Quisenberry in the eighth. The Royals had managed only five hits in seven and two thirds innings off of Jon Matlack, but Willie Aikens had smashed a solo home run and McRae had driven in Willie Nelson twice with a single and sacrifice fly.

The bizarre finish began innocently enough when Pat Putnam singled lead off the ninth and Mickey Rivers struck out Bump Wills, singled, and Oliver grounded out Qui-senberry was one out away from taking over the league lead in saves and plunging the Rangers to 12 games in arrears of the front-running Royals in the Western Division.

But then Rickie Zisk beat out an infield single that scored Putnam and Rusty Staub pitched to right, scoring Wills.

Gary Christenson relieved Quisenberry and Jim Norris singled off his glove, scoring pinch runner Mike Hart to tie it at 3-3.

Jim Sundberg singled into shallow center to score pinch runner Pepe Frias and make it 4-3 and suddenly the Rangers were ahead.

Rawly Eastwick relieved Christenson and watched Tucker Ashford push a bunt single up the third base line to score Norris.

Then Putnam, who started it all, dropped a single at the feet of right fielder John Wathan to score Sundberg. Rivers then made his second out of the inning by bouncing to Aikens at first base.

Matlack and Splittorf pitched splendidly all night but saw their records remain at 3-3 and 1-3 respectively. Bob Cook, who pitched one-third of an inning, got the victory.

The indictments are related to a scandal involving phony academic transcripts for Lobo athletes and center on the handling of transcripts for two former UNM basketball players - Andre Logan and Craig Gilbert.
